COLONEL: Your communication of 21st instant, per Captain Melville, also two of 17th by mail, received yesterday. The instructions in reference to Fort Smith will be carried out without delay. The order for troops to proceed to Department of the Gulf and report to military division headquarters will be executed as promptly as possible. The troops now in the field toward Camden will, by their absence, cause some little delay, but troops to fill the call will be placed en route by regiments as fast as they can be disengaged, anticipating, wherever it can be done, the arrival of others to relieve those ordered out of the department. Orders issued yesterday for the immediate movement of the Thirty-fifth Wisconsin and Ninety-sixth Ohio. The following regiments will compose the detachment from Seventh Army Corps, viz: Twenty-ninth Iowa, present for duty, 600; Thirty-third Iowa, present for duty, 590; Twenty-seventh Wisconsin, present for duty, 600; Twenty-eighth Wisconsin, present for duty, 565; Fiftieth Indiana, present for duty, 400; Seventy-seventh Ohio, present for duty, 270; total, 3,025.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.
II. The following regiments will proceed without delay to Little Rock, Ark., and be reported on arrival to the commanding officer of the post for duty: Eleventh U. S. Colored Infantry, Fifty-seventh U. S. Colored Infantry. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

III. The One hundred and twenty-sixth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, now at Pine Bluff, will proceed without delay to mouth of White River, Ark., and be reported on arrival to Brigadier-General McGinnis, commanding, for duty. All officers and men now detached from the regiment at Pine Bluff will accompany it. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

IV. The Second Brigade of the Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps, as organized in Special Orders, No. 22, paragraph 8, current series, from these headquarters, will be assembled without delay at Little Rock and reported to Brig. Gen. J. R. West, commanding division. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation if necessary.

V. The following regiments of the Seventh Army Corps will proceed without delay to New Orleans, La., and be reported on arrival to headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, viz: Twenty-ninth Iowa Infantry Volunteers, Thirty-third Iowa Infantry Volunteers, Twenty-seventh Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers, Twenty-eighth Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers, Fiftieth Indiana Infantry Volunteers, Seventy-seventh Ohio Infantry Volunteers. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation. All means of transportation in regiments will be turned over to the acting quartermaster of the corps.

VI. Second Lieut. William A. Deuel, Company B, Twelfth Michigan Infantry Volunteers, is hereby detailed as ambulance officer of the First Brigade of Second Division, Seventh Army Corps, and will report to brigade headquarters without delay.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General

Colonel McDowell,
Assistant Special Agent, Treasury Department, Helena:

Sir: Mr. M. M. Yeakle, a gentleman who has operated, I believe, to some extent in this region, desires me to express to you my willingness to protect, so far as is consistent with existing orders and the means at hand, the interests of those who undertake the cultivation of deserted plantations in this neighborhood. In a recent communication upon this subject addressed to Major-General Reynolds, commanding Department of Arkansas, I announced it as my construction of existing orders that [we] were not authorized to use any portion of the army in protecting particular plantations the benefit of which accrue to private parties, but that within the lines of occupation, and where an additional tax to the Government is made, it is plainly our duty to encourage the cultivation of deserted plantations. In Monroe County, which borders on this post, there are, I am told, some good lands. In the extension of my picket-line some of these lands are embraced, and I believe have already been leased with a view of cultivation. There may be others in the neighborhood which it would be measurably safe to cultivate, and I can only say that if you desire to grant leases or permits to cultivate such I shall be glad to render what protection is consistent with the safety of the post and authorized by existing orders. Major-General Reynolds fully indorsed my views as set forth in the communication.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, yours,

ALEXANDER SHALER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

PINE BLUFF, January 31, 1865—11.45 a.m.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,

The head of my column is just in. My whole command will be in to-day. Shall I detach the First Iowa Cavalry? There is a dispatch here addressed to General Clayton ordering the First Missouri Cavalry to turn over their horses to the Thirteenth Illinois. Is not that a mistake? Unless otherwise ordered, I propose to draw four days' rations and move on toward Little Rock to-morrow.

Respectfully,

E. A. CARR,
Brigadier-General.

LITTLE ROCK, January 31, 1865—4.10 p.m.

Col. W. F. GEIGER,
Brownsville:

The request for you to come over here in person is countermanded. Send 650 No. 4 horses to Fourth Arkansas Cavalry at cavalry depot; also 282 same to Ninth Kansas, Devall's Bluff. General Reynolds has ordered your brigade to this place, after it is dismounted. Do not be uneasy. Everything will come out right. I will send the order over by the morning train.

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Operator at Brownsville will request Major Hudson to send this message to Colonel Geiger immediately.

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General.

LEWISBURG, January 31, 1865—10 a.m.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

About 200 refugees arrived here in Fort Smith train. Many of them are entirely destitute and in a starving condition. Officers and citizens have assisted to the extent of their means. I respectfully request authority to issue them rations till they can be sent to Little Rock.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.
Hon. E. M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:

Sir: We have had our attention called to the Indian warfare on our frontier by resolutions passed and forwarded from our State and from other sources, and hearing that the question of organizing a more effective force to move and occupy this contested section was under consideration, we would respectfully urge immediate action, and, if possible, secure the continuance of the commerce and mails and settlements of the plains and mountains in the central portions of the continent.

Respectfully,

S. C. POMEROY,
U. S. Senator.

J. H. LANE,
U. S. Senator.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 31, 1865—3.40 p.m.

Lieutenant-General Grant,
City Point:

The order placing Pope in general command in the West and putting Kansas under General Dodge has just been issued and telegraphed to General Pope. The legislature of Kansas has passed resolutions asking that more troops be sent to that State. They will be sent to you by mail. Troops from the West arrive slowly. General Meagher's division is ordered to embark at Annapolis. It will be slow work, as the transports must be coaled and provisioned by lighters. The weather is rapidly moderating, and an effort will be made to-morrow to make a channel for the transports at Alexandria.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 31, 1865.

Major-General Pope,
Milwaukee:

I send you General Orders, No. 11, just issued.* Please go at once to Saint Louis and have General Dodge relieve General Curtis. The Overland Mail Route requires efficient protection from Indian hostilities.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 31, 1865.

Hon. E. M. Stanton,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir: I have 12,000 men for duty of all arms. This includes the garrison at Alton, Ill., Veteran Reserve Corps at Draft Rendezvous, Enrolled Missouri Militia, &c., mostly Missouri State Militia, whose term of service expires this spring, which will leave the department almost entirely destitute of troops. I have already had to call upon the governor for troops to occupy the disloyal counties to take the place of those whose term of service is now expiring. I have ordered to Generals Thomas and Canby all my regiments of volunteer infantry whose terms of service do not expire within two months, except three, and the terms of service of portions of those I sent expire in the spring. I have in the department the following organizations of U. S. Volunteers: Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry Volunteers (dismounted); Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers (one-half mounted); Seventh Kansas Cavalry Volunteers (mounted); Forty-first Missouri Infantry, one-year's regiment (at Saint Louis); Thirty-ninth Missouri Infantry, one-year's regiment (at Saint Louis); Fiftieth Missouri Infantry (six companies); term of service expires in February and March. Forty-third Missouri Infantry (term of service expires in August) was captured by Price, paroled, and was placed on duty again by me; Forty-sixth Missouri Infantry in Southwest Missouri (garrisoning Springfield). The balance are Missouri State Militia, whose time expires and who nearly all go out of the service by May. The rebels are making extensive preparations to commence their work so soon as the leaves come. Price's men, many of them, are coming back for that purpose, and I am confident it will require from 12,000 to 15,000 troops to hold our border. At the present rate of expiration of service I shall by the 1st of May have only between 3,000 and 4,000 men. I desire further to call your attention to the fact that, unless we take measures to secure the re-enlistment of the Missouri State Militia and the discharged volunteers, there is great danger of them going into the brush for the purpose of seeking revenge for past injuries, &c., on their own account. Many are now moving their families out of the State in preparation for such a contingency. As to the draft, we obtain very few troops from it. The means of escape are so easy; and the sentiment of many of those drafted are so disloyal, renders it almost a nullity. Unless the Government intends to replace the Missouri State Militia and Enrolled Missouri Militia with U. S. volunteers, I consider Governor Fletcher's proposition the best method to obtain troops to hold the State. The arm of service needed most is cavalry.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

[First indorsement.]

Troops for the State of Missouri, report of General Dodge, and proposition of Governor Fletcher referred to Lieutenant-General Grant for report and opinion.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
February 15, 1865.

Governor Fletcher and General Dodge's reports, in relation to troops required in Missouri, referred to General Halleck to transmit to Lieutenant-General Grant.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.
HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
City Point, Va., February 17, 1865.

I think it will be well to adopt the plan proposed by Governor Fletcher for the protection of Missouri the ensuing year; that is, to let the governor call out for one year the number of men General Dodge thinks will be necessary to protect the State. Men who have been in the service are worth much more than new volunteers, and infinitely more than those obtained by draft, where so many are disloyal.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

HENRY SLADEK,

HDQRS. FOURTH SUB-DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Kansas City, January 31, 1865.

First Lieut. Benton Miller,
Commanding, Hickman Mills:

LIEUTENANT: On the receipt of this communication you will take all your available mounted men and proceed to Pleasant Hill, where you will report to Captain Goodbrake, and join with him in a combined scout, which will commence on Wednesday morning and last about five days. If you find it necessary, one of your wagons may go with you as far as Pleasant Hill. After the scout is finished you will be ordered to proceed to Saint Louis, via Warrensburg, to be mustered out, and while I do not wish your men or the citizens to know this, you may quietly so arrange your affairs that on your return from the scout the men you take with you can remain at Pleasant Hill until the balance of your company can be ordered to join you there. I inclose a rough map* which indicates the country over which the scout is to be made. On Wednesday morning (to-morrow) a party of cavalry will move from Lexington into the Greentown Valley; cavalry from Independence toward Lisbon and scout down the river toward Wellington. Infantry moves to-day from Independence to the Seminary near Pink Hill, and to-morrow night will go secretly into the Snibar Hills in the Chapel Hill region. One party of cavalry will leave Warrensburg to-morrow morning and operate in the vicinity of Tabo, another will pass east of Columbus and operate around the east, north of Buck Knob and Wagon Knob. You are to move up to the south and a little west of Buck Knob and scour that region thoroughly, taking such course and direction from thence as circumstances may require. To avoid mishaps the following watchword will be given: Hailing party, "Who goes there?" Answer, "America." The party hailed then asks, "Who are you?" Answer, "Dodge." I hope you will have the chance of avenging the death of your two men. If Captain Goodbrake should not take command of the party

* Not found.
you will telegraph to me from Pleasant Hill the fact of your return from the scout and what you have accomplished. Show this communication to him.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Volunteers, Comdg. Sub-District.

MACON, Mo., January 31, 1865—11.50 a.m.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Company I, Forty-ninth Regiment Infantry Missouri Volunteers, Captain Benecke, are mounted upon their own horses and armed, at their own expense, with Spencer eight-shooting rifles. Shall I forward them with their horses to Benton Barracks?

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 31, 1865.

Lieut. W. T. CLARKE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Retain Company I, Forty-ninth Infantry Missouri Volunteers, until further orders. Send forward the other companies of the regiment as soon as possible.

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

MEXICO, January 31, 1865.

Lieut. W. T. CLARKE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Nine companies of the Forty-ninth Regiment have arrived here. Company I, Captain Benecke, has not been heard from.

E. SMART,
Colonel, Commanding.

FORT SCOTT, KANS., January 31, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. R. CURTIS,
Fort Leavenworth:

The fifteen companies of my command need about 800 horses. The requisitions are all in and Captain Insley could soon buy them, if so instructed by you. The horses are badly needed, as the troops will be of little use without them, and I would therefore respectfully request that you give Captain Insley the necessary instructions. The spring will soon open, and we will need a well-mounted command to attend to the bushwhackers, who will come with the first leaves.

CHAS. W. BLAIR,
Colonel Fourteenth Kansas Cavalry.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., January 31, 1865.

Capt. Thomas Moses, Jr.,
Commanding Fort Larned:

The colonel commanding directs that you forward to Fort Lyon the train of Messrs. Streeter and Strickler as soon as possible, with a sufficient escort to insure its safety, under charge of a commissioned officer, holding the officer in charge of escort responsible for the safe delivery of train, cautioning him about allowing his men to straggle or plunder the train. I forward with this the muster and pay rolls of that portion of the First Colorado Cavalry now stationed at Fort Lyon. Sergeant Spicer, who arrived at your post per last coach, if at the post, will take charge of them. He ought to be sent forward at once, for the paymaster may be at Lyon before he can arrive there. Fort Lyon not being in this pay district, the paymaster will start from Denver. Squadron E, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, with four howitzers and ammunition, and Squadron C, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, left here yesterday (Monday, 30th instant) for your post. If the ammunition for Fort Lyon now at your post is not wanted there, sign and send receipts for it to Lieut. A. Helliwell, acting ordnance officer, District of Upper Arkansas, for the use of Fort Larned. Can Lieutenant Pierce be spared from Fort Larned if Lieutenant Stanton is appointed acting assistant quartermaster and acting commissary of subsistence at that post? If so, I will forward his name for appointment as acting ordnance officer, District of Upper Arkansas.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,
Actg. Asst. Adjt. Gen., District of Upper Arkansas:

Sir: Your communication of January 28, with orders to scout in the direction of the Cimarron, was received to-day. We will probably start on the 2d of February, and will scout as far as practicable in that direction. No Indians have been in the immediate vicinity of this post since the recent snow, as we have been twelve miles out and could not have failed seeing their tracks. I would say here that Beaver Creek, where Ed. Gurrier reported the Indians were camped, runs into the Republican from the south, about 160 miles north and a little west from Fort Larned, about the same distance from Fort Riley and southwest from Fort Kearny. If the Indians are on Beaver Creek they will not be likely to come south in force until they have removed their families north of the Platte. The Kiowas and Comanches are undoubtedly to the southward. I would say that as far as my judgment goes horses would do very well on a campaign during the winter, provided they had plenty of corn. They would probably do better on the dry grass now than on the green grass early in the spring. Severe storms are likely to come any time till the 1st of May and would be very severe on stock. I would suggest that the scout would be more efficient with a greater number of men, and would recommend that, with your approval, the following men be detailed, viz: Private William H. Ashton, Company E; Private E. R. Lee, Company G; Private N. W. Ellsworth, Company G.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. C. NETTLETON,
Sergeant, Commanding Independent Scouts.
Headquarters Department of Kansas,
Fort Leavenworth, January 31, 1865.

Col. Thomas Moonlight,
Commanding District of Colorado, Denver City:

Colonel: I am in receipt of several letters dated from 7th to 9th January, soon after your arrival, and contents duly noted. The post of Fort Lyon was attached to your command, and you must make the very best distribution and use of force you can till we have more for the locality, which I hope will be early in the spring, but Government cannot promise entire safety to settlements, and the militia should be well organized for self-preservation. I do not doubt the general hostility of the Indian tribes that inhabit the plains. This has been abundantly demonstrated, but they have not exhibited the power of concentration or combination which some had apprehended. General Mitchell has just returned, after a severe campaign south of the Platte, and he thinks most of the Indians have gone north. Still, we know there must be hostile bands between the Arkansas and Platte, that are intent on mischief, which must be looked after. The raising of troops in Colorado is a very expensive business, judging from the cost of the 100-days' regiment, and it seems to me better to recruit for the old regiments than to try to get up new ones. I do not expect to give up the lines of communication. Some interruption may occasionally occur, but there is no need of great alarm on the subject of trains. They should arm and combine and move cautiously. One has recently come from Denver safely to Cottonwood, and others are now starting west. The Indians have grown troublesome because trains have grown too venturesome. In former times emigrants always armed and organized before venturing to cross the plains, and they should do it now. Meanwhile we must do the very best we can with our Federal troops, and I hope you will keep me fully advised of matters in your command.

I remain, colonel, very respectfully, yours,

S. R. Curtis,
Major-General.

General Orders,} Hdqrs. Department of New Mexico,
No. 2.} Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 31, 1865.

On the 22d day of last October an order was published at these headquarters which organized an armed expedition against the Kiowa and Comanche Indians. Their depredations upon our trains and their murdering of our people on the roads leading to the States during the last year was the reason why this was done. After that order was published and issued and its receipt acknowledged, passports were issued to citizens to go out upon the plains to trade with these very Indians. The traders to whom these passports were given were warned on their arrival at Fort Bascom, N. Mex., by Lieutenant-Colonel Abreu, the commanding officer, of the state of hostility which existed between our troops and the Kiowas and Comanches, and these traders were ordered not to proceed farther toward the Indian country while the present condition of affairs existed. These orders were utterly disregarded. The traders got stealthily past our pickets, and, the Indians themselves say, brought them news of the approaching troops. Also, there cannot be a doubt but that these traders sold the Indians the very powder and lead with which our brave soldiers were killed and wounded. These matters have been so clearly developed as not to leave the shadow of a doubt.
on the subject. It is therefore ordered that no citizen trader will hereafter be allowed to pass any military post or picket along the eastern frontier of New Mexico for the purpose of trafficking with the Kiowas and Comanches, unless it shall have been announced in orders by the military authorities that we are no longer at war with these Indians, or unless his passport be vised and countersigned at these headquarters; and all commanders of posts, pickets, and bodies of troops are hereby ordered to arrest and hold as prisoners any person or persons without such passport who may be found trafficking with Kiowas and Comanches, or found proceeding to the country of those Indians for the purpose of such traffic, until notice be duly given that we are at peace with those tribes, as above stated. The general commanding the department is charged with the protection of the lives and property of the people from hostile Indians, and he regrets to be compelled, for the reasons given, to pursue the course here indicated. He had a right to suppose, on general principles, that no such passports would either be asked for or given, and that no such illicit commerce would be carried on with our enemies. Such a course, it will readily be seen, tends not only to embarrass the military, but to paralyze their efforts to punish these savages for their repeated crimes. By the fifty-seventh article of the act of Congress entitled "An act for establishing rules and articles for the government of the Armies of the United States," approved April 10, 1806, holding correspondence with or giving intelligence to the enemy, either directly or indirectly, is made punishable by death, or such other punishment as shall be ordered by the sentence of a court-martial. By command of General Carleton:

BEN. C. CUTLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

FORT BERTHOLD, DAK. TER., January 31, 1865.

Brig. Gen. ALFRED SULLY:

GENERAL: As we send a mail below to-day, I have the honor to report further upon the situation of affairs at this post. Medicine Bear's band of Yanktonnais are still encamped on the river below this post. Strike the Ree's [band] are at Painted Woods. There are 600 lodges of Santees also on the river between this place and Fort Rice. There are also some bands of Uncpapas, Blackfeet, and Minneconjous on the river below here. I have also heard that there were 200 lodges of Cheyennes encamped near Medicine Bear's camp and that other bands of the Platte River Indians are coming in there. About the 1st of this month ten sleigh loads of goods (mostly ammunition) were brought into the Sioux camps below here by agents from the Selkirk settlement, bearing the English flag. These agents gave the Sioux five kegs of powder and a quantity of balls, and traded them a large quantity of ammunition and other supplies, at the same time advising and urging them to fight the whites, and to commence by attacking this place, as it was the weakest and more easily taken. They also promised them to be back again the last of January, when they would bring them another large supply of ammunition and 1,500 lodges of Santees to assist them in their attack upon this post. It is evident that the Indians are collecting in large force upon the river between this post and Fort Rice, and that, instigated, encouraged, and supplied by these British subjects (whites, half-breds, and mongrels from Red River), they meditate an attack at an early day upon this post. The sons of Two Bears were in the Sioux camp when these Red River envoys were there, and they report that at the feast given to the traders, and at their instigation, Medicine Bear and Strike the Bee proclaimed open hostility to the whites, and their determination to fight, commencing with the attack upon this place. Is there no way, general, to stop these marauding bands from coming to the Indian camps from the British possessions and supplying them with munitions of war and inciting them to hostilities? The Government certainly will not permit these outrages to be perpetrated upon American soil under color of the British flag without promptly demanding redress. If the Indians attack this place they will probably be assisted by a large number of Red River half-breeds, as they and the Sioux have agreed to unite to fight the whites, and they have promised to help the Sioux in their attack upon us. You will see by the above statement that the situation of affairs is rather alarming. Our garrison is small (forty-nine men), with a frail, inflammable, ill-constructed stockade, easily fired, hard to defend, cut off from water (in case of an attack), isolated from the rest of the world without the means of communication with any other point, and in the heart of the hostile Sioux country. Their hosts gathering like birds of ill-omen around us and their threats reaching us daily, our situation is one of extreme peril. There seems to be no longer any doubt but what we shall be attacked soon, but there is only one thing that we can do, that is to be in readiness at all times and await their coming, and that we do calmly and with the conviction that when the time for action comes every man will be at his post and do his duty. We find it extremely difficult to get mails through between this and Fort Rice, as the Sioux are determined to allow no communication between this place and points below if they can prevent it. The last mail I sent, containing all our returns, reports, and other official papers, I presume was lost. Colonel Dimon, commanding Fort Rice, sent us a mail by two Yanktonnais belonging to Two Bears’ band, and by them I send this. We are all in good health and spirits, and everything is at present quiet at this post.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. B. MORELAND,
Captain, Sixth Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, Commanding Post.

The Reserve Corps was, December 5, 1864, reorganized. The infantry, with the exception of four regiments, which were transferred to the Department of the Gulf, was formed into four brigades, each to report direct to military division headquarters. The cavalry was, January 3, 1865, transferred to the Department of the Gulf, and the artillery (with the exception of two companies which were transferred to the Department of Arkansas) was ordered, December 5, 1864, to report to the chief of artillery of this military division.

BUREAU OF FREE LABOR, DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, La., February 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

GENERAL: I beg leave respectfully to submit a final report of the affairs of this bureau for the year ending February 1, 1865. In the month of September, 1864, I made to Maj. Gen. N. P. Banks a report embracing only a general view of the condition of the freedmen of the department. I was unable to give at the time such statistics as are necessary to a complete and full report. In this, however, I shall be able to show very nearly the cost of supporting and managing the freedmen for the year, the work done in their treatment, and the results accomplished. The accounts of the office prior to the time when I assumed charge having been imperfectly kept, I shall be unable to furnish a perfect statement, though I hope to render one very nearly so.

NUMBER SUPPORTED BY GOVERNMENT.

The number of freedmen now in my charge who are supported by the Government is as follows, viz:

| Orphan asylum in this city | 62 |
| Employment depot, Algiers | 156 |
| Infirm farm, Donaldsonville | 319 |
| Home farm, Baton Rouge | 694 |
| Rost Colony, parish of Saint Charles | 185 |

Total number of freedmen = 1,416

Average number in my hands who were supported by Government during the year = 1,000

EXPENSE OF SUPPORT.

Rations.

Number of rations issued during the year = 366,000
Value of rations estimated at present prices = $66,026.40

Clothing.

Value of clothing issued, estimated at $3 per month each, for the year = 36,000.00

Medicines.

Medicine and medical attendance, estimated at $50 per month, for the year = 600.00

Fuel.

Fuel, estimated at $100 per month, for the year = 1,200.00

Salaries.

Average cost of services of officers and clerks, estimated at $80 per month, for the year = 9,600.00

Total yearly cost = 113,426.40

I have gathered the above estimates from the books kept by me since I assumed charge of the duties of this office in August, 1864, and from the closest possible search of the imperfect records kept by Colonel Hanks in the early part of the year, which, as you will see by his own returns,* herewith inclosed, marked A, B, and C, do not give prices or value of supplies drawn by him, excepting those of medicine. His letter to me, also inclosed herewith, affects to give his reasons for the imperfection of his records, as well as to be his answer to the requirements of Special Orders, No. 297, extract 3, headquarters Department of the Gulf, dated New Orleans, November 2, 1864, a copy of which I also inclose, marked D.* I believe, however, that my figures are as nearly correct as it is possible to have them, and that the total yearly cost of the care of freedmen in charge of this bureau is very nearly that above set forth.

*Omitted.
PROPERTY TRANSFERRED TO TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

In compliance with the provisions of General Orders, No. 156, series of 1864, requiring the transfer of property in use by me, or in the possession of my quartermaster, to the Treasury Department, I have turned over property in my hands valued at .................................................................................................................. $2,945.00
(See receipts marked E.)*
My quartermaster has turned over property valued at ........................................... 2,761.25
(See invoice marked F.)*

Since this transfer Capt. J. M. Robinson, assistant quartermaster, has turned over to me property, to be paid for by the Treasury Department, amounting to .................................................. 6,704.00
(See invoice marked G.)*

Total amount transferred .................................................................................. 5,706.25
Total amount due by Treasury Department, according to General Orders, No. 156 12,410.25
This sum is not included in the $113,426.40 set forth above, as the yearly cost of care of those in my charge, but, added to it, will make a grand total of ........................................... 125,836.65

PROTECTION OF LABORERS, SEIZURES, AND PAYMENTS.

Under the provisions of general orders from department headquarters for the protection of plantation laborers, I have found it necessary, in certain instances, in order to secure payments of wages, to make seizures either of the produce or other property belonging to hirers, or of funds from merchants and others who had received produce without regard to the lien of the laborers, converting it to their own business account and interest. Thus far only twelve plantations have been reduced to the necessity of our resorting to this process of securing payments of freedmen working them.

I have received from seizures for payment of laborers the sum of .......... $22,042.87
I have disbursed up to date ................................................................. 17,312.01

I have a balance on hand of (yet to be distributed) ......................... 4,730.86

A detailed statement showing the names of plantations and the parishes in which they are located; the names of lessees; the names of parties from whom the seizures were made, and the authority by which they were executed; the amount seized; the amount due laborers; the amount disbursed by me, and the balance now in my hands, is here-with appended, under the head of "Seizures for the payment of laborers."

REMARKS.—Under the head "Amount disbursed" is included expense incurred in obtaining produce and disposing of the same; also the cost of temporary support of laborers abandoned by their employers. Where it appears that more money was seized than was due laborers, was occasioned by the fact that the accounts on the plantations with the laborers could not be obtained at the time of the seizure, making it necessary to estimate the amount due. In some instances the amount due laborers is not yet ascertained. Of the $2,500 drawn from Weed, Witters & Co., what was not required to pay laborers has been returned upon ascertaining the amount due.

LABORS AND RESULTS.

The labors and annoyances connected with the execution of the provisions of orders warranting such services, together with those required in determining the amounts due laborers, the examination of accounts, the preparation of pay rolls for plantations, the visitation of plantations and the distribution of funds have been exceedingly severe. Were it not for the active support which I have received in this work from you, general, and from the provost-marshal's department, thousands of freedmen would have gone without their wages for the labor they had performed during the year. As it is I am happy to inform you that, though the year has been marked by unparalleled disaster and prostration to the agricultural interests, there will not be more than 1 per cent. of the plantations where payment will not be secured to the freedmen. This is more than any man knowing the nature and extent of the losses of the planters could expect to see. Plantations whose laborers were supposed to have been hopelessly deprived of their earnings have been and are now being paid in full, under the wise provisions of the labor regulations enforced by your authority.

WITHERING CONDITION OF THE OLD LAND ARISTOCRACY.

What was reaped from the French Revolution to the large land estates of France is being realized by Louisiana, as the most sweeping result of the war which she herself helped to inaugurate. The disasters of the past season have been so great as to almost sweep from their position nearly every planter in the Department of the Gulf. It is certain that another such year will hardly leave any of the old planters on their feet. Their estates are so swallowed up in debt and so covered over with mortgages that with additional weight like that of the failure last season they would sink away and the old planting aristocracy would be gone. Even with fair crops it will be impossible to prevent a very early change in the ownership of the plantations. The thing is inevitable. I am informed by the planters generally that they cannot survive the shock which has come upon them from the war, from the abolition of slavery, and from the disheartening aspect presented to them in the loss of their fortunes, their sons, and their hopes, which are all swallowed up in the terrible grave dug for them by this huge rebellion. They are now preparing to give way to new capital and new proprietorship.

CONTRASTS IN TREATMENT OF FREEDMEN—EXCEPTIONS.

Of the men who are known as the “old planters” of this country, so far as dealing fairly with the freedmen is concerned in the matter of wages, I have to inform you that as a rule they have paid them more promptly, more justly, and apparently with more willingness than have the new lessees from other parts of the country. There are exceptions to this rule. I allude to some few Northern men who have come with their wealth to settle here in the midst of the ruins. These have done better for the freedmen than any others, not desiring to merely grind a fortune out of the freedmen in one year and then go away (as was the case of most Northern men who undertook the work of plantations). These treat the freedmen humanely and in a manner which cheers and encourages them. They contribute cheerfully to their educational, religious, and social welfare, and I only wish that the character of the few had been that of the many. The change would have been more promising, and the contrast with the old planters far more creditable.

WAGES OF CONSCRIPT LABORERS.

In pursuance with orders from department headquarters and with the energetic and faithful co-operation of the parish provost-marshal, I have collected wages due to conscripts taken under military orders from the plantations into the service of the United States. There was at one time great danger, in consequence of the hurried manner in which these men were forced into the army, that they would be deprived of their wages. I accordingly, and by great labor, instituted measures, approved by you, for the collection of the amounts due, and as a result I have collected the sum of $11,777.05 and paid to conscripts, $1,521.13, leaving a balance in my hands of $10,255.92. A detailed statement showing the amount collected in each parish, the amount paid to conscripts from each parish, and the balance on hand belonging to those taken from each parish, is herewith appended.

I have also the name of each conscript for whom money has been paid, and in order to complete this arduous and important work I requested and promptly received an order from department headquarters to commanders of colored troops requiring them to make such returns of conscripts serving in their commands as would enable me to secure such payments as have not been made, as well as to forward such as I have in my possession.

DISTRIBUTION OF PAY ROLLS—MEANS OF SECURING FINAL PAYMENTS.

I have prepared and distributed 4,000 pay rolls for plantations, by which I shall know when duplicates are returned as required by a circular which I issued, approved by you, that every laborer in the department is properly and fairly paid. I think we shall be able to conclude the year with a brighter record as to the treatment of the freedmen than their most sanguine friends could reasonably expect. Considering the depression of the money market and the utter ruin of the crops, this result is marvelous. Men have also expressed their surprise that the laborers are generally paid for their services, adding that they expected not more than one half of them could possibly be paid. It is doubtful whether during many years to come the freedmen of this department will have secured such general protection as they have during the past year. It is not probable that after clothing and finding themselves out of their earnings next year they will have as much clear cash in hand as they have at this time. To escape the payment of the laborers, with the orders issued for the freedmen, and the manner in which we have executed them, is regarded by every planter and every merchant as an absolute impossibility. To secure equal completeness on the laborer's side of the contract, together with a suitable recognition and treatment of their freedom, will crown our efforts in this line with success.

REGISTRY OF FREEDMEN.

I have completed a registry of all the laborers on the plantations, which is arranged in alphabetical order, excepting the small plantations where French creole owners could not make out returns. By means of this I am able to tell where any laborer is employed. This registry also embraces the names, age, sex, wages, former owner, and residence of each one. To complete this arm of my work I have had to use much patient exertion, and the result has rewarded us double.

DISTRIBUTING POST-OFFICE.

I have a distributing post-office for freedmen connected with my pass office. I herewith append a statement of its labors for the year:

GENERAL ASSISTANCE TO FREEDMEN—HELP FROM THE AUTHORITIES.

We have given up children out of slavery to their parents; we have secured payment of wages of servants in the city and elsewhere; we have secured pay of hands on steam-ships and boats; we have delivered persecuted people out of the jails; we have sent the sick to hospitals;
we have redressed grievances of every description; we have given protection to many who at one time could not get it in the courts because it was claimed they were slaves, and in the great variety of duties which we have been called upon to exercise toward this oppressed population of about 90,000 souls I have the satisfaction of saying that I have been sustained in every work by the major-general commanding and not crippled in my efforts by any of the authorities, including the governor of the State, who has done valuable service in shaping the conduct of the courts in regard to these people, and the commander of the Defenses of New Orleans, who has rendered telling assistance whenever I have asked it of him.

RECOMMENDATIONS REGARDING PASSES.

I recommend that the regulations of the military service in the department be so modified in the pass system as to enable colored citizens to be subject only to the same restrictions as other people, excepting in cases of small-pox, which disease is now, and has been for some time, very prevalent among the colored people on the plantations and elsewhere in the department. In the treatment of the movements of freedmen from plantations infected with the disease I urge the wisest possible restriction, as the disease is spreading to a most alarming extent. In all other respects I hope a more liberal treatment will be extended regarding this matter. I beg leave to say, in conclusion, that free labor and the system adopted at the commencement of the year were both new to this section. The first was the thing of all others which the planters most disliked and were most unwilling to adopt.
The second was put in operation where the like was never before attempted, and where all the deep-rooted prejudices of the land owners were opposed to it. With the exception of the friends of the Government who believed in free labor the system found at the outset no advocates. The vast thousands just out of slavery were placed be families on plantations and elsewhere. They were employed at remunerative wages, and their children have been educated in schools established for them. Order was brought out of chaos; capital was invested, and the soil was tilled. Considering all the circumstances thrown around the system, I believe it to have been successful in its time and in the objects intended by it.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS W. CONWAY,
Superintendent Bureau of Free Labor, Department of the Gulf.

THIBODEAUX, February 1, 1865.
(Received 11.50 a. m.)

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans:

I have just received the following telegram from Brashear City to Capt. B. B. Campbell, assistant adjutant-general:

A large force of rebels came to Berwick last night and burned the small-pox hospital for negroes. It is reported also that King and Whitaker have gone into the La Fourche again with about 300 men.

C. L. HARRIS, Colonel, Commanding.

Whitaker is and has been for some time in the country between Napoleonville and Grand River, but the force at Napoleonville up to this time has not dislodged him. His total force in our front cannot exceed eighty men. I have asked Colonel Harris how large a force the rebels had, and will telegraph answer.

R. A. CAMERON, Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

[Indorsement.]

Captain Speed:

Ask General Cameron where on the Berwick side the small-pox hospital is; by whom it was occupied, and how came it there. That side of the river was ordered to be evacuated. Ask him why Whitaker cannot be caught or driven back across Grand River.

T. W. S[HERMAN].

BRASHEAR, February 1, 1865.
(Received 11.30 a. m.)

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The works at this post will be put in a state of defense before the end of the present month. The water battery has been completed over a month. The redoubt has the earth-work nearly to the full height, and would have been finished during the past month had the materials for platforms and magazines been received in time. Requisitions were made and forwarded the 3d ultimo, but the articles only arrived last night. The infantry parapet of the connections is about one-half completed, revetted, and trimmed.

Respectfully,

W. S. LONG,
Major Ninety-sixth U. S. Colored Infantry and Engineer in Charge.
Telegraph to General Cameron to give the engineers all the assistance possible, with the view of completing the works at Brashear at once. Operations there on this work are too slow.

T. W. S[HERMAN].

NEW ORLEANS, February 1, 1865—4 p.m.

(Received 5th.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. WASHBURN,
Commanding, Vicksburg:

The commanding officer of the forces now on their way from Major-General Thomas will when he arrives off Vicksburg be instructed to disembark at that place and to be immediately prepared for active operations in the field, moving as light as possible. Please give him all necessary facilities.

E. R. S. CANBY.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF VICKSBURG,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 13, 1865.

Respectfully referred to commanding officer of the troops from General Thomas' army for his information, who will after perusal please return (sealed) to these headquarters.

By order of Brig. Gen. M. L. Smith:

A. C. FISK,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., February 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

SIR: The major-general commanding directs that the Fifty-third and Sixty-sixth Colored Infantry, according to last report stationed at Saint Charles, Ark., be relieved from duty there, and returned as soon as possible to the District of Vicksburg, if they have not already been so relieved.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

ENGINEER'S OFFICE, Hdqrs. Dept. of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., February 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock:

GENERAL: We have troops stationed in this department at the following points, viz: Helena, mouth of White River, Saint Charles, Devall's Bluff, Little Rock, Brownsville and line of railroad, Pine Bluff, Lewisburg, Fort Smith, Fort Gibson, and Fayetteville. In my opinion, the points to be held as long as we propose holding Arkansas, are, first in importance, Little Rock, Devall's Bluff, the line of railroad between the two places, and Pine Bluff. As a support to this occupation I would hold Lewisburg with a small force to observe the enemy's motions. As long as we hold Pine Bluff the enemy dare not cross the Arkansas below this point, and with Lewisburg in our possession he is forced to cross at Dardanelle or its vicinity, and thus give us timely notice of his movements. A few men at Saint Charles and the mouth of White River are well placed to prevent the boats from being fired upon by guerrillas and to furnish guards to the boats. The country between White River and the Mississippi has a few guerrillas who would be very annoying to boats plying the Mississippi were Helena abandoned. I should certainly retain a small force at that point as long as we occupy this country. I formerly held to the opinion that Fort Smith was a useful point to hold, but its utter inability to prevent Price's passage of the river when invading Missouri, or to stop its return when he passed in a short distance of that point, the fact it does not even protect the citizens of Arkansas who live one mile distant from its line of works, and the immense expense of supplying the troops stationed there, have caused me to change my opinion, and to recommend it be abandoned and the troops concentrated here. Fort Gibson is supplied from Fort Scott, and might remain with its present garrison until they have consumed their present supplies and then fall back to Fort Scott. I would recommend the turning over of Fayetteville and its troops to the Department of the Missouri. The size of the garrisons and their due proportions to hold these points, I have before given, and you have it on hand. Looking at the map, and from all the information I can glean, I think that Gaines' Landing, on the Mississippi River, would be a proper point to occupy. It is as near from there to Camden as this point is. It is near the point that Marmaduke last summer annoyed our boats, and is a favorite point of crossing the Mississippi River by the rebels. It threatens the enemy's communications whenever they move north of the Washita River. As to its facilities for being supplied, they are manifest.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. WHEELE.

Captain of Engineers. Chief Engineer Department of Arkansas.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,

Dispatch received last evening. Go immediately to Saint Louis. I request earnestly that Col. W. A. Nichols, assistant adjutant-general, be ordered to report to me as assistant adjutant-general of the division. I have no adjutant-general, and this request is made with Colonel Nichols' assent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: I transmit herewith copy of a letter* from General Connor in regard to the defense of the Overland Mail Route, and also several papers* from General Curtis on the subject. These papers and others were on their receipt forwarded to Lieutenant-General Grant, and have been returned without any instructions from him, so far as I am informed. It is therefore presumed that he deems the large cavalry force in the Department of Kansas as sufficient for present purposes without taking others from active duty in the field. It is proper to state in this connection that others report these stories of Indian hostilities as greatly exaggerated, if not merely gotten up for the purpose of speculation, and respectable authorities assert that they are encouraged by agents of the Overland Mail Company in order to cover their frequent failure to transport the mails according to contract. Be this as it may, it is highly important that the roads to New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, and Idaho should be properly protected from Indian hostilities, so that there may be no interruption in the transmission of supplies and the mails. You will transmit these papers with the necessary instructions to General Dodge, who will give the whole matter his immediate care and attention.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 28.

District or sub-district commanders will detail a line officer to take charge of the recruiting of each of the companies called for by Governor Thomas C. Fletcher, in General Orders, No. 3, from headquarters State of Missouri (adjutant-general's office), for the respective counties in their commands.

Officers most noted for efficiency and good discipline will be selected for this duty. They will remain in charge until they are relieved by officers commissioned by the governor to command these companies, and great effort will be made by them to fill the companies immediately, and to secure in them the services of as many honorably discharged soldiers from U. S. volunteers, and Missouri State Militia who have seen actual service, as possible.

The commissary department will, upon proper requisitions, issue rations to men recruited for these companies. As soon as sworn into the service by officers designated by district commanders they will be furnished clothing and such other articles as are allowed by the quartermaster's department.

Requisitions for arms and equipments will be made upon the State authorities, who, when they have them in store, or in the hands of the Enrolled Missouri Militia, will supply them. When they cannot meet these requisitions they will so indorse upon them, and the ordnance officer of the district or department will fill the requisition from arms and equipments turned over by the Missouri State Militia whose term of service has expired.

As soon as a sufficient number of men are recruited for a company to entitle them to a commissioned officer, as provided by General Orders, No. 61, War Department (Adjutant-General's Office), series of 1861, they will be placed on duty.

Commanding officers of these companies will make, through sub-district commanders, all reports required by Army Regulations and existing orders.

These companies will act solely under the orders of sub-district, district, or department commanders, as the exigencies of the service may require, and their officers will be held to a strict personal accountability for the discipline, drill, and efficiency of the men, and for unauthorized depredations of any kind committed by them.

All efficient officers of U. S. volunteers or Missouri State Militia whose term of service is expiring, or who have been honorably discharged or mustered out, and who desire commissions in these companies, will make immediate application therefor through the proper channels, and sub-district and district commanders will indorse their approval or disapproval from their knowledge or information, stating the services of the applicant, his qualifications and ability to command implicit obedience from his men, and the reputation of his former company for discipline. The indorsement of the district inspector as to the latter, if the applicant has served in the district, will be required.

District and sub-district commanders have control of the organizations of these companies, and will give them proper attention and see that they are placed upon an efficient footing in all respects.

By command of Major-General Dodge: J. W. BARNES, Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, } Headquarters Saint Louis District,
No. 27. } Saint Louis, Mo., February 1, 1865.

1. Lieutenant-Colonel Malone will move the headquarters of his regiment to Pilot Knob, Mo., reporting there to Colonel Beveridge, commanding Third Sub-District for orders. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

2. Lieut. Col. H. M. Hiller, Second Missouri State Militia Cavalry, will at once proceed to Bloomfield and assume the command of that post. Upon assuming the command he will order at least 350 citizens, embracing as many disloyal citizens as possible of that and surrounding neighborhoods, to report to him forthwith for the purpose of building a fort at Bloomfield. Whenever he shall have collected a sufficient number he will at once, if necessary, place them in charge of a small squad of soldiers, and set them at work under the supervision of Lieut. Col. D. F. Tiedemann, who is charged with the laying out of the work and of the superintending of the construction of the fort. Subsistence for the citizens thus called into service will be issued by the commissary of subsistence at Cape Girardeau, on provision returns properly approved by the commanding officer, but no other compensation will be allowed by the Government for such service. Soldiers will also assist in the work. The necessary teams, tools, &c., will be supplied by the assistant quartermaster at Cape Girardeau.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

MACON, MO., February 1, 1865—3 p.m.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Capt. Clayton Tiffin, of Ray County Enrolled Missouri Militia, reports that his company, on the 30th ultimo, pursued a gang of guerrillas from Ray County across the Missouri River into La Fayette County. They killed Hurleston, the leader of the gang, and two men, Fiske and Wright; all three noted guerrillas. At last accounts the company was close upon the remainder of the band, about twenty-five men, with a fair show for wiping them out.

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., February 1, 1865.

MRS. SARAH M. SCOTT,
Sarecoxie, Mo.:

DEAR MADAM: Your communication of the 27th ultimo came duly to hand. I write a few lines in reply, partly because you requested it and partly to correct the erroneous idea you seem to entertain in regard to the motives that led to the promulgation of the order to which you refer. I have nothing to say of the motives which actuated others, but I know that in all that I do in my official capacity I am actuated only by a desire to promote the true interests of security and the general welfare of the people. How strange it is that the simple fact of women and children being compelled to seek a new place of residence at a season of the year not usually inclement in this latitude, strikes your mind with horror, while the spectacle of honest, peaceable men laboring in their fields for the support of their wives and little children shot down like dogs by men whom these families you refer to are harboring and feeding, does not even call for a sympathizing word or even a remark. You take a strange view of the requirements of charity, and seem to conclude that charity requires an officer to stand still with folded arms and see murderers and their accessories turn whole communities of happy families into widows and orphans and cover the earth with the innocent slain, because the remedy will occasion some inconvenience and perhaps suffering of the parties in a manner guilty. Charity itself calls for the execution of the order. Then your own plea of justification, "I say with a clear conscience, I have done nothing against the Federal Government." How impotent! When this day of passion and excitements shall have passed away, and our posterity shall look back and see the Government as it was, imposing no burden upon the people, protecting every right, and fostering every interest, enlightening and elevating the masses, affording succor and asylum to the friendless and oppressed, and shall behold it assailed by myriads of traitors aiming only to cast down and destroy, how will those then appear to them who stand back with folded arms and say with a clear conscience, "I have done nothing against the Federal Government." Would it not be natural for them, when reflecting upon their condition, bereft of relations by a war most cruel, burdened with taxation, surrounded with the crime and immorality that war always engenders, to exclaim, "Accursed is the person and all his descendants who in such an hour and such a crisis did not rally to the support of the flag of such a Government, and at such a time sacrifice all for the common weal, or at least do something for the Government, and not be content with having done nothing against it." The removal of the families at the time mentioned is deemed a necessary step to enable the loyal people in that section to come to their homes and remain there in quiet. Whatever is necessary to be done to enable the Government to exercise its authority and protect its subjects in all places of its dominion will be done without regard to the suffering of any particular class, or even that of a whole generation. The order will be executed with as much promptness and vigor as circumstances will allow.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, February 1, 1865.

Brig. Gen. R. B. MITCHELL,
Columbus, Nebr. Ter.:
Will be able to send horses soon. Have the Pawnees got revolvers? They should have good ones. If possible send troops to strengthen Overland Stage Line beyond Julesburg, especially vicinity of Valley Station. Can't you bring down some force from Laramie route? The great pressure is to keep stage route open.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 20. HEADQUARTERS, DEPT. OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., February 1, 1865.

I. Capt. Joseph McC. Bell, assistant adjutant-general, will proceed to Saint Louis, Mo., as member of the staff of the major-general commanding.

III. Maj. H. von Minden, First (Hatch's) Independent Battalion, is assigned to duty as topographical engineer at these headquarters.

By command of Major-General Pope:

J. F. MELINE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., February 1, 1863.

Brig. Gen. H. H. Sibley,
Commanding District of Minnesota, Saint Paul, Minn.:

GENERAL: It is my purpose in the spring to establish a complete line of small posts on the Minnesota frontier about as follows, viz: At least one, and perhaps two, between Fort Abercrombie and Fort Wadsworth, each to be garrisoned by one cavalry company. From Fort Wadsworth proceeding south, the first post to be at or near the head of the Big Sioux on Sully's route in 1856; the second at or near Lake Poinsett; the third at or near Lake Shetek; the fourth at or near Spirit Lake. These posts, of course, are temporary in their character, and only the shelter actually necessary for troops will be put up by the troops themselves and at the least possible expense to the United States. Fort Ridgely will probably be the best depot for all the troops south of Wadsworth, including Wadsworth. An officer of rank and judgment ought to be stationed at Ridgely, who should command a sub-district to include the posts at Poinsett, Shetek, and Spirit Lakes. In the same manner the commanding officer at Wadsworth should have command and general supervision of that post and nearest posts on each side of it. The same arrangement will be judicious for Abercrombie in case you establish two posts between Abercrombie and Wadsworth. You have twenty cavalry companies; six will be required for this line of small posts, exclusive of Wadsworth and Abercrombie. At Wadsworth I should think two companies of infantry and three of cavalry sufficient; at Abercrombie one company of infantry and three of cavalry; at Ridgely one of infantry and two or three of cavalry. This arrangement will leave you five cavalry companies to spare. I should think by spring it would be judicious, if it can be done, to post one company of the Veteran Reserve Corps at Ripley, and two, perhaps three, companies of cavalry, though I do not suggest anything to you in regard to the Chippewa frontier, as you probably know better than I what is needed there. I can probably send you in April or May one company of the Veteran Reserve Corps if absolutely needed. Please bear in mind in this arrangement that I wish you to send not less than six companies of cavalry with a couple of pieces of artillery to Devil's Lake as early as practicable after the grass is sufficient for animals. The companies for this service can be drawn from Abercrombie, Wadsworth (probably), and Ridgely. At all events, you can make up this force without interfering with the establishment of these small posts. The forces for Devil's Lake must go as high as possible, as they will only remain there during the summer, and even then they must move about a good deal. The expense of establishing a large post at Devil's Lake is too great to authorize, unless in case of absolute necessity; nor could such a post, with the present policy of the Government, in our relation with the English authorities in that region, exercise any sort of restraint upon English traders and half-breeds. You understand, of course, that the object of this chain of small posts is to cover completely the Minnesota frontier at so great a distance from the outer settlements as to secure entire safety to the settlements and to cover the advance of immigration and settlement to the west and north. Of course broad trails should be at once made between these posts, and the route between them be patrolled at least once in every forty-eight hours with such care that any Indian trail which crossed them would surely be discovered, and could be rapidly followed back toward the settlements. I have given you above my general ideas on this subject, and merely suggested the general course and position of this line of small posts. Of course a more intimate knowledge of the country must modify the details somewhat. I wish you to look into the matter and as soon as you can write me fully on the subject, giving me your views as to the policy of such a line of posts, as well as its location.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., February 1, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. SULLY,
Commanding Department of Iowa, Dubuque, Iowa:

GENERAL: As your reports set forth that large bodies of hostile Indians are coming to the military posts established last summer on the frontier to surrender themselves to the military authorities of the United States for the purpose of securing peace, you are instructed to confer with the Indians thus surrendering themselves and to inform them that the United States will maintain peace with them simply on the basis of their good behavior and assist them in protecting themselves against hostile Indians. They will be notified that they must remain outside of an outer line of posts and in no event to come within this line even in the smallest parties. Any intrusion into the settlements even by single Indians will be regarded and treated as an act of hostility on the part of the tribe to which such Indian or Indians belong. The Indians thus giving themselves up will be permitted and encouraged at all times to establish their camps in the vicinity of any of the outer posts and to trade at the posts with persons duly authorized to trade with them. No other treaty stipulations will be made with Indians. As the Indians thus coming in and surrendering are regarded as prisoners of the United States, no white man whatever will be allowed to visit them except by special permit in each case from the district commander, and no treaties other than above specified will be suffered to be made by any person whatever. The hostile attitude occupied by all the Sioux bands for the last two years has suspended former treaties with the United States, and the payment of annuities or distribution of goods under any former treaties will not be permitted by the military commanders of districts or posts on the frontier, unless contrary orders are received from the War Department. Any claims of Indians for lands from which they are excluded by this order will be carefully considered by the commander of this military department, and by him be submitted for the action of the proper authorities at Washington. The line beyond which Indians are required to remain will be a line from Fort Abercrombie through Fort Wadsworth to Fort Pierre, on the Missouri River, and from Fort Abercrombie along the line of the Cheyenne River; east and south of this line all Indians are prohibited from coming on any pretext, under the penalty of immediate hostilities with the tribes to which they belong.

Copies of this order will be furnished by district commanders to the commanding officers of all frontier posts under their jurisdiction, and its provisions will be carefully explained to all Indians who come into any of the posts to surrender themselves. District and post commanders are instructed to aid all such Indians in protecting themselves against other hostile tribes, and to direct the movements and operations of the friendly Indians with this view, but under the clear understanding that such service for their own protection will furnish no ground for any claim for services against the United States. In conferences with Indians and when the circumstances imperatively demand it, certain articles of provisions in limited quantities may be issued to the Indians in an order of the post commander, setting forth in detail the necessity, a copy of which order will be immediately forwarded to department headquarters. It is believed, however, that all the Indians referred to can easily subsist themselves by hunting and trading at the military posts. No Indian trader will be permitted to locate himself in the camps of these Indians, but will be assigned a place for his store at or in the immediate vicinity of the military post by the post commander. All officers and soldiers are positively prohibited from trading with Indians or receiving presents of any kind from Indians or Indian traders, and any officer or soldier detected in such practices, directly or indirectly, will be placed in arrest and brought before a general court-martial. It is very desirable that all Indians on the frontier be induced to establish their camps in the vicinity and under the supervision of the military posts, and all military commanders on the frontier will offer every proper inducement to Indians, by kind treatment, by protection from other Indians and Indian traders, to secure this result.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., February 2, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 2d day of February, 1865: Mr. S. Armitage, scout, left New Orleans January 4, 1865; arrived at Alexandria January 9, at Shreveport January 11, at Jefferson January 14, and at Marshall January 16. Returned to Shreveport January 17; remained there four or five days, then returned to Alexandria about January 22, remained one day, then returned to New Orleans, via Marksville and Morganza. He makes the following statement: The department depot for provisions is at Jefferson; only a provost guard there. At Marshall there is a Government tannery, a shoe manufactory, a foundry for cannon shot and shell, a factory for percussion caps, a powder factory, and the headquarters of the Treasury Department for the Trans-Mississippi Department. Lead is brought to Marshall from Mexico. At Shreveport is a foundry for casting cannon shot and shell; also the depot of clothing, which is full of blankets, shoes, and other clothing for the Trans-Mississippi Department. All shoemakers and tailors are obliged to work there. A breast-work surrounds the city, with embrasures at intervals of 100 yards for guns. No guns are now mounted. No troops are there except a provost guard. General Kirby Smith's headquarters are at Shreveport. At Minden, twenty-eight miles from Shreveport, were all the infantry except Magruder's division, which was formerly commanded by Price. General Price is shelved. He lost 12,000 veterans, and brought back 10,000 raw recruits and conscripts from Missouri. He lost all his teams and much of his artillery there. Marmaduke's division was at Little Prairie, eight miles from Washington, Ark., and 110 miles from Shreveport, numbering, all told, as infantry not over 18,000. At Meriden [Minden, La.] were Watkins' [Walker's] division, 6,000 to 7,000; Polignac's division, 6,000 to 7,000; Cameron's battery, six guns; Nims' old battery, six guns. Several batteries have been ordered to Marshall to recruit their horses. All this infantry has been ordered to Alexandria. General Buckner (whose headquarters are at Natchitoches, 100 miles from Alexandria) came down to Alexandria with informant upon business relating to the military movement. General Thomas' brigade numbers not over 2,000. His infantry is camped four miles back of Alexandria on Williams' plantation. One company of heavy artillery, six guns (called Bell Battery), and one company of light artillery are encamped at Pineville, opposite Alexandria. Collins' company of scouts are on the east side of the Atchafalaya. Two companies of scouts, called steam-boat companies, and two other companies are along the west bank of the Atchafalaya, under command of Maj. Norman White. At Alexandria, on the opposite bank of the river, between the two falls, is a fort, finished, mounting four 5-inch rifled, and four 8-inch smooth-bore pieces. This fort is well equipped and supplied. All the guns bear down the river. The other fort is opposite the upper fall, and is a duplicate of the first.

Another fort on the Alexandria side is being constructed between the falls, to be armed with four guns from the Westfield, now en route from Houston. Five hundred or 600 negroes are now at work upon this fortification; 500 or 600 negroes are also at work on Drutt's Bluffs thirty-five miles above Grand Ecore, on the opposite side of the river, upon a work calculated to mount two mortars and two 8-inch guns. The light works at Grand Ecore are of little value. The raft obstructions and works at the mouth of the Cut-off, thirty-five miles below Shreveport, will probably be abandoned. The crops in Louisiana and Texas have been fine, mostly corn; some wheat in Texas. The opinion prevails among military men that an advance will be attempted this season by way of Alexandria. The concentration of troops there is to meet this movement. General Polignac is on his way to Paris, France, on ninety days' furlough. Scurry's division is along the Black River. Harrison's scouts are along the Tensas River and Arkansas line. Denison's cavalry regiment is along the Arkansas River and its mouth. Parsons' cavalry brigade has gone to Texas. All Texas cavalry except Scurry's division has gone to Texas. Most of the Arkansas cavalry is roaming through Arkansas. Most of the Louisiana cavalry has gone to Texas. Want of forage is the cause. The legislature is in session at Shreveport. Governor Allen has just issued a proclamation evidently designed to prepare the people of Louisiana to assent to the use of negroes as laborers, soldiers, and if need be, in the end, to their emancipation. The disaffection among the rebel soldiers is wide spread and increasing. They need only a head and an organization to openly bid defiance to Confederate authority in the Trans-Mississippi Department. Desertions are constant, though the deserter is treated with rigor. From three to eight executions take place at Alexandria every Friday, by command of General Buckner. A schooner with 300 bales of cotton is preparing to run out of Vermilion Bay. It will carry an agent to build or buy steamers to run the blockade on the Texas coast. This agent used to own and run the steamer Empire Parish. His family is in New Orleans. Torpedoes cannot be used in the Red River on account of the great rise and fall of the water. Informant was so told by the captain of the torpedo corps. No design is entertained of sending troops across the Mississippi River. Soldiers will not submit to the transfer. In conversation General Buckner stated to Mr. Armitage that Major-General Canby was dreaded as an able soldier and commander, and his movements were awaited with apprehension. Of Major-General Steele’s merits and military talent he had a good opinion. The withdrawal of General Banks from the command of the Federal forces in the Department of the Gulf was regarded by Confederate officers with much disapprobation and regret.

A communication from Capt. A. G. Fitz, Port Hudson, January 30, states that a deserter from Gauber’s [Gober’s] command confirms previous information in relation to Taylor being in command of all forces east of Mississippi River. His headquarters are at Summit, Miss. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

BAYOU GOULA, February 2, 1865.
(Received 8.15 p.m.)

Captain SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I drew in my cavalry yesterday to rest them. I followed Brown’s band through the swamps with cavalry and infantry as long as practicable, but so far have not succeeded in making any capture. If they have taken —— their stay here will be made an uncomfortable one. Today one company is sent from Miles’ plantation upon Bayou La Butte to Grand River, from thence to The Park to Plaquemine, and return by the river road to Bayou Goula.

Very respectfully,

W. SAYLES,
Colonel, Commanding.

MORGANZA, February 2, 1865.

Special Orders, \(\text{No. 27}\) | Headquarters District of Rolla, Rolla, Mo., February 2, 1865.

4. Col. E. C. Catherwood, Thirteenth Missouri Veteran Volunteer Cavalry, is hereby relieved from the command of the post of Rolla, Mo., and will rejoin his regiment forthwith. On assuming command of his regiment Colonel Catherwood will at once take such measures as may be necessary for the proper protection and care of the horses of his command.

By order of Brigadier-General Brown:

J. H. Steger,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Col. E. C. Catherwood,
Commanding Post of Rolla, Rolla, Mo.:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that in obedience to Special Orders, No. 21, current series, from headquarters Post of Rolla, Mo., I proceeded to Little Piney River and Beaver Creek, scouting over that section of country, and found the body of the man Sallee, but no trace of those who murdered him. I am informed, however, that one John Brown, a noted guerrilla, was one of the murderers. I arrested his wife for harboring him. I arrested Mrs. Fore for harboring guerrillas and bushwhackers. I also arrested John Lester, Widows Wright and Coleman for the same reasons. I have the honor to report further that this section of country between the roads to Springfield and Houston is infested to a great extent with bushwhackers and guerrillas, and is, in my opinion, a general rendezvous for them during certain months in the year. My men were only partially supplied with rations for the time specified, and were compelled to live on what the country afforded.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. B. Kelley,
Second Lieutenant Company G, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry.
Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, February 2, 1865—1.30 p.m.

Col. John Morrill,
Sixty-fourth Illinois, Springfield:

Arrest all those men who are charged as bushwhackers and deliver them to provost-marshal at this place. General Cook says he will give you what aid you need. You being in his district, act under his advice.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

---

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, February 2, 1865—1.30 p.m.

Brig. Gen. John Cook,
Springfield:

I have telegraphed Colonel Morrill to arrest the bushwhackers whose names he has, and respectfully request that you give him such aid as necessary to carry out his order. They are all preparing to commence their work of murder as soon as leaves come, and it is our duty to take them in hand and break them up. I desire to avoid any conflict with civil authorities, and I do not think they will interfere when they see the duty we are performing. It being in your district, it is best for Colonel Morrill to act under your advice.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Hdqrs. Sub-District No. 2, District of South Kansas, Fort Scott, Kans., February 2, 1865.

Maj. H. C. Haas,
Commanding Troops in Allen, Woodson, and Greenwood Counties, Kans.:

Major: As you have now two companies under your command, you will be enabled to scout pretty thoroughly the south border of Kansas as far west as the guide meridian east. I am sending also a part of a squadron to Emporia that will co-operate with you in watching this southern border. It is indispensable to the safety of this border that cattle stealing from the Indian Nation should be stopped. Neither citizens of Kansas nor soldiers of this department have any business in the Indian country, nor will they be permitted under any pretense to bring cattle or stock of any kind from that region into or through this sub-district. You will promptly arrest any person or persons going south into that country, as they can have no business except that of engaging in this illegal and dangerous traffic, reporting at once each arrest and the facts of each particular case to these headquarters. You will be held strictly responsible for the prevention of this traffic in Allen and Woodson Counties, and in connection with the force stationed at Emporia for its prevention also in Greenwood. You cannot be too active or energetic in this matter, as there is great reason to apprehend retaliatory excursions from the neighboring Indians unless these outrages upon their property are effectually checked.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHAS. W. BLAIR,
Colonel, Commanding.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,

Denver, Colo. Ter., February 2, 1865.

Maj. C. S. Charlot,

Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of Kansas, Leavenworth, Kans.:

MAJOR: I have the honor to submit for the information of the department commander a statement of facts as they exist in my district at present. I forwarded to you some time ago, per hands of Colonel Tan- natt, a history of affairs in this Territory, and also what I thought should be done in the premises to alleviate the sufferings of this people, and if possible remove the evil. I have learned indirectly that Colonel Tan- natt delivered the documents, but I have had no such acknowledgment or even heard a word on the subject from department headquarters. The Indians are bold in the extreme. They have burned every ranch between Julesburg and Valley Station, and nearly all the property at the latter place, driven off all the stock, both public and private, and destroyed many ranches on this side as far up as Junction. They have also destroyed about two miles of telegraph and carried off about one mile of wire. These Indians are led by white men, and have complete control of all the country outside of my district, so that I am hemmed in. I have a command of about fifty men at Valley Station, who are fighting every day. A number of Indians have been killed and quite a number of soldiers wounded. To morrow a large mail leaves (some five coaches), as also about fifty citizen teams. I furnish an escort of thirty mounted men (recruits just enlisted for the Second Colorado Cavalry) as far as Julesburg. Many citizens go along armed and ready to fight, so that it is possible all may get safely through, as there are at least 100 armed men. Captain Anderson has been to Fort Lyon and made the consolidation of the First Regiment, but, owing to the men and companies being scattered all over the country, it takes a long time to complete the organization so as to know where each man belongs, and while this is being done it is almost impossible to move companies from stations.

The weather has been very severe here for nearly three weeks. Thermometer 30° below zero, with quite a fall of snow on the ground. I have tried every means in my power to raise volunteers for three months State service, but as yet have not succeeded, owing to the factional spirit existing in the community. The legislature took the matter in hand, at my suggestion, appropriating so much money, Territorial bonds, to give the men a bounty and purchase horses to mount them on, as I have none; but the members cannot agree on the spoil likely, in their estimation, to accrue from such a proceeding, so the bill has not yet passed. I addressed the speaker of the house yesterday, informing him that unless something was done within forty-eight hours I would be compelled, much against my will, to proclaim martial law and stop all business, forcing every man to enter the ranks and open the line of communication. I have now a city organization of about 1,000 men organized into companies, so that in case of an attack here I would have something tangible to lay hold of and make a fight. I have had a great deal of trouble in this matter, as there is no concert of action, every man suspecting his fellow of some chicanery. Fort Lyon is being rapidly fortified, so that 200 men can defend it against 2,000 Indians. Militia companies are being organized all over the settled parts of the country (under penalty of being pressed into service) to defend the frontier settlements southward, and could I but get a regiment here now I could keep things in a running trim until the arrival of sufficient force to make a campaign. The Indians are now determined to make it a war of extermination, and nothing short of 5,000 men can make it extermination for them. Major Wynkoop informed me from Fort Lyon that many warriors were on the headwaters of the Smoky Hill and intended attacking all the settlements, as well as Denver. Provisions, owing to the transportation line being cut off, are at an exorbitant price, as well as labor and forage. Cannot troops be sent out here immediately, or authority to raise companies, which could be easily done, for one year? The Santa Fe line has threatened to stop running on account of the Indians. Should such be the case then all is cut off.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

CITY POINT, Va., February 3, 1865—9 p. m.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

In view of elections to be held in Tennessee, and important legislation that is expected in that State, I would submit whether it is not better that the whole State should be under one commander. If you approve this I would suggest that West Kentucky and West Tennessee be added to Thomas' command, and that General Washburn be returned to the command of the latter. While General Dana might do well in the field, I do not think him the most suitable man for the command of a department. General Washburn has been ordered to report to General Ord, but as that order probably only went out to-day, it can be changed if you approve. If General Banks is not to go back to the Department of the Gulf, I would suggest some other officer than General Hurlbut for the command of that department. If the change in Thomas' command is made it would be well to add the State of Mississippi to the Department of the Gulf.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 3, 1865.

Capt. J. P. Foster,

Comdg. 3d and 4th Districts, Mississippi Squadron,
U. S. Steamer Lafayette, off Mouth of Red River:

SIR: Steam-boats owned by persons within the rebel lines bringing products of insurrectionary districts from the Red River country to the purchasing agent in New Orleans will be permitted to continue the voyage to this city, for the purpose of discharging their cargoes. If practicable they should be convoyed down, or a small guard put on board to see that they hold no communication with the shore. If you cannot spare a force for this purpose please send them to Morganza, and the commander there will be instructed to relieve your guard and send them down with a guard from his command. These vessels should not be allowed to land at any other point until they reach New Orleans, and the crews should be allowed to hold no communication with the shore. A copy of this letter will be sent to Admiral Lee.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

(Same to Mr. Cutler and General Hurlbut, with request to instruct the commanding officer at Morganza.)

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., February 3, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 3d day of February, 1865: A report from Lieut. L. E. Granger, Morganza, La., January 31, 1865, states that the following information has been gleaned from a deserter who arrived at the Federal lines January 28, 1865, having left Alexandria the 25th instant: General Thomas commands the post of Alexandria, at which place are stationed two brigades, all Louisiana troops, numbering about 5,000 men. There are no Texans east of Alexandria. Two brigades of cavalry are at Simspoir after forage; a few are around Big Cane and Bayou Rouge. Louisiana troops are discouraged and are deserting daily, some going to Mexico, some to the Federal lines. They have not been paid for more than a year. The road from Simspoir to Morganza is in excellent condition, but from Simspoir to Alexandria the road is in very bad condition. During the last rise in the Red River it was feared that General Canby would make a movement in that direction, and a battery was stationed fifteen miles below Alexandria for some time. In December, 1864, informant saw about 3,000 negroes at work on fortifications at Shreveport. Walker's division was encamped at Shreveport, but was to move in a few days to Natchitoches. The First Brigade of Polignac's division, commanded by General King, is encamped fourteen miles above Camden, at Grapp's Bluff, and are throwing up fortifications at that place. Major-General Bagby, commanding all the cavalry in Buckner's district, has his headquarters at Mr. Williams' plantation, four miles in the rear of Alexandria. Informant heard nothing about any movements of troops; thinks they are not in condition to move. General Buckner has brigade drills from 8 a. m. until 4 p. m. every day.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MYRON ADAMS, JR.,
Lieutenant and Signal Officer, U. S. Army.

(In absence of Captain Eaton.)

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
No. 33. } New Orleans, February 3, 1865.

3. Company M, Fourteenth New York Cavalry, is hereby relieved from duty at Barrancas, Fla., and will be reported to the commanding officer of the regiment at Baton Rouge, La., without delay. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

J. C. STONE,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. STEELE,
Commanding U. S. Forces, Kenner, La.:

SIR: The complete reorganization of the forces under your command will be announced in a few days. In the meantime I am directed to state that the following will be the organization of the First and Second Brigades of the First Division, viz: First Brigade, Brig. Gen. M. K. Lawler commanding—Forty-seventh Indiana, Twenty-first Iowa, Twenty-ninth Wisconsin, and Ninety-ninth Illinois. Second Brigade, Brig. Gen. E. S. Dennis commanding—Eighth, Eleventh, and Fortysixth Illinois. These troops will immediately be prepared for embarkation to Mobile Point, Ala., one brigade to go by sea, the other via Lakeport and Lake Pontchartrain.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. STEELE,
Kenner, La.:

The ocean steamer which is to take one of your brigades to Fort Morgan has capacity for some 700 more troops, and the commanding general directs that the Twenty-third Iowa and the Seventy-sixth Illinois, which are to be assigned to brigades now at Mobile, be forwarded by the same opportunity. As a rule, every foot of transportation must be made available. The Third Brigade under the new organization will consist of the Twenty-ninth Illinois, Thirtieth Missouri, One hundred and sixty-first New York, and Twenty-third Wisconsin; the latter not yet arrived from Arkansas. The first three regiments number about 1,600, and Colonel Sawtelle thinks he can have sea-going transportation ready for them by Sunday or Monday. Be pleased to hold them in readiness to embark them the moment the steamers are ready.

By order:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 3.

HDQRS. 1ST BRIG., RESERVE CORPS,
MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Kenner, La., February 3, 1865.

The following has been officially announced as the organization of the First Brigade, First Division: First Brigade, Brig. Gen. M. K. Lawler commanding—Forty-seventh Indiana, Twenty-first Iowa, Twenty-ninth Wisconsin, Ninety-ninth Illinois. These regiments will be immediately prepared for embarkation.

By command of Brigadier-General Lawler:

B. WILSON,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Kenner, La., February 3, 1865.

Col. SAMUEL L. GLASGOW,
Commanding Twenty-third Iowa Volunteers:
(Through Col. Charles Black, commanding Fourth Brigade.)

COLONEL: The major-general commanding directs me to say that you will hold your command in readiness to embark at a moment's notice for Mobile Point, Ala. Your regiment is to be assigned to a brigade now serving there. You will embark on the same steamers that carry the First Brigade, and you will be subject to General Lawler's orders until you receive notice of your permanent assignment.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN F. LACEY,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, February 3, 1865.

Brig. Gen. R. A. CAMERON,
Commanding La Fourche District:

I am directed by Brigadier-General Sherman to furnish you with a copy of his indorsement on your communication of February 1, forwarding reports received from commanding officer Plaquemine of cavalry reconnaissance made from that post:

DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
February 3, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to department headquarters.

Captain Rice's report certainly shows that he made considerable effort to cut off the enemy after he arrived at Grand River on the 27th. The operations of the major part of his company, which was on Grand River on the 26th, are not stated in the report. It would be interesting to know their positions and how the fifteen men of the enemy, with twenty of our cavalry prisoners (horses and all, it is supposed, for they were captured with the prisoners) escaped into the Grossetete country on the 26th without being heard of at the time. It certainly does not infer much loyalty on the part of the inhabitants about there to allow such an operation without giving information to the Union troops. If these inhabitants still continue to allow the enemy to pass and repass this gate to the Grossetete without giving information, I recommend that hereafter they be required to do without any plantation supplies from New Orleans.

T. W. SHERMAN.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Thibodeaux, February 3, 1865.
(Received 8.26 p. m.)

Capt. F. Speed:
Sir: I have just received the following telegram from Colonel Harris, at Brashear City:

Brashear City, February 3, 1865.

Capt. B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General:
Sir: I sent up the flag of truce this a.m. with those letters. They got up as far as Mrs. Rentrop's, and delivered them to Lieut. B. Onney, of the Second Louisiana Cavalry. They found that the bridges had been rebuilt and roads repaired generally.

Yours, respectfully,

C. L. Harris,
Colonel, Commanding Post.

R. A. Cameron,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

Bayou Goula, La., February 3, 1865.
(Received 7.45 p. m.)

Capt. Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General:
I have not yet heard from the scouting party sent out yesterday. Captured a rebel soldier last night who was attempting to evade our pickets. Was dressed in Confederate uniform and found with a Remington revolver. He said he belonged to the Second Louisiana Cavalry. I think that he belonged to some of the roving bands that have been in the neighborhood. We have plenty of forage.

Very respectfully,

Willard Sayles,
Colonel, Commanding Detachment Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Special Orders, No. 31.

3. The following assignments of artillery in the Seventh Army Corps are announced, viz: To the First Division: Third Iowa Battery, Fifth Ohio Battery, First Indiana Heavy Artillery, Battery A; First Missouri Artillery, Battery K; Second Missouri Artillery, Battery E; Third Illinois Artillery, Battery A. Second Division: First Delaware Battery. Third Division: Second Kansas Battery, First Arkansas Battery. Cavalry Division: Twenty-fifth Ohio Battery.

4. The Ninth Regiment Iowa Cavalry Volunteers, on duty at Brownsville Station, is hereby attached to the Cavalry Brigade of post of Little Rock, Brig. Gen. C. Bussey commanding, and will make returns accordingly.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Maj. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

Major: The Resolute arrived last night with two barges in tow from Little Rock all right. She was fired upon at four different points. No damage done. The officer in charge reports that the largest party of rebels he saw would not number over twelve or fifteen. After relieving all permanent details of Ninety-sixth Ohio with dismounted men of First Indiana Cavalry, and cutting those details down as much as possible, we have twenty-three dismounted men left, upon which we will have to depend for provost guard, which is absolutely necessary, and as guards for boats going up the Arkansas River. I do not think it would be safe to send boats up the Arkansas without a guard of at least twenty-five men. Two boats are now expected from Memphis for Little Rock. I will furnish the largest guard possible for them. Of the mounted men I have here it is necessary to keep them on duty as an island patrol, as a party of four jayhawkers came on the island a few nights since and robbed two citizens of clothing, money, &c. As there are a large number of dismounted cavalry in the department I hope you will excuse me for suggesting that about 100 of them be sent here to be used as guards on Arkansas River boats. With their carbines and pistols they would be as effective as infantry. The Ninety-sixth Ohio are ready to go as soon as transportation can be obtained for them. The only New Orleans boat that has passed down since the order in regard to Ninety-sixth was received was crowded with troops and horses.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
G. F. McGinnis,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Headquarters Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, February 3, 1865.

Brigadier-General Clayton,
Pine Bluff, Ark.:

The Seventh Missouri is directed to report to Brigadier-General West at this place. They can be sent on steam-boats as you suggest.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Washington, D.C., February 3, 1865—12.15 p.m.

Major-General Dana, Memphis:

General Washburn will be relieved from duty in your department and ordered to report to Major-General Ord, on the James River, Va.

H. W. Halleck,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

Headquarters District of Vicksburg,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 3, 1865.

Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: From deserters, refugees, and others I learn that Hood's army is very nearly broken up. It is scattered all the way from Tupelo to Meridian, and large numbers have been furloughed and allowed to go home. The country is full of such, and it is not supposed that they will be in any hurry to rejoin their command. Forrest is at Okolona, but his command has mostly left him. That part of it that was from West Tennessee is nearly all at home. I inclose a couple of late rebel papers.

Your obedient servant,

C. C. WASHBURN,
Major-General.

[Inclosure—From the Canton Citizen (Extra), Canton, Miss.]

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH.

Charleston, January 27, 1865.—A Yankee gun-boat got aground in Camboko [Oombahee] yesterday. Our batteries opened on her and set her on fire. She burned to the water's edge. All of the crew excepting five men escaped. The prisoners who came to the city to-day report a monitor sunk off Sullivan's Island recently by a torpedo and lost nearly all on board. Only five out of a crew of 300 escaped; all the rest were drowned. Nothing important from below.

Richmond, 27th.—The Baltimore American, evening edition, of 23d, contains very little of importance. Gold on the 21st, in New York, 200. Grant was in Washington on Saturday. A letter received in Philadelphia says Blair had full authority from Lincoln to give safe-conduct to Washington for peace commissioners from Davis. The National Intelligencer announces Blair's first visit to Richmond, and says: "We have good reasons, not to say authority, for stating that Blair goes to Richmond upon no hollow, hopeless mission, but upon one of substance, giving good hope to patriotic men that the present civil war be speedily brought to a close by negotiation." The Herald says Seward has the most friendly relations with the manager of the Intelligencer.

Richmond, 27th.—The Forty-third Virginia Regiment unanimously adopted resolutions declaring their purpose to fight for liberty and self-government as long as the Southern Confederacy can furnish cartridges; and to every despicable offer of peace and submission made by the enemy will reply with crack of rifles and shouts of defiance. The last resolution reads: "These are our sentiments, and we call upon the people at home and the authorities to support and rally around us, and with God's blessing we will bear the Southern cross through fire and blood until each star upon it shall glow and shine forever in the firmament of nations."

Richmond, 27th.—The most important business in the House to-day was the consideration of Senate bill to provide for the employment of free negroes and slaves on fortifications, &c. Ramsey moved a proviso that said slaves shall not be armed or used as soldiers. Miles supported the amendment. He was utterly opposed to arming our slaves. In the midst of his remarks the House sustained a motion to transfer the bill to secret session, and then resolved into secret session. The Senate concurred in House joint resolution of thanks to General Williams, and passed with amendment House bill to increase the efficiency of the cavalry; also passed another bill to increase the number of acting midshipmen, with provisions which are intended to obviate the objection of the President to the bill recently vetoed. Wigfall introduced resolutions directing [sic] all laws authorizing impressment of property for use of the Army, except by military officers.
in case of absolute necessity, which, after long debate, was adopted. Twenty-five surgeons and assistant surgeons captured at Franklin and vicinity arrived last night from Varina. Seddon continues to act as Secretary of War. The position was certainly tendered to General Breckinridge. No reliable developments in relation to Blair's mission, though it is generally supposed he proposed reunion on such terms as Confederate authorities might submit.

Richmond, 28th.—Vice-President Stephens, Senator Hunter, of Virginia, and Judge Campbell, have been appointed commissioners to proceed to Washington to confer with the authorities of the United States Government on the question of peace. They will leave to-morrow.

Verona, January 26.—Major-General Forrest's scouts report great excitement in Memphis on account of recognition rumors. The English premier has notified Lincoln that he would be recognized after the 4th of March as President only of the States that voted for him. The English Government has ordered the seizure of all American vessels at Nassau. These are the reports in Memphis.

Hdqrs. Second Brigade, U. S. Colored Troops, Post and Defenses of Memphis, Memphis, Tenn., February 3, 1865—11.30 a.m.

Capt. B. G. Curtis, Asst. Adjt. Gen., District of West Tennessee:

Sir: I have just heard from the wood yard direct. A small squad of rebels attacked the wood train, but were repulsed. We captured one horse. No one hurt, and train safe. Also all quiet on the picket-line.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FRANK A. KENDRICK, Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

General Orders, Hdqrs. Dist. of West Tennessee, Memphis, Tenn., February 3, 1865.

1. Having been assigned to the command of the District of West Tennessee by Special Orders, No. 55, current series, headquarters Department of Mississippi, I assume it from this date.

2. All existing orders will remain in full force, and in addition to the officers heretofore announced as staff officers at these headquarters are the following: Capt. B. K. Roberts, assistant adjutant-general; First Lieut. H. C. Seymour, aide-de-camp; Second Lieut. H. Arden, aide-de-camp. They will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

B. S. ROBERTS, Brigadier-General, Commanding.

In compliance with orders from the War Department, dated January 30, 1865, the undersigned assumes command of the Military Division of the Missouri, embracing the Departments of the Missouri, of Kansas, and of the Northwest, headquarters Saint Louis, Mo.

JNO. POPE, Major-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, February 3, 1865—2 p.m.

Lieut. W. T. Clarke,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

If Company I, Forty-ninth Missouri, can possibly be replaced by other troops, have the company dismounted and ordered to the regiment. Men owning their own horses will be permitted to send them home. Public animals will be turned over to the quartermaster's department. Answer.

By order of General Dodge:

Assistant Adjutant-General.

MACON, MO., February 3, 1865—5 p.m.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I can supply the place of Company I, at Brunswick, by the division of Kutzner's little force at Glasgow, and have already directed Captain Benecke to move to Mexico to await further orders. Their numerical force can better be replaced than the loss of their repeating rifles and their intimate knowledge of the country. Will have them dismounted upon arrival at Mexico and forwarded at once.

OMAHA, February 3, 1865

Major-General Curtis,
Commanding Department of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth:

Colonel Livingston reports the burning of the stage station at Julesburg. Captain O'Brien's company with two mountain howitzers were driven into their works. Says no one company at a post can do more than hold garrison. With such large numbers of Indians our force cannot give protection to coaches and travelers on the route in any other way than to abandon all garrisons and unite the forces and establish a regular system of escorting large trains through to the mountains. Our supply posts must be kept up. If we adopt this course the country will be kept a barren waste. On the other hand, if I can be supplied with 2,000 additional men and supplies, in thirty days I will be able to put an end to all these Indian outrages in this district. At the lowest estimate there was at Julesburg yesterday 1,500 Indians. There was at the same time a large force threatening Alkali, fifty miles this side of Julesburg, thereby preventing one post from supporting the other. Colonel Livingston is between the two places with all the spare men we have in his sub-district, and will do the very best that can be done. Will you please advise me what course to pursue.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

OMAHA, February 3, 1865.

Col. R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Alkali:

You have all the troops at my disposal in your sub-district. How you expect me to furnish you more I am unaware. I have ordered two companies to report at Julesburg from Laramie forthwith. They can do you no good in your present troubles. Patrol the road, keep the Indians, if possible, from interfering with coaches, trains, and telegraph, but undertake to make no expedition. General Curtis directs that we supply the post at Valley Station with troops and supplies.
You will establish a post at that point as soon as practicable. As soon as Company C, First Nebraska, arrives I will start Captain Krumme to report to you with his company. The company of Pawnees will start from Columbus to Kearny to-day. I see sundry dispatches published in different papers purporting to be from you in relation to your campaign, &c. All communications and information must be sent through district headquarters and save you and myself trouble in the future.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,

Brig. Gen. A. SULLY,
Commanding District of Iowa, Dubuque, Iowa:

GENERAL: I have the honor to transmit copy of instructions of the major-general commanding to Brigadier-General Sibley, commanding District of Minnesota, relative to establishment of a line of military posts on the Minnesota frontier.* I am directed by the major-general commanding to furnish this copy for your information, and to instruct you that he wishes you to take the necessary steps for the establishment in the spring of a chain of posts within your military district, to complete the line in Minnesota, stretching from Lake Shetek or from Spirit Lake to such points on the Missouri River as you may think advisable.

I am, general, most respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. F. MELINE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 4, 1865—1.50 p. m.

Lieutenant-General GRANT,
City Point:

Order to General Washburn has been countermanded. I concur with you in regard to General Dana, but it would be still worse to add the posts on the Mississippi to General Banks' command. The latter is still under orders to return to his department, but I believe is now in Washington. It seems necessary that the troops on both sides of the river as high as Memphis should be under the same commander, as they must be used to prevent Kirby Smith from uniting with Hood, and therefore must operate sometimes on one bank and sometimes on the other. I have just received a communication from General Canby on this subject, and I will telegraph to General Thomas for his views. Probably the matter had better be left as it is until we hear from Thomas.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

[February 4, 1865.—For Halleck to Thomas, 2.15 p.m., in reference to the transfer of the District of West Tennessee to the Department of the Cumberland, see Vol. XLIX, Part I.]

CITY POINT, VA., February 4, 1865—5 p.m.
(Received 7.30 p.m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

If General Washburn is not placed in command of West Tennessee I want him to come on to take command at Norfolk. He is one of the best administrative officers we have, and will effectually stop supplies being sent through our lines to the enemy wherever he is. We want such a man at each of the above places.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

KENNERVILLE, February 4, 1865.
(Received 11.15 a.m.)

Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The Thirty-fifth Wisconsin has not yet reported here. The principal part of the Second Brigade is loaded on the cars and about to start for the Shell road. The teams started at daybreak this morning. The mud is so deep that we scarcely move here. I will ascertain if anything has been heard of the Thirty-fifth Wisconsin.

F. STEELE,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 4, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. STEELE,
Kenner, La.:

General Reynolds has been ordered to relieve all troops belonging to the Reserve Corps still retained in Arkansas. General Lawler was granted twenty days' leave, by paragraph 5 of special orders of yesterday.

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
General Orders, Hqrs. 1st Brig., Reserve Corps, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, Kenner, La., February 4, 1865.

No. 4. The brigadier-general commanding having received a leave of absence, the command of the brigade, by direction of Major-General Steele, is devolved upon the senior officer, Lieut. Col. John A. McLaughlin, Forty-seventh Indiana Volunteers.

By command of Brigadier-General Lawler:

B. Wilson,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, Hqrs. 1st Brig., Reserve Corps, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, Kenner, La., February 4, 1865.

No. 18. III. The troops of this command will commence to embark at 3 o'clock to-morrow morning promptly, and are assigned as follows, viz: Brigade headquarters, Forty-seventh Indiana Volunteers, and Twenty-first Iowa Volunteers, on the George Peabody; Ninety-ninth Illinois Volunteers, Twenty-ninth Wisconsin Volunteers, and ambulance corps, on the Belvidere.

By command of Lieut. Col. John A. McLaughlin:

B. Wilson,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters First Brigade, Reserve Corps, Military Division of West Mississippi, Kenner, La., February 4, 1865.

Capt. John F. Lacey,
Assistant Adjutant-General, U. S. Forces:

Captain: In consequence of the dense fog and the heavy draft of the vessels, I regret to report that it will be impossible to make arrangements for embarking the troops as early to-morrow morning as we supposed. The captain of the Peabody says that he must have daylight in which to work, and will hardly be ready for the troops to embark before 8 a.m. He also reports that his hold is full of commissary stores, and that it will be impossible to take any wagons, and if we put our stock aboard he cannot carry all the men assigned him. Whether these troubles are imaginary and will vanish before an energetic effort, I cannot say. I deem it my duty to communicate them, assuring you at the same time that no effort will be spared on my part to complete the embarkation and get away at the earliest possible moment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Jno. A. McLaughlin,
Lieutenant-Colonel Forty-seventh Indiana Volunteers, Commanding.
Capt. Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans:

Colonel Harris, commanding at Brashears City, last night telegraphed me that our flag of truce having gone up to Mrs. Rentrops place, five miles and a half from Brashears, found the roads well repaired. To-day Major Shaw, commanding at Plaquemine, telegraphs that his cavalry at The Park were attacked about 12 o'clock last night by a large force, supposed to be 500 men. These facts, taken with the report of my scouts, and deserters, who say that the rebels are to attack Houma, Napoleonville, and other points, satisfies me that they have heard of our troops assembling at New Orleans for some purpose unknown, and that the demonstrations which they are now making are for the purpose of creating a diversion.

Yours,

R. A. Cameron,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding Division.

Bayou Goula, February 4, 1865.

(Via Donaldsonville. Received 4.50 p.m.)

Capt. F. Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The detachment of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry sent out February 2 returned yesterday. They left Miles' plantation, upon the La Butte Bayou; crossed fifteen small bayous, over five of which they were obliged to swim their horses; made Grand Bayou with the loss of one horse; encamped at Indian Village that night. Saw no enemy and returned last evening.

W. Sayles,
Colonel, Commanding.

Headquarters Defenses of New Orleans,
New Orleans, February 4, 1865.

Col. W. Sayles,
Bayou Goula:

(Care Commanding Officer Donaldsonville.)

Major Shaw, at Plaquemine, reports that Captain Rice was attacked at The Park last night by a force of the enemy. Thus far we have had 1 killed and 1 wounded. Push out as much of your cavalry as is available on the direct road to The Park, and relieve Captain Rice from the pressure, and assist him in driving the enemy back across Grand River, or well up into the Grossetete country, if possible. Major Shaw is ordered to keep up a direct communication with you and inform you of events. You will do the same for Major Shaw.

By order of Brigadier-General Sherman:

Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Plaquemine, February 4, 1865.

Capt. F. Speed, Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have just received word from Captain Rice, commanding the cavalry expedition sent from here to The Park. He was attacked last night about 12 o'clock by a force of about 500 men, a portion of which attacked him in front, while the remainder attempted to flank him on the left, but failed on account of the high water in the swamp. He is fighting yet and holds his own. One man killed and one wounded on our side. Should they drive him we are prepared for an attack here. Please acknowledge receipt.

R. G. Shaw,
Major, Commanding Post.

Headquarters Defenses of New Orleans,
New Orleans, February 4, 1865.

Commanding Officer Plaquemine:

If the enemy is as numerous as represented, Captain Rice should have fallen back. But it is presumed that the number is much exaggerated. Colonel Sayles, at Bayou Goula, is ordered to send a cavalry force to relieve Captain Rice from any undue pressure and assist in driving the enemy away. In the event of Captain Rice falling back to Plaquemine you must promptly notify Colonel Sayles. You will keep Colonel Sayles posted as to the condition of things at The Park. Keep these headquarters promptly informed if anything important transpires.

By order of Brigadier-General Sherman:

Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Plaquemine, February 4, 1865.

Capt. Frederic Speed, Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have just received a report from Captain Rice at The Park. He has repulsed the attacking party, which consisted of about 150 men, and is looking for further demonstrations. He has sent in 6 prisoners and has 2 more wounded ones with him. Our loss is 1 killed and 1 wounded.

Respectfully,

R. G. Shaw,
Major, Commanding Post.

Headquarters Defenses of New Orleans,
New Orleans, February 4, 1865.

Commanding Officer Plaquemine:

Telegram received. It is very good. Let all these scoundrels be either captured or driven well back into rebeldom. Let them be followed up, but so as not to allow them to get into the rear of our own men.

By order of Brigadier-General Sherman:

Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Plaquemine, February 4, 1865.
(Received 4 p. m.)

Capt. F. Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Your dispatch received. As you will see by my last report, the party of the enemy actually engaged is estimated by Captain Rice at 150.
The following is an extract of a communication sent this morning by me to him:

As soon as joined by Lieutenant Lewis' company you will endeavor to find out whether they have crossed to the other side of Grand River. If not, harass them while doing so, and if possible increase your list of prisoners.

R. G. Shaw,
Major, Commanding Post.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., February 4, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Comdy. Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

Sir: The major-general commanding directs that the Twenty-third Wisconsin Volunteers, belonging to the Reserve Corps, be relieved from duty at Helena, Ark., and sent to this city as soon as transportation can be furnished. The Ninety-sixth Ohio, according to last returns received at the mouth of White River, and the Thirty-fifth Wisconsin, at Devall's Bluff, both belonging to the Reserve Corps, should also be relieved and sent down as soon as possible.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Van Buren, Ark., February 4, 1865.

His Excellency Governor Murphy:

SIR: Permit the undersigned committee of the loyal citizens of Crawford County, farmers and mechanics, and acting in their behalf and by their authority, to state to Your Excellency the deplorable condition of the country by reason of the persecutions, robbing, and plundering generally committed by the officers, soldiers, and their associates and camp followers now and for the twelve months last past. We have been robbed and personally maltreated to an extent unparalleled; at any rate not exceeded in all Christian history. They have taken from us everything of value, and we have no redress for these and other and multiplied wrongs. These men are protected and encouraged in committing robbery and other outrages by certain officers holding administrative power here and at Fort Smith. They knock down and maim our citizens in the streets of the town of Van Buren, and commit other indignities. It is impossible to obtain redress. It is impossible to keep a horse, a cow, an ox, a piece of meat, or a bushel of meal, unless so far hidden as to defy their search, and we are debarred from entering complaint against them for any of the above-named offenses, for they threaten our lives for so doing. The present assistant provost-marshal here is one of their own creatures, as most other of his predecessors have been, and it is, indeed, of no use to complain. It is of no use for us to complain to the authorities at Fort Smith, for no attention is paid to us there whatever. These bad men have been retained around certain headquarters for the last twelve months and are a terror to our people. They can commit any offense they choose with perfect impunity, even to the extent of taking our teams and provisions in the streets of Van Buren and personally abusing and maltreating our citizens in the broad light of day, and they have been to our houses in the neighborhood at night committing unheard-of atrocities. It is the universal opinion among citizens that certain officers are interested and copartners with them. The evidence warrants the conclusion. The same are at this time engaged in hunting what few horses and cattle we have left to us in the bottoms. They hitch them out in the brush, or yard them, until they get the requisite number, and then drive them off toward Kansas. We are powerless and feel alarmed for personal safety. Every facility seems to be given to these abominably wicked and dangerous men by the provost-marshal here, who is a brutal man in his actions and treatment of our citizens. Such, governor, is a faint and insufficient outline of the manner in which people here are treated, and we implore you to lay the subject of our complaint before the commander of the Department of Arkansas, and failing in obtaining redress we earnestly hope you will entreat the President of the United States to interpose his authority in our behalf. Hundreds of our fellow-citizens have been compelled to leave the country for the North after having been made miserably poor and helpless, thus leaving what was once their comfortable homes. We prefer to remain in our own country, where there exist so many remembrances of former contentment and prosperity. It is wrong that we should be driven away and be made to leave the graves of our relations, our fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters, and our children. Our enemies, or those who ought to be our friends, treat us as if we had no right here, and they tell us to go away. There must be a change here to insure our safety. We do not speak of even a moiety of our sufferings at the hands of these officers, soldiers, and their camp followers.

Our citizens meet together and talk in whispers of these enormities, being afraid to offend and wondering what will come next. We appeal to the proper authorities for mercy and protection, and at the same time we have to request that our names shall not be exposed in connection with this movement for amelioration, for we are in the hands of unscrupulous men, who, we believe, would take our lives for our temerity, as they often threaten to do if we expose them or complain. If there is not a change soon to our advantage and to the advantage of decency and morality we shall be compelled to leave the State. We have forborne to trouble you in this matter before, hoping that General Thayer himself would wake up to a sense of the sinfulness of such conduct as we protest against, but we have lost all hope in him. It is the firm belief of all people here, so far as we can judge—and there is no doubt as to the sentiment of the people—that so long as these Kansas regiments remain here it will be impossible for any commander to create a much better state of things. The soldiers are too far demoralized, and the truth is that they have learned too much from many of their officers. There is one other thing, Your Excellency, that is of great importance to us. Nearly 100 men (our best men), to be increased to upward of 200, have signed a paper agreeing to form a colony in the bottom near Van Buren for agricultural purposes the present year, provided they can obtain adequate assurances of protection against the wickedness of these soldiers and others. They feel that they can pro-ti-ctthemselves againstrebel marauders if the powers that be will allow them to bear arms in self-defense. They think they can furnish their own families in this way, and perhaps to some extent a supply for Government troops also, in corn, forage, &c. So earnest do they feel in this matter that they sent a committee to wait on General Thayer, at Fort Smith, to ask his approval of their plan, but he gave them no encouragement whatever. Last year he (General Thayer) recommended our farmers to purchase broken-down Government horses wherewith to replace those they had previously lost, and to tend their crops. The farmers acted upon his recommendation, but in every instance these horses also were taken from them so soon as they got in condition for service; nor was it possible to reclaim them. Every possible obstacle and device is thrown in the way of a man's reclaiming and getting back his property, and it is now utterly impossible to do it in any instance. We earnestly entreat Your Excellency, we implore you, to take immediate measures for our relief and for the relief of our suffering families and for obtaining authority from General Reynolds for us to colonize in the manner proposed, and that we may be protected from bad men of the Army of the Frontier, and to be allowed to bear arms for our own protection against all marauders and plotters against our property, our peace and security, and as in duty bound we will ever pray.

We are, governor, your fellow-citizens and obedient servants,

A. O'BRYAN,
WM. F. OWENS,
Committee on the part of the Citizens.

P. S.—We respectfully ask that we be permitted to purchase from Government a few commissary supplies till our crops are matured. We can pay for them.

NATCHEZ, February 4, 1865.

[Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN: ?]

MY DEAR COLONEL: In reply to your note asking me to write about General Brayman being sent over to the Vidalia side of the river, I inclose you the special order which divided the district with him. It was necessary that the next officer in rank should be on that side, in view of the Freedman's Camp and a large number of leased plantations being on that side and immediately under his control. Besides, I asked the general the night before I left, standing near your desk, what he wished me to do with Brayman, and I think he replied, "Do what you please with him." But reasons are coming up to me every day, apart from what I have said above, why he should not be continued on this side of the river. He had established the most merciless despotism here ever heard of over these people. I will give one single instance: He seized some time in August last above 100 horses for cavalry purposes. For these horses up to this time he has had issued no vouchers. Among them was a pair of very fine carriage horses of Mrs. John Minor, who had taken the oath of allegiance and who has, I am informed, in every way conformed to it. These, instead of turning over for Government use, he put into his own private carriage and so drove them until I ordered them returned to Mrs. Minor, having about five months' use of them. I send copy of order. There is ample to try him on if thought expedient, and if not, if I am to stay, I hope he will be sent somewhere else. This note is in no sense private and you can use it officially if necessary. My kind regards to all my fellow-members of the staff and to the general and family. Mrs. D. goes down for a day or two on Monday to see Mrs. Canby, on General Thomas' boat. Is this district to be attached to the Gulf Department? If so, please write me. I am perfectly aware of your very kind friendship expressed in your last note and, believe me, it is as warmly returned as given.

Yours, very truly,

II. All officers on duty in the quartermaster's and commissary departments, and those who have not yet forwarded their accounts, will make such reports to the chief quartermaster and commissary of this district as may be by them required.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,

III. Owing to the continued ill-health of Col. Henry R. Selden, First

mand of his regiment and from the command of the post of Fort Union, N. Mex. The commands from which Colonel Selden is thus relieved devolve on Lieutenant-Colonel Abreu, First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers. He will at once receive from Colonel Selden all the records of his regiment and all records, property, &c., pertaining to Fort Union for which Colonel Selden may be responsible. Colonel Selden can remain at Fort Union, or, at his option, proceed to any other point in

II. The Second Brigade, Colored Troops, and Forty-ninth U. S. Colored Infantry will be in readiness to embark for New Orleans with the least possible delay. They will take their camp and garrison equipage and four day's rations. They will also take, in addition to field transporta-

HEADQUARTERS FIRST SUB-DISTRICT,

COMMANDING OFFICER FRANKLIN, MO.:

Sir: You are hereby directed, by the colonel commanding, to impress any and all disloyal men and sympathizers within the limits of your command to assist the detachment at Meramec bridge in building blockhouses, and to report your actions to these headquarters immediately.

By order of J. Weidemeyer, colonel Forty-first Missouri Infantry, commanding:

H. HUHN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, February 5, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER DISTRICT OF ROLLA, MO.:

Sir: Your attention is called to the orders of the governor of the State, and from these headquarters, in relation to raising volunteer militia for service in certain counties. In recommending officers great care must be observed, and none recommended except they are of good character, habits, &c., and good disciplinarians. The frequent unauthorized depredations committed by troops must be stopped, and in the organization of these companies we must put men at the head of them who can and will control their men. Officers will be held strictly accountable for all unauthorized depredations committed by their men, no matter upon whom committed. If you have good officers under you in the Missouri State Militia whose term of service is about expiring, and who desire to take command in some of these companies, they can be assigned to duty in recruiting them, and applications can be made for their commissions. Old soldiers will, as far as possible, be selected in recommending for commissions. The men, as fast as recruited, will be rendezvoused at such point in the county as you may designate. They will be armed as provided in General Orders, No. 28, current series, from these headquarters. All their spare time will be occupied in drilling and perfecting themselves as soldiers. You will report weekly the progress made in the district and sub-districts in organizing these companies.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

NOTE.—You are hereby respectfully requested to furnish each sub-district commander with a copy, but no further publications whatever will be made of these instructions.

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS FOURTY-THIRD MISSOURI VOLUNTEERS,

Colonel Harding,

Commanding Post, Kansas City:

Captain Wyckoff has just returned. He reports that he came on Gregg and nine men on Wednesday and chased him till yesterday, when he gave the chase over, near Lone Jack, to Captain Burris and Lieutenant Miller, of the First Missouri State Militia. Captain Wyckoff mustered out two and probably three. He brought in two horses, saddles, &c.

H. R. MILLS,

Adjutant.
First Lieut. Ira I. Taber,

LIEUTENANT: Having been placed in command of the troops at this station, and feeling that in a measure the protection of this and the adjoining settlements from hostile Indians devolves upon me, I have the honor most respectfully to request that at least two full companies be stationed at this point at the earliest possible moment. The colonel commanding is doubtless well aware of the exposed position of this, one of the most flourishing settlements in Colorado, and the most important agricultural portion of the Territory, and I trust that in a few days we may have a sufficient number of troops stationed here to warrant protection to the settlers in the vicinity. Should there be an attack upon this settlement, in its now exposed position, by a large party of Indians, very few, if any, of the settlers would escape; and, in my opinion, such an attack is liable to be made at any hour. I understand that Richard Wooten has received authority to raise a company to be stationed here, but I fear that if this settlement gets no more protection than it now has until Richard Wooten raises, organizes and equips a company, there will be no settlement to protect.

But trusting that the colonel commanding will take such necessary steps as it is in his power to do for the protection of this portion of our Territory, I remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLARK DUNN,

The commanding officer of the regiment will hold it in readiness to move at short notice.

3. Capt. Charles H. Thompson, commissary of subsistence, is hereby relieved from duty as chief commissary of subsistence for the District of Natchez, and will report to the chief commissary of the military division for orders.

Maj. Gen. F. Steele,

Two sea-going steamers will be sent up this afternoon and another to-morrow to take the brigade, viz, Twenty-ninth Illinois, Thirtieth Missouri, and One hundred and sixty-first New York. If there is any surplus room after these have embarked the Twenty-third Iowa and the Seventy-sixth Illinois will be sent by these steamers.

Headquarters U. S. Forces,
Kenner, La., February 6, 1865.

Col. Loren Kent,
Twenty-ninth Illinois Infantry, Commanding Third Brigade:

Colonel: I am directed by the commanding general to say that two sea-going vessels will be up from New Orleans this afternoon to take the Third Brigade to Mobile Point, Ala. You will embark your command as compactly as possible, taking all your transportation and the transportation left by General Lawler's brigade. Another sea-going vessel will come up to-morrow. If there should be any surplus room on these three steamers the Twenty-third Iowa and Seventy-sixth Illinois will accompany you. Should they prove insufficient to carry the Third Brigade, Lawler's transportation, and the two latter-named regiments, the troops selected to remain will be those not belonging to your own command. Orders have been transmitted direct to the commanding officers of the Thirtieth Missouri and One hundred and sixty-first New York. These officers will report to you for such additional instructions as may be necessary.

I am, colonel, very respectfully your obedient servant,

Col. LOREN KENT,

COLONEL: You should have at least five days' rations when you leave this place. It would be well to ration the entire command to the 15th before starting. I will telegraph Captain Rockwood, commissary of subsistence, to come up immediately with supplies. There are some stragglers belonging to the First Brigade who will be placed under your charge for transportation. As they are without organization, the best that can be done will be to order them to report to you, and you can put some officer in charge of them. It will not be necessary for you to commence embarking before to morrow morning, even if the vessels arrive to-night.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN F. LACEY,

In other words, can the enemy pass from Grand Bayou to Labadieville without passing in the vicinity of Napoleonville? From this exhibit it appears that the total infantry force, "present equipped" in the department is, in round numbers (exclusive of Helena and Fort Smith), about 12,000 men (white and colored). By concentrating the colored troops at Little Rock (except the Fifty-third and Sixty-sixth) and reducing the garrisons at posts below the estimate for proper defense, a detached brigade of 3,000 infantry has been organized as a movable force. This brigade is now en route to Department of the Gulf. The above total (12,000) includes the Fifty-third and Sixty-sixth Colored, which have not been transferred to the department permanently. The Fifty-third is at Saint Charles and the Sixty-sixth at Devall's Bluff; neither can be spared at present. Helena has a total force of all arms and colors of about 2,500 men. This number can be safely reduced to about 2,000. Fort Smith, &c., has a total of about 6,000 men. It is hoped that this number may be reduced, but to what extent cannot now be stated, pending reports which have been called for. The above number for Fort Smith, &c., includes the Indian Home Guard Brigade at Fort Gibson (about 1,500 on paper). The Indians have applied to the War Department for muster out a month or two before the expiration of their term of service (April next), to enable them to cultivate their lands. Nothing can be expected of this brigade beyond the defense of the outposts of Fort Gibson.

Estimate of the minimum infantry force required for the defense of the Department of Arkansas (exclusive of Helena and Fort Smith).

Major-General HALLECK:

A first-rate general officer, experienced in Indian warfare, is needed to command troops on Overland route from Leavenworth to Laramie—one who can make the dispositions necessary to secure safety, and who can remain there permanently. If Brig. Gen. W. L. Elliott can be spared I would prefer him to any other. Some one who is active and knows what he is about is absolutely needed. Please answer if Elliott can come.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

Major-General POPE,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

You will perceive, from the papers sent you by mail, that General Connor thinks with two additional regiments he can guard the Overland Mail Route as far east as the Big Blue. This arrangement is desired by the Overland Mail Company, and favorably considered by General Grant. District and department lines can be arranged to suit. Read the papers and then give us your views.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

(Received 1.15 p.m.)

Major-General HALLECK:

I will be glad to have the two regiments of rebel deserters from Rock Island to post on the Overland route, if experienced and suitable officers can be appointed. Please ask authority for me to make appointments for these regiments from veteran officers now out of service or in service in this division.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

Washington, D. C., February 6, 1865—3.20 p.m.

Major-General POPE,
Saint Louis:

The Secretary of War authorizes you to take the two regiments of enlisted rebel deserters at Rock Island and to appoint provisionally their officers, sending their names to the Adjutant-General for approval and commissions, with dates of your appointments. Colonel Carrier (Caraher) (I think this is the name), at Rock Island, who selected these men, is highly recommended for the command of one of the regiments. The officers appointed must be in the service now, or have been honorably discharged. So far as can be done they should be men familiar with frontier life.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., February 6, 1865.
(Received 5.50 p.m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., February 6, 1865.

Lieutenant Wise,
Second Colorado Cavalry:

The colonel commanding has received information that Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, now at Council Grove, Kans., are in a partial state of mutiny, having shot one of their officers. He directs that you proceed without delay to Council Grove, investigate the affair, arresting all the guilty parties, sending them to Fort Riley for trial. From information received at these headquarters the captain and nearly the whole company are implicated. Therefore, if necessary, arrest the whole company and the captain, taking with you sufficient men to carry out these instructions.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
No. 10. } Denver, February 6, 1865.

I. In view of the threatening attitude of the Plains Indians and the ravages they are committing on the citizens and Territory, as also the cutting off of our lines of communication, the scarcity of troops in this district, and the impracticability of expecting re-enforcements from the General Government until the opening of spring, I respectfully call upon your honor, as the acting chief executive of this Territory, for 365 mounted men for ninety days' service, unless sooner discharged, in companies of sixty, under a competent field officer, to open the Overland route as far as Julesburg, and keep the same open, that business may run on in the usual channel, and that the firesides and lives of this people may be spared from the merciless visitations of the inhuman savages who swear eternal vengeance on all white men.

II. To insure a prompt response to your call, and that all classes of men may feel the in portance of this step, and the imperative necessity which demands such action martial law is hereby proclaimed throughout this district, to take effect on the 8th instant, and all labor and business is suspended until the number of men called for be organized and placed under my command, to operate in conjunction with the troops now holding the Indians in check. Each man should come provided with a horse, at least two blankets, and, if possible, a revolver. All other arms and accouterments, including saddles and bridles, camp equipage, forage, rations, ammunition, &c., I will issue in behalf of the Government.

III. While I regret the existence of a state of affairs which demands action of this kind, I earnestly call upon all men to drop private animosities and strife and join hands together in a work of humanity which will redound to the honor and glory of Colorado. If horses cannot be procured voluntarily I will be compelled to press them into service wherever found. Horses furnished for service will be appraised by a board hereinafter appointed, who will give the owner a certificate of appraisement, so that in case of loss or injury remuneration may be claimed and obtained.

IV. As soon as a county has furnished the quota of men and horses apportioned by the acting chief executive, martial law will be suspended in that county and business again resumed.

V. The assistant provost-marshal-general of the district will take such steps as will insure a faithful execution of this order. To him and such deputies as he may appoint is intrusted the work of seeing that all houses of business, drinking saloons, places of amusement, &c., be kept closed, except between the hours of 2 and 3 each afternoon; this refers only to merchandising. Drug stores, eating saloons, hotels, butcher stalls, and bakeries will be allowed to continue their business, but saloons of hotels must be kept closed until martial law is suspended and the civil officers again invited to resume their duties.

VI. The following are the officers and citizens appointed to appraise the horses furnished for service under paragraph III of this order: 1. Capt. C. L. Gorton, assistant quartermaster, U. S. Volunteers; 2. Mr. W. G. Long, master of transportation. Denver; 3. Mr. John Cree, Denver City.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,

'OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,

New Orleans, La., February 7, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 7th day of February, 1865: A report from Lieut. William Argo, Sedalia, Mo., January 24, 1865, states that the opinion prevails in Missouri that the greater part of the conscripts of Price's army will return to Missouri as bushwhackers during the coming season. A report from Lieut. G. W. Daskam, Port Hudson, La., February 4, 1865, states that Captain Prime, with a force of 250 Confederate troops, is located in the immediate vicinity of False River. Several organizations known as independent scouts also exist in that region. It is rumored that Colonel Powers with 800 men is near Clinton. Capt. L. E. Whybark, Salem, Mo., under date of January 24, reports that Col. T. R. Freeman, commanding brigade in Northern Arkansas, has disbanded his troops to concentrate them again in April. These men are scattered in small squads in the vicinity of Batesville and Spring River, Ark., and along the State line, robbing Union citizens. Lieut. J. M. Reeds, Hannibal, Mo., states, under date of January 24, that he is satisfied the rebels are preparing to make a raid into Missouri during the coming summer.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,

Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

GENERAL ORDERS,

Reports and returns required by existing orders and regulations will be made to these headquarters.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,

Brigadier-General Cameron,
Thibodeaux:

Your telegram of yesterday p. m. is received. General Sherman directs that you order pickets stationed at such points as will intercept and give information of the passage of the enemy. The post commander at Napoleonville should be the best judge of what particular points to occupy, but from your telegram it is evident that the passage can be easily watched. Report as soon as practicable the action taken in this case.

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Major Davis,

You will arrange your pickets in such a manner as will prevent the enemy from crossing the canal in your vicinity without your knowledge. You will report your action in this matter to these headquarters.

Major Davis,

Maj. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

Sir: I would respectfully call your attention to the fact that there is a large number of persons at this post entirely destitute of the means of living and to whom the refugee rations are issued by the post commissary. There are also many families here who have the means to purchase, but there is nothing here in the way of breadstuffs outside of the commissary. Frequent applications are made to purchase at the commissary, which, of course, cannot be granted. There is great suffering among these people. I send off the destitute as fast as there is transportation. I would request that some instructions be given in regard to the matter.

Very respectfully,

JOHN M. THAYER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Frontier Division, Seventh Army Corps,

Very respectfully,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District

STATE OF KANSAS, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Topeka, February 7, 1865.

Major-General CURTIS,
Commanding Department of Kansas:

General: I have just met a delegation from Southwestern Kansas, who present a bad condition of affairs in that locality. The same party communicates to you a full statement of facts as represented to me, in consideration of which, general, I have the honor to address you this communication. In my opinion, the whole difficulty arises from the cattle stealing carried on in the Indian country south of that locality by parties who claim to have permits or passes from the military authorities or Indian agents for that purpose. I believe that by sending a small force, commanded by an officer of undoubted character, to that locality with instructions to arrest all parties engaged in the business and by revoking all permits and passes given to parties either by Indian agents or officers in the army it would remedy existing difficulties and prevent future trouble in that locality.

I have the honor, general, as ever, to remain, your most obedient servant,

S. J. CRAWFORD.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
No. 11. } Fort Leavenworth, Kans., February 7, 1865.

The following, just received, is published for the information of this department:* Pursuant to the foregoing orders of the War Department, which attaches the Department of Kansas to that of the Missouri and transfers Major-General Curtis to the Department of the Northwest, the general relinquishes this command and directs all officers and soldiers heretofore belonging to this department to report to Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge, commander of the Department of the Missouri, headquarters at this place. In parting with the officers, soldiers, and citizens with whom he has been associated for over a year of thrilling interest to our country, the general desires to tender them his hearty thanks for their cordial obedience and hearty co-operation in carrying out the orders and duties incident to the trials of the times we have shared together. He will remember with gratitude his cordial reception and the many distinguished expressions of approbation he has received. The organization of a division of two departments will secure a convenient concentration of forces, which will more effectually suppress Indian hostilities, and the general therefore congratulates the department in the peace and quiet prosperity generally prevailing in the department and the frontier settlements in a prospect of greater security from savage barbarities. The new commanders associated and succeeding in the new organizations are distinguished for their gallantry in many fields, and for their zeal and energy in the prosecution of the war against the present languishing but persistent rebellion, and he asks for them the same cordial and kind exertions to sustain them that has heretofore distinguished the soldiers and citizens of this command.

By command of Major-General Curtis:

C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., February 7, 1865.

Capt. W. H. EVANS,
Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, Comdg. Camp Collins, Colo. Ter.:

SIR: I have found it necessary to proclaim martial law in this district to enable me to raise men and horses to go out and open the Overland road. It will be pretty difficult to obtain the number of horses, and I understand that there are a good many in your section of country. I therefore respectfully request that you press into service and send down herewith the owners from thirty to fifty horses fit for service. They will be received under General Orders, No. 10, from these headquarters. This is merely a loan of horses for ninety days, unless sooner discharged, and is a work of necessity for the salvation of this country. I shall look for the horses in a few days.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HDQRS. DIST. OF MINNESOTA, DEPT. OF THE NORTHWEST,
Saint Paul, Minn., February 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Comdg. Department of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inform you that your dispatches of the 1st and 2d instant have been duly received. A copy of your instructions relating to those Indians who have surrendered or may hereafter surrender to the military authorities will be immediately sent to the commandants of sub-districts and of Fort Wadsworth for their government. As to the line of posts indicated by you, and with respect to which you direct me to make suggestions, I beg leave to state that I had already arranged a programme for extending the defenses of the Minnesota frontier westward, so as to cover the extreme settlements; that is to say, from a point in Jackson County near Spirit Lake west of north in as direct a line as practicable to the falls of the Redwood River and thence crossing the Minnesota River in the direction of Alexandria Station, on the Abercrombie route, passing west of Lakes Kandiyohi, Eagle, and Johanna. This plan would enable me to multiply the stations, as, being less exposed to formidable attack, a much smaller force could safely be stationed at each than it would be proper to place at the posts specified in your dispatch. The expense of supplying the inner line would be very much less than the other, and the remote settlers would feel greater security if they knew military aid was at hand in case of the appearance of hostile savages in their midst. There is already a station midway between Forts Abercrombie and Wadsworth, held by a detachment of the Independent Battalion, which I propose to continue during the coming season. With the force which will be stationed at the two forts co-operating with the troops at the midway post and keeping up regular, strong patrol duty and the aid of the friendly Indians as scouts at the camp on the James River, there will be an additional guard to the Minnesota and Iowa northwestern border against the raids of the hostile Sioux, thus affording double protection. You are aware that there is still a large hostile party among the Sioux Indians north of the Missouri, which must be eliminated before we can have a permanent peace. The force directed by you to be dispatched to Devil's Lake can be made available for the destruction of this body, if they should encamp at the Dog's Lodge, as they did last summer. Their retreat to British territory may in such case be cut off. If a destructive blow can be dealt to this hostile camp composed of 600 or 700 warriors and their families, I have full faith that the other bands will be glad to return to their old relations with the Government. I have had the honor to represent to you frequently that no dependence can be placed upon the apparent friendship of the Chippewa bands, and I deem it necessary, therefore, to keep as strong a force at Fort Ripley and at one or two points on the Chippewa border east of the Mississippi River as can be spared from the more exposed frontier. I have good reason to apprehend that a withdrawal of our troops from their neighborhood would be followed in less than six months by serious trouble with the Chippewas, if not open warfare. Should the suggestions I have made meet with your approbation I will proceed to carry them out as early as the season will admit. The command for Devil's Lake will also be dispatched as soon as the grass will be sufficiently grown to subsist the animals.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF IOWA,
Dubuque, February 7, 1865.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
Department of the Northwest:

SIR: Your communication of February 3, inclosing a copy of a letter of instructions to General Sibley in regard to the establishing of a line of posts in his district, and directing me to establish a line from Spirit Lake or Shetek Lake to the Missouri, has been received. It was my intention to have made a suggestion very similar to this, as far as regards my district, before I received the general's communication. I propose to post one company at the Big Sioux Falls, which is on the Big Sioux River, due west from the southwest corner of Minnesota, and another post on the James River, south of the Fire Steel Creek. By patrolling from Crow Creek, where I have already a post, to the Big Sioux Falls, a distance of 130 miles, the settlements in the Territory of Dakota would be protected from any incursions of the Indians from the north. There are no settlements of whites in the Territory except close to the Missouri River, a few scattering settlers about thirty miles up the Big Sioux, and none up the Missouri much higher than Fort Randall. In fact, taking the forty-third parallel of latitude as a boundary, there are not over three or four white settlers north of it. Such also is about the case in Northwestern Iowa, with the exception of Spirit Lake and the head of the Little Sioux River, at both of which places I have troops now stationed. I was going to suggest to the general the propriety of my giving up these posts next spring. Troops at the Big Sioux Falls, communicating with Lake Shetek, ought to be protection enough to all settlers. The country between the Big Sioux Falls and Spirit Lake is a high, rolling prairie, devoid of timber, and almost 100 miles across. There is no point on this line where you could establish a post. I have been at Lake Shetek and also at Lake Benton. If I recollect rightly, Benton is a much more eligible point for a post than Lake Shetek, on account of timber. If the positions of the two posts at Big Sioux Falls and Fire Steel Creek meet with the approval of the major-general commanding the department, I should be glad to know it as soon as possible, that I may make the necessary arrangements to locate them early in spring. I would again request permission to alter the shape of Fort Randall. The buildings, store-houses, stables, &c., are so scattered it takes a guard of about forty-five men to post the necessary sentinels. It is more like a village than a military post.

With much respect, your obedient servant,

ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, | HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
No. 39. | New Orleans, La., February 8, 1865.

The regimental commanders will report at once by letter through these headquarters to General Lucas, and the troops will be held in readiness to move upon short notice. They will be armed with Sharps carbine and the saber, but only the non-commissioned officers will be permitted to carry the revolver. All other arms, of whatsoever description, will be turned in to the ordnance department.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., February 8, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 8th day of February, 1865: J. C. Stanley left Galveston, Tex., in November, 1864, and Houston, Tex., December 13, 1864; crossed the Rio Grande December 25, 1864. He had been acting master on the Harriet Lane, Bayou City, and Island City. He states that Fort Jackson, on Pelican Island, has five guns—three casemate 32-pounders, one en barbette 8-inch, and one en barbette 32-pounder. Fort Point has seven guns—four guns casemate, one 8-inch, two 32-pounders, one Parrott rifle; three guns en barbette—one 32-pounder, two rifles, made from the shaft of the gun-boat Westfield. Fort Magruder has five guns—one 11-inch, two 32-pounders, two 24-pounders. South Battery has six guns, as he thinks—two rifled 32-pounders, one 8-inch smooth-bore; caliber of others unknown, probably 24-pounders. Redoubt No. 1 has three guns—two 32-pounders, one 24-pounder. Redoubt No. 2 has two guns—one 8-inch, one 32-pounder. Two other works are going up near the railroad, one mile and a quarter and one mile and a half from the east end of the railroad bridge, intended to mount three guns each; there are two light batteries, each of four guns. Informant estimates the total number of troops at Galveston at 2,800; the greater part of the mounted troops have been dismounted on account of scarcity of forage; states there is only one gun-boat at Galveston, the Bayou City, mounting three guns, one rifled and two howitzers. He thinks the Diana has been disarmed. At Brazos is the John F. Carr, two guns; at Sabine Pass is the Josiah H. Bell, three guns. The obstructions in Galveston Bay are placed at each end of Pelican Spit, and consist of spiles and torpedoes. Informant understands the positions of torpedoes. A communication from Maj. George Webster, Pass Manchac, La., February 6, states it is rumored a Confederate force of 400 or 500 has entered East Louisiana near the Tangipahoa for the purpose of arresting deserters from the rebel army.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. M. EATON,

Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

GENERAL ORDERS, •
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
No. 7. New Orleans, February 8, 1865.

The following orders are prescribed to be obeyed within this command in relation to the leasing and registering of plantations and the hiring and control of freedmen:

First. All colonies, plantations, or other industrial establishments leased, registered, or permitted under Treasury Regulations of February 1, 1865, will be reported to these headquarters for approval and will not be recognized as valid until the department commander shall indorse his approval thereon.

Second. Plantations in interior localities in this department, which shall be leased or registered under said regulations, will be regarded as within the range of military supervision and control as long as quiet and peace shall be maintained in the neighborhood where they are situated. This provision will only extend to plantations so leased or registered, and to them only for the purpose of enabling them to receive necessary supplies for their own plantation use, and bringing in their products, and will be discontinued in any region where the inhabitants give countenance or protection to smugglers or irregular partisans, or upon any other misconduct in such neighborhoods. And it will be distinctly understood that all favors under this paragraph are contingent upon the preservation of peace and good order.

Third. All plantations within the lines of actual occupation belonging to private persons must be registered by the owner, or some person lawfully authorized by such owner, prior to being leased, and the entire interest both of the landlord and tenant will be held responsible for the payment of the portion due the United States under paragraph 5 of regulations concerning the employment of freedmen, and the mode of payment of said portion must be specified in such lease, a certified copy of which must be filed in the office of the supervising special agent at New Orleans. Leases granted prior to the publication of this order will be modified to conform therewith and recorded as above.

Fourth. Thomas W. Conway, general superintendent of freedmen for this department, will without delay take the necessary measures to have the freedmen heretofore employed under General Orders, No. 23, series 1864, and other orders issued during that year in relation to laborers, hereafter employed in accordance with Treasury Regulations.

Fifth. All freedmen able to work now supported at Government expense will be required to find immediate employment and support for themselves. The helpless will be provided for under said regulations.

Sixth. Assistant provost-marshal in parishes are required to carry into effect the provisions of said regulations in relation to freedmen until relieved of this duty by assistant superintendents properly appointed, and will render to Superintendent Conway all assistance required by him.
Seventh. Until provision is made by the Treasury Department for the better support of freedmen, requisitions will be made for supplies for the freedmen in colonies and hospitals. Such requisitions will be examined and approved by the commanding officer of the nearest post or district, and all supplies thus drawn will be charged to the Treasury Department to be hereafter reimbursed.

Eighth. The following places are designated as home farms and colonies: The Rost & McCutcheon plantations, Saint Charles Parish; the McHatton plantation, near Baton Rouge; the Bragg plantation, in Thibodeaux, parish of La Fourche.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

GEORGE B. DRAKE,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Kenner, La., February 8, 1865.

Col. L. KENT,
Commanding Third Brigade, First Division:

COLONEL: I am directed by the major-general commanding to inform you that the vessels ordered to carry your brigade to Mobile Point have been ordered to carry instead two batteries of light artillery. The third steamer will probably be assigned to carry the remnants of the First Brigade.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN F. LACEY,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., February 8, 1865.

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans:

A careful study of the topography of the country on my front leads me to believe that there is but one way of getting rid of the guerrillas who infest and in fact hold almost undisputed possession of the country from the La Fourche to Grand Lake. If we pursue them with cavalry they take to their canoes and small boats. If we undertake to cut them off with a gun-boat they run into a chain of smaller bayous where a gun-boat cannot follow them. The only plan left by which we can insure success is to gather together what small boats we can at Bayou Beuf and build enough more to carry, if need be, a force of 125 picked men, and then pursue and fight them in their own way. In this they may at first have the advantage of experience, but we would at once have the advantage in situation; for if we overpowered them in numbers they would be obliged to retreat by the way of Grand River, where we could have a gun-boat stationed at Micheltre's place, which would cut them off; or should they try Grand Lake as a line of retreat they would be at the mercy of the navy there. I have looked at this plan for weeks from every standpoint, and if it strikes General Sherman as favorably as it does myself I would like to carry it into execution. I think the construction of the boats would involve but little expense, as we captured at Offutt's Mills lumber sawed by the rebels on purpose for the construction of just such boats as they use and such as we would use. To make this armada still more efficient the telegraph office at Tigerville should be moved to Bayou Beuf, so as to give us the more rapid communication.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., February 8, 1865—2 p. m.

Major-General HALLECK, Chief of Staff:

In answer to your telegram of January 21 I recommend that the following posts be occupied in this department. The minimum force of all arms necessary for the defense of the posts is about as stated below: Little Rock, 9,000; Pine Bluff, 2,000; Saint Charles, 600; Brownsville and railroad, 1,500; Devall's Bluff, 2,000; Lewisburg, 1,500; mouth of White River, 600; total, in round numbers, 17,000. Helena at present has no military importance, but I would leave there one colored regiment and a battery to protect colored laborers on plantations, and would transfer the remainder of the garrison, say 2,000, to Gaines' Landing, and establish a post there. Gaines' Landing has been a crossing place for the rebels, and is the most convenient place for a cavalry depot, if the 5,000 dismounted cavalry in this department are furnished with horses. Also, transfer the garrison of Fort Smith and its dependencies to Gaines' Landing, where they can be conveniently subsisted and held ready for service at any point. These dispositions would give, with the present force in the department, a movable column of about 8,000, which might act out of the department, and for movements that would themselves protect the posts. The movable column might be increased to about 12,000. We suppose the cavalry mounted. By reducing the garrisons below the proper limit a movable force of 3,000 has been formed, which is now en route to the Department of the Gulf, under orders from General Canby, Military Division of West Mississippi. Detailed statements are forwarded by mail.

Brig. Gen. J. McAethue,

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you draw rations for your command to include the 20th of February; that you coal your boats and proceed immediately to Memphis, Tenn., where you will endeavor to have all men of your command now on detached service at that place returned to duty with their regiments. From Memphis you will proceed to Vicksburg, Miss., and await further orders.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
WILLIAM G. MEAD,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I have examined as carefully as possible into the state of affairs along the Overland routes and in the settled region of Colorado Territory and have talked freely with men occupied and interested in that region and in freighting to it. I have also carefully examined the paper of General Connor which you inclosed. In all arrangements for defense against Indians it is, of course, very desirable to accommodate matters as far as reasonable to the wishes of the people most interested, both to give them confidence in the plans and purposes of the Government and to preclude them from any captious complaints afterward. I found on all hands much confidence reposed in General Connor, and a very strong and general wish that he should be placed in charge of the protection arrangements for the whole region in question. I myself am of the opinion that he is the best available man from all I can learn of him, and in reply to your request for my views I would respectfully suggest that a Department of the Plains be constituted to be commanded by General Connor, with headquarters at Denver City. The boundaries of this department I suggest as follows: Along a line drawn south from the Missouri River at mouth of Niobrara River to its intersection with the southern boundary of Kansas; thence west along that line and its continuation, the southern line of Colorado, to the western boundary of Colorado Territory; thence north to include the South Pass of the Rocky Mountains; thence eastward to the place of beginning. To this department should be added the present military district commanded by General Connor. If this arrangement be made it should be made at once, as I feel it will give immediate confidence to the great trains of emigrants and of supplies for the mining regions which will at once set forward. Unless these trains get through this spring there will be immense suffering among the inhabitants of the Colorado and Idaho mining regions. With the two regiments of rebel deserters from Rock Island and other disposable forces I can place enough troops at once into this new department to assure safety. It seems to me that this arrangement will accomplish the purpose. There are plenty of troops in the Department of Kansas for these objects. As the large mass of business in the Department of the Missouri is in Missouri itself, I have the honor to request that the headquarters of the Department of the Missouri be retransferred to Saint Louis. Will you please give me as early a decision on these suggestions as possible, in order that in any contingency I may make arrangements for the freight trains across the plains.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

SAINT LOUIS, February 8, 1865—11.40 a.m.

Major-General DODGE, Fort Leavenworth:

Please return me by mail the papers from General Connor which I handed you. Let me know by telegraph what you think of his proposed plan. I have authority to take and officer the two regiments of rebels at Rock Island. It will take some time to have them ready to send you. Meantime use any or all the troops in Kansas to open and keep open the Overland route, which is the all-important matter with us now. The troops you use for that purpose can soon be replaced by these two rebel regiments.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, February 8, 1865—2.45 p.m.

Major-General POPE, Saint Louis, Mo.:

Dispatch received. I find that there are two separate routes to Salt Lake from Julesburg west. The telegraph route by way of Fort Laramie and the mail route by way of Cache la Poudre, Bridger's Pass, &c. Both of the routes have troops stationed along them, making two weak lines instead of one strong one. All stages go guarded from station to station, and am told that they are running regularly. General Connor's plan to station eight or ten men at each stage station will not work now, as it would only be a bait to the Indians. I think our troops should be kept at the forts and guards furnished the stages from one fort to another as strong as the case may require. We have no telegraph to Riley, and between Fort Larned and Fort Lyon the Indians are troublesome. I will move troops from Laramie route to the Bridger route, leaving a small garrison at Laramie and one or two others on telegraph line to protect it. The troops reported stationed at Riley are guarding the New Mexico route, and I cannot draw as many troops from there as I wish. If any troops could be spared from Sioux City or the Missouri River I think it would be well to have them strike across to Columbus and Fort Kearny. As soon as I get answers to my dispatches I will post you fully as to condition of matters on Platte route.

LIEUT. J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of communication from district headquarters directing that scouts be made from this post to the south and southwest. In reply I would say that with the force at present under my command it is impossible for me to send out such scouts. By reference to my last reports you will perceive that I have but about forty-five privates for duty. My post guard takes eighteen privates, so that unless I keep men on duty constantly I have but thirteen privates for my scouting, escorting, and fatigue duty. I therefore request that two companies more be sent to this post. The commanding officers of Companies E and G, Second Colorado Cavalry, inform me that they received orders from district headquarters detailing privates from their companies to report to Sergeant Nettleton. I had no knowledge of it until the men had started for Fort Larned, Kans. I respectfully request that in the future when details are made from my command they may be made through me, in order that I may know at any time of what my command consists.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. H. GREENE,

Captain, Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Post.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, February 8, 1865.

Major Reynolds,

You will move your command to Fort Leavenworth and report to the commanding officer of post for duty immediately.

THOS. A. DAVIES,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, February 8, 1865.

Brigadier-General Mitchell,

Commanding, Omaha:

Send me by telegraph a statement of the condition of affairs along the Overland Mail and Telegraph Route. Do the stages run regularly; what measures are you taking to keep up the route and protect it; what Indians are engaged in these troubles; where are their villages; do their families travel with them? I want everything that will post me.

G. M. DODGE,

Major-General.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, February 8, 1865.

Colonel Livingston,

Cottonwood:

I desire to know the condition of affairs on the Platte route. Do the stages run through; what Indians are engaged in the troubles; where are their villages; do their families travel with them; have you spies in their camps; what action have you taken to repair the telegraph and protect the stages? Give me all particulars, so I can have a full understanding of the case.

G. M. DODGE,

Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,

Santa Fé, N. Mex., February 8, 1865.

TO THE PEOPLE:

Owing to the Indian difficulties upon the roads leading from New Mexico to the States a company of troops will leave Fort Union, N. Mex., for Fort Larned, Kans., on the 1st and 15th of every month until further orders, commencing on the 1st day of March, 1865. The first company will go by the Raton Mountain route, the second by the Cimarron route, and so on alternately. The merchants and others who wish to send trains in after goods can assemble their trains at such points near Fort Union as may be desired by them, so as to have the protection of these periodical escorts, if such be their wish. Arrangements will be made with Major-General Curtis, commanding the Department of Kansas, so as to send these companies back from Fort Larned at such times as may best promote the interests and safety of all who may have trains upon the road coming in this direction.

By command of General Carleton:

BEN. C. CUTLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Wingate, N. Mex., February 8, 1865.

Capt. BEN. C. CUTLER,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Dept. of New Mexico, Santa Fé, N. Mex.:

Sir: I have the honor to report for the information of the department commander that in compliance with his communication of January 20, 1865, I started the Navajo interpreter for this post and two Navajo runners on the 26th of the same month, to inform the Navajoes yet in the Navajo country that they must come in at once, that they may be sent to their reservation in time to plant the coming season. The three went direct to the camp of Manuelito and his band (the only Indians, "Ricos," that are yet back). The interpreter delivered the message sent by me. Manuelito answered that he would not leave his country; that he was doing no harm to any one, and he intended to die there; that he was not stealing, neither would he allow thieves with his party; that he could always be found; that he had no fears and did not intend to run away. Also, that he intended to plant at Cañon Bonito this season. The interpreter told him that I had told him to inform them that they would not be allowed to raise any grain in their own country, and if they did not come in peaceably they would be brought in; that probably a campaign would start against them early in the spring unless they came in before. He said he wanted to die where he was, but also said he wanted to see a Navajo called Armijo, that was now at the Bosque. If he reported favorably he thought he would then go. The interpreter says there are from 400 to 600 horses and from 2,000 to 3,000 sheep owned by that band; that there are six called "Ricos;" that there are from twenty to thirty warriors, not more, and from 60 to 100, old and young, all told. Manuelito told the interpreter that the only Indians that were stealing were a small party of about twenty warriors, and sixty to eighty souls, all told, that had been near the headwaters of Red River, but that they were now below the road that crosses to Fort Whipple, and offered to conduct a party to where they are, if a party should be sent. There have lately come from the Coconino Mountains three rancherias, say thirty souls. One of these Indians was about the largest stock owner in the Navajo country, but Utes cleaned him out, leaving him only six horses. This party are on their way to this post, and will probably be here in about ten days. Manuelito, and also this Indian, says there are none left where these came from or in that part of the country. There are about forty at Queletes, about twenty miles from Fort Cañby, that are poor. One of the Indians that went from here has a brother with them, and went to them to bring them in if possible. If they come they will all be here in ten or twelve days. This will only leave Manuelito and the party at Red River. Manuelito assured the interpreter that the Indians mentioned are the only ones left back except three families (about twenty persons) that are in Cañon de Chelly, and taking the largest calculation of them makes only 270, say 300, that have not come in, and fifty now at the post. I believe this statement to be the most reliable of any that has been made relating to the Navajoes yet to go to the reservation. It also agrees with the statements of Navajoes and Zuñis. Manuelito told the interpreter that Captain Hargrave’s sheep, Lieutenant Dowlin’s mules, and the sheep stolen from Limitar were taken by the party now on Red River, and that he had sent me notice through the Zuñis of the party that went to the river that I sent Captain Hodt to intercept, and that there were eleven of them, six under an Indian known as Cabesa Blanca, and five in another party, only four of which returned, one having been killed. This is the party Captain Hodt saw the trail of. The other party probably went farther south and had not returned, that Manuelito knew of, when the interpreter was with him. The Zuñis exaggerated the number, having reported it to be about sixty. Manuelito appears to be well informed of the whereabouts and doings of the Navajoes yet back. He also says that only six have returned from the reservation to that country.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. W. EATON,
Major, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, Comdg. Post.

Brig. Gen. A. SULLY,
Commanding District of Iowa, Dubuque, Iowa:

GENERAL: You will please proceed immediately to Rock Island, Ill., and organize and inspect the two regiments of rebel deserters lately selected from the military prison at that place. Authority has been sent me (copy inclosed*) to appoint the officers for these regiments, and you will please send me without delay a list of officers of regiments under your command of two or three years' service. I send you a list, furnished me by General Dodge, of Iowa officers discharged from service whom he knows to be first-rate officers. Send for them and see what they are and how they will answer. I have two officers, one of whom I wish appointed a major and one lieutenant-colonel. I will designate them in the proper time. Please attend to this as soon as possible, as I wish to send these regiments at once to the plains.

Lieut. Col. EDWARD P. TEN BROECK,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Iowa:

COLONEL: For the information of the general commanding I have the honor to state that affairs at this post continue the same as in my last letter of the 2d instant. I received on the 4th instant by some

*See Halleck to Pope, p. 760.
Indian scouts I employed two communications from Captain Moreland, commanding Fort Berthold. He is of the opinion that he will soon be attacked by the bands of Santees, Yanktonais, Blackfeet, Unçpapas, and Minneconjous, now collected below his post to the number of several thousand. He states he has fifty-five men, no ammunition for his artillery, and requests that I send him 100 men and ammunition (without sending me the caliber of his guns). I have written him in return (see inclosed copy of letter to him). By Two Bear's young men I am in communication very often with the camp above. Yesterday, from two Indians whom I sent as spies to Medicine Bear camp, I learn that there is now a war element and a peace element in the camp. The latter is in the majority, and no overt act has been committed at Fort Berthold. Some Indians came into camp while they were there, reporting they had left a train of forty sleigh loads, which would be in to trade in four days, owned by the same agents which had been there before. As I have said before, we have more to fear from the influence of these traders than any natural disposition of the Indians. Another report of a scheme one of these traders had tried to induce the Indians to join in, viz, to seize the garrison of Fort Berthold by treachery, drawing the garrison outside for peace purposes unarmed, and surprising them; but the fact of Captain Moreland being the general's selection is sufficient guarantee to insure the post against capture by this means. I do not really think the post in danger at present, or I should re-enforce it, and wish to obey strictly the general's orders of acting on the defensive, unless a necessity obliges me to act upon my own judgment and the interests of the service. An Indian just in from above reports the camp below Berthold breaking up and a great portion of them coming down this way, thus strengthening me in my first opinion. I am anxiously expecting an answer from the general commanding in regard to my request to break up these Red River trading agents.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. A. R. DIMON,
Colonel First U. S. Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.

[Inclosure.]

Fort Rice, Dak. Ter. February 5, 1865.

Capt. A. B. Moreland,
Commanding Fort Berthold, Dak. Ter.

Captain: Your favors of the 16th of December and two of 31st ultimo were received yesterday with your mail for below. Nothing new except an order in regard to trade, which I think has long been needed. I have received a message from Medicine Bear, who makes assurances of good will and says the majority of the camp below you is for peace, and all to be feared from them is small war parties of young men, which he cannot control. Taking this and other information into consideration, I deem it best to wait for some overt act of theirs before commencing a movement which might be construed into a commencement of hostilities which at this time might be injudicious. I think if you will look well at the matter you will think as I do. I am ready at five minutes' notice to send you help in five days. You forgot, captain, to send me the caliber of your guns. It would be impossible for me to send you any artillery, as mine is all heavy; also to obtain transportation for subsistence for men for over ten days; but that might be arranged afterward. Please keep me posted, captain, at whatever cost. I am in communication (by Indian scouts) almost daily with the camp below you. The fact of your mail having passed through that camp unmolested is proof of some change in their feeling. It may be treachery, but as the men I employed were in the camp several days, and only heard expressions of peace and weariness of the late war, I think you have not much to fear, if you are careful. Of course it is needless for me to caution you. You should know your position well, and I shall await anxiously your next communication, or if I hear threatening news, shall act. Medicine Bear complains that his young men go out in the night to the Ree village and trade with your traders for all they want to make war with, and he cannot control them and wishes it could be stopped.

Trusting I shall hear from you soon, I remain, yours, truly,

C. A. R. DIMON,
Colonel, First U. S. Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.

CITY POINT, VA., February 9, 1865—10 a.m.
(Received 11 a.m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington:

I have ordered General Grierson to Canby to command his cavalry. I think he could not have known Averell or he would not have applied for him.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

CITY POINT, VA., February 9, 1865.

Major-General CANBY,
Commanding Military Division of West Mississippi:

I have ordered General Grierson to report to you to take chief command of your cavalry operating from Mobile Bay. I do not mean to fasten on you commanders against your judgment or wishes, but you applied for Averell, I supposed for that service. I have no faith in him, and cannot point to a single success of his except in his reports. Grierson, on the contrary, has been a most successful cavalry commander. He set the first example in making long raids by going through from Memphis to Baton Rouge. His raid this winter on to the Mobile and Ohio Railroad was most important in its results and most successfully executed. I do not think I could have sent you a better man than Grierson to command your cavalry on an expedition to the interior of Alabama. Unless you go yourself I am afraid your other troops will not be so well commanded. What is wanted is a commander who will not be afraid to cut loose from his base of supplies, and who will make the best use of the resources of the country. An army the size of the one you will have can always get to some place where they can be supplied, if they should fail to reach the point started for.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

PADUCAH, KY., February 9, 1865—10 a.m.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY:

All the infantry of Maj. Gen. A. J. Smith’s command, and also the division of cavalry, have left Eastport and are now on their way to New Orleans to report to you. The first fleet left Eastport on the evening of the 6th, and the whole command have with them their transportation and artillery.

GEO. H. THOMAS,
Major-General.

8. The regiments composing the Separate Brigade, organized by paragraph 5, Special Orders, No. 39, from these headquarters, viz, the First Louisiana Cavalry, the Second Illinois Cavalry, the Second New York Cavalry, and the Thirty-first Massachusetts Mounted Infantry, will be sent with as little delay as possible to Carrollton, La., and encamp at the place selected by Brigadier-General Lucas, commanding the brigade. The commanding general Department of the Gulf will issue the necessary orders. The brigade commander will, as soon as the troops have been collected report direct to these headquarters.

13. Surg. Julius A. Skilton, Fourteenth New York Cavalry, is hereby assigned to duty as chief medical officer of the Separate Brigade organized by Special Orders, No. 39, paragraph 5, from these headquarters

First. The District of Baton Rouge and Port Hudson and the Post of Morganza will hereafter be known and designated as the Northern Division of Louisiana.

Second. The country heretofore included in the limits of the Defenses of New Orleans will hereafter be known and designated as the Southern Division of Louisiana.

Third. Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron is assigned to the command of the within the limits of his command.

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Defenses of New Orleans,
New Orleans, February 9, 1865.

Commanding Officer Plaquemine:

General Sherman says you must use your own discretion as to the necessity of withdrawing your cavalry. The object for which the reconnaissance in that quarter [was made] is accomplished, but you cannot have scouts there too much.

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., February 9, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel Christensen, Assistant Adjutant-General:

Colonel: Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr was assigned to the command of the Detached Brigade, Seventh Army Corps, and left this post for New Orleans on the 6th instant with the distinct understanding between him and myself, at an interview in my office, that he would proceed direct to New Orleans and prepare for the arrival of his command, which is getting off by regiments as transportation can be procured. A party of officers and ladies went to Devall's Bluff the same afternoon to attend an entertainment given on board the steamer Rowena at Devall's Bluff. General Carr was drunk on the railroad going to the Bluff, carried liquor with him from Little Rock, was drunk on the steamboat, and returned to Little Rock drunk. He behaved in a very unbecoming manner going, returning, and while at the Bluff. He was under orders at the time and it was generally known that he was under orders for important service. I have ordered Brig. Gen. J. C. Veatch to relieve General Carr in the command of the detachment Seventh Corps. General Veatch leaves to-day for New Orleans. General Carr is now unassigned. He has been a long time in this department. His habits, in my opinion, are bad and his influence detrimental to the best interests of the service. I respectfully request that the major-general commanding the military division will assign him to duty out of this department. The Arkansas River is again in boating condition. One steamer has been sent to Fort Smith with supplies and two more start to-day. Brig. Gen. Cyrus Bussey has been ordered to relieve Brigadier-General Thayer at Fort Smith and leaves to-day for that post. I have had full conferences with Brigadier-General Bussey and am satisfied he will use every endeavor to carry out at Fort Smith the wishes of the major-general commanding the military division.

Very respectfully,

J. J. Reynolds,
Major-General.

PINE BLUFF, February 9, 1865—11 a.m.

Maj. John Levering, Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have the honor to submit the following report from Col. William Thompson, First Iowa Cavalry: He reports that several negroes just arrived from Camden say that at the time our advance reached Chambersville there were 2,000 men in Camden; that they took up the pontoon bridge on the Ouachita, fell back, and formed a line of battle five miles below Camden, and were to retreat as soon as we began to cross the river.

HEADQUARTERS INDIAN BRIGADE,
Fort Gibson, C. N., February 9, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

Sir: I have forwarded reports to you of the condition of this command and of the Indian people dependent on it. As spring is rapidly approaching and steps must be taken for the necessities then to be met, I refer the following matter to you: Here, besides the soldiers, there is a large camp of Indian refugees, nearly all of whom are at least partially civilized. They have been subsisted by trains from Leavenworth and Fort Scott. So far as it is possible to make them self-subsisting for the ensuing season requires effort, both as a question of economy and humanity. The command here consists, as our reports will show, of about 2,000 men on paper, four-fifths of which may be considered effective. No part of the command here is mounted; I have not even horsemen for picket duty. I have to employ a few scouts to watch my front and flanks and drive in beef. Of course it will be evident that it is impossible for such a force of footmen to defend the refugees while raising a crop. The Creeks have been and are clamoring at the Department of the Interior to be sent to their homes, which are south of the Arkansas River, where they would be exposed and scattered over a large tract of country, and which is, in the present condition of affairs, out of the question. In conversation with their head chief, Sands, who is an able man, he desires to occupy lands across the Verdigris, yet in their own country, and not to exceed in distance fifteen miles from this post. Cherokees and those of other tribes are located on this side. If one-half of this force, say 1,000 men, were mounted by April 10, when there will be grass, they could be protected. The plan I had matured for the approaching season was as follows: To get 1,000 horses by the middle of April to mount the companies best officered that could take care of them; to get the four new howitzers, with horses for the old howitzer company; "requisitions" have been sent. I designed by the 20th of April to take the mounted men and the howitzers and move rapidly on Boggy, Towson, and Washita, where the enemy have the military organization by which they have foothold in the nation. I should like, in addition, to have one battalion of white cavalry, but, if necessary, could do without them. Unless the enemy can maintain their military organizations in the country, they lose everything. Attack is the best defense. Their Indian troops are mostly furloughed until May, and if we do not attack them they will attack us. If successful, their Texas force would be driven over Red River, their organization for the spring prevented, and not only definite results obtained for peace in the Indian Nation, but they would be crippled for the ensuing season. In any event the mounted troops could cover the refugees and defend them from the mounted raids of the enemy. The infantry could garrison Fort Gibson (where there is a strong work) and protect their supplies. Communications have been sent in reference to the “muster out” of the Indian command. If it be not mustered out until the expiration of its term of service the above programme would cover the term. I ought, however, to have some more troops, as I have to defend my supply line to Fort Scott or Leavenworth. If the plan of campaign is approved steps would have to be taken at once to get the horses. Nearly a year ago Lieutenant-General Grant authorized me to mount as many of my men as I deemed advisable. The difficulty lay in getting the horses. Horses of a smaller size might do, but they ought to be stout and hardy, and at least as good as those used by the enemy. I could have company commanders make the requisitions, but unless steps are taken immediately to have the supply at Saint Louis, Leavenworth, or some other point, and the requisitions honored there, it will be too late, and another season will be lost.

Submitting the above to your consideration, and urging an early reply, if it meets your approval, I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. A. PHILLIPS, Colonel, Commanding.

Fort Smith, Ark., February 9, 1865.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

Sir: At a meeting of the loyal citizens of this city and vicinity held this day, at this place, the following preamble and resolutions were passed with unanimity:

Whereas the loyal people of this city and vicinity are now, and have been for some time past, to a considerable degree desirous of the necessities of life, from various causes, chief among which is the appropriation for the use of the army of corn, wheat, beef, &c., and the want of protection against guerrillas and other lawless persons in carrying on farming operations; and

Whereas we conceive it to be not only the duty, but also the interest of Government to assist the truly loyal in retaining their foothold in the country, and thereby contributing largely to the restoration of obedience to the laws of the United States, and an early resumption of agriculture, trade, and commerce; and

Whereas Western Arkansas has always signalized herself conspicuously in her attachment to the Union by the rallying of thousands of her sons to the standard of liberty, and by the sacrifice of hundreds of others who fell victims to rebel tyranny and implacability, simply for adhering to the cause of the Government of their choice:

Be it resolved, That a memorial be forthwith addressed to the President of the United States, setting forth the claims of the loyal people in these parts for temporary and speedy succor in the days of their adversity, to wit, either to cause sufficient supplies to be brought to this place, so as to allow citizens to purchase from the commissary stores, without curtailing the rations of the troops, or to order supplies to be shipped here on Government account, independent of the army, to be sold to the citizens under the superintendence of persons of known loyalty and integrity, and at a rate fully reimbursing Government for the amount laid out.

Resolved further, That a committee of three be appointed by the chair to prepare the memorial in accordance with the tenor of the above preamble and resolutions, and that it be submitted to the committee on resolutions and the president of the meeting, and signed by them and the secretary, on behalf of the meeting, and forwarded with all possible dispatch to its destination.

The undersigned, in behalf and by authority of the loyal citizens of this place, would earnestly and respectfully submit to your favorable consideration the subject set forth in the first resolution, and a speedy action thereon. There are about 2,000 persons in this place and vicinity who need assistance for three or four months, until a crop can be made; and as planting time will soon have arrived, and the navigation of the Arkansas River is unreliable except in spring, it is apparent that help, if extended to us at all, must come soon. Thousands are awaiting your decision with the greatest anxiety, and will have to leave and abandon their all if not succored in time. Besides the necessaries of life, some seeds are also needed for planting purposes, say 1,000 bushels of corn and oats (to be used partially for feeding working stock); 75 bushels Hungarian grass seed; 100 barrels of Irish potatoes, button onions, &c. These articles, if not donated to the farmers, would also be purchased readily, so that in no instance Government would be at the loss of the expenses incurred.

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:
I request authority to raise two companies of Indians in this department, to be armed, equipped, and paid by Government, and used as guides, scouts, &c. One great difficulty I had, that we have very little knowledge of the hostile tribes and lack guides in following them up. I expect to open telegraphic communication by Sunday, and am now ready to guard telegraphic stations to Denver.

Send forward the Fayetteville train, unless you are positive that a large force of rebels are on the road to attack it. The wire remaining up is an indication that there are no rebels on the road. Send a good escort, but do not detain the train unless the danger is great. Forage is a great item.

Major-General Pope:
Following dispatch received from General Mitchell:

Headquarters District of Nebraska, Omaha, February 9, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:
The telegraph line from Lodge Pole Creek, twenty-five miles west of Julesburg, on Laramie route, is destroyed for fifteen miles. Poles cut down and destroyed on the Denver line beyond Julesburg. For the first fifty miles the telegraph is destroyed about ten miles. New poles are on the way from Cottonwood to repair the lines. We are compelled to haul poles from 150 to 145 miles. Every means in my power is used to have the line fixed. All the available troops I have at my disposal are in the vicinity of Julesburg, except small garrisons at posts required to be kept up on the Denver route. My district only extends to Julesburg. I have sent troops, however, under the direction of Major-General Curtis, up that route fifty miles since the outbreak and find everything destroyed. The Overland stage has been running tri-weekly as far as Julesburg; no farther. We have no communication with Denver, and have not had since the last outbreak. Neither can I communicate with Fort Laramie in consequence of the lines being down. I have been traversing the country constantly on and adjacent to the mail and telegraph lines during the past four months, sending guards on the stage, and when deemed necessary mounted guards and patrols on all dangerous portions of the road through my district. This plan succeeded until an overpowering force attacked Julesburg and drove the troops inside of their works, and burnt the stage and telegraph station, destroying a large amount of stores for both companies. The Overland stage cannot run through until they can provide supplies for stock from Julesburg to the Junction, where Overland stage leaves Denver route, everything belonging to stage company, citizens, and Government being entirely destroyed. The Indian villages are unknown to us. From the best information I have I believe them to be on Powder River. I know certainly there is a large village there. There has been no squaws in the country to my knowledge since last fall. The tribes engaged are the Cheyennes, Arapahoos, Kiowas, Brules and Ogallalla Sioux, a portion of the Blackfeet, and a large portion of what is known as the Missouri River Sioux, the same Indians General Sully made the campaign against last summer. Less than from 3,000 to 5,000 additional troops will be totally unable to punish the Indians. One column will never be able to overtake them unless they are willing to give battle. I think three columns of men, 1,000 strong each, with ample garrisons on the Overland mail and telegraph lines, well mounted and supplied, can clean out the country of all hostile Indians if done before grass comes. After that time, in my judgment, it will take twice that number of men. In addition to the troubles west I would not be surprised any day to hear of an outbreak in the north part of my district. I am informed by Indian scouts that there is a large encampment of Indians on the Running Water that are ready to engage in the war against the whites. Among them are some of the Yanktonais. I am perfectly helpless so far as soldiers are concerned if such a demonstration should be made. I have one company of soldiers only to guard that whole country. They are stationed at Dakota City and Saint James. I have just completed the organization of a company of Pawnee Indians, by authority of the War Department. They are all ready for the field, except horses. Will you order horses purchased or will I have it done? They are on their way to Fort Kearny on foot.

Rbt. B. Mitchell, Brigadier-General.

I am pushing out supplies. You are aware what troops are at Randall and that vicinity that can be used in North Nebraska. Will the troops at Sioux City be under my orders?

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Fort Leavenworth, February 9, 1865.
(Received 2 p.m.)

Major-General Pope, Saint Louis, Mo.:
The following dispatch has just been received from Colonel Livingston:

Fort Rankin, Near Julesburg.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:
In reply to your inquiries I would respectfully state as follows: In the early part of January last indications of large parties of Indians moving westward on Republcan [River] were reported by the scouts sent to gain information of their movements. On January 7 they had crossed South Fork of Platte River twenty-three miles west of this post; camped with their families, forming a camp of about, as near as learned, 400 lodges, containing eight warriors each, many lodges being thirty robes in size. They at once commenced the work of destruction along the road west as far as Junction Station, 100 miles from here, and attacked this post. A desperate fight there repulsed them. Their forces in this fight were not less than 2,000 men, armed with breech-loading carbines and rifles. A desperate attempt on their part to burn the Overland stage station near this post was made at this time, but was frustrated by the gallantry of Capt. N. J. O'Brien, Company F, Seventh Iowa Cavalry. Every ranch and stage station from Junction Station to this place, including the station one mile east of this post, is burned, and the charred remains of every inmate who failed to escape tell of the brutality they were subjected to. I telegraphed Hon. Samuel H. Elbert, acting governor of Colorado, early in January of the state of things. The troops of Colorado have been withdrawn from Valley fifty miles west of here, I suppose, to concentrate around Denver. The telegraph line to Salt Lake and the Denver branch line are destroyed for a distance of nearly ten miles on the northern route, and in different points throughout 100 miles along the Denver road. I am hauling poles and repairing the Salt Lake line with all the expedition I can. I have secured 450 poles at Cottonwood, which I expect here Friday morning. They are marching night and day on this duty. Meantime my troops are digging holes for poles and repairing such portions of line as admit of that course. I have but 360 troops, but so long as human endurance holds out we will work night and day to get communication perfect with the west. My opinion is that the Indians engaged in this war are the Cheyennes, Ogallalla Sioux, and Brulé Sioux. They have gone northward toward Horse Creek, beyond Fort Laramie. This trail leads in that direction, but they are slow in marching, feeling audacious and indifferent to every effort from the small body of troops in this district. I saw their signals to-day, probably those of small war parties, on the North Platte. Feel assured, general, that this is no trifling Indian war. You will hear of continued murders and robberies as long as the road is so poorly protected by troops. No stages run farther west than Cottonwood. I have prevailed on agents of the stage company to move their stations close to our Forts for protection. General Mitchell, commanding district, pursued these same Indians last month through fearfully cold and stormy weather, but they reached and crossed the Platte before we struck their trail and escaped us. My district extends only this far west, but I am working in Colorado and Western Sub-District of Nebraska. No spies can be used now, owing to numerous small war parties being met everywhere in this country. I predict that if more troops are not sent into this district immediately this road will be stripped of every ranch and white man on it, the military posts alone excepted. Should these Indians swing around by L'egan qui court River and strike the Omaha road below Kearny, where settlements are numerous, infinite mischief will result to the settlers. What we need is troops, supplies for them, and a vigorous campaign against these hostile Indians. They must be put on the defensive instead of us. No difficulty can arise in finding them. Over 2,000 stolen cattle accompany them. I will keep the lines open for communication for Leavenworth for any further information.

Respectfully,

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel First Nebraska Cavalry, Commanding Eastern Sub-District.

I have ordered one regiment to Julesburg. They will start on Monday.

Respectfully returned, and would state for the information of the general commanding that I have relieved the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, now on duty in this district (864 men), and ordered them to Fort Kearny, Nebr. HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., February 9, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Department of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth:

MAJOR: I have the honor to state for the information of the general commanding that since my last communication, of the 28th of January, up to the present date all is quiet throughout the district. No large parties of Indians have been discovered by our scouts along the line of the Arkansas River, and, with the exception of an attack upon a fatigue party chopping wood one mile from Fort Zarah, no casualties have occurred. On the morning of the 1st of February a fatigue party of eight men chopping wood on the Arkansas, one mile from Fort Zarah, were fired upon by Indians; one man mortally wounded. Lieutenant Coy, Company G, Second Colorado Cavalry, immediately started in pursuit. The morning being extremely foggy, enabling the Indians to advance under its cover, also concealed their retreat. All that the party in pursuit were able to discover was a few moccasin tracks on the sand-bar in the river. On the 6th of February a report was received at these headquarters from Jesse H. Leavenworth, Indian agent now at Council Grove, that Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, at that place, was in a partial state of mutiny, having shot the lieutenant of their company (mortally wounding him), and had it not been for ten men of Company D, Second Colorado Cavalry, would have carried into effect their threat of burning the town. Immediately upon receipt of this, Lieutenant Wise, Company D, Second Colorado Cavalry, with the available men of his company, proceeded to Council Grove (acting under instructions from these headquarters) to investigate the affair, arrest all the guilty parties, and send them to Fort Riley, Kans., for trial. The report having implicated the captain of the company, he was directed to arrest him (and the whole company if necessary). Owing to the messenger not being sent in time, the company had left the Grove some six hours before the lieutenant arrived.
(acting under orders from the commanding officer District of South Kansas), and having passed out of the limits of this district, Lieutenant Wise deemed farther pursuit unnecessary. Upon investigation the following facts were ascertained: That Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, Captain Kendall commanding, acting under orders from the commanding officer of the District of Northern Kansas, pursuant to instructions from department headquarters, were ordered to Council Grove, Kans. (in the District of Upper Arkansas), to report to Maj. Gen. James G. Blunt, commanding District of South Kansas; arrived there on the ______ of January; left there on the 5th of February for Humboldt, Kans. On the night previous to their departure eight of the enlisted men fired upon the lieutenant, severely wounding him. He drew his revolver and drove them off. He was carried into the hotel. The men shortly after returned to complete their work, but were prevented by a few soldiers of Company D, Second Colorado Cavalry (stationed at that place for the protection of Government property stored there). Finding these men determined to protect this officer they withdrew, returning again, however, with more, declaring that they were going to kill him if they found him, and that they would search the town, burn the hotel, and threatening the lives of the citizens but that they would finish the job. It appears that the captain was cognizant of this, and even present at the time the lieutenant was shot, making no effort to control his men. I inclose Lieutenant Wise's report.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

FORT RILEY, KANS., February 9, 1865.

Col. JAMES H. FORD,
Commanding District of Upper Arkansas:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that in pursuance to instructions received from headquarters District of Upper Arkansas, I proceeded to Council Grove to ascertain the facts about the shooting of
First Lieutenant Dexter, belonging to Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry. From information I received by Lieutenant Dexter and soldiers belonging to Company D, Second Regiment Colorado Cavalry, and also by citizens of Council Grove, it seems their stories are too clear to have any doubt but that it was an attempted murder, in which the captain of Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, would be implicated. The facts, from all I ascertained, are these: First Lieutenant Dexter and Captain Kendall, of Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, have had some difficulties concerning military matters, and on account of this First Lieutenant Dexter was reported by the captain absent without leave, and was, therefore, dismissed the service of the United States and ordered to report to Fort Leavenworth, Kans. The lieutenant, after receiving his order, prepared to obey said order, and while at Council Grove, preparatory to starting to Fort Leavenworth, a squad of eight men came from the camp to Council Grove to arrest this first lieutenant, Dexter, by order of Captain Kendall, and ordered him to go with them to camp, and the lieutenant replied that his captain had nothing more to do with him, and that they had no proper order to show concerning his arrest; still, he would go, and started, but they had not proceeded more than 300 yards from the hotel when the eight men at once leveled their pistols at the lieutenant and the command to fire was given. The lieutenant at the same time drew his pistol and fired one shot, but finding that he was wounded, ran for the hotel immediately. He was pursued by some of the same party, and would have been killed at the hotel if Sergeant Tibbits, with his detachment of Company D, Second Regiment Colorado Cavalry, had not come to his assistance immediately. The soldiers who pursued him to the hotel were still threatening that they would kill Lieutenant Dexter if they had to search every house in town, but they finally saw that the detachment of Company D, Second Colorado Cavalry, would kill the first one who attempted to open or break a door. They were then ordered to go back to their camp. During all this time I understand that their captain was about the town. The next morning I returned to this post.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. WISE,

Brigadier-General MITCHELL,

One large regiment leaves here Monday for Julesburg; also 400 pack-mules. I expect to get control of troops at Randall and Sioux City. Citizens of North Nebraska should be organized and armed ready to defend their country if required. I will put troops on the line as fast as possible. Can you load 100 teams with forage at Omaha? Send friendly Indians as spies among the Indians of North Nebraska. Will send you orders about horses to-morrow. Let us get at the intentions of these Indians. I fear the Julesburg Indians will swing round on the settlements.

New Orleans, February 10, 1865.

The general commanding tenders his thanks to Capt. W. I. Allen, Thirty-first Massachusetts Volunteers, and the battalion of mounted infantry under his command, for their uniform good conduct since occupying their present position, and particularly for the unusual success which has thus far attended their operations in capturing the noted guerrilla leader and desperado, King, and at various times large numbers of guerrilla bands infesting that region, thus promoting security and good order upon that frontier, with the exercise of a good judgment that led to no unnecessary bloodshed.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, February 10, 1865.

Col. J. G. CLARK, and as much forage as necessary, to make a reconnaissance in the Brulé Saint Vincent country, for the purpose of surprising and capturing any rebel recruiting parties that may be in that section of country, and to gain any information of contemplated raids. Lieuteant Pomponeau will be authorized to bring in with him any recruits who may desire to join the U. S. service.

Capt. F. SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Am sending out scouting parties in different directions. I have sent two companies of cavalry and one of infantry toward Grand Bayou this morning, having heard that there was a party of rebels in that direction. Our pickets arrested a soldier in the Second Louisiana Cavality last night attempting to steal in town. He was armed with bowie-

Col. C. L. HARRIS,

The general commanding directs that you immediately send the Corrie with 100 men, armed and equipped, with three days' rations and forty rounds of ammunition, to Lake Verret. You will also send on the Cornie, if possible, a howitzer with a party to man it. The Cornie will proceed via Flat Lake, Bayou Long, down Bayou Magaselle into Lake Verret, and lay off the saw-mill and the shell bank for the purpose of watching the movements and capturing, if possible, a force of the enemy said to be now infesting the Brulé Texas region, but which will be driven out, and it is expected will retreat that way. The Cornie will remain at the point indicated fifteen or twenty hours and then return. In order to make the movement a success great celerity is required.

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., February 10, 1865.

OFFICER COMDG. RECONNAISSANCE TOWARD LAKE VERRET:

You will at once proceed with Company —, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry, and Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry, to the Shell Bank, on Lake Verret, near Bayou Blue, for the purpose of intercepting and capturing, if possible, a force of the enemy said to be somewhere in that vicinity. On arriving at that place, if you can learn nothing of their whereabouts you will at once proceed to Napoleonville, via Texas Brulé and the road running along the canal, and report to the commanding officer at Napoleonville. Should you find the enemy you will pursue them as far as Lake Verret or Grand River. Great care will be taken not to fire into a party from the Third Rhode Island Cavalry which has been started out from Napoleonville in pursuit of the same force of the enemy. You will take three days' rations, forty rounds of ammunition, and such forage as you can carry. The commanding officer will be held responsible that no plundering is allowed.

General N. J. T. DANA:

General: I have been directed by the major-general commanding to stop at this place and collect all the officers and men belonging to my command who are fit for duty. I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY EXPEDITION,
Steamer John Kaine, Gaines' Landing, February 10, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. DANA,
Commanding Department of Mississippi:

GENERAL: After the most fatiguing scout of my life I arrived here at 2 p.m. to-day, and have the honor to report my command well, in good condition, and within one day's march of this place. I send the Fourth and Fifth Illinois Cavalry on steamers Laurel Hill and Autocrat, and desire that the greatest expedition be used in returning them, as I cannot move until they reach me. The command have, in the fourteen days of their absence, passed through Oak Ridge, Monroe, Bastrop, Hamburg, Collins, and Shanghai; have failed to provoke a skirmish even from the enemy. They have captured 45 prisoners, 20 deserters, 1 steamer (the Barkman, which I burned after crossing my troops with it), 6 ferryboats on Bayou Bartholomew, and about 300 horses and mules, many of them the very best. They have marched 300 miles, and made 4 ferries; have built two miles and a half of bridges, and this with a total loss of 1 man accidentally wounded, 1 man leg broken, 30 men sick, and 30 horses and mules disabled and abandoned. To describe the roads, the poverty of the people, or the sufferings of my command during this terrible march would be impossible. I think twenty negroes died in one day from exposure, and it is not exaggeration to say that at one time one-half of a regiment might be seen dismounted, struggling with their horses, every one of which was mired and down. No squad of men, much less an army, can live anywhere we have been. The people have neither seed, corn, nor bread, or the mills to grind the corn in if they had it, as I burned them wherever found. Practically, the line now and hereafter of the Confederates is the Ouachita. Colonel McNeill's force of 800 men, at Oak Ridge, dwindled from that number to fifty, who scattered at our approach promiscuously through the woods, McNeill being last heard from in an impassable swamp with four men and a nigger. The nigger deserted, as did probably the others. I have taken from these people the mules with which they would raise a crop the coming year, and burned every surplus grain of corn, and cannot imagine that one company of cavalry can obtain subsistence for more than thirty days in the whole country. On the receipt of brigade commanders' reports I will immediately furnish you a more full and satisfactory report. *

I have the honor, general, to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. OSBAND,
Colonel Third U. S. Colored Cavalry, Commanding Expedition.

Major-General Dodge,

Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

The Secretary of War authorizes you to raise two companies of Indian guides, to be mustered into service in usual form, for one year, or until sooner discharged. You will provisionally appoint the officers as soon as companies are raised, and send to the Adjutant-General a list of names of officers so appointed, for commission by the President. Those you require to be mounted will be supplied with Indian ponies by the quartermaster's department.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,

Comdg. Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

General: I deem it inexpedient to make the proposed exchange of the Second Missouri Cavalry for the First and Seventh Regiments as suggested in your indorsement of the 20th ultimo.

I am, general, very respectfully, yours, &c.,

J. J. Reynolds,

Major-General.

Fort Leavenworth, February 10, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

I shall have to remain here several days. If there are any papers that need my attention send them through by special messenger; any dispatches forward them by telegraph.

G. M. Dodge,

Major-General.

Special Orders,

Hdqrs. Department of the Missouri,

No. 41. Fort Leavenworth, February 10, 1865.

VI. The commanding officers at Fort Riley and Fort Kearny will halt all trains going west at those points and organize the persons accompanying them into companies for the protection of the train. A competent person will be selected as captain and placed in charge of the train and organization.

VII. All persons accompanying the train must be armed, and as soon as teams enough are concentrated to organize a company of 100 or more armed men they will be sent forward in charge of the captain appointed, who will be held responsible for holding the organization and train together for its security, &c. Under no circumstances will teams be allowed to straggle along the road, or go forward except under a thorough organization as above prescribed. The officer in charge of the train will endeavor to camp as near military posts as possible, and any insubordination on the part of any person accompanying the train, refusal to obey orders, &c., will be reported at the first military post, the commanding officer of which will immediately cause the arrest and punishment of the parties.
VIII. All Government trains passing Forts Kearny and Riley will be strongly guarded, and citizen trains will be allowed to accompany them. In such cases the commanding officer of the escort will be placed in charge of the entire train. The commanding officers of all posts are commanded to give all aid in their power to trains crossing the plains and to see that this order is complied with.

IX. Government trains and troops will obtain forage from the depots to Forts Kearny and Riley from citizens on the route, in all cases giving the proper receipts to the citizens and making the proper returns to the depot quartermaster, that no delay or trouble may ensue in issuing the proper vouchers.

X. At all times the Overland mail will be so protected as to insure its safety, escorts running from one military post to another. Breaks in the telegraph line must be immediately reported and repaired. Sudden dashes of Indians is no cause for stopping or turning back of mails, as the moment the Indians are driven off they can be pushed through. The mail stations through the country where Indian difficulties exist should be placed within protecting distance of military posts.

XI. Trains returning will be organized, as above prescribed, at some post near Denver to be selected by Colonel Moonlight, commanding District of Colorado.

By order of Major-General Dodge:

JOHN WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., February 10, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

Major: I have the honor to report the district at this time very quiet and harmonious. The counties of Jackson and La Fayette are the only localities troubled with bushwhackers. My efforts against the enemy have been mainly directed to these counties. My available force has been actively employed there for the last fifteen days and these efforts have been quite successful. Several bushwhackers have been killed, horses captured, and bands hotly chased, giving them no rest or security. The great trouble heretofore in pursuing these parties has been their facilities for crossing the Missouri River on the ice at any point. The breaking up of the ice will very materially interfere with their plans and make their points of escapement rather snares for entrapping them. The available cavalry of this post are now operating in La Fayette and I am hopeful of either destroying or expelling the few bushmen of that county during this month. The sending beyond our lines families and friends of these outlaws will greatly advance the success of our efforts. I shall make recommendations for their deportation as fast as I can collect evidence justifying such action. My force is growing weaker every week in consequence of the mustering out of the Missouri State Militia. I am therefore going about the organization of the volunteer militia companies authorized by Governor Fletcher with all possible energy. I hope in a very short time to have them ready for service. In addition thereto I am preparing local organizations in counties not included in General Orders, No. 3, headquarters State of Missouri. The construction of block-houses and stockades is progressing well and will probably all be completed by the time our militia and local forces are organized, so that they can be defended and guarded. I hope to be able to forward by my next report the rolls of the disloyal citizens of the district, classified, the accomplishment of which is no small task. The troubles at Boonville with discharged soldiers and citizens have calmed down and the city is tranquil. The manifestation of a resolution on the part of the military authorities to put down predatory bands of thieves has greatly relieved the people and these outrages are growing less frequent than they were fifteen days ago. Circular of January 19, 1865, from your headquarters, was well timed and will have a most salutary effect. I have laid a special injunction on commanding officers to enforce it. The important intimate military relations existing between this and the Southwest District have induced correspondence between General Sanborn and myself, and it affords me great pleasure to mention the cordiality of feeling and concurrence of sentiment and views between us. It is his opinion that the military telegraph line, at one period of the war running direct from this district to Springfield, should be at once rebuilt.
With this I fully concur. The great delay in communicating between here and Springfield, via Saint Louis, has often been attended with most serious consequences. Especially was this the case in the fall of 1863, when Shelby made so bold a raid through the Southwestern and Central Districts. The habitual passing from that to this district of guerrillas and raiding parties renders the speediest transmission of information of the utmost importance. This matter is most earnestly recommended to the consideration of the major-general commanding.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. District.

Col. CHESTER HARDING,
Commanding Fourth Sub-District, Kansas City, Mo.:

COLONEL: The protection of the line of travel and mail between here and Independence seems to be a necessity to some extent. The superintendent of the mail line (Roberts, of Independence), in answer to an inquiry as to how many troops were necessary to protect his coaches, answered that they should extend from Holden to Big Blue, about fifteen men to each party, and it would take from six to seven parties. There should also be a company stationed near Lee's, half way between here, Independence, and Pleasant Hill; also fifteen men at Big Blue Ferry. From which it will be seen that he requires 173 men, 100 of which must be cavalry. This is modest. Now, I am anxious to protect this line, but I cannot do it at the sacrifice of every other interest of the district. I have sent you all the cavalry I can possibly spare, and you will so dispose of the cavalry and infantry at your command as to give the largest possible protection to this interest between Pleasant Hill and Independence. Communicate with Roberts, mail contractor, at Independence, and have him call at your headquarters and arrange this matter as satisfactorily as possible. If an escort between Holden and Pleasant Hill be necessary, I will try to provide for it in this sub-district. My own opinion is that it would be exceedingly hazardous to undertake to guard the stage. The escort would be bushwhacked and heavy squads would concentrate on the escort and destroy it. The most effectual way to protect the line would be to keep its scouts, troops continually passing along it, and the worst places watched.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. District.

CASSVILLE, Mo., February 10, 1865.

Brigadier-General SANBORN:
I have been at Camp Walker and Spavinaw. There are not more than ten or twelve rebels in any squad in the southwest that I can hear of. If you want me to go to Neosho and west of there, notify me here. It was cold; I returned back.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, February 10, 1865.

Col. C. W. BLAIR,
Commanding Fort Scott:

Order Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, now en route from Council Grove to Humboldt, to proceed without delay to Fort Kearny, via Fort Riley. You will communicate this order to the commanding officer of the company by the quickest possible means, and report to these headquarters when the company will start for Fort Kearny.

By order of Major-General Dodge:

JOHN WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant General.
Brigadier-General Mitchell,

One hundred teams left here a week ago for Denver. Seventy-five of them are to unload at Cottonwood; wagons go through to Denver empty. If you want anything hauled from Cottonwood to Julesburg, take advantage of this. One hundred thousand rations leave for Kearny to-day, and next week 150 teams will be loaded for Cottonwood and Julesburg. What do you want them loaded with? Has the quartermaster at Omaha any authority to contract for corn? If so, by whom given?

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Colonel Livingston,
Julesburg:
Were the Government stores at Valley Station saved? Have we 6,000 bushels of corn there? When do the Overland Mail Company propose to put coaches on west of Julesburg?

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

3. Lieut. Col. C. E. Compton, Fifty-third U. S. Colored Infantry, is hereby detailed as acting assistant inspector-general of the forces under the command of Brig. Gen. John P. Hawkins, U. S. Volunteers. He will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Maj. Gen. F. Steele,
Kenner, La.:

My dispatch of yesterday is hereby modified so as to read Lakeport instead of Hicko Landing as the place of embarkation on Lake Pontchartrain. Besides the steamers Nashua and N. P. Banks, sent to you yesterday, the Belvidere and Peabody, with capacity for 2,200, will be sent you to-day. These steamers, together with those at Lakeport, will, it is supposed, suffice for all your infantry and for the following batteries: Fifteenth Massachusetts, Second Connecticut, Twenty-first and Twenty-sixth New York. Thus all your troops, except the Second Massachusetts, First Indiana, and Seventeenth Ohio Batteries, will be disposed of. The choice of troops to be sent by sea and those to be sent via Lakeport is left to yourself.

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

COLONEL: The Third Brigade, Colonel Kent commanding, and the Twenty-third Iowa, are now en route to Hicko Landing. They number, combined, 2,100 men. Shall I send the Seventy-sixth Illinois also? That regiment will move with 550 men. If transportation can be furnished from the lake I can get them started about 12 o'clock.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

In connection with your telegrams of the 8th and 9th instant, relative to recruiting for the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Cavalry, I am directed to refer you to the letter* of June 10, 1864, to General Rosecrans, under which the regiments should have been organized. That letter did not authorize continuous recruitment from the Missouri State Militia, but contemplated that upon its receipt the entire number of men willing to re-enlist should be ascertained, and they immediately thereafter discharged and re-enlisted; all further re-enlistments then to cease. At this date no further re-enlistments from the Missouri State Militia for the two regiments in question can be authorized, but this will be authority for the superintendent of recruiting service to receive recruits from civil life and thus complete the organizations. Recruits must enlist under existing regulations for one, two, or three years, as they may elect, and for general service wherever required. Please acknowledge this. Let me know present strength of the regiments, respectively, and at what date they will be completed under the conditions herein.

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, February 11, 1865—11 a.m.

Major-General Pope:

Following dispatch received:

Major-General Dodge:

My scouts from west report that Lieutenant-Colonel Collins, with 200 men Eleventh Ohio and Company D, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, fought Indians from 4th to 9th instant at Mud Springs. Indians at one time charged our forces in face of artillery, and were very nearly successful; 2,000 warriors engaged in fight. Our loss 2 killed and 11 wounded; supposed 40 Indians were killed. Beauvais' and Creighton's herds driven off. Indians crossed at Rush Creek, going north. Following from Captain Wilcox, Seventh Iowa, is received from Pole Creek Crossing: "Telegraph poles all, gone for fifteen miles, and one-third wire either gone or so inextricably tangled as to be useless. Seven hundred lodges crossed Pole Creek six miles below Pole Creek Crossing. I go on to repair lines and open circuit. Harris killed and Sergeant Clark, Company D, Seventh Iowa, wounded in Mud Creek battle. I have directed that poles be cut in two and split, so as to continue repairs and replace missing poles."

*See Vol. XXXIV, Part IV, p. 294
Colonel Collins urges necessity of sending more troops west, claiming the posts there are in danger. He says Indians are on L'eau-qui-courir River, sixty miles north.

Respectfully,

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel, Commanding.

I have sent orders through to Colonel Moonlight at Denver to push out and meet Colonel Livingston, using militia temporarily if necessary.

It is essential to the subsistence of the people of Colorado and Idaho that the freight trains for those regions should go through with the earliest grass. It is next to certain that they will not go unless with some authoritative assurance of protection across the plains. It would be well for you to give some public assurance of protection if you can make the necessary arrangements for the purpose by April 1. By whose order was the Third Wisconsin sent to Arkansas?

Commanding officer of the Sixteenth will be in charge of pack-mule train and wagon train, the wagon train to take forty days' rations for the use of his command. On arrival at Julesburg the wagon train will be returned to this depot. Between Forts Leavenworth and Kearny the command will procure forage from citizens on the route, proper receipts given, and report made to depot quartermaster. I respectfully recommend that the telegraph line from this place to Sedalia be repaired and constructed, with an office at Warsaw; also a line from this place to Mount Vernon or Neosho, as the commanding general may deem most expedient. Brigadier-General Sanborn:

I have received information from a female spy that I had employed that the rebels are concentrating their forces, 500 strong, on the Dry Fork of Osage, in Arkansas. Please give me a sufficient number of men to dislodge them, or instructions what course I shall pursue. If I receive no instructions I shall leave in the morning.

Major Moore,
Commanding at Cassville:

I am almost certain that your information in regard to the number of the rebels is incorrect. In any event you will have, with Hopper's new force, enough to whip them. The men will be at Galena to-morrow night. Do the best you possibly can with the horses. The rebels certainly cannot keep 500 horses together any length of time. The detachments understand that you will be in Galena to-morrow night. Citizens from Arkansas have gone down to get their stock out, &c. You will probably meet them.

GLASGOW, February 11, 1865.

General C. B. Fisk:

I have information of some bushwhackers in this county and in Saline, but I am entirely powerless at this point for want of horse equipments. Can we not have a special order from General Dodge for the issue of the saddles at Macon? But yesterday, within six miles of this place, in Saline, a party of six were committing depredations.

COUNCIL GROVE, KANS., February 11, 1865.

Lient. J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

I saw your order for my visiting these southwestern counties and I shall leave in the morning. I have visited Coffey County, and I find that county filled with Indian cattle and ponies, and every town that I passed through I found parties preparing to go to the Indian country for cattle, and I think if there is anything that will make these Indians hostile it is stealing their cattle and ponies. There is a report that there is a party of Texans coming up as soon as warm weather comes. As for stealing, that country is full of thieves and there are more or less horses taken every night. There are parties here at this place fitting out to go to the Indian country for cattle, and I think there ought to be a provost guard here. I think if you could send eight or ten more men it would be sufficient at present.

From your obedient servant,

H. J. TIBBITS,

I have just informed the Overland Mail Company that I am prepared to protect their mail through this department. See that the proper protection is given it from Kearny west to insure its safety.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, February 11, 1865.

Brigadier-General MITCHELL,
Omaha:

Should not the corn you are sending out be pushed through to Cottonwood and Julesburg? We will have to operate from those points.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Brigadier-General Mitchell, Omaha:

All troops going into your district are ordered to report to you by telegraph from Fort Kearny, and to push on to Julesburg, unless they get orders there; and the operations in your district are under your charge. You had better stay at Omaha until we get matters under way, to attend to affairs there. When we get troops out there you can join them if necessary. I keep in direct communication with Colonel Livingston, so as to avoid delay and get posted. Have ordered him to report all news to me at the same time he does to you.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Brigadier-General Mitchell, Omaha:

You need not send any rations from Omaha. I will send all rations needed from here. Send only corn from Omaha, and that should be pushed up the valley. Have your quartermaster report to Colonel Potter daily what he is doing.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Colonel Livingston, Julesburg:

Where is Mud Springs? Where are Colonel Collins' troops stationed? Have any troops come down from North Platte route to the South Platte route? Say to Colonel Collins our posts must be held. As fast as troops can march they will go to your aid, and I will get aid from Denver as soon as I can reach that place.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Colonel Livingston, Fort Rankin:

Send following dispatch through to Colonel Moonlight, at Denver, immediately:

Colonel Moonlight, Commanding District of Colorado:

The Department of Kansas has been attached to my command. You will immediately throw your available force on the road from Denver to Julesburg. If you have not men enough, take militia to hold the route until I can relieve them with troops on the way. Co-operate with Colonel Livingston. Repair telegraph; open communication and hold it open. Plenty of troops are on the road to chastise the Indians, but Denver must hold its part of the line. Let me hear from you.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.
Maj. C. S. Charlot,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of telegram from commanding officer at Fort Riley ordering the Eleventh Kansas Cavalry to Fort Kearny. I have relieved that portion of the regiment on duty at this post (864 men) and ordered Colonel Plumb to proceed to Fort Kearny in compliance with that order. Two companies are on duty at Fort Larned. The regiment is greatly in need of horses, and as I have no other cavalry here and no mules, it is impossible for me to mount the regiment as directed by the general's telegram. Taking this regiment out of the district, together with the Third Wisconsin Cavalry and Ninth Wisconsin Battery, ordered out some time since, leaves the district with less than 600 men for duty, and but poorly mounted. The two companies at Fort Larned I have not relieved yet. Owing to the distance from here it would be impossible to get them here in time to accompany the regiment on the march to Fort Kearny. They are notified to be ready to start, but if they are taken away it will be impossible for me to keep communication open between the States and New Mexico. I send Lieutenant Tappan to Fort Leavenworth to consult with the general commanding and inform him of the condition of the troops of this district.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding District.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
Washington, D.C., February 12, 1865.

Major-General Canby,
New Orleans, La.:

GENERAL: You will perceive from general orders just issued that the Department of Mississippi is limited to that part of the State on the river; that the Department of the Gulf is limited to Louisiana and Texas; that Missouri is placed in General Pope's military division; that the Department of the Cumberland includes all of the State of Tennessee, and such parts of Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi as may be occupied by General Thomas' command. The posts of Memphis, Columbus, &c., will, however, still obey such orders for movements as you may issue for the movement of troops in the defense of the Mississippi River. The posts in West Florida, South Alabama, and South Mississippi will report direct to you, as you requested. General Grant thinks that if you do not take the field yourself, A. J. Smith or Steele should be assigned to the command of the expedition. Granger might be given the general command of the Gulf posts east of New Orleans. I rather think A. J. Smith is the best man for active operations in the field. Active and energetic staff officers will be required to organize and supply the army of operation. General Thomas will remount his cavalry and organize his army for a southern movement as early as the season will permit. General Grierson has been selected by General Grant to command the cavalry of your expedition. He has orders to report to you for that purpose.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., February 12, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, &c., Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to recommend that Brig. Gens. George L. Andrews and C. C. Andrews may be appointed major-generals of volunteers. The services, character, and qualifications of these officers have impressed me so favorably that I make this recommendation in the hope that by their promotion I may be able to assign them to more important commands than they are entitled to by their present rank.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Special Orders,
No. 70.

1. By direction of the President, Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. H. Grierson, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty according to his brevet rank in the Military Division of West Mississippi. He will proceed without delay to New Orleans, La., and report in person to Major-General Canby, commanding, for assignment to the command of the cavalry in the Military Division of West Mississippi organized for operations in the field.

By command of Lieutenant-General Grant:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders,
No. 43.

1. The following named regiments are hereby relieved from duty in the city of New Orleans and will be sent to Dauphin Island, Ala., to report on arrival to Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger, U. S. Volunteers, viz: Seventh Vermont Infantry, Seventy-seventh Illinois Infantry, Ninety-first Illinois Infantry. The commanding general Department of the Gulf will issue the necessary orders.

2. The troops composing the District of West Florida and South Alabama, and the additional forces now being collected within the limits of that command, are hereby designated for service in the field and will, in accordance with General Orders, No. 7, series of 1864, from these headquarters, "report direct to the major-general commanding the division in all that relates to their organization, discipline, equipment, and movements. These reports will be in addition to the customary reports to the headquarters of the command from which these troops are or may be drawn, which will be continued while they are serving within the limits of those commands."
3. The following organization of the Reserve Corps of the Military Division of West Mississippi is hereby announced:

4. Lieut. Col. L. H. Whittlesey, Eleventh Wisconsin Volunteers, is hereby relieved from duty as assistant provost-marshal-general of the division, and will report to Maj. Gen. F. Steele, U. S. Volunteers, for assignment to duty as assistant inspector-general of the forces under his command.

5. Capt. Henry M. Lazelle, Eighth U. S. Infantry, is hereby relieved from duty as acting assistant inspector-general of U. S. forces at Kenner, La., and is appointed assistant provost-marshal-general of this division. He will report accordingly to the provost-marshal-general without delay.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

KENNERVILLE, LA., February 12, 1865.

(Maj. Gen. F. STEELE, or
Colonel CHRISTENSEN:

The Belvidere and Peabody will take the Twenty-ninth Illinois, Thirty-seventh Illinois, and Twentieth Iowa, together with the remaining six companies of the Seventy-sixth Illinois and the transportation of Lawler's brigade, which the Nathaniel P. Banks could not carry. This will leave at this post the Fifteenth Massachusetts and Twenty-sixth New York Batteries and the Ninety-sixth Ohio Infantry.

Special Orders, No. 46.

HDQRS. SOUTHERN DIV. OF LOUISIANA,

New Orleans, La., February 12, 1865.

So much of paragraph 1 of Special Orders, No. 44, current series, from these headquarters, as directed the Seventh Vermont Veteran Volunteers to take post at Camp Parapet is hereby revoked. Colonel Holbrook will hold his regiment in readiness to immediately take the field. The Sixth Minnesota Volunteers will retain their present quarters until the Seventh Vermont moves. They will, however, relieve their guards to-morrow at guard mounting.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
Post Napoleonville, February 12, 1865.

Capt. Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following statement: The roads about this place are mostly plantation roads running out from Bayou La Fourche at right angles. There is one main road on all plantations running back to their sugar house and cabins. All the roads are connected by another that passes in rear of the plantations. Then there are a great many cross-roads. This map is too contracted to represent anything except the general lay of the land and general position. The Bayou Saint Vincent road, as represented upon this map, is incorrect. This road, instead of leading direct to Lake Verret, as represented upon the map, leads directly to Grand Bayou (near the mouth). The road follows the bayou until within about two miles of Grand Bayou, when it strikes off at right angles direct to the lake. The road leading from Bayou Saint Vincent to the lower fork of the Doctor Ford road passes through the plantations of White man, Pugh, Colonel Pugh, and others. This is not the only road. It is not necessary for cavalry to pass upon any of the main roads; they can pass from plantation to plantation in the rear or through the center. In the woods and swamps cavalry can pass in many places upon the oak ridges on the bank of the bayons. Almost all small bayous have a ridge on one side or the other. Above Paincourtville there are two roads represented upon the map leading direct to Grand Bayou. It is easy, however, to pass in a dozen places between these two points through plantations back to Brulé Olivia, situated between these two roads, and then to pass to either of the main roads. A column of cavalry can pass from Grand Bayou at Doctor Ford's to Labadieville, four or five miles in rear of Napoleonville. It is easy to ford Bayou Saint Vincent or the canal. I have marked out a few roads upon the map pursuant to orders. The cavalry at this post has passed upon all of them. Mounted men can, with a guide and very little trouble, pass, if it is necessary, in almost any direction excepting in the deep swamps, which are at present quite full of water.

I have the honor to be, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. R. DAVIS,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,

Little Rock, February 12, 1865—10.35 a.m.

Brigadier-General CLAYTON,

Pine Bluff:

Colonel Risdon, commanding at Saint Charles, reports a rebel force of about 400 cavalry near Red Post, north of the Arkansas River. The force is probably less than this number. Keep advised of their movement if possible. General McGinnis will be advised.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

PINE BLUFF, February 12, 1865.

Major LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The country between the Arkansas River and White River is infested by small bands, mostly guerrillas. If they were all consolidated they would not amount to 200 men. I am laying down my pontoon bridge, and when completed I thought of scouring the country between Bayou Meto and the Arkansas, their principal rendezvous. If a preconcerted movement could be made from Brownsville, Saint Charles, and the mouth of White River at the same time I think they could be entirely broken up. In case a movement of this kind should be made, the cavalry from this post should scout between Bayou Meto and the river north of this post and to the mouth of Bayou Meto. The cavalry from Brownsville should at the same time scour the country between Bayou Meto and Wabbaseca Bayou. The cavalry from Saint Charles could cross the prairie in the night and scout up and down the north side of Bayou Meto, to intercept the enemy in case they should attempt an escape by swimming that bayou. The cavalry from the mouth of the river could scout up the north side of the Arkansas by Arkansas Post to the mouth of Bayou Meto, and up the same. I think it very necessary that these bands should be destroyed. The country is very favorable for their operations, and if they are allowed to accumulate in numbers they will very probably give us much annoyance.

POWELL CLAYTON,
Brigadier-General.
Col. O. C. Risdon, Saint Charles:
We have no cavalry force out in direction of Red Post. Advise General McGinnis of this party at your first opportunity. General Clayton, commanding at Pine Bluff, is advised from these headquarters.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, February 12, 1865—12.30 p.m.
Major-General Pope, Saint Louis, Mo.:
I understand that provost-marshal in different parts of Missouri are assuming to decide that the conditions of bonds are forfeited, and thereupon are seizing and selling property to pay damages. This, if true, is both outrageous and ridiculous. Do not allow it. The courts, and not provost-marshal, are to decide such questions only when military necessity makes an exception. Also excuse John Eaton, of Clay County, and Wesley Martin, of Platte, from being sent South, and let them go East, if anywhere.

Brig. Gen. MARCELLUS M. CROCKER, U. S. Volunteers,
Commanding at Fort Sumner, N. Mex.:

GENERAL: Inclosed herewith please find Special Orders, No. 477, series of 1864,1 from the headquarters of the Army, ordering you to report in person without delay to the commanding general Army of the Cumberland for assignment to duty. I regret very deeply on my own account, and on account of the public service in this department, that you have been ordered away. From the delicate state of your health when I saw you early in January last it may be possible that until the weather moderates you will not be able to travel. In this case please let me know what you desire to do. If you are able to go you can at once make your arrangements and proceed to Fort Union or come to Santa Fe. You cannot, of course, leave until the court is over for the trial of Captain Morton, which will not, it is presumed, last over a day or two after you receive this letter. I feel very sorry to have you go, general, and I shall always remember you and the efficient and zealous service you have rendered here with pleasure and gratitude.

Very sincerely, your friend,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY,
Commanding Military Division of West Mississippi:

GENERAL: A copy of your letter to the Secretary of War pointing out the prejudice to the service which will necessarily follow the opening of trade with the States in rebellion has been submitted to me. You will perceive that paragraph IV of executive orders of September 24, 1864, leaves a wide discretion to military commanders in the matter of trade with these States. Entertaining the same views expressed in your letter, I have put a stop to supplies going out through Norfolk, Va., to Lee's army. In this I have been sustained by the President and the Secretary of War, eliciting from the latter the inclosed telegraphic dispatch.2 Under this authority I authorize you to restrict trade and the bringing out of Southern products within the limits of your command as you think will best secure the interests of the public service. I have always believed that entire non-intercourse with "people in rebellion" would prove the most speedy way to bring about a permanent peace. This view has been expressed by me officially over and over again. I know that people who do not serve with armies in the field naturally think the more trade we have the better able we will be to support the expenses of Government. Speculators who have trade permits, universally a worse class of people with an army than the worst rebels, falling within our lines, do all they can to stimulate this opinion. Make your own orders governing this matter, basing them upon paragraph V of executive orders of September 24, 1864, and upon the authority here given. It may be well for you to authorize a certain amount of trade within our lines, and also the bringing out of Southern products in rear of positions permanently held by us. This, however, I do not direct.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 13, 1865.
(Received 11.10 p. m. 19th.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.:

Your telegram of the 7th has just been received. I have given corps organization to the reserve force of the division, 18,000 effective infantry, and will make up General A. J. Smith's forces to the same strength. This, with a proper proportion of artillery, will make an efficient and manageable corps. The details of organization will be reported for the approval of the President. Can I employ Maj. Gen. W. F. Smith if General Gillmore should not return?

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 13, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I was anxious to have Steele as a corps commander, but the rank determines the question, and Granger is more active in organization and administration than Steele, and this last is an important feature in the present instance, where the troops have been gathered up hastily from three different departments. I would like to get rid of two or three brigadiers, very good brigade commanders, but in the way of more competent division commanders.

Very truly, yours, &c.,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 44.
HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 13, 1865.

4. Brig. Gen. George L. Andrews, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby relieved from the command of the District of Baton Rouge and Port Hudson, and will report without delay to these headquarters for assignment to duty in the field.
5. Capt. Richard Penney, assistant quartermaster of volunteers, is hereby relieved from duty in the District of Vicksburg, and will proceed without delay to this city and report for orders to the chief quartermaster of the division.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., February 13, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 13th day of February, 1865: A communication from Lieut. L. E. Granger, Morganza, February 6, 1865, states that during a recent expedition under Colonel Chrysler, of the Second New York Cavalry, five prisoners were captured, from whom he gathers that Colonel Scott is in command of three regiments of Louisiana cavalry, well mounted, well armed, and well clothed. One of the prisoners states that plenty of supplies are obtained from Baton Rouge. Men belonging to Scott's command have been in Baton Rouge with cotton, which they sold. Another prisoner states that in conversation with Collins, commanding a guerrilla party, after his attack upon the pickets at Morganza, Collins said he had taken no negro prisoners, but had captured two white prisoners, whom he had sent to Alexandria. A communication from Lieut. J. M. Reeds, Hannibal, Mo., February 2, 1865, states that there are strong indications of trouble in Missouri during the coming season. Thinks that bushwhackers are gathering in Illinois and Iowa to invade the State. Recommends that detectives be sent to those States, particularly to cities in Illinois on the Mississippi River. A communication from Maj. George Webster, Pass Manchac, La., February 12, mentions a rumor to the effect that a regiment of Arkansas troops is at Liberty, Miss.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF VICKSBUG,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 13, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report for the information of the major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi that the advance of General Thomas' army has arrived at this place and is going into camp. Three thousand have arrived. Three thousand will be down to-night and balance to-morrow, in the opinion of the commanding officer, Colonel Moore. I inclose you a slip from rebel paper.

Your obedient servant,

M. L. SMITH,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
TELEGRAPHIC REPORTS OF THE PRESS ASSOCIATION.

Richmond, February 5, 1865.—The commissioners returned from Fortress Monroe last night. They had an interview with Lincoln and Seward, and were informed substantially that peace could only be obtained by unconditional submission to the Constitution and laws of the United States, and that the slavery question had been disposed of by action of the Federal Congress adopting the proposed amendment of the Constitution abolishing slavery in the United States. It is understood an official statement from the commissioners will be laid before Congress to-morrow. The New York World of the 31st occupied a page with the proceedings of the board of supervisors relative to the approaching draft in that city, the quota having been increased from 10,000 to 21,000. Several of the supervisors intimated that another riot is inevitable if the draft is enforced. The World says: "We counsel the people of this city to restrain their indignant feelings, although we well know they are intensely excited." The draft takes place on the 15th. Another committee will be sent to Washington to urge a reduction of the quota.

Petersburg, February 5.—The enemy demonstrated heavily on our right to-day. Our pickets in General Gordon's front were driven in early this morning, and a portion of the enemy's force reached the Vaughan road and crossed Hatcher's Run. Some skirmishing has occurred, but there has been no engagement as yet. The object of this movement is not developed. The enemy's trains have been running incessantly for the last two nights, supposed to be conveying troops. From 7 to 11 o'clock last night the heaviest cannonade that has occurred for weeks took place on our left, caused by the enemy shelling our Chesterfield works. No casualties on our side.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 41.

3. In compliance with orders from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi the following-named regiments are hereby relieved from duty in the Defenses of New Orleans and will be sent to Dauphin Island, Ala., to report on arrival to Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger, U. S. Volunteers, viz: Seventh Vermont Infantry, Seventy-seventh Illinois Infantry, Ninety-first Illinois Infantry. General Sherman is authorized to delay for an interval of two days between the movement of each regiment to enable him to make any arrangements rendered necessary by their departure.

6. Brig. Gen. G. L. Andrews is relieved from duty in the Department of the Gulf and ordered to report in person as soon as practicable, and by letter at once, to headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi for assignment to duty. General Orders, No. 169, series of 1864, and Special Orders, No. 282, extract 11, of 1864, from these headquarters are hereby revoked. All officers and men of U. S. Colored Troops on detached service pertaining to the organization of the corps as prescribed in the above-mentioned orders are hereby relieved and will at once rejoin their respective regiments.
9. Col. F. A. Starring, assistant provost-marshal-general, Department of the Gulf, will take charge of the provost-marshal-general's office until further orders.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

J. C. STONE,

Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., February 13, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,

Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

GENERAL: There is a deep-seated but very natural anxiety throughout this State on the subject of Sterling Price's movements, and there seems a conviction on the part of the people that he proposes to make another raid into Missouri this spring with a larger force than last year. Of course as you are much nearer to his present position, you have much better means of information concerning these matters than we, and I would be greatly obliged to you therefore if you will keep me advised of anything important concerning such a movement toward Missouri as frequently as you think necessary. I will be glad also if you will instruct the commanding officer at Fort Smith to communicate with me by telegraph and send me all the information on the subject referred to which he may acquire. It is believed impossible for Price to make any movement toward Missouri without its being known long in advance by spies or other means of information at your command in Arkansas, and we shall therefore trust largely to you for timely information on the subject. I would be glad also to know, if not inconsistent with orders, what are the forces at Fort Smith and Little Rock, and how much opposition you could make to any movement of the enemy in force toward Missouri. As all of their organized forces which can be devoted to an invasion of this State are now south of Arkansas River, they must cross that stream in the face of the forces under your command in any movement north, and of course it is very desirable that I should know at as early a moment as possible after such a movement is begun precisely the amount of opposition it will meet on Arkansas or White River.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,

Major-General, Commanding Division.

GENERAL ORDERS, Hdqrs. First Div., 7th Army Corps,

Capt. Gustave Stange, Light Battery E, Second Missouri Artillery Volunteers, is, at his own request, hereby relieved from duty as chief of artillery of this division and will resume command of his battery. In relieving Captain Stange the brigadier-general commanding bears cheerful testimony to his worth as an officer and a gentleman, and desires to assure him that his prompt and careful execution of every trust will be held in grateful remembrance.

F. SALOMON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
Major-General Reynolds,
Commanding Department of Arkansas:

General: In obedience to your request for my opinion as to the probable number of troops required to hold the post of Fort Smith and its dependencies, I have the honor to state that if Forts Nos. 2 and 4 (Fort Smith) are remounted with the guns taken out under the previous order of evacuation of that post that the troops, consisting of the First Regiment Arkansas Cavalry (either mounted or dismounted), First and Second Regiments Arkansas Infantry, and First Arkansas Battery, will be sufficient for the purpose of garrisoning the posts of Fort Smith, Van Buren, and Fayetteville; two companies stationed at Van Buren, and four at Fayetteville.

I recommend that the 200 men in Alton waiting decision of case at Washington, known as galvanized Yankees, together with those conscripts who enlisted in Union regiments after being captured by us, be formed into a battalion and sent to me. I have no doubt that the galvanized Yankees will do good service. Government does not appear to want to send them back to their regiments.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 13, 1865.

Hon. Edwin M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:

Sir: In presenting the inclosed letters from His Excellency Governor Fletcher and Major-General Dodge,* I also present abstracts of troops serving in the Department of the Missouri during last summer and fall.† It may be seen from these that in June, July, and August

* See Fletcher to Stanton, January 29, and Dodge to Stanton, January 31, pp. 678, 694.
† See pp. 723, 724.
last there were an aggregate of from 18,000 to 19,000 U. S. volunteers and Missouri State Militia before the arrival of any of the troops sent to the State to operate against Price, and that during those months there were also from 4,000 to 5,000 enrolled militia on duty, making a grand total of from 22,000 to 24,000. I feel safe in saying that the guerrilla warfare will be at least as general and as troublesome this year as it was last, and that there will be need of as many troops as were there then. The most of them should be cavalry, because infantry are useless to operate against guerrillas in that country. A large part of the quota of the State under the pending draft can be made up by enlistments in new cavalry regiments for service in the State for one year. The Missouri State Militia cavalry, of whom there are near 10,000 just going out, are the best guerrilla hunters in the West, and will enlist in such service, but will not go into infantry or the general service. They are not subject to draft, but each one is worth more for that service than three average drafted men. I am sure it will not do to rely much on the Enrolled Missouri Militia to protect the people against guerrillas. The State is too poor to pay them, and they are too poor to serve without pay. If the General Government does not give the loyal people in the counties infested by guerrillas at least as much protection as they had last year, the most of them will remove their families from those districts. Then, I think the returned soldiers and other Union men will form bands and kill off or drive out the resident rebels, sympathizers, and neutrals.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, THOMAS EWING, JR., Brigadier-General.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Comdg. Dept. of the Missouri, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

Dispatch received. Have only 100 men on duty on line. Proclaimed martial law on 6th instant. Called for 360 mounted militia; will have them this week. Am embarrassed by district lines; extends north-west about forty miles. Territory of Colorado should be district. Am expected to protect this people out of my district 150 miles. Herefore no co-operation with troops whose duty it was to do the work. Julesburg is in Colorado Territory. Will open the route and keep it open with militia, but it goes hard. What is department called? Where is headquarters? Will send history of affairs by first mail.

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Fort Leavenworth, February 13, 1865.

Colonel MOONLIGHT,

Denver:

What are your district lines? In opening communication or driving off Indians no attention should be paid to lines. General Mitchell and Colonel Livingston have been instructed to co-operate with you. What posts besides Julesburg are in Colorado that are not under your orders? Telegraph me all you know about the Indians.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Headquarters Department of the Missouri, Fort Leavenworth, February 13, 1865.

Colonel Moonlight, Denver

Send me full report of matters in your district. Where are your troops stationed? What are you doing? What Indians are near you or on your part of the line?

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Denver, February 13, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,

Comdg. Dept. of the Missouri, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

Stations of troops: Fort Lyon, escorting stages and protecting Santa Fé route; Camp Fillmore, on Arkansas River, protecting settlements; Fort Garland, on Arkansas River, in south part of Territory; at Denver, provost guard; at Living Spring (forty miles from Denver), protecting Overland route; at Junction (100 miles), at Valley Station, (160 miles), a few escorting trains and coaches. Aggregate for duty, 460. Indians near Junction, Valley Station, and 100 miles eastward, about 15,000 on headwaters of Smoky Hill. Am raising militia force by sheer force. On hand: Subsistence plenty; quartermaster's department, no clothing or blankets; destitute of transportation; not a dollar in money. Fort Collins, two companies; Camp Latham detachments, seventy miles from Denver, not in my district. Junction and Valley Stations, &c., not in my district. I am expected to protect these points on Overland route with no troops, while they are in General Mitchell's district with troops. No depredations committed in my district; all in General Mitchell's. This people look to me for opening route; look to me for everything. Send me men and means. You shall not have to complain of inactivity or imbecility. Indians are desperate; threaten Southern line, which also looks to me for help. Mail leaves Thursday. Have written you complete history of affairs.*

T. Moonlight, Colonel.

Headquarters District of Colorado, Denver, February 13, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,

Comdg. Dept. of the Missouri, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

General: The condition of military affairs in this Territory for the last three months has caused quite a stir at home and a very great commotion abroad, and justly so. To enable you to properly appreciate the wants and necessities of this people, so as to apply a remedy, to arrive at a desirable conclusion as to the causes of existing hostilities on the part of the Indians, to define my position as district commander, and to lay before you the many difficulties and embarrassments which I have had to contend against since assuming command, as well as to inform you of the steps taken and the means provided for carrying out the behests of the Government and protection of this Territory, I deem it my duty, first duty, to give you a concise history of events which may be relied upon for present information and future guidance. Had

* See next, post.
I been possessed of certain facts from reliable sources when I assumed command of this district on the 4th of January, but a little over a month ago, it might have been possible to arrange matters so as to have fended off part, at least, of the present troubles, which will have (if not, indeed, already) one good effect, viz, to change the policy of the Government respecting the treatment of the Indians on the plains. Whatever may have been the origin of the present difficulties, whether the white men or the red were the aggressors matters not now. We are in every respect the superior of the Indians, and can afford to wage a war of their own choosing, even to extermination. When I assumed command of this district there were but about 200 men all told, and they were scattered over an area of 300 miles, and yet with this command I was expected to protect the route from Denver to Julesburg, a distance of 190 miles, while only 40 of the 200 soldiers were on that line, stationed forty miles from Denver. The balance were on the Arkansas River and at Fort Garland. My district extends about sixty miles on the Overland route from Denver, and yet I am called upon to protect as far as Julesburg, in the northeast corner of Colorado Territory, with no troops at my command, while on the north there are plenty, as also from Julesburg to Kearny, which, in my opinion from what I have seen of them and heard from reliable sources, had better be sent to some new field of operations. I have special reference to the stations from Kearny to Julesburg. I cannot say who is to blame for this, but it is not the less true. I see every reason why the District of Colorado should embrace the Territory, and none for it being as it now stands defined. Fort Lyon was not in my command when I arrived here, and has but lately been added, which gives me about 250 more effective men in the district, but not for operations on the Overland route, as they are needed in the southern portion of the Territory to protect the Santa Fé route. About the end of December, 1864, the Third Regiment Colorado Cavalry (100-days' men) were mustered out of service, thus denuding the district of troops, and at a time, too, when the Indians had suffered an overwhelming defeat or been subjected to a wholesale massacre at the hands of Colonel Chivington, then commanding district (I give you these distinctions, as the people here are divided on the question); at a time when the Indians were burning for revenge on the white men, women, and children, in retaliation for the same killed by Colonel Chivington commanding (for it is useless to hide this fact); at a time when the severity of the winter prevented the making of a campaign with any hope of success on our side, even had the troops been at my command. In view of these facts, and knowing as he did that the Territory would be exposed to Indian assaults and depredations while denuded of troops, I question much the policy and propriety of the Sand Creek battle fought by Colonel Chivington on the 29th of November, 1864. This matter is now under investigation by a commission appointed under instructions from Major-General Curtis, so that in course of time it will speak for itself.

After having become possessed of all these facts I looked around to see what could be done in the premises to save this country. I first made a statement to Major-General Curtis (which, by the way, has never been acknowledged), and impressed upon him the necessity for making certain changes and of hurrying out re-enforcements. Finding no response or relief from that quarter, I next called upon the governor regarding the turning out of the militia, which was deemed impracticable owing to the fact that the law has so many defects. I then suggested to the legislature, which was in session, the propriety of amending the militia law, but no answer came or action taken. In consultation with the governor and other prominent men of the Territory it was deemed most expedient and best to urge the passage of a bill issuing Territorial bonds which would be cashed at par by moneyed men, and the same used to pay volunteers a bounty for three months' service and purchase horses on which to mount them (for there are none in the quartermaster's hands, nor any money to purchase them with), and these men were to be placed under my command and used in opening and keeping open the Overland Stage Route. The house and council could not agree on this bill; so after over two weeks' delay and no good resulting from their action, I was compelled to proclaim martial law, shut up all houses of business, stop all labor and traffic, and keep matters so until they furnished me 360 mounted men, which I would arm and equip. These men are now being raised, and I expect by the 20th to have the most of them in the field. My position has been and is anything but a pleasant one. Isolated from all support, a stranger in the land, cut off from all communication, threatened and attacked by hostile Indians, being in a community divided against itself, and compelled to proclaim martial law, with not a man at my back to enforce obedience to the same; yet I have succeeded by first stirring up the public mind and preparing it for the result which had to follow, unless I chose to back down and yield my authority, which no living soldier will do. I inclose for your information on this subject copies of a correspondence between myself, the governor, and the legislature on these troubles, also an article* from the Journal, a newspaper in the mountains, which will define to you my position and show you what I have had to contend with. I made it my business to visit the mountains officially on the very day when excitement was at the highest pitch; on the day but after that article was written. I addressed a meeting of about 1,500 citizens in which I pointed out to them at whose door the blame lay, the duties they owed themselves and the Government, and my reasons for proclaiming martial law. I was unanimously sustained, and that night 120 men were sworn in for three months. This was the quota required by the governor to fill my call. I inclose you a copy of the order establishing martial law, as also the governor's call in accordance therewith. To assert your authority here in trying cases is very different from asserting it in any other portion of the Union. Men of influence and wealth in the East are interested to a very great amount in the mining companies, so that they readily obtain an official ear in Washington to a one-sided story, which invariably works injustice to those in authority and responsible. I therefore respectfully ask, general, that you forward this, or a copy, to Washington that I may stand right on the record. I am not afraid to assume any responsibility commensurate with the surrounding circumstances and which is for the good of the service, but I am afraid of the snake-like winding of hypocrisy, backed by a groveling, sensual desire. If men will adhere to truth I will cheerfully abide every issue.

In the hope this will prove satisfactory and of use to you in your administration, and satisfy your mind regarding my position and the steps I have taken in the premises, I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, January 7, 1865.

Hon. Samuel H. Elbert:

Sir: As matters now stand in this district (having in a manner no troops), there is great danger of being overrun by the Indians. Troops could at the present time be raised better than at any other time, and now is the time we require them. Will you, as acting governor, communicate with the authorities on the subject (the governor being in Washington) to obtain this authority? It is of immense importance to the Territory and the only way to receive speedy relief from the danger surrounding and prevent starvation. I submit this for your consideration and action, and my name may be used by you in this connection in your dispatches.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., January 8, 1865.

Hon. S. H. Elbert, Secretary and Acting Governor:

Sir: Owing to the depredations of Indians we are at present shut out from telegraphic communications with the east, and therefore beyond the reach of immediate support from any quarter, leaving us to ourselves to act in the premises. Should the troubles continue I will be constrained to call on the able-bodied men to muster for the protection of the line of transportation. If you have any special views on the subject I would be pleased to have them.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, January 9, 1865.

Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Colorado City, Colo. Ter.:

Gentlemen: Learning that the legislative body of Colorado Territory is now in session, I respectfully suggest for your consideration the propriety of immediately reorganizing the militia law. Your country is in a manner isolated from the balance of the Federal Government, on which you depend for supplies. Your line of transportation is now inoperative, and it devolves upon you, the representatives of the people, to take a step in a direction that will insure you at least an active and efficient militia force to guard over your interests. As matters now stand, the militia must be called out sooner or later, and I make these suggestions that there may be no misunderstanding between the civil and military. Gentlemen, pardon my intrusion; I mean it for your good.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,

Denver, January 17, 1865.

Hon. S. H. Elbert,

Acting Governor Colorado Territory:

SIR: By reason of the scarcity of troops in this district our natural enemies, the Indians, have possessed themselves of our lines of communication. They have burned ranches, killed innocent women and children, destroyed Government property wherever it was found, driven off the stage stock, killed the drivers and passengers traveling on the coaches; in short, they are making it a war of extermination. We may look in vain for such timely military assistance as will protect the lives and property of settlers, nor can we hope for an eastern communication this winter unless the citizens of the Territory band themselves together in a military organization and spring to arms at your call as chief executive. The blood of the innocent and unoffending martyrs cries aloud for vengeance, and starvation starest in the face the living. You nor I cannot longer remain inactive and be considered guiltless. It devolves upon the militia as matters now stand to open the Overland route and keep it open until troops can be had from the east to make war on these savages of the plains until there remains not a vestige of their originality. On behalf of the General Government (and on my own responsibility, trusting to the justice of the cause for my own protection) I will furnish carbines to the first mounted and accepted company and rifled weapons of improved pattern to all the balance; also rations for the same as U. S. troops, and forage for the animals, with the proper allowance of transportation, and also horse equipments. My scouts inform me that the Indians' spies are now prowling around the very skirts of this place, so that in addition to your call for militia for field service the city companies should at once be placed on a war footing, having daily drills, with appointed places of rendezvous, that we may not be caught napping.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

D. H. NICHOLLS,
Chairman of Committee on Military Affairs:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of yesterday, from Golden City, making inquiries as to the number of troops in this district, and the disposition made of them. I will cheerfully give you the desired information. At Fort Lyon, which has lately been placed in my district, there are about 300 men. The mustering officer, Capt. J. C. Anderson, has but returned after completing the organization of the First Regiment by consolidating it into six maximum companies. About forty men are at Fort Garland, but these now will be increased to 100. About forty men are at Camp Fillmore, but these will be increased to 100 also, as companies will be stationed together at posts so remote. One company will be stationed here, of 100 men, in place of the stragglers now doing duty. One company will be divided and stationed at Bijou Basin and Living Springs. This leaves only two companies at Fort Lyon. In addition to these there are about seventy-five recruits of the Second Colorado. Part of them are now at or near Junction and the balance will join in a few days. There are about sixty men now at Valley Station, but these must be changed, owing to the new organization. There are about 500 men, all told, for duty scattered from Fort Lyon, via Garland, Fillmore, Denver and en route to Valley Station, a distance of about 450 miles. The committee will see from this that so widely spread are the troops that even in a case of emergency it would not be possible to get together more than 200 men in thirty-six hours.

Trusting this may be of service to you in your proceedings, I remain,
very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, January 31, 1865.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Golden City:

SIR: I have been looking eagerly and waiting patiently for the passage of the bill which was designed to relieve the people of this Territory from the ravages of the Indians. That bill was introduced at my suggestion as the most feasible of all plans to raise troops rapidly and voluntarily for the opening of the Overland route and the keeping of it open until succor could arrive from the States. The Indians are every day becoming more desperate, and to-day there stands not a ranch out of the many that were between Valley Station and Julesburg, and but very few on this side, and all since the introduction of that bill. I trusted implicitly in the patriotism and fidelity of the legislature, and that their wisdom and judgment would at once foresee the necessity of taking steps to defend their homes, the little ones, and the property of the people whom they represent. Am I mistaken? God forbid! Yet every indication of late seems to blight my fondest hopes.
I cannot longer await the action of your honorable body, for this night's dispatches from Junction inform me that about 3,000 Indians are marching up the Platte on both sides. Unless the legislature within forty-eight hours does something to relieve suffering humanity and save this country from ruin and devastation, I will be compelled, much against my will, to proclaim martial law, shut up all houses of business, and force every man able to bear arms into the ranks and send them out to protect their brethren, kill off the Indians, and establish permanent communication with the east. I cannot quietly look on and perform my duty to this people, my country, and my God. I have weighed this matter well in my own mind, and what I have stated is my firm resolve, with a lingering hope that your honorable body will yet and immediately save this Territory from destruction and themselves from the indignation of an infuriated people.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 7.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, February 4, 1865.

Hon. Speaker House of Representatives,
Golden City, Colo. Ter.:

Dear Sir: I send this communication by special messenger and respectfully ask that an answer to this, as well as that of January 31 ultimo, be returned. Time passes and the danger increases, hence the urgency of my request. I have been informed from various sources that a portion of the House took exceptions to my letter of the 31st of January, as being threatening and coercive in its tone. Permit me to say that nothing was farther from my mind or intention. Liberty is a boon I prize too highly to willfully deprive others of its blessings, and the course that I fear I must pursue for the salvation of this people is forced upon me by a combination of circumstances which, in my humble opinion, the legislature might within the past two weeks have scattered to the winds. This they have not done, therefore I must do something. On invitation of your honorable body and on the speaker's stand in their presence did I make known my feelings on this Indian question. There I urged the passage of that bill and there I told them that I was opposed to martial law. My acts have not belied my words, but the time has come when "patience ceases to be a virtue," and when inactivity is a willful "dereliction of duty." So far I have been patient in the extreme, though not inactive. I have nothing to retract in my letter of January 31, but will adhere closely to my decision. I may err in addressing the House and not the Council. Should such be the case it must be attributed to my ignorance of parliamentary rules, for I supposed that a measure of this kind would be acted upon in joint ballot.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

[Enclosure No. 8.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., February 6, 1865.

Hon. E. T. HOLLAND,
Chairman Military Committee:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 4th instant (in behalf of the House of which you are an honorable member), in which I am informed that the bill authorizing the issuing of $200,000 bonds for the purpose of mounting the militia called for, paying the bounty, &c., was not likely to pass, and also that a bill was likely to pass (superseding the "bond bill") giving bounties to men who would enlist in the two Colorado regiments now in the field, and also that it had been represented to the House, as coming from me, that a sufficient number of men could be obtained in this way, so as to avoid the necessity of proclaiming martial law. In reply I would state that I am very sorry the "bond bill" did not pass over two weeks ago, for to my mind it was the surest and most honorable way that men could be raised and horses procured. I have never stated that a sufficient number of men could be enlisted for the old regiments so as to meet the exigencies of the case; and even could these men be persuaded to enlist I have not at present the horses on which to mount them. I should be pleased to see a bill pass authorizing the payment of a liberal bounty to recruits for the First and Second Colorado Regiments, for I think the regiments might be recruited up to the maximum; but I am sorry to say that such a bill at this late hour would not meet the necessities of the times. Men and horses must be had immediately, or else we must yield ourselves living sacrifices to inhuman savages. And who of us all are prepared to do this! I beg of you not to bury the bounty bill because of the lateness of the hour which gave it birth, for in my estimation it will be of great assistance and good. I am more than sorry that I have now no other alternative but to proclaim martial law and suspend all business until a sufficient number of men (mounted) are had to open the Overland route and protect the frontier settlers of the Territory. When I modified martial law as it existed under the former district commander I never expected to be compelled to restore it with renewed severity.

Accept my thanks for your courtesy, and believe me, with esteem and respect, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

FORT RANKIN, February 13, 1865.

Colonel Moonlight:

No portion of my district includes any portion of Colorado, as I understand it. I will put a part of a squadron at or near Harlows rauch. Do you expect me to take charge as far as Junction?

LIVINGSTON.

DENVER, February 13, 1865.

Colonel LIVINGSTON,
Fort Rankin:

The entire line from Julesburg to this side Junction is not in my district. Have called for 300 mounted militia to open route to Julesburg. Expect help and co-operation from you as far as Valley Station at least. Have only about 100 volunteers on line. No more to send at present.

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., February 14, 1865.

Brig. Gen. C. BUSSEY,
Comdg. Third Div., Seventh Army Corps, Fort Smith, Ark.:

GENERAL: It has been represented to these headquarters by the governor and other State officers of Arkansas and by deputations of loyal citizens who reside in the vicinity of the posts of your command that there are several hundred families within the above limits who have the will and are very desirous to cultivate their lands, and many, if not all, of whom must, without assistance from the Government, be either rendered entirely destitute or be forced to leave the State. These people further represent that they can protect themselves against guerrillas and robbers if encouraged by the U.S. authorities so to do. Therefore you will authorize Capt. George E. Miller to raise a company of 100 men, and on the roll being presented to and approved by you they will be permitted to bear arms. Other companies may be formed, if you deem proper, after the first one shall have been filled up. These companies are to be composed of men whose occupation is farming and not soldiering. The organization herein authorized will be officered by the governor of Arkansas. They are for local defense against guerrillas and other outlaws, and for the protection of their own members and others engaged in agriculture. They will receive no pay or subsistence from the Government for such services. The commanding officers of companies will act under the advice and general direction of the commanding officer at Fort Smith. You are authorized to sell for cash, and at 50 per cent. advance on cost, subsistence stores and corn to loyal families in the vicinity of the posts in your command, provided such families are engaged in farming. This indulgence is expected to aid them until they can mature a crop. Oats in limited quantities may also be included in these sales. Families that are not engaged in any occupation whereby they do, or very soon will, support themselves will be sent as fast as opportunity offers to Little Rock. The number of destitute persons fed in the vicinity of the posts of your command must be as small as possible, and the issue of provisions to such persons will cease entirely at the earliest moment practicable. The total number of persons who will probably require the assistance herein provided for, it is represented, will not, at the outside, exceed 1,000. Civil officers of the State of Arkansas will receive your encouragement and protection.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

Yours of yesterday about provost-marshal system received. As part of the same subject, let me say I am now pressed in regard to a pending assessment on Saint Louis County. Please examine and satisfy yourself whether this assessment should proceed or be abandoned; and if you decide that it is to proceed, please examine as to the propriety of its application to a gentleman by the name of Charles McLaran.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
February 14, 1865—11.40 a.m.

Major-General Dodge,

What is General Mitchell doing at Omaha City while the Indians are overrunning his district? Please order him to his proper station and duty forthwith.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans., February 14, 1865.
(Received 3.40 p. m.)

Major-General Pope:
General Mitchell's district headquarters are at Omaha. He has been on the plains all winter. He meets the troops at Kearny. His presence at Omaha was necessary to get out our supplies. I have had to send all our forage from that point and subsistence stores from here. Colonel Moonlight is moving down from Denver, and I can keep the line open. The troops going forward, with those I can spare from the forts, will make a campaign against the Indians immediately.

G. M. DODGE,

SAINT LOUIS, February 14, 1865—3.50 p. m.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:
General McNeil has reported. Have you any particular duty or command to assign him to? Major-General Pope has gone to Milwaukee. When will you probably return?

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis:

Hold papers there. I will be back before they can get here and return. It takes five days to make round trip. Telegraph anything important. Has Fisk or Ewing returned from Washington?

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Saint Louis, February 14, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

Neither Ewing nor Fisk have yet reported back. Nothing urgently important in papers I intended to send you; they will keep.

Col. J. F. Philips,
Commanding, &c.:

Colonel: General Dodge having given me permission to visit him, I went to Fort Leavenworth on Thursday and returned on Saturday last. I laid before him the condition of the country in this region, but the department seems to be as bare of troops as the district is. The general is moving every available hoof across the plains. All the cavalry which was heretofore stationed from Wyandotte down the Kansas border has been taken away. He cannot send us re-enforcements unless it be that the remainder of my regiment can be relieved in North Missouri and sent to me. I have to abandon Hickman Mills to-day. I fear that disastrous consequences to the few loyal people there will follow. There are enough able-bodied men at the station (some forty) to take care of themselves, but they prefer to make friends with rather than fight the bushwhackers. The company now there (C), First Missouri State Militia Cavalry, has but sixteen horses. They have had no officer since Captain Jackson and Lieutenant Dudley left. They did not amount to much when their officers were with them, and were of still less use when a sergeant commanded them. I have not been able to even make an arrest with these men. The stage company is well protected down to Pleasant Hill. A company is camped on the Big Blue at the ferry, and an escort accompanies the mail coach from Independence down. I believe, however, that your idea is correct in regard to the danger of allowing a small escort to go regularly with the mail, and I shall change the arrangement. I have information of about 400 rebel soldiers and bushwhackers being in this sub-district, in La Fayette, and in the border counties of Kansas. I am trying to get the people to understand their danger, but, confound them, while they growl if you don’t put a guard at each man’s farm and allow their accounts for damages done by the guard, they are very slow about raising a finger to help themselves, excepting to Uncle Sam’s money. I anticipate worse times this spring than ever occurred before, unless we can take all the disloyal families out of the country.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel, &c.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTH KANSAS,
Paola, Kans., February 14, 1865.

Major-General DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

GENERAL: From Colonel Wattles, of the First Regiment Indian Home Guard, just arrived from Fort Gibson, I learn that the forces of Stand Watie, Cooper, and Gano, together with a portion of the force that lately went south with General Price, numbering in all about 7,000, are at and in the vicinity of Boggy Depot, Choctaw Nation. These forces are represented as being well mounted, and from the most reliable information obtained it is believed that they design moving north either in force or in detachments for raids as soon as the season will admit. Statements of refugees lately arrived from Texas is that small expeditions are organizing in Bonham and Sherman, Tex., for the avowed purpose of making a raid into the southwestern portion of this State. In consequence of these facts the people of the settlements in the Neosho Valley are quite alarmed, and not without some cause. The Neosho Valley is one of the best settlements in the State, and abounds largely in valuable stock of all kinds, which is a great inducement for raiding parties, and the country through which they would pass from Red River will be well supplied with grass and water as soon as the last of April or the first of May. The forces at Fort Smith and Fort Gibson are very small and consist entirely [of] infantry; at the latter place there is nothing but Indian soldiers, which are very inefficient. Hence, with the present force at the two places named, Forts Smith and Gibson, we can expect but little in the way of intercepting any force at the Arkansas River that design making a raid into this State. I have written Colonel Phillips, commanding at Fort Gibson, requesting him to furnish us promptly with any information he may obtain of movements of rebel troops moving north with the view of crossing the Arkansas River, especially west of Fort Gibson, and I have also arranged for sending scouts from the southwest settlements of Kansas for the same purpose. With the few troops at present in this district it is impossible for me to send into that locality sufficient number of men to resist any considerable force of the enemy without abandoning other important posts. It is not probable that any movement of the enemy, such as I have referred to, will be attempted until there is sufficient grass to subsist their animals, but in view of the prospective danger from that source I would suggest the propriety of making such dispositions of troops as will admit of concentrating a force on the southern border of this State with as little delay as possible when there is reason to believe that it is required. I will keep you promptly advised of all information I can obtain relative to the enemy's movements.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. G. BLUNT,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTH KANSAS,
Paola, Kans., February 14, 1865.

Col. W. A. PHILLIPS,
Commanding at Fort Gibson, C. N.:

COLONEL: I have information from various sources that leads me to suspect that the enemy contemplate making a raid from the vicinity of Red River, Tex., across the Arkansas, and thence into the southwestern settlements of this State, as soon as there is sufficient grass to subsist their stock. I have but very few troops in my command at present, and cannot keep a large force in the Neosho Valley without abandoning other important posts, hence I shall have to rely upon concentrating a force to meet the danger when it is threatened. With this view I have to request that you keep me promptly advised of any information you may obtain relative to movements of the enemy from the northern border of Texas in this direction. Dispatches can be sent to Fort Scott and telegraphed, and also to Fort Smith, as I am now in telegraphic communication with the latter place.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. G. BLUNT,
Major-General.
OmaHA, NeBr. Ter., February 14, 1865

Major-General Dodge, Fort Leavenworth:

Scouts returned I sent from Columbus up the Loup Fork report seeing a large trail going north fifty-seven miles northwest of Columbus. From the direction taken by those Indians that fought Collins at Mud Springs, and from report of scouts from their trail, I am satisfied the Indians are heading for Running Water or the Missouri River. My scouts sent to the Running Water have not yet returned. I have some apprehension for their safety. I find it almost impossible to procure men for this service in consequence of non-payment. My assistant quartermaster has not been furnished any money to pay quartermaster's men or for any other purpose since I have been in command of this district. Some of this class of men have been laboring for twelve months without receiving a single dollar for their services. The result is they are compelled to desert our service to make a living for their families. Cannot this to some extent be remedied?

ROBT. B. MITCHELL, Brigadier-General.

Brigadier-General Mitchell, Omaha:

The troops are on the road. Meet them at Kearny, but make such arrangements as will insure prompt forwarding of corn from Omaha. As soon as troops reach Kearny be ready to push right out against the Indians, and follow them until they are entirely broken up and so chastised that they will not return. I don't want any such outrages as were committed by Chivington. I think if we could get hold of a lot of them as hostages it would be a good idea. Instruct Colonel Livingston to telegraph me daily of matters around Julesburg.

G. M. DODGE, Major-General.

Fort Rankin, February 14, 1865.

Colonel Moonlight:

System guarding coaches east Julesburg is one station at each post; one intermediate station with permanent guard of twenty men. Posts are twenty-five to thirty-five miles apart, giving short relays for mounted escorts. If same plan is adopted west no trouble to run coaches. Urge Mr. Reynolds to put them on. General Dodge anxious to open line. I send fifty men to Harlow's, twenty-five miles west of this post, to-morrow. Recruits from Second Cavalry leave here to-morrow for [sic].

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., February 15, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 15th day of February, 1865: John H. Collins, who has during the past month visited Summit, Liberty, Woodville, General Hodge's headquarters at Beaver Creek and Bayou Sara, states that Colonel Scott has furloughed his command to rendezvous at Summit. This furlough has already expired. His rolls carry 4,200 names. When pursuing General Davidson he had about 1,400 men. At the time the furlough was granted he had 500 or 600. Informant thinks it doubtful if more than 500 of these men can be reassembled. Colonel Scott and Colonel Wingfield are now in arrest for furloughing their respective commands without authority. The former is now at home, about nine miles from Bayou Sara. His command comprises the First Louisiana Cavalry, Third Louisiana Cavalry, probably Colonel Gober's cavalry. Colonel Powers' regiment numbers 480 men, headquarters at Whittstown, eight miles from Woodville, on Clinton road. It pickets Bayou Sara and Fort Adams roads. Colonel Griffith's regiment of cavalry numbers 200 men. They are at the same station. A communication from Lieut. L. E. Granger, Morganza, La., February 12, states he has received information that the rebels have succeeded in raising the guns of the sunken gun-boats, and say they are now prepared to sink any transport going up Red River after cotton. Twenty enlisted men of Hood's army, furloughed for ninety days by General Dick Taylor, crossed the river one mile from the gun-boat at Tunica Bend on a raft last week.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF EASTERN ARKANSAS,
Helena, Ark., February 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY,
Commanding Military Division of West Mississippi:

GENERAL: The state of my health has compelled [me] to write the letter, of which I inclose you a copy, to Major-General Reynolds. As it is more than probable he will refer the matter to you, I feel authorized to send you the copy so as to bring the matter to your attention earlier than it can be done via Little Rock. If relieved from duty at this place I shall take no aide-de-camp with me, as I have none, mine having been mustered out with their commands and none assigned to me since.
It is therefore necessary that I should have Capt. T. C. Meatyard, assistant adjutant-general, with me, who is a very efficient officer, and who has been with me from the beginning of the war in several different capacities.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

N. B. BUFORD,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF EASTERN ARKANSAS,
Helena, Ark., February 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas:

GENERAL: I have been in the South four summers, and at this unhealthy post for seventeen months, and I find my health so seriously affected by the climate and the perplexing duties that I feel compelled to ask you for a change or a respite. It is my ardent desire to continue in the service until the close of the war, and if kept here I may be obliged to ask for a leave of absence, but that is not my desire. A change is necessary. At this post I have watched the guerrilla parties on both sides the river, the smugglers, whose name is legion, and the lessees of plantations, some of whom are as bad as the enemy. The freedmen's department, numbering 5,000, I have endeavored to make self-supporting, but have been defeated in it by dishonest men, one of whom is now on trial. These cares and the climate have made my state such as to require rest. I have been nobly seconded by my staff officers, especially Capt. T. O. Meatyard, assistant adjutant-general, who requires a change as much as I. I have positive evidence of corruption at headquarters during my absence in September. The most guilty party, Lieutenant Snow, of the Sixth Minnesota Volunteers, acting assistant adjutant-general during my absence, had resigned before I got my information or I should have tried him. I now ask that you will order me to report with Captain Meatyard, assistant adjutant-general, to Major-General Canby, at New Orleans, for another field of service, and on my arrival there I doubt not he will give us the respite required. I would ask for a change in your department, but I do not think it would be in your power to give me a more useful or desirable place than this, whereas General Canby might give me the opportunity of a few weeks court-martial, or other duties, or send me to the Atlantic coast by sea. I would be equally content with orders for us to report in person to the Adjutant-General in Washington for assignment to other duties. I have hesitated long in making this application, as I feel as happy in serving under your command as any officer in the service. I beg leave to suggest to you this post requires an experienced and firm officer. This letter will be handed to you by Capt. D. P. Allen, commissary of subsistence, who will explain my views more fully as I have communicated them to him. I beg of you an early reply, that I may have a few days to set my house in order.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

N. B. BUFORD,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Pine Bluff, Ark., February 15, 1865.

Maj. J. LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

A scout on the north side of the river captured Captain Lightfoot and Lieutenant Graham, two notorious guerrillas. I should like to retain them and have them tried here by a military commission, for the murder, last summer, of a number of unarmed negroes on the Haskell plantation. Lieutenant Reeder, Third C. S. Infantry, was captured two days since. He will be sent up on first boat.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., February 15, 1865.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

MAJOR: I respectfully ask that one regiment of infantry, well officered, be ordered here from Little Rock, from which I can detach officers to fill various important positions on the staff. I cannot find officers here who can be relied upon. All who are competent are implicated in alleged speculations, &c. As soon as notified that a regiment has been ordered from Little Rock, I will order one from here to supply the place. This course should be continued from time to time until three or four regiments are moved from here and their places supplied with regiments from Little Rock.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, February 15, 1865—9.40 p.m.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

The larger portion of the rebel forces in the Trans-Mississippi Department appears to be concentrated at and in the vicinity of Washington, Ark., 200 miles southeast of Fort Smith. The cavalry corps which the rebels claimed to be 9,000 strong is all under the command of Fagan. The whole is under Magruder. Their army is said to be under good discipline. The conscripts and other recruits from Missouri have been forcibly dismounted and compelled to serve in the infantry. The loss of horses and material in the Missouri raid was immense. Most of their best horses died of starvation. The road from the Arkansas to Red River is lined with dead animals. Their best officers acknowledge the raid a total failure. They say they have no intention or thought of attempting another, and will be satisfied with maintaining their present lines. Maclean, Price's assistant adjutant-general, was killed recently in a fight with Lieutenant-Colonel Wood. If another raid into Missouri is attempted Price will not command it, as his last was so disastrous that he is now without command. I arrived here on the 12th from Little Rock and relieved General Thayer. Will keep you informed of all movements of the enemy in this part of the country.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,

I think it very important that the troops at Sioux City and Fort Randall should move across the country to Fort Laramie at the same time I move from Julesburg and up Wood River. Colonel Collins has had another fight north of the Platte, and the Indians went north. We lost 3 killed and 22 wounded. Colonel Moonlight reports a force of Indians north of Valley Station and a very large force on the headwaters of Smoky Hill Fork, 100 miles east of Denver. Routes all open. Indians that fought Collins crossed Loup Fork sixty miles north of Columbus and appear to be making for Running Water or the Missouri River.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI, No. 46. } Fort Leavenworth, Kans., February 15, 1865.

3. There being troops enough in the District of Nebraska to form a brigade, as required by General Orders, No. 251, Adjutant-General’s Office, War Department, series 1864, it is hereby announced a separate brigade.

4. The District of Colorado will consist of the Territory of Colorado, excepting the post at Julesburg.

5. All troops at posts in the District of Colorado as now formed will report to Colonel Moonlight, commanding District of Colorado.

6. In opening communications, repairing telegraph, and escorting trains in movements against the Indians, and in re-enforcing, if necessary, posts that are attacked or in danger, no attention will be paid to district lines. Commanders of districts, sub-districts, and posts in all cases will give all aid in their power to one another, having in view only the safety of the country and benefit of the service. As soon as the emergency has passed that requires troops to move out of the limit of their districts they will return to their proper stations.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,
Colonel, Commanding.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., February 15, 1865.

Col. John F. Philips,
Comdg. District of Central Missouri, Warrensburg, Mo.:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report as follows in regard to the progress in the construction of block-houses and stockades in the District of Central Missouri: The work at the Osage for the block-house at the east end of the bridge, about half of the timbers are delivered on the ground, the cellar completed, and ready for the walls. The block-house at the west end of the bridge is up to the square of the second story, and will be completed in ten days, if lumber for roofing and floors can be had, for which requisitions have been made. The block-house at the La Mine bridge has not progressed so rapidly as might be wished, for various reasons; one is the difficulty in getting tools at the commencement, another a change of commands at that station since the work commenced. The timbers are being got out, in which the citizens are rendering assistance. The late fall of rain will delay the work for a few days at this point. At Sedalia, for the stockade at that place about 280 sticks of timber have been delivered on the ground. The commander at that station informs me that for the want of men he is unable to prosecute the work as rapidly as he would wish, and that in the last ten days he has been delayed in consequence of the appraisement of horses belonging to the men and in sending men home with private horses. He has not called on the citizens for assistance. At Marshall the timbers for a stockade are all cut and half of them delivered on the ground. I saw the commanding officer of that station yesterday (the 14th instant). He informs me that the work is progressing as rapidly as it can with force at his command in connection with his other duties, such as scouting, foraging, &c. He has called upon the citizens to assist in the work, and says that it is almost impossible to get any assistance from them. At Warrensburg nothing has been done, and the reason given for not doing anything at that place is as follows: The commander of the post says he has no authority to take timber. He also says that he has made requisition on the quartermaster for timber, and that he does not wish to incur the responsibility in taking timber. I received a communication from the chief engineer, Department of the Missouri, in regard to works at Kansas City (a copy of which is herewith inclosed). I have visited these posts and stations near twice each week since I have been assigned to this duty. I have urged upon the commanders of posts and stations your desires, directions, and wishes in regard to prosecuting these works with energy to completion. Further than this I know not what to do. Any instructions you may have that will enable me to cause the work to progress more rapidly I will endeavor to carry out to the best of my ability.

Colonel, I am, with much respect, your obedient servant,

D. DALE,
Major, Fourth Cavalry Missouri State Militia,
Superintending Construction of Block-Houses and Stations,
District of Central Missouri.
Respectfully forwarded to major-general commanding Department of the Missouri for information. The constant employment of the troops on other duty has prevented us from employing many of them on these works. I have ordered the citizens impressed into service and will compel them to work. The great scarcity of timber in vicinity of Warrensburg is an obstacle in the way of constructing the block-house at this point. This will be speedily overcome and the work progress.

District of Southwest Missouri, Springfield, Mo.:

I have had John H. Howard, Company I, Second Battalion, Fifteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, together with five men, scouting Dade County, Mo., since the 4th instant until the 14th. On the 11th he was on Limestone; struck the trail of seven bushwhackers and drove them out of the county. They came from Cedar Creek and went out south. He reports the county clear of bushwhackers at present. I still have one sergeant and ten men of Company E, Second Battalion, Fifteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, guarding Captain Owen's working party at the coal mines.

I remain, your most obedient servant,
WICK MORGAN,
Major Second Battalion, Fifteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers.

Capt. JOHN WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,

Fort Leavenworth, February 15, 1865.

Col. JAMES H. FORD,

Commanding District of Upper Arkansas, Fort Riley:

COLONEL: The Third Wisconsin has been ordered to return to you, with the exception of that portion used for a courier line. The two companies at Fort Larned will be allowed to remain until I can send troops to relieve them. I shall send you horses to mount all your cavalry, and will replace those at the posts with infantry, so that all our mounted force can be used against the Indians, the infantry doing the escort and post duty. I desire you to be prepared as soon as you receive horses to move out into the country between the Platte and Arkansas Rivers and break up the band of Indians said to be located there. I hope that I shall be able to move you within thirty days, as I desire to have you move at the same time the movement is made on the North Platte. The Indians that went north after the Chivington fight have crossed both Platte and are now some sixty miles north of the North Platte. The Indians must be punished, the women and children captured and held as hostages. I do not consider such fights as Chivington's to be of any benefit in quelling Indian disturbances or of any credit to our service. The courier line from Lawrence to Riley I desire kept up and dispatches run through promptly. You will by good scouts keep fully posted in regard to the location of the enemy either south, west, or north of you, and also keep me posted. I shall leave here this week for Saint Louis, where any special dispatch or news will reach me. All returns and reports will be sent as usual to Fort Leavenworth, but any news relative to the enemy will be telegraphed me at Saint Louis. The posts at Larned, Zarah, &c., should be protected by works, and I shall instruct the quartermaster to endeavor to get lumber enough for roofing buildings for our stores. Troops can make comfortable quarters out of earth and willows; stock can be covered in the same manner. Special Orders, Nos. 41 and 42, which prescribe the manner of crossing the plains, will be promptly and efficiently carried out, and a good officer at the proper time should be placed at Council Grove. I desire, colonel, to be kept thoroughly posted in regard to all matters in your district relative to the service, and would also like your views about a movement from Riley against the Indians.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, February 15, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER THIRD WISCONSIN CAVALRY,

Lawrence:

After posting the men at Lawrence, Topeka, and Saint Mary's, as ordered, move with the rest of your men to Fort Riley and report to Colonel Ford. In moving back you must keep your men from pillaging. Notify me when you start.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, February 15, 1865.

Lieutenant Montgomery,
Lawrence:

Send the following dispatch through to Fort Riley by messenger, traveling day and night, and notify me of time of departure:

Colonel Ford,
Fort Riley:

Hold the two companies at Fort Larned and send rest of Eleventh Kansas. Give them every horse you can raise. I have got horses on their way here to mount your command and troops to replace the Eleventh Kansas.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, February 15, 1865.

Brigadier-General Mitchell,
Omaha:

A part of the Eleventh Kansas will go from Fort Riley to Fort Kearny dismounted. Some horses will be sent from here for them and mount the remainder on mules, or put them in the forts and take mounted men from your posts. When troops reach Kearny we can decide how to move. I am trying to move the column from Sioux City; at all events, those troops will be where they can protect Northern Nebraska. We have no money. Will send your quartermaster some as soon as it arrives.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Brigadier-General Mitchell,
Omaha:

A train left here for Denver January 23 loaded with 50,000 rations for Cottonwood. It was then to proceed to Denver. I think those rations should go through to Julesburg, and let train going from here now take rations to Cottonwood. This will insure a supply at Julesburg on arrival of the troops there. Attend to this and answer.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Fort Leavenworth, February 15, 1865.

Brigadier-General Mitchell,
Omaha:

The Secretary of War authorizes me to raise a company of Indians. You can raise a company among the Omahas to be used as guides and scouts, to be mustered in for one year. I will appoint officers upon your recommendation.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Fort Leavenworth, February 15, 1865.

Col. Thomas Moonlight,
Denver City:

If the citizens of Colorado will not aid you, put the troops that are guarding towns and settlements on to our lines of communication and let towns and settlements take care of themselves. You have now got control of all troops in Colorado, and with the militia you raise can operate against the Indians along the Overland route. One hundred teams left here for Denver January 23.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

General Orders, No. 12.

I. Pursuant to telegraphic instructions from department headquarters this day received, the District of Colorado now consists of the Territory of Colorado, excepting the post of Julesburg.

By order of Col. T. Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry:

Ira I. Taber,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of New Mexico,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., February 15, 1865.

This morning Herrera Grande and five other Navajo chiefs, and Jesus, the interpreter, for whom I wrote to General Crocker on the 22d of January, 1865, came to Santa Fé, en route to the old Navajo country. I had a talk with them, in the presence of Governor Connelly and Don José Manuel Gallegos. It was to this effect:

They were to go out into the J d Navajo country and tell the Navajoes still remaining there that they must come in at once and go to the reservation: that this is the last warning they will have; that if they come in now their stock shall remain as their own; but if within five weeks from the time of the notice they are not at Fort Wingate the door will be shut, and we will then fight them, the people will fight them, and the Utes will fight them, and they will be destroyed. In this case their blood will beon their own hands, not on ours, as they have had fair warning. These Navajoes whom I send out as delegates with this warning are then to return to Santa Fé, and thence to Bosque Redondo, without waiting for any others.

Major-General Canby, New Orleans:

General Grant directs that you will receive all Union prisoners delivered to you on the Mississippi River or at Mobile. The former will be sent to Benton Barracks, Saint Louis, and the latter to that place or to Annapolis, Md., as may be most convenient for your means of transportation.

3. Capt. William W. Cantine, commissary of subsistence of volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty as chief commissary of the troops now stationed and being collected within the limits of the District of West Florida and South Alabama. He will report accordingly to Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., February 16, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Ass't Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 16th day of February, 1865: Mr. H. C. Gardner, a refugee from Texas, states that there is a ford one mile and a half in length across Galveston Bay, half a mile north of Caronkaway Point. Has at ordinary high tide two and a half to three feet of water and in the channel four. The bottom is good, except in the channel, where it is of soft mud. The channel is about 150 yards wide. Informant describes route from the west end of the ford to Houston, which is about fifty miles distant. Dr. F. Stevens has been surgeon on gun-boat Bayou City. Left Galveston December 27, 1864; states the total number of troops in Galveston and vicinity does not exceed 1,500 men. Makes the following statement in regard to the fortifications of Galveston: Almost all the works are dismantled and the guns sent to Virginia Point. Fort Point had five guns; now has one. The others are wooden. Fort Jackson had three 32-pounders, one mortar, one 24-pounder Parrott. Does not know whether these guns have been dismounted. Fort Green has now one 32-pounder, two small guns from gun-boat Westfield. Fort Magruder has one rifle, one mortar, and two smooth-bores. South Battery has only one gun left. There are two brass 12-pounders about the middle of the bridge. All the other works are mounted, if at all, with wooden guns. Thinks Galveston will be evacuated. The bridge is nearly worn out. Heard General Walker complain about the useless expense of fortifying the city. No gun-boats are now left in the bay. Mr. E. S. Murray left Mobile January 22; had been conscripted in the rebel army. States there is a great scarcity of food in Mobile. States one-half of Hood’s army, in number about 5,000, passed through Mobile on the way to Augusta on the 19th or 20th of January. Informant states the number of troops in Mobile and vicinity, which does not materially differ from previous reports. Lieut. G. G. Curtiss, Baton Rouge, reports by telegraph that he has learned from a scout that there are from 400 to 500 Federal prisoners confined at Meridian, Miss. They are reported in a destitute condition. A communication from the same officer of the 12th instant states that Scott’s command is reported at Canton, Miss. General Gardner has been relieved from command for drunkenness, and General Forrest succeeds him. States that refugees and deserters universally agree in asserting there is a general sentiment in favor of “peace on any terms” through the rebel States.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,

Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. Townsend,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, Hdqrs. Department of the Gulf, No. 44. New Orleans, February 16, 1865.

3. Company K, of the First Louisiana Volunteer Cavalry, is hereby relieved from duty in the District of La Fourche, and will proceed without delay to join the regiment, now stationed at Baton Rouge, La. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

J. C. Stone,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, February 16, 1865.

Brig. Gen. T. W. Sherman:

General: The three regiments ordered from Southern Division must be got in readiness for the field (the Seventh Vermont, Seventy-seventh Illinois, and Ninety-first Illinois). I am informed by General Canby that these vacancies must be supplied from the department force. The Twentieth U. S. Colored Infantry are now within your lines, and any additional force you may require will be ordered from Port Hudson. Let me know if you want any other regiment.

Yours,

S. A. Hurlbut,
Major-General, Commanding.

Headquarters Southern Division of Louisiana, New Orleans, February 16, 1865.

Brig. Gen. R. A. Cameron,
Commanding District of La Fourche:

I am instructed by Brigadier-General Sherman to acknowledge the receipt of reports and telegrams relating to recent movements in search of guerrillas. Also to inform you that there is still a defect in the stationing of the pickets intended to watch the passage back of Kittredge's Sugar Mill. The rebels must have come through there; then the picket, in order to fail seeing them, must be improperly posted or instructed, or it neglected its duty. In Brigadier-General Sherman's view the pickets on the canal are entirely secondary in importance, provided the passage back of the plantation to which Kittredge's lane leads is properly guarded.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, February 16, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. J. HERRON,
Commanding Northern Division of Louisiana:

GENERAL: It is now reasonably certain that no more draft will be made in the forces of the department. It remains to us to put those now within the command on the best possible footing. I wish you to proceed at once to cause the cavalry to be organized into brigades, cutting all unnecessary staff appointments down to the minimum. Compel line and field officers to remain with their commands, and to use their best endeavors to bring them into efficiency. As soon as the weather and the state of the ground admit, send a brigade to Morganza as permanent part of the garrison to cover the Atchafalaya country. The infantry and artillery within your limits will require similar action, and, in short, I expect much of your time for awhile to be given to inspection and correction by personal attention. Strict attention to duties will be required, especially in colored regiments. It will be well for you to notice specially the condition of the Fourth U. S. Colored Cavalry at Port Hudson, and give me your judgment about the practicability of making it effective.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., February 16, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. BAILEY:

GENERAL: In obedience to instructions from headquarters Department of the Gulf, the major-general commanding directs that the Fourteenth New York Cavalry be ordered to report to Brigadier-General Ullmann for duty at Morganza. As this regiment will relieve the Second New York [Veteran] Cavalry in that district, they will take with them their camp and garrison equipage and stores of all kinds. You will please give the necessary orders in the premises.

I have the honor to be, your very obedient servant,

WM. H. CLAPP,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 16, 1865.

Brig. Gen. D. ULLMANN,
Morganza, La.:

The idea of using Kennerville as a camping-ground for the troops coming from General Thomas is abandoned in consequence of the recent heavy rains, and a place below this city has been selected. Will you therefore please to instruct commanding officers instead of disembarking at Kennerville to proceed direct to this city and to report in person at these headquarters, taking care in all cases to keep their men on board until they reach their permanent place of encampment. This does not apply to the troops coming from Arkansas and Memphis, which are to disembark at the warehouse wharf below the railroad wharf at Algiers, as heretofore ordered.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Morganza, La., February 16, 1865.

Capt. J. C. STONE,
Ass't Adj. Gen., Hdqrs. Dept. of the Gulf, New Orleans:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to state that the enemy has exhibited unusual activity during the last two weeks. He has developed an extensive and effective system of conscription throughout the parish. Their men suddenly appeared scattered in squads over a large surface, searching for conscripts, mules, and horses. I have succeeded in taking prisoners 2 officers and 5 men. Captain Carmouche has raised and organized a company of eighty men. My informant had a long interview with him a few evenings since, and was permitted by him to read a letter of instructions recently received by him from Brigadier-General Brent, who it seems has lately crossed the Mississippi and assumed a command in Avoyelles Parish. He directs Carmouche to stop all persons in this parish from planting who are "cultivating on the Yankee principle, all who are disaffected toward the Confederates and have Union proclivities, and to take away all their mules." Carmouche states that he is ordered to seize all the mules in the parish, to turn the best over to certain batteries, and to use the others for transportation. Of course the inhabitants are greatly alarmed and appeal to me for protection. As all my cavalry is ordered away I shall be able to give this to a very limited degree. On the night of the 11th a party with blackened faces and otherwise disguised broke into the house of Joseph Metebrohn, a brother of the priest of the Catholic church, ten miles below the lines, and charging him with having given information (which is false) by which we captured the above-mentioned prisoners, inflicted between 200 and 300 lashes upon him, leaving him nearly dead. I have proof that there is again occasional crossing the river this side of Bayou Sara. Above, near Tunica Bend, there is frequent crossing. Captain Collins passed over two or three nights ago. I have previously reported the crossing, on the night of the 11th, of a body of soldiers furloughed from Hood's army. One of my informants fell in on the 11th, near the junction of the Red River and Atchafalaya, with two Confederate officers just from Alexandria. They said they were "only waiting for the water to fall in the swamps to make a sudden dash on Morganza from all directions." The Atchafalaya and the several roads have been picketed lately with more regularity than formerly, and a movable force has its headquarters at Simsport.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

DANIEL ULLMANN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
To carry out the objects and intentions of General Orders, No. 13, current series, from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, the following regulations will be observed and obeyed in this department:

I. All plantations, colonies, or other industrial establishments leased, registered, or permitted under the regulations of February 1, 1865, will after being acted on by the commander of the district in which they are located be reported to these headquarters for approval, and will not be recognized as valid until the department commander shall indorse his approval thereon.

II. The limits of actual military occupation, as at present defined in the several districts of this command, are extended so as to include localities approved as above.

III. Owners or lessees of plantations under the authority of the above-mentioned regulations will immediately after receiving the above-mentioned approval, without delay, construct stockades or such other temporary defense as may be necessary to secure their laborers, stock, and other property from the danger of being carried off or destroyed by small raiding parties of the enemy; and any lessee who shall disregard or neglect this regulation will suffer the withdrawal of the approval from his lease and the forfeiture of his privileges, besides such further penalty as the case may render proper.

IV. Until the supervising special agent of the Treasury Department shall have made his arrangements to receive the freedmen and assume their care and support under the law of July 2, 1864, the freedmen's department will remain as at present. Proper orders will be given for the transfer as soon as he is ready to receive them without embarrassment to his department.

By order of Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana:

F. W. FOX,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS INDIAN BRIGADE,
Fort Gibson, C. N., February 16, 1865.

Major-General Canby,
Comdg. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La.:

SIR: I desire to notify you of encroachments on the rights of the people of the Indian Nation from the Department of Kansas by citizens thereof and volunteer officers and soldiers stationed there. I desire that you communicate with the major-general commanding the Division of Missouri, to secure his assistance in putting a stop to evils that have assumed fearful proportions, and for the protection of interests so justly entitled to it. I desire to state that for nearly a year past there has been a systematic and wholesale plundering and driving of stock from the Indian Nation to Kansas. Part of this is the property of loyal soldiers in our service, part of loyal citizens, and part of disloyal persons now in arms against us or aiding those who are. The devastations of war have depopulated the Creek Nation; two-thirds of the homes in the Cherokee Nation are abandoned. The rebel or disloyal Indians are clustered in colonies on the streams tributary to the Red River. The loyal Indians, who adhere to our cause, are clustered around Gibson or in colonies depending upon it for protection. The stock, or herds, of all, or what is left of it, is, of course, scattered or unwatched on its range. This condition of affairs invited the somewhat wholesale enterprises by which it has been driven into Kansas. The Arkansas River for the past two years may be said to have been the boundary between the belligerents. Since the siege of Gibson was raised in July, 1863, by General Cooper, no rebel army has camped on its southern banks. It is true considerable mounted parties have crossed it. A train was captured sixty miles in the rear of this place in September last by a large mounted force; but north of the river, or even fifty miles south of it, any rebel occupancy is only of the character of raids. I obtain all the beef for the command and for the many refugees from south of the river, or from the stock subject to be taken by the enemy. I merely desire to show that there is no necessity for commands of troops to enter the nation, 150 miles in my rear, on the pretext of scouting, which really drive off cattle. I would inform you that a very considerable portion of such stock was driven off by troops from Kansas. I will mention one or two cases in which there is ample and clear testimony. Captain Vittum, of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry, last April entered the nation with a train. On his return he gathered a herd of 500 or 600 and drove it out. The same officer entered the nation about the last of May or first of June as escort for two officers coming down to Fort Smith. He stopped forty miles above Gibson and went back, driving out a large herd. He is now provost-marshal at Fort Scott, which will give you an idea of the police regulations on the northern border of the nation, on which I have to lean. On application to General Curtis last summer I was informed that the matter was merely one for adjudication in the courts. In the nation there is no Federal court in time of peace—not even the Indian courts exist now. The necessary protection is dependent to a great extent on the military power temporarily existing. I think I can stop it here; if I had horses for my men at least, I could, with co-operation from above, or [sic] respect from them to orders issued here. The Indian soldiers are more to be trusted for their own protection than others. They are amenable to each other as well as to the Government. Most of the white regiments that have entered the Indian Nation commit more or less depredations. They treat it as if it were an enemy's country. I, however, desired to secure through you sufficient protection from the department above to stop the nefarious system which appears to have a thorough organization in the State of Kansas, believing that unless prompt steps were taken the same nefarious transactions would be continued this season. I inclose copy of an order* I issued to meet the evil. The case of the Indian Nation is peculiar. The Secretary of the Treasury decided that "it was not a State in rebellion," and consequently sends no Treasury agents here. The question as to what is contraband has been held in abeyance, as I understand it. The order was therefore framed to meet the exigencies of the case, and as far as practicable carry out the instructions under which the Indian commands were raised, or which have been sent from time to time by the Interior Department. I also inclose copy of a letter from one of the Indian agents, a copy of a permit taken from a ...in who had a stolen herd, and an extract from detective's report. Some of the permits from Superintendent Coffin are short. I send one which seems to have restrictions. Mr. Hamilton, to whom it was given, has been a large dealer in the stolen stock. As far as my observation goes, not one of these transactions, said to be made in the adjoining State, is genuine; as, indeed, there could be no security for it. I desire that either the provisions of orders be carried out and respect to them secured at the military posts on the Kansas border, or that other steps be taken to correct the evil.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel Third Indian Regiment, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

Ohio City, Kans., January 12, 1865.

Lieut. John Chess,
Fort Gibson:

DEAR SIR: For nearly six months one E. Lombard, a half-breed Quapaw Indian, has been incarcerated in the military prison of Fort Gibson. I would be much obliged if you would see the commander of the post and inform me the charges against him. His family is in a bad condition and needs him much. I am sure he was enticed to the Cherokee country by whites, who, I understand, have been released, and other Indians who accompanied him have been released. Why he is thus kept is more than I can see. The order of General Curtis, at any rate, makes it no military crime to obtain cattle from that country. I wish you would give me all the particulars of his offenses, trial, and condemnation. He may have been kept there without a trial, as thousands of privates and citizens have been, without charges or trial, merely at the pleasure of the commander. I hardly think, from what I know of the commander of that post, that this can be true. If possible, I hope he will be released. I do not see how the interests of the military service or the Government can be subserved by so long an imprisonment, and I know the effect on the Indians is decidedly bad and will militate against the Government unless there is the best of cause. Please see the commander and let me hear from you.

Yours, truly,

P. P. ELDER,
U. S. Neosho Indian Agent.

Office Southern Superintendency Indian Affairs, Leavenworth, Kans., September 22, 1864.

Alexander Hamilton, Esq.,
Humboldt, Kans.:

SIR: By authority in me vested as superintendent of Indian affairs, I hereby authorize and permit you to purchase cattle of the Indians within the Indian Territory under all the rules, restrictions, and liabilities prescribed by the U. S. laws regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, and in addition thereto, in consequence of the vast amount of illicit and unlawful trade now carried on within said Territory, I hereby prescribe the following additional regulations, from which you will in no wise deviate: For all stock purchased you will take bill of sale describing particularly the quality of the same, their number and ages, whether steers, cows, calves, heifers, or bulls, and the price paid for the same, the payment of which to be attested by two competent witnesses. The bills of sale must be signed by the Indians of whom you purchase, and approved by the chiefs or head men of the tribe to whom the parties belong. Whenever purchases are made by you within the limits of any Indian reservation or of any tribe of Indians being in charge of an agent, the purchases and bills of sale thereof must be approved and certified to by said agent. You will then drive the stock thus purchased to some convenient point in Kansas, and there stop and hold them and report to me at my office in Leavenworth City. Submit your bills of purchases for examination, and in no case sell or drive, or permit to be sold or driven away, any of such stock until a thorough examination of the same and the bill of sale thereof is made, and said bill of sale is approved and indorsed by me; or, in my absence you will report in like manner to Major-General Curtis, commanding the Department of Kansas, and await his orders or approval before moving or disposing of such stock.

Given under my hand this day and date above written.

W. G. COFFIN.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

BELMONT, KANS., August 22, 1864.

Captain Phillips:

On my way home I stopped at Ohio City, Kans. There I had a talk with Major Elder. I saw a herd of cattle, Indian stock. He gave $4,000 for them. He acknowledged they were stolen and deprecated the act. The party he purchased from gave him a copy of the permit from Colonel Coffin, which authorized them to get stock. Elder would not show me the copy of Coffin's pass, nor tell the name or names of the parties of whom he purchased. He said he took the precaution to get the copy to secure his title should the cattle be seized by any authority.

JOEL MOODY,

Detective.

HEADQUARTERS INDIAN BRIGADE,
Fort Gibson, C. N., February 16, 1865.

Maj. Gen. John Pope,
Commanding Military Division of the Missouri:

Sir: I desire to call to your attention depredations and encroachments on the Indian Territory by parties from the Department of Kansas. Parties from Kansas, both citizens and soldiers, have during the past year entered the nation and driven out herds of stock. Since I returned from Fort Smith I have endeavored to arrest them, but as I am now without a cavalry force, and as the country to be protected is very extensive, it appears almost impossible to put a stop to it without some co-operation from the department above. I learned yesterday evening from scouts up toward the Big Bend that two parties, one of twelve horsemen, the other of fifteen, drove out herds toward Kansas about a month ago. The Indian soldiers were under the impression from the size and appearance of the horseshoes that the parties might have been cavalry. In any event cavalry parties, or parties of cavalry and citizens drove out herds repeatedly last season. Captain Vittum, Third Wisconsin Cavalry (now provost-marshal at Fort Scott), while down last April escorting a train from this command, drove out a herd of about 500 head. The same officer in June was sent in with a squadron of cavalry to escort Colonels Bowen and Adams, of the Thirteenth and Twelfth Kansas, en route to this command. Captain Vittum only came within forty miles of Gibson and went back, driving a large herd of cattle. My detectives and some officers and soldiers sent after them examined the herd, but could not obtain it. Captain Johnson, Fifteenth Kansas Cavalry, with men of his command, proceeded across Arkansas River and drove a large herd last summer. I think he went several times, but one case can be clearly proven. As I am instructed to take necessary steps to protect the property of these people, I ask you for the assistance in the adjoining department, which I am sure you will be inclined to give. The matter is rendered much more complicated from the fact that some of those whose duty it is to protect them are undoubtedly in league with the thieves. Superintendent Coffin has been giving permits to buy. These citizen thieves pretend also to have, and in fact exhibited when arrested, papers purporting to be passes into Kansas from military commanders. To show you the precise character of the transactions I have only to state that the whole Verdigris River country and nearly all the Creek country and large portions of the Cherokee country are entirely depopulated. The men are soldiers in the army, and many of them clustered near this post for protection. There is, in fact, no one to sell to them in the country where they got the cattle; and such sales, as a general rule, are mere pretenses that could deceive no one. Citizens of the State of Kansas also employ Kansas Indians, Osages and Delawares, to come in and steal. With these bogus bills of sale are in some cases no doubt executed. It is apparent that this can only lead to difficulty. I inclose a letter* just received from the Osage agent in reference to a half-breed who was caught last summer with a herd of stolen cattle, tried by a military commission, and is now serving out sentence thereof. I also inclose an order† I issued after I returned from Fort Smith. The order is in some respects peculiar, because the case is peculiar. The Secretary of the Treasury has decided that the Indian Nation is not a "State in rebellion" and sends no Treasury agents here. The question as to contraband is, as I understand it, still held in abeyance. Under the circumstances, I merely did the best I could, as I was directed, and forward a copy to give you a better idea of the difficulties it was designed to meet, so as to suggest any assistance in the protection of the rights of the Indians here that you might deem proper.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel, Commanding.

Brig. Gen. MORGAN L. SMITH,

SIR: I am directed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 13th instant, stating that the following troops from General Thomas' command have arrived at Vicksburg and were going into camp: "Three thousand have arrived; 3,000 will be down to-night, and the balance to-morrow," &c. As we had only advices of a cavalry force of 5,000 to be sent, I am apprehensive lest our dispatch of the 3d has been misunderstood. I therefore

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Fort Leavenworth;

General Sanborn recommends that the telegraph line from Springfield to Sedalia be repaired, and an office established at Warsaw; also a line from Springfield to Mount Vernon or Neosho, as you may deem most expedient. He says Mount Vernon will be of great advantage, and it will be difficult to keep it up west of that place. Shall I lay the matter before Captain Clowry, with request to have these lines established?

SPECIAL ORDERS,
Hdqrs. Department of the Missouri,
No. 47.
Fort Leavenworth, February 16, 1865.

1. Capt. George S. Hampton, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, will return to Paola, Kans., and report to Major-General Blunt, commanding District of South Kansas, for duty.

JOHN WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR,]
Hdqrs. Department of the Missouri,
Fort Leavenworth, February 16, 1865.

The general commanding notices many irregularities in some of the districts, which no doubt were caused by the emergencies of the service, such as granting leaves of absence to soldiers and officers, authorizing the payment of claims by quartermasters, ordering contracts, &c. As no such emergency now exists, and as no such action can be taken, except by order of the War Department or department commander, it will cease; and hereafter district commanders will refer all matters that they have not the clear right to act on, by virtue of the regulations or order of the War Department, or by command of higher authority, to the department commander for decision.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

JOHN WILLANS,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,
Headquarters Saint Louis District,

Saint Louis, Mo., February 16, 1865.

2. Pursuant to instructions from department headquarters, two companies of the Thirty-ninth Missouri Volunteers will proceed on the 6.30 train to-morrow morning, the 17th instant, to Alton, Ill., and report to Brigadier-General Stone for escort duty. This duty done, they will rejoin their command at Benton Barracks. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

H. HANNAHS,

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 16, 1865.

Major HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Inform Governor Fletcher and General Dodge that the governor's proposition as to the new regiments has been referred to Lieutenant-General Grant, and I go to City Point to see him about it.

THOMAS EWING, JR.,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., February 16, 1865.

Capt. WILLIAM MEREDITH,
Commanding at Lexington, Mo.:

CAPTAIN: I am directed by the colonel commanding to say that Captain Burris is ordered to Lexington with his company. Captain Burris will take charge of the recruitment of the company of militia for La Fayette County. This will give you three companies at Lexington, and it is expected with this force that you will keep scouting parties actively going all the time in La Fayette County. But few troops are needed to garrison the place; the balance, infantry and cavalry, must be kept moving. Send out your scouts under commissioned officers, with positive instructions to be vigilant and energetic. Now is the time to destroy the bands of guerrillas in that county. Instruct your scouting parties that no unauthorized depredations on the rights and property of peaceful citizens will be tolerated. The officer in charge will be held responsible for the deportment of the command. Special pains will be taken to see that each man is provided before leaving camp with the required number of rations. Prompt and full reports of the result of each scout will be forwarded to these headquarters.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. F. WARD.

MACON, Mo., February 16, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis:

During my late trip eastward I was compelled to leave unfinished a very important item of business in consequence of detention of travel on account of snow. My leave of absence was expiring, and I hastened back to my command without closing my business, deeming it better to return here for a few days and snug up affairs in the district and go again than to secure an extension of my leave. I desire to go to Ohio and Michigan next week. Can probably adjust my business, which is in connection with the settlement of my father's estate, and return within ten days. I have, therefore, the honor to request that a ten days' leave from the 20th be granted me, and that you advise me by telegraph on receipt of this if it is practicable to grant it, that I may advise my friends by telegraph that I will meet them. The district and business of my headquarters are in a good condition. The volunteer militia companies are filling up.

CLINTON B. FISK,

II. Lieut. Col. John Pinger, commanding Sub-District of Saint Joseph, Mo., will immediately detail one company of infantry, with officers complete, to report to commanding officer of the post at Macon, Mo., for duty without delay. Quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., February 16, 1865.

Col. JOHN PINGER,
Saint Joseph, Mo.:

COLONEL: In acknowledgment and reply to your favor of the 8th instant, touching assessments on rebels for the benefit of suffering loyalists who have been plundered by bushwhackers, I would say that at present I am prohibited from making such assessments. The War Department has directed that assessments without special authority be not permitted. The principle of assessments I believe to be right, but it is difficult to carry out. We can hardly lay finger upon a rebel that he cannot procure the signature of loyal men asking that leniency be shown to the villain. We cannot even hang known bushwhacking, murderous citizens of Saint Joseph, for many besiege the President for [sic] orders in commutation of sentence, &c. We must struggle on and do the best we can. I hope for a more peaceful and quiet year than last, but to secure it every loyal man must stand shoulder to shoulder with his neighbor and show an unbroken front against the enemies of the country. You will at once give me full written report of the condition of affairs in your sub-district, by counties. What is being done under Governor Fletcher's General Orders, No. 3?

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.
Capt. W. H. Greene,
Commanding Fort Zarah:

The colonel commanding directs that you will immediately proceed to erect a small block-house, or earth-works, at your post, as the probabilities are that he will be obliged to withdraw part of the command now stationed at Fort Zarah, and in this event a small command will be able to protect themselves by this means of defense.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Colonel Moonlight:

I am directed not to establish post at Harlow's, that being in your district.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer.
New Orleans, La., February 17, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

blockade-runners (steamers) are in the harbor. One or two river steamers have a bow gun each. Informant heard that Fort Magruder had but one gun. Thinks South Battery has no guns. Another fort is being constructed at the southern end of the obstruction, opposite Pelican Spit. Both soldiers and citizens are eager for peace at any price. Slave-holders are willing to sacrifice their slave property, if necessary, to secure peace. Patrick Tervill left Mobile January 31; reached Meridian February 2, and Jackson February 3, 1865. General Forrest was at Jackson in same hotel with informant. He is said to be in command. General Taylor has gone to Augusta with all of Hood’s army except one division, which is to remain at Meridian. Hood brought back from his Tennessee campaign between 10,000 and 15,000 demoralized troops, exclusive of cavalry. Both cavalry and artillery horses are utterly broken down. Informant met Loring’s division on the railroad en route to Georgia and South Carolina. The railroad is in fair condition to Meridian. Several bodies of troops en route to South Carolina and Georgia have lately passed through Mobile. Five hundred captured negro troops (captured by Forrest) are at work on the Mobile fortifications. W. W. McDonald arrived from Mobile in New Orleans about three weeks since. He sounded the Blakely River at the mouth to enable the Heroine to escape. The outer bar has nine feet and a half of water; the inner bar nine feet and one inch. One mile from the mouth on the east bank is a work mounting twelve guns. Opposite, on the west side of the river, is a crescent-shaped bed of torpedoes; no others in the river. Three miles higher up, in the fork of the Blakely and Apalachee Rivers, is a work mounting about ten guns, commanding both rivers. A depth of nine feet of water can positively be found from the mouth of Blakely River up that river to the “Cut-off” into the Alabama River to Mobile City. The obstructions have caused the bars at the mouths of the Apalachee and Blakely Rivers to be washed away.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

Baton Rouge, La., February 17, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

I arrived at Vicksburg 11 a.m. on the 15th, and disembarked all my troops, in obedience to your telegram order. Finding no instructions, I ran down to Morganza to telegraph you. 11. Lieut. Col. W. D. Smith, One hundred and tenth New York Volunteers, and Capt. F. H. Man, Eighty-fourth U. S. HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,

New Orleans, La., February 17, 1865.

Major-General Hurlbut,

Commanding, d.c.:

Your note of yesterday is received. In accordance with Special Orders, No. 41, current series, from your headquarters, the Seventh Vermont Volunteers was ordered on the 13th instant to immediately move to Dauphin Island. It has not yet gone, and I am informed the reason is that they can get no transportation. I have not yet ordered away the other regiments, as they are to move with an interval of two days, in accordance with the same order. I have directed the Twentieth U. S. Colored Infantry to come down and replace one of these regiments, though I wanted to retain it at the Parapet to furnish a force for putting the works there in repair. The Indiana heavy artillery furnished a large force for guard duty, and this regiment is likewise ordered away. It will therefore be necessary to have another regiment detailed for guard duty in the city. and in order to be sufficient it should be a large one.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. W. SHERMAN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Asst. Adj. Gen., Mil. Div. of West Miss., New Orleans, La.:

Colonel: Your communication directing that the Fifty-third and Sixty-sixth U. S. Colored Infantry Regiments be relieved from duty in this department and returned to District of Vicksburg is received. These regiments constitute the garrison of the post at Saint Charles. They will be relieved in a few days by troops expected from the vicinity of Fort Smith. The recent forwarding of detachment of the Seventh Army Corps to New Orleans, as also the Thirty-fifth Wisconsin and Ninety-sixth Ohio Regiments to same destination, deprives me of any possible means of relieving the garrison at Saint Charles immediately. Orders for the Twenty-third Wisconsin Regiment to report to the commanding officer of the Reserve Corps have issued.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that the order from headquarters First Sub-District, Saint Louis District, dated February 5, directing the impressment of rebels and rebel sympathizers to work on block-houses at Meramec bridge, is in process of execution. I have sent Lieutenant Henry in charge of a squad of men, with orders to send to these headquarters all and any rebel sympathizers that he can find in the county of Franklin. On my return from leave of absence on the 12th I relieved Lieutenant Henry of the command of the post, and he informed me that the difficulty in procuring information is the reason of apparent delay in the execution of the order.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. PITTS,
Captain, Seventh Kansas Veteran Volunteer Cavalry, Comdg. Post.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., February 17, 1865.

His Excellency Thomas C. Fletcher,
Governor of Missouri:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your indorsement, with three inclosures, of date January 16 instant, relative to protection of western line of Pacific Railroad. I feel a lively interest in the completion of this road, and have to the utmost of my resources extended to the working parties on it protection. The limited force at my disposal has not allowed me to cover the entire line of the road west of this post. There are nineteen companies in this district, and I have kept one-fifth of the entire force in Jackson County and at Pleasant Hill, and at this time I have over one-fourth of my entire force in that locality. This, in my judgment, is ample for the protection of the road and our line of communication with Kansas City.
Colonel Harding, commanding that sub-district, seems quite energetic, and disposed to do all in his power for the protection of the interests of the road. The mustering out of some companies stationed in that locality has temporarily left this line comparatively unprotected. Other troops are on the move to supply the vacancy. Much of the danger and insecurity felt by the railroad contractors is more apprehended than real. Everything, however, possible to be done to quiet these fears and remove all true cause of fear and danger shall be done. The spiriting away of a horse or mule now and then from their corral is not possible to guard against, as the employees on the road may not be innocent of this mode of speculation. We are diligently at work organizing the companies of volunteer militia authorized by General Orders, No. 3, current series, from State headquarters. The greatest objection recruiting officers have to contend with is the liability of men after the enlistment to the draft. I hope to succeed, however, notwithstanding this difficulty. Jackson County promises to give me her company at an early day. Her population fit to be intrusted with arms is so thinned out that it may be difficult to organize more than one company there. I will see first what success we meet with in organizing the one already authorized before asking for another. I have applied through Major-General Dodge for permission to organize a company in Cass County. This is a positive necessity, and I trust, governor, that you will authorize its acceptance at once. The Missouri State Militia are now being mustered out every week, company after company. Soon they will disappear. It therefore has become a matter of the utmost importance that as many of the mounted militia companies as is necessary to cover the troubled portions of the district be organized and prepared for active duty immediately.

I am, governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. Dist.

WARRENSBURG, MO., February 17, 1865.

Col. CHESTER HARDING,
Kansas City:

The contractors on Pacific Railroad complain bitterly of depredations committed on them by outlaws in Jackson County and the great want of protection. Telegraph me at what point your troops are now stationed, and what you know of bushwhackers and thieves disturbing hands on the road.

J. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

PLEASANT HILL, MO., February 17, 1865.

Col. J. F. PHILIPS:

I have just arrived from Hickman Mills. Affairs there are in a bad state, and I have no doubt the settlement will be destroyed after Company C leaves, unless troops are sent there. They start on the 19th. Tomorrow the citizens are to assemble to raise recruits for the Jackson County Militia Cavalry, but they are not armed. Can you not send twenty-five mounted men to remain there for a fortnight? Tomorrow Company D goes out, and I have none left but Captain Peery's company. Will you procure me the authority to accept two companies from Jackson, one from Cass and Bates? I leave in the morning for Kansas City.

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel, Commanding.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., February 17, 1865.

Col. CHESTER HARDING,
Kansas City, Mo.:

I have ordered three companies of the First Missouri State Militia, all that is now left here of this command, to Pleasant Hill, to report to you for further orders. I have also ordered one company to Kingsville. This throws one-half of the force in this part of the district to the west. I have applied for authority to raise one company in Cass. Arms for your recruits can be had as soon as organized. Captain Little left here this morning to recruit company. Await his arrival at Pleasant Hill. Get the people to join the militia and fight, not to run.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

DAVIS' MILL, OZARK COUNTY, Mo., February 17, 1865.

General J. B. SANBORN,
Commanding Southwest District of Missouri:

GENERAL: I have the honor to communicate to you the following report: I can inform you that there is living in this vicinity of country a band of lawless men who are roaming through the country, making expeditions into Arkansas and the southern parts of this county, taking the property of individuals and converting the same to their own use. They also destroy the property of women and orphan children. They report to me that they have verbal orders to do these things. I can say to you that if such conduct is allowed that this country is bound to be evacuated, for they do not seem to make any distinction between loyal and disloyal citizens. I desire that you will inform me what I must do in the present condition of things, as there are daily complaints made to me by good, loyal citizens of this county of the bad conduct of these men.

I am, sir, yours, respectfully,

WILLIAM J. PILAND,

WESTON, February 17, 1865.

I shall be in Macon on morning train, and desire to see you.

Hon. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War:
Sir: Telegrams and dispatches from U. S. diplomatic agents and consuls in Europe indicate that one or more iron-clad rams are about to be dispatched from France and Spain, and may already have started, to attack a port or ports of this country. The information is not definitive.
enough to enable me to designate the precise point of attack, but it is inferred that it may be either Wilmington or Charleston. I have imparted this intelligence to the Secretary of the Navy, but it is also deemed advisable to apprise you of it in order that all practicable precautions may be adopted toward meeting any such attack.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., February 18, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 18th day of February, 1865: A communication from Col. B. R. Townsend, Cedar Keys, Fla., January 1, 1865, states that all rebel forces have been withdrawn from his vicinity and have been sent to join Hood. A communication from the same officer of January 12 states that three Federal prisoners arrived at his post from the rebel lines. These men state that there are 2,700 Federal prisoners under guard of two rebel regiments at Thomasville, Ga. (at the terminus of the Savannah and Thomasville road). This place is about 110 miles from Cedar Keys, Fla. Prisoners at Thomasville were confined at Millen, Ga., until the march of Sherman through Georgia, when they were removed to Thomasville. They are in a suffering condition, having been deprived of nearly all their clothes, and are very poorly fed. A communication from Capt. A. G. Fitz, Port Hudson, February 12, 1865, states he has learned that Scott was in Clinton, La., on the 10th, and was concentrating the rebel forces in that vicinity for the purpose (as supposed) of making a demonstration toward Port Hudson. Scott has less than 1,000 men and five pieces of artillery. Colonel Powell went toward Mobile on the 10th. He had two pieces of artillery.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 81.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
General Orders, Headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La., February 18, 1865.

I. The reserve of this military division is designated as the Thirteenth Army Corps, and the infantry divisions from the Army of the Cumberland, with such additions as hereafter may be made, as the Sixteenth Army Corps, subject to the approval of the President. Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger is assigned to the command of the Thirteenth, and Maj. Gen. A. J. Smith to the command of the Sixteenth Army Corps.

II. The chief quartermaster, commissary, engineer, ordnance, and medical officers at these headquarters will assign an officer of their departments to each of the infantry divisions and cavalry brigades that are not already provided. Division commanders will appoint the inspectors and provost-marshal, subject to the approval of the corps commanders, and will nominate for approval the mustering officers for their divisions. The same rule, except in the case of mustering officers, will apply to infantry brigades when detached from their divisions.

III. Special assignments of staff officers, according to circumstances, will be made for the Engineer Brigade and for the siege and reserve trains.

IV. The staff of division and brigade commanders will be limited to the officers indicated in paragraph 2, and to their assistant adjutant-general and personal aides, and no other staff or acting staff officers will be allowed, except upon the special recommendation of the corps commanders.

V. All officers in excess of this allowance will at once be relieved and sent to their regiments, and all officers and enlisted men belonging to regiments that are in the field, or under orders for the field, will be sent to their regiments without delay.

3. HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, February 18, 1865.

Col. WILLARD SAYLES,
Commanding Third Rhode Island Cavalry:
(Through General Cameron.)

Brigadier-General Sherman directs me to inform you that your report of the 10th instant* has been received, together with one sent by Lieutenant Miles, topographical officer of the recent expedition under your command. The topographical portion of the report of this expedition is highly satisfactory, but you are desired to amend your report so far as to state more explicitly as to the amount of arms seized from persons on the ground of their having no authority to keep them. The names of the persons from whom the arms were seized must be stated, as well as the number and kind of arms. Your attention is also respectfully called to the fifth paragraph of General Orders, No. 45, series of 1864, from these headquarters. The report on the seizure of private property for public use is unsatisfactory. It should be reported what officer was ordered to seize the property, and what officer is accountable for it to the United States, in order that the staff departments can follow it up in the settlement of the accounts of claimants.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

Commanding Northern Division of Louisiana:

GENERAL: I do not consider it wise or necessary to exempt the fire companies of Baton Rouge from draft. With the immense Government property in this city and with their complete but rigidly limited fire department I did so consider. Unless the draft should work very strangely at Baton Rouge there will be members enough left to keep it as effective as it ever was. Here, with steam fire-engines and telegraph department, it is otherwise.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., February 18, 1865.

E. B. TURNER,
Local Special Agent, Baton Rouge, La.:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your note of to-day permit me to state that plantations in East Baton Rouge Parish north of Bayou Manchac and west of the Comite and Amite Rivers as far north as Port Hudson come, in my opinion, within the orders of Major-Generals Canby and Hurlbut. From Port Hudson north to the limits of this division all plantations on the Mississippi River or within a few miles back should be included; on the west bank of the Mississippi all plantations on the river from Donaldsonville to the mouth of Red River and within a range of five miles back. When plantations are outside of our actual lines of pickets or back from the river great care should be taken that none but proper persons are permitted to register and receive the benefits of the new regulations, and all such persons should be compelled to produce references as to their character and good intentions. After registration they will be held responsible for good order and peace within their neighborhoods. I will issue a circular on this point, copies of which will be furnished you for distribution among persons registering.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. J. HERRON,
Major-General, Commanding.

Also that you send into these headquarters a list of the transports carrying troops of your command, with statement of what troops are on each boat.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. HOUGH,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

JOHN F. PHILIPS,
Col. Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. District.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., February 18, 1865.

Hon. ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
President of the United States:

DEAR SIR: I hope you will excuse the boldness of one as humble in life as the one now addressing you on as grave a question as I now do. We want protection, and come to you as a loyal subject of the Government of the United States, and one that have borne our part in toils and sufferings of the hardships of this cruel and God-forsaken rebellion. We have lost all that we had possession of when this war was forced upon us. Our houses have all been burned, with everything in them; our wives and children turned out without anything at all; our farms laid waste; and all this just because we are loyal to the old flag of the Union. Now, Mr. President, direct your attention to the Southwest Branch Railroad, so that we can have facilities for troops, and our words, with our lives if necessary, that all will be well. Mr. President, I know that giving us this road as a military necessity will give general satisfaction to all the loyal families in Southwest Missouri and place hundreds of women and children back at home who have been refugees from home since 1862; and further, Mr. President, I am satisfied that you could make it a great saving to the Government with the proceeds of the lands granted by Congress to be used for the benefit of said Southwest Branch Railroad, with the saving of the transportation for the use of the Army of the Southwest from Rolla to Springfield, and the extreme southwest would refund and save a sufficient amount to make it a paying institution to the United States.

I am, your humble servant,

C. B. WALKER.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., February 18, 1865.

His Excellency Thomas C. FLETCHER,
Governor of Missouri:

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to call your attention to the fact that the term of service of the Sixth Missouri State Militia Cavalry, Eighth Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and Forty-sixth Missouri Infantry has expired or is about expiring. The term of service of the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry expires on the 1st day of July next. The above organizations constitute all the U.S. troops now on duty in this district, with the exception of one battery of artillery. The enemy still has four regiments of cavalry north of the Arkansas River, which have occupied winter quarters at Crowley's Ridge, and have also many bands of guerrillas and rangers, and my information is that many companies are organizing on Red River and in Texas, with a view of coming into this State during the summer and autumn. During the fifteen months that I have commanded here I have had at no time less than four mounted regiments, and most of the time five regiments. With this force the enemy has been kept out of the district and very severely punished, losing the first four months of 1864 not less than 800 killed. Since that time there has been very little loss of life by either side, except during the raid by General Price, when the enemy's loss in the district, outside of what he sustained at Newtonia, was at least 200 men killed. During the time above mentioned the confidence of the people has been much restored. They apply themselves to the pursuit of agriculture with increased diligence and zeal, and all that seems now to be required to restore to this section of the State its former prosperity and peace is an assurance to the people that the Federal and State authority will be strongly and earnestly maintained here. To do this for the coming year, in my judgment, at least, requires three regiments of cavalry and one battery of field artillery, or an equivalent force. I deem it better to have a portion of this force volunteer militia organization, and respectfully recommend that the following force be ordered to be organized for this district, and that the same be at Springfield ready for active service by the 20th day of June next, viz: Two regiments of cavalry, one company of volunteer militia for Ozark and Douglas Counties, one company of volunteer militia for Taney County, one company of volunteer militia at Stone County, one company of volunteer militia at Barry and McDonald Counties, one company of volunteer militia at Newton County, one company of volunteer militia at Jasper County, one company of volunteer militia at Barton County, one company of volunteer militia at Vernon County, one company of volunteer militia at Saint Clair County, one company of volunteer militia at Hickory County, one company of volunteer militia at Camden County, one company of volunteer militia at Wright County.

The advantage of holding these border counties by volunteer militia organizations is twofold: First. The organizations are made up of men who reside in or have been driven from these counties, and, in addition to being acquainted with all roads and by-ways, have a great personal interest in restoring the State authority and filling up these counties with a loyal population. Second. These men thus joining an organization and going back to their old homes to serve induce most of those loyal families who have been driven from their homes to return also and raise crops, and thus these depopulated counties become again settled with a loyal population, a most desirable result that cannot be so speedily attained by simple military occupation with a Federal force. When these counties are once more settled up with loyal people the interior of the district, and almost that of the State, becomes safe from guerrilla raids, as the danger becomes so great getting into and out of the State. I therefore respectfully recommend that such steps be taken and such orders issued by Your Excellency as may be necessary to perfect the above organizations at the earliest time practicable. If authority to organize the companies of volunteer militia is granted, recommendations for officers will at once be made, or the authority granted to such citizens as seem best fitted for the positions. A regiment of cavalry for one or two years' service can be recruited in the district, in addition to the Fourteenth, now being organized by Colonel Gravely, if the authority to recruit it should authorize recruiting from citizens and also from all the regiments whose term of service expires on or before July 1, 1865. I have transmitted a duplicate of this communication to Major-General Dodge, commanding department, for his approval if it meets his views.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
No. 36. } Fort Riley, Kans., February 18, 1865.

1. Companies C and E, Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, now at Fort Larned, Kans., are hereby relieved from duty at that place and will immediately rejoin their regiment at Fort Riley, Kans., under marching orders to Fort Kearny.

By order of Col. James H. Ford:

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Major-General Dodge:

There is not sufficient corn to supply command, including militia, for one month. No hay for most of the route; must be saving. Corn cannot be had. Cannot some be sent from Leavenworth? About 100 Indian ponies captured. Good for nothing; should be sold. Send authority. Eat their heads off before spring.

MOONLIGHT,
Colonel, &c.

General Orders, No. 4. Santa Fe, N. Mex., February 18, 1865.

I. The following record of combats with Indians on the part of the troops, as well as on that of citizens of New Mexico and Arizona, during the year 1864, is published for the information of all concerned. Only those operations are mentioned which were attended with results, either in our favor or against us, and they are about as one to four, so that the account which follows shows but a faint idea of the work performed. It is possible that there may have been some robberies which are not mentioned here, but if so no authentic report of them has been received.

II. The number of Indians on the reservation at the Bosque Redondo, as shown by General Orders, No. 3, series of 1864, from these headquarters, was 703 Apaches and Navajoes on the 31st day of December of that year:

January.—Major Sena, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, with his command arrived at Fort Canby, bringing in 344 Navajo prisoners.

January 3.—Wagon-Master Russell's train, en route to Fort Canby, N. Mex., was attacked near the Puerco by about 150 Navajo Indians. Mr. Russell was killed; Mr. Strong and two teamsters wounded. The three lead wagons were cut off and twenty mules were taken by the Indians, together with some corn, blankets, &c. This information was forwarded to the commanding general of the department by Maj. John C. McFerran, chief quartermaster, with the following remarks: "Respectfully referred to the department commander for his information. This wagon-master, Russell, is Powell Russell, who entered the service of the quartermaster's department as a teamster, a poor, illiterate boy, in 1853. By his honesty, industry, modesty, truth, and energy he rose to be the principal or head wagon-master in the department. This position he has filled to the perfect satisfaction of every one, and has now fallen, like a true man as he was, at his post and doing his duty. It will be very, very difficult to replace him."

January 5.—Maj. Edward B. Willis, First Infantry California Volunteers, commanding Fort Whipple, Ariz., reports that the Penal Apaches run off eleven head of Government cattle at Walker's Mines. A party under Captain Hargrave was sent in pursuit, but failed to overtake the Indians.

January 6.—Capt. Julius C. Shaw, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, commanding Fort Wingate, reports that four Navajo Indians surrendered themselves at that post. Maj. Henry D. Wallen, Seventh U. S. Infantry, commanding Fort Sumner, N. Mex., reports that on the morning of the 5th instant the Navajoes run off the Apache herd from that post. Lieutenant Newbold, Fifth U. S. Infantry, with ten mounted men of the Second Cavalry California Volunteers and Fifth U. S. Infantry, were sent in pursuit, accompanied by Mr. Labadie, Indian agent,
Mr. Carillo, Mr. Whittemore, and twenty-five Apaches from the reservation. Captain Calloway and his company (1st First Infantry California Volunteers) was directed to follow the trail of the mounted party. Lieutenant Newbold encountered over 100 Navajoes, mounted and on foot, about twelve miles from the post. A sharp fight ensued, in which 9 Navajoes were left dead on the field. The Navajoes then broke into two parties and fled, and a running fight was kept up for about ten miles. Part of the force pursued one party to the Pecos River. Of this party only 8 escaped. Of the other party of Indians only 17 escaped, and some of these were wounded. Forty Indians are reported to have been left dead on the field and at least twenty-five wounded. It is believed that nearly all the Navajoes would have been killed had it not been for the extremely cold weather. The mercury was 10° below zero. The men could with difficulty cap their pieces, their fingers being so numb. Some were frost-bitten. About fifty head of horses and mules were recovered in this fight, all belonging to the Apaches. Major Wallen calls the attention of the general commanding to the handsome manner in which Lieutenant Newbold managed this successful engagement; also to the meritorious conduct of the soldiers, citizens, and Apaches engaged.

January 8.—Mr. George Cooler, wagon and forage master at Fort Arizona, N. Mex., with ten infantry soldiers and a party of Mexican citizens, while on a scout after Indians, recovered 1 Mexican boy, named Vincente Urbano, who was stolen by the Indians near the Pecos River, 1 rifle, and 58 goats. On the 11th instant came upon a party of Indians and succeeded in killing 1 and capturing 1 squaw and 1 child. In this skirmish two of Cooler's party were wounded. One of them, José García, died the next day. On the 12th found 7 horses and 1 mule and captured 2 Indian women.

January 12.—Capt. Julius C. Shaw, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, commanding Fort Wingate, reports that Lieut. José M. Sanches, with a detachment of Company F, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, attacked a party of Indians near the Datil Mountains and killed 3 men, captured 2 women and 1 boy, and 18 Navajo horses and 62 head of sheep and goats. During the year 1864 the few troops serving within the Department of New Mexico were obliged to undergo extraordinary labors, privations, and hardships in following the line of their duty. Early in the year, while the country was still covered with snow, their marches in pursuit of Navajo Indians, in continuation of the campaign begun in the summer of 1863, the frequent combats with bands of that tribe, not only in the Navajo country, but in the open plains to the east of the Rio Grande, exhibited courage, self-denial, perseverance, ability, and the will to encounter and to endure protracted hardships, on the part of both officers and men, which would be very creditable to any troops in the Army. It was often their lot to be compelled from the nature of the country, and sometimes from limited means of transportation, to carry their blankets and provisions on their backs, and to struggle for days through deep snows, over mountains, through forests, and down through the deep mazes of the most wonderful canons in the world, in pursuit of a wily and active enemy, who was familiar with every rod of that distant and in many places hitherto considered inaccessible region. It was their lot to feel that even though they were successful in their efforts far beyond the success which had attended the labors of others who had preceded them in campaigns against these Indians, still they would win none of that éclat which those received for perhaps no harder service on other fields. It was their lot to show fidelity and integrity and earnestness in their labors for the public good, prompted to this course not by the expectation of applause, or advancement, but by a feeling honestly to discharge their duty though no approving eye witnessed their labors or their sufferings, and they had no credit save that shown in the mirror of a clear conscience, or by the approval of their own hearts. The results which followed such labors will be considered as remarkable in the annals of Indian warfare.

The Navajoes soon found they had no place of security from such determined adversaries, and being pressed on every hand by unexampled rigor, the spirit of the tribe was soon broken. Many were captured and more voluntarily surrendered, when in bands of from 50 to 1,000 and 2,000 they commenced their pilgrimage to the Bosque Redondo, a place selected for them by the Government and situated upon the open plains east of the Rio Grande and more than 400 miles from their native valleys and mountains. The exodus of this whole people, men, women, and children, with their flocks and herds, leaving forever the land of their fathers, was an interesting, but a touching sight.

Then came the operations of the troops against the Apaches of Arizona. To those acquainted with the difficulties of campaigning in that distant country, formidable against the movement and supply of troops in every way in which a country can be formidable, whether considered on account of its deserts, its rugged and sterile mountains, its frequent and often impassable defiles, and in widely extended regions, the scarcity of water and grass, the wonder will be that the troops were ever able to overtake the Indians at all. Although the results of operations in that Territory were not so great as hoped for, yet they were creditable, and were won at an expense of toil and privation of which any description could give but a faint idea to one who had never traversed this very singular country. The marches of the troops were long, and sometimes repaid by but poor results; for example, on one expedition, under one of our most distinguished officers, the troops marched 1,200 miles and actually killed but 1 Indian. Oftentimes long scouts would be made and not an Indian or even the track of one would be discovered. Yet the movements of the troops in every direction through the country of the Arizona Apaches and a few partial encounters with them, attended by great good fortune, gave us the morale over them, until now they are inclined to flee at the sight of our armed parties and scatter in all directions, and not to stand upon hills-tops and crags and jeer at our men by insulting cries and gestures as they did when we first began war upon them. It is hoped that in a short time they, too, will be sufficiently subdued to surrender and go upon a reservation.

While all this was doing the Indians of the plains commenced their attacks upon trains of the Government and of citizens coming out with supplies. This required that troops should be sent out to help these trains past the points of danger. Once this was done and the most of the trains secure an expedition was formed to punish even these Indians for their conduct. The Kiowas had been the most hostile, and had committed some of the most atrocious of the murders. It so happened that in Colonel Carson's brilliant affair with the Comanches and Kiowas, on the 25th of November, the Kiowas suffered the most loss, and had their beautiful village of 150 lodges, together with all their property and reserve of food entirely destroyed.

Not only have the troops thus followed and punished the Indians, but they have opened new roads, repaired others which had become destroyed by floods, have built posts, guarded trains through the interior of Arizona and New Mexico, and conducted the thousands of captive Indians from the old Navajo country to the reservation, and not only guarded them there, but have directed their labors in opening up what will be one of the most magnificent farms in the United States. The general commanding the department takes great pleasure in being able to congratulate the troops on such a record. The increased security of life and property throughout this widely extended department attests the beneficial results which spring from these efforts. The prosperity of New Mexico and Arizona will be sure to follow. So it must ever be a source of gratification and pride to every officer and soldier engaged in this great labor to know that the people for whom he has toiled are getting to be more secure in their lives and to be better off in their worldly condition. All this has been done quietly and without ostentation on the part of the troops. In the great events which have marked the struggle of our country to preserve intact the union of all the States it was not expected that such labors would receive the attention of the General Government, but the fact that two great States will yet date their rise, progress, and the commencement of their prosperity from this subjugation of hostile Indians will always be most gratifying to remember by those who so nobly did the work.

By command of Brigadier-General Carleton:

BEN. C. CUTLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ADOLPH DENGLER,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., February 19, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Herewith I inclose for the information of the major-general commanding the military division copies of a letter of Brig. Gen. Andrew Johnson, Military Governor of Tennessee, dated 7th instant, and my reply of this present date.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

STATE OF TENNESSEE, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Nashville, February 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. DANA,
Comdg. Dept. of West Tenn. and Dist. of Memphis, Memphis, Tenn.:

GENERAL: This will be handed to you by James B. Bingham, of the city of Memphis, and chairman of the Union State executive committee for West Tennessee. I observe that by an order from General Canby, which has been promulgated in West Tennessee, a draft of one man in seven has been ordered in that district on the 15th instant. Without calling in question at this time either the legality or necessity for such draft in any portion of Tennessee, I have to request that said draft may be postponed, so far as Memphis and the Western District is concerned at least, until after our elections looking to the ratification of our constitution and the reorganization of civil authority shall have been held. Such postponement will very largely increase the number of voters at the elections to be held, and contribute not a little to restore quiet and confidence among the loyal people of West Tennessee. If after said elections shall have been held, and the draft shall have been found to have emanated from proper authority, it shall be deemed necessary to get additional men in that way, it can then proceed without material injury to the Government or inconvenience or injustice to the people of Tennessee. Your compliance with the foregoing request will, I am satisfied, be promotive of great good to the loyal people of the Western District and will be properly appreciated by me.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ANDREW JOHNSON.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., February 19, 1865.

Brig. Gen. ANDREW JOHNSON,
Military Governor of Tennessee, Nashville:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 7th instant, by the hands of Mr. Bingham, was handed to me by him yesterday. The draft ordered by Major-General Canby, commanding Military Division of West Mississippi, had already occurred on the 15th instant. His order left no discretion in the matter to his department commanders. The quota for West Tennessee had previously been so nearly filled by voluntary enlistment of colored men that only a very small number were drafted, and of these it is not at all probable that a man will leave the State, and I do not think the election will be influenced by the draft a single vote.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF VICKSBURG,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 19, 1865.

Capt. J. WARREN MILLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Mississippi:

CAPTAIN: Inclosed herewith please find copies* of correspondence with headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, which explains itself. I want it distinctly understood that I do not “misunderstand.” I keep General Canby advised of the progress of this moving expedition by every boat bound down. General A. J. Smith’s corps ought to get off by 6 this evening. They are loading rapidly. His troops have created no disorder here whatever. Upon the arrival of the first boat all the beer saloons were closed and guarded. Wirt Adams and Forrest are at Jackson and Meridian arresting deserters and collecting furloughed men of Hood’s army. Deserters are coming in occasionally, and many are crossing the river emigrating West. I think the gunboats are letting them cross.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. L. SMITH,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF VICKSBURG,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 19, 1865—10 a.m.

Lieut. Col. O. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: Yours of the 16th received, in which you express the apprehension that your cipher dispatches of 3d instant had been misunderstood. I send you a copy, colonel, also the original in cipher from which you will see that it could not be misunderstood. This copy is in the handwriting of your cipher clerk here, and the original in the handwriting of one of your cipher clerks below. Please notice that the word “cavalry” did not come here in the dispatch. Of course, I did not presume to give General A. J. Smith any orders, but gave him your dispatch of 3d instant, as turned over to me by General Washburn, which he has now. None of General Wilson’s cavalry have arrived. I inclose you a late rebel paper. I send this by an old acquaintance of mine from Pennsylvania, who is as reliable as an officer. I will advise you of the state of affairs here by every boat.

Your obedient servant,

M. L. SMITH,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

The transports carrying troops of this command will move in fleet, the Second Division in advance, followed by the Third Division, Artillery Brigade, and First Division, in the order mentioned. After leaving this port you will proceed to New Orleans and report to these headquarters on steamer Brilliant. You will not touch at any of the intermediate points between here and New Orleans, except in case of urgent necessity.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
WILLIAM G. MEAD,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Detachment Army of the Tennessee,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 19, 1865.
Brig. Gen. K. Garrard, Comdg. Second Division, Detachment Army of the Tennessee:

General: The major-general commanding directs that you proceed with your command to New Orleans, La., starting from this port at 4 o'clock to-morrow morning, giving the signal of one long whistle for getting under way. The transports carrying troops of this command will move in fleet, the Second Division in advance, followed by the Third Division, Artillery Brigade, and First Division, in the order mentioned. After leaving this port you will proceed to New Orleans and report to these headquarters on steamer Brilliant. You will not touch at any of the intermediate points between here and New Orleans, except in case of urgent necessity. On passing the intermediate stations in the daytime it will not be necessary to give any signals, but at night blow one long and five very short whistles, that they may know what command is passing, and save unnecessary hailing.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. HOUGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Second Div., Detach. Army of the Tenn.,
Near Vicksburg, Miss., February 19, 1865.
Commanding Officer Third Brigade:

Colonel: Orders have been received to embark the command by regiments and brigades on the same boats as before, and that the command be supplied with rations and forage, &c., to include the 25th instant. The baggage, rations, forage, &c., will be loaded to-day in order that the troops may be able to embark to-night or at daylight to-morrow morning. The five days’ rations will be issued by the division commissary on the landing near division boats. You will detail one commissioned officer and fifty men to report to Lieut. S. McKnight on steamer Kilgore at 7 a. m., to load division supply train. The detail will take with them their arms and rations, so that they will not have to return to the camp.

By order of Brigadier-General Garrard:

JAS. B. COMSTOCK,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. SECOND DIV., DETACH. ARMY OF THE TENN.,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 19, 1865.

Col. R. M. MOORE,
Comdg. Third Brig., Second Div., Detach. Army of the Tenn.:

COLONEL: The general commanding division directs me to say to you that owing to orders received from detachment headquarters the fleet will not start till after 12 o’clock and probably not till 3 a.m. to-morrow. There are several ports below this at which ordinarily the fleet would have to land and report. Arrangements have been made so that the fleet can pass without reporting. If the fleet passes during the night, one long and five very short whistles will be given to designate the command that is passing, the signal beginning with the John Kilgore. If the fleet passes the ports during the day no signals will be sounded. You will inform the masters of the transports carrying the troops of your command of the above signals, also of the change in the hour of departure, so that they may dampen down the fires. The transports will not touch at any of the intermediate points between here and New Orleans, except in case of urgent necessity.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. B. COMSTOCK,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
Saint Louis, February 19, 1865. (Received 1.30 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

The President telegraphs to stop the collection of forfeited bonds. They are bonds taken on the system inaugurated by you, are purely military, and cannot be collected by a civil court. He, I think, is not fully posted on this matter, and only those are being collected where the men have joined the rebel army, or have gone to bushwhacking. The President’s dispatch relieves every one under bond in Missouri, and every rebel can defy us. Please explain the matter to the President and let him allow the collection of those where persons have joined the rebel army or gone to bushwhacking. Since bonds were given a large number of attorneys, heavily feed, have been interested in doing this, they having learned that Judge Holt had decided the bonds could not be collected in civil court, and also having got such opinion from the prominent lawyers and judges of this State. They then obtained the President's order to stop collection and turn them over to U. S. courts, which will not touch them. The bonds were collected in cases where we had undoubted proof, and not until the whole matter had been investigated at department headquarters.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

SAINT LOUIS, February 19, 1865—9.20 p. m.

Maj. Gen. John Pope,
Milwaukee, Wis.:

Your dispatch of the 17th received here. As the troops at Randall and Sioux City cannot cross to Laramie I think they had better be held where they are, with instructions to send out scouting parties west to Elkhorn River and up Running Water, and keep posted, ready to meet any Indian force that may come on the settlements of Nebraska. It is pretty certain that one band of the Indians is working toward the settlements of North Nebraska. There are plenty of arms at Fort Leavenworth.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., February 19, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing, Jr.,
No. 12 North A Street, Washington, D. C.:

See the President about the assessment. Explain how and why it was made. Do this if any effort is made to revoke it, which I understand is being done. You know it was made under the instructions received from General Halleck.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, February 19, 1865—10.10 a. m.

General Dodge:
The courier-line to Riley is working. Everything is well here.

JOHN WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., February 19, 1865.

Capt. William J. Piland,
Commanding Company I, Forty-sixth Missouri Infantry:

Your letter of the 17th instant is received and contents noted. You should have learned and understood long ago what your duty is in regard to lawless men roaming through the country stealing from the people. The district orders are very explicit, and provide that all such men will be captured and treated in the same manner as guerrillas. You will be governed by these orders, and capture and destroy at as early a day as possible all that class of men you speak of. You are stationed in that section of country to preserve order and protect the persons and property of all living there, and will not fail to do everything necessary to accomplish these results. Dispose of all robbers in the most summary manner.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, yours,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

PAOLA, February 19, 1865—2 p.m.

Major-General DODGE:
Governor Crawford, who will leave Leavenworth about the 24th for Washington, desires that I should accompany him to Saint Louis to consult with you upon some matters of importance. It is quite important that I should have a personal interview with you; therefore I have the honor to request permission to go to Saint Louis with the governor.
Please answer by telegraph.

JAS. G. BLUNT,
Major-General.

CITY POINT, VA., February 20, 1865—11.30 a.m. (Received 11.45 a.m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington:

It will not do for Canby to risk Smith with any military command whatever. The moment Canby should differ with him in judgment as to what is to be done, and he would be obliged to differ or yield to him entirely, he would get no further service out of him, but on the contrary, he would be a clog. Let Smith continue on the same duty he has been detailed for.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

WASHINGTON, February 20, 1865.

General: Your dispatch of the 13th has been referred to Lieutenant-General Grant, who does not approve the assignment of General W. F. Smith to a command, but wishes him to continue on the duty for which he was detailed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

3. Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby relieved from

(Received 6.10 p. m.)

Major-General CANBY:

I am here and will be in New Orleans to-morrow morning with my command.

A. J. SMITH,
Major-General, Commanding.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, February 20, 1865.

Brig. Gen. JAMES C. VEATCH, U. S. Volunteers:

General: The commanding general directs that one more of the Arkansas regiments (besides the three mentioned in my communication of yesterday) be held in readiness to leave this afternoon by the steamer Corinthian, and the balance (two regiments) to leave by the steamer Belvidere to-morrow. Both these steamers will go to Dauphin Island by sea, and the commanding general desires that yourself and staff proceed by the Belvidere. It is highly important that no delays should occur in the movements of these troops, and requisitions for supplies should therefore instantly be made out and filled. The chiefs of the staff departments are prepared to respond without delay. If any of these regiments have made arrangements for payments, paymasters will be sent after them to Mobile Bay to complete the arrangements, but the troops will not be allowed to delay their departure from Algiers on that account.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

LEWISBURG, February 20, 1865—5.20 p. m.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

Lieutenant Greene has returned from scout to Quitman, Searcy, and Red River. Witt had returned to former place and scattered his command, which consisted of all bushwhacking companies in that section of country. At Miller's Ferry, on Little Red River, the scout came upon twenty-five rebels. In the charge Corporal Pemberton, of Company I, Third Arkansas, got some distance in the advance and succeeded in killing Captain Coleman, of Shaler's regiment, on recruiting service, and one man, putting the rest of the gang to flight before balance of scout could reach them.

MILWAUKEE, February 20, 1865.

Hon. A. LINCOLN:

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., February 20, 1865.

Brig. Gen. E. D. TOWNSEND,

I request authority to build telegraph line from Lawrence to Fort Riley. The Indian troubles on south route and the troubles to be apprehended in Southwest Kansas render it necessary that we should have quick communication with the Fort Riley depot, where we concentrate troops, to operate in both of these directions. As it now stands it takes five days to communicate and get answer.

Lieut. W. T. CLARKE,

 Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Great excitement here in town. Ten bushwhackers murdered a man by the name of Lany, robbed his house, and nearly killed another man by name of Smart seven miles from here. There was another gang of four ten miles from here this morning. Lieutenant Decker will be up on the morning train to consult with you. There are only seventeen men for duty here, and they are not mounted.

H. B. SAYRE,

Lieutenant and Assistant Provost-Marshal.

BELLEMONT, KANS., February 20, 1865.

Lieutenant Clarke,

Aide-de-Camp to Brigadier-General Fisk:

Sir: I have anxiously awaited your promised communication regarding the organization of Missouri militia, but having been regularly disappointed in my expectations every day for the last week, I write to remind you of your obligation. I have been through parts of Buchanan and Platte Counties, and have heard from Clay and Clinton within the last four days, and find the young men ripe for an organization on the independent principle, and all good, loyal citizens are willing to use their influence and means in placing the companies on an equal footing with other volunteers. The efficiency of such a command, if properly officered, armed, and equipped, and disciplined as officers having had three years' experience would discipline their commands, cannot be doubted for an instant. Give my best regards to General Fisk, and tell him if he will authorize me to organize the companies for Platte, Clay, Ray, Chariton, Carroll, Caldwell, Clinton, and Randolph, I will start immediately on the duty of organizing and drilling the different commands according to existing U. S. regulations, and will carefully select such men as are most competent and most loyal, recommending them through intermediate commanders to the governor for appointment. I will furthermore agree to have the proper number of companies ready for field service by the 20th day of March, my secret chain of vedettes posted on the proper line, and all signs and signals necessary for the entire success of the enterprise communicated to the most trustworthy of the loyalists (members of the league), and, in a word, be ready to exercise every bushwhacker that makes his appearance in the counties above mentioned or north of them.

Almost impatiently awaiting a reply, I am, lieutenant, very respectfully your obedient servant,

E. M. MORRIS.

Address, Wathena, Kans., until March 10; then Walnut Hill, Buchanan County, Mo.

SAINT LOUIS, February 20, 1865.

Major-General BLUNT,

Puola, Kans.:

You have permission to visit Saint Louis as requested.

G. M. DODGE,

Major-General.
Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of letter per Lieut. J. E. Tappan, acting assistant adjutant-general. I leave in the morning for the west part of my district for the purpose of inspecting the troops of my command, and to give my personal supervision to the perfection of my troops for the coming campaign. I am having built at Fort Larned a stone fortification. I found that the earth-works were much cut up, and in places washed away by the constant rains of the rainy seasons. Also, at Fort Zarah the troops are erecting earth-works and a block-house. In compliance with request expressed in your letter of the 15th instant I would suggest that at the same time an expedition starts from or on the Platte River route one should start from Fort Larned on the Arkansas, and one from Denver, moving toward a given point, going prepared to remain out from forty to sixty days, living and moving as the Indians, making, as it were, Indians of our troops. The cavalry now under my command are but partially mounted. Whenever a fresh mount reaches me and my men are relieved from garrison and escort duty I shall at once take the field and strike for the heart of the Indian country, although I expect that the horses sent to us will cause some delay in rapid movements until acclimated. Horses sent from the East for the first season on the plains are apt to be sick and of not much account. I have turned over to the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry all the horses belonging to the Second Colorado Cavalry (100 head). My scouts report Indian signs south of the Arkansas, and that there is a large camp of Comanches and Kiowas about 150 miles southwest of Fort Larned. No Indian camps east of Fort Larned at present, but many small war parties are watching the road closely, ready to pounce upon any small party of stragglers traveling along the road. During my absence any matters of importance will be forwarded to me by messenger.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding District.

Col. J. H. Ford,
Commanding District of Upper Arkansas:

SIR: It is with great pleasure I inform you that my efforts to obtain an interview with the Indians of my agency have been successful. On the return of a party of Wacos and Keechies, whom I have sent out, they brought in with them eighty-one Kiowas, nine Arapahoes and six Apaches. The head chiefs of the Kiowas and Apaches were of the number, as also other chiefs and leading braves. The Arapahoes were of Little Raven's band that escaped from Colonel Chivington's massacre. They were exceedingly wary and feared treachery on the part of the whites, but after two days' council with my interpreters, and having received a blanket and other small presents each, were much pleased with their reception and promised to return to their villages and put a stop to all outrages or crime and then return to meet me at any time.
I shall visit them for a full and complete burying of the hatchet. They said they did not wish to war any longer, and if the whites wished a permanent peace they were willing to make one, and that it should be a true peace; they would not do as the white soldiers had done to the Cheyennes. My wish is now, colonel, that you will co-operate with me, and I have no doubt but what the Santa Fé road and the whole southern boundary of Kansas can be pacified, so far as the Comanches, Apaches, Kiowas, and Arapahoes are concerned, in a very short time. In haste,

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. LEAVENWORTH,
U. S. Indian Agent.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., February 20, 1865.

Brigadier-General SIBLEY,
Commanding District of Minnesota:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 7th instant, addressed to General Pope, has been referred to me, with directions to say that “although I do not agree with General Sibley in his views of the advantage of locating these posts so near the outer settlements, yet I am willing to try his plan for this summer.” I am not so well posted as to give proper views in regard to this matter, but suggest to the general that we must avoid a multiplicity of little posts that may involve an expectation that the Government can guard all the frontier. The settlements must be self-reliant. In my former department I have encouraged the erection of neighborhood forts where the people and militia can conveniently assemble in the event of an Indian raid and erect constructions which give confidence and security to the surrounding country.

I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., February 20, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. SULLY,
Commanding District of Iowa:

GENERAL: Yours of the 5th instant concerning resident Indians inside of the line prescribed by General Pope for Indian limitations has been referred to him for explanations, and he directs me to say "that it was never contemplated to interfere in any manner with friendly Indians, and particularly with Indians living on reservations," and that you will "be authorized to follow the line generally suggested in my letter of instructions, and to except such Indians as he thinks best from its operation." These directions seem to devolve on you the determination of two things—first, a new line, and second, a class of excepted Indians that may come within the new line. My judgment as to the whole matter will be of no use to you till I get your views and a better knowledge of the facts concerning the settlements and the Indians in that vicinity.

I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 21, 1865.

Lieutenant-General GRANT,
City Point, Va.:

GENERAL: The Secretary of War directs me to return to you the inclosed papers,* with the information that there is a law forbidding the adoption of any plan like that of Governor Fletcher for substituting militia for calls under the draft. The Secretary had therefore been obliged to decline the acceptance of Governor Fletcher's proposal, and the papers were referred for your information in regard to General Dodge's views of the probable military necessities of that department and in order that measures might be taken accordingly.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

[Endorsement.]

CITY POINT, VA., February 21, 1865.

Respectfully returned.

The reports of General Dodge and Governor Fletcher, of Missouri, were referred to me in the handwriting of the Secretary of War for my "report and opinion." I believed, and believe still, the proposition of Governor Fletcher is the best we can do for the interests of the service. The troops he will call out will be turned over to U. S. authority and will form a part of the national forces. As defenders of Missouri they will go into Kansas or Arkansas, as may be necessary, in pursuit of invaders. If it is still decided that these troops cannot be received it will be advisable to send all troops raised in Missouri by draft to other sections of the country to serve, and supply their places from Thomas' army, giving him new troops now being raised to take the place of those thus taken from him.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 52. NEW ORLEANS, LA., February 21, 1865.

9. Capt. C. A. Garcelon, assistant quartermaster of volunteers, having reported at these headquarters in compliance with Special Orders, No. 348, dated War Department, October 15, 1864, will report in person without delay to the commanding general and to the chief quartermaster of the Thirteenth Army Corps for assignment to duty with that corps.

eral Hawkins, commanding division of colored infantry at Algiers, La. The other four regiments of colored infantry named in the said order will be disposed of as follows: The Seventy-fifth (at Morganza) will relieve the Thirty-third Illinois Volunteers, now at Terré Bonne. The Seventy-eighth (at Port Hudson) will relieve the Twenty-sixth Indiana Volunteers, now at Thibodeaux. The Eightieth (at Bonnet Caré) will relieve the Sixth Minnesota Volunteers, now at New Orleans. The Ninety-third will remain at Brashear City, and in place thereof the Eleventh Wisconsin Volunteers will be relieved from duty at that place. The above-named four regiments of white infantry will be sent to the camp located below Chalmette, about four miles from this city, and are hereby assigned to the Sixteenth Army Corps. The commanding general Department of the Gulf is charged with the prompt execution of this order.

11. The Forty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry is hereby assigned to the Sixteenth Army Corps. The commanding officer will proceed to the camp near Chalmette, La., and report to Maj. Gen. A. J. Smith, commanding the corps.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., February 21, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 21st day of February, 1865: A communication from Lieut. Louis E. Granger, Morganza, February 18, states there is an unusual degree of activity among the rebel troops in his vicinity. Captain Carmouche (rebel) has succeeded in conscripting a company in that parish. Confederate officers have stated they are waiting for low water in the swamps, and then propose to make a dash on Morganza. A communication from Lieut. Milton J. Roberts, Barrancas, February 18, 1865, states he has learned from deserters that there are from 4,000 to 5,000 troops in Mobile, and that the streets are barricaded. He confirms the report of a regiment of cavalry at Pollard. A communication from Maj. George Webster, Pass Manchac, February 18, 1865, states that many deserters from the rebel army are lurking about East Louisiana and Mississippi who fear to come within the Union lines lest they should be drafted. States there is an Irishman, near Arcola, who has contracted with the rebels to furnish them provisions, arms, &c., from New Orleans, and to take cotton in payment. This man has carried pistols to the rebel lines concealed in pork barrels. Report of J. M. Smylie, scout, who left New Orleans, via Pass Manchac, January 29, then near Camp Moore, through Franklinton, Fordsville, across Leaf River, the Mobile and Ohio Railroad above Citronelle to Kiddoo Landing, on the Tombigbee River, and returned by nearly same route February 20, 1865. Country is thronged with deserters afraid to cross the Federal lines on account of the draft. No fortifications at Choctaw or Indian Bluffs. Small detachments of rebel troops guard all the crossings of the Tombigbee and Alabama Rivers. From all information, re-enforcements from Hood's army and from other points are entering Mobile. General Maury, in that country, is reported to have with his command from 15,000 to 20,000 men. Two brigades of Forrest's cavalry and Colonel Maury's old cavalry brigade infest the section west of Mobile to Pearl River. Several independent companies are operating in same country. Forrest is at Jackson, Miss., and is about to take charge of the cavalry, Department of Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana. Between the New Orleans and Jackson Railroad and the Mississippi River there are two Arkansas regiments, two Mississippi regiments, and two Louisiana battalions, and Thompson's, Bedoe's, Carter's and other isolated commands. Water-courses all full. Troops obtain supplies only with great difficulty and by railroad or navigable streams. They find it difficult to make movements except by the same means. People are anxious to be included within the Federal lines.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,

Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 21, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby,

Commanding, &c.:

GENERAL: It is with much pain that I make the following statement: On the afternoon of the 3d instant I was handed two messages, one for Major-General Washburn, Vicksburg, which was required to be "placed in cipher" with more than usual haste, and read thus: "The commanding officer of the cavalry force now on the way from Major-General Thomas, &c."

In placing the foregoing in cipher, I inadvertently omitted the word "cavalry," which, combined with circumstances, has made it a most grievous error.

In dispatches of this description two-thirds of the words are blind; a word or part of a word, a phrase or a whole sentence being represented by a single, meaningless, and variable cipher, rendering it so intricate that even experts cannot read the dispatch without a key.

It was through this intricacy that I failed to detect the omission of the cipher word for "cavalry," my eye not discovering the error as I hastily reviewed the dispatch before placing it in a prescribed columnar form for transmission.

Errors are a source of mortification if only trifling, but the thought that this one has resulted as it has is crushing in the extreme. I do not wish to excuse it in the least. My only hope is that in this or whatever position I may be placed in the future to be able, by care and faithfulness, to efface in a slight measure the remembrance of this unfortunate circumstance.

I remain, general, your humble servant,

ISRAEL A. SHERMAN,
Cipher Clerk.

has been made heretofore to have all troops fully armed and equipped and in readiness for the field, and I do not know what additional orders could be given to make them more complete. To carry out the views expressed in your letter it is absolutely necessary for the light batteries here to be supplied with the requisite number of horses, of which they are still deficient in a considerable degree.

[Inclosure.]

KIRKSVILLE, February 16, 1865.

The entire number of men stationed from Jackson, Miss., around Baton Rouge to the mouth of the Amite River is 2,000, scattered in squads of from twenty-five to fifty men. Colonel Scott, Colonel Gober, and Colonel Powers have their men from Clinton and Greensburg down to the Amite River. Colonel Amacker has 150 men at Osyka, and scattered around the bridges of Tickfaw River. General Forrest, in supreme command, is at Jackson with one regiment. Colonel Griffith has two regiments at Monticello, on the Pearl River, and scouting down the coast at Mandeville, Covington, and Madisonville. Five regiments would offer but little opposition, as the men are conscripts from their homes and the woods. General Forrest has not a single piece of artillery in his entire command, and most of the men have no cartridges. If all the cartridges in the command were equally divided there would not be more than two for each man. There are in all ten regiments, and their average is not above 150 men each. The other 500 men are stationed between Rodney, on the river, and Jackson. If you go from Baton Rouge to Clinton be careful and look out when you reach Olive Branch, eighteen miles from Baton Rouge, and about one mile on the right-hand side of the road. Again, on the Greenwell Springs road, after you cross Sandy Creek bridge, right opposite the old blacksmith shop, on the left-hand side of the road in the woods; here there is a reserve. The first picket is at Bradford's, the second one on the cross-road which leads to Henry Womack's, and then at the fork from the old Liberty road up to Mr. Lee's is the third picket. On the other side of the Amite River from Henry Womack's up to Williams' Bridge, is under command of Colonel Gober. If you go from Clinton to Liberty take care at the covered bridge; about thirty-five men are stationed there on picket duty; and from Liberty to Summit, be cautious at the old tanyard, and from Clinton to Whitestown near Dubose's plantation, and from Camp Moore to Amite Station, near Captain Gilman's house.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., February 21, 1865.

His Excellency the GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF ARKANSAS:

Sir: For the following reasons I am induced to address you in behalf of a portion of our State: Several counties in Northwestern Arkansas have been almost depopulated in consequence of the withdrawal of U. S. troops from that section of the State. Those persons are now in Missouri, and have left their property to be destroyed by the numerous bands of guerrillas that infest that country, one of the most fertile regions of Arkansas. We have, as Your Excellency well knows, been compelled to do so in consequence of our love and attachment for our once prosperous Government. The U. S. troops in this section of Missouri would protect us if deemed expedient and subsistence could be furnished in our counties. We feel confident of this, and do not censure but praise the course of the Government. Were we permitted to return, the necessary subsistence could be furnished. The object of this communication is to solicit the privilege of raising troops to serve the United States in the counties of Northwestern Arkansas and to raise them in the following-named counties, the most populous and most loyal in that section of the State, viz, Marion, Searcy, Newton, and Carroll Counties. In Southwest Missouri, the counties adjoining Arkansas, are 200 or more families, the male portions of which would have long since gone into the U. S. service, but destitution (the result of moving) has necessarily compelled them to remain at home and provide for their families. We desire to raise four companies in the counties mentioned (enlisting those Arkansans in Missouri), to protect and defend our property, that we may cultivate it and assist in supporting our armies. General Sanborn, our present district commander, has proffered, with the consent of Major-General Reynolds, to subsist, arm, and clothe any troops — may organize from this post, as the situation of the country will admit it, and as he sympathizes with our unhappy people. We as Arkansans are anxious to uphold and defend our portions of the State and to cultivate our lands, and we can but feel that the United States will sustain us, as they have ever done from the formation of our Government. We can protect the part of the State referred to, and ask that troops be permitted to be raised as requested for twelve months, that our destitute families may return to their homes to cultivate our fields, while we “do battle for our country.” As a representative of my county I feel it my duty to make the request as above, believing you will grant it if in your power, and, if not, wield your influence to accomplish the desired end. On you we rely, knowing you have ever endeavored to promote the best interests of our State. We further ask that if consistent with the will of the Government, that we may have authority in time to return and put sufficient soil in cultivation this season to maintain us and our families.

I remain, governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES W. ORR,
Representative of Marion County.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., February 23, 1865:

Respectfully forwarded through department headquarters to the headquarters of the State of Arkansas.

The four counties referred to have been nearly depopulated by driving out the rebel families and the removal of the loyal early in the war to this section. A company of loyal men, formerly residents of these counties, could probably be recruited for each of the counties within named for one year's service in the volunteer militia, and in the present condition of that country each company could hold one county, and taking their families back with them the result would probably be the reoccupation of those counties by a loyal population, which would be advantageous to both Arkansas and Missouri. I therefore respectfully recommend that authority be granted to recruit and organize four companies of volunteer militia for one year's service in the counties within named, and that the general commanding the Department of Arkansas authorize the same to be clothed, subsisted, and armed by the United States Government from this post.

[General Fisk:]

General: A negro man was hung to-night at Dr. G. R. Jacobs', six miles from here, by bushwhackers. This was in accordance with a previous notice and order from them that all blacks were to leave in ten days or be killed by them. They alleged they had killed another at Stephens' same day. Of course our blacks are in terrible alarm. I desire to tell you, general, that we now have nearly about 4,000 colored people in this county, and as many, I expect, in Callaway and Howard Counties. What is to be done for their protection? Something, surely. They cannot get into our few garrisoned places. There is not room for them, and those already here are dying off at a fearful rate from their miserable condition. They cannot be removed, because they are too numerous, and besides they are badly needed in the county as peasantry laborers. They want to stay, too, and the home whites need their assistance. They are freemen and ought not to be forced off. They at least are loyal and would fight if armed. Most of their men are off in the U.S. service, and those left are unarmed and helpless. So are all our white population, and unfortunately our soldiers violently seize nearly all arms they can find in the country. Our military are doubtless doing their best, as much as could be expected. The fact is they have not horses enough and may be could not find them if they had. I dare not offer suggestions as to remedies, but it is my duty, and privilege, too, to call your attention to this sad state of these poor and innocent beings, and urge your better judgment to seek relief for them. Two colored companies of militia could be raised in the new militia organization, and if they are to be so treated they might be armed. I will gladly co-operate with you in taking any needed steps to relieve this trouble. Captain Bradley, our provost-marshal, is doing, I think, all in his power.

Respectfully,

F. T. RUSSELL.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, February 21, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Capt. H. N. Cook for his indorsement as to the expediency of adopting Mr. Russell's suggestion as to recruiting two companies of blacks for militia service in Boone County. This paper to be returned.

By order of Brigadier-General Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Second indorsement.]

COLUMBIA, MO., February 28, 1865.

Lient. W. T. CLARKE,
Actg. Asst. Adj. Gen., District of North Missouri, Macon, Mo.:

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the inclosed paper, asking my opinion as to the expediency of adopting Mr. Russell's suggestion in regard to recruiting two companies of blacks for militia service in this county. I think the people of this county are thoroughly aroused to their interest in the county and the Government. They seem anxious to have the company authorized by General Orders, No. 3, organized, and I think are working for it. There is a very fair prospect for the company being full very soon, and composed of the best men. Consequently I think it entirely inexpedient to organize any colored troops for militia service. There are quite a number of negroes here subject to military duty. I think, however, they are not disposed to get into any kind of service. They could as well be recruited for the U.S. service as for the militia. That something ought to be done for the negroes here is very evident. There are something near 1,000 quartered in such a way as to make every kind of disease prevalent among them, and they are dying very rapidly. I would suggest that arrangements be made to furnish them transportation to other States, where they could be employed. Employment could be furnished them here in the country, but they will not go to the country for fear of the bushwhackers. As for the man who suggests the plan of organizing them into the militia, he is entirely mercenary in all his ideas and propositions, and I think makes these suggestions solely for the purpose of getting control of affairs in this county. I have heard that he was using his influence against the company now organizing.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. N. COOK,

Captain Company F, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia.

FORT RILEY, February 21, 1865—9.20 a.m.

Major-General Dodge:

Col. J. H. Leavenworth, Indian agent for the Kiowas, Comanches, and Apaches, has just arrived and succeeded in holding a council with their chiefs and Little Raven's band of Arapahoes who escaped from Chivington's fight at Sand Creek. They desire peace and have agreed to keep clear of the Santa Fé road until Colonel Leavenworth returns. He desires my co-operation. His letter will be forwarded by courier and mail. They are camped south of here on the Texas border. Colonel Leavenworth has agreed to meet them near Brushy Mountain as soon as possible.

JAS. H. FORD,

Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., February 21, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER FORT BASCOM, N. Mex.:

Sir: Maj. Arthur Morrison, of Las Vegas, is anxious to send out a wagon with some goods, such as blue cloth, manta, bread, tobacco, &c., to the country of the Kiowas and Comanches in order to make an effort to buy the captive women and children who are said to be held by those Indians. This wagon will be under the charge of a man named Jesus Anaya, with not to exceed eight other citizens along. In case Major Morrison himself desires to go this passport will include him as well. The party are to have no arms but what are necessary for their own defense, and only a limited supply of ammunition. No arms or ammunition or liquor (with the exception of the arms and ammunition just named) are to be allowed to pass with this party. It being important to leave no means untried to recover from a horrible captivity these American women and children is the only reason why this passport is issued at this particular juncture when we have not yet concluded a peace for which the Comanches have already made overtures. This party and all other parties to whom passports have been or may be given to go to the Comanche and Kiowa country in the endeavor to obtain these or other captives, will be required to make oath in writing before yourself that they will convey no information whatever with reference to the number, position, kind, or movements of any troops within this department. And they will each and all be warned that if they break this oath or sell to Indians arms and ammunition that they will be amenable to suffer the utmost rigor of the laws.

I am, sir, respectfully,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
NEW ORLEANS, February 22, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant,
Commanding Armies of the United States, City Point, Va.:

GENERAL: After unavoidable delays, such as failures of connections, I at last reached this city, and now wait only for a vessel to carry me to Brazos. Arrived there it will take but few days to obtain all the facts necessary for a report on the relations, military and commercial, of Matamoras and Brownsville. From reliable information already at hand, I am justified in saying now that the statements of Mr. S. S. Brown, forwarded you from Baltimore, are in no wise exaggerated. Matamoras is to all intents and purposes a rebel port, free at that, and you can readily imagine the uses they put it to. There is never a day that there are not from 75 to 150 vessels off Bagdad, discharging and receiving cargoes. I would have postponed writing to you, however, had it not been for a report in official circles to the effect that our consul at Matamoras has been ordered off by Mejia. That personage (the consul) will doubtless communicate the particulars to Mr. Seward, and I therefore refrain from sending a version of the affair, but venture to suggest that it might be well enough not to notice it until I can be heard from. In an unauthorized way I will endeavor to possess myself of the facts. Should they turn out serious, I am sure you will discern the policy of waiting until it can be seen whether the Mexican Republic cannot be put in position to fight its own and our battles without involving us, an eventuality exactly coincident with Mr. Seward's views. As to the prospects of such an eventuality, without going into details, I will say generally, but positively, that I have now an arrangement so complete that it will hardly be necessary for the Government to loan me a gun, not even a pistol. This arrangement depends entirely upon your giving me command of Texas as a military department, with orders to report directly to yourself, and upon your sending me a division of infantry and a brigade of cavalry, with the ordinary complement of guns. The main body of these forces acting on the defensive and posted at San Patricio, the lowest ford on the Nueces River, will completely sever communication between the Rio Grande and Middle and Eastern Texas. You served, if I am not mistaken, on the Rio Grande line, but I am not sure that you have a present recollection of the topography of the Nueces region. I will therefore venture to speak with some particularity of San Patricio. It is about twenty miles northwest of Corpus Christi. The road connecting the two points is on the right bank of the river and always good. The west bank of the river is very bluffy. The channel is deep, but narrow. The east bank is low and level and can be overlooked from the opposite bluffs fifteen or twenty miles. At San Patricio is a ford which is, so to speak, a great funnel through which everything going and coming from Matamoras, Rio Grande City (near Camargo), and Laredo (old Fort McIntosh) must pass; and of necessity, for the desert belt, called Mustang Prairie, makes the region between the Rio Grande and the Nueces ordinarily impassable for travel except by way of the few traces marked by springs. Of these traces there are but three at all useful to the rebels, because they are the only ones that strike the Rio Grande in a southwesterly direction. One beginning at Laredo, another at Ringgold City, and the third at Brownsville, all of which unite about twenty-five miles from and west of San Patricio Ford. This rough description will enable you to see that if your object is simply to sever connection or communication between Mexico and Texas, it is only necessary to fortify San Patricio. This done, small garrisons can safely hold Brownsville, Rio Grande
City, and Laredo, thus putting our Government in position to let Maximilian very severely alone until I get my arrangements perfected. My purpose is to see, before the position of San Patricio is occupied, whether I can make accommodations with the rebels. If the intelligence at hand is true success in this part of the enterprise is quite promising. My propositions will be based on cotton, which, together with the fading prospects of the Confederacy, has brought the rebels to a low point of demoralization. The way to a private interview with Kirby Smith is clear, and I shall act as if already appointed to the command of the Department of Texas. Conditions will, of course, be subject to approval, and forwarded to you instantly. If accommodations are impossible, and if, in consequence, it becomes necessary to occupy San Patricio, then, behind that position, and under its cover, I shall initiate the organization of the Territory or new State of Rio Grande, without which it will be difficult to find plausible pretexts for the assemblage of men and materials essential to interior operations. Permit me to hope, however, that you will not delay creating the department and dispatching the troops. In selecting troops please send me Western men. You know how easily Southern people affiliate with them; and if the thing is at all possible it would give me additional confidence to have my old regiment, the Eleventh Indiana, and the Eighth Illinois Cavalry (Colonel Clendenin), ordered to report to me. I would also like the regiment of Texans now serving in the department. They know the region of Western Texas perfectly. While passing through Indianapolis I succceeded in getting 400 drilled conscripts for the Eleventh Indiana, so that it will now be respectfully strong in numbers.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,
LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General, U. S. Volunteers.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., February 22, 1865.

Rear-Admiral S. P. Lee,
Commanding Mississippi Squadron, Mound City, Ill.

Sir: I have the honor to inclose for your information copy of a confidential circular to commanders of departments and districts within this division, and to request that you will be pleased to issue such orders to your divisional commanders as will secure increased vigilance on their part while we are operating east of the Mississippi and while the garrisons guarding the river are temporarily reduced. Our operations against Mobile will commence in the early part of next month, and co-operative cavalry movements will take place from Vicksburg, Memphis, Baton Rouge, and Pensacola. The navy in Mobile Bay is ready to do their part of the work. We are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the monitors and tin-clads, which you were kind enough to promise us.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

CIRCULAR TO DEPARTMENT AND DISTRICT COMMANDERS.

Confidential.] Hqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., February 22, 1865.

As the withdrawal of part of the troops in this command for operations east of the Mississippi may induce counter operations by the rebels, I desire to impress upon all commanders that the important points occupied by us are to be held purely as military positions, to be defended to the last extremity, and that all interests are to be subordinate to the consideration of holding these points and maintaining the control of the Mississippi River. If any of the works occupied are so extensive that the condition of absolute safety cannot be secured with their present garrisons, they will be reduced in development until this condition is attained; and all commanders will anticipate the contingency of attack by putting the works under their control into the best possible condition for defense and employing all the resources of men and material that may be within their reach.

4. Acting Staff Surg. James Robarts, U. S. Army, is hereby ordered to report to the medical director Department of the Gulf for assignment to duty.

10. The Seventeenth Ohio and the First Indiana Light Batteries are hereby assigned to duty with the Sixteenth Army Corps, and the commanding officers of said batteries will immediately upon the receipt of this order report to Maj. Gen. A. J. Smith, commanding the corps, for orders.

11. Capt. H. R. Steele, commissary of subsistence of volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty with the Separate Cavalry Brigade organized in accordance with paragraph 5, Special Orders, No. 39, current series, from these headquarters, and will report without delay to Brig. General Orders, } HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
No. 22. } New Orleans, La., February 22, 1865.

The field allowance of transportation for the army will be as follows: For the general headquarters and for the headquarters of each army corps, 3 wagons; for the headquarters of each division, 2 wagons; for the headquarters of each brigade, 1 wagon; for each regiment of 250 men or less, 1 wagon; for each additional 250 men or fraction of that number (not less than 50), 1 wagon; for each battery, 1 wagon; for each company of pioneers, for its tools, 1 wagon. The wagons carrying regimental ammunition will be in charge of the acting ordnance officers of divisions, but if a brigade or regiment is detached from its division its ammunition wagons will move with the brigade or regimental trains. Each division train will be under the charge of an officer of the quartermaster's department, or an officer specially detached for the purpose, who will be responsible that the rules for the government of the trains on the march or in park are duly observed.
All transportation in possession of the troops in excess of this allowance will be turned over to the chief quartermaster for the reserve and supply trains. For office purposes three wall-tents will be allowed to the headquarters of the army, two at the headquarters of each army corps, one at the headquarters of each division or brigade, and one common (wedge) tent for each regiment or battery. For all other purposes (except hospitals) only shelter-tents will be allowed, and officers of all grades are expected to camp or bivouac with their men.
The field rations will be limited to the essential articles of meat, bread, coffee, sugar, and salt, and one-fourth rations of soap. All articles of subsistence to be taken will be packed in the simplest and most compact form. The equipage of officers must correspond to that of the men. Everything in excess of this will be rejected by the inspectors. The private servants and horses of officers will be limited to the number authorized by law, and no other private horses or animals will be allowed. No sutlers, traders, or any other persons not in the army, and necessary to its service, will be permitted to accompany the army, and no passes for such purposes will be given, unless previously sanctioned by the commanding general. Any person who may be found in or about the army without such authority will be assigned to some useful employment. All officers are enjoined to bear in mind that every man or animal or pound of baggage beyond what is essential for efficiency, that has to be fed, transported, or guarded is an embarrassment that must be avoided.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

STR: A cavalry expedition will move from Vicksburg on the 5th proximo for the purpose of cutting the railroad and telegraph lines below Jackson, and striking the Mobile and Ohio road at or near Winchester, and destroying as much of it as possible between that place and Mobile. Co-operative movements will be made from Memphis on the 3d and from Baton Rouge on the 1st, and I desire that as large a demonstration as possible be made from the latter place in the direction of Clinton and Liberty, on the New Orleans and Jackson Railroad, to distract the attention of the enemy from the main expedition, and for the purpose of cutting the railroad and telegraph lines as far as they can go and of otherwise inflicting as much damage on the rebels as possible. Be pleased to take the necessary measures at once to have the movement made promptly and effectually.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, February 22, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The reduction of troops within this department by recent orders has the effect of breaking up the several courts-martial and military commissions and leaving the administration of justice very incomplete. If Brigadier-General Brayman is in position to be used for this class of duty I would like to have him assigned. I do not suppose he is wanted at Natchez. I shall be very short of competent officers for these special duties, as it will be a paramount requirement in the present reduced force, consisting principally of colored troops, that the officers shall remain with their men and the force be kept in the best state of efficiency. There is a possibility, perhaps a probability, that the rebel Trans-Mississippi force may avail themselves of the absence of so many troops to make a dash upon the river, or even a movement in force. Should the latter be attempted the present extended line will have to be materially shortened, and many persons and much property will be exposed. The present great want, however, of the department is in intelligent officers not required for line duty. The details to carry out Treasury regulations and for freedmen, and to supply by parish provost-marshal the deficiencies in State authorities, are heavy and cannot well be reduced. I shall be compelled to decide many cases now pending on my personal authority and personal judgment from the want of officers to constitute courts.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

S. Colored Infantry (at Morganza) and the Seventy-sixth U. S. Colored Infantry (at Port Hudson) to report to Brigadier-General Hawkins, commanding division of colored infantry at Algiers, La. Before the receipt of your letter it was discovered that the error was caused by a mistake made by the cipher clerk at these headquarters. I am directed to thank you for the rebel newspapers sent and for your promise to keep these headquarters constantly advised of the state of affairs at Vicksburg.

Captain Hoyt, a paroled officer, will call upon you and can give you information in regard to this rebel fleet and upon other matters. If there was a gun-boat here and I had any troops to spare I should think them matters sufficiently important to send up the Yazoo to make inquiry.

[Inclosure.]

Headquarters District of Vicksburg,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 22, 1865.

Captain Bacon, U. S. Navy,
Gun-boat Louisville:

Captain: About seventy paroled prisoners were sent in to me to-day from Cahaba, Ala. They report that on the train with them from Meridian to Jackson were six large launches, each armed with a 12-pounder howitzer. The boats came up from Mobile and each had a crew of fifteen men. At Jackson the prisoners were detained three days, and while there learned that these boats went up on the railroad north from Jackson and were sent across to the Yazoo River. They could give no reliable information of the object of this fleet and I am left to conjecture. This is certain, that there are such boats and armed as I have stated, and I can imagine no use they can be put to unless they are to be taken across to the Mississippi at some point probably near Greenville and used to board and capture transports. I consider the information of sufficient importance to put you on your guard. It would not be difficult for six such boats, armed with artillery and manned by desperate men, to lie in wait in some bayou until a transport should appear in sight at night and then intercept her and pour such a fire into her as to bring her to bay, and finally to enable them to board and capture her. It may be well to caution the transports to keep a sharp lookout after night. They may have no such design as I have intimated, but no harm can arise from keeping a sharp lookout.

I am, captain, your obedient servant,

Major-General.

Vicksburg, Miss., February 22, 1865.

Special Orders, No. 59, paragraph 1, current series, Department of Mississippi, having been suspended, the undersigned hereby resumes command of the District of Vicksburg.

C. C. WASHBURN,
Major-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., February 22, 1865.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. JAMES H. WILSON,
Vicksburg, Miss.:

The cavalry under your command, equipped as lightly as possible, will move from Vicksburg on the 5th proximo, for the purpose of striking the Mobile and Ohio Railroad at some point in the neighborhood of Winchester, Ala., destroying as much of it as possible between that place and Mobile. It is intended that you should avoid Jackson and get in advance of any force that may be at that place. To effect this it is important that the road and the telegraph wires in the neighborhood of Jackson, and, if possible, between Jackson and Meridian, should be cut so as to effectually destroy all communication. This should be done by a small detachment, moving with great celerity, under the command of an energetic and determined officer, and should be accomplished at all hazards. For the purpose of distracting the attention of the rebels from your movements Major-General Thomas has been asked to send a cavalry force to threaten the roads south of Corinth. Generals Hurlbut and Dana have been instructed to make cavalry demonstrations from Baton Rouge, commencing on the 1st proximo, and from Memphis on the 3d. A cavalry force will move at the same time from Pensacola against the Mobile and Montgomery road, which will probably have the effect of drawing in that direction the cavalry force now west of Mobile, and our own operations in the neighborhood of that city will probably give full employment to any force that might otherwise be sent against you. It will be important that the direction of your movement should be masked as long as possible, and it may be advisable to transfer your force quietly to some point below the mouth of the Big Black while a demonstration, with as much show as possible, is being made in the direction of Jackson. Arrange this with the commanding officer of the District of Vicksburg. I do not wish to tramnel you with special instructions, knowing that you will give the greatest effect to the means under your control. It is apprehended that, in consequence of high waters or the state of the roads, the execution of this duty may be difficult. If, from these causes or by reason of concentrating a superior force, it is impracticable, make your way to Natchez or Baton Rouge, or to some point on Mississippi Sound or Lake Pontchartrain. The commanders at Baton Rouge and Natchez will be instructed to be on the lookout for you. Provisions and forage for your command will be kept afloat near Madisonville, on Lake Pontchartrain, and near Biloxi, in Mississippi Sound, and the gun-boats will be looking for you. Three signal fires, fifty yards apart by night, and three smokes by day, will put you in communication with them. I will endeavor to open communication with you by couriers as you approach the coast.

Major-General, Commanding.

New Orleans, La., February 22, 1865.

Capt. JAMES E. HARRISON,
Fifth U. S. Cavalry, Special Inspector of Cavalry,
Military Division of West Mississippi:

CAPTAIN: The major-general commanding directs that you proceed by first opportunity to Vicksburg, Miss., for the purpose of giving any assistance in your power in mounting and equipping the cavalry force recently arrived at that place from the Army of the Tennessee. About 6,000 horses are understood to be on the way down for distribution in the division, and you are authorized to use any of the animals for the purpose of remounting this cavalry. If necessary you can dismount temporarily any of the cavalry now at Vicksburg, replacing the horses so taken by the first that come down the river. Please confer fully with the commanders of the cavalry force and of the District of Vicksburg, and let no exertions be spared to make the mount and equipment of this cavalry as perfect as possible.

T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., February 22, 1865.

General DODGE:

Leave for Saint Louis to-day; be there to-morrow morning. Been detained by illness. Please don't leave city until I see you.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.
Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck,
Chief of Staff:

Col. J. H. Leavenworth, Indian agent for the Kiowas, Comanches, and Apaches, has arrived at Fort Riley. He succeeded in holding a council with their chief and Little Raven's band of Arapahoes, who escaped from Chivington's fight at Sand Creek. He says they desire peace, and have agreed to keep clear of the Santa Fé route until he can return to them. Colonel Leavenworth desires my co-operation. The Indians are encamped south of Riley on the Texas border, and have agreed to meet in council near Brushy Mountain. I desire to know the Government's wishes in this matter. Am mounting a force at Fort Riley as fast as possible to operate against these Indians.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Special Orders, Headquarters, Saint Louis, Mo., February 22, 1865.

3. Brig. Gen. John McNeil, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby assigned to the command of the District of Central Missouri, relieving Col. J. F. Philips, who will report to General McNeil for assignment to duty. The major-general commanding the department takes this occasion to tender to Colonel Philips his thanks for the able manner in which he has conducted the affairs of the district in the absence of a general officer in command.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, Headquarters, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., February 22, 1865.

3. Capt. Frank Eno, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, having been relieved from duty in this department, will at once proceed to Saint Louis, Mo., en route to New Orleans, La., in compliance with orders from Major-General Canby.

IV. Capt. Isaac P. Julian, commanding Company E, Forty-sixth Missouri Infantry Volunteers, now stationed at Neosho, will, upon receipt of this order and the arrival of sufficient transportation, proceed with his command to this post and report to the commanding officer of his regiment.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. B. Sanborn:

WM. T. KITTREDGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

COLUMBIA, MO., February 22, 1865.

Lieutenant: I inclose you a note written by Jim Jackson and pinned to the coat of an old negro man he hung night before last. I can't tell the object of this move, unless it is for the interest of the substitute brokers, a great number of whom have made their appearance here since this occurrence. Of course the negroes have been coming into town in droves. This negro was hung about six miles east of this place. Jackson had three men with him. I still hear of a few other bushwhackers in this county, and am trying to plan some way to get some of them.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. N. COOK,
Captain Company F, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia.

[Inclosure.]

Killed for not going into the Federal Army.

By order of Jim Jackson.

GREENFIELD, DADE COUNTY, MO., February 22, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. B. SANBORN,
Commanding Southwest District, Springfield, Mo.:

The undersigned citizens of Dade County would most respectfully ask leave to represent briefly the condition of affairs in this part of the military district under your command. From the outbreak of the rebellion a very considerable portion of the citizens of Dade County manifested a determination to stand by the Federal Government in sustaining the laws and in the suppression of the rebellion. This is made manifest from the fact that no other county in the State has furnished more soldiers for the Federal Army in proportion to the population than Dade. The few remaining citizens, after filling up the ranks of the Union Army, have struggled with a zeal worthy the cause to sustain the country by cultivating the farms in order to sustain the armies who were so manfully battling in the cause of the Union, and while we look with pride upon their noble and patriotic devotion we turn with deep mortification to the fact that many of them have been inhumanly murdered and their wives and children robbed of their little all. Yet, in the midst of these repeated outrages, our Union citizens have still continued in their devotion to the cause of the Union. They have borne with comparative silence what they considered seeming neglect on the part of the Government in the management of the military affairs of the country. Last spring we hailed with delight a commu-communication emanating from Capt. R. B. Owen, exhorting the farmers to repair to their homes and cultivate their farms, assuring them that they should be protected. Many had made their arrangements to leave the country, but at the earnest persuasions of many of us, in view of the protection thus promised us, were induced to remain, and the result shows that many of them were shot at the plow handle and others robbed of their little all.

The amount of military protection that we received under that promise was one skeleton company of State militia and a few of the enrolled were all that we had to protect the country and till the soil. But even after the bloody ordeal through which we passed last year we still had hopes that this spring would open more propitiously for us. We had made more vigorous preparations to cultivate the soil; more grain was sown last fall than at any time since the war commenced (in proportion to the population). Confidence in the ability and willingness of the military to give us all the protection that was necessary was manifesting itself among the people, but owing to the appearance of guerrilla bands in the country a panic has seized upon the people. Within the past ten days several of our citizens have been robbed of their horses, bedclothing, wearing apparel, and money. The consequences are that whole neighborhoods are preparing to leave the country, and unless some steps are speedily taken to arrest it there will be a general stampede and nothing will be left to protect but the military posts, and it is very evident that unless the farming interest is protected there is but little use for a military post. We would not be understood as reflecting in the least upon the command stationed at this post, but, on the contrary, would take the occasion to say that we have a good command, composed of officers and men who feel a deep interest in protecting the country and its interests. But one company is not sufficient to protect the post and country, too. Our settled conviction is that it will require at least one full company to constantly patrol the country or the people cannot stay at home, much less till the soil. We should have infantry to guard the post and mounted men to protect the settlements. Now, general, there is nothing here said that is drawn from the imagination. It is no idle visionary of the brain, but the records of the country will bear testimony, and our sole object is to lay the facts before you and through you to ask of those having the authority to render us that aid which we think we are justly entitled to.

With sentiments of high regard, we are, general, your friends,

D. B. RIVES.                      W. K. LATHIM.

Headquarters Department of New Mexico, Santa Fé, N. Mex., February 22, 1865.

Don S. Lerdo de Tejada, Governor of the State of Chihuahua, Chihuahua, Mexico:

Sir: I have had the honor to receive Your Excellency's communication of the 31st ultimo and the papers which accompanied it, which go to show that bands of adventurers, en route from California to Texas, or from Texas to California, have come to Presidio del Norte, in the State of Chihuahua, on several occasions under one pretense or another, and have committed serious outrages upon the people in that isolated town. That in December last a party of thirty or more Americans came to Presidio del Norte on their way from California, through the State of Chihuahua, to Texas, and were there furnished with provisions, powder, and arms by one John Broches [Burgess†], as other parties had been furnished previously by one Spencer and others, residents of that place. That provided with these means, of which they were destitute, they crossed over to the American side of the Rio Grande, and there, on the 20th of December, 1864, raised a red flag in their camp and began to commit outrages and robberies upon inoffensive citizens who went from Mexico to reside as tenants upon the lands of one Edward Holl [Hall†], some surprising them in their houses and making them prisoners, while others, after having secured the arms and animals, demanded the keys, and outraged the families, opened trunks, wardrobes, and stole from them whatever they wanted. These citizens, thus robbed and outraged, sent across to Presidio for help. This was promptly given, and on the morning of December 21 the outlaws were driven off with loss. I have this day forwarded your communication to the War Department at Washington, and also a copy of this letter. Under all the circumstances as described in the correspondence transmitted to myself by Your Excellency, it is difficult to perceive what other course than the one pursued by the people of Presidio del Norte could have followed. The only thing to be regretted, in my mind, is that all of those outlaws who raised the red flag had not been destroyed. I regard them in the same light as pirates upon the ocean, as enemies to the whole human family, whose utter destruction by the hands of men of any and every nationality is lawful and right. Your Excellency, in not having Burgess and Spencer [sic], men more despicable than the others because less bold, who take asylum in your State to render aid and comfort to these parties of desperadoes, who respect neither persons nor property on either side of the line, exhibits an example in leniency which on our side, were all things reversed, would, I am persuaded, find but few to follow. At present it is impracticable for me to place an armed force on our side of the river opposite to Presidio del Norte. As soon as this can be done it will be done. Meantime, or until other instructions may be received from Washington, I beg to express the hope that in case of similar outrages being committed hereafter by bands of lawless men passing from California to Texas, or from Texas to California, through the State of Chihuahua, that your good citizens, having given no provocation for these outrages, and going out under those higher laws than treaties and those regulating the intercourse of nations, the law of self-protection and the laws of humanity, will pursue and destroy without mercy all such aggressors. They are of the men who have dared to raise their impious hands against even their own country. They are of the men who, presuming upon the weakness of neighboring nations, revive by their filibustering raids the sixteenth century with its freebooters. They are of the men who would turn the tide of human progress back rather than urge it forward. Yet it is to be hoped, for the credit of our race, that they are of the very dregs of those here described. I mention these things to Your Excellency in the light of an apology, because I feel ashamed that these miscreants bear the name of Americans. If to follow and punish them your outraged people cross the line and come within the limits of this department, I believe I take upon myself no unjustifiable responsibility in saying to Your Excellency that the Government of the United States will approve their course, prompted as was the course of the citizens of Presidio by the ties of blood, by the claims of humanity, and by their natural rights as men, to defend their fellow-men whenever and wherever, being the weaker party, they are assailed without provocation or cause, and outraged in the manner in which these people were assailed and outraged.

I have the honor to be, with high respect, Your Excellency's obedient servant,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA,
DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Saint Paul, Minn., February 22, 1865.

Maj. R. H. ROSE,
Commanding Fort Wadsworth, Dak. Ter.:

MAJOR: A dispatch of 11th instant from Capt. A. S. Everest, Second Minnesota Cavalry, commanding Fort Wadsworth, has been duly received at these headquarters. It incloses a recommendation from Major Brown, special agent, that the Sisseton Sioux who have surrendered to the military authorities be permitted to locate temporarily at Lake Traverse for the purpose of planting, &c. Since Captain E.'s dispatch was written, copy of general instructions from Major-General Pope, dated 1st instant, relative to the location of these and other Indians similarly situated, has been transmitted to you for your government. Of course, under those directions, specifying particularly that none of them be permitted below a certain designated line, no return of these people to the islands in Lake Traverse or any of the regions thereabout will be allowed under any circumstances. Neither is the dispatch of General Pope, requiring the Indians so delivering themselves up to be encamped in the vicinity of the military posts, to be construed by you to mean that they are to be located so near Fort Wadsworth as to make it difficult to restrain the soldiers from visiting the camps. So close an approximation to the fort would prove a fruitful source of debauchery and demoralization to both the troops and the Indians, and inaugurate fresh contentions and ill feeling between them. The meaning of Major-General Pope evidently is to encourage these peacefully disposed Indians to place themselves sufficiently near to the military posts to enjoy the protection of the U. S. forces there stationed against any attempts of the hostile savages to molest them. Points four or five miles distant would be close enough to secure such a result, while it would enable the commandant of the post to prevent or detect and punish any officer or soldier who, contrary to orders, should attempt or succeed in the endeavor to visit these camps. The most stringent orders must be given and enforced in this matter, so that no white man at the post be permitted among these people, except with the written permission of the commanding officer, in connection with duty to be performed. Bearing in mind the instructions and giving them the most stringent application in all cases, you will authorize the location of the Sissetons or kindred bands of Sioux, who have given themselves up or shall do so hereafter, at such point as Major Brown may select under your direction. The instructions of Major-General Pope in the dispatch referred to are plain and explicit in prohibiting any attempts at making treaties by any person whatever or any visit by a white man, unless provided with a special permit from the district commander. This does not of course apply to the individuals composing a military force dispatched by you to these camps on special duty, but even in such cases commanders of detachments for such purposes should be ordered to keep their men together and permit of no interference or intercourse with the Indians, but, after discharging the duty imposed, return forthwith to the fort. The duty of visiting the camps when occasion requires should be devolved upon your most trusty and reliable officers, who will implicitly obey orders and permit of no relaxation of discipline. You will report without unnecessary delay to these headquarters the names of two respectable white men who desire to trade with the Indians under the restrictions imposed in General Pope's dispatch, but no one in any wise employed by or in the pay of the Government will be presented or allowed to trade with the Indians under any circumstances. The trading establishments are required to be in the immediate vicinity of the post, and under the immediate supervision of the commanding officers, who will regulate their intercourse with the Indians with all needful stringency and especially confine the visits of these people to the trading stations to the males only. The Indian women must not be allowed at the fort or anywhere in its vicinity at any time, for reasons which are sufficiently obvious. This you will regard as a precise and permanent order, not to be replaced except by authority from these headquarters or the direction of the War Department or other superior source. Application will be made by the brigadier-general commanding for the supply of some farming tools, as suggested by Major Brown, but it is doubtful whether such supply will be authorized by the Hon. Secretary of War. The necessary vegetable seed will be furnished by the assistant quartermaster in accordance with the order already given. The question of the employment of scouts and the questions therewith connected will be made the subject of a future communication.

By command of Brigadier-General Sibley:

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. C. OLIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

lowing report of information received at this office this 23d day of February, 1865: R. D. Fugler, a deserter from the Twentieth Confederate Cavalry, left the regiment in December, 1864; went to Brandon,

HQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,

New Orleans, La., February 23, 1865

Brig. Gen. John P. Hawkins,

Algiers:

Please send two regiments to encamp near the Half-Way House on the road to Hickox Landing. A steamer will be sent to ferry them across to Saint Joseph street, and they will march out by that street and the Shell road. Until transportation is furnished from Hickox Landing to Pensacola such details as may be required for fatigue duty, under the superintendence of Captain Morse, assistant quartermaster, will be furnished. Please make the necessary preparations at once.

By order:

C. T. Christensen,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Algiers, February 23, 1865.

(Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen, Assistant Adjutant-General:)

Colonel: The ferry-boat has stopped running on account of the fog and several of our wagons belonging to the troops and en route for Pensacola are left on this side. They will be sent over early in the morning. This will also prevent the teams of the two regiments ordered to Half-Way House. The regiments had better remain here till morning.

John P. Hawkins,

Brigadier-General.

Headquarters Southern Division of Louisiana,

New Orleans, La., February 23, 1865.

Commanding Officer Bonnet Carré:

Four companies of the Eighteenth New York Cavalry have been ordered to Bonnet Carré. On their arrival all of your regiment will come to this city.

By order of Brigadier-General Sherman:

Frederic Speed,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

Plaquemine, La., February 23, 1865.

(Capt. F. Speed, Assistant Adjutant-General:)

I sent a party of independent scouts up Grossetete last night. They learned that all the rebels on Grossetete had gone to Alexandria, excepting Cliff's and King's companies; men refusing to go. The scouts gobbled a rebel outpost—three men.

R. G. Shaw,

Major, Commanding Post.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, February 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron,
Commanding Northern Division of Louisiana:

GENERAL: The object of your movement from Baton Rouge on the 1st of March is to make as much of a demonstration as possible and give the color to the Confederates of a large expedition to be moved from that point. Hence the movement after it is commenced will be with as much ostentation as practicable. The troops will build bridges over the Comite as if the cavalry were merely a vanguard preparing for the advance of a heavy column. When you are satisfied that the object is accomplished and sufficient time has been given to the Vicksburg column to get well out you can either withdraw the force quietly, or if a good opportunity presents itself and they appear to be leaving your front to look after the others, strike sharply out without involving your command. It will be well to close the lines at Baton Rouge at once and hold them closely until your movement is completed. This fact will at once be reported and will produce the proper impression on the rebels. Keep me fully advised from time to time of the progress of affairs.

I am, general, your obedient servant,
S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., February 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

GENERAL: By to-day's mail I have your communications of the 16th and 21st instant, and note your remarks regarding the caution to be exercised during the present condition of affairs. The work had commenced before the receipt of your letters, and all is progressing well. Nothing will be left undone, I assure you, in placing my troops in the best possible condition, and I am giving the matter personal attention. The condition of the garrisons in my district after the troops now under orders leave will certainly be tempting to the rebels, and in my opinion there is more to be feared on the west than the east side of the river. After sending the Cavalry Brigade, 1,200 strong, with one battery on the Clinton expedition, I will have left at this place 830 dismounted cavalry, 360 infantry, and 300 heavy artillery. That force will make Baton Rouge and vicinity perfectly safe. At Port Hudson, after the two regiments under orders get off, will be left a total of 1,500 men, consisting of one regiment cavalry, one regiment infantry, and two four-gun batteries. There is nothing to be apprehended there. At Morganza there will be the Fourteenth New York Cavalry, 200 strong, of which 150 are mounted; one battery of artillery, and about 1,900 infantry. Late reports from Morganza and the Red River country indicate a movement from Alexandria toward Simsporn. If the rebel authorities get any reports from New Orleans such a movement will undoubtedly be made. I will go on Monday next to Morganza and look into the condition of affairs. One of my staff has been there for the past week and reports everything being put into shape. I had hoped that General McKean would be up ere this, and delayed a visit to Morganza waiting for him. Will keep you fully advised in regard to matters.

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

F. J. HERRON,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., February 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

GENERAL: I have to-day, per hands of Captain Wright, your communication (confidential) of the 22d instant, and also copy of communication from headquarters military division. Upon the withdrawal of the cavalry from Morganza for service below I was compelled to send the Fourteenth New York to that point. They are the only mounted troops there, and number about 275 men. I have now at this place the First Texas, Fourth Wisconsin, Sixth Missouri, and One hundred and eighteen Illinois Mounted Infantry, which have been formed into a brigade under Brig. Gen. E. J. Davis, numbering 1,800 effective men, with but 1,200 horses. Strong efforts have been made both before and since I came here to procure a sufficient number of horses to mount the entire command, but without success. Should we not get any stock between this and March 1, 1,200 men will be the number I can start. With them I will send two small howitzers. It will be impossible for the command to go from here direct to Clinton, the Comite and Amite Rivers being very high and without bridges. The force will have to be sent to Port Hudson by boats or go to the same point by the river road, taking the upper road from there to Clinton; or they might go from here, via Plains Store and Newport, striking the Clinton and Jackson road a few miles east of Jackson. The latter, in my opinion, would be the best route. From Clinton a demonstration could be made toward Liberty, while the main command could push east to the railroad. The roads north and east of here are in a terrible condition, owing to the heavy rains of the past week, and the progress of any force will be slow. No suggestion is made as to how long this force should remain out. Shall I hear from you on that point? You can rely upon the number of men I have mentioned being ready to move promptly at the time fixed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. J. HERRON,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,} HDQRS. CAV. DIV., 7TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 35. Little Rock, Ark., February 23, 1865.

II. Col. Milton H. Brawner will assume command of the First Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, as consolidated by Special Orders, No. 47, current series, headquarters Department of Arkansas, and will take steps to put his entire regiment in the camp occupied by the former Seventh Missouri Cavalry Volunteers as soon as practicable.

By order of Brig. Gen. Joseph R. West:

W. A. MARTIN,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Headquarters Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., February 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. John Pope,
Comdg. Military Division of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

General: Your letter of the 13th instant is received. I will communicate promptly whatever information I may receive in reference to the movements of the enemy that may be of interest to your command. The commanding officer at Fort Smith has been instructed on this point in accordance with your request. At present the following posts are occupied in this department, the garrisons being on a defensive basis. All the available force of the department outside of these garrisons (3,000 men) is now in the Department of the Gulf, and under the orders of the commanding officer of Military Division of West Mississippi. We have a cavalry force in the department of about 5,000, which is now dismounted. If it is mounted it will be held ready for call wherever it may be needed. List of posts: Little Rock, Devall’s Bluff, Pine Bluff, Lewisburg, Saint Charles, Mouth of White River, Brownsville and railroad, Fort Smith, and Helena.

Very respectfully,

J. J. Reynolds,
Major-General, Commanding.

Headquarters Department of Mississippi,
Memphis, Tenn., February 23, 1865—4.30 p. m.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

I have this moment received copy of cipher telegraph of January 28 ultimo, sent by you on the 16th instant. It differs from the original, as received by me, 2,000 men. I herewith inclose original, by which you will see that I was ordered to prepare and send 500 men. That quota was filled without delay by the Sixty-eighth U. S. Colored Infantry. I regret very much the mistake, but it did not occur here. I have ordered the following regiments to report at New Orleans without delay, viz: Forty-sixth, Fifty-fifth, Fifty-ninth, and Sixty-first U. S. Colored Infantry. In order to expedite their departure I have ordered their supply wagons (extra) to follow them.

Very respectfully,

N. J. T. Dana,
Major-General.

[Incl. not shown.]

New Orleans, January 28, 1865—2 p. m.
(Received February 1.)

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Memphis:

Prepare 500 infantry from the District of Memphis for service in the field, and send them with as little delay as possible to report at this place. Direct General Washburn to detach in like manner 2,000 infantry from the District of Vicksburg. Both detachments will bring with them not only the field transportation required by existing orders, but also a supply train for a march of twenty days. Fuller instructions will be sent to-morrow.

E. R. S. Canby,
Major-General.
Headquarters District of Vicksburg,
Vicksburg, Miss., February 23, 1865.

Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have received today from Cahaba prison, Ala., seventy-eight prisoners, mostly citizens, who have been unconditionally released, but there were among them three paroled officers and some soldiers. They report that Hood's entire army has gone to encounter Sherman. They left Cahaba on the 5th instant and have been so long on the way by reason of the bad condition of the railroads. They stated to me one fact that demands some notice. On the train from Meridian to Jackson were six large launches, each having a 12-pounder howitzer and a crew of fifteen men. These boats were brought to Jackson and from there sent up on the road toward Grenada. The prisoners were detained at Jackson three days, and some of them being clad in secession garb were able to pick up some information from conversations which they heard, and they heard that the boats had been taken to the Yazoo and they inferred that they were to be taken to the Mississippi. To what use these boats are to be applied we are left to conjecture; but that there were such boats and that each had a howitzer on board is certain. It is probable that the design is to capture some of the Mississippi transports. I think that it is a matter of sufficient importance to justify sending up the Yazoo to make inquiry in regard to them. There is no gun-boat here, nor have I any spare troops here, the garrison now only consisting of the heavy artillery and two colored and one white regiment of infantry, and about 250 cavalry. General Knipe is here with about 3,500 cavalry, but I do not understand that he is in any way subject to my orders. I can understand how it may be possible to launch these boats upon the river at night and intercept, board, and capture any unarmed transport. I shall give this information for what it is worth to Major-General Dana and to Captain Bacon, U.S. Navy, commanding this division of the river. It may be that there is no such design as I have indicated, but I cannot imagine any other object, and as caution is the parent of safety there can be no harm in keeping a sharp lookout.

I am, colonel, your obedient servant,

C. C. Washburn,
Major-General.

Washington, D. C., February 23, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,
Saint Louis, Mo. :

The Secretary of War directs me to say, in reply to your telegram of yesterday, that the military have no authority to treat with the Indians. Their duty is to make them keep the peace by punishing them for hostilities.

H. W. Hallock,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

Licking, Texas County, Mo., February 23, 1865.

Capt. J. H. Steger,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Captain: I have scouted the country south and west of here; also sent 100 men in four detachments to go as far south as the Arkansas line. This force has not returned. I can hear of no force larger than ten men within 100 miles of this place. I have conversed with the woman who gave the information of the concentration of Freeman's forces. All she knew was that a woman had told her that Freeman intended taking this place. Another woman, just from Arkansas, says Freeman was at head of Spring River, in Arkansas, when she left. There is no enemy in this country, nor has there been other than a small band of bushwhackers. There is considerable forage in the vicinity, enough to supply the company stationed here until spring.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

E. C. Catherwood,
Colonel Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers.

Macon, Mo., February 23, 1865—8 p. m.

Col. E. A. Kutzner,
Glasgow:

It is reported here that Rucker's gang of guerrillas are in Wayland Township, Chariton County. Henry Conrad, justice of the peace near Waylandville, can show a party the exact spot where they are camped. They are eight or ten in number and camped on Middle Fork of Chariton. Move secretly and quickly.

W. T. Clarke,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Saint Louis, February 23, 1865.

Colonel Ford,
Fort Riley:

The military have no authority to treat with Indians. Our duty is to make them keep the peace by punishing them for their hostility. Keep posted as to their location, so that as soon as ready we can strike them. Four hundred horses left here for you.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Omaha, February 23, 1865—1 p. m.

Major-General Dodge:

Scouts sent from Laramie report Indians that fought Collins at Mud Springs on Powder River. I have no report from scouts sent up Loup Fork or Running Water. I think the scouts sent to Running Water have been killed. I should have heard from them a week ago. Subsistence train passed Kearny day before yesterday. Train from here will get to Kearny to-morrow. I leave in the morning for Kearny. With your consent I propose striking Indians on Powder River at an early day, if the streams do not become impassable.

Robert B. Mitchell,
Brigadier-General.
Brigadier-General Mitchell,

Omaha:

As you go up the valley telegraph me and keep me posted. Where is Powder River, and how far from Julesburg? One of my engineers has gone with Sixteenth Kansas for purpose of getting posts and stage stations together. Let stage company have corn if you can spare it. We must keep stages running. Troops should be on way from Denver to make route secure to Julesburg. At any rate don't let stages stop for want of escort. Also telegraph me any point that you may find where stores or forage are needed.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Denver, February 23, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

Matters in district improving. Two companies of militia gone out; two more leave this week; other two will be raised in a few days. What troops are en route here? Where is my regiment? Not heard a word from it.

Colonel.

Headquarters District of Colorado,

Denver, Colo. Ter., February 23, 1865.

Mr. A. F. Sheldon,
Colorado City, Colo. Ter.:

Dear Sir: The petition from the citizens of your section of country, in which your name stands first, is received. While I am of opinion that some troops ought to be sent you as a frontier guard, and while it would afford me pleasure to render you all the assistance you would naturally expect and require, yet unfortunately I have not the men at my disposal for such purposes. Camp Fillmore will be re-enforced in a few days, if, indeed, not already, so that you will have a little more assurance of protection and feel proportionately the more safe. I cannot employ the Utes or any other tribe of Indians at present; nor would I be justified in issuing rations unless to an organization authorized by competent authority. My position in this respect, as in many others, is a very delicate one, and I would gladly see daylight through the cloud of doubt and gloom that hangs for the present over my head and that of the people of Colorado Territory. The Overland route is now being opened by militia, and your county has really been exempt from any call. It therefore falls upon you to organize into independent companies for your own protection, as they have been doing east and south of here, and where they are really in a more exposed position and condition than your section of country. My advice to you is to adopt this plan of protection; you then have it in your hands. I authorized some time ago the raising of an independent company, under a Mr. Wooten, for the purpose of scouting the portion of the Territory in which you reside, and under such an organization reported to the commanding officer at Camp Fillmore rations would be issued; since which time I have not heard a word about it. Although unable to render you any real permanent assistance, yet I assure you I am not unmindful of your interests.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

IV. Lieut. Col. Edward B. Willis, First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers, will relieve Col. Oscar M. Brown, First Cavalry California Volunteers, in the command of Fort Craig, when Colonel Brown, with the headquarters, commissioned and non-commissioned staff of his regiment, will take post at Fort Marcy, N. II. The Seventeenth Ohio and First Indiana Light Batteries are hereby assigned to duty with the Artillery Brigade, Sixteenth Army Corps, and will forthwith report to Capt. John W. Lowell, commanding the brigade, for orders.

By command of Maj. Gen. A. J. Smith: J. HOUGH,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

CAMP CHALMETTE, New Orleans, February 24, 1865.

Maj. J. HOUGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: I regret to report my command this morning in a sinking condition. If compelled to remain long where they are, contending with the water and mud of Chalmette, they will disappear. As they must be removed to-day I have taken the liberty of applying direct to the post commander for the use of barracks or quarters near the city. Hoping it will meet with the approval of the major-general commanding, I have the honor to be, your obedient servant, J. McARTHUR, Brigadier-General.

NEW ORLEANS, La., February 21, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor most respectfully to state that the Eighty-first U. S. Colored Infantry, now at Port Hudson, La., I know from personal inspection to be a well-drilled, well-disciplined, and well-officered regiment, perhaps the best colored regiment in this department, and that it is in fine condition for the field. And the Sixty-second U. S. Colored Infantry, at Brazos Santiago, Tex., is also a well drilled and disciplined regiment and well fitted for field service. Brazos Island can be approached by the enemy only by way of the Boca Chica Pass, which can be defended by 500 men against four times their number. I respectfully suggest that these two regiments be sent to the field, if necessary, in the place of other regiments not in so good condition, and I urgently request that one of these two regiments be assigned to my brigade.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, Wm. A. PILE,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

[Indorsement.]

Hdqrs. First Division, U. S. Colored Infantry,

Respectfully forwarded.

If my division could be strengthened I would like very much that it should be done. The effective force in the field will be much less than is shown as "effective strength" in the field return, owing to the many details necessary for the administration of the different staff departments, pioneers, &c.

General Orders, }
No. 26. }

Hdqrs. Department of Mississippi,
Memphis, Tenn., February 24, 1865.

In continuing the supervision ordered by the President of the United States, under date February 10, 1865, Col. Samuel Thomas, Sixty-fourth U. S. Infantry (colored), will proceed from point to point in this department inspecting the affairs of freedmen. All books and papers will be subject to his examination, and he will enforce the uniform administration of justice among and toward the freedmen. He will make frequent reports to the general superintendent of freedmen, and such reports direct to commanding officers as they may require.

By order of Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana:

F. W. FOX,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I find upon examining the strength of the regiments ordered to report at headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi that the quota can be filled without the Fifty-ninth U. S. Colored Infantry, and consequently that regiment will not be sent as advised in my communication of last night.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. J. T. Dana,
Major-General.

Paragraph 35, Special Orders, No. 77, War Department, February 16, takes away Brigadier-General Roberts from the command of the District of West Tennessee. He is the only officer here capable of commanding it. Were I certain that I had the right I would order General Brayman from the Natchez District, unless some one else were sent me, but orders are being received by the district commander here direct from Major-General Thomas, commander of the Department of the Cumberland, and I do not know how soon an officer may arrive here with orders to command the District of West Tennessee, who may look on the commander of the Department of Mississippi as an intruder here beyond the limits of his own department. My memory still recurs to Colonel McArthur, who, for faithfully performing his duties in obeying my orders at Columbus, was forcibly carried away from his command by the authority of the commander of the District (now department) of Kentucky, in whose command he was, and who still remains in disgrace in spite of my remonstrances and prayers in his behalf. I shall avoid all exercise of authority which might bring about a conflict of jurisdiction between the major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi and the commander of any other department, if it is possible to do so, till I receive further instructions.

Respectfully,

N. J. T. Dana,
Major-General.

I. In pursuance of instructions from Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby, commanding Military Division of West Mississippi, the One hundred and twenty-fourth Illinois Infantry will proceed forthwith to New Orleans, La., and report to him. They will take with them their authorized transportation and camp and garrison equipage. The quartermaster's department will furnish necessary transportation.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., February 24, 1865.

Capt. J. McC. Bell,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of the Missouri:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report in relation to the assessment in Saint Louis that when I assumed command here I found a large number of refugees being supported here by the Government. Houses over the city for their occupation had been seized and rents accumulating that the Government would have to pay. I immediately wrote to General Halleck, and in a letter dated December 24, 1864, he instructed that where the local authorities would not protect and support these refugees the disloyal should be assessed to do it, and the buildings of any disloyal persons could be used for that purpose; that the Government would not pay for their support, &c. I consulted the city authorities. They refused to take the burden. The Sanitary Commission proposed to take charge of these people provided I would fix up the old Lawson Hospital, get them together, and go to the necessary expense of making them comfortable. This was done at a cost of about $10,000, which the chief quartermaster, Colonel Myers, has expended in the payment of rent, for repairs, &c. This assessment of $10,000 was made to reimburse the quartermaster's department for amount expended and debts incurred, and if stopped will bring the whole matter back on Government. The change in this matter will save the Government in the end not less than $100,000. The assessment on Colonel McLaran I considered too much, and have ordered it reduced $1,500. He was colonel of the Minute Men when the war commenced. I understood when this assessment was made that it was done in accordance with the views of the Government, and in fact it was my only alternative. I trust it will not be suspended as it has now been partly collected, and is mostly levied upon the property of rebels who have fled the State, gone South or to Europe.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

The troops heretofore holding the line from Julesburg to Denver, being 100-days' men, who were withdrawn and no means taken to replace them, Colonel Moonlight, under the circumstances, declared martial law and ordered out six companies of militia to hold this line until the troops could relieve them. They are the only troops we have to hold the line from Julesburg to Denver until the troops about being sent arrive. I consider it necessary that these six companies should be retained. The hospital tents were the only tents in Denver, and all the posts and ranches being burned for a long distance were the only shelter these troops could use.

I have the honor to report that I have returned to this post with the expedition sent into Arkansas under my command. The result of the expedition was that it was found that the enemy has no organized force in Northern Arkansas, but all Northern Arkansas and Southern Missouri is infested by bands of guerrillas, who will not stand to fight and only harass the citizens. The country was thoroughly scouted and fifteen of these robbers killed. McRae has left Jacksonport. No enemy there. I had one man mortally and one sergeant severely wounded. I will send full report by mail.*

plimentary acknowledgment of my services. I can only say that I have labored hard and faithfully to organize and control for the general good the affairs of this district, which I found greatly deranged and complicated with many delicate troubles. If I have so disposed of them as to satisfy my superiors I feel compensated for my efforts. My term of service will expire in a very short time. The 8th of March the first company of my regiment goes out.

Thanking the major-general commanding and his staff for the uniform kindness, courtesy, and consideration shown me in my official intercourse with department headquarters, I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Headquarters District of Central Missouri,

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

Major: I have the honor to report that the contractors on the Pacific Railroad west of this being so full of apprehension about the security of working parties on the road, I have thought it best to transfer to that section all the force I could spare. I have accordingly sent to that line four more companies, which I trust will not only secure the road, but quiet the fears of the contractors. The mail contractors are also now satisfied with the protection given their coaches, &c. Colonel Harding telegraphs me that he fears he will not be able to raise the company of volunteer militia in Jackson County; too much dissenion among the people. I have ordered him to persist in the effort to organize the company, to harmonize the people, and impress upon them the absolute necessity of this company. He says he can organize companies under my Orders, No. 2, but I have instructed him to forego that until all effort under General Orders, No. 3, from State headquarters, failed. These companies are not filling up as rapidly as I had hoped. In some localities they are progressing very satisfactorily and will be full by the 28th. I have detailed for this recruiting service energetic and popular officers. It will be necessary to have the time for the organization extended, and I respectfully suggest that it should, if possible, run to the 10th of March proximo. I have ordered one more company to La Fayette County, making three companies now there. Captain Burris, of the First Missouri State Militia Cavalry, is in charge of scouts in that county, and he is doing excellent service. He has killed several bushwhackers lately and about completely broken up their haunts. The deportation of the female aiders and abettors reported by me a day or two since will about insure quiet there for some time to come.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. District.

Headquarters District of Southwest Missouri,
Springfield, Mo., February 21, 1865.

Major Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis, Mo.:

One of my scouts returned from Red River last night and reports that the rebel officers claim to have 60,000 men in the service on this side of the Mississippi, including all bushwhackers and partisan rangers, and that the army of General Price numbered about 20,000 men. General Price had his headquarters at Shreveport, and was understood to be at that place when the party left on the 6th instant. General Bryan, with one division of Price's army, was stationed at Shawneetown; Fagan was at Shreveport with his division, and Shelby with his old troops was at Camden, Washington, &c., and claimed to have 1,500 men on this side of the Arkansas. Kirby Smith, with Magruder's command and a large number of other troops, had moved quite a long distance into Texas; where, was not accurately ascertained. None of the commanders or troops seemed to be under any apprehension of any attack or advance by Federal troops. The troops were well supplied with meat and meal, but with nothing else. All who did not have Federal uniforms were very poorly clad. There was no forage in Arkansas, but it was represented as being abundant in Texas and south of Red River. The stock that the army had in Missouri on the raid was represented to be used up and much of it dead. The officers said that the Missouri raid used up both horses and men. There was a great deal of sickness in camp. Small-pox prevailed everywhere. I saw nearly all the leaders of bushwhacking bands from Missouri. All stated that they should come back early in the spring, and that there would be more bushwhackers in the State this coming season than ever before. General Bryan states this, and Major Piercey, who had 400 bushwhackers on the border all last year, told me that he should start up in forty or sixty days with 400 men, and remain all summer. I met two bands on the way up as I went down, about fifty miles below the Arkansas River. One was composed of fifty men, commanded by Lieutenant Inks, the other by Captain Troren, with about twenty men. I met two of Inks' men below Fayetteville as I came back, and they told me that the First Arkansas had killed two of the men since they got up. General Bryan said that they should make a raid into Missouri again in the fall, if they did not in the spring. All represented that arms and equipments were abundant, but said they were very short of ammunition and could not get it without great difficulty.

This scout is perfectly reliable and has the entire confidence of all the leading bushwhackers that ever infested this State. There is no doubt that all these old bands now intend to come back and bring with them more force than they have ever before had. I have had some fighting in Jasper County and on the North Fork of White River, and will send one report at once.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Fremont, February 24, 1865—3.50 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:

Powder River is 150 miles north of Fort Laramie, on direct line from Julesburg 250 or 300 miles. From my knowledge of Indians I am satisfied that the only way to end the present trouble will be to pursue and whip them before grass comes. Their ponies are worn down now, and I feel sanguine I can overtake and destroy them. It will take 10,000 soldiers to protect the two lines from Kearny to Salt Lake, via Laramie and Denver, unless we are able to punish the Indians severely before emigration commences. Major Mackey, of the Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, telegraphs me to-day that he is expecting trouble daily in the vicinity of Laramie and west of there. Says posts are weak all through the West Sub-District and asks re-enforcements. I have tendered the Overland Stage Company on my part of the lines all the guards required to render the lines safe. This service is using up an immense amount of horses. Our supply for the troops already here is sadly deficient. Roads here very bad. I will get to Columbus to-night.

Quartermaster-General U. S. Army,
Washington, D. C.

On the 6th instant I was constrained to proclaim martial law throughout this Territory, so as to raise troops for the defense of the settlements and to again open mail and transportation communications with the East. In so doing I naturally involved the United States in more or less expense, but just as little as possible. The weather is very cold here and quite a fall of snow, making it imperative to issue tents, as there is not a ranch standing from here to Julesburg, a distance of 100 miles, which can be occupied by troops, and yet these troops (raw militia) are compelled to be out day and night. There were a few wall-tents in the quartermaster's department here which were issued to the first companies; afterward old hospital tents had to be issued. I am aware this issue is irregular, but it could not be avoided. The climate is so very different from what it is in the East, men could not possibly... live in shelter-tents, and lumber cannot be procured at any price. I therefore respectfully ask that you approve the issue. Inclosed please find copy of order proclaiming martial law and calling for troops.*

HDQRS. DIST. OF MINNESOTA, DEPT. OF THE NORTHWEST,

Maj. Gen. S. R. CURTIS,
Commanding Department of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your dispatch of 20th instant, replying to that addressed by me to Major-General Pope on 7th instant, and to state that I do not propose to increase the number of small stations now garrisoned by the troops in this district, but simply to extend the line farther westward so as to cover the remote settlements. You are doubtless correct in your views that the settlers under ordinary circumstances should rely mainly upon themselves for protection against petty raids of the hostile savages, but the frontiers of Northwestern Iowa and Minnesota have suffered so terribly since the outbreak of 1862, and are now so denuded of men who have gone into the service at the South, that a mere intimation of the intended withdrawal of the troops stationed for their defense would be followed by an extensive if not universal stampede from the border counties. As I had the honor to state in my dispatch of the 7th instant, there is a very considerable body of hostile Sioux warriors encamped near the British boundary line, who will no doubt attempt to renew their incursions for purposes of murder and pillage so soon as the spring opens, and I am making every preparation to frustrate and punish any parties engaged in them, and at the same time to cut off the retreat of the main body, should their camp be established as far within U. S. territory as it was last year. You are doubtless aware, general, that in my field operations against the hostile Indians in this district I have received the most stringent instructions from the War Department through department headquarters not to pursue the Indians across the line into the British possessions, and the consequence is that these murdering bands can take refuge there when followed, and send their warriors in detachments more or less formidable to harass our borders. If permitted to follow these refugees wherever they might choose to go this

Indian war could be brought to a speedy close, but until that is done hostilities will be indefinitely prolonged by the surviving actors in the horrible massacres of 1862, who have no hope of pardon for their crimes. I have brought this subject to the frequent notice of the War Department, through Major-General Pope, and I have also recommended that authority be given me to exclude British traders and half-breeds from our soil, but thus far without any result. The influence of these last-mentioned classes upon the powerful Indian tribes within this district is very strong and is exerted to foment disaffection against the Government and to encourage the continuance of hostilities by the bands of Sioux. This fact is notorious, and yet these traders and half-breeds are permitted free intercourse with all the Indians within our territory. I respectfully urge that you will represent these matters to the superior authorities in Washington, as has already been done by Major-General Pope, that some action may be taken to allow the military commanders of this department and district to abate the evils I have mentioned. If authorized to do so I will put a prompt end to the daily intercourse of these British subjects with the savages within the jurisdiction of the United States with the strong hand.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 25th day of February, 1865: A communication from Lieut. G. G. Curtiss, Baton Rouge, La., February 20, 1865, states it is reported by reliable parties that the rebel pickets between Baton Rouge and Clinton, La., were withdrawn on the 18th instant. A communication from Lieut. C. H. Keller, Vicksburg, February 18, 1865, states that he has learned from deserters that on the 27th day of January two brigades belonging to Lee's corps were at Meridian. It was reported the remainder of the corps had gone to South Carolina. Cheatham's corps was at Tupelo. The general impression in Mississippi at that time was that Hood's army would go to South Carolina. One deserter states that the entire command of General Griffith will not number over 450 men (effective). This command was at Jackson on the 10th instant (doubtful). Ross' brigade is at Canton.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

T. J. LUCAS,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.
Headquarters Third Rhode Island Cavalry,
Post of Napoleonville, La., February 25, 1865.

Capt. B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District:

Captain: In compliance with orders from La Fourche District, of dates February 20 and 21, I have the honor to report that I have placed a picket guard at Kittredge's sugar-house, one upon the canal road to watch the passage back of Kittredge's sugar-house, and who, while they guard the approaches to Napoleonville, observe the roads in and to Beasley's plantation, and by the same across the canal. In addition to that I have established a patrol force to scout the canal road and observe the country upon both sides as far down as Pike's plantation. To watch this whole country perfectly in and around Napoleonville I have not sufficient force, as will be seen by the following figures: There have been present for duty for the past two days at this post 34 non-commissioned officers and 69 privates, with 41 men on daily duty; in addition to which there is one company of the Twenty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Infantry with 52 men for duty acting as a provost guard. This comprised our whole strength until last evening, when Company D arrived with 10 non-commissioned officers and 22 privates. With this small number the best disposition of patrols and pickets has been made that possibly could be. In addition to the daily duties of the regiment, almost every available man is now employed in serving notifications upon drafted men, which have been sent here for the purpose, and which must be served within ten days from date of draft. I would further respectfully add that in addition to the usual picket guard and patrol, I send out frequently small parties at night for the purpose of observing any force of the enemy who may have crossed Lake Verret or Grand Bayou. With regard to the recent raid made upon Pugh's and Kock's plantations, not being present at the time it was made, but absent on a scout at Bayou Goula, I do not know the particulars and can make no report. There are, however, various routes which it is possible and practicable for small parties of guerrillas to approach and pass Napoleonville. They can cross Grand Bayou at the foot of Doctor Martin's lane and come down the La Fourche road, or at Paincourtville take the Cut-off and come around at the foot of Jones' lane, near Napoleonville, which is a good road; or they can still take another road coming up from Grand Bayou. About half way up Doctor Ford's road they can pass through the plantations behind Paincourtville to Bayou Saint Vincent, or at about its center, and crossing that they can pass through a ridge of woodland beyond Kittredge's sugar-house and out of sight of the picket stationed there, and come out upon the canal road between Beasley's and Pike's plantations. The enemy can also cross the lower part of Lake Verret, strike the road that leads to Landry's, as seen upon Lieutenant Miles' map, and from there proceed to Labadieville, or proceed across to Little Texas, from which place they can take a cut-off on to the canal road and approach Napoleonville. In view of all these approaches, I have picket-posts on the La Fourche road above and below Napoleonville, one upon the canal road protected by patrols, one at Kittredge's sugar-house, and one at the foot of Jones' lane.

It is desirable to know as early as possible the condition of that country at the present time, and if there is any enemy beyond the Amite, and what and who they are. Where is Doyal? GENERAL: Apprehending you may not have a large map of the river above and below Gaines' Landing, I have procured one from the Treasury department here and had a part of it copied, which I inclose you.* As I am informed, the road from Camden to Gaines' Landing is one that is traveled more than the one from the same place to Columbia, but that the latter place communicates equally well with the country west of it, it would take but one day, with a small cavalry escort, to explore both places and ten miles of the interior country. Should you decide to make one of the places a post for troops, to be occupied for one year, the peninsula of 3,500 acres immediately below Columbia, with two plantations, marked Ville Monte and Milesia, would make a safe place for all the freedmen who would seek the protection of the troops. The country opposite, in the State of Mississippi, is occupied by the richest class of planters, and is one of the most productive in the State.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,

Col. W. A. PHILLIPS,
Comdg. Third Brig., Seventh Army Corps, Fort Gibson, C. N.:

I send the Ad. Hines with commissary stores and hope she will get up without accident. The Virginia Barton has no doubt reached you with supplies. If possible, load the Ad. Hines with hay, as we are very much in need of forage here. I hope to accumulate stores enough here to fully supply you, either by boat or wagon, and if so, the long route via Fort Scott can be abandoned. If this boat cannot get above Webber's Falls you will send a guard to that point to protect the stores which will have to be unloaded.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

VICKSBURG, February 25, 1865.

Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN:

I have the honor to make the following report of the condition of my command: I have present for duty 3,938 cavalry, one 4-gun battery, 127 men for duty. I require to fit my command for the field from 500 to 600 horses. General Morgan L. Smith has promised to turn over to my command some 400 artillery horses, too light for artillery service, that can be replaced hereafter, if he can get an order from your headquarters to do so. It is no fault of mine that I am not better prepared for the field than I am. I made every effort before leaving Nashville to thoroughly equip my division, but failed because the animals were not to be had at that point. I was informed that there would be no difficulty in securing horses when I arrived at New Orleans. Being ordered to disembark at this point I can hardly hope to get any horses from there in time to start on this expedition contemplated. I am therefore the more anxious to have the order issued for the horses here. I propose, unless ordered to the contrary, to move without artillery or wheels of any kind, except a few ambulances. I shall leave my wagons, fit up a pack train, and start with ten days' hard tack, coffee, and salt, and three days' short forage, and 100 rounds of ammunition on persons of men. It has been raining for four days, and at present my command is mud bound. Please answer by telegraph whether I can have the horses. Captain Harrison, of your staff, has just arrived with instructions in regard to the mounting of my division. No horses have arrived yet from above. There are but 200 cavalry at this post. Please send me the order for the artillery horses as soon as possible. The captain is of the opinion that the horses are better suited for cavalry than artillery purposes.

J. F. KNIPE,
Brigadier-General.

GENERAL ORDERS,

I. For the purpose of preventing suffering and abuse, Col. John Eaton, Jr., Sixty-third U. S. Infantry (colored), and general superintendent of freedmen, is ordered to systematize all Government efforts in behalf of refugees. All officers caring for the same will be subject to his orders. Post and district commanders will at his request detail such officers to assist him as are necessary and can be spared from other duties without manifest injury to the service.

II. Islands and other points of security on the river will be occupied, under Colonel Eaton's direction, for the benefit of white and colored refugees, where he will organize labor at wood cutting and cultivating the soil, for their own comfort and support and the benefit of the army, navy, and commerce. All wood yards connected with the freedmen will be under the same supervision and control.

III. Whenever they can be spared guards will be stationed in such numbers as may be necessary to save peril to boats and prevent smuggling supplies to the enemy, and no supplies will be allowed at any of these wood yards without the approval of the general superintendent of freedmen or that of the officer he may designate.

Maj. Gen. S. R. Curtis,
Commanding Department of the Northwest:

General: Your letter to me of the 20th February has just been forwarded to me here from Dubuque. I am still here on duty organizing the two rebel regiments. You wish me to give you some facts as regards the settlements and Indians in Dakota. Commencing at Fort Union, the farthest post I occupy, I have stationed one company of the Thirtieth Wisconsin which I had to leave there to guard the stores sent up the river to establish a four-company post up the Yellowstone; there being no water in the Yellowstone that season prevented the establishing of the post. This command I found would have a very good effect in preventing the Crows and Assinaboines from joining the hostile Sioux, giving them a point to rally on, for their more numerous neighbors, the Sioux, had by threats and aggressions almost succeeded in getting them to join them. Such was also the case with the Rees, Gros Ventrés, and Mandans, small tribes friendly to the whites who have their villages near Fort Berthold, and for that reason I left one company of the Sixth Iowa Cavalry at that post. I would have left two com panies, but there was no accommodation for them, and the season was too far advanced to build. From Berthold north to the British line, east to Devil's Lake, and south to a stream called Painted Woods, nearly opposite old Fort Clark and on the east side of the Missouri, this section of country is occupied by bands of the Santee or Minnesota Sioux and other bands of hostile Sioux, say about 600 or 800 lodges, Indians who have not made peace with me or have been induced to break the peace. All this section is visited by large bands of half-breeds from the British possessions. They come with carts and wagons loaded with goods, powder, and arms to trade with these Indians and urge them to commit depredations against our people, so that they may have all the fur trade. I am told they frequently plant the English flag on the banks of the Missouri in a defiant manner. Large bands of these Indians cross the Missouri and follow up the Little Missouri and Gros Ventre Rivers on hunting parties, a country so terribly broken up it is almost an impossibility of finding any small band that may take refuge there. This section on the Little Missouri is also frequented by other bands, small in number and scattered, who have sent in word to me they wish to make peace, but have not come in as yet. Owing to the nature of the country they infest they can give great trouble to any small party of troops. Out of the sections of this country above mentioned and within my district I do not apprehend there will be any very serious difficulty with Indians. War parties will no doubt from time to time visit the lower country for the purpose of stealing horses, and if any small body of whites have the misfortune to meet them they will fare badly. The next post that I have is at Fort Rice, garrisoned by six companies of the First U. S. Volunteers. This post by land is about eighty miles south of Berthold. Near here, on the east bank of the Missouri, near Beaver Creek, is a large camp of Yanktonai, of which Two Bear is the chief. These Indians were at war with me last year, but made peace and have since shown every disposition to keep it.

Following down the Missouri River, encamped on different streams emptying into it and on both sides of the Missouri, are different bands of Sioux, who have also made peace. Small parties of whites have been frequently, during the winter, passing up and down the banks of the river between Fort Rice and Fort Sully, and have not been in the least molested. The section of country between the Missouri and James Rivers, and south of the latitude of Fort Rice down to the latitude of Crow Creek Agency, is a barren waste, little or, you may say, no timber, and not a great deal of water, and that of the very poorest kind. It is, however, the great buffalo hunting ground of the friendly Sioux. No doubt it is also visited by bands of hostile Indians from the north. Leaving the garrison of Fort Sully, which consists of three companies of cavalry, you come to the Crow Creek Agency, about eighty miles. I have established a small block-house on the banks of the Missouri, about half way between these two posts, occupied by about ten men as a place of shelter for soldiers carrying the mail. The Crow Creek Agency has been lately established as a reservation for the Winnebagoes and Minnesota Sioux, but there are very few of them there. They have nearly all left, having been starved out. I keep one company of cavalry here to protect these Indians and the white men employed at the agency. The next post down the river is Fort Randall, badly located on the south side of the river. It would have been better located on the other side of the river, a few miles down and near to the Yankton Agency. Randall is about ninety miles from Crow Creek. I have a block-house with fifteen men about half way between these places for the convenience of travelers and the mail carriers.
Randall has a garrison of five companies of cavalry. It is not built like a post. The buildings are very much scattered. It takes a very great number of sentinels to guard it. At Randall commences the settlements of Dakota. About four or five miles above it, on the edge of the Yankton Reservation, are about two white men, married to squaws, and about half a dozen half-breed families. The section of country marked as the Yankton Agency and Reservation is occupied by the Yankton Sioux, a fine body of Indians, who have always been peaceable and deserve the care and protection of the Government. I have part of a company of cavalry stationed at this agency. With the exception of the places I will hereafter mention there are no settlers or settlements in this vast Territory of Dakota, nor do I judge there is much likelihood of there being any for many years to come: One family living sixteen miles northeast of the agency at the mail station, where I have a small body of troops. Bon Homme Island, about twenty miles from this station, is a settlement of about twelve or fifteen families. Yankton, the capitol of Dakota, is the next settlement, about twenty-five miles from Bon Homme, about fifty houses, is on the Missouri River also. James River is about six miles below Yankton. There are about a dozen, maybe fifteen, farms on the banks. I have stationed a company of cavalry on this river and above the farms. The road from Yankton to Vermillion crosses the James about three miles above its mouth, is pretty well settled, is about twenty-two miles long, and has about twenty houses on it or in sight of it. The town of Vermillion is a small village of about twenty families, at the mouth of the Vermillion River. I have part of a company stationed here, the rest of the company occupying a point on the Big Sioux River, due east of them.

The part of Dakota south of a line running from Vermillion due east to the Big Sioux is pretty thickly settled, being about the only really good land I have seen in the Territory. I have now mentioned the only settlements in this Territory. There is not a single citizen or civilized being living outside of the places mentioned. There used to be a settlement at the Big Sioux Falls, near the southwest corner of Minnesota, but the Indians drove them all out in 1861. I therefore propose, for the purpose of guarding the settlers, to establish a post of one company at Big Sioux Falls, one at the James near Fire Steel Creek, and a third at Crow Creek Agency, of one company each, the line between these three posts to be constantly patrolled. One of infantry and two companies of cavalry at Randall, pulling down part of the post and making it a fort instead of a village, and one company of cavalry on the road between Yankton Agency and Vermillion would be all the troops required in the Territory, provided the posts established in the Indian country are still kept up. I would also propose that the line that the Indians would be required not to cross should be a line from Fort Wadsworth south to the Big Sioux Falls, and from there west to Crow Creek.

With much respect, your obedient servant,

ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.

Commanding Officer Bonnet Carre Bend:

I am directed by Brigadier-General Sherman to instruct you to guard the country as much as you are able as high up as College Point. Whilst it is expected of you to keep a vigilant eye upon the bayous and outlets leading to the lake, and prevent smuggling and illicit trade, it is not expected you will so closely adhere to the system of closely picketing them all, as has been done heretofore, at least not until a larger force is sent there. Your duty in the premises will be to study the country and to station your pickets as will best subserve the object in view, whilst at the same time fulfilling the always necessary condition of having your troops in hand. The troops should be marched about as much as practicable, and the picket stations frequently changed from one point to another. Great care must be taken not to annoy quiet, peaceable, and loyal citizens, and that good order prevail at all times with the troops under your command. Your attention is invited to General Orders, No. 45, series of 1864, from headquarters Defenses of New Orleans, and the numerous general orders on this subject.

I am, sir, respectfully,

Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Northern Division of Louisiana,

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

General: I telegraphed you this morning of my action in removing General Ullmann and sending General E. J. Davis temporarily to the Morganza command. From the report of Lieutenant-Colonel Chadwick, inspector, it seems General Ullmann has not been in condition for several days to give his best attention to the duties devolving upon him, and Capt. L. B. Morey, of my staff, reports likewise. As the rebels were reported to be active on the Atchafalaya, and the garrison at Morganza had been reduced, I did not deem it altogether safe to leave General Ullmann there, and so relieved him, directing that he should report to the adjutant-general, Department of the Gulf. General Davis has assumed command temporarily. I had hoped before this to have heard from General McKean, who I understood was to be assigned to that district. General Ullmann reports a heavy rebel force crossing the Atchafalaya with artillery, but I cannot believe that any number of troops are there just at present. The condition of the roads alone would prevent any such movement. I shall know within a day or two what is going on in that section. Everything is prepared for the movement from here at the time fixed. The weather and roads are terrible. We have had but one clear day in two weeks, but nothing shall delay the movement.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. J. Herron,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., February 26, 1863.

Rear-Admiral S. P. Lee, U. S. Navy,
Commanding Mississippi Squadron:

I beg leave to inclose for your information a copy of a letter* which Major-General Washburn, at Vicksburg, has written to Lieutenant-Commander Bacon relative to movements of the enemy, with armed launches, on the Yazoo or in that vicinity. I do not know whether he forwarded a copy to you, but I considered it important that you should have the intelligence, and I hope it will not be inconvenient to have the river patrolled as actively as possible from Vicksburg to the mouth of the Arkansas. It is not improbable that the rebels have at their command a large number of bateaux, skiffs, and other floats, which they can use in the Yazoo and its confluent, and it is known that they have one small steam-boat there. I can only conjecture what they intend to do with the water craft which General Washburn reports having been sent up the Mississippi Central. Three ideas suggest themselves. First, the capture of Mississippi steam-boats or the surprise of a gun-boat. Second, the crossing of a force from the Trans-Mississippi to the east side. Third, the embarkation of a division in small craft on the Yazoo, and dropping down in the night to the Mississippi and attempting a landing by surprise on the levee inside the works of Vicksburg to destroy the arsenal, magazines, and other public property, or to attempt the capture of the place, in the present reduced state of the garrison, by surprise. If I can gather further information I will notify you, and will, with the limited means now left at my disposal, co-operate with you in any plan you may think proper to adopt.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, February 26, 1865. (Received 27th.)

Capt. J. McC. Bell,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of the Missouri:

CAPTAIN: For the information of the major-general commanding Military Division of the Missouri, I submit such information as I have relative to the rebel force on Red River and in that vicinity. Price, Magruder, Stand Watie, Gano, &c., commands are near Camden, Boggy Depot, and Washington, and other points in the Choctaw Nation. They are doing what they can to fit their commands for the field, mounting, equipping, arming, &c. The force is said to be in pretty good condition. Scouts that have been there say it is the general talk that they will make a raid north early in the spring, or as soon as grass grows. Rebels in Missouri universally believe that Price is again coming north. Deserters from his army say he tells them he is going back to Missouri and Kansas, but they also state that this is said to hold his Missouri recruits with him. The leading officers are generally dissatisfied with the management, and do not hesitate to denounce Price and his late campaign. I am of the opinion that Price's movements are contingent upon any movement in Texas or Arkansas on our part that may draw his attention. If none is made he will make a movement north. There are men from here now in his camp who will, on their return, be able to give us reliable information. I am convinced that about 1,100 Texas cavalry in Bonham and Sherman Counties, Tex., are preparing for a raid into Kansas by way of Neosho Valley. I propose to use the troops at Forts Scott and Riley to check it. There are some four regiments of rebel cavalry of Shelby's command wintering on Crowley's Ridge, north of the Arkansas River. This is the only organized force north of Arkansas River.

I am, captain, very respectfully,your obedient servant,
G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron,
Commanding Northern Division of Louisiana:

GENERAL: In reply to yours of the 23d I would say that I concur in your views as to the east side of the river. Any pressure that may show itself in that direction is temporary. The manifest tendency of affairs will be to concentrate the Southern forces somewhere about Selma, or perhaps farther east in Alabama or Georgia. If they do not do this they will cease to be an organized force under general control for campaign operations. Mobile will unquestionably be evacuated as soon as Canby develops his forces on the mainland. If Kirby Smith means fight he will show his head of column within ten days after this expedition leaves New Orleans somewhere on the Atchafalaya, either threatening the river near Morganza or the railroad near La Fourche Crossing. Four regiments have been ordered down from Memphis.
What they will do I do not know. Two or three of these you will stop at Morganza, Port Hudson, or Baton Rouge, as you please. One I wish to come to the city, to be sent to Brashear City. With this force and a good understanding with the gun-boats Morganza can be held any reasonable length of time. It is certainly on that side that you must expect attack. There is but one contingency that I can foresee in which much force can be developed on the east. If the Mobile and Ohio Railroad should not be interfered with before the evacuation of Mobile, and any considerable dissension should arise, as is probable, the Texas and Louisiana troops may endeavor to force a crossing of the Mississippi. Charleston, Savannah, and Wilmington being gone, they may throw this force to Texas as the only hope of saving and sustaining it, Matamoras being now their only outlet and inlet. We fire 100 guns to-day for Charleston. By the way, examine the post at Morganza very carefully, especially as to magazines.

Brig. Gen. EDMUND J. DAVIS,

GENERAL: Major-General Herron is in receipt of your letter of this morning. On its receipt, by his direction, I telegraphed you to cause your ordnance officer to ascertain if there is sufficient ammunition remaining serviceable for present use in case of need, and that officers and material would be sent you as needed on application by telegram or letter. There is no engineer officer obtainable except at New Orleans. The major-general commanding desires you to report whether the works and magazines are so far injured as to make it necessary to send an engineer immediately, or can (with the force you have at your command) the works be placed in suitable condition for defense and the magazines for the temporary protection of the ordnance. Whenever you are satisfied the reports of the movements of the enemy are erroneous you will save the cavalry horses as much as possible from extra labor. The mounted force being small at Morganza, it is essential that no unnecessary work be required of it, and that it be kept in efficient condition. Since writing the above the major-general commanding directs me to say that he has concluded to send to New Orleans for an engineer officer to be sent you, but would like the report as called for in this letter.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

Lieut. L. B. Jenks,
Actg. Asst. Adjt. Gen., U. S. Forces, Morganza, La.:

I have the honor to make the following statement for the information of the general commanding: The Sixty-second, Sixty-fifth, and Sixty-seventh Regiments U. S. Colored Infantry were formed into a Provisional Brigade last March. By Special Orders, No. 282, Department of the Gulf, series 1864, the Sixty-fifth, Sixty-seventh, and Ninety-ninth Regiments were formed into the Second Brigade, First Division, U. S. Colored Troops. The Ninety-ninth has since been ordered to Tortugas, Fla. By Special Orders, No. 41, Department of the Gulf, February 13, 1865, the above-mentioned order, No. 282, was revoked. When I received said Order No. 41 I asked General Ullmann, then commanding, the condition of the Sixty-fifth and Sixty-seventh Regiments, and was informed by him that they would still constitute the Provisional Brigade the same as before Special Orders, No. 282, was issued. No order was issued to that effect, but it was the well-known intention of the general to constitute a brigade of these two regiments on the right of the fort. If this is still the intention I would respectfully ask an order to that effect.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,

I have sent to Fort Gibson supplies for sixty days. The Barton made the trip without accident, and found Colonel Phillips' command entirely destitute. I have assured him that every effort would be made to fully supply all his wants from here, and hope to receive supplies for that purpose. The expense of hauling via Fort Scott is enormous, as the trains are more than half loaded with forage, which is consumed on the way. The route from here to Leavenworth is lined with thieves and robbers, hangers-on to our army, who are carrying on a wholesale system of plunder, stealing cattle and driving them to Kansas under the protection of our escorts. If we can supply the troops from here their avocation is gone, and they will be compelled to leave the country. Considerable forage will also be required at Fort Gibson. If we continue to receive for a few weeks as we have been doing we can furnish all that will be required.

When I supposed that I was to go to the Army of the James, about two weeks ago, I wrote you requesting that Capt. S. E. Rundle, assistant quartermaster, might be ordered to report to me there, but have not heard anything from my application. I want very much a good quartermaster at Memphis, for, with the exception of the depot quartermaster, Colonel Clary, I have no faith in any of them, and if you can let me have Captain Rundle I am certain that it will be for the public advantage.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. C. FLETCHER.

JEFFERSON CITY, February 27, 1865—9.10 p.m.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge, Commanding Department of the Missouri:

Is General Pope in Saint Louis? I would be thankful for your opinion and his as to the best manner of trying the policy suggested in the President's letter, a copy of which I sent you. Please answer by telegraph.

T. C. FLETCHER.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., February 27, 1865.

Ben. Holliday, Esq.,
Atchison, Kans.:

Dear Sir: I received your letter of the 17th instant, covering other communications on the same subject, when I returned to that city a few days since. It was my wish to furnish you all the forage which could be spared from the depots along the Overland route, but upon communicating with that region of country I found that there was not one-third of the forage on hand which had been reported, and that all there was is absolutely needed for cavalry operating against the Indians and for the forces I am sending out to the road from Leavenworth and South Kansas. Whilst, therefore, all necessary protection will hereafter be furnished, I regret that it is not in my power to assist you by lending you the public forage. It will be necessary for you to establish your mail stations, and particularly your main depots, at the military stations, in order that the destruction of supplies may not again occur. The troops will be ordered to furnish you all possible assistance in every way, and to provide your coaches with escorts from post to post whenever it is deemed necessary. I have made and am making such full arrangements of military force along the Overland routes that I think you may safely dismiss apprehension of any such transactions as have occurred recently along those routes. Be assured, sir, that I shall always be glad of any information or suggestions from you on this subject, and that I will omit nothing which is needed to secure safety in the transmission of the mails across the plains.

I am, sir, respectfully and truly, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

WASHINGTON, February 27, 1865—7 p.m.

Major-General Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

I have tendered my resignation and been informally advised it will be accepted in a day or two. General Grant recommends cavalry regiments. Matter is pending in War Office. Assessments will probably not be disturbed here.

THOS. EWING, JR.

PRIVATE.]

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
Washington, February 28, 1865.

Major-General Canby, New Orleans:

My Dear General: Your private letter of the 13th is just received. Both Grant and Thomas asked that A. J. Smith be given an army corps before he left Tennessee. His appointment was, therefore, a foregone conclusion, but the Secretary left the organization of the corps to you. I think Smith deserved it, and that you will find him all you can desire in the field. I also think highly of both Steele and Granger, but General Grant found much fault with the latter in the West, and does not deem him competent for a large command. I know nothing of the cause of his want of confidence in Granger, but he said to me very emphatically, "Tell Canby not to give Granger any large command, for if he does he is certain to fail." He used nearly the same language in regard to General Hurlbut. With regard to W. F. Smith, he refused your application on the ground that "Baldy" would either command you or thwart all your operations. I don't think General Grant's judgment of men by any means infallible, but he has had considerable experience with all three of these officers. Banks is still lounging round Congress and the White House, very bitter, I understand, on you and me. I think he and Butler are about played out. I hope your expedition will be off before this reaches you, for General Grant is very impatient at delays and too ponderous preparations. He says that nearly all our generals are too late in starting, and carry too much with them. Sherman's army is certainly using its legs to great advantage. There are various rumors of cabinet changes, but I do not think that Mr. Stanton will leave the War Department, at least not for the present. How is your correspondent, Mrs. Duncan! Having exhausted the President, Secretary of War, General Grant, General Holt, and the Adjutant-General, she has made an onslaught upon one of my aides, who had the misfortune to certify to a copy of a paper which was sent to her. Poor fellow, he is greatly to be pitied. My kind regards to Mrs. Canby.

Yours, truly,

H. W. HALLECK.

SPECIAL ORDERS, \[ HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, \]
No. 59. \[ New Orleans, La., February 28, 1865. \]

2. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Col. F. A. Starring, Seventy-second Illinois Volunteers, assistant provost-marshal-general, is hereby announced as provost-marshal-general, Department of the Gulf. He will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

J. C. STONE,

Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron:

By order of Major-General Hurlbut:

GEO. B. DRAKE,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Major-General Herron:

The general wishes to know if you desire three regiments to stop at Morganza. If you need three there, he will send back the five companies, otherwise let the five companies of the Sixty-first come down.

By order of Major-General Hurlbut:

GEO. B. DRAKE,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieut. Col. GEORGE B. DRAKE,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

COLONEL: If it is certain that a fourth regiment is coming down which I can stop at Morganza, then the five companies of the Sixty-first might go below. I think two regiments will be sufficient at the present time. From the senior officer with the troops now debarking I can not learn that a fourth regiment is coming. He seems to think no.

Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Brazos Santiago, Tex., February 28, 1865.

Lieut. Col. George B. Drake, Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Gulf:

SIR: I have the honor to state for the information of the major-general commanding the following items of news: The rebels are yet at Brownsville, about 600 to 800 strong, mostly mounted; have six pieces of artillery—two rifled Parrotts; the others are smooth-bore. They are reported to be in a demoralized state, and numbers of them are deserting from time to time. Not much cotton there. With 100 or 200 cavalry and enough horses for one or two pieces of artillery, and with an order, permission, or consent of the general commanding, I could occupy the place any day. The need of horses and mounted men at this post has been long apparent and previously reported. Were I to occupy Brownsville it could only be temporarily, as the military and fatigue duties of this post would prevent me sparing a sufficient force to garrison the place, and I would prefer not to take the place and then be compelled to abandon it immediately again, because there are hundreds of persons so zealous for our success in that region that if they were to show by any indication (as they would very likely do) that their sympathies were in our cause, as soon as we withdrew they would either have to abandon their homes and families or "die the death"; but if Brownsville could be occupied permanently it would no doubt be beneficial and add to the interest and good of the service in preventing the immense contraband trade continually carried on between Matamoras and the former place.

I await orders, and have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. B. JONES,
Colonel, Commanding.
headquarters and provost-marshal, complete; an addition to commissary store-house, 24 by 100 feet; quartermaster's store-house, 20 by 40; provost court room, 12 by 20; new condenser, 25 by 35, with splendid machinery and in working order, all complete. The old condenser, 25 by 40 feet, with machinery, is in pretty good repair. Both new and old can furnish fresh water for 5,000 or 6,000 troops. The old wharf is in good repair, with a wrecked schooner for wharf boat. A new wood and coal wharf is nearly complete. Twenty-two wagons in good repair; spades, shovels, &c, by the quantity, and plenty of clothing, camp and garrison equipage for the troops on the island. Two large flat boats, twelve yaws, and a small schooner, used as a pilot boat, consti-tuate our water transportation on the bay. We have twenty-odd bales of cotton to be sent to Treasury Department as soon as collected. The main fortification at this place is in progress of completion, mounting at this time — guns of heavy caliber. An earth-work and fortification are almost complete at Boca Chica Pass, with curtains and traverses for riflemen. Four companies guard the pass. The damming of the pass has not yet been commenced. Finally, the force here can defend the island from any reasonable or probable assault, and four times our number could not dislodge us. I would further state that no attack here at present is apprehended from any source. The trouble in Mexico has subsided, and our commercial agent is quietly exercising the functions of his office at Matamoras. The furore about Cortina marching on that place has blown over, and although Cortina has practically turned his back on Maximilian, it is not likely he will make any demonstration until our army moves. Authority has lately been given to Mr. J. H. Fisk by Major-General Canby to raise a company of Texans for the Second Texas Cavalry. The organization is progressing rapidly. A post garden has been established with promise of success. The area cultivated is about four acres. All quiet here as usual.
I have the honor to be, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. B. JONES,
Colonel, Commanding.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of instructions from general headquarters, relating to the irregular and illicit travel which has been permitted via this post from New Orleans to Matamoras and return. As soon as these instructions were received the remedy was applied. Why this thing had been permitted so long was a matter of some solicitation with me, but was informed upon my arrival here that it was allowed by all those who preceded me. I am satisfied that the injury done the Government and the cause far overbalances the advantage derived from the few thousand dollars received of these speculators for transportation on Government steamers. You may rest assured that these follies will not be repeated in the future as long as it may continue to be my honor to command at this post.

I have the honor to be, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. B. JONES,

P. S.—The latest and interesting news will be forwarded even date therewith.
Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.:

Sirs: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 23d instant, relating to the error in his cipher dispatch of the 28th ultimo. The mistake was caused by the blunder of our cipher clerk, who on the very same day committed the grave error of making the order for the cavalry forces from General Thomas' command to stop at Vicksburg read, "the forces from General Thomas' command," &c., thereby causing a delay of over a week in the movement of General A. J. Smith's infantry. He has, of course, been discharged. Your promptness in forwarding these four regiments is very much appreciated. In anticipation of their arrival, an equal number had already been drawn from the previously overtaxed Department of the Gulf for field service, and which these regiments will temporarily replace.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

I think if it does not rain any more I can put General Knipe across Black and perhaps the Pearl by the 5th. General Knipe is an energetic man. I was near him on the Atlanta campaign. He will "go." HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., February 28, 1865.

Col. M. La Rue Harrison,

First Arkansas Cavalry, Fayetteville, Ark.: It has been represented to me that portions of your command have been committing the most outrageous excesses, robbing and burning houses indiscriminately. This must cease at once, and the property of the people must be respected. Hundreds of good Union people are left destitute and become a public charge. The citizens who are at home minding their own business must be encouraged to cultivate their lands, and all officers and soldiers will be required to protect them. Let war be made on guerrillas and not women and children. Madison and Carroll Counties are especially named as the scene of these outrages. Strict discipline must be enforced in your command.

Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck:

GENERAL: I wrote you some time since asking the retransfer of headquarters Department of the Missouri to Saint Louis. Since that time General Dodge has again called my attention to the necessity of his being here, on account of the great mass of business in Missouri, which cannot be done at Fort Leavenworth. Everything in the old Kansas department is now so arranged that we are not likely to have further serious trouble with Indians, and the business of that region can very well be done from here, but the mass of perplexing and difficult business of the department originates in Missouri itself. I have the honor to ask that the headquarters Department of the Missouri be re-established in Saint Louis by order of the War Department, or that authority be given to do it.

No. 55, \{ Springfield, Mo., February 28, 1865.\}

III. Capt. William Brixey, Company G, Forty-sixth Missouri Infantry Volunteers, commanding at Bloomington, Mo., will upon receipt of this order leave a detachment of one lieutenant and twenty men at

By order of Brig. Gen. J. B. Sanborn:

WM. T. KITTREDGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., February 28, 1865.

W. K. LATHIM, Esq., and others, Greenfield, Mo.:

Gentlemen: Your communication of the 22d instant came duly to hand, and its contents are noted. All that is therein stated in regard to the sufferings, privations, and wrongs of the people of that county had before been communicated to me, and I have no doubt of its truth. The Government and all of its competent and reflecting officials have for a long time been aware of your position, and have for more than a year furnished you abundant force to assure the fullest protection and security if properly used and handled. The number of troops now stationed in your county is 146 men. This force is at the towns of Greenfield and Melville, and is more force than is stationed in any other county of the district that does not lie upon our main lines of communication, and is fully adequate, when properly used, to hold and protect the entire county against any force of the enemy not exceeding 500 men, and this is a far larger number than has been brought in the county since I have commanded the district. With the forts constructed at the towns occupied in accordance with existing orders, thirty men would be abundant to hold them against an attack of 200 of the enemy. This leaves you eighty men, or deducting the usual number of daily duty men and sick, fully sixty men who may be constantly employed to patrol the remote parts of the county, and every officer who understands his duty will keep them thus employed. The trouble in your section has been that our troops have been kept where the enemy was not instead of where the enemy was, when he has been in there in any force. The officers will all be paid up in a few days, and after this, unless they discharge their duties with more promptness and energy, changes will at once be made. The county cannot expect a larger force stationed there than at present, although I expect a company to be stationed west in Barton County during the summer, and if I am compelled to withdraw one company from your county as the present troops muster out of service, I will endeavor to have a company of militia organized to take its place.

Assuring you that every endeavor will be made to have the troops in your section handled with more vigor and effect, I remain, with sentiments of high regard, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
In the Field, Fort Larned, Kans., February 28, 1865.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT GENERAL,
Department of the Missouri:

SIR: I have the honor to report for the information of the major-general commanding Department of the Missouri my arrival at this post; was delayed by heavy storms of snow and rain, bad roads, and high waters, or should have been here some days ago. I inclose you herewith report of H. D. Janes, chief of scouts of this district, who has thoroughly scouted or caused to be scouted the country north, northwest, and northeast of this post. They report no recent Indian signs whatever north of the Arkansas. Sergeant Nettleton with fifteen men made a scout south of the Arkansas. Saw plenty of fresh Indian signs, and ascertained without a doubt that all the depredations that have been committed on this route since I have been in command were perpetrated by Indians south of this. They are the same tribes that Colonel Leavenworth held his interview with, and who are now suing for peace. I telegraphed you Colonel Leavenworth's report, but as yet have received no answer. My opinion is that these Indians should be chastised before making peace with them or giving them any presents whatever. Sergeant Nettleton describes the country through which he followed the trails as very rough and broken. It would be impossible to take a train of wagons through. Pack-mules would be much better. It is now spring; their ponies are poor. With a pack train they could be followed, caught, and severely punished, as they richly deserve. From the best information I can get there are no Indians at the present time in the district between the Arkansas and the Platte, except roving bands of warriors. They have no doubt moved their families north, in the neighborhood of the Black Hills. At Fort Zarah I find that the field-works and fortifications as planned by the engineers are altogether too large and extensive. I have not the troops to either build or properly defend them after they are finished. I ordered Captain Greene, Second Colorado Cavalry, commanding post, to immediately have built a blockhouse, or earth-works, where a few men could hold the post against any number of Indians. He is now building an octagonal fortification of stone, where fifty men can defend the post against 3,000 Indians. Captain Moses, Second Colorado Cavalry, commanding this post (Fort Laredo), is building a similar one for this post, draughts of which will be forwarded by next mail. It is impossible for our quartermaster to hire laborers here, and nearly all our quartermaster work is done by soldiers, which very materially reduces our force for effective duty in the field. We now have on duty and extra duty in the quartermaster's department a very large force. Our men are on duty every day, either guard, fatigue, or escorting coach or Government trains, &c. I now have the troops of my command stationed as follows: One company Twelfth Kansas Infantry at Fort Riley, Kans., Major Pritchard, Second Colorado Cavalry, commanding; one company Seventh Iowa Cavalry at Salina, Kans., Captain Hammer commanding; two companies at Fort Ellsworth, one Second Colorado Cavalry, and one Seventh Iowa Cavalry, Captain Clark, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, commanding post; at Fort Zarah, four companies Second Colorado Cavalry, Captain Greene commanding; Fort Laredo, four companies Second Colorado Cavalry, two companies Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, Captain Moses commanding; one company Second Colorado Cavalry on escort, provost, scouting, and other duty. I have little faith in the promises of the Indians south of the Arkansas, and am looking for a raid on this end of my district during the light of the present moon. Mr. Janes and Sergeant Nettleton are both deserving of much credit for the able and efficient scouting and elaborate reports made to me at the end of each scout. Colonel Leavenworth has probably reported to you by letter his interview with the Kiowas, Comanches, and Apaches. He seems to have every confidence in them and believes they will do as they promised.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel, Commanding.
FORT LAURED, KANS., February 28, 1865.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Riley, Kans.:

Sir: I have nothing of importance to report as having transpired since last report, 20th instant, Sergeant Nettleton having reported his scout direct upon his arrival at Fort Zarah. The horses of the Independent Scouts, as well as the men themselves, are in great need of rest, having encountered during their last scout the late severe storms. As soon as the condition of the stock will permit, it is my intention to make a thorough scout south of the Arkansas as far as the Cimarron south of the mouth of the Mulberry; thence, if possible, east to the mouth of the Little Arkansas. From what I can gather from old Indian traders, &c., here, the country south of the Nescatunga or Little Arkansas, in the vicinity of Salt Plains, is headquarters of the Kiowas, as well as northern outpost for the Comanches, and it is evident from the report of Nettleton of his scout south of the river that the bands that have been committing depredations on this road belong to one or the other of those tribes, and that they came from and went in that direction. The sergeant thinks it useless to cross the river without a stronger force than his scout, he finding it prudent to return from the mouth of Mulberry. The captain commanding has given me the promise of twenty-five more men, but to move with so many will require at least four more pack animals. If, therefore, you approve of my plan please send four pack mules, saddles, and packs, and one mule to replace one the scouts now have, which is unserviceable. I should like to make a more extended scout if the men can be spared. The forty men from here with fifteen days' rations to strike the Cimarron and up that stream, returning via Fort Lyon, leaving the country to the east to be scouted by a party from Zarah, south and east to meet a party from Riley or Chelsea west. A scout west from Chelsea would, after crossing the river, fall in with the Caddoes, from whom much useful information could be obtained. Am informed by the post quartermaster that he has two or three extra mules and pack-saddles. The mules, however, are in poor condition and not fit for either scout contemplated, and in making either of the above trips would wish to be well fixed.

Please advise of which, if either, of the above meets your approval. If not; be kind enough to issue more explicit instructions. The dangers and difficulties of crossing the river renders it imperative that a force cross strong enough to withstand the roving bands that infest the southern banks of the Arkansas.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. D. JANES,
Scout, &c.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
February 28, 1865—12.30 p. m.

Brigadier-General DAVIES,
Fort Leavenworth:

As soon as the Second U. S. [Volunteers] is armed and equipped send it to Fort Riley to report to Colonel Ford.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Major-General Dodge:
The Second U. S. Volunteers will march at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning for Riley under command of Captain Wyman, 900 strong. Field officers and some company officers have not yet arrived. Twenty-five teams carry ten days' rations, camp equipage, and 180,000 rounds of ammunition. Let me know if, and how much of, the transportation shall be left with the regiment at Riley; it is wanted here.

THOS. A. DAVIES,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 41.
HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, February 28, 1865.

1. The Second Regiment U. S. Volunteers, under the command of Capt. L. F. Wyman, will march to-morrow morning at 8.30 o'clock for Fort Riley, Kans., and report to Colonel Ford, commanding District of Upper Arkansas.

By order of Brigadier-General Davies:

D. J. CRAIGIE,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GRAND ISLAND, February 28, 1865—2 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:
The following just received from Fort Kearny:

FORT KEARNY, February 27, 1865.

Scouts report snow too deep for work. Standing Elk, friendly Indian met by them, says snow very deep on Niobrara, and snowing very heavily when he left there a short time since. Main body of Indians on Powder River; all statements concurring that it will be impossible to reach them before spring. All quiet at Fort Rankin and Pole Creek. No coaches from Atchison yet. I fear troops from Kansas are delayed by high water.

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel, Commanding.

With your permission I will reach Indians on Powder River as soon as the march can be made, regardless of snow. All I want is the troops and supplies sufficient.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

GRAND ISLAND, February 28, 1865—2 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:
The following dispatch just received from two Indian scouts sent from Fort Laramie:

FORT LARAMIE, NEBR. TER., February 27, 1865.

Two Indian scouts just come in from the north say Cheyennes are about 130 miles north of this place; have 800 lodges. They are moving in the direction of Powder River, and will be joined by others that will make them number from 1,800 to 2,000 lodges. They have sent the friendly Sioux in this country word to leave here, as they intend to clean the country. The oldest citizens in this country are leaving or moving to the fort. There are more troops needed here, and at as early a day as they can get here. Things are looking more serious than I ever saw them before.

THOS. L. MACKEY,
Major, Commanding Fort.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
February 28, 1865—8.10 p.m.

Brig. Gen. R. B. Mitchell,
Grand Island:

All you can do is to work the troops up toward Julesburg and Laramie as fast as you can, and, as soon as ready, if Indians are north of Laramie leave everything there but what you want, and then make a quick dash at them, using pack mules from Laramie. You can strike them with 1,500 or 2,000 well-mounted men. Subsistence and forage enough have been forwarded. Keep scouts out all the time, so as to keep posted.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
February 28, 1865—12.20 p.m.

Governor Evans,
Chicago, Ill.:

Full and ample arrangements have been made for the protection of all overland travel, and orders issued to that effect, designating points for trains to be assembled for escorts, &c. You will be safe in publishing the notice you wish to publish, but please do not publish this dispatch.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., February 28, 1865.

Brig. Gen. H. H. SIBLEY:

General: Yours of the 24th instant is just received and contents, concerning the incursions of Sioux Indians and others from the British lines, particularly noted. I also received a letter from General Sully concerning the same trouble on the Upper Missouri. He reports a hostile camp near Devil's Lake, and reports a special outrage by traders coming down from the British settlements with traders bearing the British flag and furnishing ammunition to the Indians. These reports come from Fort Berthold and are dated about one month ago. Your scouts should give more expeditious intelligence from that region. The following of a retreating foe into another country is not a right, but a sort of privilege which when exercised may or may not be a casus belli, according to circumstances, which always require investigation and vexatious diplomatic controversies. As we are now involved in a great rebellion any intrusion of ours, however necessary and proper on other occasions, would be seized upon by rebels and sympathizers, who would swear any and everything to make our action appear insolent and an unnecessary assault upon a neutral dominion. We know that our rebel foes have made great efforts to embroil us with Canada and Great Britain, and, as General Sully and his subordinates suggest, there may be rebel influences behind the Indians inducing their hostilities. Still, in view of the purpose to embroil us in difficulties with a powerful nation through the medium of savages, it is wise in us to avoid all accommodations to their designs. We must, therefore, try to circumvent their schemes by strategy within our own borders, and it is not best to encourage the idea of movements beyond our own border. Besides, general, the Indians of the plains far down below the Platte and Arkansas, where I have campaigned during the last season, everywhere seem imbued with the same propensity to do mischief, and alike suspicious as to the motives which impel them were and are entertained there. But my own personal observations convinced me that it is mainly an inherent disregard to personal rights of everybody and a love of adventure and spoils more than anything else which induces a portion of all the Indians of the plains to engage in occasional hostilities. If they happen to be near neutral or friendly dominion they will always, when pursued, seek refuge, as white foes do, in such domain. Whatever, therefore, may be the motive it seems to actuate various tribes over a large scope of country and induces the same results—assaults of our settlements, trains, emigrants, and mail coaches—and is also accompanied with the usual carnage and cruelties of savage warfare. Your immediate association with the cruelties of northern tribes has, no doubt, made you more familiar with details, and your people are, therefore, as you say, objects of your earnest solicitude. But our forces must be located, if possible, so as to successfully operate within our own lines. I have directed that Indians shall not be allowed to come within our camps and forts, and my purpose was to prevent their knowledge of our strength or weakness. I see General Pope has directed an encouragement of hostile Indians coming in and being friendly, and on this alone he proposes friendship and protection. I do not see that this requires our negligence of the great advantage of secrecy and concealment which I desire by keeping doubtful Indians totally ignorant of our forces at special localities.

This may be almost impossible when you have so many friendly Indians associated with doubtful, but I think it can and should be. If, then, we have concealed doubtful and sufficient forces located near the British lines, we ought to be able to take some of the knaves in flank if they attempt to come across the line, and by exposing the culprits, as well as surprising others, we may create abundant caution against further mischief of that kind. Of course this is only theory, available according to our strength and surrounding circumstances. I write first impressions, inspired by reading your letter, and shall keep my mind open and free to all suggestions which you may make and such personal observations as I may hereafter have occasion to apply to the subject. In the meantime I will forward your views for favorable consideration of the War Department and do all in my power to sustain you in any and all proper efforts to protect the frontier settlements against what I consider very probable continued trouble with the wandering Indian tribes of the plains. It is the more important that we should have early news of contemplated hostilities, as General Pope has entertained and expressed other views, which he has laid before the authorities in Washington. My own opinion is that continued hostilities may be expected, not by great combinations of warriors as some apprehend, but by bands of various tribes acting separately, as occasion may offer.
opportunities for stealing horses and murdering white people, and our Government and settlements will have to continually for years regard all such Indian tribes as dangerous to emigrants' settlements and overland mail routes. I hope I may be mistaken, but I traversed the plains last summer between Texas and the Platte, generally with from 400 to 600 cavalry and 4 mountain howitzers, and after over 3,000 miles of marching through their country and beyond our settlements, I think myself also pretty well posted. One thing is very remarkable, and that is, the intimate knowledge of what is called the confederated tribes with the whole country from the Cimarron to the British provinces and the constant interchange of intelligence among all the various tribes of the plains, while there seems to be no intercourse of friendship between those of the plains and the tribes of the Rocky Mountains. As soon as the river opens I design to visit Saint Paul, when I hope to see and confer with you personally in regard to all these matters. If anything can be done with the liberal offers of peace indicated by General Pope, I hope they will fully and faithfully be pressed upon the hostile tribes.
The great trouble I find is that when their wants induce them to remain quiet near us they always profess and evidently feel friendly, but when in summer their young men get out in hunting parties far from their homes they disregard all their promises and pursue robbing and scalping as a sort of incident or recreation. I have thus more fully than I at first proposed given my views of the nature and extent of our Indian difficulties on the plains without saying much as to my hopes and purposes to counteract them.

I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

Major-General Halleck,
Washington:

Was not the order sent for Canby to organize two corps, naming Steele and A. J. Smith as commanders? I so understood. I am in receipt of a letter saying that Granger and Smith are the commanders. If so, I despair of any good service being done.

U. S. Grant,
Lieutenant-General.

Mississippi Squadron, Flag-ship Black Hawk,
Mound City, March 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby,
Commanding Military Division of West Mississippi:

General: I have received an official copy of your communication of 3d ultimo to Lieutenant-Commander Foster. Lieut. Commander E. C. Grafton is now in command of the Third District, including Red River, and I have directed him to give particular attention to this matter, and comply with your request for guard or convoy. I have also instructed Lieutenant-Commander Foster, now in command of the Fourth District, to furnish additional men for the purpose, if necessary.

Very respectfully yours,

S. P. Lee,
Acting Rear-Admiral, Commanding Mississippi Squadron.

Mississippi Squadron, Flag-ship Black Hawk,
Mound City, March 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby,
Comdg. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, New Orleans:

General: Yours of February 22, by your aide, Captain Melville, is received to-day at 11 a.m., inclosing your confidential circular to department and district commanders. On the 1st instant I sent orders from New Orleans by a special dispatch-boat for the two best light-draft iron-clads then at this point to be dispatched immediately to New Orleans to report to the commander of the West Gulf Blockading Squadron, and gave orders on my way up for four tin-clads to join and tow them as they passed down the river. On my arrival here on the 14th instant I found that the iron-clads had not yet been sent, the repairs of one (the Osage) not being completed and the other (the Neosho) being broken down. I immediately substituted the next best light-draft iron-clad, the Cincinnati, just out of quarantine for small-pox, but needing some repairs to her boilers, which I thought could be sooner made at New Orleans than here. I made every effort to hasten them, and the iron-clads Osage and Cincinnati left here on the 16th. I also ordered that in case the Cincinnati needed it, one of the fastest vessels on the river should also take her in tow. All the vessels were unprovided with fresh-water condensers, as I stated when they were asked for at New Orleans and in a communication addressed to Commodore Palmer or Admiral Thatcher. The delay of fitting these here would have been too great, and these vessels could be better supplied for temporary service at New Orleans. These vessels, the loss of which greatly weakens the naval force on the Mississippi, especially as four monitors were transferred from this to the West Gulf Blockading Squadron.
some months since, leaving here on the 16th ultimo, should have arrived at New Orleans at or shortly after the date of your letter (22d). I inclose a copy of my General Orders, No. 47, of 28th ultimo, issued yesterday, directing commanding officers of gun-boats to communicate with commandants of posts and assist weak points, when necessary. I will give further instructions to district commanders, agreeably to your request of the 22d ultimo, received to-day. It has given me much pleasure to do all that I could to aid the operation against Mobile, and I earnestly hope, and doubt not, that entire success will attend you. I will endeavor—though weakened by the withdrawal of six efficient light-draft iron-clads and four tin-clads for Mobile, and of other vessels hitherto very useful, for repairs—to keep a good patrol of the Mississippi, and support, if necessary, your positions on that river.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, yours,

S. P. LEE, Acting Rear-Admiral, Commanding Mississippi Squadron.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., March 1, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 1st day of March, 1865: A communication from Maj. George Webster, Pass Manchac, La., February 28, 1865, states he has learned that on the 16th of February two brigades (Sharp's and Walthall's) of Hood's army were at Meridian. One division of about 4,000 had gone to Mobile, with a regiment of light artillery numbering nine batteries of four guns each. At Lake Station, between Jackson and Meridian, was one brigade of Forrest's command. From 200 to 300 of Louisiana cavalry were collected at Summit. Large flat-boats with six oars on a side have been taken to Rodney, on the Mississippi River, with a detail of Louisiana heavy artillery to row them. A communication from Lieut. L. E. Granger, Morganza, La., dated February 25, states the Second Louisiana Cavalry (rebel) crossed the Atchafalaya on that day at Morgan's Ferry. William B. Carter states that at Alexandria and on the route to Natchitoches are 8,000 rebel infantry. Thinks they are embraced in Thomas' division. One regiment of infantry and one of cavalry (Second Louisiana) are east of Alexandria. Near Shreveport is Forney's division, about 5,000 strong. Walker's division, of same strength, has been ordered north (probably Minden), to the point vacated by Forney. General Harry Hays has charge of a movement to cross certain troops to the east side of the Mississippi. Attempted the same movement a short time since, but it was defeated by the desertion of the troops. Enough have now volunteered to justify another attempt. Point of crossing somewhere between mouth of Red River and Vidalia. Commanding officers of gun-boats have been notified of this project. The Teche and Red River roads are closely picketed and guarded. No advance of Federal forces into Western Louisiana is now generally anticipated. All Texas and most of the Louisiana cavalry have gone to Texas to recruit their horses.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.
General Orders, \{ HDQES. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, \}
No. 26. \{ New Orleans, La., March 1, 1865. \}

Under War Department General Orders, No. 21, of the 10th of February, the following directions are given:

I. The headquarters of the Department of Mississippi will be established at Vicksburg, Miss., and the department staff and records will accordingly be transferred to that place.

II. The troops in the District of West Tennessee, except such as are temporarily within the limits of that district by detachment from other departments, will be transferred to the Department of the Cumberland, but the troops belonging to this division will not be removed from that district until the commander of the Department of the Cumberland can replace them, if he should deem it necessary.

III. The troops on the west bank of the Mississippi, in the District of Vicksburg and Natchez, will be dropped from the returns of the Department of Mississippi as transferred to the Department of the Gulf.

IV. The troops in the Districts of West Florida and South Alabama and of Key West will be dropped from the returns of the Department of the Gulf, as transferred, and the commanders of those districts will report direct to division headquarters.

V. The existing arrangement of districts on the Mississippi River is continued, and the commanders of those districts that are beyond the present limits of the division will be governed, for the purpose indicated in the War Department order, by the provisions of division General Orders, Nos. 3, 4, and 6, of 1864.

VI. Special returns of the troops on both banks of the river subject to their control will be made by the commanders of the Districts of Columbus, West Tennessee, Vicksburg, and Natchez direct to these headquarters. These returns are in addition to the stated returns required at the headquarters of the department in which these troops are serving.

VII. General Orders, No. 6, of 1864, from these headquarters, is published for general information and observation:

Commanders of districts will hold themselves at all times in readiness to employ whatever force may be necessary to keep open the navigation of the Mississippi River, keeping in reserve for this purpose a sufficient force and a sufficient number of boats to enable them to act promptly. They will keep themselves in communication with the commanders of naval districts, give them any information in relation to the movements of the enemy that they may be possessed of, and co-operate with them whenever necessary. The authority of commanders of districts on either bank of the Mississippi is so far extended as to include the military posts on the opposite bank. This extension will not change the relation existing between post and department commanders, or authorize any permanent change, but is intended to give the senior in command the authority to control the resources on both banks of the river, in keeping it open, or in meeting other emergency.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

General Orders, \{ HDQES. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, \}
No. 28. \{ New Orleans, La., March 1, 1865. \}

Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. H. Grierson, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby assigned to the general command of all the cavalry in this military division, and to the special command of the cavalry forces designated for service in the field.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Headquarters Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, March 1, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen, Assistant Adjutant-General:

I forward, for consideration of the major-general commanding, the inclosed report of Mr. E. D. Etchison, late consul at Matamoras. It is exceedingly indefinite. I desired him to send me a copy of the order expelling him; with this request he has not complied. The man is either naturally very stupid or is imbruted with liquor to such an extent that it is impossible to obtain a correct statement from him of anything.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

S. A. Hurlbut, Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

New Orleans, February 27, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut, U. S. Army, Commanding Department of the Gulf:

General: I cheerfully comply with your request, made during our interview at your headquarters this morning, to give to you a written statement of the events which transpired during, and attended, the close of my residence as consul at Matamoras, as well as of the facts with reference to the sources and destination of the commerce carried on at said place. On the 16th of September, 1864, I was appointed U. S. consul for the port of Matamoras, at which place I arrived on the 24th day of November last. On the 1st day of December last I assumed there the duties of consul, having received permission from General Mejia, general-in-chief of the Imperial army, to act as consul until my exequatur could be obtained. From this time I continued to act as consul until February 9, 1865, when the office of U. S. consul at Matamoras was closed. I sailed from there for this port on the 16th of February. About the 1st of January I learned that persons alleged to be deserters from the Confederate Army, and others said to be refugees from Texas, who had fled to escape conscription into the rebel ranks, in some instances had been and in others were about to be arrested by the Mexican military authorities, sent back into Texas, and delivered up to the officers of the Confederate Government; that four of these persons so delivered up had been put to death after their arrival in Texas. I investigated the facts and became satisfied that my information was correct.

According to the best intelligence I could obtain about 100 persons in all have been thus seized and delivered to the Confederate authorities. I myself saw thirteen persons sent across the Rio Grande into the Confederacy who were thus under arrest. From my personal knowledge I can state that one of these persons had never been in the Confederate Army, and I was credibly informed that several of the thirteen were similarly situated. On the 8th of January I sent to General Mejia a formal written protest against these proceedings. I received from him a reply which was in the highest degree unsatisfactory. Thereupon I sent, by a special messenger, a detailed account of the matter to the State Department at Washington. This extradition of this class of persons continued down to the time of my departure. On the 9th of February, upon learning of the Federal success in the capture of Fort Fisher, and in honor of that event, I caused the flag of the United States to be raised over the consular office. After sunset of that day I received an order from the political prefect directing me...
to close the office of U. S. consul at Matamoras. On the following day I demanded and received my passport. Throughout the period of my stay at Matamoras almost every description of property was imported there from all parts of the world. Of these imports fully nine-tenths were sent into the Confederacy. Agents of the Confederate Government were present in Matamoras and bought whatever they wished of the articles thus imported, transshipping them into Texas. Of munitions of war I know particularly of the importation of revolvers and percussion caps. I would further state that large quantities of cotton and wool were constantly being brought in from Texas into Matamoras for foreign shipment. I would add (a fact which I deem of importance) that I am abundantly satisfied that the State of Texas is filled to overflowing with negroes held as slaves, who have been sent thither from the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina, and even Virginia, in order to place them beyond the reach of the national arms.

With high respect, I remain, general, your obedient servant,

E. D. ETCHISON,
U. S. Consul accredited for the Port of Matamoras.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, March 1, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The system inaugurated by Mr. Mellen by his late orders does not work well in this department. The tax in kind imposed is, I think, too heavy—one-eighth to one-tenth in cotton culture and one-thirtieth in sugar. No assistance is rendered by the Treasury officials. The scheme of wages is such that, while apparently giving high wages to the hands, it will involve them in debt and reduce them to a state of peonage. If, as I am unofficially informed, the Secretary of the Treasury has declined this charge, I am satisfied that a far more practicable and beneficial system can be inaugurated and carried forward by military authority within this State. I cannot avoid stating in the plainest terms that there has been a degree of trifling and inefficiency on the part of the Treasury Department that is likely to work most serious consequences. Pursuant to orders received from General Canby in September last, I notified Mr. Flanders to take charge of freedmen. This charge he accepted in writing on November 1, but his arrangements have been repudiated by his superiors, and we are in twilight ever since. For all suffering and evil that may come to pass I desire it distinctly understood that the military authorities are not answerable.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 20.
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, March 1, 1865.

The plantation regulations established by Mr. W. P. Mellen, general agent Treasury Department, and announced in orders, will at once be complied with by all planters in the State of Louisiana. There are several provisions in these regulations which, in the opinion of many planters, are hard and inequitable. In these particulars the regulations will be subject to amendment and change, and planters and others interested should understand that the Government of the United States have no other object than to consult, as far as practicable, the development of the industrial resources of the country, and the security and advancement of the freedmen of the States. All who heartily co-operate with the authorities in so doing may be assured of the most patient examination into their alleged grievances, and full consideration of their claims to modification of rules that experience may prove to be oppressive to industry. While this assurance is readily given to good citizens who thus co-operate, the converse of the proposition is equally true and applies with special force; and those who willfully place obstacles in the way of officers in the discharge of their duties by refusing to cultivate their own lands, or permit it to be done by others, will find that such lands will be given to those who will labor upon them, with no other privilege to the owner than a light rent to be paid out of the future produce.

By command of Major General Hurlbut:

GEORGE B. DRAKE,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders,} HDQRS. SOUTHERN DIV. OF LOUISIANA,
No. 73.} New Orleans, March 1, 1865.

1. So much of paragraph 3 of Special Orders, No. 61, current series, from these headquarters, as directed the Eightieth U. S. Colored Infantry to relieve the Sixth Minnesota Volunteers is hereby revoked. The commanding officer of the Eightieth U. S. Colored Infantry will report for orders at these headquarters on his arrival in the city.

2. The Forty-sixth U. S. Colored Infantry, Col. J. E. Bryant commanding, having reported at these headquarters pursuant to paragraph 9 of Special Orders, No. 55, current series, from department headquarters, will at once relieve the Sixth Minnesota Volunteers. On being relieved, as above, the Sixth Minnesota Volunteers will at once comply with paragraph 3 of Special Orders, No. 61, current series, from these headquarters.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:

P. J. MALONEY,
First Lieut., First New Orleans Vols., and Actg. A. Ass't Adj. Gen.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., March 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans:

GENERAL: The expedition moved this morning as per orders, General Bailey going in command. The entire force is 1,350, consisting of 1,200 cavalry, 150 artillerymen, with 4 rifled pieces, and 2 small howitzers. On account of the terrible condition of the roads they will not reach Redwood Creek until to-morrow night, and will remain there two days building a bridge. It will also require two days more to build the bridge over the Comite. This will delay the column about the length of time necessary, as suggested in your telegram of to day. At Port Hudson I have about 200 colored cavalry in condition for service, and they will communicate daily with General Bailey, via Plains Store, until he crosses the Comite. To-morrow they will push out ten or twelve miles on the Jackson road and keep Bailey posted. I have sent out forage for the command, and will keep them supplied from here by a train until ready to make the movement from the Comite. They started from here with eight days' rations. The lines are closed tight. Have heard nothing from Clinton for several days.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. J. Herron,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, March 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron,
Baton Rouge:

The expedition from Vicksburg is countermanded on account of rains. Let yours, however, proceed and occupy their attention, not, however, involving your column beyond the Amite. Build a bridge as proposed, but keep your force well in hand and withdraw in about four or five days.

S. A. Hurlbut,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., March 1, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Edmund J. Davis,
Morganza, La.:

General: Brigadier-General McKean has been assigned to command at Morganza, and is on his way up. General Herron desires you to remain a day or so and give him the benefit of your knowledge of the country and people, after which you will report to Major-General Herron for orders in person.

I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

Wm. Hyde Clark,
Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Port Hudson, March 1, 1865.

Maj. N. C. Mitchell,
Commanding Fourth U. S. Colored Cavalry:

Sir: In accordance with instructions received from Major-General Herron, you will immediately proceed with your command and open communication with Brigadier-General Bailey at Redwood, via Plains Store. The communication between here and General Bailey will be kept up daily until he has succeeded in building the bridge across the Comite and moved on from that point. A part of your command will move out past Newport in the direction of Jackson as far as it will be perfectly safe. The object of this is to prevent any operations from that quarter against General Bailey. Any orders received by you or any of your command from General Bailey will be obeyed and carried out as though received from here.

By command of Brigadier-General Hamlin:

HORACE M. WING,
Lieutenant and Aide-de-Camp.

SAINT LOUIS, MO., March 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOSEPH J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

GENERAL: There are rumors here, which appear to obtain credence among the well-informed classes of rebel sympathizers, that Price's army is on the move northward, and that he is to be joined by Forrest (who is now east of the Mississippi) somewhere in Arkansas, when the entire force will move into Missouri. My information is obtained through detectives.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

J. H. BAKER,
Colonel and Provost-Marshal-General.

[Indorsement.]

Official copy respectfully furnished headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi for information.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La., March 1, 1865. (Received 6th.)

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. DANA,
Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.:

In consequence of the late severe rain-storms, which show no signs of abatement, the intended expedition from Vicksburg must be given up, and I have ordered Knipe's cavalry down to this place. The other co-operative movements mentioned in my dispatch of the 22d of February will, however, take place, and I send you this information in order that your instructions for the movement from Memphis may be modified accordingly, and the troops committed no further than is necessary and practicable under the circumstances.

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La., March 1, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. F. KNIFE,
Commanding Cavalry Force:
(Care Headquarters District of Vicksburg.)

The recent severe rains will make it impracticable for you to carry out the instructions contained in my dispatch of the 22d of February, and you will please to embark your command as soon as transportation can be furnished, and proceed to this city. An officer of the quartermaster's department goes up this afternoon, and the commanding general district of Vicksburg will also aid in expediting the movement as much as possible.

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

VICKSBURG, March 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY,
Commanding Military Division of West Mississippi:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of instructions dated February 22, and beg leave to state that I have made every effort to be prepared to move in accordance with your order. I have received the number of horses necessary to mount my entire command. Have been compelled to take some 400 from the cavalry at this post; the balance I received per steamer to-day. I have my pack train complete, having been fortunate enough to secure pack-saddles at this place, and will be ready to move in accordance with your instructions on the 5th instant. I am fearful that I shall not be able to cross Pearl River. General Smith has promised to put me over the Big Black River on pontoons by that time. These streams are very much swollen in consequence of the continuous rain we are having. Nothing shall be wanting on my part to make the expedition a successful one.

JOSEPH F. KNIFE,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 1, 1865—10 a. m.

General DODGE:

Please write me briefly what force you have in the department, and will have by May 15, in view of any raids of Price. I want it to send to Washington with letter on the subject I am writing.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 1, 1865.

Capt. JOSEPH McC. BELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Military Division of the Missouri:

CAPTAIN: For the information of the major-general commanding I herewith submit a brief report of troops who would be available in case of a raid by Price. This is upon the supposition that no U. S. volunteer troops would be left in Missouri and does not include those holding the Overland Mail Route: Thirty-ninth Missouri Infantry, 400; Forty-first Missouri Infantry, 700; Forty-third Missouri Infantry, 600; Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, 900; Seventh Kansas Cavalry, 400; Fifteenth Kansas Cavalry, 500 (Fort Scott); Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry, 600; Fourteenth Missouri Cavalry, 300; five batteries, 600; Missouri State Militia remaining in service, 500; total, 5,500. There are also two regiments, Fifteenth and Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry, in Southwest Missouri, whose terms expire in June, and are not included in this.
There are also the Forty-fifth Missouri Infantry and the Fiftieth Missouri Infantry, 800 in all, six-months' troops, whose term is expiring, but have been sent here for reorganization. I think we can count on 500 men from these two regiments. I desire also to state that the term of service of all troops in the District of Southwest Missouri expires this month, except the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry mentioned above as expiring in June.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Patterson, March —, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

SIR: Having been a citizen in Southeast Missouri before the war and soldier since the commencement of the rebellion, and having a good knowledge of the country and people of Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas, I will state a few things in reference to the condition of this country. Our extreme outposts are Patterson and Bloomfield. This leaves our advance posts about fifty miles from the Arkansas line. The country is diversified by hills, valleys, swamps, marshes, generally heavy timber, underbrush, &c., interspersed with numerous creeks, rivers, and rivulets, offering all the advantages that could be desired by a guerrilla force, where they can operate, and in many places elude capture or almost defy pursuit. The distance from our outposts to Little Rock is about 200 miles. The country between here and there is infested by guerrillas, bushwhackers, &c. With the advantages they have it is impossible for us to destroy them while we are at such a distance from them, and we cannot prevent them from making raids and murdering and robbing loyal men, and doing all other acts that these demons desire. Our outposts are generally weak and entirely insufficient for the vast work to be performed. From the present indications there will not be a loyal man south of Patterson in two months, unless something is speedily done for their relief, and no person can make anything to live upon, as he will be unable to keep any stock. All that portion of the country lying between Saint François River, and Big Black, White, and Mississippi Rivers, is level and swampy, but among those swamps are fine tracts of rich lands. In that country guerrillas live, concentrate, and have their families. They raise their crops, but are so far from us that an ordinary scout cannot well reach them. We are too far from our work. We, in my judgment, will never be able to clear this country until we put a permanent post at Batesville or Pocahontas (the latter place would be preferable), say two regiments, one infantry and one cavalry, and in four months two regiments can be organized in Arkansas that will protect themselves. The forces and operations we have here now will never clear this country or give peace to it, and furthermore we will be bound to clear the country of those who aid and conceal guerrillas; also of the families of all guerrillas, for, as strange as it may appear, while every loyal man is leaving the country, the families of guerrillas are allowed to remain amongst us and to give all the information that may be desired. I would say more, but I must leave after bushwhackers.

Yours, very respectfully,

WM. T. LEEPER.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sir: I arrived here at 1 p.m. yesterday, having been delayed by bad roads and a very severe snow-storm, which detained us two days at Fort Ellsworth. You will order Private Graham, acting hospital steward, by first coach to Fort Zarah to report to Actg. Asst. Surg. J. Sabin, of that post, for duty. I shall probably start back Monday.

Great complaints are made about cattle stealers. Southern border of Kansas is said to be greatly alarmed. It must be broken up. Carry out my orders vigorously, and let us stop it. Answer.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

FORT SCOTT, March 1, 1865—3.30 p. m.

Major-General DODGE:

Am carrying out your order to the very letter. Have made two new stations out west. Have had for over two weeks 100 men under a perfectly reliable officer traversing the whole southern border, arresting everybody who attempts to go south, and who will seize every head of cattle coming up and promptly report them to Fort Leavenworth. I don't think any of this traffic can pass through my command.

CHAS. W. BLAIR,
Colonel.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, March 1, 1865.

Colonel BLAIR:

I am directed by the major-general commanding to take and hold all parties engaged in cattle stealing, with their stock, and most or all of the stock coming from the south is of this class. I think all should be seized and held until investigation is held here, according to Special Orders, No. 44, of these headquarters. Please inform Lieutenant Beam of this order when he returns.

Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck,
Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a communica-tion from the Secretary of the Treasury of the 13th of January, transmitted with your indorsement of the 5th ultimo, covering certain papers in relation to the tax upon products of insurrectionary districts. The case is not fairly stated by the purchasing agent of the Treasury Department. The products of insurrectionary districts have been subject, since the occupation of this Valley, to military taxes, and the revenue derived from this source has been devoted to the care of freedmen, refugees, and other charities, or to sanitary and municipal purposes. This taxation and the application of the revenue derived from it are legitimate under the laws of war. The tax upon cotton was $5 per bale. I remitted it upon cotton purchased under the eighth section of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864; but pending that this system involved some expenses proper in themselves, but for which there was no military appropriation applicable, I authorized a tax of 50 cents on each bale of cotton. Correctly stated, my action has been a remission of $4.50 per bale of cotton, and proportionally on other products in favor of the traders. In view of the facts stated in my report of the 27th ultimo, this remission was a grave mistake, and I recommend that the original tax be reinstated by order of the War Department. Orders will be given in accordance with your instructions.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 1st instant in relation to the plantation interests in Louisiana, and to say that the President's orders of February 10 and the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury of February 3, copies of which are inclosed, virtually suspend all action under the regulations promulgated in General Orders, No. 13, current series, from these headquarters. These interests will be regarded as still under military supervision and control, and the commanding general desires that you will adopt such measures with regard to the Department of the Gulf as may in your judgment be best calculated to secure the interests of the planters and of the freedmen employed by them or falling under the control of the military authorities.

BRAZOS SANTIAGO, March 2, 1865.

Major-General Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

GENERAL: I returned to this post last night from Matamoras. Everything appears quiet at that place, at least to a stranger. At Brownsville the rebels are probably 400 strong. They are moving their stores of every description to Corpus Christi and preparing to leave for that place. They don't intend to try to hold Brownsville much longer, and if our forces were ordered to occupy that place I don't think they would meet with any opposition. I have learned from reliable sources that the militia of the State has been ordered to the coast at different points from Corpus Christi east. Breadstuffs and beef were never more abundant than at present. On account of heavy rains in Western Texas the roads have been very heavy lately. The rebels have been sending large droves of beef-cattle into Mexico lately and getting out mules in return. The rebels in Matamoras have had quite a time over the dismissal of Consul Etchison, and the honor of our country would not have suffered much if he had never been appointed. In leaving Matamoras it seems he delivered the books and records of the consulate to a man named McAllen, who on the arrival of the present commercial agent, Mr. Wood, refused to deliver up the same to him, and a week later he saw fit to deliver them, and all the leaves had been cut out from the time of Mr. Pierce's turning over the office to Mr. Etchison. With regard to matters on the Mexican side of the river, everything is set to take Matamoras as soon as our forces occupy Brownsville, and it is safe to say that in a month after the occupation of Brownsville by our troops all of the country east of the Sierra Madre will be occupied by the Liberals. Cortina is still in the service of the Empire, but recruiting fast, and when the time arrives will be found in the right place.

His Excellency THOMAS C. FLETCHER,
Governor of Missouri:

DEAR SIR: I this day returned to my headquarters after a protracted absence eastward, and find your General Orders, No. 8, in the newspaper, from which I first learn of the honor you have conferred upon myself by appointing me major-general of Missouri Militia. I am very grateful for this expression of your confidence, and trust that neither yourself nor the people of Missouri will ever have cause to regret the appointment. I will endeavor, by the help of God, to do my duty both as citizen and soldier. I am not yet fully advised as to progress in recruiting the volunteer militia companies, but I judge it is going on slowly. The people are much unsettled relative to the impending draft. Many counties are making extraordinary efforts to secure volunteers for the U. S. service, thereby avoiding the draft. Large bounties are offered, and I am fearful we shall not speedily fill up the militia volunteer organizations, but will push with all my might. We need the troops. Bushwhackers are even now creating much disturbance. The enrollment in this division will be pushed with vigor, and the regimental organizations, I trust, will follow speedily.

Ever cheerful in my obedience to the orders of my commander-in-chief, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Major-General.

Freeman is reported to be near Batesville with 100 men. It is rumored that there will be a concentration of the guerrillas about the 15th of March.

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, March 2, 1865.
Col. S. E. Browne, First Colorado Mounted Militia:
Colonel: In sending out the companies of your regiment I have so far assigned them to stations, but I desire you to give this matter your personal supervision and attention. There will be six companies stationed from Julesburg to the Junction, not including the former, which would make the stations on an average about sixteen miles apart. With a view to facilitate operations of stage company, &c., Junction and Valley Stations will be permanently regarded as military stations, throwing two companies east of Valley and two west of Valley, making the six. Hereafter I will order the companies as I send them out to report to you at Junction for assignment to station. The object of stationing these companies along the line in the manner above is for the protection of all travelers going to or from Colorado. Such escorts as may from time to time be needed by the stage company will be furnished by your station commanders, and care will be taken to have no conflict of authority between the civil and military. The property of all civilians must be carefully respected, as well as the interests of the Government watched, nor must authority be usurped by station or other commanders. Your mission is to protect the whites and kill the redskins. Send in tri-monthly reports of your eastern commands, as also monthly, and notify these headquarters promptly of any movements made by Indians, and anything of importance. Telegraphing will not be resorted to unless in urgent cases.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
No. 29. ) New Orleans, La., March 3, 1865.

1. Engineers, pilots, machinists, telegraphers, and other experts now in the military service and necessary to that service, if drafted, may, after assignment to regiments, be furloughed, on condition that they shall receive pay only from the department in which they are employed, and if discharged from that employment before the expiration of their military service they shall join their regiments to serve out the unexpired period. Their privilege is, however, not extended in the case of ordinary mechanics whose places can readily be supplied.

2. Under instructions from the Secretary of War, the military fee or tax (see paragraph 3 of General Orders, No. 10) upon products of insurrectionary districts, purchased under the authority of the eighth section of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, is remitted, to take effect from the 1st instant.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,

1. Under the authority of paragraph 5 of the executive order of September 24, 1864, and the instructions of the lieutenant-general commanding the Armies of the United States, all trade in and about the armies, columns, or detachments within the enemy’s line, or in the theater of active military operations, except such as may be necessary to supply the wants of the troops, is prohibited, and no commercial or other intercourse, except such as is purely military in its character, will be allowed under any pretense.

* See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 787.

II. The introduction of products of insurrectionary districts from points in rear of the operating armies and the passage of supplies to the loyal and well disposed inhabitants may be permitted by commanders of districts under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent this trade from being used to support the troops of the enemy. This trade will be conducted in conformity with the regulations of the Treasury Department.

III. The benefits of trade are contingent not only upon the disposition of the inhabitants to submit themselves to the authority of the United States, but upon their ability to maintain order in their own communities, and these benefits will be given or withheld as this disposition may be manifested. If in any district or community bordering upon the lines of military occupation, where there is no organized force of the enemy, the inhabitants, by association or organization, will submit themselves to the authority of the United States, suppress guerrilla parties, and maintain order, they will be placed on the same footing with regard to the sale of their products and the purchase of family supplies as are the inhabitants of districts within the lines of occupation under General Orders, No. 13, of February 1, 1865. But if they countenance, encourage, or harbor guerrillas or other evil-doers, all communication will be interdicted, and the troops sent to repress such disorders will be maintained at the expense of the inhabitants.

IV. For the information of deserters from the rebel armies and other persons who are deterred from entering our lines by the apprehension that they will be forced into the service of the United States it is announced:

1. Neither deserters nor resigned or discharged officers or soldiers will be conscripted into the army or impressed into the military service.

2. If their services are needed they will receive remunerative employ-ment in some of the departments of the army, or, if not needed in the army, will be aided in securing other employment.

3. If their homes are at safe points within our lines they will be permitted to return to them. If within the enemy's lines, where they would be exposed to the danger of apprehension, and do not desire employment, they will be furnished with transportation to Cairo or some other point within the loyal States.

4. Their horses and arms, if serviceable and adapted to our uses, will be purchased at a fair price by our quartermaster and ordnance departments.

5. Deserterds and other refugees arriving at any military post will be sent to the headquarters of the district, where, after examination, the oath of allegiance will be administered and the proper disposition made of them. They will be employed preferably at military posts where there is no danger of their falling into the hands of the enemy, and not in the field, unless they desire it. Local provost-marshal will not be authorized to administer the oath of allegiance, but will send the parties forward for the action of the district commanders.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

O. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
State of Louisiana, Executive Department, New Orleans, March 3, 1865.

Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States:

Dear Sir: On the 22d of February, 1864, I was elected governor of the State of Louisiana and on the 4th of March following I was inaugurated into office. On the 29th of March I received from you a letter or order, in the following words:

Executive Mansion, Washington City, March —, 1864.

His Excellency Michael Hahn, Governor of Louisiana:

Until further orders you are hereby invested with all the powers heretofore exercised by the military governor of Louisiana.

A. Lincoln.

I also received from the War Department certified copies of the commission and letter of instructions to Brigadier-General Shepley, formerly military governor of Louisiana, dated June 3, 1862. I have now resigned the office of governor of this State, to take effect this day, and I therefore respectfully notify you that from and after this day I shall cease to exercise any of the powers of military governor, with which you invested me by granting me these powers. I can safely say that nothing was done by me by virtue of these powers which did not meet the approval of the convention, the legislature, and loyal people of this State, and in which I would not have been sustained even without such military powers. I conclude this letter with a quotation from my message, delivered to the legislature on the 7th of October last:

The unsettled condition of the country, the absence or destruction of most of the public archives and various other causes have conspired to throw much difficulty in the way of a full organization of a State government. The want of a legislature and the sudden uprooting of many important yet unwise and illiberal laws and institutions by military orders, render it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for the executive of the State to perform his duties satisfactorily and understandingly to the public, or to properly reconcile and harmonize the various conflicting rules of government and interests of the State. I was somewhat aided in this dilemma by the President of the United States, who shortly after my inauguration, invested me, without any solicitation or suggestion on my part, "with the powers exercised hitherto by the military governor of Louisiana." Fortunately, the harmony which has characterized the intercourse of the military and civil authorities of this State has rendered the exercise of any such powers by me almost unnecessary. The principal subjects upon which I have used these powers are, the appointment of public officers, the payment of money from the State treasury for just and pressing purposes and after recommendation by proper officers, and the exercise of executive clemency.

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Michael Hahn.

Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army:

Upon assuming command of the cavalry in the Military Division of West Mississippi I find a large proportion of the arms with which the cavalry is now supplied are of a very inferior quality, and in order to facilitate the equipment of the cavalry organizing for operations in the field I urgently request the shipment to this point of 5,000 Spencer carbines, 5,000 Mann's accouterments, and 600,000 rounds Spencer carbine ammunition, to be consigned to the chief ordnance officer at this point, subject to my control. To wait for the forwarding of requisitions of regimental commanders would occasion great delay; and if the arms can be furnished as above requested the command would much sooner be rendered effective. You may rest assured that in the distribution of the arms, if under my control, none but the best regiments will receive them.

Brig. Gen. J. Bailey,
Commanding Cavalry Forces, &c.,

GENERAL: The major-general commanding is in receipt of your letter of yesterday, and directs me to state in reply that he is in receipt of a dispatch from New Orleans that the expedition from Vicksburg has been delayed five days, owing to bad roads, &c. He has concluded, however, to push your column on slowly, and thus enable you to cross a portion of the country to be marched over during what he hopes will be the worst of the weather and roads with comparatively ease and little fatigue to men and animals. He directs that you bridge securely the crossing at Redwood and push on slowly and carefully to the Comite River, bridging that stream so as to make a secure crossing, and there remain without crossing more of your force than may be necessary for protection and observation until your wagons and supplies come up, and await further orders. The delay in the movement of the forces from above will enable you to get over what is hoped will be the worst part of the roads with little injury to the stock, and give sufficient rest for the same to recuperate, thus leaving them in condition to push on vigorously when you finally advance. You will, however, communicate daily with the forces from Port Hudson on your left flank, and will scout sufficiently the roads to your right to be perfectly assured no movement is being made on the part of the enemy in that direction or in the rear. The delay of the movement from above may cause a force to be sent against you from the enemy there, and you must collect carefully any information of movements of the enemy in that direction, reporting to Port Hudson or this point, as may be more accessible, anything you may receive of importance, and so governing your movements that while the direct instructions given you by the major-general commanding of the objects of your movements may be carried out, the delay on part of the troops above may not operate disastrously to yourself.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

WM. HYDE CLARK,
Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., March 3, 1865.

Col. John G. Fonda,
Commanding District of Baton Rouge:

COLONEL: The major-general commanding is in receipt of a letter from headquarters Department of the Gulf, as follows:

The reparation of the levees is a necessity and must be done quickly. You will seize every unemployed able-bodied man of color within your limits and turn them over to the contractors, to be paid, however, for their labor.
He directs that you will seize all the unemployed able-bodied negroes within your district and turn them over to Mr. Weed or his agents for work on the levees, in accordance with the above instructions.

I have the honor to be, colonel,

WM. HYDE CLARK,
Chief of Staff.

(Same to Brig. Gen. T. J. McKean, commanding District of Morganza.)

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 10. (Same to Brig. Gen. T. J. McKean, commanding District of Morganza.)

In compliance with orders from the major-general commanding Northern Division of Louisiana, the undersigned hereby assumes command of this district, relieving Brig. Gen. E. J. Davis of his temporary command. In addition to the officers already attached to the district staff the following are announced: First Lieut. G. G. Bennett, Nineteenth Iowa Volunteers, aide-de-camp and acting assistant adjutant-general; First Lieut. M. Randall McDonnell, Eighty-second U. S. Colored Infantry, aide-de-camp.

THOS. J. MCKEAN,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen, Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: Requests made by the commanding officers of the regiments composing the Detached Brigade of the Seventh Army Corps for return of officers and men on detached service within this department, referred by you for the necessary action, have been received. I have to reply, in making disposition of troops in the department the assignments to military posts for defense almost exhausted the available force in the command. Apparent necessity for some movable troops induced an economizing of material and the Detached Brigade, as organized in General Orders, No. 14, current series, February 1 ultimo, was just formed at the time your request for troops (dated 21st of January) was received. A desire to aid the major-general commanding division prompted the immediate forwarding of this brigade, which composed most of the best regiments in the department. The material of which these regiments are composed exposes them to heavy drafts for clerks and other detached service. The Kansas, Arkansas, and colored troops of the department cannot, except in very few cases, furnish such details. The absence of these regiments from the department was regarded as temporary, hence the detention of the men asked for. Some of these men can be spared. They will be forwarded at once. It is observed that a number are employed as nurses in the general hospital. These are really on duty with the sick of their own regiment. There has been constant effort since assuming command of the department to reduce the number of men detached and restore them to their proper regiments and districts. The remarks of the assistant inspector-general of the military division, that the violation of General Orders, No. 37, 1864, are numerous "in the Department of Arkansas," are wholly gratuitous and are not warranted by facts or practice. There is now an absolute want of competent clerks to perform labor at these headquarters and the offices attached, and constant request fails to supply the want.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF EASTERN ARKANSAS,
Helena, Ark., March 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas:

GENERAL: I have received the order of Lieutenant-General Grant, dated February 12, ordering me to repair to Rock Island, Ill., and report by letter to the Adjutant-General of the Army for orders. I am prepared to turn over the command to Major-General McCook. If this order is intended to rebuke me I am uninformed of my offense. I desire to close up my affairs here, and beg leave to call your attention to the fact that on the 24th of January I sent you the proceedings of the court-martial in cases of Capt. M. L. Bradley and Lieut. Isaac Hester, both of the Sixtieth U. S. Colored Infantry, both of whom were sentenced to be dismissed, but I have no notice of your action in their cases. They have been under arrest for three months. Also, I wrote to General W. W. Orme, on the 1st, in reference to his action on the Henrico cotton. I inclose you his reply, received this day, that you may have the whole subject before you. I most gratefully thank you for sending Captain Wheeler, of the Corps of Engineers, to me, with the intimation that I was to have the command of the new post at Gaines' Landing, and, though I am not well, it gave me great pleasure to think I was to have field duties and a purely military command. The day after his arrival I received the order relieving me. "Sic gloria mundi." I obey the order, and shall continue to try to be always found in the line of duty. I leave your command with exceeding regret. In the present state of my health it may prove a mercy to me.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

N. B. BUFORD,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

VICKSBURG, March 3, 1865.
(Received 5th.)

Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
New Orleans:

Your cipher dispatch from Morganza, dated March 1, to General Knipe received. Two regiments will leave to-night, and I think transportation can be accumulated in four days sufficient to embark the entire command.

MORGAN L. SMITH,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,

New Orleans, La., March 3, 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. L. Smith,
Commanding Post and Defenses of Vicksburg:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of February 28, containing information in regard to the Black and Pearl Rivers; also some papers.
Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. H. DYER,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF VICKSBURG,

Vicksburg, Miss., March 3, 1865.

Lieut. Commander GEORGE BACON,
Commanding Sixth District, Mississippi Squadron:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of 1st instant in reference to the armed launches of the enemy on the Yazoo, or in that vicinity. In reply I have the honor to state that I have been unable to gather anything more but confirmatory reports of what has already been communicated to you. I forwarded you yesterday a copy of a letter from Major-General Dana to Rear-Admiral Lee, which contains about all the suggestions I am at this time able to make. There is no doubt but that they intend mischief at some point, and if you think proper it might be well, as a precautionary measure, to anchor the Louisville off or near this city, as you intimate in your communication. Should I learn anything more concerning their magnitude or designs I will immediately communicate to you, and should be pleased to co-operate with you to the best of my ability with the limited means now left at my command in any measure you may think best to adopt to defeat their designs.
Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
M. L. SMITH,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

SPECIAL ORDERS,

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NATCHEZ,

Natchez, Miss., March 3, 1865.

2. Col. Joseph Karge, Second New Jersey Cavalry Volunteers, having reported at these headquarters for duty with his regiment, will by virtue of his rank assume command of the Provisional Brigade, relieving Col. S. M. Preston, Fifty-eighth U. S. Colored Infantry, who will at once resume the command of his regiment.

3. Brig. Gen. M. Brayman, U. S. Volunteers, having been relieved from duty in this district, will turn over all records and papers belonging to the Sub-District of Vida to Col. W. C. Earle, Seventieth U. S. Colored Infantry, who is hereby assigned to the command.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. W. Davidson:

A. S. MONTGOMERY,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Washington:

There are three regiments of Cherokees at Fort Gibson. I would like to use one regiment on the Santa Fé route west of Arkansas River. Will you please give orders for one regiment to proceed up the Arkansas on west side and report to commanding officer at Fort Larned. Please inform me by telegraph if this order is made, that I may have orders at Larned to meet regiment.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1865.

Major-General Pope,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

I am not willing to weaken the force at Fort Gibson without General Reynolds’ consent. Please telegraph to him. If he can spare the regiment he will order it, as you propose.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
March 3, 1865—1.43 p.m.

Major-General Pope:

General Connor will be in Denver next week. General Mitchell is on the plains, at the head of the expedition starting after the Indians near Black Hills. He ranks Connor. Do you think I had better let Mitchell go on and relieve him when he returns from the expedition, letting Connor take charge of the district in his absence, or relieve Mitchell now and send Connor with the expedition? Mitchell is very desirous to go with the expedition he has fitted out, and I can keep him under my orders until his return, when all the troops in the three districts will naturally fall to Connor.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 3, 1865—2.10 p.m.

General Dodge:

You can do as you suggest about Mitchell and Connor, if you think it best.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

OFFICE ACTING ASSISTANT PROVOST-MARSHAL-GENERAL,
Saint Louis, March 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

General: I have the honor to inform you that official notice has been given to me by the provost-marshal of the Third District of the existence of a band of guerrillas "two miles below Poplar Bluff, in Butler County, under Jennings; also that Cache Swamp is the chief resort of guerrillas under Hilderbrand and Neighbors. These bands rob and murder the people, scouring the country in small squads, and have even attacked the pickets at Ironon, and unless they are checked or driven off it is feared this coming summer may bring new raids, murders, &c." The matter is submitted for your information and action.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. B. ALEXANDER,

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 3, 1865.

Hon. Thomas C. Fletcher:

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2d instant, asking my views as to "the best uses of the U. S. military forces, and their relation to the present and prospective condition of this State," in view of certain measures contemplated by you for the future security of the people of Missouri. Although in replying to your letter I shall be obliged to notice a condition of things not pleasant to contemplate, I have sufficient confidence in the good sense and practical judgment of the people of Missouri, as exhibited in the late elections and in the measures adopted by your legislature and State convention, to feel confident that they are prepared to meet and settle any questions affecting the welfare and prosperity of the State however grave or unpleasant. Until I reached this city I had supposed that the difficulties which had disturbed the State for the past three years had either been practically settled or were in a fair way of settlement, and that Missouri would soon resume the full exercise of her civil functions, and dispense entirely with the cumbersome, inefficient, and altogether anomalous machinery of the provost-marshal, provost guards, and military supervision. I knew that the Union party at the last elections had carried the State by an overwhelming majority, and that a loyal governor and a loyal legislature were now in power at Jefferson City. It did not seem too much to expect of the opposition party in Missouri that a large portion of it would at least be opposed to the whole guerrilla system, which has so long afflicted the State, and would, like all reasonable men, regard bushwhackers as the destroyers of all civil organization and the enemies of mankind. I knew that since Price was driven from the State no organized force of the enemy could be found within the borders of Missouri. I fully believed in the capacity of the American people for self-government, and their determination to retain it; and I presumed of course that the people of Missouri had at once, and earnestly, assumed the performance of their civil duties, and were rapidly placing the State in the position it ought always to have occupied. I hoped to find the military forces in process of being relieved from the anomalous and anti-American functions which had been forced upon them by the extraordinary necessities of the past three years, and concentrated for service in other fields and against the organized forces of the enemy.

I need not tell you, however, that such is by no means the condition of things which I find in Missouri. On the contrary, there has not been a time since the rebellion began when your civil affairs have been more under the control of a military police than they are to-day. I am glad to be informed, by many of your most loyal and respectable citizens, that order has been to a great extent preserved and treason overawed by the action of the military guards and provost-marshal in this State; and those who complain of oppression or irregularity on the part of provost-marshal in the performance of their duties must remember that the adoption of martial law was essential to the safety of the State; that under martial law provost-marshal must necessarily come into existence, and the exercise of great power may, in some instances, be confided to men who subsequently prove unworthy of their trusts. The only wonder is that there have been so few wrongs committed and so few rights invaded during the existence of such a condition of government in Missouri. But it is surely needless to say that the longer such a system is continued the greater will be the liability to abuse; and, as a logical result, what are now rare and exceptional cases of outrage and injustice on the part of the provost-marshal and soldiers will gradually but surely become of far more general occurrence; and you may expect finally to see your State under the complete dominion of the military. There will then be scarce a square yard of the State which will not enjoy the felicity of some military functionary. They will come to perform the duties of all the civil magistrates—to be the final judges of all things. Into every province of civil law, and even of domestic life, these military officials will in time most assuredly intrude, and become the final arbiters of both morals and manners.

What will become of the citizen under this extraordinary state of government? The simple mention of a few instances, I trust exceptional, which have been brought to my knowledge by undoubted authority since my arrival in Saint Louis, will sufficiently answer. By the authorities in Washington my attention has been called to the fact that provost-marshal in several districts of Missouri are seizing and selling property, themselves being the judges of law and fact, and the custodians and disposers of the property involved. Another instance: An application was made since my arrival here for an order to take a military guard across the river into the State of Illinois and arrest a citizen of that State, living twenty miles distant, and bring him to the military prison in this city because a colored man, also living in Illinois, complained that the white man owed him for several days' labor, and had abused him when he asked for the money. Another case, mentioned to me by a loyal gentleman of this city, a man of high character and undoubted veracity: A quarrel occurred between a man and his wife in one of the interior towns of the State, in which, on complaint of the wife, the provost-marshal arrested the husband, made him divide his property with his wife, and then banished him from the State. These are some of the cases (rare and exceptional, it is to be hoped) which have already occurred. What would be the condition of things after long persistence in a system which logically and surely tends to such abuses? If it were not sad and humiliating it would be ludicrous to see citizens, the most distinguished in position and intelligence, appealing for justice and protection to a provost-marshal and invoking his decision of grave questions affecting life, liberty, and property.

As I said before, there are no organized forces of the enemy in the State, and I doubt not that twenty bushwhackers to each county would be considered a liberal estimate of the number of these enemies to mankind. In some counties there are doubtless more, in others fewer; but even in those counties most infested by them they bear an absurdly small proportion to the inhabitants. These are all the enemies of peace and quiet now to be found within the borders of Missouri, and they are equally the enemies of every man in the State who has anything to lose. Can there be a man in Missouri willing to admit that if every soldier were to-day withdrawn from the State the people would be unable to exterminate these small parties of robbers and thieves; in other words, to say that the people of Missouri are incapable of self-government, unable to execute the laws which they themselves have made, against these ridiculously small parties of outlaws and vagrants! Who does not know that the State is abundantly able to free herself from these pests if the people will only do their duty, and that duty the very first ever performed by man and equally recognized by all classes and conditions of men? This seeming neglect of the duty and the privilege of American citizens, a duty by the strict performance of which alone can we maintain our freedom and our free institutions, is to be attributed mainly, I think, if not wholly, to an alarming and fatal tendency among the people, which I have been astonished and dismayed to notice elsewhere in more favored regions, to surrender to the military the execution of the laws, and thus to abandon all safeguards against tyranny and oppression, and to pass unconsciously into a condition of acquiescence in the complete dominion of military authority. Once let the American people abandon themselves to this practice, which indulgence confirms into habit, and their liberties are gone from them forever. It is hardly necessary to say that under free institutions, the military is subordinate to the civil power, and that the life of a free government depends upon maintaining this relation. There are no doubt, occasions where, in consequence of the presence of the enemy or other extraordinary cause, martial law may become necessary in certain limited sections of the country; but such violent and exceptional reversal of the true condition of things should in every case be made to terminate with the immediate necessity which justified it.

There is no doubt that for a long time after the rebellion was inaugurated military authority was necessarily and properly made to supersede the civil power in Missouri, and perhaps that necessity existed until the inauguration of a new State government at Jefferson City. It would seem, however, that such a necessity should not exist much longer. I presume we will agree that not one step should ever have been taken in the direction of military supremacy except what was essentially necessary. Yet I find that although the pressure of that necessity was far stronger in Missouri in 1861 than to-day, and although in those days the enemies of the State and of the Union occupied one-half of the State with organized armies, and the malcontents who remained at home were infinitely more active and more dangerous because more hopeful, the extent of the military jurisdiction was trifling in comparison with what I now find it. There can be no reason for such a state of things, except that people once accustomed to yield their civil jurisdiction from the pressure of temporary necessity soon acquire the habit of acquiescence after discovering how much trouble it spares them and how much more easy it is, instead of performing their civil duties themselves, to devolve them upon soldiers and provost-marshal. If a man is murdered, if a house is robbed, if any breach of civil law is committed, how much easier it is to write a note to the nearest provost-marshal informing him of the fact, and then remain quietly at home attending to one's business, than to be summoned on a jury, called out as one of a posse, or in any other manner put to inconvenience. According to statements made to me by many of your citizens this practice prevails to an alarming extent in this State, and unless it can be arrested and the citizens induced to resume the performance of their duties I can see no redemption for Missouri.
If the war were ended to day and the Union restored I do not see that the condition of your State would be at all bettered. On the contrary, the thousands of your people who are in the rebel armies, being disbanded and returning to Missouri lawless vagrants, without the means of livelihood or the inclination to work, would simply re-enforce the small bands of bushwhackers and outlaws which now infest the State. The troops, too, now stationed in Missouri would be disbanded by a return of peace, and the people of the State would at last be brought face to face with this question and without the advantages which they now possess. This question must some day be met and settled by the people themselves. Is there likely to be a more favorable season than now? On the contrary, does not every day lost increase the difficulty? Is it likely that the people will be more willing or more able in one year or ten years to resume the performance of their civil duties than they are to-day? If they be more willing, will they have the same aid then that they can have now in the undertaking? To resume the functions of civil government in Missouri will undoubtedly at the outset be a work full of labor and sacrifice, and will require unusual fortitude and determination on the part of the people, but as it is a work which must be done sooner or later, and as there can never, to human foresight, be a better opportunity for that purpose than the present, surely now is the time to do it.

Some of your people object that they have no organizations and wish me to issue orders to assist them in organizing, but such orders have again and again been issued without producing the effect. General or special orders from military commanders can never infuse into the people what alone is needed—and without which nothing can be effected—an earnest, resolute determination to act for themselves, to resume their manhood and their civil privileges, and to put down the outlaws who obstruct the execution of the laws and depredate upon the people. Any organization for such a purpose, to be at all effectual, in fact to possess any vitality whatever, must originate with the people themselves and be controlled by them. It is useless to talk of the people co-operating with the military in carrying on a war of extermination against guerrillas and outlaws or in efforts to resume control of the civil administration of your State. It is the military who should co-operate with and aid the people, not the people the military. This distinction may not be obvious at first glance, but it is a distinction vital to success. Since certain orders, issued by me in 1861 for the preservation of peace in North Missouri, have been mentioned in terms of approval by public speakers in this city and alluded to with favor in personal interviews by many of your citizens, it may not be improper for me to state that it was the same earnest action of the people which is now proposed for the preservation of peace and the execution of civil law which I undertook to secure in North Missouri in 1861 by the orders referred to. These orders were suspended and countermanded by higher authority than mine. At the time a majority of the people of Missouri were not prepared for what was then considered an extreme measure. I believed then that the orders issued would force such action as would lead to peace in the absence of organized armies of the enemy. I have seen no reason since to change that opinion, but find you to-day far better prepared for the extremest measures to secure peace in the State than you were then for orders which in these days would be considered anything but radical.

If these orders be approved, why not adopt now the popular action which they then recommended? The people of Missouri are able to enforce law and preserve peace in the State if only they use their power cordially and earnestly. Is it not better to use your civil officers to execute your laws than have them executed by provost-marshal? The military forces under my command can and will render you the same service in either case. It is only suggested to you that for the present you replace the provost-marshal by your civil officers, and let the military force required be applied under their direction and in conformity to law, and not under direction of a provost-marshal and in conformity with his discretion. May it not be apprehended, too, that your militia, a large and controlling body of your own citizens, are being educated into habits of disrespect for your civil authorities and irreverence for civil law by being encouraged or permitted to usurp jurisdiction of civil questions through provost-marshal or military commanders. The lesson of irreverence is soon learned, but of all lessons it is the most difficult to unlearn. What reason have the people of Missouri to believe that their militia, once taught such a lesson, will unlearn it whenever it is found convenient to resume civil jurisdiction? Is it not better and far more likely to secure respect for your civil authorities to require the troops to act under your civil officers in accordance with the laws of the country? Certainly the change from provost-marshal to civil officers in regulating the action of the military in civil matters can be easily made and without the slightest danger of impairing the efficiency of the military arm for that purpose.

Some have said that Missouri is not entirely regenerated, and that although a loyal governor and legislature have been elected, yet there remain still in office many men who are neither loyal nor trustworthy. The answer to this is found in resolutions now before your State convention. That convention embodies the sovereign power of Missouri, and can to-day vacate all or any of the civil offices in the State and provide for filling them by the governor of the State. Until you have not only loyal men, but energetic and determined men who will do their duty with vigor and boldness, holding every office in the State, it seems useless for your legislature to enact laws. In fact, it is child's play to meet in Jefferson City to make laws which are either not executed at all or must be executed to the extent and in the manner which suits the judgment or the fancy of provost-marshal or military commanders. Until the people of Missouri are ready and willing to put forth their whole power to enforce the laws they themselves have made it is a farce to legislate. I do not wish to be understood as advocating any abrupt or sudden change in the present condition of things. I only offer some reasons why Missouri should take the first steps toward a resumption of her civil functions. Surely all portions of the State are not equally unsettled. In some counties it is probable that civil law is enforced and that neither martial law nor soldiers are necessary. In other counties, not so fortunately situated, why will it not be well to take steps at once to at least begin the resumption of civil administration, aided, if necessary, by the military? A little time only will be required, if civil law is promptly administered, even with the aid of soldiers, to make the people feel strong enough to execute the laws themselves. Of course I am supposing that the civil officers act vigorously and efficiently; that they originate what is to be done, and that the soldiers act only under their call and on their authority. Slowly and gradually, county by county, the State could resume its own administration and dispense with the military.

It is by such gradual and careful process that it seems to me certain results can be obtained. Once let us make a beginning and keep steadily and constantly in view in everything that is done, that the final object is the restoration of civil administration, and it will not be found a long nor a difficult task to accomplish the result. But this end must never be lost sight of, and all arbitrary or exceptional acts must be carefully avoided or done only under the strongest and plainest necessity. Martial law seems essential now to the protection of life and property and to the preservation of the State from utter lawlessness, because it seems to be the only law which is generally enforced.
Until the people provide officers to execute their laws, who will be supported in doing so not only by the soldiers but by the great body of the citizens, martial law is your only protection against violence and outrage. It rests with the people to replace it by civil law, and that this can be gradually but surely done there is not a doubt. It seems idle to dwell upon the absolute necessity of returning to your civil status in the Union. Not only are your lives, liberties, and possessions at stake in this matter, but every moral and material interest of the State is involved. Neither peace nor security at home nor emigration from abroad can reasonably be expected under the state of things which now obtains in Missouri. It is hardly to be considered probable that people living in other States, where they have always possessed their civil rights and enjoyed the protection of civil law, will find any temptation sufficient to induce them to emigrate to Missouri and submit themselves to the risk of the present uncertain and exceptional protection of life and property which is offered.

I trust that no one will believe that the military desire to continue this state of things. I say for them, as their commander, that nothing would be more satisfactory to them than to relinquish all connection with your civil affairs and to be transferred to some field where they would confront the organized forces of the enemy, and where their precence with our armies might determine the fate of battles. The only duty which should now be required of the General Government is to protect your State from an invasion of the organized forces of the enemy. The proper position for U. S. troops assigned to such duty is some point on the Arkansas River. How can troops be sent there, when all the forces which can be spared for the defense of Missouri are, on demand of your people, kept scattered over the State, on the plea that they are needed for protection against a few outlaws and robbers? If I accept the views expressed to me by many of your citizens, more troops are required for this service than would be sufficient to beat the largest army that ever yet undertook the invasion of the State. It is said that the disloyal men in the State harbor and assist the bushwhackers. Such service is extremely hazardous, and if these statements be true, a boldness and a spirit are exhibited by your disloyal citizens of which, if a title were exhibited by the loyal men, not a "bushwhacker" would be found in Missouri at the end of sixty days. Guerrillas and bushwhackers were never yet and never will be put down by the operation of a military force alone.

How is it in Missouri? A company of troops is stationed in a village or neighborhood to protect the people against these outlaws. Two or three bushwhackers come into the town, or perhaps live in it, and com-mitt robbery and murder in some house. Before the troops are notified and get to the ground the criminals have either fled or mingled with the crowd, and although every citizen in the place knows precisely who were the offenders, where they live, or who harbors them, not a word of information on the subject can be had from them, lest the next night some of the party or some of their friends burn the house or take the life of the informers. Is it expected that the troops, thus of necessity groping in the dark, can put down these outlaws when the very men needing, perhaps, certainly asking, the protection of a military force, will not even give the slightest information necessary to identify the guilty or the dangerous parties? That this is really the condition of facts I think you know. That it was so in 1861 and 1862 I know by my own experience in Missouri in those years. What ground is there for believing that a military force, in the face of such inaction and fear on the part of the people, will ever be able to find out who the bushwhackers are, to say nothing of finding out where they are, or of exterminating them? The fact is, that in many parts of the interior of the State the people are living under a reign of terror, dominated over and paralyzed by a ridiculously small number of outlaws and vagabonds. It is useless to comment upon such an exhibition of— I will not say what— on the part of a large body of American people. It is only necessary here to express the conviction that just as long as this strange paralysis continues, just so long will the people of Missouri be harassed and plundered by bushwhackers or by any other lawless vagabonds. All the troops in the world could not, under present circumstances, prevent it.

We come back, then, to the same question, do the people of Missouri intend to arouse themselves and execute, as well as make, their own laws? A single example of the trial of one of these outlaws before your courts, and his execution by your civil authorities, would do more to put an end to bushwhacking in Missouri than a thousand military executions. Strip these rogues of respectability borrowed from the notion that they are armed enemies and Southern soldiers, and reduce them, by actual trial and punishment before your courts, to their true status as outlaws and ruffians, guilty of theft and arson, and you will deal them and their sympathizers such a blow as will go far to end the business. In this undertaking you shall have all the assistance the military can render you. The military forces employed shall act under the direction of your civil officers, according to law and the practice in times past. They can thus render you as much assistance as in any other manner, and the result of a success achieved under such circumstances will be of infinitely more benefit to you than a thousand successes achieved by the military alone.

I trust I shall be pardoned for so much reiteration, but plain as are the principles set forth, and familiar as they ought to be, and doubtless are, to all Americans, they seem to me to be regarded in Missouri as mere abstractions, which are true, certainly, but hardly vital enough to control the action of the people. I stand ready to aid the people of Missouri by all the means at my command to resume their status as citizens. I will render them both by word and deed every assistance which will tend to restore civil government in Missouri, and most promptly and cheerfully, when they have done this, will I withdraw the troops under my command to their true position, under the Constitution and laws of the United States. It is only necessary to put reliable men into every civil office and to enact such laws as are necessary to restore peace and civil rights in Missouri. The soldiers under my command stand ready at all times to respond to the call of your civil officers and to act under their direction in helping to enforce the laws of the State. Such is the position they ought now to occupy, and such is the position which under the action of your State convention and of the State government at Jefferson City I trust they will be permitted to occupy in the shortest possible period.

Of course I cannot indicate to you what I intend to do, because you may readily understand from the foregoing remarks that any measures which I shall adopt must of necessity depend upon the action of the people of Missouri. If they will only resume their civil rights and privileges, administer civil government, and set to work to execute their own laws, I stand ready to put an end to military jurisdiction at a moment's notice. I will give all the aid of the military to assist in reducing us to this subordinate position, but until then I am compelled to retain and administer martial law in the State. Unless you do it, and that promptly, civil liberty and free institutions in this country will have received a discouraging blow. If Missouri, without an armed enemy within her borders, with a loyal State executive and civil officers, with an enormous majority of loyal citizens, and with all the aid the General Government is now giving her, cannot resume her civil functions and execute her laws—in other words, conduct her local administration—what can be hoped for the States farther south, which do not possess the same advantages? The example of Missouri, then, is of the last importance in re-establishing the Union. If she fails even to attempt to administer her State government, with a large force of U. S. troops to aid her, it would seem almost hopeless to make the experiment elsewhere. Missouri successful, and the problem of re-establishing civil government in the States farther south is far advanced toward solution. Only earnestness and resolution are required. Can these qualities be wanting in your people? Your State convention has emancipated the negroes—a great work, well and bravely done. Cannot the people of Missouri now emancipate themselves? Can they not free themselves from the necessity of martial law? Can they not resume the performance of their duty as citizens and execute as well as make their own laws?

With great respect, governor, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

SAINT LOUIS, March 3, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller,
Cape Girardeau:

It is reported from Hickman, Ky., that Quantrill, in command of a band of guerrillas, is contemplating a raid into this State. It is supposed that he will attempt to cross below New Madrid, if at all. It is not known how much credit is to be given to this rumor, but it is well to be on the alert. You will communicate with the officers at Charleston and at New Madrid and adopt such measures as you deem prudent to learn the truth of this rumor.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., March 3, 1865.

Capt. Lewis Sells,
Charleston, Mo.:

There is a rumor that Quantrill is going to make a raid into this State from Kentucky. The report came from Hickman, Ky. Send a citizen there to find out the truth, if possible.

By order of Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller:

J. C. THOMSON,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 3, 1865.

Captain Kelling,

New Madrid, Mo.:

There is a report at Hickman, Ky., that Quantrill is preparing to make a raid, and intends to cross into Missouri from Tennessee below New Madrid. Keep advised as well as possible and report any information you may get.

By order of Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller:

J. C. Thomson,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Patterson, March 3, 1865.

Colonel Beveridge,

Pilot Knob:

Mr. Lockwood, a Union scout who can be relied upon, who is just from below, reports that there is no rebel force below here but about twenty guerrillas, he thinks. They report a large force there to keep scouting parties from molesting them. His information can be relied on, as he has been fifteen days in the neighborhood of Cherokee Bay.

Jas. Smith,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Headquarters District of North Missouri,

Macon, March 3, 1865.

James Saunders, Esq.,
Whitesville, Mo.:

Dear Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your valued favor of 25th ultimo, and thank you for the generous, patriotic, and Christian thoughts therein expressed. There are many negroes with their families seeking homes, fleeing from their old masters and from fear of assassination by guerrillas. The bushwhackers in some localities are murdering the freedmen. It is but an additional chapter in the great rebellion. Mr. J. W. Jamison, of Boone County, is very kindly interested in behalf of the refugee freedmen, and I have this day advised him to go to your county and confer with yourself and others touching this question. Mr. Jamison goes up the railroad to-day and will bear this letter to you. He can act as agent between the colored people and parties who desire their services. I trust he may be instrumental in doing much good. I commend him to your confidence and esteem.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Clinton B. Fisk,
Major-General.

Headquarters District of Upper Arkansas,

In the Field, Fort Larned, Kans., March 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of February 23. It reached me by special messenger at 12 o'clock last night. I had already written you my views in regard to the policy of making peace with these tribes before they are severely punished. The weather at present is terrible, windy and cold; the river almost impassable for man or beast. I shall, however, start out a scout of about fifty men under Sergeant Nettleton in a few days, with instructions to try and find where they are camped. One good thrashing will gain a peace that will last forever, while if we now make peace without punishing them severely they will be as proud, defiant, and troublesome as though they were the victors and we suing for peace. Nothing can be gained, in my opinion, in starting an expedition before the last of the month, as their ponies are growing poorer every day and will not be able to get fresh grass before the 1st of April. We will have to go with pack animals and unencumbered with camp and garrison equipage. The weather is delaying the building of our fortifications. When I have them completed fifty men can hold these posts against any number of Indians. I forwarded you to-day drafts of the stone-works. If the weather permits they will be done in ten days. I would respectfully suggest that no more presents be sent these Indians. They are now poor and getting poorer every day. Everything that is done to ameliorate their condition only prolongs the war. Every blanket given them is only aiding and encouraging them to commit further depredations. I have no pack animals in this district. In order to send out the next scout south will have to break up one or two of my six-mule trains. If I can find out the locality of their present camp, and can have a sufficient force relieved from post duty to be kept almost constantly on the plains for sixty days, I am almost certain that I can bring them to terms that will be advantageous to all this western country, and put a stop to these depredations upon our highways forever.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 3, 1865.

Colonel BLAIR:

How far west do your scouting parties go? I am told that many of the detectives and others whose duty it is to stop this cattle stealing wink at it, and are privately engaged in it. Provost-marshal also are charged with receiving bribes to let these droves through. You are probably posted in these matters, and I want the names of any engaged in such work. We cannot expect citizens to have any respect for our orders if our officers, soldiers, and detectives disobey them.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

FORT SCOTT, KANS., March 3, 1865—2.05 p. m.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Saint Louis:

My parties are now 100 miles west, which is as far as my sub-district extends, although a good deal of this business goes farther west up the Arkansas. Lieutenant Beam has charge of this party and can be relied on. He has written orders from me, and disregards detectives and everything else inconsistent with them. I heard from him yesterday. He has already seized 550 head, and is producing quite a consternation.
among the cattle thieves. I want Lieut. W. A. Johnson, Fifteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, badly. He is now at Fort Leavenworth, as witness before a court-martial. If you will order him down to me (his company is here) I will send him and fifty more men to Lieutenant Beam, and the two I am satisfied can stop the business in my command. All that passes through this sub-district goes near 100 miles from here, and they are making extensive arrangements for this spring's operations. I will break this business up if I have to move my whole command out west. I have your orders, and am satisfied that I can enforce them.

CHAS. W. BLAIR,
Colonel.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, March 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

Two companies of Third U. S. Volunteers, armed and equipped, will be ready to march to-morrow; one officer to a company. Forty-seven stragglers of the Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry march to-morrow with 200 horses for Kearny. Company I still here. Twenty-five men and Captain Hyde detailed to provost-marshal for cattle duty in Coffee County by department headquarters.

THOS. A. DAVIES,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS POST COMMANDANT,
Fort Rice, Dak. Ter., March 3, 1865.

Maj. De Witt C. Cram,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Iowa:

Major: Since my last communication of the 15th ultimo nothing of interest has transpired at this post, except the mortally wounding of one of my men on the 20th ultimo at the Cannon Ball River, engaged in guarding Government cattle. He left camp alone unarmed, in direct violation of orders, was set upon by three Santees, and wounded by four arrows. Two Bear is very energetic in his endeavors to bring all Indians disposed to make peace toward Fort Rice, and has sent out some of his people to all the camps, and from those that have already come back from the Heart River and Little Missouri [and] Gros Ventre I have received assurances of their desire to make peace and their intention to come to Fort Rice and hear what we have got to say. I would respectfully suggest that an opportunity for all Indians to make peace be offered until the first or middle of May, after that time treat those not accepting as enemies, and I think with the assistance of those Indians who are friendly a small body of troops could govern this portion of the country. I would very respectfully request of the general commanding that I may be furnished with two companies of cavalry for the better protection of the post and to guard against these small war parties of Santees. The weather since the 22d ultimo has been quite severe.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. A. R. DIMON,
Colonel First U. S. Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.
Respectfully forwarded.

It perhaps would be well if I could visit Fort Rice before starting on my expedition. I might be able to do this, if, as I suggested, a light steamer should be chartered to carry stores. As regards the cavalry force to be stationed at Rice, I have no cavalry for that service, but I would suggest the propriety of purchasing ponies to mount the infantry as a more convenient mode of keeping a cavalry force in the country.

ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.

Respectfully forwarded, calling attention to the suggestion made by General Sully concerning the mounting of infantry on ponies. It seems to me advisable, and I cordially recommend it.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War.

W. A. NICHOLS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Respectfully referred to the lieutenant-general commanding.
By order of the Secretary of War:

JAMES A. HARDIE,
Inspector-General U. S. Army.

Respectfully referred to Maj. Gen. John Pope, commanding Military Division of the Missouri, who will take such action in this matter as he may deem most expedient.

By command of Lieutenant-General Grant:

T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Major-General DODGE:

Will leave Denver by next Monday's stage if I can procure forage. Will send two cavalry companies to Fort Halleck to await further orders. I know nothing of whereabouts of Indians, but believe they have gone to head of Yellowstone to meet Crows and Blackfeet for general war in the spring.

P. E. CONNOR.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 3, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. H. CARLETON,
Comdy. Department of New Mexico, Santa Fe, N. Mex.:

GENERAL: I am in receipt of your communication of January 24, 1865, addressed to Maj. Gen. S. R. Curtis. I am pushing troops out and shall occupy Forts Atkinson, Larned, Zarah, and other points on Lower Arkansas route, and as soon as they move I shall have 800 to 1,000 cavalry ready to move against the Indians in that country, wherever they may be. The posts from Riley to Fort Lyon will be sufficient and strong enough to protect the route and give proper escorts. I inclose orders* prescribing the manner emigrant trains must travel over the plains. If you will designate some point for trains going east to organize I think we can control the route. I am in favor of building the telegraph, but very much doubt whether the War Department will order it. I will cheerfully co-operate with you to the extent of my means, and with the posts you propose to occupy I have no doubt we will be able to hold the route open. The Indians of the plains have been operating extensively on the North Platte route and have now gone north toward the Black Hills, for the purpose, it is said, to form a junction with the Crows and Blackfeet for a general war. I shall be glad to hear from you at any time.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
No. 63. } New Orleans, La., March 4, 1865.

3. In pursuance of authority given in Special Orders, No. 53, paragraph 44, dated War Department, Adjutant-General’s Office, Washington, February 2, 1865, the district for which Col. T. J. Haines, commissary of subsistence, U. S. Army, and additional aide-de-camp, has supervisory charge of the subsistence department, is hereby extended to include all the posts on the Mississippi River within the limits of this command which are dependent wholly or in part upon Saint Louis for supplies.

9. Capt. Oliver P. Gooding, Tenth U. S. Infantry, is hereby relieved from duty in this division, and will proceed without delay to Washington, D. C., and report to the Adjutant-General of the Army for orders.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

G. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

*See Special Orders, Nos. 41 and 42, Department of the Missouri, February 11, pp. 807, 817.
Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf; New Orleans, La.:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that the Fourth Wisconsin and First Texas Regiments of Volunteer Cavalry be held in readiness for field service, subject to the special orders of Brevet Major-General Grierson, commanding the cavalry forces of this division. All officers and men of these regiments now on detached service should at once be relieved and ordered to join their commands, and every effective man should be fully equipped and mounted. The latter can be done by temporarily dismounting other cavalry and afterward replacing the horses so taken from the supplies now on their way from Saint Louis. I am instructed to request that the necessary orders may be given accordingly, with the least possible delay.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,
C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

P. S.—Orders sent to Memphis of the 2d instant for the return of the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry has been so far modified as to require them to report to Brevet Major-General Grierson, in this city, for service in the field instead of to headquarters Department of the Gulf.

C. T. C.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. H. Grierson,
Comdg. Cavalry Forces, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to inform you that the following-named regiments have been ordered to be relieved from their present duties and directed to report to you, with a view of being equipped for service in the field: Third Michigan Cavalry, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, now in Department of Arkansas; Fourth Illinois Cavalry, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, First Iowa Cavalry, Second Wisconsin Cavalry, Eleventh New York Cavalry, Second New Jersey Cavalry, now in Department of Mississippi; Fourth Wisconsin Cavalry and First Texas Cavalry, now in Department of the Gulf. These regiments number in all about 7,000 effective men. All officers and enlisted men on detached service have been ordered to join their respective commands, and their present department commanders have been ordered, so far as practicable, to mount every effective man by drawing horses from the cavalry left behind and replacing the animals so taken from the supplies expected from Saint Louis. The commanding officers of these regiments will stop at Morganza on their way down the river and telegraph to you, care of these headquarters, for instructions. The Fourth Wisconsin and First Texas Regiments will remain at Baton Rouge, subject to your orders, until a good camping-ground has been selected in the vicinity of this city. With these regiments, General Lucas' brigade, and the best portion of General Knipe's command, you will have fully 12,000 effective men for service in the field.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

I. Having been assigned to this post by Special Orders, No. 75, from headquarters Southern Division of Louisiana, the undersigned hereby assumes command.

II. First Lieut. John N. Bollig, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, is hereby relieved from duty at these headquarters as acting aide-de-camp and will report to the commanding officer of the Third Battalion, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, for duty without delay.

Commanding Officer Plaquemine:
Brigadier-General Sherman directs that you inform him of the latest information received from your scouts in the Grossete country. You will hereafter push up your scouts to the crossings of the Atchafalaya River and report frequently and direct. Acknowledge receipt.

Lieut. P. J. MALONEY,
Actg. Asst. Adj. Gen., Hdqrs. Southern Div. of Louisiana:

lieutenant: Your dispatch of this date received. Assumed command of this post to-day. Sent scouts out to-night. Will report result to-morrow. No information to transmit relative to the enemy.

J. HALE SYPHER,

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., March 4, 1865.

Lieut. Col. GEORGE B. DRAKE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Colonel: I inclose herewith letters from Captain Ratliff, C. S. Army, and Mr. Barrow, which were sent to me this morning from West Baton Rouge. The first letter, marked A, is from Ratliff to Captain Donnelly, of the Navy, Mr. Barrow being the bearer, and the next, marked B, is Barrow's letter of transmittal. Not finding Donnelly, Mr. Barrow sent both communications to me, and his note of transmittal is marked C. Being desirous of learning whether this Barrow was a person we wanted, I sent Captain Morey of my staff to West Baton Rouge to communicate with him, and the communication (D) is his proposition on behalf of Ratliff. This person is a regularly commissioned Confederate officer, while Prime, Robinson, O'Neil, and others are guerrillas, and are the bands that lately fired upon our boats. Yesterday Prime's men dispersed the workmen on the levee eight miles above here, and they cannot go back until I send a guard with them. My opinion is that Ratliff wants to secure these men and put them in the rebel service, although he states that it is his intention to punish them.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. J. HERRON,
Major-General.

POINTE COUPÉE PARISH, February 28, 1865.

Captain DONNELLY,
Commander of U. S. Gun-boat No. 54, Mississippi River:

CAPTAIN: It having been represented to me that the parish of West Baton Rouge, the upper portion of the parish of Iberville, and the lower portion of the parish of Pointe Coupé are infested with unorganized bodies of jayhawkers, and that they have been firing at the workmen on the levee at Chinus Cubasse, and at the boats on the river; and also that the Federal authorities are not only opposed to this species of warfare, but are willing to suspend operations against the regular Confederate authorities if they will put a stop to these marauders, I therefore send Mr. Alexander Barrow to you to know if you are authorized by the commanding officer to enter into an arrangement to suspend operations on this side against my command for a certain number of days, until I can at least attempt to clear out these parties. I have given positive orders not to molest parties at work on levees, or to fire at the steam-boats, and my authority is from the Confederate authority in command of this district, and these orders have been distinctly promulgated. And in regard to the levees, it is not the desire of our generals to in the least obstruct a people in obtaining a support which the high water would deprive them of.
Most of the persons along the line of the river are women and children, and dependent entirely upon the soil for support. Mr. Barrow is authorized to enter into an arrangement to suspend hostilities with me for a certain number of days, and I will send a force and attempt to rid the parish of the nuisances with no other object.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. B. RATLIFF,
Captain, Commanding Advanced Post.

WEST BATOUP ROUGE, March 2, 1865.

Captain DONNELLY,
Commanding U. S. Gun-boat No. 54:

SIR: I reported to Captain Ratliff that I understood you to have said a few days since that "if Captain Ratliff would agree you would see that the Federal authorities would co-operate with him, and you would give all the assistance in your power in ridding this section of country from the jayhawkers." To forward this desirable end Captain
R. has sent me charged with a letter to you upon the subject, trusting that he can make such arrangements with yourself and the general commanding the district as to meet the object above referred to. Please let me hear if you are disposed to communicate further upon this matter, and in what manner. If by personal interview, I would respectfully suggest great secrecy, that the parties above mentioned may be ignorant of the action to be had against them. It may be proper, captain, to state that I am not connected with the army in any manner, but residing in what is termed the Grossetete country, and at times near Captain Ratliff's headquarters. The captain has asked me to be the medium through which these arrangements should be made, and you can well understand the interest I in common with my fellow-citizens take in plans by which they hope to be relieved from the nightly incursions of these predatory bands of marauders.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ALEX'R BARROW.

WEST BATON ROUGE, March 3, 1865.

Major-General HERRON,
Commanding District, &c., Headquarters at Baton Rouge:

GENERAL: You will perceive from the inclosed letters my object in coming to this point. Not finding the officer at this station through whom I expected to open communication with you I am induced to address you directly, hoping to consummate the wishes of Captain Ratliff. You will please inform me if you are willing to waive the informality and conclude the proposed arrangements. My verbal instructions are ample, I conceive, and fully justify me in proceeding.

Expecting an answer as early as convenient, I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. BARROW.

D.

WEST BATON ROUGE, March 4, 1865.

Major-General HERRON,
Commanding Northern Division of Louisiana:

After a conference with Captain Morey, acting aide-de-camp, I beg to state that Captain Ratliff proposes to capture or drive away the bands of men commonly known as jayhawkers now infesting the country lying between the Rivers Mississippi and Atchafalaya, north of the Plaquemine. Those he captures will be sent up to Confederate district headquarters to be summarily dealt with as deserters and jayhawkers. Captain Ratliff proposes to capture or drive away these men with his own forces, the Federal authorities to agree to a truce for a limited time, say ten days, not to send any military force into the country above referred to below Morganza or north of the Bayou Plaquemine. Captain Ratliff will agree that the levee contractors at Morganza or at Chenier's plantation, and their hands or laborers, shall not be disturbed in any manner by the Confederate forces.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. BARROW.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY FORCES,
In the Field, Comite Bridge, La., March 4, 1865.

Maj. WILLIAM HYDE CLARK,
Chief of Staff, Northern Division of Louisiana:

MAJOR: I am just in receipt of your dispatch and also one from the major-general commanding of same date. I have just finished the bridge across the Comite River and am now clearing away the timber and brush surrounding it to prevent any advantages that the enemy might attempt to take. The detachment I had sent to Jackson returned, as they learned upon getting within three miles of the town that the force there was too large for them. The force in Jackson and neighborhood is commanded by Colonel Powers, and supposed to be from 300 to 400 strong. The indications now are that the force that fled from Clinton on our arrival at this point is returning to that place again. I do not think there is any danger of their attacking me at this place, but they may concentrate to resist our advance at Clinton instead of the covered bridge this side of Liberty. I have made no demonstration on the enemy's pickets on the opposite side of the Comite, who are in plain view, except the capturing of Captain La Tice and one private soldier, but probably will to-night. I have just started the wagon train to Baton Rouge, which probably should bring up at once three days' rations and the balance in forage, but I leave this to the direction of the major-general commanding. I shall keep up my communication with the cavalry from Port Hudson and carry out other instructions of the general. When I do move from this place I think I can probably maneuver to get in the rear of Powers' command.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. BAILEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., March 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that the Third Michigan and Tenth Illinois Regiments of Volunteer Cavalry be sent with the least possible delay to this city, with orders to report to Brevet Major-General Grierson, commanding cavalry forces of this division. All officers and enlisted men on detached service will at once be relieved and returned to their regiments and a sufficient number of horses will be drawn from the cavalry that remains in the department, to be replaced by horses now on their way from Saint Louis, to mount every effective man in these two regiments. The commanding general is extremely anxious that the movement of these regiments be expedited as much as possible. Please instruct commanding officers to stop at Morganza on their way down the river, and to telegraph from there to General Grierson, care of these headquarters, awaiting his reply.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,
C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., March 4, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that the Fourth and Eleventh Illinois, the First Iowa and Second Wisconsin Regiments of Volunteer Cavalry be sent, as early as practicable, to this city, and ordered to report to Brevet Major-General Grierson, commanding cavalry forces of this division. The order for the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, dated the 2d instant, is hereby so far modified as to require them to report to General Grierson instead of to General Hurlbut. All officers and enlisted men belonging to those regiments and now on detached service should at once be returned to their commands, and, so far as practicable, every effective man should be mounted by drawing horses from regiments to remain in your department, to be replaced from supplies now on their way from Saint Louis. It is desired that no effort be spared to expedite the movement of these troops as much as possible. Commanding officers should be instructed to stop at Morganza on their way down the river for the purpose of telegraphing to General Grierson (care of these headquarters) for instructions. The Second New Jersey Cavalry has been ordered from Natchez direct and should be replaced by some other regiment from Memphis. A portion of Knipe's cavalry will probably remain in your department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Capt. F. W. Fox,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Mississippi:

CAPTAIN: Inclosed please find communication* from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi in reference to my action in closing the lines during the movement of the troops under command of General A. J. Smith at this place. The lines are again closed. Upon receipt of orders from General Canby for General Knipe's cavalry forces to proceed to New Orleans all egress was stopped, including safe-conducts. The cavalry commenced embarking last night. No doubt many complaints have or will be made to the major-general commanding the department about the lines being closed during the movement of the troops. Please lay this communication, together with that from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, before him for his information.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MEXICO, MO., March 4, 1865.

Hon. I. H. STURGEON:

DEAR SIR AND FRIEND: Well knowing your wishes and desires, as often expressed to me, for the future welfare and interests of Missouri, particularly Northeast Missouri, I now write you, hoping that you may be able to lay some matters before General Pope in such a manner as will be to our future advantage as a people and State. I find on my arrival at home that the people of my county and the adjoining counties [are] in a great state of excitement, and many good citizens leaving the State, leaving their farms, making such dispositions of their personal effects as they can, in some instances selling their farms for what they can get, and others leaving their farms and lands and either moving into town or leaving the State—and in most cases leaving the State—many of whom are good, loyal citizens, who have ever been friends of the Government. This present increased excitement has been produced by the raids of a few notorious thieves and bushwhackers, not more than ten in number. As I am informed, five or six of them made a raid into the west end of this county the day before I left home and killed one man and beat and robbed others, which occurred on or about the 25th of February, and afterward some ten, claiming to be the same gang led by the notorious Jim Jackson, of Texas, as he claims, made a raid through the northwestern part of Boone and Randolph and to Jackson Station, killing some two or three persons and robbing others. These raids have been made and these brutal outrages committed upon Union men generally, and such Southern sympathizers as have manifested a disposition to favor the Union cause, and in no case have any notorious rebels been molested. Such seems to be the programme, that all Union men are to be driven out of the State by such fiends, and the disloyal element of the country sit quietly down and fold their arms and rejoice over the result thus brought about. I am satisfied in my own mind that many of the Southern men are willing to see the work of death go on as inaugurated by such fiends claiming to be Confederate guerrillas, &c., until every Union man shall be driven out of the State. During the fall and winter the rebel element of the country was the restless element, and were wishing to sell and leave the State for fear of the reaction to follow the raid of Price; but as that was about to subside these raids have caused them to become more quiet, and many of them seem satisfied to remain, as the loyal men are thus to be either killed or run out of the State. Cannot some plan be set on foot to relieve Union men and retain our population in the State, especially the Union element? I have herein given you a few facts in a very broken manner, and hope you may thereby get the idea intended to be conveyed by me of the necessity of some action to retain our population, protect Union men, and produce quiet in our State as speedily as possible. You can judge of the wants of the country people, and General Pope can fully appreciate the case as presented by you, and I hope will be able to devise some means for our future and immediate quiet and safety. I dislike very much to call on you for any part of your valuable time, but duty to our country requires us to do all we can for protection.

I am, very truly, yours,

J. P. CLARK.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 1, 1865.

Colonel Potter,
Assistant Quartermaster, Fort Leavenworth:

You have been authorized to purchase 600 horses to mount General Blunt's command. General Blunt informs me they can be purchased in South Kansas in two weeks. Send officers down immediately to make purchase or authorize some one whom you can rely upon to purchase for you, as you deem best. At any rate, get the horses for me at earliest possible moment. Answer what you propose to do in the matter.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Wadsworth, Dak. Terr., March 4, 1865.

Capt. R. C. Olin,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Paul, Minn.:

CAPTAIN: I would respectfully recommend the following slight change in the line designated by Major-General Pope from Fort Abercrombie to the Missouri River, viz: Instead of going through Wadsworth, to run up the Otter Tail River to its junction with the Bois des Sioux; thence along the northwest shore of the Bois des Sioux and Lake Traverse to head of the lake; thence westerly to the junction of the James and Snake Rivers; thence to the East Medicine Knoll River, and down it to the Missouri. At the junction of the James and Snake Rivers there is an old Indian planting ground, which I deem advisable to include in the Indian territory. This line follows water-courses as far as possible, which will much facilitate making the Indians understand the line they are to keep north of. In case the change cannot be made I would respectfully request that I be permitted to locate the Indian camp at Fish Lake, which is five miles from here and on the Fort Abercrombie road, but is perhaps two miles inside of a direct line from here to Abercrombie, for the following reasons: The lake abounds in fish, which would be quite a source of subsistence for the Indians; there is an abundance of wood; good land for agriculture and well situated for defense in case of attack from hostile Indians, and within easy supporting distance from here, thus affording many more natural advantages than any other point within a long distance of this post.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBT. H. ROSE,
Major, Commanding Post.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA,
Saint Paul, March 17, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to department headquarters for transmittal to division headquarters for the consideration of Major-General Pope, with the recommendation that the slight changes suggested be authorized, inasmuch as the Indians will better understand a line designated by natural boundaries, such as water-courses, &c., than any other. The spot described as a fit location for the Indians who have surrendered to the military authorities answers the requirements contained in General Pope's dispatch.

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Lt. Gen. U. S. Grant,
Commanding Armies of the United States, City Point, Va.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 9th ultimo. I have no personal knowledge of General Averell. My application for him was based on the reputation he had with the officers of his regiment (Third Cavalry), as an active and enterprising officer. I am, however, greatly pleased with the change you have made in sending General Grierson. I have made applications for General Gillmore and General W. F. Smith. The first had been assigned to another command, and the second application has been declined. The object in making these applications was to have some one near in whom the Department and yourself had confidence, who could take the general conduct of the campaign and carry out the plan of operations in case of any accident to myself. I have no other choice in this respect. Steele, I think, is deficient in the qualities of organization and preparation. The same objection, I believe, applies to A. J. Smith in a smaller degree, but I have not known him so long and so well as Steele. Granger possesses these to a greater extent than the others, but is deficient in other respects. Of the three I incline to Smith, but any one in whom you have sufficient confidence to place in that position would be acceptable to me. Osterhaus has just reported, and has impressed me favorably, but I do not yet know him well except by reputation. The Department of the Gulf will need an energetic commander, with positive qualities of administration. General Hurlbut has succeeded very well, but is anxious to leave the service, and his resignation will be forwarded with the recommendation that it shall not take effect until his successor has been designated and has arrived. I have no one now that can replace him.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., March 5, 1865.
(Received 17th.)

Bvt. Maj. Gen. M. C. Meigs,
Quartermaster-General:

The results of the examining board has embarrassed us materially by discharging officers who cannot be replaced at the moment. I want particularly an officer of experience and energy for the depot at Mobile Bay. Capt. F. S. Winslow, formerly in your department, is now in this city, and from the character given him by General Donaldson, and his general reputation, I think him well fitted for the position. Can he be appointed? I would like him appointed for a principal depot, at least a quartermaster of volunteers with rank of major. I recommend that the appointment be made. Captain Winslow will accept. Please advise me soon.

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
No. 32. } New Orleans, La., March 5, 1865.

1. Division commanders will at once appoint provost-marshal, as required by paragraph 2, General Orders, No. 20, current series, and report their appointments to these headquarters without delay.

2. For brigades detached from their divisions, provost-marshal will be appointed by the brigade commanders.

3. For cities or villages occupied by our troops, a provost-marshal will, when necessary, be appointed by the commanding officer so occupying, or by orders from division or higher headquarters.

4. All appointments or changes of provost-marshal will be at once reported by the authority making them to these headquarters.

5. All provost-marshal will obey the orders of their immediate commanders in all matters affecting the interior police, but will also obey such instructions as they may from time to time receive from the provost-marshal-general.

6. Division and other commanders, having provost-marshal for their commands, will detail a sufficient guard for duty under the provost-marshal; such guard will be detailed from the best disciplined and most reliable troops; and commanding officers are hereby required to aid and sustain their provost-marshal to the fullest extent practicable in the performance of their duties.

7. All commanding officers are hereby required, on the application of a provost-marshal, to aid him in effecting arrests, and to afford him any other aid necessary to him in the performance of his duties.

8. For small temporary detachments no provost-marshal will be appointed, but the commanding officer of the detachment will do what is necessary to enforce order, for the proper care and disposition of seized or captured property, prisoners, refugees, and deserters, and for the surveillance of persons not in the army.

9. Intoxicating liquors, including wines, ale, beer, lager beer, porter, &c., shall not be permitted to be sold in or in the vicinity of any place occupied by our troops, either on the march or stationed.

Major-General Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

There is no news to-day from the Grossetet country. Scouts are now up there, and I expect to hear further to-morrow. If I can find any reliable special scout I will send him up, but we have already a gang of very intelligent fellows up there, and I hardly think that any force will succeed in getting across the Atchafalaya without observation. The condition of the roads is now such that the enemy would have difficulty in surprising us, I think.

Very respectfully,

Plaquemine, March 5, 1865. (Received 8.20 p. m.)

Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses:

Scouts sent out last night have returned. They report having seen an outpost of the enemy at the old mill on the west side of Bayou Grossetete, above Indian Village, supposed to be about twenty-five strong. The scouts had no boats to cross over, therefore could not attack the post. Another party sent down Bayou Plaquemine, below The Park, report having seen two of the enemy's pickets in the vicinity of The Park. My men gave chase, but were unable to overtake them.
The river is rising rapidly, and with 200 men and ropes, pikes, and pulleys I believe the dam of drift in Bayou Plaquemine can be removed. This is of the greatest importance to this post.

Colonel, Commanding Post.

Special Orders, Headquarters District of Natchez,

2. In accordance with instructions received from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, the Second New Jersey Cavalry Volunteers, Col. Joseph Kargé commanding, will with all possible dispatch be embarked for New Orleans, La. Upon arrival at Morganza, La., Colonel Kargé will report by telegram to Brevet Major-General Grierson, commanding cavalry forces Military Division of West Mississippi, for further instructions. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

A party commanded by Captain Norris, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, sent to repair the telegraph line, surprised Captain Kidd's gang, numbering twenty-five, while in camp, at 9 p. m. of the 3d instant. The guerrillas were scattered in every direction and five of them killed; 2 men, 14 horses, 5 mules, and a number of arms and equipments were captured. No loss on our side.

As General Grant requested that the headquarters of Department of the Missouri be established at Fort Leavenworth the Secretary of War will not change them at present.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

Brigadier-General EWING,
Commanding District of Saint Louis:
Sir: I wish to call your attention to matters down the river. For the last two years the guerrillas have procured more or less contraband goods from Illinois, and Chester had been their principal point. This winter many of the worst men in Southeast Missouri have gone into Illinois to winter, and from all I can learn they are passing frequently from Missouri and Arkansas to Illinois and back again. They procure arms, ammunition, clothing, &c. A large portion of the horses stolen from Missouri are taken to Chester and sold and find their way to the Saint Louis market. William C. Polly, a man who left this county to keep us from killing him, has a livery stable in Chester, and without doubt is in league with the guerrillas. I think this matter should be attended to, and I would like to do it. I can take the men from here necessary to do the work. General, come down to Patterson if you can. I wish you to look around here some and see. If the Iron Mountain Railroad comes through here (which it will) I know of no place which presents so good a chance for profits as this. I wish you would come down and see what you think of the prospects. We have heard here that you are coming down with the inspecting officer when he comes.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
WM. T. LEEPER.

HANNIBAL, MO., March 5, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE: General: Holtzclaw, Gouch, and Bragg have left Pike County, Ill., and have gone to Council Bluffs, Iowa. Burchell has been in Pike County for the last week and brings this information. Holtzclaw goes by the name of Miller. He has had his sisters with him all winter, and they all left there for Council Bluffs two weeks ago. This information is without doubt correct, as one of Holtzclaw's men was with Burchell in Pike County. I send Burchell to you, and he will give you all the particulars, and if you will give him the proper authority to arrest the parties he will gobble them without doubt. I am on the track of Blue, Oldham, and Cook. One of the Oldhams died suddenly last week. There are so many different parties at work here over which I have no control it is impossible to accomplish much.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

FORT RILEY, KANS., March 5, 1865.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF THE UPPER ARKANSAS:

In obedience to orders I proceeded to the counties of Chase, Butler, and Irving, and investigated, as near as possible, concerning the report that came to these headquarters in regard to the Texans and Indians on the border. I found that there were four tribes of hostile Indians in camp about 100 miles from the junction of the Little and Big Arkansas Rivers, and had been in camp about two months, and had been visiting back and forward with the Osage and other refugee Indians. It is supposed by the settlers that they are about to join. There are Texans coming and going from the Indians who are in this State, and, it is supposed, to be making preparations for a raid as soon as grass comes. I saw Major Gookins, Indian agent for the refugee Indians. He told me he was afraid that there was something of that kind on foot, as his Indians had acted very strangely for some time. I found the Waco chief (that Colonel Leavenworth sent out to hunt the hostile tribes on the plains) at the junction of the Arkansas Rivers. He had a pass from Colonel Leavenworth, given by Colonel Leavenworth himself. I questioned the Waco chief as well [as] I could about the hostile tribes. He told me they were four days' travel south of the junction. I asked him if the Comanches were friendly with the whites. He made no reply, but hung his head down. I also asked him how many warriors they had. He made signs that there were 1,800. He also told me the Kiowas, Apaches, and Arapahoes came in and got some goods. I asked him if they were friendly to the whites. His answer was, "Maybe so not." I have learned from good authority that there is a Cherokee half-breed, by the name of Chishem, claiming to be a refugee from the Cherokee Nation, who has been trading with those hostile tribes all winter. I inquired of the settlers if he was a loyal man, and all that knew him said he is not a loyal man, and Major Gookins doubts his loyalty. He (Chishem) is the man who issued the goods to them for Colonel Leavenworth—those tribes, namely, Kiowas, Apaches, and Arapahoes—and then left the next day. Chishem is the man that Colonel Leavenworth received information from that the hostile Indians wished to make a treaty of peace. The Waco chief told me that Chishem had gone to the Comanches' camp. The chief said, "Chishem heap, heap big chief—Comanche, Kiowas, Apaches, and Arapahoes." I took it for granted that he meant over all those four tribes. Major Gookins told me he feared the Osages and Wacoes more than any other Indians on his agency. The Waco chief told me the Comanches would not come to receive any goods or make a treaty. There was a band of eight Texans came in the vicinity of Emporia last October, claiming to be refugees from Texas, and camped about three miles from town, with horses they had brought from Texas, and one of the band, by the name of Taylor, came in town and stopped one or two days and made acquaintance with a merchant by the name of Farrell, that had come from Texas. They knew each other by reputation some years ago, and on the strength of it the merchant credited him to $300 worth of goods till they could sell their horses, and on the same evening they left and took forty horses out of the settlement and made good their escape—supposed to have gone to Texas. Farrell's wife came up from Texas last January. She says Taylor had got back to Texas and was recruiting for the raid into Kansas. I also saw a man who claimed to have made his escape from Texas last January, and he said there were 4,000 Texans on the border intending to make a raid into Kansas as soon as spring opens. There is no forage in the part of the country where I have been.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAM PEPPARD,

Scout.

Keep close observation upon the enemy's pickets; at the same time employ a couple of intelligent and reliable men to go up into the

Be careful who you select. Send the bill to these headquarters for payment. Use your judgment as to the route for the two scouts to take. A somewhat circuitous one will be best. Report promptly.

The advance are now at Comite River, having bridged White's Bayou, Redwood, and the Comite, and prepared the roads up to that point. Yesterday morning a portion of the force crossed the Comite and had a sharp skirmish with Powers' regiments, driving them to within one mile of Clinton. Our loss was 2 killed and 1 officer and 4 men wounded. Enemy's loss, 5 killed and quite a number wounded. Hodge is concentrating at the covered bridge, twenty miles north of Clinton, and will have about 1,500 men with five pieces of artillery. Headquarters Military Division of the Missouri,

Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck,
Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I transmit inclosed letters* from Major-General Dodge, commanding Department of the Missouri, in relation to the position and strength of the forces under Price in Southwest Arkansas and the Indian country; and the supposed destination of these forces in the spring. This information corresponds in all respects with that given me by the commanding officer at Port Smith and by spies and scouts from Southern Kansas. There is little doubt that as soon as spring opens and grass is sufficiently advanced for stock these forces under Price will attempt a raid northward. Southern Kansas is most easily accessible, and as it is full of stock and possesses many valuable farms it offers a tempting prize. It is possible, however, that the raid may be made into Missouri. Nearly the whole force under Price is cavalry, and it is altogether probable that in such a raid cavalry alone will be used. The second letter of General Dodge sets forth the entire force at his command, both in Missouri and Kansas, to defeat such a movement. It is unnecessary to point out to you how insufficient it is for the purpose. It is also needless to tell you, as you are entirely familiar with this region of country, that the proper position of troops to cover Missouri and Kansas and to intercept any invading force is some point on the Arkansas River, and at such a point all or nearly all the troops in Missouri, Kansas, and Arkansas intended for the purpose ought to be concentrated. From the direction of Arkansas two routes of invasion of Missouri only are practicable; first, the route through Southeast Missouri, pursued last year by Price; second, the route through Southwest Missouri. These two routes are a long distance apart, and are separated from each other by rugged and difficult country. Of course, the common point of departure of these routes on the Arkansas River is the proper position for troops to intercept a movement of the enemy north; first, because the invading force would be met at the outset, and second, because the force which then would be sufficient to deal with them need be only one-half as strong as would be required to defend these two routes, if posted in Missouri or Northern Kansas. I do not know what force remains in the Department of Arkansas, how it is disposed, nor what resistance, if any, it would make to any movements of the enemy toward Missouri or Kansas. If Arkansas belonged to this division I would at once send all the troops possible from this State and Kansas to the Arkansas River and concentrate them with the troops serving in Arkansas. This combined force, properly disposed, ought to be able to cover all the country north of the Arkansas River. Under present circumstances there can be no co-operation between troops in this division and the Department of Arkansas, and I do not at all know what to expect in the way of assistance from that department. I think your experience in command here has made it clear to you that in a military view Arkansas properly belongs to the same command with Missouri, and that a separation simply weakens the defense of both by preventing a concentration of forces for a common object under a single commander. I have written to General Reynolds on this subject, but as I cannot control the disposition nor movements of the troops under his command I must adopt every precaution that would be necessary if he were not in Arkansas at all. It is not probable that any movement north will be made by Price before April 1, but shortly after that time it will be necessary to increase considerably the force in this depart-

* See Blunt to Dodge, February 14, and Dodge to Pope, March 1, pp. 851, 1033.
I would consider it altogether advisable to anticipate such a movement on his part by sending all the troops that could possibly be spared from this department, uniting them with all troops that could be taken from posts in Arkansas and moving against him. He is only about 120 miles southwest of Fort Smith and could easily be driven from there across Red River into Texas. Until this is done there will be a constant danger of raids into Missouri and Kansas. So long as Price remains where he is the people of Missouri and Kansas will be in a constant state of uneasiness and alarm, and so long will the demand and the clamor for troops at every small village in either State be kept up. I submit these views for your consideration. If Arkansas belonged to this command it is probable that with the force there, re-enforced by what could be sent from here, we should be strong enough to defeat any northward movement of Price. While that department remains separated from this command it will be necessary to keep my troops here and to ask for others in time to anticipate a raid.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck,
Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.:

General: I have the honor to transmit inclosed a letter* from General Sanborn, commanding in Southwest Missouri, containing a report made to him by scouts whom he sent to Southern Arkansas. He vouches for the reliability of their report. As all the troops except those absolutely needed to defend the posts occupied in Arkansas have been taken by General Canby for his operations farther south, and, as is supposed, east of the Mississippi, all the rebels west of the river are released from the necessity of any defensive attitude, and will no doubt make a movement northward early in the spring. In this department there will not by June 1 be more than 3,000 or 4,000 men left, as all the rest of the troops will have been disbanded by expiration of their terms of service. A considerable force will be needed to secure Missouri and Kansas against such a movement. If any operations had been undertaken by us west of the Mississippi the troops of the rebel Trans-Mississippi Department would have been kept occupied and thus prevented from attempting such a movement; but as it is I think we may rely confidently upon such an attempt as soon as grass is sufficient for stock. By the middle of April at farthest more troops should be sent here to defeat such a movement, and I trust that by that time a sufficient number can be spared from other fields. As you know, general, I am very loath to make any application for troops under present circumstances, and should certainly not do so unless I considered it my duty. As recruiting has been and is going on so rapidly and so many new regiments have been organized, I thought it likely that eight or ten of the new regiments might be sent here and drilled and brigaded. Their presence here while being fitted for service would likely have a good effect.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Post,
Patterson, March 6, 1865.

Colonel Beveridge,

Sir: I received information this morning from reliable men that a force is now marching upon this place. I place no confidence in the report, but have sent scouting parties to the various fords upon Black River. Should they see fit to call they will meet a warm reception.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Brigadier-General Fisk:

My men came in Thursday evening last, after a very fatiguing march in pursuit of Jackson, going through six counties and very bad roads. The militia company at Franklin I ordered to push after him. Please order me to Macon with Colonel Lewis Tuesday.

E. A. Kutzner,

General Dodge:

Nine squadrons of the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry reached Fort Kearny this morning. Companies C and E were detailed at Fort Laramie and Company G is on duty at this post.

JOHN WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Fort Leavenworth, March 6, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,

Saint Louis:

Capt. Joseph McCarty, from Topeka, has reported. He says he can raise a company of eighty or ninety Pottawatomies and whites (about fifteen of the latter); proposes one Pottawatomie for first lieutenant and a white man for second lieutenant. The company can be raised in three weeks. About half of Pottawatomies can furnish their own horses. He wants the authority from you to raise the company, and would prefer that the Government would furnish all the horses and arms. Captain McCarty is waiting your reply.

JOHN WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Fort Leavenworth, March 6, 1865.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, March 6, 1865.

Captain WILLANS,
Fort Leavenworth:

The company must be raised from Indians. I can furnish horses, if necessary. I want part Delaware and part Pottawatomie. Captain McCarty better go down and see the Delawares, as they proposed to raise fifty men. I have no authority to take white men.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Fort Kearny, March 6, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

A large number of friendly Indians at Fort Laramie are in a starving condition. What shall I do with them? They say they dare not leave their camps to hunt or provide for themselves in consequence of the threats of hostile Indians.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, March 6, 1865.

Brig. Gen. ROBERT B. MITCHELL,
Fort Kearny:

Feed those Indians condemned and damaged rations. Form them into companies and use them as scouts, or any way, against the hostile Indians, but under no promise of pay or anything else. Merely get what we can out of them for the trouble they are to us. Has the Sixteenth and Eleventh Kansas arrived! Two hundred horses left Fort Leavenworth last week for Fort Kearny for the Eleventh Kansas.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

---

FORT KERNY, March 6, 1865—8.30 p.m.

Major-General DODGE:

The Eleventh Kansas will leave here to-morrow for Julesburg; also all the spare troops on the line. The Sixteenth Kansas has not yet arrived. The horses in the Eleventh Kansas are in a bad condition, and a great many dismounted men. I will leave here with the Sixteenth on their arrival. Nothing new in regard to Indians.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

FORT KERNY, March 6, 1865—9 p.m.

Major-General DODGE:

Sixteenth Kansas not heard from. Mrs. Morton, lately bought from the Indians on Powder River, says the Indians are high up on the North Fork of Powder River, where they intend to leave their families for the summer for the purpose of making war on the Platte. She says the Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Kiowas, Brulé and Ogalalla Sioux, and Minneconjou are banded together and determined to make war to the knife. This woman was captured at Plum Creek in August last.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

DENVER, March 6, 1865—10 a.m.

Major-General DODGE:

No instructions regarding concentration of troops or coming campaign; please instruct. Nine companies of my regiment will be at Julesburg in a few days.

T. MOONLIGHT.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 6, 1865.

Col. T. MOONLIGHT,

I am concentrating troops at Julesburg to move northward after the Indians before grass comes. The Eleventh Kansas will be among the troops.

Major-General.

Major-General DODGE:

Quartermaster at Fort Union, N. Mex., sending to Colorado, Arkansas River country, and buying corn at 23 and 24 cents per pound, furnishing sacks. We are only paying 15 and 16 and cannot get corn.
Maj. Gen. S. R. Curtis,

Comdg. Department of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.:

General: I have the honor to report that advices have been received from my scouts' camp on James River, at Fort Wadsworth, 20th ultimo, which afford the following information: First, the greater part of the hostile Sioux bands are encamped at Painted Woods, on the Missouri, about thirty miles above Heart River; second, there are 200 lodges of Teton at the Forked Butte, a short distance east of Swan Lake; third, there is a mixed camp of Yanktons and Yanktonnais on the Missouri Coteau, near the head of Elm River, making their way down toward the James River; fourth, a camp of about eight lodges of Yanktonnais on the Snake River, a tributary of the James, under a chief named Mdoka (the male); fifth, 112 lodges of Yanktons, encamped on the James River at Oak Grove (Talle de Chien), are engaged in hunting and proceeding toward Elm River, where they expected to find buffalo. Many of the stragglers from the U. S. reservation have gone back in the direction of Fort Thompson, in accordance with the orders given by me to sub-district and post commanders to allow none of these people east of the James River under any pretext whatever. Of the bands above or before mentioned the Yankton alone are annuity Indians, and are regarded as friendly. The powerful subdivision of the Yanktonnais have heretofore been actively hostile, but the repeated chastisements inflicted upon them in 1863 and 1864 have disposed some of the chiefs to peace. As a general thing they are not to be depended on. The bands designated in first paragraph as hostile are composed of the refugees from the Lower Sioux, who perpetrated the terrible massacres of 1862; of some of the Sissetons, who participated in the attack on Fort Abercrombie in the same year, and of others who, having committed outrages upon the white settlements, have no hope of pardon for their crimes. These desperadoes form a camp of about 400 lodges, or about 700 to 800 warriors, who are malignantly hostile, and, if possible, should be placed beyond the power of doing mischief. I hope to be able by a secret and rapid movement, as early in the spring as practicable, to cut off the retreat of this camp into British territory. The Sisseton Sioux generally have been opposed to the war with the whites, and about seventy lodges are now encamped under the surveillance of the garrison at Fort Wadsworth, having given themselves up. About 100 lodges of these people in addition will follow the example of their brethren in the spring, unless unfavorably operated on by British traders and half-breeds. Some of these Sissetons have performed important service as scouts along the James River, &c., in intercepting raiding parties from the hostile camp on their way to the settlements in Iowa and Minnesota, during the fall of 1864. The bitter enmity existing between the war party and those inclined to submit is a good guarantee of the fidelity of the latter, especially when acting under the direction of our own officers. In accordance with the written instructions of Major General Pope, I shall send a force of six companies of cavalry, with a section of mountain howitzers, to Devil's Lake as soon as the grass shall be sufficiently grown to subsist the animals, to remain in that region during the summer months, with a view to intercept the hostile Indians and operate as a check upon the movements of parties interested in the continuance of hostilities. So soon as the programme of operations in this district for the spring and summer shall be matured, I will place the whole plan before you. Your dispatch of 28th ultimo has just reached me, and I will have the honor of replying to it very shortly.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of your communication of the 13th ultimo and its enclosures.† The receipt of the original was acknowledged from New Orleans, and I now inclose a copy of the general order issued in pursuance of your instructions.

HDQRS. ARMY AND DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Fort Gaines, Ala., March 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, &c., Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to submit, for the information of the lieutenant-general commanding the Armies of the United States, a statement of the troops left in garrison on the Mississippi River in a more convenient form than in the customary returns. This force will be increased by the draft, and if necessary by calling out the enrolled militia and using the employes of the departments, by about 13,000 men, and if an attack upon any point is made by drawing from the interior of Louisiana and Arkansas, about 10,000 men, as soon as the intentions of the enemy are developed. I think it proper to suggest, however, that any new troops that may be intended for this division from the West may be sent at once to Memphis and Vicksburg, where they can be much more readily prepared for the field than if they be kept at home.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Major-General, Commanding.

C. T. Barrett,
Captain and Aide-de-Camp.
Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,

Chief of Staff, &c., Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of General Orders, No. 21, and of your communication of the 12th ultimo. The control of the Mississippi River is so intimately connected with the police and trade regulations to be enforced in the communities bordering on it that the one cannot be efficiently maintained without the power to control the other. The interests of the service would, in my judgment, be advanced by the revocation of so much of the order as subjects the troops on the east bank of the river above the Department of Mississippi to my control, leaving the questions of trade and police regulations to be the subject of arrangement between General Thomas on the east and General Pope on the west, and myself, or, preferably by the assignment of a general officer of rank to the special duty of regulating these matters, under the control of the division commanders. During recent operations in Mississippi much embarrassment was experienced by the facilities given for the transmission of supplies and communication of information from points in West Kentucky and Tennessee. The orders given to prevent this were disregarded by local commanders. This question, however, now affects General Thomas more directly than it does me, and besides I do not wish to have my command extended beyond the reach of easy supervision, and this is not practicable while operations are being carried on from the neighborhood of Mobile. If this question had been settled differently it was my intention to have abandoned Columbus, Ky., and New Madrid, Mo., and to have reduced the garrison of Helena, Ark., to what was necessary to protect the colony of freedmen at that place. This, I think, should still be done, as the garrisons of those points are now comparatively useless, and if concentrated they would be of great value in controlling the river. I will send a copy of this communication through Generals Thomas and Pope for such remarks as they may think proper to make.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,

Major-General, Commanding.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Asst. Adjt. Gen., Mil. Div. of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 7th day of March, 1865: A communication from Maj. George Webster, Pass Manchac, La., March 6, 1865, states that the troops at Camp Moore, numbering 200 or 300, had been ordered to Mobile. Daniel McRae, a deserter from the Twentieth Mississippi Infantry, who left Meridian February 2, states Forrest will endeavor to open communication with the Trans-Mississippi Department and will try to blockade the Mississippi River. His command, which informant estimates at 25,000 strong, is now between the Tombigbee and Pearl Rivers. His force is exclusively cavalry, and as such the best in the Confederacy.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

In closed please find some rebel papers. General Dana is expected here on next boat. Your bearer of dispatches to General Dana and Mound City passed up yesterday without detention. I suppose the commanding general is aware of the fact that deserters are crossing the river, going west, in large numbers. They are from all organizations, but principally from Hood's army. I advised naval officers to let them cross.

Major-General Pope,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

Please state briefly by telegraph what you concluded about the assessments in Saint Louis County. Early in the war one Samuel B. Churchill was sent from Saint Louis to Louisville, where I have quite satisfactory evidence that he has not misbehaved; still I am told his property at Saint Louis is subjected to the assessment, which I think it ought not to be. Still, I wish to know what you think.

Hon. E. M. Stanton,
Secretary of War, Washington:

I respectfully ask that Maj. J. F. Meline, assistant adjutant-general at my headquarters, be brevetted colonel for services in Virginia campaign and in Northwest. He deserves the promotion, and I would esteem it a great favor to have him promoted.

Lt. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant,
City Point, Va.:
Will you please try and have Lieut. Col. Fred. Myers, assistant quartermaster, nominated for brevet brigadier-general in the regular Army before adjournment? For his services in Virginia and elsewhere, see my letter to you, dated some time in December.

Jno. Pope,
Major-General.

City Point, Va., March 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. John Pope,
Commanding Military Division of the Missouri:
Your dispatch of this date in relation to securing for Col. F. Myers promotion by brevet to the rank of brigadier-general in the regular Army is received. I received also your letter of last December on the same subject. My recollection is that I answered your letter stating that recommendations for promotions by brevet or otherwise must come from officers under whom the recipient of such promotion has served, and either go to the Adjutant-General of the Army direct, or if it is desirable to have my recommendation, then to me for indorsement. The number of applications I receive to secure promotion for officers makes it necessary for me to adhere to this rule for all officers except those who have served immediately under me. I will be very happy to affix my approval to your recommendation of Colonel Myers' promotion. It will possibly be too late now to secure his confirmation this extra session of the Senate, but his appointment can be made and held over to be acted on when Congress does meet.

U. S. Grant,
Lieutenant-General.

Will issue law and order proclamation to-morrow.

Thos. C. Fletcher.
By the Governor of Missouri:

A PROCLAMATION.

STATE OF MISSOURI, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

City of Jefferson, March 7, 1865.

Whereas there no longer exists within the State of Missouri any organized force of the enemies of the Government of the United States, recognized as entitled to the usages of war among civilized nations; and

Whereas the supremacy of the civil law is the desire of all good citizens and its protection to those who obey, and its infliction of known and just punishments on those who violate it, are the ends for which governments are established, and the restoration of its power is the sole purpose of the armed forces of the United States and the State of Missouri:

Now, therefore, I, Thomas C. Fletcher, governor of the State of Missouri and commander-in-chief of the Missouri Militia, desiring to give to every citizen an opportunity of uniting with the civil authorities for the restoration of peace and order on the basis of the administration of justice, as embodied in the civil law, before the commencement of active operations by the military force now being organized to effect the common object, do invite all men who have not made themselves infamous by crime to unite together for the support of the authority of the officers and laws and to make common cause against whomsoever shall persist in making, aiding, or encouraging any description of lawlessness; and I do hereby request the judges and justices of the peace within the State of Missouri to hold regular terms of their courts and to exercise all the authority vested by law for the protection of the lives and property of the people and the preservation of the peace of the State, and to these ends not only to exercise the authority conferred upon them by the laws of the State, but also, when necessary, to use the power given them under the national statutes to arrest and bind to keep the peace or for trial or commit to jail, as the circumstances may require, all offenders against the criminal laws of the United States for appearance before and trial in the U. S. courts; and all judicial and ministerial officers of the law are requested to apply to the nearest military district or post commanders for such escort, guard, or military force as may be necessary to enable them to effect these objects.

In testimony whereof I have hereto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the State of Missouri.

Done at the city of Jefferson this 7th day of March, A. D. 1865, of the Independence of the United States the eighty-ninth, and of the State of Missouri the forty-fifth.

THOMAS C. FLETCHER.

SPECIAL ORDERS, 4. Headquarters Saint Louis District,

No. 53. Saint Louis, Mo., March 7, 1865.

4. Company H, Second Cavalry Missouri State Militia, is hereby ordered to proceed to Saint Louis, Mo., to be mustered out of service. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

II. HANNAHS,

Colonel Beveridge,

Pilot Knob:

Sir: From scouting parties I hear daily, but nothing concerning the reported rebel force of 200. I feel confident there are not over thirty or forty guerrillas in this country. I have reliable information there is no regular organized rebel force. Rebel men and women report from 300 to 3,000, that our small parties may keep clear while depredations are committed upon Union families by guerrillas.

JAMES SMITH,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Isaac H. Sturgeon, Esq.,
President North Missouri Railroad Co., Saint Louis, Mo.:

Dear Sir: Your note introducing Mr. Pratt, civil engineer, was duly received. I have decided to make Sturgeon headquarters of the Ninth Cavalry for the present, and they will operate against the bushwhackers in Audrain, Boone, and Callaway. My entire force is very light, not one-half what it should be. We are pushing the militia organizations as rapidly as possible, but they go slowly. I am shy about holding the rebels responsible for damages along the line, as the War Department would certainly prohibit me from enforcing an order of that character. The principle is right, but an attempt to adopt and enforce it would be checked by my superiors. I am quite fearful of much trouble when the warm weather and the leaves come, and shall make the best preparations possible to meet it. General Draper will be at Mexico this week, and will make it headquarters, and I assure you we will do all we can to protect the railway.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,
CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 7, 1865.

Capt. H. M. Bradley,
Assistant Provost-Marshal, Columbia, Mo.: Captain: I am pained to learn of the friction existing at Columbia. Pickett was greatly to blame for resisting the guard or in any manner whatever interfering with the men in arrest. I have ever regarded Captain Cook as an able, patriotic officer. He has certainly rendered his country most excellent service, and I should be last to believe that he would do anything to bolster up or comfort disloyalists. I have no one to put in his place; have but few officers and a light force, all told. The captain will be directed to furnish you all requisite guards and force for the discharge of your duties. General Guitar may endeavor to impede you. If so, hesitate not to lay hold of him as you would any other offender. I hope the general will not be instrumental in causing trouble in Boone, but the petition of the Union men of Boone indicates their fear of oppression through his influence. Keep me posted from time to time of the progress of events.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

General: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 6th instant, touching the volunteer militia organizations in Ray and Caldwell. I am advised that none of these organizations are progressing very rapidly. We shall have to depend upon the militia proper, and the plan you suggest of organizing one company in each regiment [in] a county, with a view to active service, and of men who can leave their business, is a good one. Carry it out. We shall soon get volunteers sufficient for the emergency, which I fear is sure to come. We must keep our detailed force as light as possible, and in every way compatible with the public good, save the money of the State. Economize! Economize! Economize! and what we do, let us do first rate. Beware of the easy-going fellows. Select for officers honest, temperate, earnest, loyal men, and insist upon and maintain the most rigid discipline when troops are ordered into active service. Captain McGhee can muster as lieutenant with what men he has. Place him on duty and then fill up the company. General Orders, No. 28, Department of the Missouri, current series, provides for the muster-in of a half company, and if in the meantime volunteers are not offered to fill up the company, let it be made a part of one of the militia companies proper. It is important that the entire enrollment and organization be pushed with vigor. The warm days are upon us, and green leaf is the best general the whackers have. I have approved your list of enrolling officers.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Major-General.

Capt. J. WILLANS, Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

Captain: In consequence of a letter received from General Thomas A. Davies, of March 1, in relation to transportation accompanying the Second U. S. Volunteers (copy inclosed),* I have the honor to state that there are now at this post Company L, part of Company D, Sixteenth Kansas, and a detachment of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry; also stragglers of the Eleventh Kansas, awaiting transportation each to their several places of destination. All the available transportation was sent with the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry to Fort Kearny. To carry out verbal instructions from the general commanding it will be necessary to send forward these troops (Second U. S. Volunteers) with same transportation in their possession. I would also state that unless this district is supplied with more transportation it will be impossible to make a successful campaign against the Indians and keep up the escort to stage and patrol the Santa Fé route. At least fifty more teams are required. Estimates have been forwarded for that amount of transportation repeatedly, but without success.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Col. S. JONES,

COMMANDING POST:

SIR: I have the honor to report that a colored man named Michael James has just been sent to me from Fort Buchanan, at which place he arrived about an hour since. He came from William Hays' plantation, about one mile the other side of Centerville. He left there yesterday morning. He reports that Murphy's company are encamped on Harding's plantation, above Franklin, and numbers about 100 men. Captain Graversburg's company is stationed at Pattersonville and along the road between here and that place, with about the same number of men that Murphy has. He says that there is quite a force at Opelousas, but knows nothing about it more than what he has heard others say.
He says that they threatened to shoot him because he asked Hays for the money which he owed him, and to get rid of them he came inside of our lines. He says that he would like to enlist in some company.
Please inform me what disposition you wish me to make of him.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. E. SHEPARD,

First Lieutenant and Provost-Marshal.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron,

COMMANDING NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA:

Your communication of the 4th instant, concerning an arrangement for clearing the country above Bayou Plaquemine of Jayhawkers and inclosing correspondence of Captain Ratliff, C. S. Army, and Mr. Barrow, has been received. The major-general commanding desires to leave the matter at your discretion. He requests me to say that you can enter into the arrangement if you choose. He thinks that there is great danger of bad faith. His own opinion of the matter is that it is better to have the guerrillas in regular open hostility than as they are. I return the letters of Ratliff and Barrow, copies having been retained at these headquarters.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. B. DRAKE,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

BATON ROUGE, March 8, 1865.

(Received 12.40 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,

COMMANDING:

The main body of the cavalry arrived at the Comite River, although they have twice occupied Clinton and Jackson, driving Powers' regi-
Scott was ordered to start from Liberty for some point on the Mobile railroad on March 2, but is with his brigade at the bridge six miles this side of Liberty. Hodge and Scott united have 2,500 men. A spy just in from Liberty states that Scott believes this movement to be a feint, and had said he would not be deceived, but the troops don't want to go. The building of large bridges over Redwood and the Comite seems to trouble Hodge. Forrest with 5,000 men is coming down from Jackson, Miss., to some point nearer Mobile. He has ordered Hodge to join him, taking all the troops but one battalion. I am supplying Bailey by trains from here, as there is nothing in the country. The roads are perfectly terrible. Am starting a train out to-day, and when it reaches him, if not directed otherwise, I will put the force toward Liberty.

F. J. HERRON,
Major-General.

NEW ORLEANS, March 8, 1865.

Major-General Herron:
The general desires me to say that you can order in the troops under General Bailey as soon as you choose.

GEO. B. DRAKE,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., March 8, 1865.

Maj. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

There are several thousand families within the limits of this command who are related to and dependent on the Arkansas soldiers in our service. These people have nearly all been robbed of everything they had by the troops of this command, and are now left destitute and compelled to leave their homes to avoid starvation. They cannot be sent away, as they are dependent on their husbands and sons in the Arkansas regiments belonging to this command. Many of them are preparing to cultivate the abandoned plantations in the vicinity of this place and Van Buren. Colonel Stephenson has 200 families at Clarksville, which he wants to colonize on the north side of the river near Van Buren. Colonel Harrison has established colonies at Fayetteville, Cane Hill, Huntsville, Bentonville, at each of which places a company of the First Arkansas Cavalry is stationed, and the loyal people are preparing to cultivate the land in the vicinity of these posts. To protect these people and the telegraph and our mail communication with Saint Louis the First Arkansas Cavalry will have to remain at Fayetteville.

We are now issuing rations to a large number at this place who will be able to purchase as soon as the troops here are paid. I am issuing to none but the families of soldiers in our service. I understand it to be the desire of the general commanding that all such persons be kept here and encouraged to go to work. Many good loyal people have been shamefully treated by our army. The country is filled with irregular receipts for forage, horses, cattle, and other property which cannot be settled, but in most instances everything has been taken and no receipts given, the people turned out to starve, and their effects loaded into trains and sent to Kansas. With so much evidence before me I feel it to be my duty to afford these people all the assistance and protection I can possibly give them. They are willing and anxious to work. The number of persons who will want to purchase supplies from the commissary will exceed 2,000.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

I inclose a copy of the order, and hope it will meet with the approval of the major-general commanding.

Hon. A. LINCOLN,

I wrote fully concerning assessment to the Secretary of War on the 26th of February. I resubmitted the question to War Department, as the authority for assessment originated in Washington, and the order was made before I came here. There are strong reasons given for making it given me by General Dodge, which are communicated in my letter to Secretary of War. That letter must be in War Department, and I respectfully invite your attention to it.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit inclosed a letter to the President of the United States with accompanying printed matter in answer to his several dispatches. I have the honor to request that they may be laid before him.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 8, 1865.

Hon. A. LINCOLN,
President of the United States:

SIR: I have the honor to transmit inclosed a printed copy of a letter addressed by me to the governor of Missouri,* in answer to a communication from him. I send this printed copy as being more legible than manuscript. In addition to what is set forth in the letter in question, I desire to submit for your consideration a few remarks and suggestions which it was perhaps wise not to make public in my letter to Governor Fletcher. I ask your consideration of these suggestions, and of those contained in the printed letter, and if they meet your approval, I have the honor to request that I may be so notified, in order that I may put in operation the necessary measures to carry out the policy therein sketched. It is of course desirable that, as there are now no organized forces of the enemy in Missouri, the General Government be relieved from all concern in the civil affairs of the State, and be required only to defend it against armed invasion. So long as U. S. troops remain in Missouri and interfere in any manner in the affairs of the State, they will be a constant source of embarrassment and a difficult obstacle to the renewal of civil administration;

* See 3d p. 1070.
their presence alone, in their present attitude, will subject the General Government to a continuance of appeals and protests from the people of Missouri, and it will not be found possible to avoid more or less interference with civil affairs in the State through the military arm of the General Government. So long as the troops remain, and so long as martial law obtains, the people will feel a constant desire to appeal from the State executive and the civil laws to the military authorities and to the General Government, and no step will be taken toward a resumption of local civil administration.

The people of Missouri will never learn to conduct their own affairs whilst they find an appeal from their State officers to the officers of the General Government. Remove that source of difficulty and they will soon learn that they must depend upon themselves and their State government as their final resort for justice. I do not propose to change the present condition of the military suddenly, but to do so very cautiously and gradually, as follows: The term of the Missouri State Militia, which has been paid by the General Government and has acted under officers of the United States, is about to expire, say about May 1. Under no circumstances should these troops be reorganized or employed in the same manner. The expiration of their term of service will rid us of a large and powerful element of disturbance. No authority should be given to raise troops for service in Missouri. If this recommendation be adopted we should be left in Missouri within a few months with nothing but a few regiments of volunteers from other States. These regiments I will push down to the southern border of the State. The legislature of Missouri has provided for the organization of their State militia to act entirely under State officers. If the State authorities consider it necessary they can replace the Missouri State Militia whose terms are expiring by these militia regiments, which should be suffered to act entirely under the executive of the State. In many counties of Missouri the civil courts are in full operation. In those counties I propose to suspend martial law, not by any public order but simply by private instructions to commanding officers to withdraw their provost-marshals and to refrain entirely from any interference with citizens beyond keeping criminals arrested by the civil authorities in custody until they can be tried by civil courts. Slowly, county by county, the military forces of the United States can thus be withdrawn from all connection with the citizens or civil affairs of the State. If troops or martial law are afterward required we may in any part of the State let the governor take the responsibility of declaring martial law and enforcing it by his State militia. I think it will be found that when the State is required to pay the heavy expenses incurred by calling out the militia to enforce martial law it will be discovered that martial law is not so desirable or valuable an institution as has been supposed; and I think also that it will not be found necessary—when the State has to pay for it—to employ such large forces against bushwhackers.

There is a loyal State executive and civil officers and a large loyal majority in the State, and I cannot see why it is not abundantly able to settle all controversies between its own citizens, without referring them to the Administration at Washington. So long as these appeals are listened to at Washington, just that long they will continue to be made and the affairs of Missouri to remain unsettled. The best thing, I think, which can now be done is to leave the people of Missouri to settle their own affairs, only guaranteeing them protection from the invasion of armed forces of the rebels. This is what I desire and propose to do, with your approval, and as I shall do nothing whatever to interfere in any manner with the civil affairs of the State or with its citizens, and I consider it very unwise to do so, I trust that all appeals to Your Excellency, requiring such action from me, be referred where I shall refer them and where, I think, they ought to be referred, viz., to the State authorities. These authorities will never command the respect of the people until it is found that they, and not the General Government, are the final appeal of the people of Missouri. The other subjects connected with affairs in Missouri are so freely discussed in my letter to Governor Fletcher that it is unnecessary to touch upon them here. An abrupt and sudden abrogation of martial law would create much alarm and discontent among a certain class of people in the State and would meet with violent [dis]approbation. I propose, therefore, to get rid of it gradually, and without any public order suffer it to die out for want of exercise, so that the people will be unconscious of it until they cease to regard martial law necessary or desirable.

It will be perceived from the newspapers of the city and the proclamation of the governor that all parties in the State sustain the policy laid down in my letter, though for widely different reasons. The radical party support it because, having elected a State government, they could not acknowledge that they are unable or unwilling to administer it without destroying the ascendancy of their party in the State. The existence of martial law in the State for a year longer would effectually dispose of their present majority. In common with the other parties in the State they no doubt desire to restore civil government for its own sake. They hope, too, by thus assuming full control of civil affairs, to reduce all troubles in Missouri to mere controversies between the citizens and civil officers and laws of the State, and thus rid themselves of interference in their affairs, occasioned by influences brought to bear in Washington. The conservatives, both Republicans and Democrats, support it because it promises a return to the administration of civil law, which, even though not well administered, they consider preferable to martial law. The semi-disloyal support it because being the minority party, overawed by military authority, they hail any change with satisfaction. As all these parties, though acting from different motives, are united in efforts to restore civil administration in Missouri, and as that result is undoubtedly desired by the Government as well as by the people of the country, I trust that Your Excellency will support me in a policy which will unite all parties in Missouri for this object. One immediate effect of such a policy will be to transfer the protests, the complaints, and the difficulties about Missouri affairs from Washington City to Jefferson City and thus relieve the Administration from the constant annoyance and worry of Missouri politicians.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 8, 1865.

Capt. J. McC. Bell,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Military Division of the Missouri:

CAPTAIN: The following information derived from reports of scouts and from Lieutenant-Colonel Hayes, Twelfth Kansas Infantry, who has been a prisoner of war at Camden, Shreveport, Magnolia, and other points in Southwest since April last on parole, is submitted for the information of the major-general commanding the Military Division of the Missouri: Two weeks ago the enemy's forces were holding a line from Washington to Camden, thence down the Washita to near Alexandria, thence south. Their forces were posted as follows: At Alexandria, Buckner with his division; at Grand Ecore, a small force at work on intrenchments; at Minden, twenty-five miles east of Shreveport, Churchill's division, 9,000 strong; Marmaduke's old division, Cabell's and Siemens' brigades, watching the Washita; Shelby's division in Northeast Texas, headquarters at Clarksville; Walker's division, now commanded by Forney, at Shreveport, where Kirby Smith's headquarters are. Magruder commands in Arkansas. He has a small force posted at Washington and at Camden (now said to be withdrawn), also a force at Boggy Depot. At Shreveport there are two iron-clads and on the Red River fifteen transports. Their troops, except the old Missouri veterans, are poorly armed, badly equipped, and in a very poor state of discipline. All guerrillas and conscripts taken out by Price were dismounted and placed in the infantry. Many are deserting and most of the guerrilla bands are working back into Missouri. The troops fear a campaign against them this spring, either up the Red River or by way of Arkansas, and most of the troops are so disposed as to meet such an advance.

Price's raid is considered a disaster, and there is no talk now of another, except in case no campaign is made by us against them. They look for a movement against them and hold that they can concentrate 40,000 men against us, but admit that if one is made in force they will have to fall back into Texas. There is no doubt that a large number of guerrillas and conscripts are preparing to come back into Missouri so soon as leaves come, and that they believe Canby or Reynolds are about making another campaign against them. Orders from Richmond have reached there to transfer those troops to the east side of the Mississippi River. Many of the officers are in favor of it, but the soldiers, especially those from Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas, will not go. Officers admit that to do it they will have to break up into small parties, and they believe if they do this they will never be able to get the men together again. It is certain that the Missouri troops are the nucleus around which the army is held and is the element that holds it together. Many circumstances are related clearly proving this fact. When Walker tried to cross the Mississippi his troops mutinied. A rebel captain was ordered shot for being a leader in it, and he had to be executed by Missouri soldiers, as none others would do it. No efforts had been made two weeks ago to cross any troops to east side of the Mississippi. Colonel Hayes thinks when they ascertain that no campaign is being made against them they will make an effort to do this; but it will fail and they will, in the attempt, lose a large number of men from desertion, and to satisfy the Missouri troops a campaign will be made against the posts in upper Arkansas and Kansas. All able-bodied negroes were being forcibly collected in camps, but as yet none had been organized and armed as soldiers.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL CARLETON,

GENERAL: The Secretary of War directs me to say, in reply to your letter of January 29, that you will arrest and have tried all persons engaged in unlawful trading with hostile Indians or supplying them with arms and ammunition. Citizens and Indian agents may be tried by military commissions. Before executing sentence the proceedings in such cases should be sent to the War Department for approval. On the 31st of December General Crocker was directed to report in person to the commanding officer of Department of the Cumberland. If the order has been miscarried please repeat it, as General Crocker's services are required by General Grant.

SIR: The river is rising with great rapidity; two feet more will give an overflow at Morganza. The levees are bad at Kenner and Chalmette, and opposite the city. I have sent boats to Morganza to be ready if the swell continues. If the upper rivers come down, as may be expected, very serious damage may be expected.

WEST BATON ROUGE, March 9, 1865.

Captain Morey,
Acting Aide-de-Camp:

CAPTAIN: Your communication of yesterday was received late last evening. I regret that I cannot remain over till the 10th instant. Any arrangements Major-General Herron desires to make in accordance with the letter of Captain Ratliff can be made by flag via Morganza. The river is rising so rapidly that doubtless the levee building will be suspended within the line of Captain Ratliff's duties. It is to be hoped that the high water will so circumscribe the field for plunder for these lawless men that they will desist from fear to operate any more in this contracted or divided sphere.

I remain, captain, with respect, very truly, your obedient servant,

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DIST. OF EASTERN ARKANSAS,

Pursuant to Special Orders, No. 70, dated headquarters of the Army, Adjutant-General's Office, Washington, D.C., February 12, 1865, I hereby assume command of the Eastern District of Arkansas. All orders issued by my predecessor, Brig. Gen. N. B. Buford, U.S. Volunteers, will remain in force until further orders.

Major-General of Volunteers.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF LITTLE ROCK,
Little Rock, Ark., March 9, 1865—7 p.m.

Brig. Gen. Powell Clayton,
Commanding, &c., Pine Bluff, Ark.:

I am at this hour starting a small scout into the Clear Lake neighborhood. My information is that there are some twenty or twenty-five guerrillas in that section. If my scout does not intercept them they will probably cross Wabbaseca Bayou at Derrysaw's, three miles toward Pine Bluff from the McMilley place and on the Brownsville and Pine Bluff road, this to-morrow evening between 3 o'clock and dark. I understand that it is the habit of these bushwhackers to stop over night at the McMilley place; thence they go to Swan Lake, and thence to Reeves' Ferry across the Arkansas below Pine Bluff. If you can, send a party to intercept, at the points above indicated, such as may escape.

F. SALOMON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
Maj. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

Major: I inclose herewith a statement showing the number of troops and their station belonging to this command in July last and at the present time, from which you will see that Fort Gibson, Fayetteville, and Clarksville are now occupied by a smaller number of troops than in July, while at that time the forces stationed at this place and Van Buren numbered 6,051 present and an aggregate of 8,360. This post was frequently threatened during the past season by a superior force of the enemy and for months virtually besieged. The fortifications here were constructed to be defended by at least 6,000 men. From the right of the line on the Poteau to the Arkansas River on the left is two miles. The abatis in front of this line has all been cut and hauled off for wood, leaving the whole front as clear as the ground in front of Fort Steele, at Little Rock. When the Poteau and Arkansas Rivers are low they afford but little protection, as they can be forded at any point. This makes a line of four miles to be defended. The position is such that the enemy can observe every movement of troops inside our works. The force now at this place and Van Buren numbers but 1,801 men for duty. Twenty per cent. of this force will be non-effective during the summer. It is already known to the enemy that we are accumulating a large supply of stores and that the force here has been greatly diminished. Under the circumstances it is safe to presume that as soon as the grass will subsist their horses that there will be an effort made by the enemy to take this place. This post can be held against 20,000 men with a force of 5,000 with more ease than against 6,000 by the force now here. In my opinion two regiments of infantry and one regiment of cavalry should be added to the force now here, to insure the defense of this post, keep open our communications, and protect the thousands of people who are colonizing near this place.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Cyrus Bussey,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjut. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to inclose a note from Captain Gorringe, U. S. Navy, who called upon me yesterday at Memphis (on his way north under orders) and, in addition to his statement in the note, expressed his firm conviction that the facts were as represented. I have notified Lieutenant-Commanders Bacon (probably at the mouth of the Yazoo) and McCauley, at Natchez, that they may be on their guard against any such operations of the enemy. I shall myself take immediate measures to ascertain if the enemy really propose to cross the river at the points designated or within my department.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. J. T. Dana,
Major-General.
Look out for Bruinsburg and Cole's Creek. Magruder's forces have consented to cross, and the boats we have heard of are for that purpose only. Intend to fight their way across if not able to go quietly. My word of honor is given not to name my informant, but it is reliable.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
General-in-Chief, City Point, Va.:

GENERAL: Indian affairs in Kansas and on the plains are so far settled as no longer to need the presence of General Dodge at Fort Leavenworth. All troops, except one regiment in the southern part of the State, have been sent out of Kansas. The Territories of Utah, Colorado, and Nebraska have been formed into one district, called the District of the Plains, and General Connor assigned to the command. He thus commands all the forces operating against the Indians, and I think that no further difficulties of a serious character are likely again to occur on the Overland routes. The great mass of business in General Dodge's department is in Missouri. The military prisons are all here and in Alton. All the difficulties in his department are in Missouri, and he has a great quantity of detailed daily business which it is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, for him to attend to with his headquarters at Fort Leavenworth. I respectfully recommend that they be retransferred to Saint Louis, or that authority be given me to retransfer them. I wrote to General Halleck on the subject some time since, but he replied that the headquarters Department of the Missouri had been changed to Fort Leavenworth by your desire, and that the Secretary of War, to whom he referred my letter, declined for the present to make any change. I think it will be better for the interest of the service and for the discharge of public business that General Dodge should be in Saint Louis.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

It will be seen from the proclamation of the governor and the editorials of the city papers (inclosed) that all parties in the State support the policy laid down in my letter to Governor Fletcher. I trust it may be put in successful operation so that the Government may soon be relieved of all further annoyance and embarrassment about Missouri affairs.

my personal knowledge of the man Thompson, whom you have employed as detective, I would have no confidence whatever in his statements or acts as a detective. He is regarded by good citizens in the vicinity where he resides as belonging to an organization of cattle thieves, and is now under bonds to appear before the civil authorities for trial in a criminal prosecution. He has probably sought the position of detective to enable him and his associates to cover up their illegal transactions. I am informed by Mr. Humphrey that a man known as Judge Robbins has organized a party of over 100 men, well armed, who have gone south toward the Arkansas River. Many of these men are refugees from Texas, or at least claiming to be such (the loyalty of many of them is doubted). Others are from Leavenworth and other parts of Kansas. Another party of twenty-five passed through Emporia a few days since, all armed. They claimed to be a party of scouts sent by Colonel Ford, commanding District of Upper Arkansas, toward the Texas border. I have every reason to believe that they are a party of thieves. I sent to Fort Riley to know if Colonel Ford has sent out such a party. There is every indication that extensive preparations are being perfected in Southwest Kansas for driving stock out of the Indian country this spring that requires prompt action to suppress.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. G. BLUNT,
Major-General.

[Inclosure No.1.]

Topeka, Kans., January 16, 1865.

His Excellency S. J. CRAWFORD,
Governor of the State of Kansas:

We, the undersigned senators and representatives of Southwestern Kansas, desire to draw the attention of Your Excellency to the deplorable state of affairs now existing on our southwestern border, to the end that measures may speedily be taken to insure the safety of the inhabitants and prevent the abandonment of that important part of our State. We will briefly state the facts in the case. For a year past parties of armed men from various parts of the State have been engaged in plundering the Indian country south of Kansas, and driving thence herds of cattle and horses to which they have no title or right, and, as they state, killing all who oppose them in their work of plunder. Emboldened by the impunity with which they have carried on their unlawful business, they do not hesitate to appropriate the property of honest settlers or of loyal Indians whenever it is necessary for the furtherance of their schemes.

Your petitioners are informed that in retaliation for the loss of their property the Indians and whites living in the Indian country south-west of the settlements in Kansas are now organizing for the purpose of indiscriminate plunder of the inhabitants of Butler, Greenwood, and adjoining counties.

Your petitioners would further state that these raids from the south have already commenced, and that four persons have been killed and a large number of horses and other property taken south.

We would further state that a large proportion of the men in our several counties are now in the service of the United States, leaving their families without protection and at the mercy of any invading force.

And we desire further to direct the attention of Your Excellency to the fact that our counties on the west border on the country of those tribes of wild Indians now at war with the whites, and that we are informed by friendly Indians that the savage tribes design making war upon our settlements in the spring.

We would further state that we have no protection whatever on the west or south, and that in view of the uncertainty of life and property the inhabitants have commenced moving out of the country.

And further that immigrants are deterred from settling or making improvements in our country by the uncertainty of life and property before mentioned.

In view of these facts we would urge upon Your Excellency the necessity of immediate action; and would recommend that one company of mounted men be sent immediately to the disturbed border on the southwest, and that part of such troops be stationed on White Water, in Butler County, and part on Fall River, in Greenwood County, to protect the country until the military authorities decide upon some measures of permanent protection.

And we would recommend that Your Excellency place these facts before the proper military authorities, that immediate action be taken in the case.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTH KANSAS,
Paola, Kans., January 31, 1865.

Messrs. ABRAHAM, MARTINDALE, SPENCER, PAGE, STOTLER, LAMB-
DIN, LEONARD, SWALLOW, and MEAD:

GENTLEMEN: Your communication dated Topeka the 16th instant, addressed to His Excellency the governor, in relation to the illegal traffic in cattle and other stock from the Indian Territory represented to be carried on in the southwestern portion of the State, has been referred to me. I have no doubt that the facts set forth in your communication are correct, as there have been many evidences during the last year that large numbers of cattle were driven out of the Indian country, by what authority I do not know. I am told that the parties engaged in this traffic exhibit permits from Major-General Curtis, Mr. Coffin, Indian superintendent, and even from the President, while nearly every man interested directly or indirectly in the business claims to be a Government detective or assistant provost-marshal. As for myself, I have never given any one a permit to go into the Indian country to drive out cattle or other stock, though repeated applications have been made to me, and if any one holds permits with my name attached they are forgeries. As to whether the other parties have given permits I do not know. But I am satisfied that a great deal of rascality has been carried on in Southwestern Kansas in the manner you represent, the consequences of which may prove disastrous to that neighborhood, and if the people and the civil authorities cannot remedy the evil complained of the military authorities should take the matter in hand. The section of country where I understand the principal rendezvous is located is not in my district. I understand that the principal depot is in Hunter County, on Walnut Creek, while my district only extends west to the guide meridian. West of that line is in the District of Upper Arkansas. So far as my district extends I will take measures to remedy the evil you complain of so far as [is] in my power to do, and with this view I shall direct Colonel Blair to send troops to Emporia under a good officer (if such a one can be found) to look after the matter. I have heretofore, in matters of this kind, had much difficulty in finding officers and men who were reliable and who would not themselves be corrupted and become parties to the transactions and operations that they were expected to prohibit or correct. I hope that in this instance I may be more successful. If you will designate some good, active man that is perfectly reliable I will appoint him a detective to look especially after this matter, and will give him such instructions in connection with the military sent for the purpose as I hope will result in breaking up the illegal cattle traffic referred to in your communication.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. G. BLUNT,
Major-General.

To PEKA, KANS., February 7, 1865.

General BLUNT:

DEAR SIR: In accordance with the suggestion contained in your recent letter to us in relation to the illegitimate traffic now being carried on between Kansas and Texas, or the Indian country, we join in recommending that you appoint G. D. Humphrey, of Emporia, Lyon County, Kans., as a detective, and further recommend that, in connection with him, you appoint Edwin Tucker, of Eureka, Greenwood County, Kans., as a detective. Mr. Tucker lives about forty-five miles south of Emporia, near which latter place Mr. Humphrey lives. We make the request for these two gentlemen to be appointed because the respective localities in which they live are a considerable distance apart, and yet not so far apart but they can co-operate, and in addition we have recently received information, which we regard as entirely reliable, that rebel spies from Texas have been to Emporia and through that section of the State and are now in Texas organizing a force of some 800 men to make a raid on Southwestern Kansas as soon as the weather will admit. This information was brought to Emporia a few days ago by two ladies who left Sherman, Tex., on the 13th of December last. Price, Stand Watie, and a Captain Bolen, all had rebel forces at Sherman and Bonham, Tex. These ladies are wives of Texas refugee men now doing business at Emporia. They heard, so they represent, the rebels tell their recruits that their intention was to make a raid into Southwestern Kansas as soon as the weather would admit; that they could make the trip from Bonham, Tex., to Emporia in seventeen days, &c. The spies above referred to came up last fall with cattle and took back with them about forty horses from the vicinity of Emporia—stole them all in one night. We have to-day made these things known to General Curtis and we state them to you in the full and confident belief that you will render our section of the State all the protection in your power. We have asked for forces to be stationed there that the people may not be taken by surprise, and that they may be made to feel more easy than they now do. We feel that you will not fail to give us that protection which our exposed condition demands. In conclusion we say, if you deem it not inconsistent with your duty, appoint both Mr. Humphrey and Mr. Tucker, two as good, true, and reliable men as the State can produce.

Yours, truly,

C. V. ESKRIDGE,
Senator from Lyon County.
R. H. ABRAHAM,
Representative from Lyon County.
WM. MARTINDALE,
Representative from Greenwood County.
J. R. SWALLOW,
Auditor of State.
F. R. PAGE,
Representative from Lyon County.

New Orleans, La., March 10, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to report that no information of importance has reached this office from the enemy's lines to-day.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.
(In absence of Capt. S. M. Eaton.)

Plaquemine, March 10, 1865.
(Received 3.45 p. m.)

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
Southern Division of Louisiana:

One of my special scouts has returned. Reports no enemy, except Brown's command, between the Atchafalaya and Grossetete, below Doctor Campbell's residence, near Rosedale. The picket at the old mill has been withdrawn, on account of high water. My scout on the east side reports all quiet as far out as Bayou Paul. The inhabitants disloyal. On the night of the 8th instant I sent fifteen of the Independent Scouts, dressed in Confederate uniform, to Rickens' plantation, four miles below Bayou Goulai, to catch Captain Brown, who was reported to be there with ten men. The plan failed, owing to the interference of a party of our troops from Donaldsonville who had been up there during the day. The disguise of the scouts deceived the inhabitants completely, and they obtained considerable information of Brown's operations. The scouts report that Brown is harbored and fed by Rickens, Randolph, and Stone, who are the meanest rebels.

J. H. SYLPHER,
Colonel, Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, March 10, 1865.

Capt. W. B. RATLIFF, C. S. Army:

DEAR SIR: Your communication of February 28, addressed to Captain Donnelly, reached me through Mr. Barrow a few days since. It is but proper you should know that the men engaged in jayhawking and plundering on the west bank of the Mississippi claim to belong to the Confederate Army and to commit these acts by orders, and when captured by our forces claim the rights of the prisoners of war. I am glad to know that you repudiate them and denounce their conduct. All they can do can have no possible effect upon the final result of this war, and is nothing more nor less than murdering and robbing women and children. For the purpose mentioned in your letter I will agree to the following arrangement: That no Federal troops shall go or be sent into that section of country north of Bayou Plaquemine and south of Morganza outside of one mile for each of these posts for ten days, commencing March 16, 1865, and that during this time you will clean that section of country of jayhawkers and guerrillas, it being definitely understood that the levee contractors and workmen are not to be disturbed, and that no persons in this district are to be conscripted and carried off. Any jayhawkers that fall into my hands in the future will receive the proper penalty for such acts and without any unnecessary delay. Will you let me know at once whether the above arrangement is accepted?

Very respectfully,

F. J. HERRON,
Major-General.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., March 10, 1865.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

MAJOR: I have the honor to report that in obedience to instructions I left this city on the 19th of February, 1865, with a letter addressed to Maj. Gen. J. B. Magruder, Camden, Ark. I had an escort of one non-commissioned officer and ten men of the Third U. S. Cavalry. Traveling with the flag was Mrs. Dr. J. T. Scott, her two children, Miss E. A. Dean, and Mrs. Allred. I took the road to Washington, Ark., believing General Magruder near there. I saw a few Confederate soldiers on the road, who seemed to be patrolling it. I met with no hindrance from them, but on the contrary every courtesy. I was informed that I would have to cross the Ouachita River at Easley's Ferry, which is some fifteen miles above Arkadelphia, to which point I directed my march, and on my arrival there on the 21st I found, if I crossed, I would have to wait for the streams on the other side of the Ouachita to fall before I could proceed to Caddo River, at which point I was told I would meet a Confederate picket. I crossed the Ouachita on the 25th and proceeded to the Caddo River, five miles from Arkadelphia, where I was met by Captain McCabe, commanding the outpost, to whom I delivered the letter to General Magruder, taking his receipt for it. I also gave him two packages marked, respectively, “Letters from prisoners of war” and “Letters to prisoners of war.” I was told I would have to await to hear if General Magruder would receive the flag and the ladies accompanying it. His answer came on the 28th, and putting the ladies, excepting Mrs. Allred, in charge of Captain McCabe, to be taken to Arkadelphia, I started on my return. Mrs. Allred having obtained her child for which she had gone, she returned with me. I crossed the Ouachita that evening and had no further detention until my arrival at the Saline, which I found very high. I waited there until my rations were up, and on the morning of the 6th I crossed by swimming my teams and escort, and that evening reached my camp at Little Rock. With the exception of the water I found the roads good after passing our pickets, both going and returning. In conclusion, I would state that I was treated with attention and courtesy during the whole trip.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. G. TILFORD,
Captain, Third U. S. Cavalry, Commanding Flag of Truce.

CAMP MORTON, March 10, 1865.

Colonel CLAYTON:

SIR: We arrived at this place on the 7th and have since been actively engaged in scouting. Lieutenant McCracken and twenty-five men had a skirmish with about sixty rebels five miles from here. He drove them two miles, when they made a stand at a bridge and prevented him going any farther. We lost one man killed and the rebels one. If we are to stay here any length of time, I wish you would send us a surgeon and some medicine. No enemy close. Reports say there is a regiment about thirty miles from here, on Bartholomew Bayou.

MARK McCauley,
Major.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

I have recommended several permits for supply stores at this place, particularly provisions and family supplies. Every dollar's worth brought here will relieve the Government, and I hope transportation will be allowed when it can be done without interfering with the interests of the Government. Many prominent loyal men here have ordered supplies from Saint Louis for their family use, with the understanding that they would be furnished transportation from Devall's Bluff to this place. It will be impossible for the commissary department to sell all the stores required, and I hope private stores for use of families will be sent forward as fast as they arrive.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Brigadier-General Bussey,
Commanding Fort Smith:

GENERAL: It is reported at these headquarters that some companies, said to be organized by authority from Col. La Rue Harrison, are committing outrageous depredations in the vicinity of Fayetteville. You will direct Colonel Harrison to submit to you immediately the rolls of all citizen companies authorized by him, together with the conditions of their enrollment. You will forward to these headquarters with the least possible delay the names of the commanding officers, with your recommendation for approval or disapproval. No more such companies will be authorized, except by authority from department headquarters or from yourself, as indicated in letter of instructions to you from this office of February 14, 1865.

Col. W. A. Phillips,
Commanding Third Brigade, Fort Gibson, C. N.:

COLONEL: Your communication of the 8th instant is received. General Orders, No. 11, was issued for the benefit of several thousand persons in the vicinity of this place and Van Buren who are in a starving condition, everything in the country having been destroyed. The demand on us here is so great that many persons here will not be able to receive any assistance from the Government. It will be impossible for me to procure supplies sufficient to feed our army and the very large number of refugees and citizens who are now destitute. My object is to help as far as possible all who will help themselves, and in this way enough can be raised to supply the people. I would be glad to extend the provisions of the order to such persons within the limits of your command as in your judgment are entitled to assistance, but fear it is impracticable to do so to a very great extent. I have not more than four months' supply here now, and am urging the commissary and quartermaster's departments to send me supplies for one year, if possible, on this water. I will forward your communication to General Reynolds, with a letter urging him to send you some supplies for refugee Indians, if possible. Until we are certain to receive full supplies you will have to husband what you already have.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 10, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to transmit inclosed a list of officers appointed in the two regiments of rebel deserters organized at Rock Island. These two regiments are now on the plains. This list is submitted for the approval of the Secretary of War, and it is respectfully requested that if approved commissions be issued accordingly. It is proper for me to state that it has been exceedingly difficult to find suitable officers for these regiments, on account of its term of service (eight months), and accordingly many of the officers on this list have been detailed from regiments serving in the division. It is hoped that they may be commissioned and paid according to their grades, so long as they serve in that capacity with the regiments. I have the honor to ask authority to re-enlist these two regiments for another year's service, with the understanding that at its expiration they will be discharged on the plains. They will contribute largely to the mining population of the Territories and will no doubt do well if scattered through these regions. They are in excellent discipline and well drilled, and they have passed through Iowa and Kansas better behaved than any troops on hand. If their reorganization is authorized all the officers detailed for service with them will give up their commissions in their old regiments for promotion in these new regiments.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Numerous reports come in of guerrilla bands plundering through Ripley, Butler, and other counties below. Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

MAJOR: I have the honor to submit the following statements to the major-general commanding, and ask advice and instructions: In the month of June, 1864, an order of the War Department discontinued payment for the use of private horses. The Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, at that date on duty in this district, were nearly all mounted on their own private horses. General Orders, No. 111, Department of the Missouri, series 1864, was promulgated at a time when the guerrillas were swarming in the river counties, and it became necessary to push every available man into the brush and on the best horses that could be procured. I urged upon the officers of the Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia the importance of inducing their men to retain their horses in the service until the chief quartermaster of the department should issue the necessary instructions to officers in his department for the purchase of the private horses, as in said General Orders, No. 111, provided. A large number of the non-commissioned officers and privates of the regiment did retain their private horses in the public service, but no purchasing agent of the quartermaster's department visited this district until the month of November, four months after the suspension of payment for use and risk of private horses. In the meantime many of the horses were worn out, killed, and captured by the enemy. Over fifty private horses were captured at the taking of Glasgow by Shelby's forces in October. In some instances I remounted men who had thus lost their horses upon captured horses and horses left by the enemy at Glasgow and elsewhere, and directed them to retain such horses until further orders. General Orders, No. 51, Department of the Missouri, current series, requires the turning over, branding, and issuing of such animals. I desire to be instructed whether or not I shall cause the horses I gave to the dismounted men of the Ninth Cavalry, who I knew had lost their own horses in the public service, to be brought in and turned over to the quartermaster. I also, in two or three instances, directed contraband horses to be held and used by Union men in Howard County, who had been plundered by Price of everything they possessed of a portable character. I had verbal authority to do this. Shall I cause all such horses to be gathered in and turned over to the quartermaster? I am particular in asking these instructions now, as the Ninth Cavalry are being mustered out and my own action in giving them the contraband stock may seem at variance with general orders and regulations. General Rosecrans did confirm by special orders such grants of horses in some cases and General Ewing published a general order distributing contraband horses judiciously among the plundered people. Surely, if proper to thus reimburse a citizen no soldier battling in the brush should be overlooked in the distribution of such favors. I desire the commanding general to confirm my action in the premises, if he deems it right; if not, to order me to take up the stock, and it will be speedily done. I will have no captured or contraband stock smoke on my garments, officially or personally.

I am, major, with great respect, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Fort Kearny, March 10, 1865—1.50 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:
It will be necessary for the purpose of supplying the troops in the district with subsistence and forage to send it direct from Leavenworth. Our transportation is such that it will be impossible to keep up the supply. There is subsistence enough for sixty-five days and only forty days' forage. Fort Laramie for the present should be the base of supplies. I am using every effort to get all the corn in the country, but the distance is so great and corn so scarce I am fearful the supplies cannot be furnished without assistance from Fort Leavenworth direct. Additional supplies should be immediately started from Leavenworth to Fort Laramie to insure success. I will make [no] delay in starting the expedition on arrival of the balance of troops, unless otherwise ordered. Stages are running regularly westward.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,

Send forage to Laramie and other points where needed, to keep up the supply.

Maj. Gen. S. R. CURTIS,
Commanding Department of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.:

GENERAL: In accordance with my previous practice of forwarding copies of dispatches of interest received from the different parts of this district for the information of the major-general commanding the department, I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of a dispatch from Major Brown, special agent, to the commander of Fort Wadsworth, dated 28th ultimo, giving a detail of the location of the camps of Yanktonnais and Tetonson or near the James River. These camps are within a distance of 80 or 100 miles from the post mentioned, and as the buffalo are represented as abundant, it is probable the number of Indians will be increased rather than diminished in that region. The concentration of so many, to say the least, unreliable savages may require on my part a somewhat different disposition of the forces in this district from what has hitherto formed my general programme for the spring. You will notice that active means are being taken by the commandant of Fort Wadsworth, in accordance with the orders given him, to clear the Indian camp composed of Sisseton Sioux of improper characters, both white men and half breeds, who visit it for purposes of trade, and do a great deal of mischief.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL MILITARY AGENCY,
Fort Wadsworth, Dak. Ter., February 28, 1865.

Capt. A. S. EVEREST,
Commanding Post.

SIR: There have been some changes in the location of the western bands of Sioux during the month that may have an important bearing upon the Indian policy recently promulgated. The buck (Mdoka), a Yanktonnais chief, who formerly planted on the James near the mouth of the Snake River, with from 150 to 200 lodges, is encamped at Oak Grove, on the east side of the James. There are also sixty lodges of Uncapa and other small bands of Teton encamped at the same place. There is also a camp of annuity Yanktons on the Snake River. They are preparing to return to their reservation near Fort Randall. There are also over 100 lodges of Teton coming in from the Forked Butte.
to the James River, probably to the Oak Grove. There is also a camp on the Missouri Coteau near the head of the Elm River, supposed to be Yanktonais, but neither the number of lodges nor their destination has been ascertained. The camp is said to be a large one. Exclusive of this last camp there will be encamped on the James River this spring from 300 to 350 lodges of various bands of Indians who surrendered themselves last summer and fall to the military authorities at Fort Rice and Fort Sully. Their hunting grounds extend from the Missouri River to this Coteau. They are governed in their locations by the movement of the buffalo, upon which they are dependent for subsistence. The present Sisseton and scouts' camp, located on the James, is not included in this estimate. I learn from a scout that arrived yesterday from the camp at the mouth of the Elm River that the recent storms have driven the buffalo to the river flats in vast numbers. They extend down the James to the Snake River, and are killed in large numbers on the Elm River and near the Oak Grove. I have reliable information that two men from Fort Abercrombie are located in the Oak Grove camp of surrendered Indians for the purpose of trade. They have been there some ten or twelve days, and on Friday last one of them returned to Abercrombie for another supply of goods and for horses to haul away the furs and peltries they have purchased. In addition to the usual assortment of goods they carried to the camp a keg of liquor, which was disposed of to the Indians. From the description of the keg I should judge it would contain about ten gallons. One, at least, of these men was with Quinn when he was prohibited by the commanding officer of this post from continuing on a trading expedition to the James. Knowing, therefore, that if he passed within the vicinity of this post he would be prohibited from trading in this sub-district, he passed across the Coteau by the lake, where the enemy swims, some twenty miles south of this post. These men are violating several of the express provisions of the instructions of the major-general commanding the department: First, the surrendered Indians will be “encouraged at all times to establish their camps in the vicinity of any of the outer posts, and to trade at the post with persons duly authorized to trade with them.” Second, “no white man whatever will be allowed to visit them except by special permit in each case from the district commander.” Third, “no Indian trader will be permitted to locate himself in the camps of these Indians,” &c.

The tenor of these instructions look directly to the carrying on of all trade with the Indians in the immediate vicinity of military posts where the Indians may be protected in their intercourse with the traders, as well as to protect authorized traders from depredations on the part of the Indians. The location of these men in the surrendered Indian camp is brought to your notice that you may take such measures in reference thereto as you may deem proper under your instructions. If you desire to take them into custody, a small force sent to the Oak Grove camp will suffice to take them while there with all the evidences of their guilt around them. In a short time they will have removed, as they know information of their location and business has reached this post. The trip to Oak Grove and back will occupy four or five days. Four to six men from your command will be ample for the expedition. They can be accompanied by scouts from the James River camp. The Sissetons that were encamped on the James have been permitted to move temporarily up the Elm River to facilitate their hunting; a few of the scouts accompanied them. Gabriel Renville with the remainder of the scouts remained at the old camp. The old men and women and most of the baggage of the Sissetons also remained at the James River.
camp. The scouts specially attached to this agency have been employed getting out timber, &c., for ice-house, providing food, hauling hay, &c., except Paul Maza-ka-té-manneé, who has been used in carrying messages, gathering information, &c. The succession of violent storms during the month has very much retarded work of all kinds. The other scouts on duty at this post have been employed in the transportation of the mail between this post and Fort Abercrombie. One of them keeps the station at the edge of the Coteau, with instructions to take the place of any one who may become, through sickness or other cause, unable to complete the trip. Six are employed between this post and the stockade at Twin Lakes, and four between the stockade and Fort Abercrombie. Even with this distribution and the weather we have had, the service is severe. During the month the mail has been carried semi-weekly with commendable regularity, there being but one instance of delay beyond the regular time, and that was caused by delay in the arrival of the mail at Abercrombie, and a severe storm that caused the carriers to lay over at the stockade. A few days since three Red River half-breeds arrived here, on their way to the James River camp for the purpose, as they stated, of searching for lost horses. I forbade their visiting the camp, but obtained description of the horses and such other information in regard to their loss as the men were prepared to furnish, and yesterday morning sent Paul Maza-ka-té-manneé to the James River camp with instructions to Gabriel Renville to examine into the matter, and if the horses were in the camp to send them up by Paul, with a report of all the circumstances connected with their possession by the Indians. I also directed if he found that either of the horses had been stolen to send up the guilty party. I have received no information in regard to the Sissetons at Devil's Lake during the month.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. BROWN,
Major and Special Military Agent.

General Orders,

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

No. 25.

New Orleans, March 11, 1865.

The regulation heretofore published by Mr. W. P. Mellen, general agent, Treasury Department, in relation to freedmen and labor, not having been recognized by the Secretary of the Treasury, the following orders are prescribed for the hiring and government of laborers within the State of Louisiana:

HOME COLONIES.

1. The home colonies, already established by orders from these headquarters, are hereby continued under said orders, SUPERINTENDING.

2. Mr. Thomas W. Conway, as superintendent, with such assistants as he may designate, will be obeyed and respected by all persons in the discharge of their respective duties.

REGISTRY OF PLANTATIONS.

3. The system of registry of plantations, as prescribed in Mr. Mellen's regulations and the military orders in relation thereto, will continue and be in force as therein required.

HIRE AND COMPENSATION OF LABORERS.

4. Voluntary contracts heretofore made between planters and laborers, or which hereafter may be made, will be submitted to the superintendent of freedmen, and if found by him to be fair and honest to the laborers, will be by him confirmed and approved, and stand as the contract of the parties thereto for the present year. But all such contracts must secure support, maintenance, clothing, and medical attendance to the laborer.

5. The following schedule will be observed in all other cases as the rule required by the Government. In addition to just treatment, wholesome rations, comfortable clothing, quarters, fuel, and medical attendance, and the opportunity for instruction of children, the planter shall pay to the laborer as follows: Male hands, first class, $10 per month; second class, $8 per month; third class, $6 per month. Female hands, first class, $5 per month; second class, $6 per month; third class, $5 per month. Boys under fourteen, $3 per month; girls under fourteen, $2 per month. These classes will be determined by merit and on agreement between the planters and the laborers.

6. Engineers, foremen, and mechanics will be allowed to make their own contracts, but will always receive not less than $5 per month additional to first-class rates.

7. One-half of the money wages due will be paid quarterly, as follows: On the 1st day of May, August, and November, and final payment of the entire amount then due on or before the 31st day of January.

PENALTIES.

8. Wages for the time lost will be deducted in case of sickness, and both wages and rations where the sickness is feigned for purposes of idleness; and in cases of feigned sickness, or refusal to work according to contract, when able so to do, such offender will be reported by the provost-marshal to the superintendent and put upon forced labor on public works without pay. The laborers must understand that it is their own interest to do their work faithfully, and that the Government, while it will protect and sustains them against ill treatment, cannot support those who are capable of earning an honest living by industry.

9. Laborers will be allowed and encouraged to choose their own employers, but when they have once selected they must fulfill their contract for the year, and will not be permitted to leave their place of employment (except in cases where they are permitted so to do for just reasons, by the authority of the superintendent), and if they do so leave without cause and permission they will forfeit all wages earned to the time of abandonment and be otherwise punished, as the nature of the case may require.
10. Planters and their agents will be held to rigid accountability for their conduct toward the laborers, and any cruelty, inhumanity, or neglect of duty will be summarily punished.

TIME OF LABOR AND PERQUISITES OF LABORERS.

11. The time of labor shall be ten hours, between daylight and dark in summer, and nine hours in winter, of each day, except Saturday and Sunday. The afternoon of Saturday and the whole of Sunday shall be at the disposal of the laborer. On sugar estates, at the proper season, the hands will take their regular watches, the night work of which and the Saturday afternoons and Sundays, if positively necessary, shall be paid for as extra work. Laborers will be allowed land for private cultivation at the following rates: First and second class hands with families, one acre each; first and second class hands without families, one-half acre each; second and third class hands with families, one-half acre each; second and third class hands without families, one-quarter acre. On these allotments they will be allowed to raise such crops as they may choose for their own use and benefit, but will not be permitted to raise or keep animals, except domestic poultry.

POLL TAX.

12. For the purpose of reimbursing to the United States some portion of the expenses of this system, and of supporting the aged, infirm, and helpless, the following tax will be collected in lieu of all other claims under these regulations: From each planter for every hand employed by him between the ages of eighteen and fifty, $2 per annum; from each hand between the same ages, $1 per annum. This sum will be payable and be collected on the 1st day of June next, and will be paid over to the superintendent of freedmen for disbursement. Measures will be taken to collect the same poll tax from all colored persons not on plantations, so that the active labor of this race may contribute to the support of their own helpless and disabled.

GENERAL DUTIES.

13. Provost-marshal in the several parishes are charged with the general supervision and welfare of the laborers, reporting on these subjects frequently to Mr. T. W. Conway, superintendent, and will use all possible exertion by themselves and their deputies to see that industry and good order are promoted, and that the contracts under these orders are faithfully performed by both parties. Orders heretofore issued and published, so far as they are not changed or modified by this order, will remain in force.

14. This order shall be deemed and taken to have effect from the 1st day of February last, and all contracts entered into in relation to the labors of the present year will be held to be controlled, amended, and governed by the terms and conditions of this order.

LIEN AND SECURITY FOR LABOR.

15. All crops and property on any plantation where laborers are employed will be held to be covered by a lien against all other creditors to the extent of the wages due employes, and such lien will follow such crops or property in any and all hands until such labor is fully paid and satisfied.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut: GEORGE B. DRAKE,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
UNION.

HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, La., March 11, 1865.

Col. J. H. Sypher,
Commanding at Plaquemine, La.:

Brigadier-General Sherman directs me to inform you that your telegram of March 10 is unsatisfactory. The point your particular attention was called to in the telegram of the 6th instant was what the enemy were doing on the Atchafalaya, and particularly to look about the lower crossing or ferry. If it is not positively ascertained whether the enemy are on the Atchafalaya or not, you will ascertain it and report. The operations of the scouts need not be limited to the Atchafalaya; send them far beyond if practicable. Acknowledge receipt.

P. J. Maloney,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Plaquemine, March 11, 1865.

(Received 6.05 p.m.)

Assistant Adjutant-General, Southern Division of Louisiana:

Your telegram of to-day is received. My special scout who was on the lower Atchafalaya reports no enemy but Brown's company of scouts and couriers. He reports the back country overflowed and impassable. The company of Independent Scouts are worthless for the service designated in Brigadier-General Sherman's dispatch of the 6th instant. They have not confidence. I have employed one white man and two intelligent negroes that I believe are trustworthy. I am much embarrassed for the want of good maps. There is not one at this post of the back country. The scouts and a detachment of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry are now out. I will report as soon as heard from.

J. H. Sypher,
Colonel, Commanding Post.

New Orleans, March 11, 1865.

General Herron:

Please order General Bailey to report to General Canby at Fort Gaines as early as possible. General Davis can replace him.

By order of General Hurlbut:

GEO. B. Drake,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 38.

I. In obedience to instructions from headquarters Department of the Gulf, Brig. Gen. Joseph Bailey is hereby relieved from command of the District of Baton Rouge. He will turn over the official papers and records of the district to his successor and report without delay to Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby, at Fort Gaines, Ala. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

II. Brig. Gen. E. J. Davis will turn over the command of the Cavalry Brigade to the senior officer therein, and will at once assume command of the District of Baton Rouge, relieving Brigadier-General Bailey.

By command of Major-General Herron:

Wm. H. Clapp,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen, Assistant Adjutant-General:

Orders issued to-night to carry out the instructions in yours of the 8th instant. Brigadier-General West has charge of the movement and will expedite it. The command will be fully equipped for the field. There will be no failure in supplying the horses, as this move leaves this department deficient for post service.

J. J. REYNOLDS, Major-General.

Special Orders, No. 62.

11. Brig. Gen. J. R. West is charged with the equipment and movement of cavalry troops under special letter of instructions from these headquarters. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation upon his requisition.

12. The Tenth Regiment Illinois Cavalry Volunteers and Third Michigan Cavalry Volunteers will be reported without delay to Brig. Gen. J. R. West, fully equipped for field service, and will receive instructions from him.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Colonel Mizner, Brownsville:

Your brigade is ordered to New Orleans. Let me know immediately how many horses you are deficient. Send lists by each regiment of all officers and men on detached service within this department. Move promptly.

J. R. WEST, Brigadier-General.

Brig. Gen. F. Salomon:

I have been waiting for return of party sent out to repair telegraph line; but as they have not returned, and as I have several men out now, it will be impossible for me to co-operate with you.

POWELL CLAYTON, Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Third Division, Seventh Army Corps, Fort Smith, Ark., March 11, 1865.

Lient. Col. John Levering, Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

In obedience to instructions contained in your letter of February 14, authorizing the sale of subsistence stores and forage to loyal citizens engaged in farming, I issued General Orders, No. 11. Instead of 1,000, as represented to you, I find 5,000 persons here who desire to avail themselves of the privilege of purchasing from the Government, and nearly all are preparing to cultivate some land. There are 200 families, nearly 1,000 persons, connected with the Second Arkansas Infantry, while the First Infantry, First and Second Cavalry, and First Arkansas Battery are almost equally as strong. Besides, there are many Arkansans men in other regiments whose families are here. Nearly all these people, besides a large number of citizens, are destitute and suffering, and without assistance from the Government will starve. While the Arkansas regiments remain here these people cannot be sent away, and as the troops have not been paid for a great length of time they have nothing to buy with. To meet the wants of these people and insure supplies for our troops at least 2,000,000 rations are required here. The ground is full of water, and I think the river will remain navigable for some time yet, and I hope to receive all the supplies required. The people in the country in every direction are reported in a starving condition, and I am constantly being appealed to for aid in their behalf, which I have rendered as far as in my power. The presence of such a large number of suffering people with the troops of this command is very embarrassing and destroys the efficiency of the troops to a great extent. I will compel everybody to work who remains here, and hope enough can be raised to supply the country.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., March 11, 1865.

Col. W. A. PHILLIPS,
Comdg. Third Brigade, Third Division, Fort Gibson, C. N.:

I forwarded to you by last messenger a communication from General Reynolds requesting you to report at Little Rock in person as soon as possible, to confer with him in reference to the muster out of the Indian Brigade. I presume you will be down within a very few days. I am going to send a train to Little Rock within four or five days to turn over to the chief quartermaster of the department. The river is now falling, but I expect will soon be up again. Am expecting boats every day.

Respectfully, &c.,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
March 11, 1865—11.55 a. m.

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

General Dodge informs me that a regiment can be recruited from prisoners of war at Alton. By doing so we get rid of the whole question of “galvanized Yankees” and of conscripts made by Price and captured from him. It will be well to do this, and I recommend it.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.
Major-General Halleck, Washington, D. C.:
The resignation of several brigadier-generals and the unfitness of others has forced General Dodge to apply for two or three officers of that grade to serve in Missouri. Discreet and prudent men are needed. He asks for Brig. Gen. J. W. Sprague, Brig. Gen. J. A. Williamson, Brig. Gen. J. C. Vetch, Brig. Gen. J. W. Fuller. Two or three of these officers, or others equally good, are greatly needed. Please answer.

JNO. POPE, Major-General.

Saint Louis, Mo., March 11, 1865—11.40 a.m.

General Dodge:
Will you come up some time this morning to talk about your order about McNeil and Fisk and other matters?

JNO. POPE, Major-General.

Jefferson City, March 11, 1865—10.45 a.m.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:
I desire to issue a general order to-day relieving all the Enrolled Missouri Militia from active service, in order that all public property in the possession of that force may be properly turned over and accounted for prior to the date fixed by an act of the general assembly of Missouri, stating the commission of all officers on that force. I do not wish, however, to do this if it will tend to embarrass district commanders. I desire to consult your wishes in the matter before acting. Please answer.

THOS. C. FLETCHER, Governor of Missouri.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
March 11, 1865—11.40 a.m.

Governor Fletcher, Jefferson City:
I don't think it will embarrass us much. The troops being raised under Order No. 3 will probably replace them.

G. M. DODGE, Major-General.

Special Orders,
Hdqrs. Department of the Missouri,
No. 68.

11. The Forty-ninth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, Col. Samuel Fallows commanding, will proceed on Monday, the 13th instant, to Rolla, Mo., and report for duty to the commanding officer District of Rolla. Quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES, Assistant Adjutant-General.
Patterson, March 11, 1865.

Col. J. L. Beveridge:
Captain Leeper has returned. He was within twelve miles of Doniphan. It is said that 200 rebels are at Doniphan, but he does not think it so. He thinks that they are trying to collect their forces and the citizens so as to attack Patterson. They killed two noted guerrillas on Little Black River, viz, Dick Graham and Green Meadows. The captain has twelve men.

JAMES SMITH,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Patterson, Mo., March 11, 1865.

Colonel Beveridge,
Pilot Knob:
Sir: I have just received reliable information that Johnson was on the South Fork of Little Black collecting his men on 7th instant; object not known.

JAS. SMITH,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Patterson, Mo., March 11, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:
Dear General: I would most respectfully submit the following report and suggestions to you: There are 300 or 400 rebels in the Cherokee Bay. They have been very busy in collecting men and supplies for some time past, and some eight or ten came in three miles of this place and took off four horses three nights ago. The stock is all run down at this post, so they could not head a cow, so I have not tried to catch the rebels, but to ascertain where they were; and I think the rebels will get worse till there is a change in the manner or mode of scouting. So far as I can learn all our scouts go on the highway, so the rebels have nothing to fear if they will keep in the bush. If you will give me twenty-five men, well mounted, with the Spencer rifle, I will learn the rebels that I can travel through the woods, and after night at that; and I will guarantee to you that I will keep you posted if it is possible for any man to. You will also find a letter from Captain Leeper inclosed.*

I remain, your most obedient servant,

W. J. MORRIS.

Pleasant Hill, Mo., March 11, 1865.

Colonel Harding:
I sent out a scout of dismounted men this morning. They will operate in the vicinity and east and southeast of Lone Jack, and will be out several days. They went out with the forage train and will endeavor to conduct their movements so as to be as little observed as possible.

A. W. MULLINS,
Mayor.

Capt. J. F. Bennett,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis:

CAPTAIN: In acknowledgment and reply to your favor of the 8th instant, I have the honor to state, for the information of the general commanding, that I am making every effort to complete the organizations of volunteer militia authorized in this district. Some of the companies are doing very well, others only moderately so. I have in many instances procured from county courts a liberal bounty to these companies, and I discover a daily increasing disposition on the part of sympathizers to unite with the original Dr. Jacob Townsend loyalists in an effort to put down the bushwhacking thieves and outlaws. The enrollment of the Missouri Militia is going on vigorously.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Headquarters District of North Missouri,
Macon, Mo., March 11, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

MAJOR: I have the honor to state, for the information of the general commanding, that the troops of the district have been and are now actively pursuing the bushwhacking enemy. We have not been able to find and fall upon any band of the villains during the week ending this day. I am well persuaded, however, that in the Perche Hills and what is termed the "Blackfoot country," in Boone County, there are quite a number of Jim Jackson's and Bill Anderson's old gang of murderous outlaws. The geography of the country is to them well known, and the topography of that section, as well as the topography of the hearts of the people is most admirably adapted to bushwhacking purposes. I have ordered the Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia detachments on duty at this post to move to Sturgeon and organize a most thorough and vigorous campaign throughout Boone, Howard, Randolph, and Audrain Counties. Sturgeon, you will discover, is an admirable point to operate from. We shall doubtless stir up the snakes and drive them into Chariton and Carroll, where I am also preparing to meet and bang them out. The citizens of the district are generally fearful of a repetition of the troubles of last summer. It remains with them principally to prevent such a lamentable state of affairs. I am exerting all the influence I possess to unite the people in vigorous war against the outlaws. I think at no time have the sympathizing rascals been so determined to put down the guerrillas as now. They shall be encouraged in good works even at this eleventh hour. The people need assurance and confidence in each other. The truly honest, loyal, earnest men of the State must lay aside all petty differences and shoulder to shoulder unite in the extermination of all outlaws, and in securing protection, security, and peace for our waiting, suffering, struggling loyalists of the rural districts.

I have the honor to be, major, your respectful and obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.
Macon, March 11, 1865.

Major-General Dodge, Saint Louis:

I have but this day received my commission as major-general of Missouri Militia. Will not accept it till I confer with you. The Government have heretofore sanctioned the holding of the two commissions by general officers. General McClellan was brigadier-general of volunteers and major-general of Ohio militia; Cadwalader, the same in Pennsylvania; Halleck, Schofield, Curtis, and Rosecrans were all of them commissioned major-generals of militia by the governor of this State. It is my opinion the convention will pass an ordinance immediately emancipating the office of major-general of militia.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 11, 1865—2.05 p.m.

Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Macon:

You cannot hold a commission and do duty as major-general of militia and as brigadier-general of volunteers. Government will not sanction it. One or the other will have to be vacated.

S. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 11, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

General: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your telegram of this date, stating that I could not hold a commission as brigadier-general of volunteers and major-general of Missouri Militia at the same time; that the Government would not sanction it, and that I must vacate one or the other. I had not received my commission from Governor Fletcher until this date, but had assumed the duty as a major-general of militia so far as inaugurating the new enrollment. Do not consider myself in active service as a militia general, and will not accept the commission if its acceptance is to the prejudice of my commission as brigadier-general of volunteers. I had not supposed the Government would make objections to the holding of a militia commission by an officer of volunteers who might be, as I now am, on duty in his own State. Heretofore I know it has been allowed in many instances. Morgan, of New York, held both; Dix now does; McClellan did in Ohio; Cadwalader in Pennsylvania, and Generals Halleck, Schofield, Curtis, and Rosecrans were all commissioned major-generals of Missouri Militia. It is quite probable that the State convention will abolish the office of major-general of militia. In any event, I will assume no command of militia in active service until organized and turned over to you for service. Will there be any objection to my giving some attention to the enrollment and organization and to the proper selection of officers for the new militia regiments? I will be governed by your views in the case.

have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.
General Blunt, Commanding, Paola, Kans.:

I have information that a gang of thieves and guerrillas are congregated in the vicinity of Hatton, who propose to operate on both sides of the river for plundering, stealing, perhaps to murder and burn. Had you not better send some one up to see about it, as your district will be involved? General Davies will be advised with reference to it in this district.

H. H. Heath,
Major and Provost-Marshal-General, &c.

Fort Leavenworth, March 11, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

Dispatch received. Am using every exertion to supply Kearny, Julesburg, Cottonwood, &c. Cannot see how we can send trains from here to Laramie until grass starts. As soon as contractors start teams will have no difficulty.

J. A. Potter,
Colonel and Quartermaster.

Fort Leavenworth, March 11, 1865.

Colonel Potter, Fort Leavenworth:

I have telegraphed General Mitchell we would get forage enough in Julesburg and his teams would have to haul from Laramie there. What is done in upper country?

Major-General.

No. 13. }

Hdqrs. District of Colorado,
Denver, Colo. Ter., March 11, 1865.

I. The six companies of mounted militia called for in General Orders, No. 10, current series, from these headquarters, for the purpose of opening communication with the East, having been promptly furnished and now on duty under the orders of the colonel commanding, martial law is hereby suspended in this district, as in General Orders, No. 6, from this office, bearing date of January 20, 1865.

By order of Col. T. Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry:

First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., March 11, 1865.

Special Orders, }
No. 8. }

IX. In compliance with Special Orders, No. 477, series of 1864, from the headquarters of the Army, Brig. Gen. Marcellus M. Crocker, U. S. Volunteers, is relieved from further duty in the Department of New Mexico, and will proceed without delay and report in person to the general commanding the Army of the Cumberland for assignment to duty. The general commanding the Department of New Mexico takes this occasion to express his warmest thanks for the efficient and judicious manner in which General Crocker has conducted the affairs pertaining to the important post of Fort Sumner and to the reservation at the Bosque Redondo with its 9,000 captive Indians, a duty which required an exercise of great judgment, moderation, firmness, and forecast, and a duty which has been performed in such a manner as not only to give the utmost satisfaction to those connected professionally with the military affairs of that post and of the department, but to win the affectionate regard of the Indians themselves, who are there receiving their first impressions of civilization and their first lessons in the art, literally, of earning their bread by the sweat of their brow. General Crocker carries with him to the new field of duty to which he has been called the earnest wishes on the part of the comrades he leaves behind, not only that he will be soon restored to health, but have an opportunity to add renewed luster to his already brilliant reputation as a soldier.

By command of Brigadier-General Carleton:

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, March 12, 1865.

Col. S. B. HOLABIRD, Chief Quartermaster:

The reports from Morganza intimate an overflow. Boats must be sent there and kept until the danger is past. You had a telegram some days since from the quartermaster giving the capacity required. Your immediate attention is required to this.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, March 12, 1865.

Major-General Herron, Baton Rouge:

Your dispatch in regard to Morganza is received. The quartermaster has orders to furnish boats. If there is serious danger of a break, ammunition, stores, and men will be sent to Port Hudson. I dislike to abandon the fort except upon manifest necessity. The fort may stand, notwithstanding the overflow. Remove all sick and hospitals first, and as soon as you consider necessary.

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, March 12, 1865.

Major-General Herron, Baton Rouge:

There are no boats here available for Morganza. Colonel Holabird has directed the quartermaster there to stop the Diana. If the danger is imminent, McKean or yourself must seize boats.

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.
For the convenience of the service a portion of the troops of this command are temporarily organized into brigades as follows, viz: The Sixty-first, Sixty-fifth, and Sixty-seventh Regiments U. S. Colored Infantry will constitute the First Brigade, under command of Col. Frank A. Kendrick, Sixty-first U. S. Colored Infantry; the Fifty-fifth, Eighty-fourth, and Ninety-second Regiments U. S. Colored Infantry will constitute the Second Brigade, under command of Col. William H. Dickey, Eighty-fourth U. S. Colored Infantry. All regiments and detachments not included in the above will continue to report, as heretofore, direct to these headquarters.

By command of Brigadier-General McKean:

L. B. JENKS,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., March 12, 1865.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING:

I will start to-day on steamer Rose Hambleton. Have turned over the command of this post to Col. J. M. True, Sixty-second Illinois Infantry, and respectfully recommend that he be allowed to retain it during my absence.

FORT SMITH, ARK., March 12, 1865.

Maj. J. K. MOREY, Van Buren:

A force of rebels estimated at 1,000, with two pieces of artillery, are reported by Colonel Stephenson moving up the river from Petit Jean. They may attempt to cross the Arkansas at Ivey's Crossing. Colonel Stephenson has a force watching that point. The Carrie Jacobs passed Clarksville coming up yesterday. I fear she is aground at Moore's Rock. Keep on the alert and report any information you get.

C. BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Vicksburg, Miss., March 12, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt to-day of your letter of the 4th instant. It had been to Memphis and back. I have never received your letter of the 2d instant, referring to the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry. All the regiments called for were, when I left Memphis, absent on the expedition toward Grenada, ordered from your headquarters, and therefore a great delay will not occur from the time already lost. I inclose for your information copies of letters I have written to Major-General Washburn and Major-General Thomas to-day asking for the regiments you order.

Very respectfully,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.
Headquarters Department of Mississippi, Vicksburg, Miss., March 12, 1865.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn, Commanding District of West Tennessee, Memphis:

Herewith I inclose copy of a letter* to me, dated March 4, from the headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, by which you will see that the following cavalry regiments were ordered with all possible dispatch to New Orleans to report to Major-General Grierson, to wit: Fourth Illinois, Eleventh Illinois, First Iowa, Second Wisconsin, Eleventh New York, and Twelfth Illinois. This order has been to Memphis and back here again, and owing to that unavoidable delay I have to request that you will spare no effort to expedite the movement of those troops, in obedience to the orders of the major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi. You will also see that I was ordered to send a regiment to replace the Second New Jersey Cavalry, which has been also ordered to the Gulf. I beg that you will accordingly order the Third United States, with Colonel Osband, to report to me at this place.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully,

N. J. T. Dana, Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

Headquarters Department of Mississippi, Vicksburg, Miss., March 12, 1865.

Maj. Gen. George H. Thomas, Commanding Department of the Cumberland, Nashville:

I beg leave to inclose for your information copy of a letter* of instructions to me from the major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi, dated 4th instant, and of a letter† from myself to Major-General Washburn at Memphis, dated to-day. For fear there may be some delay owing to misunderstandings, I beg you will telegraph to General Washburn an order to send the seven cavalry regiments spoken of with the quickest dispatch according to my letter to him. General Canby's letter to me has been to Memphis since my leaving there and has returned here. This has caused a delay and as General Canby is already himself in the field I fear any further delay may prove serious to him. He has taken all the cavalry in this department except a detachment of 190 men, and has dismounted them and all the light batteries for the purpose of remounting his own regiments. I mention these things merely to show you the pressing need. All the regiments called for from Memphis belong to General Canby's present command, and were sent by him to Memphis for temporary service. There will still remain at Memphis a detachment of the Second Missouri and the Second Arkansas, the Seventh Indiana, First Mississippi Mounted Rifles, and Fifth Illinois.

Very respectfully,

N. J. T. Dana, Major-General.

Washington, D. C., March 12, 1865—3.30 p.m.

Maj. Gen. John Pope:

Referring to your telegram of the 11th, you are hereby authorized by the Secretary of War to recruit a regiment of volunteer infantry from the prisoners of war at Alton, to serve for three years or during the war. The recruitment, organization, and musters must conform to the requirements of the mustering regulations of the Army. The enlistments and musters will be made under the direction of the commissary of musters, Department of the Missouri, who should have a discreet officer to make the enlistments and musters. The recruits will not be credited to any locality, nor will they receive U. S. or local bounty. Officers will be appointed by the War Department, under regulations hereafter to be communicated. Arms and other supplies will be furnished by the proper supply departments upon your requisition.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

DENVER, March 12, 1865.

Major-General DODGE:

No word from General Connor. Can I not have command of expedition against Indians? Can easily be spared for a month.

Nesmith, and Representatives William Windom, A. W. Hubbard, William Higby, and Lewis W. Ross, it is therefore ordered that all commanders of departments, districts, posts, and detachments in the U. S. service furnish the members of the said committee the escorts, protection, assistance, and facilities for procuring information which they may require in the prosecution of their duties.

sary for the better administration of Indian affairs; and that there be,

Brig. Gen. J. R. West,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that in carrying out the special orders given you from these headquarters you will make estimates for transfer of horses from cavalry regiments in the department sufficient to fully equip the Third Michigan and Tenth Illinois Cavalry Regiments, now under orders for the field; that you will superintend the forwarding of these troops to New Orleans, La., with the least possible delay, providing transportation for them as directed in orders. You will instruct commanding officers of detachments to stop at Morganza, La., while en route, and telegraph their arrival to Brevet Major-General Grierson, care headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, reporting the numerical strength of their respective detachments, and await orders before proceeding farther.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13, 1865.

Major-General Pope,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

Colonel Leavenworth is of the opinion that nearly all the Indians of the plains will be friendly, if treated in a friendly manner by our troops. None but officers of good judgment and discretion should be allowed to command any expedition into the Indian country.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
March 13, 1865—11.05 a. m.

General DODGE:

I have just received authority to recruit regiment from Alton on certain conditions, which I will have to talk to you about. There are several things I would like to see you about this morning.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.
1. Col. John Morrill, Sixty-fourth Regiment Illinois Infantry Volunteers, is hereby assigned to the command of the District of Rolla, relieving Col. E. C. Catherwood, Thirteenth Regiment Missouri Cavalry Volunteers. Colonel Morrill will at once proceed to Rolla, Mo., and assume command of the district. Quartermaster's department will furnish transportation for the authorized number of horses.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 13, 1865.

Capt. H. N. Cook,
Company F, Ninth Cav. Missouri State Militia, Columbia, Mo.:

CAPTAIN: You have this day been ordered to Sturgeon to assume command of your regiment. I have sent all of the Ninth that was at this post to Sturgeon; not to do post duty at Sturgeon or anywhere else, but to be sent into the brush forthwith on a vigorous, continued, and protracted hunt after Jim Jackson and company. We must take the offensive and take it early against these outlaws. Until Major Leonard returns to the command, you will give direction to the movement. Parcel out your men in squads and put them at the work. When they strike a track tell them to follow it day and night until Christmas, if necessary, so that they succeed in the end. Your knowledge of the geography of the country and the topography of the hearts and consciences of the people in the Perche Hills and the Blackfoot country ought to enable you to make a very successful campaign against the villains. You can at the same time push on the organization of the Boone County Rangers, of which I would like you to be made commander. Let your operations extend to Grand River. Stop not short of Jim Jackson’s grave, if possibly you can reach it. Keep me posted of all your movements and mortality list.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. FIRST MILITARY DIVISION, MISSOURI MILITIA,
Macon, Mo., March 13, 1865.

Col. Samuel P. Simpson,
Adjutant-General of Missouri, Jefferson City, Mo.:

COLONEL: I have the honor again to call the attention of the commander-in-chief to certain changes in the district boundaries of this division. I notice by General Orders, No. 10, current series, headquarters State of Missouri, as published in the Missouri Republican on the 11th instant, that this division has been redistricted, giving me four districts. The districts are most admirably arranged, with two exceptions; Chariton should be taken from the Second and Randolph from the Third, and both included in the Fourth, under General Draper. Chariton, Howard, and Randolph Counties constitute the most difficult section to manage there is within the limits of this division, and I am very desirous that the three counties should be under the control of one man. My plan is to organize one militia regiment within the three said counties, and appoint Colonel Denny as its colonel. To restore tranquillity to the section of territory named is the most difficult task I have on my hands, and it cannot be done with the local force therein. I have nearly every man subject to military duty in said counties in one army or the other, mostly in the other. The resident population is of the most disloyal character of any and all my rebel constituents. I must expect trouble in that region and prepare for it. I trust His Excellency the Governor will make the boundary changes herein graph of such change that I may proceed to organize accordingly.

With great respect, your obedient servant,
CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

City Point, Va., March 14, 1865—3 p.m.

Hon. Edwin M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:

I am very much dissatisfied beyond excuse. I wrote to General Canby in command of a corps. I wrote to him, going into the field in person, and does not say a word about leaving there. I would like to have Steele, as I recommended long since in a dispatch addressed to General Halleck, put in command as Sheridan can be spared. I hope for the latter put in command does far better in the next few weeks than I now have any reason to.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.
Lieutenant-General Grant:

If Canby has been distinctly notified of your wishes in respect to the command of the Thirteenth Corps and disregarded them your dissatisfaction would be well founded, but I think it will turn out differently. In that impression I forwarded him myself your last telegram to General Halleck last week. In respect to superseding him in command your views will be fully acquiesced in whenever you choose to make a change. I will start for City Point to see you on this and other matters to-morrow.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 14, 1865—12.30 p. m.

Lieutenant-General Grant,
City Point, Va.:

Your dispatch of March 1 was duly submitted to the Secretary of War, but I am not aware that any action was taken, General Canby having been previously instructed to nominate his corps commanders, as has usually been done to other generals.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 14th day of March, 1865: Captain Nash reports from Little Rock, Ark., March 2, that the enemy in the Trans-Mississippi Department seem to be collecting about Shreveport, the principal force in Arkansas being two brigades of Parsons' division (infantry) at Camden and one brigade of infantry at Washington. Refugees from East Louisiana report many troops going home on furlough. They are mostly Texas troops and cross the river near Rodney. This confirms the previous reports from Natchez in regard to Texas troops trying to cross the river to get home.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Maj. Gen. W. F. SMITH,
New Orleans, La.:

General: I have the honor to inform you that the President has appointed James T. Brady, esq., of New York, a special commissioner in place of Hon. Henry Stanbery, to be associated with you for the purposes and with the powers set forth in the Executive order dated December 10, 1864, and instructions dated December 12, 1864, heretofore furnished you.

By order of the Secretary of War:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Adjutant-General’s Office,
Washington, March 14, 1865.

Maj. Gen. W. F. Smith,
James T. Brady, Esq.,
Washington, D. C.:

Gentlemen: By direction of the President you are appointed special commissioners to inspect and report upon the condition of affairs in the Military Division of West Mississippi. This inspection and investigation will embrace the condition, discipline, and supplies of the troops of that division, the operations of the quartermaster’s and other staff departments, and all matters connected with contraband trade. For this purpose you are authorized by the President to take the deposition of any citizen and of any person in the military, naval, or civil service of the United States. You are also authorized to call upon any military or other officer for such reports or statements as you may deem necessary for your information. You will be accompanied and assisted by an officer of the Adjutant-General’s Department, who will also act as judge-advocate. He will, upon your direction, summon the witnesses, administer the oaths, record the testimony, and perform such other appropriate duties as you may require. While employed upon these duties you, and the officers accompanying you, will be allowed commutation for fuel and quarters, to be determined by the Quartermaster-General. Office room and stationery will be furnished by the Quartermaster’s Department on proper requisitions. You will from time to time report direct to the Secretary of War, through the Adjutant-General of the Army, the results of your investigation, recommending for removal, dismissal, or trial such officers as you may find unworthy of their present position or employment. You will give in each case the reasons for such recommendation and copies of the testimony upon which it is based.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Brazos Santiago, Tex., March 14, 1865.

General U. S. Grant:

General: In a confidential way I will say that both Slaughter and Ford, with whom I had the interview which forms the subject of my general dispatch* of this date, entered heartily into the Mexican project. It is understood between us that the pacification of Texas is the preliminary step to a crossing of the Rio Grande. In the propositions made to them, a copy of which has been forwarded you, not a word is said about the arms now in the hands of the Confederates. We expect to get their use. Neither can they see any reason why that portion of the cotton now in Texas, and belonging to the Confederate Government, should not be diverted to the same purpose. Of this latter, however, I was not sanguine. Mr. Lincoln's cotton agents will say something on that point. In course of the conversation I drew from Ford that he feared Kirby Smith would be in the way of a settlement, because there was a growing suspicion that he (Smith) was carrying on negotiations with Maximilian. The suspicion was founded upon some newspaper articles of late appearance favoring Imperial annexation, which it was well understood had been written by certain gentlemen on Smith's staff. In answer to a question Ford assured me that if such a sale was attempted he would instantly bring about a counter revolution. General Slaughter was of opinion that the best way for officers in his situation to get honorably back into the Union was to cross the river, conquer two or three States from the French, and ultimately annex them, with all their inhabitants, to the United States. In short, I think they anticipate such a step as an immediate consequence of peace. Of all these things, however, I will keep you posted.

*See sub-inclosure No. 1, Dix to Grant, March 28, p. 1276.

Very truly, yours,

LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General of Volunteers.

II. Brigadier-General Davis, commanding District of Baton Rouge, is hereby directed to send the company of the Fourteenth New York Cavalry doing duty in his district to Morganza, La., without delay, with orders to rejoin the regiment to which it belongs. HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., March 14, 1865.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

General Canby's circular of February 22 is received and will be complied with. I am very much embarrassed with the very large number of destitute people who are colonizing near the posts of this command. I fear most of these people will be driven from their colonies by rebel bands, who are already making their appearance in considerable numbers. I have reliable information from scouts and deserters that the rebels are concentrating at Doaksville and Boggy Depot under Maxey, Cooper, and Gano, and are coming onto the Arkansas River as soon as grass will subsist their horses. A deserter from Shreveport yesterday reports that the rebels at that point had information that we were receiving immense supplies at this place and that the troops here numbered only 1,500, and that it was reported that as soon as horses were received from Texas a force would be sent to co-operate with Cooper against this place. I believe I can hold Fort Smith against any force which will be brought against me if I can have all my force here, but I am convinced that there will be the same force to contend against this summer that annoyed this command so much last season when there were 8,000 to 10,000 troops here. The guerrillas have already made their appearance, robbing people within one mile of my lines. On the north side of the river they are quite numerous; near Fayetteville two or three parties, each numbering 50 to 100. Major Worthington, First Arkansas Cavalry, was killed in an engagement yesterday eighteen miles from Fayetteville. From deserters who came in to-day I learn that the rebel army on Red River understand that all available forces on this side of the Mississippi have been removed for duty elsewhere and that they will have an easy time capturing the important points on this side of the river. The force I now have here is not more than was last summer detailed to guard the trains sent out in any direction. In my opinion, if the troops are in the department to spare, an additional force of infantry and cavalry should be sent here. They will be required here to enable me to drive in cattle, guard trains, and afford some protection to the thousands of people who are colonizing near my posts. Without this additional force I am fully convinced that none of these colonies will accomplish anything, but that their crops when matured will be eaten up and destroyed by rebel bands who will infest the country. With my present force I believe it would be better if nothing was planted outside the picket-line at this post. The citizens now occupy every cabin and field within five to ten miles of this place and Van Buren, all of whom expect protection from the Government. The organization of companies for their own protection will amount to nothing. They will be so much scattered that they cannot protect themselves. The people who visit your headquarters, in their eagerness to obtain some order that will better their condition, fail to give you a correct idea of the condition of the country and the number of women and children who are dependent on the Government. I inclose herewith a statement* showing the sales in ten days to one colony alone. There are three other colonies, besides a large number of persons engaged in other employments, who either want to buy or draw from the commissary. It will be three to four months before these people can raise anything on which to live, and there is absolutely nothing in the country. With the supply of subsistence stores and forage now here it will be impossible to supply the people. I have given my personal attention to this subject ever since I have been in command. No sales are made without my approval and no issues to refugees except to those who are starving. I am not calling for more troops because I fear attacks here, for I shall hold Fort Smith under any circumstances.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., March 14, 1865.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

Captain Harper reported to me to-day from Little Rock with about 100 refugees which he wishes to colonize about fourteen miles below

* Not found.
Van Buren. All of these people are destitute and will have to be subsisted by the Government for three or four months. I now have 5,000 people here on the verge of starvation, whom I am sending away as fast as possible, because it will be impossible for me to feed them. If I keep the wives and children of the soldiers of Arkansas regiments and sell to those colonies immediately in the vicinity of these posts it will be more than our supplies will warrant. The rebels will not permit a colony to raise anything ten miles from Van Buren. A crop planted by them will be so much contributed to the enemy. Frog Bayou and the Arkansas River will afford them no protection when the water is low. If refugees are shipped back here from Little Rock to be fed by the Government there is no reason why 3,000 or 4,000 who are now here, all of whom have claims on the Government, should not receive the same indulgence. In view of all the facts I have determined to send Captain Harper and his colony back to Little Rock, where they will continue to increase, notwithstanding I have been sending them on every boat, and am now preparing to send 200, by way of Fayetteville, to Springfield. I also have a large number to send down on these boats. I hope my action in this case will meet your approval.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
Cyrus Bussey,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi:

General: Your letter of the 12th, inclosing letter of General Canby of the 4th instant, is received. I have transmitted the substance of it by telegraph to Maj. Gen. George H. Thomas, commanding Department of the Cumberland, for his orders. Your request for the Third Cavalry (colored) I have also transmitted to General Thomas for his instructions.

I am, general, your obedient servant,

Major-General.

[Indorsement.]

Headquarters Department of Mississippi,
Vicksburg, March 18, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen, assistant adjutant-general, Military Division of West Mississippi, for the information of the major-general commanding. This action will cause delay in the movement of the cavalry.

N. J. T. Dana,
Major-General.
Maj. Gen. GEORGE H. THOMAS,

Comdg. Department of the Cumberland, Nashville, Tenn.:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE,
Memphis, Tenn., March 14, 1865.

General: Major-General Canby has ordered, under date March 4, through General Dana, nearly all of the effective force of cavalry now here to report to General Grierson, at New Orleans. Every regiment at all efficient is enumerated by name. As I understand, General Canby is authorized to give orders for the movement of troops here to protect the navigation of the Mississippi River. The Mississippi River can protect itself, as it has overflowed its banks from Memphis to New Orleans and is still rising. No boat has been intercepted for months, nor can the enemy approach near the river. This cavalry cannot be used on the banks of the Mississippi nor amid the swamps of the Gulf Department until the waters subside. General Grierson would, no doubt, be glad to have a respectable command, but I believe that a better use of the cavalry can be made from this point, and that the contingency upon which it is to be called for has not arisen, and I shall not send it until I am ordered by you to do so. Shall I send it? The above I sent you yesterday to be telegraphed from Cairo, to which I beg to add: If General Canby may call on me for this cavalry he may, with equal right, call on me for all the troops here, for I know that no troops are now needed for the purpose indicated in General Orders, No. 21, War Department, in movement of troops for the protection of the navigation of the Mississippi River. Most of the effective cavalry now here has just returned from a demonstration down the line of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, which demonstration was commenced by order of General Dana the day following my arrival here, and I inclose you the report of the officer in charge of the expedition. For the purpose of quieting the country and encouraging the people, I wish to put the railroad in operation to La Grange, and perhaps to Jackson, in West Tennessee, but I cannot accomplish this if these troops are taken away. Forrest, with his command, is now recuperating down the line of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, with headquarters at West Point, and he has in all from 6,000 to 8,000 men, under Generals Jackson, McCulloch, and Chalmers. When the roads get better and the waters subside I should like to add the cavalry which I have here to your cavalry under General Wilson and see them sweep down upon and make a final clean out of Forrest and his forces. I will further add that General Dana has requested me by letter to send a regiment, of colored cavalry now here to Vicksburg, and as the regiment is one which came from Vicksburg here with General Dana, and is greatly demoralized, I do not object to its returning there, if you approve.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. C. WASHBURN,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 14, 1865.

Colonel BEVERIDGE,

Pilot Knob, Mo.:

See if you can't devise some plan to catch Hilderbrand and his confederates on Big River. The force you stationed at Farmington better be placed at Tyler's Mills. Hilderbrand's family lives there. There is forage there, and if taken receipts will be given by the officer, to be taken up and settled by the quartermaster at Pilot Knob on proof of loyalty of the one in whose favor it is given. By sending men in citizens' clothes to watch for him he could be caught.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,

HDQRS. THIRD SUB-DISTRICT OF SAINT LOUIS,
Pilot Knob, Mo., March 14, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

The detachment for Sainte Genevieve left on the 12th instant. I have had several parties after the guerrillas (Hilderbrand and his gang) about Farmington. As yet no success. Have sent for 150 horses, as per orders.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,
Colonel, Commanding.

SUB-DISTRICT HEADQUARTERS,
Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 14, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis, Mo.:

I started from this post for Bloomfield on the 28th of February for the purpose of making arrangements to commence building the fortifications there. Upon my arrival there on the 1st of March I sent Captain Campbell with fifty men into Dunklin County, with orders to conscript every able-bodied citizen of that county and bring them to Bloomfield to work upon the fort, in accordance with the instructions that I had received through your headquarters. Captain Campbell found the county full of guerrillas, and I had to re-enforce him. During his march through the county he killed nine guerrillas, including Captain Howard, the leader of them. He also captured eight horses. On the 11th Captain Campbell returned from Dunklin County and brought up with him over 100 able-bodied citizens. After consultation with Col. D. F. Tiedemann, in charge of fortifications there, I informed the citizens that they would each be required to do thirty days' labor on the fort, and could do part of the work now and a part after they had their crops planted. I took this course for the purpose of interfering as little as possible with the farming interests of the country. They were all well satisfied with the arrangement, and went to work earnestly. They express themselves anxious to have a fort built at Bloomfield and willing to assist in building it. A number of the most extensive farmers of the county were anxious to make arrangements to pay out or hire substitutes. There were a number of men about Bloomfield lately discharged from the service, whom it would have been injustice to press into service, who were willing to work on the fort for wages. Believing it to be beneficial to all parties, I gave those that desired it permission to deposit $50 each with Capt. William W. Campbell, Company D, Fiftieth Missouri Volunteer Infantry, for the purpose of hiring substitutes. Upon receiving Captain Campbell's receipt I gave the parties who had thus paid him $50 an exemption from duty on the
I ordered Captain Campbell to pay the money over to Lieutenant Wilson, post quartermaster at Bloomfield, take his receipt in duplicates for the same, and forward one of the receipts to these headquarters. I authorized Lieutenant Wilson to hire men with the money thus paid him, to keep a roll of all such, and make report to these headquarters of all moneys paid to these men. I herewith inclose a list of the names of all parties who were exempted by me on Captain Campbell's receipts, with the amount they paid Captain Campbell set opposite their names. The receipts I turned over to Lieutenant Wilson as a check against any fraud upon the part of Captain Campbell. After getting the work at Bloomfield under full headway, I left there and arrived here on the 13th instant. I trust that my action at Bloomfield will meet with the approval of the general commanding.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

H. M. HILLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Sub-District.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, March 14, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Department of the Missouri:

GENERAL: There are at this post about 150 destitute refugee families, nearly all women and children. They can only be subsisted here by the Government. If they could be sent to the northern districts, where farms are being worked and such labor of value, I think the greater number of these could obtain homes and support. To discontinue the issue of subsistence, if retained here, would entail much suffering. I have tried to get the county court to establish a county farm for the care of a per centum that would be counted their own poor, but they claim to be bankrupt. I would suggest the sending of these people under charge of the chaplain of the post to different points in North Missouri, that homes and employment may be found for them. The crippled and blind can be provided for in Saint Louis. A large number of them are the families of soldiers now in our army, or who have died in the service. The removal of them from a military post will be a charity to them and a great saving to the Government.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. C. CATHERWOOD,
Colonel Thirteenth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
No. 51.

1. Col. Samuel Fallows, commanding Forty-ninth Infantry Wisconsin Volunteers, will detail Company K of his command to proceed at once, with camp and garrison equipage, to Fort Wyman and relieve the detachment of Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry now stationed at that point. The officer in command will be instructed to report to the commanding officer post of Rolla. On being relieved by detachment of Forty-ninth Wisconsin Volunteers Capt. J. H. Shelly, commanding at Fort Wyman, will report with his command for orders to his regimental commander.
2. Col. Samuel Fallows, commanding Forty-ninth Infantry Wisconsin Volunteers, will detail Company B of his command to proceed without delay, with camp and garrison equipage, to Saint James and relieve the detachment of Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry now stationed at that point. On arriving at Saint James the officer in command will be instructed to detail a sergeant and fifteen men to proceed to the Saint James Iron Works and relieve the detachment now on duty at that place. On being relieved by detachment Forty-ninth Wisconsin Volunteers the commanding officer of detachment Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry now on duty at Saint James will report with his command to his regimental commander at Rolla. Colonel Fallows will report with the remainder of his command for duty to the commanding officer of the post, Rolla, Mo.

General Dodge directs that the following answer be forwarded to Major-General Blunt:

Major-General BLUNT,

All contraband cattle from the Indian country seized by your command may be sent to this post. Officers seizing cattle should exercise proper discretion, and before sending the cattle here ascertain that they are clearly contraband under General Dodge's order. HEADQUARTERS,
Department of the Gulf,
New Orleans, March 15, 1865.

His Excellency President Lincoln:

Sir: Congress having adjourned without any action on the State of Louisiana, I respectfully ask instructions from Your Excellency as to the relations to be maintained between the military and civil authorities within this State. My own opinion of the legal status of the State officers has been expressed in some remarks made by me to the legislature on 4th March, 1865. I consider that the convention and the legislature, and officers created by it, are the creatures of the executive authority exercised through the then commanding general; that this principle extends and covers every subordinate agency of the State; that the money received by them from the military governor is in law still the property of the United States; that until recognized and affirmed by all branches of the United States Government they are of necessity subordinated to the military authority. These principles, I think, are the law of the case. The question of policy in the application of them is one of more serious and doubtful nature. I am fully satisfied that the present legislature is entirely useless, very expensive, and liable to do serious harm by its legislation. So far in a long session (since October last) they have neither prepared nor passed any laws of general public interest nor inaugurated any measures for the public good. It would be an infinite relief to all parties if they would adjourn. All the money in hand having long since been paid out, they are simply increasing public debts, and are offering their own pay warrants on the streets at 20 cents on the dollar. Many grossly unnecessary offices at large salaries are kept up. It is important to my mind that the free constitution shall be considered adopted and of force; that for purposes of the form of State government the executive and judicial State officers should remain, but the legislature is wholly and absolutely useless now. It appears very clear that the present anomalous state of things should not continue. Either the State should be sustained in full force, vigor, and independent life, free from interference and control on the part of the military officers, and without any responsibility on the part of the United States for their action, or the supremacy of the executive through the military commanders should be plainly and distinctly understood. The first course involves the surrender to the State authorities of the city of New Orleans, now held as from the first by military officials, and as a matter of course the election of charter officers under the forms of law. I regret to state that I do not consider the thing safe to be done at present. I do not think that the electors of New Orleans are to be trusted with this franchise; in addition, the enormous increase of expense to the tax-payers deserves consideration. So in the parishes, there are very few locations where peace and good order can be preserved and the rights of the emancipated laborer protected, except by military intervention. I am reluctantly forced to believe that with two-thirds of the territory of the State under rebel jurisdiction, with the Trans-Mississippi army quartered at Shreveport and Alexandria, with unnumbered rebel sympathizers within our lines, with constant communication through our lines under cotton permits and otherwise, with our forces within the State depleted to the last degree by the Mobile expedition, it is unsafe for the Government to permit the exercise of the functions of sovereignty by the people of Louisiana under their State government. The new governor, J. Madison Wells, seems disposed to consult with the military authorities on all matters of moment, and is endeavoring to root out the corruptions engendered by these times. In every respect in which he has called for assistance from me it has been granted readily and willingly, and always will be. I have once before adverted to the peculiar situation of the tax-paying population here. The real and personal estate of known rebels has been seized by the Government, and the burden of taxation therefore falls on the loyal or at least the quiet. Three years' State taxes are now called for, to be collected at once. The United States direct tax is being collected. Local assessment for various causes, for levees, &c, and other purposes, swell the list, and I am unable to see how this impoverished and broken people are to meet these demands. Hence the necessity of the most rigid economy, the abolition of useless offices, and the simplification of the machinery of government. This thing has not been done, but the contrary rather by this experimental body. If the officers of the army have no responsibility for these things, we shall be greatly relieved. If we have responsibility for this state of things we should have the power to correct these abuses when manifest. I am assured that the whole necessary machinery to keep up and assure safety and the exercise of liberty to the people can be maintained for one-third its present cost, and to better satisfaction of all loyal and decent men. If the present state of things continues the cause of the Government will constantly suffer loss in the estimation of citizens. I pray you, sir, to excuse the directness of this application, and beg of you as the Executive of the nation to indicate to me what course you desire pursued on this very grave and important question.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. ARMY AND DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Fort Gaines, Ala., March 15, 1865.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. H. GRIERSON,
Comdg. Cav. Forces, Mil. Div. of West Miss., New Orleans, La.:

SIR: The major-general commanding directs that you send back to Vicksburg without delay such regiments of General Knipe's division as are not effective for the service required of them in the operations from Mobile Bay. I am further instructed to say that it is intended that the force drawn from General Knipe's division, together with such regiments as you may select from those ordered from Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana, shall not exceed 5,000 effective, so as to make the entire cavalry force for operations in this neighborhood about 8,000. This includes Lucas' brigade (2,300) and two regiments, for a long time serving at Barrancas (700). The regiments that are left after you have made your selections will at once be sent back to Memphis and Vicksburg, as they may be needed at those points. It is left for you to decide, according to your best judgment, how the number to be sent to each of these points shall be apportioned. The surplus cavalry can be used to better advantage at the posts on the east bank of the Mississippi than in the Department of Arkansas, and as the two regiments ordered from that department are said to be strong and well disciplined, it may be best to retain them in any case.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY FORCES,
No. 3. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., March 15, 1865.

By order of Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. H. Grierson:
S. L. WOODWARD,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

I. It having been reported by Major-General Halleck, chief of staff, that the rebel navy is about to operate on the Western rivers to destroy our river transports, and the attention of these headquarters having been called to this subject, it is hereby ordered that no transport, whether public or private, will hereafter stop at any point on the Mississippi River within the limits of this division, except at military stations, without the authority of the major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi or that of the major-general commanding the Department of the Gulf. The master of any public transport who violates this order will be held to a rigid accountability, and the owners of any private transport will not only be debarred of any right to recover damages for the loss or destruction of their property incurred thereby, but the owners, agents, or masters responsible for said violation will also be held as violating the Fifty-sixth Article of War and subject to trial by court-martial.

II. Unarmed transports will not be allowed to incur unnecessary risks of capture or destruction in passing rebel batteries. When there is plausible evidence of danger ahead, transports will fall back to the nearest gun-boat or military post for assistance before proceeding farther on their course, and commanding officers of gun-boats are requested, and commanding officers of military posts on the Mississippi River within this division are ordered, when called upon, to furnish transports with the necessary guards and assistance to insure their safe conduct.

III. The greatest vigilance is enjoined upon all masters of transports, quartermasters, and commanding officers, to prevent the loss of transportation on the Mississippi River or its tributaries, or its acquisition by the enemy.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:

P. J. Maloney,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri, March 15, 1865—8.30 p.m.

Brig. Gen. J. McNeil,
Warrensburg:
I go to Leavenworth to-morrow and would be glad to see you there or on my return here, as you deem best.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Fayetteville, Ark., March 15, 1865.

His Excellency Isaac Murphy,
Governor of Arkansas:
Sir: Your letter of the 23d ultimo was duly received and the papers and notices sent to members of the legislature as requested. Very little can be done by me just at present in the counties of Carroll, Marion, Newton, and Searcy for want of troops. My territory (seven counties) is too large for the eleven companies stationed in it, though at present it is impossible for General Bussey to send more. I inclose... copy of preamble and resolutions of convention held on the 9th instant in Madison. The same resolutions were unanimously adopted at a convention of citizens of Benton County held on the 13th instant, and the same in substance were unanimously adopted in Washington County on the 4th instant. All these meetings were largely attended; that at Fayetteville by about 1,000 persons, over half citizens; those in Madison by about 500, nearly all citizens, and in Benton by about 200. I have never known anything more enthusiastically taken hold of by our people than is our colony system. The following is the present state of progress:

WASHINGTON COUNTY.

Union Valley Colony, Capt. J. R. Rutherford, 112 men; well fortified on a large prairie, and fully organized and armed; will farm extensively; think they can whip 1,000 rebels inside the fort.

Mountain Colony, Capt. _______; not completely organized; sixty-five men; have a good block-house; expect to raise a large crop.

Prairie Colony, Capt. George A. Cline, eighty-five men; will be armed in a few days.

West Fork Colony, Capt. B. Lewis, ninety-five men; armed and fortified; have done some good service against guerrillas; expect a good crop.

Main Fork Colony, only partially enrolled.

Middle Fork Colony, only partially enrolled.

Oxford Bend Colony, only partially enrolled.

Mount Comfort Colony, Captain Shreve, thirty-five men; not yet armed; good location; good land.

Elm Spring Colony, Captain Sanders, thirty-nine men, not yet armed.

Walnut Grove Colony, only partially organized.

BENTON COUNTY.

Bentonville Colony, 100 men, Captain Alfrey (will have 200 men before the month closes); have abundance of the best land.

Pea Ridge Colony, about forty men, only partially organized.

MADISON COUNTY.

Huntsville Colony, Captain Bivins, eighty-five men (I believe); a good company, over a year old. About forty of them are kept in the field as rangers and have done excellent service.

War Eagle Colony, Capt. Eltithe Haynes, ninety-nine men; will farm on War Eagle, near Hawkins' Mill, and at Huntsville.

Richland Colony, Capt. Bethel Counts, 109 men; well fortified at Thomas M. Johnson's plantation and are workers in every sense.

Brush Creek Colony, Captain Wilkinson, fifty men; are fortifying at Vaughn's Meeting-House and bid fair to be prosperous.

If I had half a regiment more troops I would soon have from twenty to forty more colonies in the other four counties. As the boat is waiting to leave I must be excused for not giving more full explanations, but will be pleased to do so at some future time.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Colonel First Arkansas Cavalry, Commanding.

FORT SMITH, ARK., March 15, 1865.

Col. M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Fayetteville, Ark.:

I fear your colonies at Bentonville and elsewhere outside of Fayetteville cannot be maintained. Rebel organizations will be formed strong enough to destroy them. I have information which leads me to believe we will have considerable force of the enemy in this part of the country during the summer. If there is any doubt about the colonies being able to maintain themselves they had better be broken up before crops are planted.

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fayetteville, March 15, 1865.

Col. W. A. PHILLIPS,
Commanding Troops:

COLONEL: I have organized fourteen armed and fortified agricultural settlements in Northwest Arkansas, and expect to organize many more. There is one near Rhea's Mills, at Wilson's, numbering 112 armed men, who say no force with small-arms can take them out of their forts. The prospects are that this country will be in a prosperous condition this summer and a large crop will be raised. Complaints are made to me that the Indians cross the line and drive off cattle and other stock. Mr. West, of Cincinnati, who belongs to the colony at Wilson's, is here this morning. He says they took from his place four head on the 2d instant. I would respectfully request that you give such orders as will prevent these raids, as all the stock this side of the line will be absolutely required to sustain the Union people who belong to the colonies.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Colonel First Arkansas Cavalry, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps,
Little Rock, Ark., March 15, 1865.

Col. J. K. MIZNER,
Commanding First Brigade, Cavalry Division:

COLONEL: You will move the Third Michigan and Tenth Illinois Cavalry to the mouth of White River with as little delay as possible. No other transportation nor ambulances will be taken beyond Devall's Bluff other than allowed by General Orders, Nos. 22 and 24, current series, from headquarters military division. I am informed that subsistence and forage can be procured at mouth of White River. The Third Michigan Cavalry will be provided with horses at the cavalry depot, but there will be a deficiency, and this it is contemplated to supply from Helena. Send, under a good field officer, the detachment remaining without horses to Helena, with orders to follow you down the Mississippi River as soon as mounted. The quartermaster's department is instructed to furnish transportation. From mouth of White River you will proceed with as little delay as possible to Morganza, La. You must reach that point in person with the first detachment. On arriving at Morganza communicate by telegraph with Major-General Grierson, commanding cavalry forces. Tell him of your position and give him a general idea of when the remainder of the two regiments are likely to reach Morganza. If a response from General Grier-sen cannot be received by you within twenty-four hours you will release your steamer transports. A copy of these instructions is herewith furnished to Col. James Stuart, commanding Tenth Illinois Cavalry.
You will direct him to move at once and follow you, and to manage the movement of his regiment upon the same plan. It is my expectation to overtake you at the mouth of White River, or at least at Morganza, but should I fail to do either, your instructions are complete.
I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

Major-General Dana:

GENERAL: Upper Louisiana above Red River has lately been added to this department. I have hoped to find time to go up and ascertain its situation, but the movements of troops and other causes detain me.
I send you ten copies of my Order, No. 23, on the subject of plantations and laborers. Let me request you to give them circulation and to appoint, temporarily, the proper persons in the parishes opposite you.

Major-General.

HDQRS. ARMY AND DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Fort Gaines, Ala., March 15, 1865.

Col. E. T. Sprague,
Forty-second Wisconsin Volunteers, Commanding, Cairo, Ill.:

SIR: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 1st instant, relating to white refugees, and to state that it has been forwarded with its inclos-ures to the War Department with the following indorsement:

The retention of refugees at the South will be a serious embarrassment to the military service as well as a heavy burden upon the Army appropriations. The cost of transportation to points where they can obtain employment or be otherwise provided for will be less than the value of the rations that must of necessity be issued to them if they are retained.

Until the pleasure of the Department on this question is known you are requested to continue the course heretofore adopted in regard to these refugees.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 15, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant,
General-in-Chief, City Point, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to invite your attention to my letter of the 6th instant to General Halleck, in relation to an expected raid into Missouri or Kansas by the rebel forces in Southern and Southwestern Arkansas and the Indian country west of Arkansas. All indications point to such a raid, and the son of Sterling Price, who, you will remember, took the amnesty oath and returned to Missouri eighteen months or so ago, called upon General Dodge privately and told him that he considered it a duty to give him information of great importance to the State. Young Price stated that he knew by letters received from his father's headquarters that a raid in force would be attempted early in the spring. He was very anxious to impress this belief upon General Dodge, stating that of course he would be suspected and probably maltreated if such a raid were made, and that he desired to place himself right with the authorities in advance. I do not know what force General Reynolds has in Arkansas, its character, nor how it is disposed; neither do I know what to expect from him in the way of resistance to a movement of the enemy north. It is needless to tell you that Arkansas properly belongs to the defense of Missouri and Kansas. If these States remain under different commands it would seem difficult, if not impossible, to insure co-operation against any such anticipated movement of the enemy. The inaction of Steele during Price's last invasion makes me feel very uncertain what I am to expect from that quarter. I am left in the position of either depending upon Reynolds, whose force I do not know and who is not under my command, or of making all the preparations necessary if he were not in Arkansas at all. Of course, in the latter case I should need many more troops, as is explained in my letter of the 6th instant to General Halleck referred to. I beg that you will consider the letter in question and give me your decision on the matter as early as you can. By the middle of April it is believed that Price will begin his movement if he moves north at all.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 15, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant,
General-in-Chief, City Point:

GENERAL: I have the honor to recommend Lieut. Col. Fred. Myers, assistant quartermaster and chief quartermaster of this military division, for the brevet of brigadier in the regular Army. Colonel Myers served during the campaign in Virginia, in 1862, as chief quartermaster of McDowell's corps, but during the last days of that campaign his activity, efficiency, and zeal were so manifest and so essential to the situation that I assigned him to duty as chief quartermaster of the Army of Virginia. In that position he rendered invaluable service during the last days of that campaign, and it is not too much to say that to him more than to any other man the safety of our large army trains was due. His indefatigable and intelligent services secured us from heavy losses of material, and he is eminently entitled to the promotion asked for him. He served for two years as chief quartermaster Department of the Northwest, with what fidelity to the Government and regard for the public interests the records in the office of the Quartermaster-General will abundantly show. He is an officer of integrity, intelligence, and sobriety, and entirely capable of discharging the duties of any position to which he may be assigned. I have the honor to request, general, that you will give this recommendation a favorable indorsement and forward it to the proper authority.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 60.

Saint Louis, Mo., March 15, 1865.

Theis commanding, is assigned to duty at Benton Barracks as a part of the permanent garrison.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,

HEADQUARTERS CENTRAL DISTRICT OF MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, March 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis:

GENERAL: I returned to quarters last night from a tour of inspection through the counties of Cass, Jackson, and La Fayette, having inspected the posts at Pleasant Hill, Hickman Mills, Kansas City, Independence, and Lexington. I also paid proper attention to the protection of the railroad construction parties and the transportation of the mail. The cavalry at the posts of Pleasant Hill, Hickman Mills, and Lexington I found in anything but a state of efficiency. Most of the men waiting muster out, many without horses, and more without equipments; hence the difficulty of getting up scouts and pursuits of guerrillas. The infantry of Colonel Harding's regiment at Kansas City are good troops; those at Independence less instructed, but he will now transpose the commands and correct the want of discipline and drill with those now at Independence. This regiment suffers much from the best of its officers being on detached service out of the district. Like most short-term regiments, many of its line officers are scarcely fit for the rank of file-closers. At Lexington I found a total want of discipline or efficiency. With three squadrons First Regiment Missouri State Militia, numbering some 145 men, were fifteen horses and five sets of equipments. The formation of the companies under Order No. 3 is progressing very slowly. The people want to have the men so raised credited to the draft, and many of the people of the country would enlist if the company they enlist in should be stationed on their particular farms or homes. I have told them that they could fill up these companies, or failing to do so that they would have their local militia called into active service. The counties are offering local bounties to fill up these companies, and in some cases may add a pair of revolvers for each man as an inducement. The worst feature in the country is the cowed and dispirited state of the people. All manhood appears to have gone out of them. Alike in fear of the soldier and the bushwhacker, all they ask is military protection of provost-marshal and the privilege of neutrality. I talked to the people at Kansas City and again at Lexington, counseling them to an active and sympathetic support of the Government, State and National; to a strict performance of all their duties under the law as jurymen and militiamen; to conciliation and union in support of law, and the defense of their homes against all lawless violence. I hope I made some converts, but if I had possessed a "forty-parson power" of persuasion I am afraid I should have come short of the mark. I shall hasten the work of consolidating the recruits of the three Missouri State Militia regiments. Enough men of the First are now here, and I will order them under the best officer I can now find in commission of that corps. Will you carry the consolidation further than that of companies? There are men enough of the three regiments in this district to make a lieutenant-colonel's command, and I would respectfully recommend that Lieutenant-Colonel Lazear be retained for that service, if it can be legally done. Scouts just arrived report the disappearance of all the guerrillas from the road since their punishment by Harding's men on Saturday. I will keep parties in the brush as long as I remain in the district to hunt these gentry day and night. If the troops are properly seconded by the people the country can be cleared of all trouble early in the season; but all neutrality, whether on farms, in villages, or on railroads, must be put an end to. I forward my resignation by this mail, which I pray you to approve and forward, and I ask as a favor that I may be ordered to come to Saint Louis next week to report verbally on the state of this district. I can do so much better than by letter. My office work will all be up by Saturday night. I feel a deep solicitude in putting things straight here, and would like a conference on this matter. I merely accepted the commission of major-general to aid our excellent governor in organizing his militia. I have no idea that the convention will permit any such office under the new constitution, and would have no desire to retain it longer if they did. My determination to resign from the volunteer service is one long since formed, and dictated by no disappointment or captiousness of spirit. It is a measure due to my family. I ask your aid in facilitating the matter.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

JOHN MCNEIL,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

WARRENSBURG, MO., March 15, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

I returned last night after an absence of eight days. I have been at Pleasant Hill, Independence, Kansas City, and Lexington. Our cavalry I find everywhere inefficient. This is partly from the approaching muster out of most of the officers and men, and more from a want of horses and cavalry equipment. They are neither cavalry nor infantry. Colonel Harding is doing all that can be done in his district with the means in hand. On last Saturday he set a trap for the stage robbers, which resulted in the killing of one and the mortally wounding of two of them. You can assure the railroad company that the work will be protected. I have made careful inquiry on this subject and find that they only suffer from the fears of their employés. These will subside as soon as we are able to give the guerrillas a few more lessons like that of last Saturday. I send you Harding's telegram about the roads.*

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HARTVILLE, Mo., March 15, 1865.

Brigadier-General SANBORN,
Commanding Fourth Military District:

SIR: The citizens of this county are anxiously looking to you for protection against guerrillas through the approaching summer; hence I take the liberty to give you a few facts which you may not be fully in possession of; and also with due deference make a few suggestions as to what, in my opinion, would give us that protection we really need, and which if we can get, I think will enable us to remain at home and attend to our farming interests, which have been almost entirely neglected for the last few years for want of protection. It is a fact that there is not at the present more than 150 families in the limits of Wright County, and most of these are north and northwest and west, and are protected to some extent by the troops at this place. In other portions of the county there are only a few families in small settlements, and most of these will leave soon if something is not immediately done to protect them in their persons and property, as guerrillas have, I learn, already commenced driving off the live-stock from these exposed settlements. It is also true that many of us are so destitute that if we are forced to leave our little farms we leave our all without even the means to carry us away. I have been of the opinion ever since this war began, and while I had command of the Enrolled Militia of Seventy-third Regiment I used every exertion in my power to impress it upon the different district commanders that a military post at or near what is known as Mountain Store, which is about eighteen miles from Hartville, would give not only the citizens of this county, but also Texas, Pulaski, and

75 R R—VOL XLVIII, PT I
Lacled that protection which would make them feel safe and secure at their homes attending to their ordinary business, but my efforts so far have proved unavailing. But still I am not willing to give it up yet. It is true we need a few troops at this place to protect the public offices. Say forty men would be amply sufficient, if a few companies were at the point before mentioned, as that has always been the main thoroughfare through which bands of guerrillas pass into and out of this county. And permit me respectfully to call attention to the fact that it is but a few miles farther from Mountain Store to Rolla than it is from Lebanon to Rolla. You will readily see that supplies can be brought to this point from Rolla cheaper than supplies are now obtained at this post by way of Lebanon. The country is not able to furnish supplies for troops either there or at this place. One mile from Mountain Store is a site or point in every way adapted to the establishment of a post—a large, fine spring which affords an abundance of good water; good pine timber, and mills to cut lumber for construction of works, and are advantages worthy of notice. In conclusion, I feel satisfied that a permanent post at or near the point suggested would not only encourage people who are here, but hundreds who have left for other parts will return soon.

Your obedient servant,

R. B. PALMER.

P. S.—I have encouraged the citizens of this county to remain at their homes a few weeks longer and see what will be done for us, if anything.

R. B. P.

Second P. S.—If the farming interest of this part of the country is well protected this year we pledge ourselves to furnish forage for all the troops needed here next year.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., March 15, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Major: I have the honor to state, for the information of the general commanding, that as soon as the new horses and pack animals arrive I shall be ready to take the field against the Indians. Shall move with all the cavalry I have, leaving the infantry to garrison the posts and do the escorting. We will have to have more transportation, as all of the escorting will have to be done with wagons. I shall have every company supplied with parched corn, ground and mixed with sugar. Shall take but few days' rations of flour. Shall supply ourselves with buffalo meat, which we can easily do if we go south of the Arkansas. My idea of hunting Indians is to go unencumbered with camp and garrison equipage. We can surely live for thirty or sixty days as Indians live all their lives; and if the buffalo hold out I will not return until I find the Indians and whip them. I would like to be advised of the views of the general commanding as to my plan; also whether he wishes me to move north to co-operate with General Mitchell or south of the Arkansas after the Kiowas, Comanches, and Apaches.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel and Brevet Brigadier-General, Commanding District.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., March 15, 1865.

Capt. J. WILLANS,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report the arrival of detachment of Third Wisconsin Cavalry (unassigned recruits) and battalion of eight companies Second U. S. Volunteers. As neither of these battalions (aggregate of 880 men) have a surgeon with them, and I am about to take the field in a campaign against the Indians, I would respectfully request that at least three surgeons be ordered to report to these headquarters for assignment to duty in this district, as there are no surgeons that can be relieved from duty at this post to accompany the expedition.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel and Brevet Brigadier-General, Commanding District.

OLATHE, March 15, 1865.

Maj. H. H. HEATH,
Provost-Marshal-General, Fort Leavenworth:

The bushwhackers have increased lately from nine in number to nearly 100 in Jackson County, Mo., and vicinity, and the inhabitants along the line are becoming alarmed and say they will be obliged to move off if troops are not sent down and stationed. Every indication goes to show that there will be trouble, as much or more than usual, on the line this summer. Recruits are coming all the time.

W. F. GOBLE,
Lieutenant and Assistant Provost-Marshal.

(Repeated by Willans to Dodge, March 16, 1865.)

PAOLA, KANS., March 15, 1865.

Brigadier-General McNEIL:

I have information that near 100 guerrillas are gathering in Jackson County in vicinity of the line, probably for a raid into Kansas. Have you any information on the subject? Have you any mounted force in Jackson? I have but very few troops on the border. Have none at present to place there. Please keep me advised of any information you may obtain of movement of bushwhackers in your district, that we may co-operate with each other in suppressing them.

JAS. G. BLUNT,
Major-General.

WARRENSBURG, MO., March 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. G. BLUNT:

I have just returned from Jackson County. Heard nothing of the guerrillas in the force you spoke of. Harding's men had a fight with fifteen last Saturday and killed three. We have not since been able to find a bushwhacker. My mounted force in Jackson County is one company, whose time soon expires. They are stationed at Hickman Mills. Will be glad to communicate and receive information at all times.

JOHN McNEIL,
Brigadier-General.
Major-General Dodge:
Nothing heard from Sixteenth Kansas. I cannot imagine where they are. Not on either of the stage routes.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF IOWA,
Dubuque, Iowa, March 15, 1865.

Assistant Adjutant-General,
Department of the Northwest:

SIR: Major-General Pope, commanding Military Division of the Missouri, has directed me to prepare an expedition, to consist of twelve companies of cavalry and a battery, to march early this year across the Black Hills to Powder River. I shall require 180 mules, or 36 mule teams, more than I have got in my district, most of my transportation being oxen. It will not do to use oxen with mules in making a rapid march without grain. I shall take all the mules and horses I have at each post and replace them by oxen, but will still require then thirty teams. I therefore request to know if these teams could not be lent me from the District of Minnesota. They could accompany Brackett's Battalion from Minnesota and carry forage for his horses. The grazing will be bad when he starts on his march to Sioux City. I am making out requisitions for what may be required on the march, and will have to include these mules should I not be able to procure them in the department.

With much respect, your obedient servant,
ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF IOWA,
Dubuque, March 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. Pope,
Commanding Military Division of the Missouri:

GENERAL: When you informed me you intended to establish a post in the Black Hills, I wrote to an officer stationed in the upper country to quietly obtain all the information he could about that country. Although you have abandoned the idea of a post there, I inclose you a copy of his report, thinking it may interest you.

With much respect, your obedient servant,
ALF. SULLY,
Brevet Major-General.

Brig. Gen. A. Sully,
Commanding District of Iowa, Dubuque, Iowa:

SIR: In obedience to instructions received from you under date of 31st ultimo, I have the honor to submit the following report: The country from old Fort Pierre to the Cheyenne River in the direction of the Black Hills is very good for a wagon road, I am told by all of whom I have inquired (eight or nine in number), half-breeds and French and old residents of this section of country, and all of whom have been from Fort Pierre either to the Black Hills or within a few miles of them at several different times, and most of them have wintered at or within a short distance of them. These men tell me that the route traced in red (thus: \(-x-x-x-x\)) on the map you send me is impassable for wagons, besides being longer than the one called the Platte or Fort Laramie road, as I have marked in green pencil (thus: \(- - - - - - - -\)) on the map. The road strikes as directly as possible for the forks of the Cheyenne, not coming in sight of that river till within twenty or thirty miles of the junction of the North and South Forks, passing down on the river bottom about twenty miles below the junction, passing up the bottom about ten miles, when it crosses; then it leads up on the north side and crosses back on south side of the North Fork a mile or two above the junction. From here it is three or four days' march to Bear Butte. Eight miles farther up is White Wood Creek (where I have marked in red pencil thus: \(o\)), a point for the location of a post, which neighborhood all agree is much the most desirable, being also a place of great resort by the Indians in winter. There is a great abundance of good oak, pine, and ash timber on the creek and plenty of grass on the creek and river bottoms. This creek furnishes a good abundance of never-failing water of the purest and most delicious quality, and the amount of timber on it and the adjacent hills is said to be inexhaustible. About thirty miles farther up is Red Water Creek, where is also a fine location, though not so highly spoken of as the other. This stream flows through the valley, intersecting the Black Hills, which valley is ten to fifteen miles wide and furnishes an easy wagon route for fifty miles or more up their interior. Running Water Creek empties into Red Water from the north side, about twelve miles from the mouth of the valley. This latter creek is a bold, perpetual, and pretty stream. The soil in the vicinity of the Black Hills is said to be very good; seasons regular, though shorter than they are here, and rains are frequent. Game of all kinds and fur animals abound in the greatest profusion.

From Fort Pierre to crossing of the Cheyenne is a very good wagon route, moderately rolling and easy camping places, well supplied with wood and water. From here to Bear Butte (by road on south side of North Fork, my informants say) "it is as level and smooth as a floor." There is a road crossing the Cheyenne in the vicinity of Cherry Creek, and striking the North Fork near the mouth of Crow Creek. This route is about one day's march shorter, but a much more hilly and difficult road than the other. The crossing of the Cheyenne is very good, the water being shallow and the bottom rocky. All of the other streams are easily crossed also. It is about four miles from foot of Black Hills to Bear Butte, and eight or ten miles farther to the river, and a pretty level country between, with a natural slope toward the river. There are several errors as to the relative position of different points and streams on the map you send me. One is the location of Plum Creek, which in reality empties into the Cheyenne only a mile or two below the mouth of Cherry Creek. Another is the position of Fort Pierre, which is represented as being half way between Little Missouri or Bad River and the mouth of the Big Cheyenne, when in fact Fort Pierre is only five miles above the former and is fifty miles below the latter.
Earnestly hoping that you may realize from this report all you expected of me, I am, general, with much respect, your obedient servant,

CARTER BERKELEY,

Lieutenant, Sixth Iowa Cavalry.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., March 16, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 16th day of March, 1865: Refugees from Brownsville, Tex., report that General Slaughter is still in command of the Western Sub-District, extending up the Rio Grande 120 miles from Brownsville, and east to the San Antonio River and the coast. Showalter's regiment had left Brownsville under orders to proceed to Galveston, but stopped at Corpus Christi, where they anticipated a raid from our forces. They number about 350. There are 150 more at that place in detached companies. The force left at Brownsville and vicinity consists of Giddings' battalion (eight companies), about 350 strong; Benavides' regiment, 300 strong, with headquarters at Laredo, and 100 men in detached companies (750 in all). Colonel Bates' regiment is at Matagorda and vicinity. Colonel Pyron commands the Frontier Sub-District, north and west of the Western District. General Drayton still commands the Middle Sub-District, between the San Antonio and Brazos. The Confederate authorities believe the expedition preparing at New Orleans was destined for Texas, and had determined to evacuate Brownsville and the western coast, but to hold Galveston. A gentleman from La Fourche, La., reports that the rebel authorities in Louisiana have discovered that the expedition from this point is not for the Red River region, and that they contemplate making the attempt to capture Brashear City again by crossing the Teche and Grand Lake above Indian Bend and gaining the rear of that post by way of Bayou La Fourche. At the same time an arrangement is to be made with parties in New Orleans to cut the levee a short distance above Gretna, by which the Opelousas railroad would be flooded, thus preventing re-enforcements from reaching Brashear by that route.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.
(In absence of Capt. S. M. Eaton.)

SPECIAL FIELD ORDERS,
No. 9.

2. Brig. Gen. Daniel Ullmann, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby ordered to proceed to Cairo, Ill., there to await further orders, and will report from that place by letter to the Adjutant-General of the Army.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Hdqrs. Army and Division of West Mississippi,
Fort Gaines, Ala., March 16, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I have received your letters, but have not been able to answer them until now. Repeated estimates for small-arms have been made, and the assurance has been received that they would be sent. If they are received they will not only supply the wants but leave a sufficient reserve in the depots at New Orleans. I write again today in relation to them.

The difficulty in the way of subsistence and forage was anticipated, and instructions were given some time since to send as much as possible in sailing vessels, to remain afloat until needed. Please pursue the same course, and take up for that purpose any vessels that will answer. They should not draw more than nine feet, and preferably less. The transportation of the Sixteenth Corps and Grierson’s cavalry should be sent over as rapidly as possible, dividing the means at hand between the two as equally as possible. We need some of the cavalry now. If the rise of the river should render the abandonment of Morganza necessary, please send one of the regiments of its garrison to Pensacola and another to Mobile Bay. The high water will be an obstacle to any operations on the part of the rebels, and I think they may safely be spared temporarily. I was greatly gratified by your withdrawal of your resignation. It would be impossible to supply your place, and your decision has given me great satisfaction and confidence.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Headquarters Department of the Gulf,
New Orleans, March 16, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sir: The flood in the Mississippi continues, with prospect of further rise. Yesterday I was compelled to impress the whole population, white and black, of Algiers, to repair levee in front of the city. It is now safe. If it had yielded our Opelousas railroad depot would have been swept. The wretched waste and destruction by the troops at Kenner and Chalmette of the pickets and fascines renders both those points very dangerous. I am compelled by overwhelming evidence to believe that the most utter recklessness, both of public and private rights, has characterized the troops which have occupied Chalmette especially. Plunder, pilfering, and robbery committed by them are already the subject of heavy renotations. I have, in anticipation of a probable break at Kenner, ordered sand-bags filled and in readiness to close the gaps in Camp Parapet and thus keep the overflow from the Poutchartrain military railroad. All possible precautions are being taken, but a rise of two feet more will be very perilous. Morganza still stands, but the crevasses in West Baton Rouge are irremediable at this season.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.
Commodore Palmer,
Commanding West Gulf Squadron:

There is said to be a naval banditti operating about the Amite and Tickfaw Rivers capturing vessels sent there. Although the country is very much overflowed, I propose to send some cavalry to the Amite River, and if it is possible I think it would be a good thing if a gun-boat could be sent up there at the same time, in order to scour the lower part of the river, where our men cannot penetrate without boats. The passage of a gun-boat up that river and back would, besides, have a good effect. But of the propriety of it, of course, you must be the judge.

Very respectfully and truly,
T. W. SHERMAN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Lieutenant-Colonel PARKHURST,
Commanding Detachment Third Rhode Island Cavalry,
Hermitage Plantation, opposite Donaldsonville, La.:

Brigadier-General Sherman directs that you scour Amite River with all possible dispatch and capture, if possible, the guerrillas and jay-hawkers infesting the country on that river. You will report at what time your force will be on the Amite, as it is hoped the navy may be induced to push a boat up there. Acknowledge receipt.

P. J. MALONEY,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Brig. Gen. C. BUSSEY:

Your letters of 8th and 9th instant are received. The methods adopted for the protection and temporary subsistence of the inhabitants are approved. The additional force asked for could doubtless be well used, but it is not possible now to furnish it, nor can I encourage you to hope for such re-enforcements in future. Curtail, if necessary, the extent of your defensive line as directed in circular from headquarters Military Division West Mississippi, dated February 22, 1865.

Respectfully, yours.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

All the boats up brought reports of a rebel force with artillery near the river this side of Dardanelle. I detained the Carrie Jacobs to assist the Barton and Lotus over Van Buren Bar until I could learn something reliable concerning a rebel force. My scouts have come in and report that they have been all over the country forty miles back of Dardanelle, and that there has been no force in that part of the country or this side. I am confident there is nothing to fear at present. I have scouts now in that part of the country, with instructions to report here and at Lewisburg any information of rebel troops advancing toward the river. The river is now rising, and I think the boats can come up again. The telegraph reports gold in New York $1.76 to-day. News from Sherman, Schofield, and Sheridan good.

Very respectfully,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS TALLAHASSEE MISSION, CREEK NATION, March 16, 1865.

Col. WILLIAM A. PHILLIPS,
Comdg. Third Brigade, Third Division, Seventh Army Corps:

I have the honor to inform the brigade commander that I have on this instant, at 11 a.m., received intelligence that a band of Osages, supposed to be led by white scoundrels, for the purpose of robbery, to gather up stock of the nation and drive it off, are now operating in or about Conchany. Two refugeemen, who were on the way to Conchany Town, about twenty-five miles from here, discovered the marauders encamped about sunset yesterday, the 15th instant, on this bank of the Arkansas, Conchany being on the other side opposite their camp. The refugeemen say that they were much scared when they came in sight of the camp, but they dismounted for a few minutes, lay down and took a good sight, and think there are white men amongst them. The band, altogether, about fifty or sixty strong. The shortest route in pursuit would be this way by the Mission. Pardon the suggestion.

I remain your obedient and humble servant,

FRANCIS J. FOX,
First Lieutenant.

All is well at the Mission. Captain No-ko-so-lo-chee is getting good. I got him to head his company at dress-parade yesterday evening for the first [time]; also to superintend his roll-calls. My scouts have not returned.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., March 16, 1865.

Col. M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Commanding at Fayetteville, Ark.:

I must congratulate you upon the rapid destruction of bushwhackers in your section. With their leaders killed and the rapid destruction of the men generally all the guerrillas will soon leave that section. The people should all co-operate now, and peace and order will soon be restored in that section. Major Worthington’s death was unfortunate, but such casualties must occur in war.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., March 16, 1865.

MICHAEL STECK, Esq.,
Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Santa Fé, N. Mex.:

Sir: I have had the honor to receive your letter of the 15th instant, stating that you have received information that the Apache Indians, known as the Mimbres band of that tribe, desire peace, and that you propose to have a talk with them in their own country and desire that I give you an escort as far as Fort West, on the Gila River. In reply I beg to say that I have been duly informed of the disposition of those Indians, and some weeks since gave directions as to the only terms on which peace could be had. I have hitherto considered, and am still of the opinion, that when we are at war with a band of Indians the military department of the Government should and must manage all affairs connected with them until the war is ended, otherwise a superintendent or Indian agent might go and have talks and negotiate with them, when, in the opinion of the military commander, the proper time had come to prosecute hostilities with increased vigor, and thus the two branches of the Government might act with cross purposes. The Indians to whom you allude have long been at war and are now, it is believed, coming to that point where they wish to surrender. They are still in the hands of the military and will be until the military commander makes peace with them on his own terms. Some of them have been captured and are kept as prisoners, so that when, in the opinion of the military commander, the proper time comes, if the present efforts to get the Indians fail, they will be sent as runners to tell their head men to come in for a talk. Should the head men thus come in they will again be informed that the ultimatum is for their people to remove to the reservation at the Bosque Redondo; that they can have peace on no other basis; that we will continue the war until that result is produced or the band is exterminated. To have any person outside the military go and hold talks with them would be productive of no good and might lead to complications which should be avoided. I therefore trust that you will suspend the prosecution of your contemplated journey with such an end in view. As soon as these Indians are at peace and are removed to the reservation, and the Department of the Interior stands ready to feed and take care of them in common with the Navajo Indians and the Mescalero Apaches, you will, of course, be notified, when it will afford me pleasure to turn them over to you. But until that time comes the military will claim to manage them to the best of its ability, whether in making war or in making peace.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Los Pinos, will not wait for the movement of this company, but will proceed without delay to Fort Union as heretofore ordered.

II. On the arrival at Franklin, Tex., of Captain Brotherton, U. S. Army, commanding Fifth U. S. Infantry, he will relieve Maj. Joseph Smith, First Veteran Infantry California Volunteers, in command of that post. As soon as the general court-martial now in session at Franklin, Tex., has adjourned sine die, Major Smith, at his own request, will be mustered out of service, and he will be honorably discharged.

VII. Company E, Fifth U. S. Infantry, now at Fort Sumner, will proceed at once and take post temporarily at Fort Bascom. It will take 100 rounds of ammunition per man.

VIII. Lieutenant-Colonel Willis, with Captain Stombs' company (F), First Cavalry California Volunteers, Captains Ayres' and Lent's companies (D and E), First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers, now at Fort Craig, will proceed without delay to Los Pinos, and thence by the shortest practicable route to Fort Union, N. Mex., and there take post.

IX. Col. Oscar M. Brown, First Cavalry California Volunteers, will without delay relieve Capt. Samuel Ovenshine, U. S. Army, in the command of Fort Marcy, N. Mex., as well as in the duties of provost-marshal of the city of Santa Fé. Lieut. John Abbott, First Cavalry California Volunteers, will relieve Captain Ovenshine in his duties as acting assistant quartermaster and acting commissary of subsistence at Fort Marcy, N. Mex., and Lieut. Thomas T. Bartlett, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, will relieve Capt. Samuel Ovenshine in the command of General Carleton's escort. Capt. Samuel Ovenshine on being thus relieved will repair without delay to Franklin, Tex., where he will be assigned temporarily to the command of Company G, Fifth U. S. Infantry.

HDQRS. CAVALRY FORCES, MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., March 17, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: Your communication of the 15th instant just received. I have already ordered the Tenth Tennessee Cavalry to Natchez to replace the Second New Jersey, and will immediately order two regiments to Vicksburg. I will substitute the Fourth Wisconsin, now at Baton Rouge, for the Nineteenth Pennsylvania, which I will order to that point. This will leave General Knipe's division two brigades, of three regiments each. I then propose to organize General Lucas' command, with the addition of the two regiments now at Barrancas, into another division of two brigades, three regiments each, and will form another division of six regiments from the cavalry which is yet to arrive from Arkansas and Memphis. If this organization meets the approbation of the general commanding I respectfully request an order authorizing me to organize the cavalry designated for the field into three divisions of two brigades each, the whole to be designated the Cavalry Corps, Military Division of West Mississippi. This organization will have the effective force for the field which has been indicated in your communication.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. H. GRIERSON,
Brevet Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY FORCES,
No. 5. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., March 17, 1865.

II. The Second Tennessee and Ninth Indiana Cavalry will proceed without delay, under command of the ranking officer of the two regiments, to Vicksburg, Miss., reporting for duty to the commanding officer at that point. The Nineteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry will proceed without delay to Baton Rouge, La., reporting for duty to the commanding officer of the cavalry forces at that point. A sufficient number of the most efficient horses of these three regiments will be retained at this point to fully mount the balance of General Knipe's division. Brig. Gen. Joseph F. Knipe is charged with the execution of this order. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation for men, animals, and camp equipage.

III. The Fourth Wisconsin Cavalry will proceed without delay from Baton Rouge to Carrollton, La., reporting for duty to Col. Joseph Karge, commanding brigade at the latter point. A sufficient number of the best horses will be transferred from the One hundred and eighteenth Illinois Mounted Infantry to the Fourth Wisconsin Cavalry to fully mount that regiment. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By order of Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. H. Grierson:
S. L. WOODWARD,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., March 17, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 17th day of March, 1865:

A gentleman who spent a night in the camp of Collins, the Confederate scout in Pointe Coupée Parish, saw Hutchinson, the torpedo constructor. He proposed to lay torpedoes in Red River just below Fort De Russy and at Short Bend. An attempt was made by the rebels at Tunica about ten days ago to blow up the U. S. gun-boat Ozark by stretching a line across the river one mile above her, supported by buoys to which the torpedo was attached. It was to be floated down across the bows of the Ozark, but the rope broke before it reached her and the scheme failed. The informant heard them speak of Jones, of Texas, in connection with the torpedo affairs. Mr. Bell, a scout, reports that on the 8th instant one company of the Second Louisiana Cavalry, Captain Prescott, were stationed at Washington, La., and one company of the same regiment was doing picket duty at Opelousas. The Seventh Louisiana Infantry had passed through Washington for Alexandria on the 1st instant from the Teche country. It was reported that our cavalry had reached Petit Anse Salt-Works, and had driven the rebels away about the last of February. About a month ago a force was collecting at Alexandria in anticipation of an advance up Red River. Within ten days these forces have dispersed over fifty miles of country from Cheneyville to twenty or thirty miles up toward Natchitoches. Bagby's division, partly dismounted, were lying on the road from Cheneyville to Alexandria. Vincent's brigade formed the advance at Cheneyville, Washington, Opelousas, &c. General Thomas was still in command at Alexandria. An earth-work at the foot of the rapids at Alexandria, on the west side of the river, has been destroyed by the high water, and they are removing the guns to Shreveport. Labor has been renewed on the fortifications at Shreveport, negroes being impressed for the purpose. Fort De Russy is being strengthened, and two batteries of very heavy guns had been established on the river, one above and one below Fort De Russy. Emigration from Louisiana had been stopped by the authorities. Great demoralization exists among the troops, and the most vigorous measures have to be pursued to prevent the breaking up of the armies. White flags are frequently displayed at night among the camps, and the officers are unable to stop it. Desertions are not frequent now on account of the severe measures used to stop them. This information was mostly obtained through Confederate soldiers.

The rebels still think an expedition will go up Red River, of a part of our forces at least. The water never was so high in the Red River and tributaries as at present. Mr. Bell states that the country is so flooded it would be absolutely impossible for the rebels to make the move to take Brashear City, spoken of in the report from this office of the 16th instant. They are simply waiting to see what we are going to do, and have no intention to make offensive demonstrations at present. A report from Port Hudson, 12th instant, states that Powers', Griffith's, Norwood's, and Gober's commands were at the upper bridge, on Beaver Creek, East Louisiana. The force is estimated at 3,000. Scott was at Georgetown, Miss., a week ago, recruiting his regiment. A released prisoner who left Jackson, Miss., on the 1st instant states that February 20 Stewart's brigade left Meridian for South Carolina. Ross' brigade of Texas cavalry (600) passed through the same day for Canton, Miss. He afterward saw 200 of them on the way to cross the Mississippi to go home without leave, and the rest of them said they would do the same if not furloughed. Adams' and Wood's brigades were in Jackson, Miss., the latter 1,100 strong. Colonel Scott, from Woodville, had been at Jackson and been ordered to Macon, Miss. Forrest said in a speech at Macon, Miss., that he would clean out Natchez and Vicksburg and stop the navigation of the river. It was reported that he had ordered firing on boats to be resumed. One of Forrest's staff stated that he had in his district about 15,000 men, 7,000 of whom were cavalry, encamped at Macon, the remainder, principally infantry, were scattered through the country, but had orders to concentrate at Macon, excepting Adams' and Wood's brigades and Thomson's and Bradford's scouts at Fayette. The informant was told by a friend at Union Church that two couriers passed there with dispatches announcing the recognition of the Confederacy by Mexico. One of the couriers showed him his dispatches and said that a French fleet was off the Gulf waiting orders. A deserter from the Fourth Mississippi Infantry, who left his regiment at Burpton, Miss., the 7th instant, states that the Fourteenth and Thirty-eighth Mississippi, stationed there, were both ordered to report to Colonel Powers, in Louisiana. Forrest was at Meridian concentrating his forces at some point, supposed to be Macon. A deserter from the Tenth Mississippi was in Jackson, Miss., on the 7th instant. One brigade of cavalry left there that day for Brookhaven. About the 5th Ross' brigade passed through Port Gibson, on their way to Texas, without leave. A letter received by him on the 7th from an officer of his regiment states that the remaining corps of Hood's army (10,000) started on the 5th for Mobile. A deserter from Harrison's brigade states that Harrison's headquarters were at Monroe, La. He also corroborates Mr. Bell's statement regarding demoralization in the Confederate army at Alexandria. There are frequent excursions for deserters. Mr. Bell estimates the whole force west of Red River at 25,000, and around Alexandria from 10,000 to 12,000.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

(In absence of Capt. S. M. Eaton.)

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

No. 73.

New Orleans, March 17, 1865.

7. The Sixty-first U. S. Colored Infantry, now at Morganza, La., will be sent without delay to this city to be transported to Barrancas, Fla. Major-General Herron, commanding Northern Division of Louisiana, is charged with the execution of so much of this order as relates to the movement from Morganza to this city. Brigadier-General Sherman, commanding Southern Division of Louisiana, is charged with the execution of so much of the above order as relates to the movement from this city to Barrancas. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

J. C. STONE,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,

New Orleans, March 17, 1865.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,

Department of the Gulf:

I have the honor to suggest that a gun-boat be furnished to observe the shores (northern) of Lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain. I have no facilities for sending detachments to that coast. Our light steamers all seem to be in the use of the higher headquarters, except the Savannah, which has as much as she can do at Forts Pike and Macomb and Proctorville. To do anything beyond the simple lines of defense, my hands are completely tied. The parties prowling about those lake shores are said to belong to the Confederate Navy, or at least officered by that department of service. An officer of the Confederate Navy is reported to have been killed on the deck of the schooner Stockton by our men. I would like for the old system we had here in 1862 and 1863 to be now pursued, viz, for the commander of the defenses and the senior officers of the gun-boats on the lakes to be at all times in cooperation, without special reference in every case, to the naval commander. This would save time and probably lead to effective results.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. W. SHERMAN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, March 17, 1865.

Maj. George Webster,
Comdg. Detach. 77th U. S. Colored Infty., Pass Manchac, La.:

Brigadier-General Sherman directs me to instruct you to have all facilities at hand always in readiness to cross scouting parties over the North Manchac Pass. You will be soon re-enforced by another company. The picket at the North Pass should be strengthened to at least ten men. It seems to be shown that the sentinel on the schooner James Stockton was asleep when the boat was attacked. If this be the case it shows a necessity for greater vigilance on the part of officers to enforce the regulations of the Army. As soon as practicable this affair will be investigated and the responsibility for this disaster thrown upon the proper persons.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. J. Maloney,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 17, 1865. (Received 4.20 p.m. 19th.)

His Excellency A. Lincoln,
President of the United States:

Can I be informed whether the views expressed in my letter to governor of Missouri and my letter to Your Excellency, forwarded through the Secretary of War on the 8th instant, are approved and will be supported by the Government? It is necessary for me to be advised of your decision before taking further necessary action.

Jno. Pope, Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 15.

In compliance with the request of His Excellency the Governor of Missouri, and to aid in carrying out the purposes set forth in his proclamation of the 7th instant, it is ordered that, as soon as notice is received at these headquarters from the governor of the State of Missouri that the civil courts are re-established and the civil officers are ready to enter upon the discharge of their duties in any county or district, the commanding general of the Department of the Missouri will be duly notified and will instruct his subordinate officers as follows, viz:

I. In such counties or districts the provost marshals will be immediately relieved from all duties except those that are purely military, and no interference on the part of the military authorities with the trial of any cases coming properly under the jurisdiction of the civil courts will thereafter be permitted. All prisoners in military custody in such counties or districts charged with crimes or offenses committed therein cognizable by civil courts, including prisoners charged with being bushwhackers or guerrillas, where the evidence is such as to sustain the charge of murder, arson, robbery, or other kindred crimes, will be turned over to the civil authorities for trial and punishment. It is to be clearly understood, however, that in all cases in which guerrillas, bushwhackers, or other armed outlaws are concerned, the military authorities possess and will exercise the right, whenever they deem it necessary, to bring such offenders to trial before military commission for the military crime, regardless of any acquittal or discharge by civil courts or magistrates. Therefore, when bushwhackers, guerrillas, or other armed outlaws have been turned over to the civil officers and acquitted or discharged by civil courts or magistrates, such courts or magistrates or civil officers must cause such prisoners to be returned to the custody of the military officers to be tried for the military offense, and released or otherwise dealt with by the military authorities.

II. On requisition from duly authorized civil officers prompt military assistance will be furnished by any military commander on whom such requisition is served to protect civil officers and courts in the performance of their duties, and from any consequences which may arise therefore to secure the arrest and safe-keeping of persons charged with crime, and in every way to vindicate and maintain civil authority. In all cases when thus called upon officers and soldiers will be careful not to make the performance of such duty the occasion of superseding the civil authority which they are summoned to aid and strengthen, but will confine their action to the measures prescribed by the civil officers, and on no pretext whatever assume to originate or pursue any course depending upon their own authority or discretion.

III. Whenever it is requested by the civil authorities military commanders will receive into custody and secure by proper guards all persons charged with offenses against the laws, and will hold such persons subject to the demand of the proper civil tribunals, but in each case the military commander who receives such prisoner must be furnished with the charges against him, or commitment in writing, signed by the civil officer who seeks to transfer him to military custody.

IV. It is hereby made the duty of all officers and soldiers to do everything in their power to promote the firm establishment of civil law in Missouri, but they will not in any manner or under any circumstances relax their efforts to hunt down and punish guerrillas, bushwhackers, or other outlaws in any part of the State, being careful only to defer in their action to the wishes of the civil authorities in those counties and districts in which notification has been given by the governor of the State that the civil courts are in the unobstructed exercise of jurisdiction. Whenever any arrest is made for a violation or threatened violation of the civil law the offender shall be promptly turned over to the civil authorities. If any such threatened violation of the civil law shall come to the knowledge of military officers they will communicate the same to the proper civil magistrate, in order that such dangerous person may be held to keep the peace and be of good behavior.

V. The attempt to restore civil administration in Missouri after the State has been so long under the jurisdiction of martial law will doubtless give rise to many perplexing questions between the military and civil authorities, but all such questions should be considered and decided in a spirit of candor and forbearance. It is expected and requested that the civil authorities will not hesitate to appeal from decisions of military commanders in any case which seems proper to the commanding general of this military division, who will not fail to give any such appeal careful and dispassionate examination.

By command of Major-General Pope:

JOHN T. SPRAGUE,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

PATTERTSON, MO., MARCH 17, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

Special messenger from Fort Larned brings report of scout from the south. Saw large numbers of Indians. Ascertained that the Comanches (about 2,000 warriors) were encamped on the Cimarron; also Apaches and Kiowas. About 800 warriors were encamped on Crooked Creek, about twenty miles from Cimarron camp. Little Raven's band of Arapahoes is also in that vicinity. Shall I move out with what cavalry I have or await until horses and pack animals arrive? Distance of camp, 150 miles south and west of Fort Larned.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 58.

2. Company I, Second U. S. Volunteers, will proceed to Saline, and Company F, Second U. S. Volunteers, will proceed to Fort Larned, and upon arriving at their several posts will report to the commanding officer for duty.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT GENERAL,
Department of the Northwest:

SIR: I beg leave to inform the major-general that I intend to make the following changes in the stations of some of the companies in my command, if the change is approved by him: The company now stationed at Fort Union is a company of the Thirtieth Wisconsin Volunteers. I received the order directing this regiment to be sent down the river too late in the season to relieve this company, and I propose to order it down the river to Saint Louis, there to join its regiment in the field. I will relieve it by a company of the First U. S. Volunteers now at Fort Rice. Arrangements to be made in Saint Louis with some one of the boats going up the Missouri to transport these troops. The company of cavalry, Company G, Sixth Iowa (they have but twenty horses), now stationed at Fort Berthold will be relieved by another company of the First U. S. Volunteers now stationed at Fort Rice. Arrangements to be made in Saint Louis with some boat going up the river to make this transfer. The company of the Sixth Iowa it is necessary to relieve during navigation, as its term of service expires next winter. The garrison at Fort Rice will be small (four companies), it being necessary for them next summer to procure hay for the winter, which cannot be procured in any large quantity short of eight miles from the post. It will require guards to protect the hay parties from hostile bands of Indians. I would urgently request, if it is possible to do so, [that] I have the other four companies of the First U. S. Volunteers now in Minnesota District sent to this district. In order to get together troops and teamsters enough for the expedition across the Black Hills to operate against the Platte Valley Indians I will have to take nearly every effective cavalryman in the district. As I understand Major-General Pope, it is his intention to garrison the post I am directed to establish on Powder River, or, I should say, will be directed to establish, by the battalion of the Seventh Iowa Cavalry now in this district. I will then have only the Sixth Iowa and the two companies of the Dakota cavalry, besides the six companies of the First U. S. Volunteers, stationed far up the river beyond my reach. One company of the Dakota cavalry go out of service in April and the Sixth Iowa Cavalry’s term of service expires next winter.

With much respect, your obedient servant,

ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.

WASHINGTON, March 18, 1865.

By the President of the United States:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas reliable information has been received that hostile Indians within the limits of the United States have been furnished with arms and munitions of war by persons dwelling in foreign territory, and are thereby enabled to prosecute their savage warfare upon the exposed and sparse settlements of the frontier:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that all persons engaged in that nefarious traffic shall be arrested and tried by court martial at the nearest military post, and if convicted shall receive punishment due to their deserts.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 17th day of March, A. D. 1865, and of the Independence of the United States of America the eighty-ninth.

1 Col. Charles C. Dwight, One hundred and sixtieth Regiment New York Volunteers, is relieved from duty as agent for exchange of prisoners of war for this military division. He will turn over all the books and papers of his office to Capt. William H. Sterling, First U.S. Infantry, who is hereby appointed agent for exchange of prisoners in addition to his former duties. After which Colonel Dwight will proceed without delay to Washington, D.C., in compliance with orders lately received by him from the Secretary of War.

U.S. STEAMER CHOCTAW,

Colonel SHAW,

Commanding at Plaquemine:

Sir: Captain Ratliff, commanding rebel forces east of Atchafalaya, has informed me that there is a party of forty men (more or less), most of them probably deserters from the rebel army, who are engaged in jayhawking through the country, and that he has it from good authority that they are rationed in Plaquemine. I forward the statement to you, as you may deem the matter worthy of investigation.

Very respectfully,

I am satisfied that this party complained of are the Burgess Scouts, stationed at Plaquemine. Verbal complaints of their robberies have been made by a Mr. Thompson, living near Bayou Goula, which he has promised to make in writing and send me, upon which I intend to base an investigation.

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

[Third indorsement.]
HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, La., March 25, 1865.

Respectfully returned.

The source from which this information is received is a very unreliable one. It is a very good rule, and a very natural one, to act in direct opposition to the wishes or views of the enemy, and it is certainly to be recommended that additional stimulus be given to deserters from the rebel army instead of discouraging them from assisting to put down this rebellion or checking the piratical raids of the said Ratliff. If, however, the Burgess Scouts misbehave themselves, and it is so proved by loyal witnesses, the commanding officer at Plaquemine has authority and is ordered to send all delinquents to this city for discharge. These scouts took a formal oath before entering service to do no act in violation of the laws of war.

GENERAL: I herewith send you an order for the embarkation of your command for Fort Gaines. The general commanding directs me to say that two steamers, the Calhoun and Corinthian, each with capacity for about ninety horses, will be at Chalmette to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. You will hold your command in readiness to load the vessels as they are furnished, without unnecessary delay. Captain Perkins, assistant quartermaster, at the foot of Common street, is master of transportation and reports that he will be able to take from 200 to 500 horses daily. The ten days' rations and forage should, as far as possible, be sent upon the vessels with the troops. recent removal of cavalry leaves some of the posts deficient in horses for proper defensive purposes, and I respectfully urge that there be no failure in resupplying them. Every man leaves fully equipped ready for the field. The trains, ordnance, &c., are also complete and ready for orders on landing from the transports.

Very respectfully, yours,

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I forward herewith two communications from Brigadier-General Bussey, commanding at Fort Smith, which will give an idea of the condition of affairs in that vicinity. General Bussey is carrying out my instructions, and, as I understand it, the wishes of the major-general commanding the military division, in affording aid and encouragement to the people to go to work. They have been plundered by the rebels and by our men to such an extent as to deprive them of all heart, but every arrival now adds to the evidence of their confidence in the disposition of the present officers in command to do for them all that can be done. Whether they will be able to mature their crops will of course depend upon many things that cannot now be foreseen. We have sent North from this department since 22d December, 1864, the date of my assuming command, about 2,000 (1,932) persons. We are now issuing rations here to about 700 destitute women and children, most of them directly or indirectly dependent upon men who are now in our service or who have lost their lives in it. These persons are very much indisposed to leave the State. A farm near Little Rock, formerly the property of an absent rebel, has been seized for their use, and they are now being put upon it. They will be furnished with facilities for making gardens, &c., by which it is hoped they will become partly self-sustaining. With the changes recently made in commanders and troops at Fort Smith, the depredations which heretofore disgraced us have been discontinued. There are now some fifteen men, officers and soldiers, confined here awaiting trial for robbery, fleet burning, &c., committed in the neighborhood of Fort Smith.

Very respectfully, yours.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

I inclose copy of my order* in cattle matter, and will thank you for any information that will aid me in seizing any of the stolen cattle and prohibiting such thefts and irregularities hereafter. Colonel Beveridge,
Pilot Knob:

Sir: Returned from scout last evening, having been as far south as Doniphan. No force at that place nor has there been. Current River prevented my going beyond. Johnson is reported to have ordered his troops to assemble at some point twenty miles south of Doniphan. Believe there is no truth in the report. Certain he would fail if the attempt was made. Unable to bring away the families from the Black River on account of high water.

Respectfully,

James Smith,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Special Orders,

1. The commanding officer Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers will detach one company of his command to move, with camp and garrison equipage, to-morrow, the 19th instant, to Salem, Dent County, Mo., and relieve the detachment of Fifth Cavalry Missouri State Militia now stationed at that place. On being relieved by detachment of the Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers the commanding officer of detachment Fifth Cavalry Missouri State Militia now stationed at Salem will move with his command, camp and garrison equipage, to Rolla, Mo., and report for orders to his regimental commander.

By order of Col. John Morrill, commanding:

J. H. Steger,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Major-General Blunt,
Paola:

I shall be here several days and desire to see you.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Colonel Ford,
Fort Riley:

What about Indians west of you? Has regiment of infantry arrived? Will send you a pack train in few days, also horses. Make arrangements to put a post at or near old Fort Atkinson as soon as practicable. How many horses will it take to mount you? Are all the requisitions in? Send in an officer to attend to it. Answer.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.
Colonel Ford,
Fort Riley:

Concentrate all mounted men at Fort Larned. Boat load of horses for you arrived to-day; will start them out to-morrow; also pack train in two or three days. As soon as strong enough strike the Indians. Don't let them get north of you if you can help it. Will hurry up stock so you can have all your cavalry mounted in few days. Keep scouts out and watch their movements and keep me posted. You must be the judge as to the force you need to whip them. Are they committing any depredations on the road? Answer.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., March 18, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: I have the honor to report, for the information of the general commanding, scouting party under command of Lieutenant Jenkins, H. D. Janes, chief of scouts, and Sergeant Nettleton, returned to Larned and report that they found the Indian camps of the Comanches, Kiowas, and Apaches; also Little Raven's band of Arapahoes. These villages or camps have but recently come up from the line of Texas. They number in all about 1,500 lodges and 3,500 warriors. They are camped within a radius of probably thirty miles. As soon as our scouts were discovered by the Indians, telegraphing by smoke and fires commenced upon every side, and Indian pickets or scouts began to show themselves upon every hill. Two strings of horses just arrived, 100 in each string. They have been forwarded to the companies needing them most. The Third Missouri Cavalry I have sent to the front. The Second U. S. Volunteers I have distributed as follows: One company here, one at Salina, one at Ellsworth, two at Fort Zarah, and three at Fort Larned. It will take at least 200 more horses to mount my regiment and furnish teams for my artillery. I shall send all my cavalry with the expedition, except enough to establish courier-line through to Fort Larned. We are very scarce of corn at Fort Larned, and I have applied to the chief quartermaster for the privilege of purchasing some corn, about 14,000 bushels, in open market, to be delivered at Fort Larned. That amount can be purchased and delivered immediately. I shall start twelve teams to Larned in the morning loaded with ammunition, stores, and corn. That is all the teams I have at present. I shall need pack animals and pack-saddles, 200 more cavalry and artillery horses, and then I am ready to live, if necessary, on the plains with Indians most of this summer. Another regiment of cavalry would not come amiss in this district, but I can get along with what we have. I do not like to move against the Indians until I am sure of whipping them, and until I can go prepared to stay with them. A short campaign is of no use. A large body of men cannot come up on their camps without being discovered, and then a stern chase is generally a long one. If we go out and have to abandon the pursuit before catching them it only encourages them. Once on their trail we should be prepared to stay with them until they are whipped.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel and Brevet Brigadier-General, Commanding District.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., March 18, 1865.

Capt. Thomas Moses, Jr.,
Commanding Fort Larned:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 11th instant, reporting attack upon train eighty miles west of your post. The same has been forwarded to department headquarters for information of general commanding; also the receipt of report of Lieutenant Jenkins, commanding scout. The general commanding directs that you scout frequently in the direction of the Cimarron in order to keep yourself well informed of the movement of these Indians, reporting immediately any general movement among them.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

General DODGE:

T. MOONLIGHT.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., March 18, 1865.

Shagnano and Merara,
Chiefs of the Tabeguache, Colorado:

SIRS. I have this day received a letter from two prominent citizens of Colorado City, complaining of the treatment received from your people. They charge that 150 of your tribe came into town on the 15th instant and demanded ten sacks of flour, which was given them for the sake of peace and harmony; that they demanded the flour should be hauled to your camp, and they insisted the wives and families of settlers should cook for them, &c., which they refused, and justly so. You have visited me on friendly terms and on business connected with your people. I have treated you kindly and justly, and it is the intention of the Government and our Great Father at Washington to continue to do so as long as you conduct yourselves in a subordinate manner and as becomes a people to the recognized authority, just as you expect your people to obey your orders; but when you take the matter in your own hands and dictate conditions to peaceable citizens over whom you have no control then your conduct is reprehensible and punishment must follow. I am willing to overlook the past, as you have not of late been treated by the Indian Department as you should, owing to the disturbance with the Plains Indians, but should any more complaints of this kind be made I will be compelled to bring you and your tribe to an account for it. I repeat that I desire to remain on friendly terms with your people, but will resent promptly and summarily any indignity to the authority of the Government.

With esteem and friendship, I remain, yours, truly,
T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

THIBODEAUX, LA., March 19, 1865.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

SIR: In compliance with instructions received from the general commanding, I have carefully examined the country in the vicinity of La Fourche Station, on New Orleans and Opelousas Railroad, and find that on the left bank of Bayou La Fourche arable lands extend back from the bayou a distance of two and a half to three miles. The same quality of land extends down the bayou on both sides of the railroad several miles below La Fourche Station. The lands below the railroad and between La Fourche and Terre Bonne Bayous are very swampy. The route from La Fourche to Chacahoula Station, on New Orleans and Opelousas Railroad, I found passable to within about two miles of the above station. The balance of the route is swamps, which can only be crossed by small boats in a ditch running through the swamp. I found no boat at the landing, therefore had no means of crossing the swamp, as the water is from two feet to five feet deep and the bottom very boggy. Citizens in that vicinity state that after a drought of three or four months the swamp can be crossed on foot, but never on horseback, as there are two or three bayous running through it that are never fordable.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. HILDRETH,
Major Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

You will send out a scout this evening at 3 o'clock from Lexington of twenty men, under a commissioned officer, to Tabo Church. Scout up Tabo and Brush Creek toward Chatham, Ewing's, and Greenton Valley. Let this be a thorough scout upon the part of your command. I will order out a scout from here this evening to move to Davis' Creek near the Matthews farm, then move west, scouting the whole country to Hopewell and Chapel Hill, then north to Greenton, where your forces and those from this post will meet on Tuesday about noon, when they can agree upon some co-operative movement. Order your men to take out five days' rations. Have no scattering over the country to be fed.

Col. R. B. PALMER,
Hartville, Mo.:

COLONEL: Your favor of the 15th instant came duly to hand and contents noted. Everything that I can do will be done to provide full protection for your county the coming year. Authority has been obtained from the governor to organize a full company of militia for one year's service in that county. I inclose you copy of orders relating to the matter. Have the citizens all take hold and organize this company at once, and I will locate it where you suggest, at Mountain Store. When there is no enemy in or threatening the county many of the men composing the company can attend to their farms, the design being to hold and improve the county by armed occupation. It is desirable that as many of the old loyal inhabitants who have left their farms in that county be induced to join the company as possible, as it would likely result in the return of the families of such men. Give some enterprising men hold of this matter of raising the company and organize it as soon as possible.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Please lay this before the Secretary and if the change is authorized, telegraph the order to General Pope and inform me, and I will then write to him fully. By taking an early start, going light, Pope will be able at least to throw the enemy beyond the Red River, not to return again.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., March 20, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit such extracts from the daily report from this office dated March 20 as may be of importance to you. Capt. L. B. Nash, under date of Little Rock, Ark., March 8, gives the following as the latest information of the enemy's position and force: Churchill's division—McNair's brigade is composed of three regiments, numbered First, Second, and Third Consolidated Regiments, and commanded, respectively, by Colonel Cravens, 350 men; Colonel Reid, 400 men, and Colonel Williams, 400 men. This brigade is composed of the prisoners paroled at Vicksburg and Port Hudson. Tappan's brigade is composed of four regiments—one commanded by Colonel Shaver, which is now stationed at Camden, 250 men, and one by Colonel Hardy, 250 men. The commanders of the other two regiments are unknown. General Roane's brigade is composed of four regiments—Colonel Gause, 250 men; Colonel Hill, 250 men; Colonel Brooks, 250 men; Colonel Davie, 250 men. General Hawthorn's brigade is composed of four regiments—Colonel Bell commands one, 250 men. The names of the other regimental commanders unknown. The entire brigade has not more than 600 men. Major Blocher has a battalion of artillery belonging to Churchill's division, composed of three batteries, of four guns each. This division is located at Minden, except Shaver's regiment. General Polignac's division is at Shreveport. Parsons has one regiment at Camden and one at Louisville. Shelby is at Clarksville. Marmaduke's and Cabell's old commands are at Pigeon Hill. Logan is at Dooley's Ferry, on Red River. McCray, Dobbin, and Freeman are on White River. Richard Roe (scout) went up the Jackson railroad to Jackson, thence to Meridian, and thence to Canton, Miss., and returned by way of Liberty and Bayou Sara. States that the first troops he met after leaving Pass Manchac were from 50 to 100 of Griffith's command at

77 R R—VOL XLVIII, PT I
Magnolia, Miss., where there is a general hospital. There is a large steam tannery half a mile from town. At Summit there was only a squad of couriers. Hodge has been relieved of his command and ordered to Richmond, and Colonel Griffith commands the brigade, with headquarters at Whitesville, Miss. The rebels moved 17,000 pounds of bacon from Brookhaven to Mobile on the 9th. They were expecting a raid from Baton Rouge. There were no troops between Brookhaven and Jackson. Wirt Adams' command, at Jackson on the 12th instant, consisted of Sherman's [Norman's] and Scott's regiments. All other troops in that vicinity had been ordered to Forrest. There were about twelve field-pieces in Jackson not manned; they appeared to be in transit. Two of the launches previously reported, with a howitzer each, returned to Jackson, having failed to capture a gun-boat on the Mississippi as they had anticipated. There were three regiments of infantry (militia) at Meridian—Colonel O'Neal's, Smith's, and ——'s. A very large amount of commissary stores are stored there; three large buildings full. The informant saw Forrest and Chalmers' in Canton, Miss. Three brigades are there—Chalmers', Buford's, and Starke's, amounting to about 3,000; no artillery. Many of the men are absent without leave and are constantly deserting. Ross' brigade crossed the Mississippi to go home to Texas with arms and horses. Troops are still expected from the Trans-Mississippi Department. Cars run twice a week from Brookhaven to Jackson. Only hand-cars this side of that point. Only one engine and eight or ten cars south of Jackson. Only one train between Jackson and Canton. Quite an amount of rolling-stock at Meridian. Cars run on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad as far north as Tupelo, where Roddey's command is stationed. A force from the rebel gun-boats at Mobile captured a lieutenant and nine men of the Seventy-seventh U. S. Colored Infantry near the mouth of Amite River. They had been at Liberty and near Fort Adams. The officers of this force were Lieutenants McDermott and Wilkinson. They say they had not been on the Mississippi. The report from General Reynolds that Price contemplated another raid into Missouri at present seems to have no confirmation. One of Magruder's staff told Mr. Hunnicutt, a scout sent from here, that such a raid was contemplated by Magruder as soon as the grass was sufficiently grown to furnish forage for the horses, which would not be much before May. There seems to be no probability that Forrest will even attempt to join him.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

Maj. W. H. Morgan,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

Captain Bowman some time since proceeded to Saint Louis, intending to procure 2,500 horses for the command. He has done all that can be done, and notifies me to night that his requisition will be filled as soon as possible. Major, I am aware that the whole command is filled with plugs, and if you do not let my men rest the number will increase. The horses, considering their condition, have been overworked and need rest and care. Oblige me very much, so far as is compatible with the best interests of the public service, in relieving the cavalry for a time from such arduous duty. I judge from Captain Bowman's brief note that horses may soon be expected to arrive, and, of course, your escort will receive the first attention.

Hon. Thomas C. Fletcher,

Governor of Missouri, Jefferson City, Mo.:

of the counties or districts in which it should be made to apply. If there be anything further I can do, please let me know without hesitation. Everything now depends upon the firmness and vigor with which you put these measures into operation. Their success will put you in the front rank of statesmen in the West. You may rely upon me to aid you to the full extent of my ability. You occupy in this matter an unassailable position, and all parties in the State will support you in time. You will have the sympathy of the Administration and of the whole public sentiment of the country. It is my purpose to strengthen your position in the State by deferring to you in all matters regarding Missouri affairs, and by referring to you all controversies arising in Missouri in which citizens or communities are concerned. My object in doing this is explained in the following extracts from a letter to the President. You will see the force of the reasons, and I don't doubt will appreciate them. Please write me fully and frankly on all matters which relate to this, or any other question in which I can aid you. You may feel assured of my hearty sympathy and co-operation:

It is of course desirable that, as there are now no organized forces of the enemy in Missouri, the General Government be relieved from all concern in the civil affairs of the State, and be required only to defend it against armed invasion. So long as U. S. troops remain in Missouri and interfere in any manner in the affairs of the State, they will be a constant source of embarrassment and a difficult obstacle to the renewal of civil administration; their presence alone, in their present attitude, will subject the General Government to a continuance of appeals and protests from the people of Missouri, and it will not be found possible to avoid more or less interference with civil affairs in the State through the military arm of the General Government. So long as the troops remain, and so long as martial law obtains, the people will feel a constant desire to appeal from the State executive and the civil laws to the military authorities and to the General Government, and no step will be taken toward a resumption of local civil administration. The people of Missouri will never learn to conduct their own affairs whilst they find an appeal from their State officers to the officers of the General Government. Remove that source of difficulty and they will soon learn that they must depend upon themselves and their State government as their final resort for justice. * * * There is a loyal State executive and civil officers and a large loyal majority in the State, and I cannot see why it is not abundantly able to settle all controversies between its own citizens, without referring them to the Administration at Washington. So long as these appeals are listened to at Washington, just that long they will continue to be made and the affairs of Missouri to remain unsettled. The best thing, I think, which can now be done is to leave the people of Missouri to settle their own affairs, only guaranteeing them protection from the invasion of armed forces of the rebels. This is what I desire and propose to do, with your approval, and as I shall do nothing whatever to interfere in any manner with the civil affairs of the State, or with its citizens, and I consider it very unwise to do so, I trust that all appeals to Your Excellency, requiring such action from me, be referred where I shall refer them, and where, I think, they ought to be referred, viz., to the State authorities. These authorities will never command the respect of the people until it is found that they, and not the General Government, are the final appeal of the people of Missouri.

I am, governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

General McNeil:

Postmaster informs me the mail has been ordered by way of Saint Louis. This makes it needless to escort stage from Pleasant Hill to Independence. Bushwhackers are gathering in large bodies. Yesterday a scouting party from Hickman Mills down the Little Blue had a brush with a few. To-day an escort from Hickman Mills was fired upon. As high as twenty-one have been met on the Pleasant Hill road by infantry. They kept out of range. Can I expect any cavalry to assist me? Company E, First Missouri State Militia, should leave Hickman Mills to-morrow, but I shall retain them a day or two.

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel, &c.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., March 20, 1865.

Dear General:

Your favor of the 14th came duly to hand last evening and I hasten to reply. My last scout from Price's camp left there about the 10th of last month. The information brought was to the effect, so far as relates to Missouri and bushwhacking, that all the old bands were designing and preparing to return with increased numbers. The army under Price was at that time scattered along the Red River for sixty or seventy miles, and the plans of the leaders, as near as could be ascertained, were to resist any advance up Red River or into Texas with their main force, and send all the bands of bushwhackers into Missouri to occupy the troops here. The rebel army west of the river is large and in good condition generally, although it has not been paid for more than a year, and would be able to do good service if their cause was not failing so fast in the East. My command and that of Colonel Harrison at Fayetteville have killed fully 100 bushwhackers in Northern Arkansas during the last six weeks; many of them were from Missouri and waiting for grass to grow before going farther north. After they have got fairly into the State this year, say about the 1st of June, the whole military force of the State should be called out, and they should be at once hunted and driven and killed until all leave the State, and not be allowed to remain until leaves fall, as has been the case heretofore. As long as they can come in when the leaves put forth and remain until the leaves fall, they will continue to come. I shall resist their movements north as much as I can and drive back all possible, and hope you will be able to kill the balance. Shelby has had some four or five spies up here lately. Two of them were killed, one captured, and I expect two have gone back or are concealed here now. One of the men told a secesh woman near here that Shelby designed to come up this spring, but I do not attach much importance to this information, and think that a large force cannot move north until another crop matures. I think we may all look for the bushwhackers to make as great an effort as they have ever made; but if the people will stand up to us we can soon put them down and clear the State.

Thanking you for your kind congratulations and expressions of good will, I remain, yours, truly,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General.
His Excellency Thomas C. Fletcher,
Governor of Missouri:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to report very satisfactory progress in the recruitment and organization of the volunteer militia companies in this district, as authorized by General Orders, No. 3, current series, headquarters State of Missouri. Veteran officers and soldiers have taken hold of the enterprise in many localities, and most of the companies will be composed chiefly of men who have been at the front. I am quite satisfied it will be necessary to authorize the organization of additional companies, and have already granted authority to recruit for others, subject always to the approval of yourself and the department commander. My volunteer troops are now reduced to less than one small regiment. You will readily perceive the necessity for more troops from some quarter. I have the honor to suggest that you grant me authority to raise one more company in each of the following counties: Boone, Audrain, Howard, Randolph, Chariton, Linn, Livingston, Clinton, Clay, Platte, and Buchanan. If we can succeed in recruiting these companies for, say, a period of eight months, it is much better than to detail militia. They will be needed, and the earlier they are ready for duty the better for us. All these companies should be armed with the best cavalry arms. Will the State be able to furnish such? I am pressing upon different counties the importance of purchasing for their militia Spencer rifles and Colt revolvers. A few will do so, and the companies themselves in some instances will invest their private funds in arms for the summer's work. There is a good deal of apprehension on the part of the people that we are to have serious trouble, and at an early day. Let us be ready to meet it. I am daily strengthening the civil authorities. I have said to each circuit judge that I was merely his aide-de-camp; that offenders must be punished through the civil courts; that we (of the military) would aid in the complete restoration of the supremacy of the civil law. I have given circuit attorneys to understand that they must take hold of the thieves. We will help catch and guard, if necessary, but they must try and punish. I suppose the convention will immediately abolish the militia major-generals. I shall interpose no objection, and while I remain in Missouri will give you my best endeavors in the work of restoration.

Waiting your early reply touching the organization of the additional companies of militia, as heretofore indicated, I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Hon. Arnold Krekel,
President Constitutional Convention, Saint Louis, Mo.:

DEAR SIR: I notice by the published proceedings of your honorable body that an ordinance for the organization of the Missouri Militia has been introduced and made the special order for an early day. I am glad the convention has taken hold of the matter, and trust action thereon will not be delayed. I trust you will pardon me, one of your constituents, for making a few suggestions touching this important
The militia law recently enacted by the legislature has its defects. The old law contained many, chief of which were the election of its company officers and exemption from service by the payment of money. Can the convention do better at this time than to resurrect the Enrolled Missouri Militia, with all its regimental and battalion organizations, with their officers, from the grave to which the legislature consigned it by section No. 26 of the new militia law, and then perfect as well as possible the old organizations by the immediate abolition of the system of electing company officers and the exemption from service by the payment of money? Let the governor appoint the company, as well as the field officers, and require every able-bodied citizen, white or black, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five to be enrolled and organized and you will have radically improved the resurrected Enrolled Missouri Militia. The old organization could be continued and filled to the maximum by additions from the class formerly exempted by the payment of money. The governor could vacate the commissions of objectionable officers and appoint those more worthy and competent. Commissaries of exemption appointed for each county could, with the aid of the regimental officers, soon perfect rolls of all subject to militia duty, and our people would be saved much of the vexation and interruption of business that an entirely new enrollment would inevitably cause. The Enrolled Militia have rendered the State and country much valuable and honorable service. They have struck hard and successful blows for liberty and Union; they have at times been banged about, dragged from their homes in seed time and harvest, summer and winter, in and out of season, and have never been found wanting when a pinch has come. The proposition to have no higher military grade than that of brigadier-general is a good one, and three for the entire State is sufficient. One north and two south of the Missouri River can as well discharge all the necessary duties as a greater number. I trust it will not become necessary to make details from the militia the present year. The volunteer militia companies authorized for this district are rapidly filling up with the returning veterans of the Missouri State Militia and volunteer Missouri regiments now being mustered out. Many counties are paying a liberal bounty to encourage these home organizations for the extermination of bushwhackers and the protection of loyalty. I believe that the people generally of North Missouri are at present more determined than ever before to unite vigorously for the putting down of outlaws, the restoration of the supremacy of civil law, tranquillity, and good order. To secure a consummation so devoutly to be wished requires the hearty co-operation of citizens with the soldiery. Troops hindered or unaided by the citizens in counties where the bushwhackers most do congregate can never exterminate the villains. If your convention could by ordinance change the hearts and consciences of the rebels in most of the counties bordering on the Missouri River you would very materially aid in the restoration of quiet to Missouri. When Jim Jackson and company are harbored and their movements concealed within sight of county towns, it indicates a pretty strong sympathy, at least, with the bushwhacking fraternity; and when a squad of soldiers who have, through storm and mud, day and night, week in and out, been on the hunt after the villains happen to come upon them camped snugly and comfortably in the dwelling or barn of a first family, and then and there in their righteous indignation and wrath inflict summary punishment upon the guilty, and order a warm breakfast for themselves, volumes of complaints will be speedily filed in my headquarters against the outrageous soldiers, but not one word against the bushwhackers ever reaches me from that neighborhood. I shall endeavor to punish all wrong, whether committed under butternut or blue covers, and shall most cheerfully and earnestly aid the civil authorities in the arrest, trial, and punishment of offenders, as provided by law.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

LAFAYETTE HEAD,
Indian Agent, Conejos, Colo. Ter.:

DEAR SIR: I send you a communication directed to Colorado and other chiefs of the Utah Indians now in the vicinity of Colorado City. I sincerely hope you will make it your special business to attend to it at once. Something should be done by the Indian Department for these Indians. I have sent to the commanding officer at Camp Fillmore a duplicate of the same communication, with instructions to have it properly interpreted to the chiefs, and desired him to confer with you on the subject before taking any steps if possible, and at all times on business of this matter. It is my intention to be friendly to these tribes, and if a war is forced upon us with them it will be their own fault. This I know can be prevented by judicious management, and you, as the agent, should exercise vigilance and sound discretion. I trust the matter in your hands and that of the commanding officer of Camp Fillmore.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

GENERAL: Inclosed you will find a proclamation of the President of the United States in reference to persons dwelling in foreign territory furnishing arms and munitions of war to hostile Indians within the limits of the United States. The major-general commanding directs that you issue the necessary orders to prevent this nefarious traffic, causing all half-breeds or any foreign subjects found in the Indian country engaged in trade with the Indians to be arrested, confiscating their goods and bringing them speedily before a military court. At all times you are authorized to employ military force against any enemy in carrying out the spirit of the proclamation and the orders issued under these instructions.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., March 21, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 21st day of March, 1865: A deserter estimates the number of guns at Shreveport at eighty; at Natchitoches, ten, and at Alexandria twelve. Mamiaduke's and Cabell's old troops are reported at the mouth of D'Arbonne Bayou, near Monroe, La. It is reported that the heavy artillery is being moved from Alexandria to Grand Ecore. A deserter who came from a point near Fort De Russy reports no troops there except a few scouts. The people are still expecting the U. S. gun-boats up Red River. From all sources are reports of continued and increasing demoralization in the rebel ranks.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. Jackson,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.
(In absence of Capt. S. M. Eaton.)

HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, March 21, 1865.

The following is a statement made by Henry Malone and Samuel Wolf, C. S. Navy, who deserted from an expedition that left Mobile six weeks since. The expedition was commanded by Lieutenant McDermott and Lieutenant Wilkinson, C. S. Navy, with about forty-five men of the navy and four boats. They placed their boats on cars and went to Meridian, from thence to Jackson, to the West Pearl River, and struck the Jackson railroad; placed their boats on the cars and went to Brookhaven, where we placed the boats on wagons and went to Woodville; from thence to Buffalo Bayou, which empties into the Mississippi River; sailed down to within three miles of its mouth, remained there that night and returned to the head of the bayou the next morning; placed the boats on wagons and returned to Woodville; from thence to Liberty bridge, on the Amite River. From this place one boat and six men returned to Mobile. The remaining boats sailed down as far as Goss Mills and remained there two days; placed the boats on wagons and took them to Blood River; from thence into the Tickfaw River. At 12 o’clock that night captured a schooner, named Barnes, from New Orleans, with six or eight bales of cotton aboard. An officer and six men were placed aboard of the schooner, who carried her up the Tickfaw River into the Blood River, with instructions to wait there for the remaining party. Henry Malone was one of the detail.

The following is the statement of Samuel Wolf: The remaining party sailed into Lake Maurepas and captured the schooner James Stockton at the mouth of the Amite River. The schooner was half a mile from the shore. They were not hailed as they approached, nor did they see any person on deck, and neither officer nor man came on deck until the surrender. They fought about half an hour, the men firing from the hold of the vessel. Three were slightly wounded of the Union soldiers; Lieutenant McDermott and three men were killed of the Confederates and two wounded. The vessel was then surrendered into the hands of the Confederates. The prisoners were placed ashore and supposed to have been sent to Mobile. The schooner was then carried up the Tickfaw River into the Blood River, discharged of her cargo, and burned. The schooner Barnes was then released. Two of the boats then started for Springfield, from thence to Haynesville, and from thence to Amite Station, with instructions to wait for the remaining boat. The remaining boat started for Springfield the next day, and while in Springfield buried Lieutenant McDermott and one man named Bernard. They then went up a bayou three miles to a bridge, and placed the boats on wagons and marched eight miles toward Amite Station. During the night Henry Malone and Samuel Wolf deserted the so-called Confederate navy.

HDQRS. CAV. FORCES, MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., March 21, 1865.

Brig. Gen. T. J. Lucas,
Commanding Separate Brigade:

GENERAL: Inclosed please find order directing the First Florida and Second Maine Cavalry to report to you for duty. You will organize your command into a division of two brigades, of three regiments each. Immediately upon the reception of this you will reply, designating the regiments you desire to compose the brigades and names of the brigade commanders. The order organizing the division will then be issued from these headquarters. Horses sufficient to finish the remount of your command will be sent over at the earliest practicable moment. Dispose of your regiments in such a manner as to make the two brigades as nearly equal in size as possible. Send tri-monthly reports, rosters, reports of arms, ammunition, and accouterments on hand and required, pertaining to the First Florida and Second Maine Cavalry, at the earliest possible moment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. H. Grierson,
Brevet Major-General.

General Pope:

The Department of Arkansas has been added to your military division. The order will be telegraphed and General Grant will send instructions.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

City Point, Va., March 21, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. Pope,
Commanding Military Division of the Missouri:

Now that Arkansas has been added to your command, I think you will be able to concentrate force enough to take the offensive against Price where he is, or at least meet him before he makes any progress northward. I have not given the matter sufficient study to say how this should be done, but leave the details for you. I presume the great difficulty you will labor under will be getting your supplies in season to take the offensive. I have directed that all new organizations being raised in Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, and Wisconsin be ordered to report to you. This will give you some additional force, but I am unable to say how much. Among the new troops thus added to your command there will undoubtedly be many veteran soldiers. But it can hardly be expected that they will equal for the field those now in service. I would suggest, therefore, putting these new troops in garrison as far as possible, and relieving the older troops for the front. Your present Missouri force I presume you will want to keep where they are. If you can break up Price where he is you may find it practicable to make a campaign in Northeast Texas, subsisting entirely off the country. If you can do so it is highly desirable. It would let out thousands of negroes who would go into our Army, and many white people who are held in that country against their consent. I do not know the number of men Canby may have taken from Reynolds recently, and cannot therefore tell exactly what force you will find in Arkansas to operate with. But there has been left what was deemed sufficient to hold the line of the Arkansas against all the enemy are supposed to have to bring against it. For an advance, therefore, or to follow the enemy if he should advance, you must be able to raise quite an army from that quarter. Movements now in progress may end in such results within a few weeks so as to enable me to send you forces enough for any campaign you may want to make, even to the overrunning of the whole of Texas. If so, and you want them, they will be promptly sent. Write me as soon as you can the movable force, about, you can have, with your present resources, and what you propose; also what you would propose doing if, say, 25,000 additional troops could be added.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 21, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
General-in-Chief, City Point, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to transmit inclosed Special Orders, No. 15,* which is designed to carry out the purposes set forth in my letter of March 3 to the governor of Missouri and his proclamation of the 7th instant. The only apprehension I have about the success of these measures is another invasion or raid by Price from the direction of Arkansas. All indications point to such an attempt, General Dodge having been informed by young Price, who took the oath of allegiance some eighteen months ago, that it was certain such an attempt would be made. Our scouts and spies from Arkansas concur in this belief. I do not doubt from all I can learn that there are troops enough in Arkansas to prevent such a raid if they were properly equipped and posted. General Reynolds writes me that most of his cavalry is dismounted and that he is on a defensive footing. The term of service of the Missouri State Militia is about expiring, and we will be left in Missouri with only four or five regiments, mostly infantry. I need not say that the proper defense of Missouri from invasion from the direction of Arkansas is on the Arkansas River. I would be glad to be informed whether I am responsible for protecting Missouri against such a raid or whether I am to trust it to General Reynolds. In the former case it is manifest that, as I have no control over the forces in Arkansas and cannot regulate their position or movements, I must require a much larger force in Southern Missouri. I cannot, of course, safely rely upon operations by the forces in Arkansas after the unexplainable inaction of General Steele during Price's raid of last year. Either the troops in Arkansas should be placed under my command or troops sent me here to station in Southern Missouri. If this raid be made it will begin soon, and we ought to be prepared. I think it proper to lay these facts and suggestions before you, as they seem to me to indicate the best method of defending Missouri with the smallest force, and I have neither the desire nor the purpose to ask for other troops which are so much needed elsewhere. If all the troops in Arkansas and Missouri were in one command it is probable that there would be a sufficient force for the purpose. If not, in view of what occurred last year, preparations ought immediately to be made to defend Missouri against invasion, irrespective of any force in Arkansas. I wrote quite fully on this subject on the 6th instant to General Halleck, but have received no reply, and as the time is near at hand when some steps ought to be taken in the matter, I write again and respectfully request that I may be informed what I am to expect.

* See p. 1202.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Fourth Cavalry Missouri State Militia. Company B, Fourth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, time expires to-day and the officer in charge turned in all ordnance to proceed to Warrensburg, Mo., by train. The Osage and Maries County Militia, under General Orders, No. 3, is only partly armed on order that I issued. Brig. Gen. JOHN McNEIL,

Four companies Forty-fifth Missouri Infantry are ordered to report to you at once.

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 21, 1865.

General D. M. DRAPER,
Mexico, Mo.:

GENERAL: It seems a burning shame that Jim Jackson and company are permitted to roam leisurely through Boone, Randolph, Howard, and Chariton Counties, shooting and hanging citizens. Can you not organize a half dozen scouts and follow the villain until he is dead? I know it is not an easy thing to do, but if with the force we now have and the limited number of bushwhackers yet on duty, and before the leaves come out we can't exterminate this gang, what will become of us when the bushwhacking campaign fairly opens? I am fearful the Ninth are too indolent; too little inclined to pitch into hard work or hard fighting. Stir up their pure minds. Don't allow them to rot away at posts or to spend their time foraging. Let their supplies be furnished from here, and keep every able bodied soldier in the brush. I have ordered Captain Reed to move from Brunswick to Salisbury, where he can devote the remainder of his term of service to the vigorous muster out of his bushwhacking neighbors. You can keep at least 200 men on the constant move. A scout sent out for a few hours or a day and a night accomplish but little. Occupy and possess the Perche Hills country back and forth until the friends of Jim Jackson wish he would die to relieve them of the presence of your troops.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., March 21, 1865.

Herrera Grande, Fecundo, and the other Navajo chief, who were sent as delegates on the 15th of February, 1865, to the old Navajo country to tell Manuelito and other Indians still in that country that they must go to the Bosque, came back yesterday, and this morning came to department headquarters to report the result of their mission. His Excellency Governor Connelly, Col. James L. Collins, Hon. José Manuel Gallegos, Col. Nelson H. Davis, assistant inspector-general, U. S. Army, and Lieutenant-Colonel Eaton, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, were present when Herrera made his report, which was made in Navajo to Jesus, the interpreter, and was rendered in English by His Excellency the governor. It was as follows:

Herrera Grande says three days and a half after he left Fort Wingate he got to Zuñi, where he met Manuelito. They embraced, when Herrera told Manuelito he had come to see him. Manuelito said his elder brother was the commander, and it would be better to go where his brother was. Next day Herrera started for the rancheria, and was overtaken at Ojo del Venado that afternoon by Manuelito, who had staid back at Zuñi for awhile. That night in talking with Manuelito the latter said he would be willing to go to the Bosque, but his animals were poor. Herrera said it was not his orders for him to go, but the commander's orders. They camped together, and the next day at 3 p.m. they arrived at the camp of Manuelito. Next day after Manuelito sent out to call in those who were absent. Many had scattered owing to a recent attack of the Utes. They came in that evening, in all about fifty men, women, and children. This is about one-half of Manuelito's band. Then Manuelito brought in his stock. There were about fifty horses and forty sheep. He said, "Here is all I have in the world. See what a trifling amount. You see how poor they are. My children are eating roots" (palmillas). Manuelito said the stock was so poor it could not travel to the Bosque now. Herrera said he was not authorized to extend the time set for him to come in. The two men who went with Herrera joined the latter in saying that it was no use to discuss the matter, that if they did not go to the Bosque worse would come to them. That they need not remain behind thinking to have wealth in stock as they used to have; that they would lose not only their stock if they staid, but their lives; that the dead could not be called back, and they had better think of this. The women and children, seeing that Manuelito was not disposed to come, commenced to cry, as they seemed to foresee the consequences of remaining behind. This conversation took place before the arrival of Manuelito's brother. But he soon came, when he said that his animals were too poor, and he wanted to remain. After this conversation Herrera said it was no use to remain longer, that he had delivered his message and would now go back to the Bosque. They then asked for three months to get their stock in order so that they could go. Manuelito said then upon reflection he concluded not to go; that his god and his mother lived in the West, and he would not leave them; that there was a tradition that his people should never cross the Rio Grande, the Rio San Juan, or the Rio Colorado; that he also could not pass three mountains, and particularly he could not leave the Chusca Mountains, his native hills; that his intention was to remain; that he was there to suffer all the consequences of war or famine; that now he had nothing to lose but his life, and that they could come and take whenever they pleased, but he would not move; that he had never done any wrong to the Americans or the Mexicans; that he had never robbed, but had lived upon his own resources; that if he were killed innocent blood would be shed. Herrera then said to him: “I have done all I could for your benefit; have given you the best advice. I now leave you as if your grave were already made.”

Here they parted and Herrera and his companions then came to Zuni, where five Navajoes overtook them, some of whom had heard what had been said in council, and told them that a good many Navajoes would come in and that the commander at the fort should be told of it, so as to be prepared for them and not treat them as enemies; that they would try to be in in fifteen days, but the snow was deep, and if they failed they would send in runners to tell the reason. Herrera then came to Fort Wingate, and this was the end of his mission.

Jesus, the interpreter, then said that Manuelito told him while the party was at Manuelito’s rancheria as follows: “Last summer when I had a talk with you at Cañon Bonita I told you I would come in, but I told you falsely. Now I tell you what is true. I will not go, and it is no use in killing up horses in coming for me. I will never go voluntarily.”

Herrera was then asked by General Carleton how many Navajoes he thought were still back in the old Navajo country; how many of all who remain west of the Rio Grande.

Answer. From our calculations there are now six small parties. The first one is beyond the Colorado Chiquito and consists of fifty souls all told, men, women, and children. They are mostly all ladrões. The next is Manuelito’s band. It lives this side of Colorado Chiquito, about sixty miles beyond Zuni. It consists of about 100 souls, of all ages and sexes. There are about twenty-five warriors. Not over twenty-five of this party say they will stay in the old Navajo country, but will go to the Bosque. The third party is at a place called Queletes, south of Fort Canby. That band consists of sixty or seventy. They are living there on piñons. They had considerable stock, but the Utes have recently taken it. They now live entirely on nuts and roots. The fourth party lives at Pueblo Colorado. This party is poor and lives also on piñons. This party has 100 or more souls, with from thirty to thirty-five men who could bear arms. The fifth party is in Cañon de Chelly. This party numbers sixty persons, men, women, and children; has about twenty men. There is a sixth party at the Mesa de Calabasa, which has some stock, say 2,000 head of sheep and 100 horses. This party is friendly with the Pai Utes and numbers about 100. This makes 480 in all at the outside. We think there are less.

Question by General Carleton. In your judgment, how many of these will voluntarily come in?

Answer. We cannot tell how many, but probably seventy or eighty, or perhaps more.

Here the interview ended, and on the 22d day of March Herrera and party left for the Bosque Redondo.

Col. J. K. MIZNER, Commanding Cavalry on Board Transports, Baton Rouge, La.:

COLONEL: You are hereby directed to proceed with your command to Carrollton, La., without delay.

B. H. GRIERSON, Brevet Major-General.

Headquarters Southern Division of Louisiana, New Orleans, March 22, 1865.

Brig. Gen. R. A. CAMERON, Commanding District of La Fourche:

I am instructed by Brigadier-General Sherman to ask you to refer to the letter written you in August last (a copy of which is inclosed*) relative to pickets on Lake Palourde and the road skirting Bayou L'Ours. It is the opinion of General Sherman that if this system of pickets and patrols were carried out there could be no invasion of the country between Bayou Bœuf and Bayou L'Ours without due appraisal. A picket of one corporal and three privates at the junction of Bayou Bœuf and Lake Palourde is worse than useless, and does not carry out the idea intended to be conveyed in the letter referred to. Such a picket could be easily captured, and no one would be any wiser for it until too late. The general suggests that you send a gun-boat into Lake Palourde and have a thorough reconnaissance made of the shore, with a view of learning more of the topography of said shore and landing places.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. J. MALONEY,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 22, 1865.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to transmit inclosed* for your information printed copy of a correspondence between Governor Fletcher of Missouri and myself, on the subject of an attempt to restore civil administration in portions, at least, of the State of Missouri, His Excellency's proclamation based thereon, and my instructions to the military in the case. I also transmit duplicate copies of these papers for the use of His Excellency the President. Of course, there will be found a few men of the extremists in this State (who live, however, principally in the cities and large towns) who prefer the reign of military force, because and so long as they can use it against their opponents; but I have talked freely with men of character and influence from the interior of the State, and especially those members of the radical State convention from the most disturbed of the interior counties, and have found them almost without exception in favor of the effort to do away with martial law. They believe that their own active exertions, sustained and aided by military force for a time, will be amply sufficient to defend themselves and secure the execution of civil law. Of course, the few who are opposed to any attempt to restore the dominion of civil law will make the greatest clamor in public. Those who are in favor of the change are not likely to be as active and demonstrative, especially at Washington, as the malcontents. It is the natural misfortune of the Administration rarely to be able to hear any party except the "opposition" from departments so remote as Missouri. You will perceive from my order inclosed that the whole responsibility of inaugurating measures to secure a return to civil administration is devolved upon the governor of the State, who is entirely in harmony with my views on the subject, and as he is the governor nominated and elected by the radical party, among a few of whom only is any opposition made, it is not likely that any step will be taken not approved by a majority of that party. Any clamor or influence brought to bear at Washington by extreme members of the radical party, can therefore be safely referred for action to Governor Fletcher, who is the representative of that party, and whose course will be guided doubtless by the opinions of a majority of that party. It is my own purpose to refer all complaints, protests, or objections against any steps taken to carry out the policy marked out in the inclosed papers to Governor Fletcher, who, sustained by a majority of his own party, and by all other parties in the State,

* See Fletcher to Pope, March 2; Pope to Fletcher, March 3; proclamation by the governor of Missouri, March 7, and General Orders, No. 2, Military Division of the Missouri, March 10, pp. 1060, 1070, 1115, 1141.
is not likely to meet any formidable opposition. At all events, neither the Government at Washington nor the military authorities of this department can be held justly censurable for merely aiding to carry out the policy of the governor of Missouri, supported by a majority of the radical party which elected him, and by all other political parties in the State. The whole question is resolved into controversies about State policy between citizens of Missouri, and can safely be left to themselves to settle.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. FIRST DIV., 7TH ARMY CORPS,
Little Rock, Ark., March 22, 1865.

By order of Brig. Gen. F. Salomon:

A. S. KENDRICK,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, March 22, 1865. (Received 3 p. m.)

Major-General Pope:

The rebel army in the Trans-Mississippi are at Camden, Shreveport, and various other points along Red River. I hear of no movements among them. Maxey and Cooper are making an effort to reorganize their forces at Doaksville and Boggy Depot. There has been no force on the Arkansas River; navigation has been uninterrupted to the present time. I have sent scouts to Red River and will advise you of every movement of the enemy.

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General.

Fort Smith, March 22, 1865. (Received 9 p. m.)

JOSEPH McC. BELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have forwarded your dispatch to Major-General Reynolds by messenger to the end of telegraph now completed, to within forty miles of this place. Expect to be in telegraphic communication with Little Rock by the 27th.

Brigadier-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 22, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT;
Commanding Armies of the United States:

GENERAL: The undersigned delegates of the Cherokee Nation, duly appointed by authority of the national council to look after the interests of our people in the city of Washington, being informed that an effort is being made to get the Indian Territory attached to the Department of the Missouri and Kansas, respectfully request the change asked for be not made. We are all entirely satisfied to remain under the command of Major-General Reynolds, in the Department of Arkan-
When heretofore attached to Kansas our cattle and corn have been stolen and our country ravished under the auspices of the authorities sent to protect us, and we greatly fear that if we are again connected with that department our people will be still further impoverished by the same kind of misrule. We further request that Maj. Gen. James G. Blunt be not again placed in command in our country.

Yours, &c.,

JNO. ROSS,
Principal Chief.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, March 22, 1865.

All officers are hereby strictly prohibited from interfering in any way with trains sent out from this post by the depot quartermaster either going out or returning. Want of transportation is no excuse for a violation of this order, and any officer at any post in this department who interferes with such trains in any way, other than rendering assistance when necessary, will be promptly dealt with, and it is the duty of all commanding officers to report any violation of this order immediately to these headquarters.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., March 22, 1865.

By order of Col. John Morrill, commanding:

PLEASANT HILLS, MO., March 22, 1865.

Colonel HARDING,
Kansas City:

Captain Peery has returned from scout. He brought in four horses and equipments captured from bushwhackers. Had three or four spirited skirmishes. He destroyed some bushwhacker harbors and ordered to this place a number of the worst families. He scouted mostly in the Sni Hills. He says that nearly all the people living in that section of the country seem to be friends and supporters of the bushwhackers. I will send more particulars by mail.

A. W. MULLINS,
Major.
Headquarters District of North Missouri,
Macon, Mo., March 22, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

Major: I have the honor to report that with but slight exception all is quiet in this district. What troops I have are kept busily employed scouting through the river counties. Jim Jackson and company are roaming through Boone, Callaway, and Howard Counties. They are chiefly engaged in plundering and murdering negroes. They have hung two negroes in Boone and one in Callaway County within the last few days. I have 200 men on the move day and night after the fiends. We have killed two of the gang of late. It seems strange, I know, that this villain should go so long without being caught, but did the general commanding know the country and the people as well as Jim Jackson does, he would readily discover how it is that a small party can thus elude the strictest vigilance. I am now organizing a Jim Jackson exterminating corps, and hope to muster out a few of the rascals by that means. A few brave, determined soldiers, stimulated by private rewards offered by citizens, go into the Blackfoot country to-morrow, sworn not to return without the head of the monster in a charger. The volunteer militia companies being organized under the governor's General Orders, No. 3, are in some localities progressing very well, but in others only moderately. The volunteer force of the district is now very small and altogether too limited for the safety of the public property, thoroughfares and their appointments, and the duty of killing bushwhackers required at my hands. The people generally in that portion of the district south of the Hannibal and Saint Joseph Railroad are apprehensive of more serious trouble than they have ever experienced before, and I can but advise the most thorough preparation for trouble there by insuring quiet. The civil authorities are generally endeavoring to discharge their duty. I have advised judges that I am simply their aide-de-camp; that we will catch and guard thieves if necessary, while they must try and punish. We don't mean to have bushwhackers brought in for trial at all.

I have the honor to be, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., March 23, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 23d day of March, 1865: Capt. Thomas J. Abel reports from Helena, Ark., under date of the 15th instant, that the number of rebel troops within that district does not exceed 1,200. The rebel Colonel Dobbin is reported fifty miles west of Helena with 400 men, under orders from Kirby Smith to march south of the Arkansas River. The rebel Colonel Forrest is said to be 100 miles east of Helena, in Mississippi, with a force variously estimated at from 300 to 600. Reports from Vicksburg indicate no new movements on the part of Forrest. From all points on both banks of the Mississippi rebel forces are reported quiet. A dispatch received this day from Lieutenant Curtiss, Baton Rouge, states:

I learn from what I consider good authority that General Kirby Smith has received orders to cross his entire available command to the east bank of the Mississippi, supposed for the purpose of co-operating with General Johnston.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

SPECIAL ORDERS,
War Dept., Adjt. General's Office,
No. 141.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 30.
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,

I. The local superintendent of freedmen at posts within this department will provide and keep a registry of all freed male and female persons (except enlisted men) above the age of twelve years within the limits of their respective posts, which shall exhibit name, age, and place and character of employment. Every head of a family will state the number of children in the household under twelve years of age, and employment, if any. Upon registry being made each person shall be furnished with a certificate, good for three months, which shall show the date of registry and place of employment.

II. All able-bodied freed persons will be required to labor and support themselves by some legitimate employment, and unless satisfactory evidence is adduced at time of registry that they are so employed the superintendent will cause them to be hired to lessees of plantations or remove them to the freedmen's farms and require them to labor, under existing regulations. In no case will idleness or vagrancy be permitted, and the Government will not be charged with the expense of supporting such persons within the limits of camps, towns, or cities.

III. All officers of the Government and citizens employing freed persons are required to notify the superintendent of freedmen of their respective localities of the discharge from service of any freed person employed by them, to the end that such superintendent may require them to obtain immediate employment or hire them for service as herein provided. Citizens are requested to report all cases of vagrancy or of persons without visible means of support to the superintendent, for his action.

IV. Commanding officers of posts who are charged with its execution will cause this order to be promulgated upon its receipt, and will require registry of all freed persons, as herein provided, within ten days after publication; and they will thereafter exercise means to prevent violations or evasions of this order. Any freed person found without the certificate herein designated will be turned over to the superintendent of freedmen to be disposed of.

Major-General Pope,
Comdg. Military Division of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: One section of the Second Kansas Battery is at Fort Scott, the other two sections here. I earnestly desire to have the section at Fort Scott ordered here. I have only one battery besides the two sections of the Second Kansas, which, in my opinion, is not enough. See General Orders, No. 15, War Department, 1864.

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Fort Smith, March 23, 1865.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, March 23, 1865.

Major-General Pope,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

The reports from Cimarron on the south and Platte on the north routes show that the Indians are making extensive preparations for war. Colonel Ford moved out today with all his cavalry, some 1,200, to Fort Larned; from thence he moves south to strike Indians on Cimarron. I see no very good prospect of moving north from Laramie unless we have better luck getting troops there than we have had thus far. The officers in charge of the regiments marching north I am confident have done and are doing all in their power to push on. High water, deep snows, and cold weather have retarded their progress.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 23, 1865—12:45 p. m.

Major-General Dodge,
Fort Leavenworth:

I shall leave here for Little Rock on Sunday. You had probably best return as soon as you get through your business. Will it not be well to take some steps to keep the stage route secure between Warrensburg and Kansas City?

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans., March 23, 1865. (Received 3:40 p. m.)

Major-General Pope:

If I send the Forty-eighth Wisconsin, now on the way to Saint Louis, to Fort Scott, and relieve cavalry for duty on the border, would it not be just as available from that point for anything you have in contemplation as to send it to Rolla? The trouble in Central District is we have no cavalry there; all gone or going out of service. Am going to Kansas City to-morrow to look after those matters.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans., March 23, 1865. (Received 3.45 p.m.)

Major-General Pope:

General Mitchell telegraphs most terrible storm on the plains and large fire at Fort Kearny; burnt stables and all the hay. The garrison was saved by superhuman efforts of troops. This is a hard blow for our stock. The cavalry is snowed in and water-bound all along the road. The elements are evidently partial to the Indians.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans., March 23, 1865. (Received 3.45 p.m.)

Major-General Pope:

Have you received anything about headquarters? Please make an exchange when you get to Little Rock for Fifteenth Kansas Cavalry. I would suggest that rest of Third Wisconsin be sent here and another small regiment to replace it. This will bring the Third Wisconsin together and put the Fifteenth Kansas out of the State.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

STATE OF MISSOURI, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Jefferson City, March 23, 1865.

General Pope:

GENERAL: Yours of the 20th is acknowledged with unfeigned satisfaction and pleasure. The frankness of spirit and the sincerity of tone characterizing your letter are gratifying to me beyond the assurance they convey of personal comity between you and myself. They bespeak and are an earnest of that future harmony of action between the national and State authorities which is so essential to the restoration of order in Missouri. And it is therefore for my State, more than myself, that I thank you for what you have said in your letter of the 20th, and the manner in which you have said it. Rest assured that nothing shall ever be wanting on my part to assist, second, and strengthen your efforts in any way possible. As a citizen and native of Missouri, all my interests are centered here, and I can appreciate fully the importance of the services you have rendered in this crisis in the history of our State by your suggestions to the President which you have made, and in your reply to my inquiry and your general order last issued. I have assurances from every part of the State that thousands of persons who have heretofore given no assistance whatever to the cause of the Union, of peace, and of quiet will actively

Brig. Gen. J. McNEIL,
Warrensburg:

I ordered the Forty-fifth Missouri Infantry to report to you. What about trouble on mail line and railroad? Can not you arrange so as to make it safe?

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Bvt. Brig. Gen. JAMES H. FORD,
Commanding District of Upper Arkansas, Fort Riley:

GENERAL: Since your dispatch of the 20th I have forwarded you 300 horses, fifty more than you called for. A train of twenty-five wagons will leave to-morrow, to be turned over to you, and the pack-mules will leave in a day or two. We are waiting for saddles from Saint Louis. This will fit you out and put you in a condition to strike the Indians south of you. General Halleck telegraphs that Colonel Livingston thought the Indians would make peace, but since that telegram they have attacked our trains, which shows that their peace propositions were merely a ruse. I shall send you two additional companies of infantry as soon as I can replace them here, which will enable you to place a strong garrison at Fort Atkinson. I also desire you to make such arrangements in returning General Carleton's escorts as will be most beneficial to the service, and give freighters notice when the escorts start.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Brig. Gen. J. H. CARLETON,
Commanding Department of New Mexico, Santa Fé:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of February 12, addressed to Major-General Curtis. I have instructed Brevet Brigadier-General Ford, commanding District of Upper Arkansas, to comply with your request and co-operate in protecting the route.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Maj. JULIUS C. SHAW,
Commanding at Fort Wingate, N. Mex.:

SIR: I understand if Manuelito, the Navajo chief, could be captured his band would doubtless come in, and that if you could make certain arrangements with the Indians at the Zuñi village, where he frequently comes on a visit and to trade, they would co-operate with you in his capture. Whatever honorable arrangements can be made for his capture would doubtless save his people from being robbed and perhaps exterminated. Send runners to tell all Navajoes who want to come in to get to Fort Wingate as soon as possible. I believe many wish to come and will come. Owing to the deep snows which have fallen and the weakness of their animals, consequent upon the late severe winter, the time in which they may come in before hostile demonstrations will again be commenced against those who positively refuse to come is extended to May 1, 1865. Try hard to get Manuelito. Have him securely ironed and carefully guarded. It will be a mercy to others whom he controls to capture or kill him at once. I prefer he should be captured. If he attempts to escape when again in our power, as he did from Fort Canby, he will be shot down. As fast as Indians come in to Fort Wingate send them to Los Pinos, where provisions are cheaper. Send some of those who come as runners to warn the rest to come in, not only to avoid danger, but to help put in a crop this year. Keep me promptly advised of all you do.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

61. By direction of the President, Maj. George B. Drake, assistant adjutant-general, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby relieved from duty as assistant adjutant-general, Department of the Gulf, with rank and pay of lieutenant-colonel, under act of July 17, 1862, to date from March 23, 1865.

62. The resignation of Maj. George B. Drake, assistant adjutant-general, U. S. Volunteers, and first lieutenant, Sixth U. S. Infantry, has been accepted by the President, to take effect March 23, 1865, on condition that he receive no final payments until he shall have satisfied the pay department that he is not indebted to the United States.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, March 24, 1865.

[Major-General Canby:]

General: I have just learned, from a safe source in my opinion, that 6,000 infantry of the Trans-Mississippi Army have agreed to cross the river and will move in a few days.

This intelligence has been communicated to the fleet and every precaution will be taken. The plan appears to be to threaten Morganza and to plant a battery sixty miles above at the same time, while the crossing is to be effected some thirty miles above Red River. Herron is fully posted and will be on the alert.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 24, 1865.

Major-General Pope,
Saint Louis:

General Grant’s instructions have been sent to you by mail; you should receive them by to-morrow. Wait at Saint Louis till you get his letter.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 24, 1865.

Hon. William A. Hall:

My dear Sir: In view of my conversation with you when you were in this city, I desire to present for your consideration a few remarks and suggestions which I deem important, and to which I invite your careful and dispassionate attention. In common with all good citizens, you recognized, in your conversation with me, the absolute necessity of an immediate effort to re-establish civil government in Missouri, and you seemed to agree with me in the measures which I contemplated to secure that end. In order that any success may be achieved, it is essential that mere party politics be abandoned in this matter. Civil administration cannot be restored in Missouri unless all parties in the State sustain the State authorities cordially and earnestly in the attempt to administer it. Although it may so happen that some of the measures of the State executive do not meet the approval of the opposition party, yet a man of your intelligence cannot fail to understand that civil law, even though not well administered, is greatly preferable to martial law, and that any errors or mistakes of civil administration are within reach of the people and can, in time, be corrected by them. It is needless to say that such redress for bad administration of martial law is not to be had. The only manner in which success can be secured in returning to civil administration is by sustaining your State executive in all efforts to restore the dominion of civil law, even though some of the measures he may adopt seem to be objectionable. By uniting all the political parties, or rather all good citizens, with the military in the support of your State authorities you can secure for them the respect and confidence without which no good result can be reached. Unless this combined effort can be made in good faith and with energy, all attempts to do away with martial law will be fruitless. It is my purpose to originate nothing, except in the way of personal suggestion or advice to the governor, leaving him to put forth whatever orders, statements, or requirements he may deem necessary or judicious, and confining myself to giving him a cordial and unqualified support. I trust that you will see the absolute necessity of doing the same thing; and, more than that, it would seem eminently proper for a man of your standing and influence to use [every effort], both in public and in private, to induce citizens, irrespective of party, to sustain the measures of your State executive. Although the reasons which demand this course seem clear, even in case Governor Fletcher should adopt objectionable measures, in your opinion, I think I can assure you that you will be put to no such effort. I have talked freely with the governor and his views correspond entirely with my own. You will probably see him soon, as I learn that he designs to visit your part of the country for the purpose of inaugurating measures to put in operation the policy set forth in his proclamation of the 7th instant. I hope you will take occasion to see him and talk fully and frankly with him. I am satisfied that you and he will arrive at a satisfactory understanding in this matter. Whether you do so or not, however, I cannot too strongly impress upon you the conviction that all attempts to restore civil administration in Missouri depend for their success entirely upon the amount of support, unhesitating and prompt support, given to the governor, altogether regardless of party feeling or party questions. The great object first to be secured is the restoration of civil power. Under the rule of the civil authorities all matters of controversy can be discussed before the people and settled by the people, as in times past. Unless civil power be restored, such controversies will never be settled at all and the State will remain, as it is to-day, abject and humiliated in the eyes of the country. Do not permit yourself or your friends to lose the great and vital object of your wishes on account of points of party difference. I am only interested in this matter as a citizen of the United States and a man who loves his country and her free institutions. I offer these suggestions to you from a position entirely removed from all connection with party politics or prejudices, and because my official station in Missouri places me in a position to aid in a good work to some purpose. The sooner you take an open and public stand in this matter, the greater will be the influence you will exert and the greater the hope of success.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., March 24, 1865.

Lieut. Col. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

The river is now in fine stage. I recommend that the boats be loaded with forage, which will be much needed. The demand for seed-corn and oats has been so much that I have not been able to fill it without exhausting the supply for animals. I want to get forage enough here to feed some cavalry horses, which are much needed to escort telegraph repairers and mails. There is considerable forage required at Clarksville, Fort Gibson, and Fayetteville, but I have been able to spare them but little.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

OFFICE PROVOST-MARSHAL,
Brownsville Station, Ark., March 21, 1865.

[CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
Military Division of West Mississippi:

SIR: I herewith send report of information, in accordance with instructions just received. I would respectfully call your attention to that part of the report which has reference to the supply boats. The boat mentioned is owned by Jackson & McClarren, citizens of this State, who have never been in the U. S. service, and who, I believe, would not scruple to put into the hands of rebels such arms, ammunition, and supplies for which they could get a sufficiently large price. In my opinion such a state of affairs will eventually prove detrimental to the service.

Very respectfully,

JNO. F. PARKER,
Lieutenant and Provost-Marshal.

[Incl.]

[CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
Military Division of West Mississippi:

SIR: In accordance with instructions received through the commanding officer and in compliance with circular dated May 30, 1864, headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, I have the honor to report the following information: A colored fugitive from the neighborhood of Searcy, White County, Ark., who came into our lines on the 19th instant, reports the country is infested with guerrillas or Confederate scouts, under the command of one Raibon, who claims to be commissioned as captain, and to be acting under orders from Colonel Lyles. He also reports that a certain John Bellows, a member of Raibon's gang, claims to be on duty as a patrol; that he is in the habit of brutally beating and otherwise ill treating the negroes, and that in some three or four cases he has murdered them in cold blood and without the slightest provocation. He further reports that a supply boat owned by Jackson & McClarren came up White River from Deval's Bluff to the mouth of Little Red River and up that river to Searcy Landing loaded with supplies—flour, coffee, sugar, whisky, shoes, &c., to barter for cotton, and that while lying at that point Raibon and his gang, fully armed, were present and aboard of the boat superintending the traffic; that they had free access to the bar and other parts of the boat, and that his men were more or less intoxicated; also claiming that they were protecting the boat. All of the above is fully corroborated by Mr. T. A. Foster, a reliable citizen living in White County, and who was present and spoke to Raibon. He also states that a colored man who was in his employ was killed a few days ago by John...
Bellows, and that it is true that he is in the habit of beating the negroes, compelling them to pay him $5 in each case. He also states that the supply boat remained at Searcy Landing and West Point about three days and was to return again soon.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

JNO. F. PARKER,
First Lieutenant and Provost-Marshal.

WARRENSBURG, March 24, 1865.

Major-General DODGE,
Saint Louis:

The Ninth Consolidated Missouri State Militia has not reported. Where were they to cross the river? It would be well for them to cross at or near Boonville and scout Cooper and Moniteau Counties. Troops will move from here and from Sedalia to-night.

Capt. WILLIAM MEREDITH,

The commanding general directs that you hold your command in readiness to move at short notice.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., March 21, 1865.

Major BARNES,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis:

Five deserters from General Shelby's division came in last evening. They left their regiment and brigade at Camden on the 10th instant, and state that all the general officers of the rebel army in Trans-Mississippi Department met at Shreveport on the 1st instant, and remained there about eight days. Shelby's headquarters were at Lewisville. The army was stationed at Clarksville, Shreveport, Lewisville, Fulton, and Camden, and was reported to number 60,000 men. Enough to eat; some deficiency in shoes and clothing; heard and knew of no scarcity of ammunition. Strong fortifications have been constructed this winter on the northeast side of Red River, at Danley's Ferry, near Fulton. Colonel Greene, commanding the regiment to which they belonged, said the day before they left that all the infantry was ordered to march and cross the Mississippi River, and the armed and mounted cavalry were ordered to Menville or Marksville, on the Red River, and would all move as soon as the force at Clarksville moved down to occupy Camden and Fulton, and they were expected on the 11th or 12th instant. Had seen but little artillery. Forage was scarce and stock poor. The rebels had three steam-boats that they had run at Fulton; one a bayou and Red River packet, the other two small boats, and were accustomed to run around the raft near Shreveport by way of a bayou. They had heard of no contemplated advance into this State this spring. Colonel Greene said that Magruder was to cross the Mississippi with the infantry and Shelby was to remain this side with the cavalry. Price has not been with the army for ninety days.

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 24, 1865.

Capt. W. W. HARRIS,
Howard County Guards, Fayette, Mo.:

CAPTAIN: I have received your favor of the 22d instant, and have instructed Lieutenant McFarland to draw subsistence for your company. The officers recommended by you will be commissioned by the governor. I congratulate you on the promptness with which you have recruited this company, and trust that there will be no cause of regret that you have been honored with its command. It is important that you commence right. Let the best and most rigid discipline be maintained; make every man do his duty. I apprehend we have considerable work to do. Let us be ready for it. It will be your duty to hunt down and kill all bushwhackers, and to protect the peaceably disposed people in their homes and industrial pursuits. It is the mission of the soldier to put down and not to create disorder. The citizens need confidence, assurance, peace, quiet, and encouragement. It is your duty and mine to see that they enjoy these blessings so far as we may be able to furnish them. You will be careful to permit no unauthorized depredations upon the persons or property of citizens. Yourself and associate officers will be held responsible for the conduct of your men. You will have accomplished a great work if you are instrumental in restoring the good old times to Howard County. You will aid the civil authorities in the discharge of their duty. We of the military are the aides-de-camp of the civil justices, and we must be careful not to interfere with the ministers of the civil law. Infuse life and energy into your men, watch their personal habits, check intemperance. Whisky is a great enemy of good order and the deadly foe of the soldier. Treat it as you would a guerrilla. You will on receipt of this arrange to visit these headquarters at an early day to obtain quartermaster's and ordnance stores.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., March 25, 1865.

Lient. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 25th day of March, 1865: Capt. J. S. Shaw, Company E, First Louisiana Cavalry, Reserve Corps, C. S. Army, captured by men from our gun-boats on Vermillion Bayou the 18th instant, states that his regiment was disbanded on the 16th instant. The men are ordered to report to their commanding officers monthly, and the officers monthly to the enroll-officers of their respective parishes. No reason is given for disbanding them. A refugee who came in on the 19th instant reports fifty or sixty cavalry at almost every station on the Jackson railroad between Jackson and Amite. At Amite were twenty-five or thirty cavalry horses saddled. A few cavalry were looking about Ponchatoula. Most of the refugees report that they saw no soldiers at all on the Jackson railroad. There are no colored men in the vicinity of Ponchatoula or Springfield. A deserter reports that he saw a colored regiment drilling near Richmond, Va., and met several trains on the Richmond and Danville Railroad loaded with negroes going to Richmond. A Texas refugee states that he knows from statistics the increase of the slave population of that State, by running negroes into it from other States, to be 208,000.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge, Commanding Department of the Missouri:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to call your attention to the circumstances as detailed in the inclosed editorial,* cut from the Missouri Republican of the 25th instant, wherein it is set forth that the commander of a military post in Jackson County, of this State, caused an order to be issued to Maj. John Ryland, the district attorney, forbidding him to prosecute certain cases on the docket of circuit court of that county in relation to the trespass upon certain lands adjacent to the towns of Independence, Westport, and Kansas City. Such proceedings will not be tolerated, and it is important that an immediate investigation be made into the case, and if the facts be such as are stated you will place the officer referred to in arrest and bring him before a court-martial for trial.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 25, 1865.

James E. Yeatman, Esq.,
Law Commissioner, Saint Louis, Mo.:

Dear Sir: I have yours of the 22d instant, and will cheerfully do all I can to restore the family circle of the Monroe County freedwomen. Slavery dies hard. I hear its expiring agonies and witness its contortions in death in every quarter of my district. In Boone, Howard, Randolph, and Callaway the emancipation ordinance has caused disruption of society equal to anything I saw in Arkansas or Mississippi in the year 1863. I blush for my race when I discover the wicked barbarity of the late masters and mistresses of the recently freed persons of the counties heretofore named. I have no doubt but that the monster, Jim Jackson, is instigated by the late slave owners to hang or shoot every negro he can find absent from the old plantations. Some few have driven their black people away from them with nothing to eat or scarcely to wear. The consequence is, between Jim Jackson and his colaborers among the first families, the poor blacks are rapidly concentrating in the towns and especially at garrisoned places. My hands and heart are full. I am finding homes for them in Northwest Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, and Iowa. There is much sickness and suffering among them; many need help. Is there any fund that you can appropriate a small sum from to aid me in the deportation of the families I can't provide for in Missouri? I am retaining all in Missouri that I can get work for in quiet localities. We ought not to spare a single pound of our industrial element. We need to import rather than deport manual labor. I hope the waters will soon grow still, and Missouri in peace be permitted to pursue her way in the golden path of freedom and empire. It looks well all around the rapidly-contracting lines. Sherman's conquering legions are marching on; redemption draweth nigh. All hail the Republic!

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Pleasant Hill, March 25, 1865.

Colonel Potter,
Fort Leavenworth:

Send all the horses you have to General Blunt as soon as possible. General Mitchell has ordered purchase of 200 tons of hay at Fort Kearny to replace what was burned.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Pleasant Hill, March 25, 1865.

Major-General Blunt,
Paola:

You can use any mounted force you have along the border in hunting any bushwhackers that may be in your reach. Any troops crossing the line give strict orders to cease unauthorized depredations.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Paola, March 25, 1865.

Col. C. W. Blair,
Fort Scott:

Send two companies of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry to Hickman Mills, Mo., with as little delay as possible, to report to Col. C. Harding, commanding that sub-district.

By order of Major-General Blunt:

Geo. S. Hampton,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Fort Scott, Kans., March 25, 1865.

Capt. George S. Hampton,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Paola:

I can send full companies of men, but they are about all dismounted. I have been trying to get horses ever since last fall, but to no purpose. I need 800 horses to mount my command. I have no company that is near half mounted. The Third Wisconsin besides is not reorganized and is almost without officers. What shall I do in the premises?

Chas. W. Blair,
Colonel.

Paola, March 25, 1865.

Col. C. W. Blair:

Send what will be equivalent to two companies that are mounted, taking them from different squadrons. I will see immediately what can be done in providing horses for your dismounted men. I will send you six companies of Wisconsin infantry to do garrison duty as soon as they arrive, which will be soon.

Jas. G. Blunt,
Major-General.

Fort Scott, Kans., March 25, 1865.

Major-General Blunt,
Paola:

If you send me those six companies of infantry I shall be the happiest man alive, for then I can do post duty as it ought to be done and dispose of my cavalry on the border and out west at and beyond Humboldt, thus stopping the cattle business too.

Chas. W. Blair,
Colonel.
Capt. B. C. Cutler, Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit, as directed, the following report for the information and consideration of the department commander, as expressing my views in simply an outline sketch with regard to the captive Indians and their management and their reservation at Fort Sumner, N. Mex., based upon information derived from a variety of sources and a personal examination of the locality and the system at present adopted for their control and support: There were reported at this reservation February 25, 1865, about 9,000 Indians, of whom over 8,000 were Navajoes and the remainder Apaches of different bands. Nearly one-third of these are men, the balance being women and children. More had agreed to come in and were soon expected. The object of the Government now with regard to these savages would seem to be so to control them that they shall not engage in that devastating war upon the civilized people of this country again which they have heretofore waged for generations and retard the occupation and settlement of one of the richest mineral regions on this continent, and at the same time to make them, so far as possible, self-sustaining. Heretofore New Mexico has fed them, but now the whole country feeds them; and although it may be cheaper to feed than fight them, it is unnecessary, for they can be made to support themselves. The policy adopted for their government, whatever it may be, should, I think, fully comprehend the importance and magnitude of the undertaking; should contemplate the future, and be fixed and unchangeable. The only peace with savages that can avail good to the community is a conquered peace. To preserve peace with them necessitates the observance of a firm, just, but imperative course toward them. The opposite rule of action for their control generally results in protracted hostility on their part, and bloodshed. That these Indians can be partially, at least, civilized and made to work for their own support seems evident from numerous instances of analogous cases with regard to other tribes and from what is daily seen now at this reservation, where a portion of them work willingly and well upon the farm in plowing, putting in their crops, making acequias, &c., and as Government employés in the military service. This reservation is well located in a good section of country for these Indians, and contains abundant most excellent farming land, with water for irrigation, and is capable, with Indian labor properly used and supervised, of producing an excess of cereals and stock above what will be needed for their own consumption. The principal thing to fear is the scarcity of wood. It is true there are many acres of mesquite roots, but these will not, I think, suffice for the wants of the post and Indians. With no great labor or expense a bosque of cottonwood, willows, &c., could be grown there which would meet the demands of the reservation in this article. This course for supplying the post and the Indians with wood is earnestly recommended by the commanding and other officers at Fort Sumner.

March 1, 1865, there were about 2,500 acres of ground broken up, including that used last year, a portion of which was in wheat. There were some thirty plows running, most of which were held by Navajoes. The present system in force for their government and support, which was the only one, perhaps, that could well be adopted at first, seems capable of improvement. Living as they now do in scattered and extended camps, unorganized by bands or otherwise, receiving rations individually and by families every other day, is prolific of embarrassments, and the inability to properly control and account for them, to command sufficiently their labor, to prevent fraud and injustice among them, and in the severe tax which is imposed thereby upon the labor of the troops in working their land, issuing them rations, and in attempting to preserve order among and secure labor from them. By counterfeiting the tickets issued them for rations the Navajoes are reported to have some 3,000 tickets in excess over the authorized number. To exercise a control over them for the preservation of order and subordination, to secure an accountability of them, to command their labor, to effect a proper distribution of rations among them and promote their welfare, as well as the good of the public service, some system for their government similar to our military organizations, or classification of subdivisions as adopted in large numbers of civilian laborers is necessary. I would recommend that the Navajo Indians be subdivided into nine bands, the Apaches to make another, and these divisions be numbered in a regular series from 1 to 10; that each division should have one head chief and six sub-chiefs as his assistants, who should be clothed with authority for the preservation of good order, interior police, and regulation of their respective divisions; that they should also constitute a council for the trial and punishment of certain offenses, as theft, disobedience of orders, &c., and that they should have some badge or mark of their position and authority, these chiefs to have extra allowances, &c. Over each one of these divisions should be placed a good and trusty overseer or agent, who should exercise special authority over the same and have the immediate management thereof. The numbers of each subdivision as above to be accurately ascertained, and the names of all the able-bodied men therein (names to be given them) be entered in a list, from which details for labor, &c., should be made upon the chiefs, who should be held responsible that the numbers called for were furnished. Those who work as thus detailed should be allowed an increased allowance of food, one of the greatest incentives to labor with an Indian, and some other compensation. Those failing to work as detailed to have their rations reduced and be otherwise punished. Their arms should also be for the present withheld from them except in special cases. The rations to be issued by the commissary in bulk for six days to the overseer of each division, who would reissue them daily or otherwise to individuals or families thereof, upon tickets bearing the number of the division and such other marks as could not easily be counterfeited. For each division as proposed should be allotted a sufficient portion of land to grow their supplies, &c., rectangular in form, fronting on the river, on which the band assigned to it should be required to live in some regular order (adobe huts could be erected), and each tract thus allotted to be cultivated by the labor of the division living thereon.

In this way the several bands would soon become identified with and attached to their lands, and would feel a greater interest in raising a good supply for their own support. The crops when harvested should be stored separately for each division or band. Over all should be a general superintendent, with an assistant. The troops at Fort Sumner should be employed to enforce a compliance with, and the execution of, the above-described system and regulations if adopted. With the system proposed I have no doubt that in addition to performing the work on their own farms these Indians would be able to do most of the labor required at Fort Sumner by the Government, and for which they should receive some compensation, but not in money, to be gambled away or to purchase intoxicants. As some of them have exhibited much mechanical talent, I think it advisable to teach them the carpenter's and blacksmith's trades. Inclosed are communications from Captain Bristol, Fifth U. S. Infantry, and Rynerson, assistant quartermaster, and William P. Calloway, late captain, U. S. Volunteers, and now superintendent of the Indian farm, giving their views on this subject, and marked, respectively, A, B, and C.* One of the great steps toward removing the curse to New Mexico, which has so long blighted her prospects and retarded her advancement, is now accomplished in having forced these savages to quit their wild life and mountainous homes, to cease their murdering and their thieving depredations upon her people, and go upon a reservation, there to live at peace with the white population. Whether the Bosque Redondo is the best selection that could be made for this purpose I am unable to say. I think it a good one. That the reservation should be far removed from the former haunts of these Indians to accomplish the object for which it is designed, is my opinion. Thus far it seems to be working successfully. That any one who has at heart the best interests and prosperity of New Mexico should consent to, much less urge, the return of these savages to their former country to renew their hostilities upon our people, appears most unreasonable. That the people of this country will so stultify themselves by advocating such a course I cannot believe.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. H. DAVIS,
Assistant Inspector-General, U. S. Army.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, New Orleans, La., March 26, 1865.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn,
Commanding District of West Tennessee:

GENERAL: In a letter from these headquarters of March 4 Major-General Dana was requested to send several cavalry regiments to this place. Among that number was the First Wisconsin Cavalry. This was a mistake; it should have been the First Iowa Cavalry. In the absence of the major-general commanding, I have the honor to request that you now send the First Iowa Cavalry to report to Major-General Grierson at this place.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. H. Dyer,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, New Orleans, La., March 26, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Commanding Department of Arkansas:

GENERAL: General Grierson, who is now organizing a cavalry corps for this military division, requires a battery for one of the divisions. General West reports that Captain Hadley’s battery is fully equipped to operate with cavalry. If you can spare this battery, will you please order it to this city to report to General Grierson. General Canby is now absent, somewhere near Mobile. There has been some little skirmishing up to the 23d instant, but no heavy fighting.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Lieut. P. J. Maloney,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

LIEUTENANT: A band of rebel soldiers, about sixty strong, by the most reliable accounts, last night captured Captain Darling, provost-marshal of this parish, his clerk, and a citizen named Knight, and escaped before information reached this post. A detachment has been sent in pursuit of them.

(Received 10.25 p.m.)

Lieut. Col. W. D. Smith,
Acting Assistant Inspector-General:

Captain Darling resided at Deslondes' plantation since last September, and never had a guard of more than three men with him. I have just ordered the arrest of two citizens for complicity with his capture, or at least being aware of his intended capture. I leave at midnight in pursuit of the rebels, who have crossed through the swamp in the direction of the Amite River.

Cape Girardeau, Mo., March 26, 1865.

Capt. W. W. Campbell, Bloomfield, Mo.:
You will with forty men and two officers, besides yourself, start in with the train to-morrow morning and come as far as White Water, without you hear of Bolin before getting there, and then go after him. He is said to have forty men—probably about twenty-five. He robbed a wagon on the ridge this morning. One of the McGeeches was taken prisoner this morning and taken to their camp; he has not got here yet. A scout will be sent from here to meet you, but find them as soon as possible and follow them as long as it will do any good. They came to the road to-day at the old Bolin farm. They are near there.

By order, &c.:
J. C. Thomson,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Bloomfield, Mo., March 26, 1865.

Col. H. M. Hiller,
Cape Girardeau:

Colonel: The men that Lieutenant Bathbun spoke to you about have returned, and bring the following information: Bolin, 68 men, well armed and mounted, going into camp at Scattersville, 1st day of April. Some small fragments of companies, Bowles, 20 men; Falkner, who is now a prisoner, 40 men; Colonel McCray, 600 men, on Crowley's Ridge; Colonel Kitchen, 600 men, near same place.

W. W. Campbell,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Saint Louis, March 26, 1865.

Brig. Gen. John McNeil,
Warrensburg, Mo.:
General Sanborn telegraphs that a band of guerrillas numbering thirty passed Neosho going north, on 22d [23d] instant, for Missouri River. They will probably cross the Osage west of Osceola and pass through or near Clinton, in Henry County. Be on the alert for them.

J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Major Barnes,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of the Missouri, St. Louis, Mo.:

Major Burch, commanding at Neosho, reports that a band of bush-whackers numbering thirty passed north on the 23rd instant about eight miles west of Neosho. They stated to the women that they were going up to the Missouri River among their friends. They will cross the Osage west of Osceola and pass through or near Clinton, in Henry County. I have had two detachments sent after this band, but they rode with good speed through the district and we are not likely to catch them, as they were well mounted. It is a month earlier than when they commenced moving north last year, and as there is no forage and, as yet, no grass, on the border, I do not think that as large numbers will move at once now as then. I shall do all I can to check and destroy them.

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Brigadier-General Fisk:

I have reliable information that sixty-three guerrillas were in Fayette County last Tuesday, marching in the direction of Waverly. They had badges on their hats labeled North Missouri; said they were going to Chariton, Howard, and Boone Counties; that North Missouri would catch hell this season. On Friday a small squad appeared in sight of the steamer Pitcairn at Waverly and demanded whisky; threatened to fire on the boat if refused. They got the whisky. They have or will cross between Waverly and DeMott City. Captain Meredith says he can send or go with sixty men, patrol the river, and find out their whereabouts.

C. H. GREEN.

Captain Meredith,
Glasgow:

You will at once send out a force to patrol the river and find if possible the whereabouts of reported guerrillas, if any are in the regions reported.

By order of Brigadier-General Fisk:
J. H. WAITE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DIST. OF MINNESOTA, DEPT. OF THE NORTHWEST,
Saint Paul, Minn., March 26, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. R. CURTIS,
Comdy. Department of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose herewith copy of a dispatch from the officer commanding Fort Ripley, dated 24th instant, which goes to show that there is danger of an outbreak on the part of the bands of Chippewa Indians in this district on the opening of spring. Rumors from various sources of a like character have lately reached me, and you will perhaps recollect that in my dispatch of 24th ultimo I mentioned the bad influence exercised by Indian traders and half-breeds, subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, upon the tribes within this district. That some such evil inspiration is at work both among the Sioux and Chippewas I am well convinced, but whether or not initiated through the means of rebel agents I have not been able to ascertain. The number of Chippewa warriors within the limits of this district is approximately stated in a previous report made by me to Major-General Pope at 1,650, and as they occupy a region as unfavorable, to say the least, as the Everglades of Florida for military operations, a war with them will be a serious affair. Still they are notoriously unfriendly to the whites, and their frequent threats to commence hostilities occasion great alarm and consternation among the exposed settlers. In view of the unsettled condition of things and the very long line which has to be guarded in case of an outbreak of these savages, it is to be regretted that a diminution of the military force in this district is contemplated, as I am informed by letter from General Sully, commanding District of Iowa, that Brackett’s Battalion of four companies of cavalry will be ordered to join his command on the Missouri in the spring. I respectfully apply through you to Major-General Pope, commanding Military Division of the Missouri, in case the battalion should be thus detached, to replace it with an equal force from some other quarter, otherwise it will be impossible for me, with a due regard to the safety of the settlements menaced by the Chippewas, to carry out the programme indicated by General Pope in his dispatch of the 28th ultimo from Milwaukee. That dispatch was based upon the supposition that there would be no withdrawal of troops from this command such as is referred to by General Sully, nor was the aspect of affairs with the Chippewas by any means as menacing as it has since become. When it is considered that the entire defensive line in this district is not less than 300 miles east and west and 200 miles north and south it will readily be conceded that, after garrisoning the regular posts, there will remain quite a sufficiently inadequate force for the protection of the frontier, even if left at its present standard. I have the honor to request that the matter may be laid before General Pope for his consideration.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS FORT RIPLEY,
March 24, 1865.

Capt. R. C. Olin,
Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Minnesota:

SIR: I have the honor to report that, upon investigation, I find that the Indians in this vicinity are very much irritated by the treatment which they have received at the hands of dealers in substitutes, who have run off their young men in considerable numbers, and much against their will. Many of them have become very much enraged, and threaten to take vengeance as soon as the snow is gone. From such threats, I think, emanate all the rumors of an intended outbreak of the Chippewas, and I am thoroughly convinced that we shall have trouble unless this nefarious trade is immediately stopped. A Leech Lake chief called Little Frenchman has had a son taken by them. He told Mr. Johnson day before yesterday that his band would commence hostilities immediately after the snow was gone. One of Hole-in-the-Day's head men also told Mr. Johnson a few days ago that Hole-in-the-Day told him just before he started for Washington to keep quiet and say nothing to alarm the whites, for he (Hole-in-the-Day) intended to commence hostilities as soon as he returned from Washington. This Mr. Johnson is an educated Chippewa, a man who has always been friendly to the whites, and I think that he may be trusted. I presume that you are acquainted with him. A squaw belonging to a Leech Lake band now encamped near here told our post interpreter that the band to which she belonged intended to commence hostilities early in the spring, and that they came down here to ascertain the strength of the garrison and to learn how many troops were to be left here during next summer.

There are quite a number of savages hanging around here, and I know that it is a common thing for them to inquire how many men we have got here, how many men are to be left here next summer, and if there is to be another expedition against the Sioux. That last item appears to interest them very much. The aspect is indeed very bad; still I am of the opinion that the savages have as yet no fixed intention of commencing hostilities. They are very much enraged, and a slight accident might produce serious results, as of course trouble with any one band would immediately involve the whole nation.

I notified parties at Crow Wing yesterday that I should not allow any more wild Indians to be carried off until otherwise instructed.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. S. HOWE,
Captain, Second Minnesota Cavalry, Commanding Post.

HDQRS. DIST. OF MINNESOTA, DEPT. OF THE NORTHWEST,
Saint Paul, Minn., March 26, 1865.

Capt. H. S. Howe,
Commanding Fort Ripley, Minn.:

CAPTAIN: Your dispatch of 24th instant has been received. The threats of certain of the Chippewas made to Mr. Johnson, &c., are but a repetition of such menaces which are made from time to time, and while they indicate the unfriendly feeling which is known to actuate many of these Indians, General Sibley has no information which leads him to believe that there is any settled or general plan on the part of the bands to commence hostilities. Mr. Johnson is doubtless a well-meaning man, but like representations have heretofore been received from him, and, as he appears to be of a timid disposition, it is believed that the Indians practice upon his fears. Still there is no doubt that there is, as you state, much irritation occasioned by the improper abduction of some of the young men of the bands by unprincipled white men and their sale as substitutes for drafted men. Instructions were given by General Sibley to Major Thompson, then in command of Fort Ripley, on 25th of January last to put an immediate stop to such outrageous proceedings under the general direction of the U.S. Indian agent, and it is not known that there has been any repetition of them since that time. The Indian superintendent and Chippewa agent being both absent, it may be well for you to seek an interview with any of the chiefs or headmen of the Chippewas now in your immediate vicinity, should such there be, and state frankly and plainly to them that these rumors of intended hostilities are prevalent and occasion much alarm among the more exposed settlers; that if they are untrue such language of menace will not be tolerated. If they have grievances to complain of they will be properly redressed by their “Great Father,” on proper representation being made. In dealing with these savages all unnecessary harshness of expression should be avoided, but they must be addressed in a firm and confident tone and fully warned of the evil consequences to themselves and their families in case of war being commenced on their part against the whites. Nothing is ever gained with these people by any exhibition of timidity or by evincing the least doubt of the issue of such a contest as they so frequently and flippantly refer to in conversation with the whites. The wretched fate which has overtaken the far more numerous and powerful bands of Sioux who rebelled against the Government should be a warning to the other bands to avoid any language or overt acts which may result in like destruction to themselves. It would not be amiss for you to confer in person with some of the more respectable class of traders resident at Crow Wing, who may be able to throw some more light on the views and intentions of the Indians. You will report from time to time any information which you deem reliable on the subject to these headquarters, and meantime keep your command in readiness to act upon the occurrence of any contingency which may call for military protection to the settlers, should violence be actually attempted. There is a sufficient force in this district which can be spared, in case of emergency, promptly to quell any foolish disturbance which the mischief-makers among the Chippewas may attempt to create. It is high time that it should be decided whether we are to regard the Chippewas as friends to the Government or not, for the constant recurrence of threats of violence on the part of these people has a tendency to keep the border settlers in a state of ferment and alarm almost as detrimental in its effects upon the general prosperity as would be a state of open warfare.

By command of Brigadier-General Sibley.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. LARKE,

Lieutenant and Aide-de-Camp.

CITY POINT, VA., March 27, 1865.

SIDNEY S. JERMAN, Esq.:

I have received your proposition to run three large steamers, now on the Upper Red River, to New Orleans, and to take them laden with cotton, on condition that the boats and cotton will not be subject to seizure when they arrive in New Orleans. If you or any person having charge of these boats chooses to run them to New Orleans, loaded as proposed, you may do so, and the boats shall be exempt from seizure if belonging to parties now loyal, or parties who will conform to existing orders. The parties having the cotton in charge will be allowed to sell it to the United States Government in accordance with section 8 of the act of Congress regulating trade with insurrectionary States, published in General Orders, No. 251, of September 15, 1864, and to have the full benefit of all proceeds so accruing.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., March 27, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf:

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit for your information the following extracts from the daily report from this office dated March 27, 1865: Mrs. Reiley reports to Col. F. A. Starring, provost-marshal-general Department of the Gulf, from Bayou Sara, March 18, that the crews of the gun-boats drink and carouse with the rebels stationed at that point when on shore. The rebel pickets demand a tax of $10 per bale on all cotton coming into town. They have taken all males able to bear arms to their camp, one mile from town. Their pickets number about fifty men. It is reported that all troops from East Louisiana are ordered to the Tombigbee River (probably to join Forrest). Lieutenant Curtiss reports from Baton Rouge, March 24, that General Hodge had received orders from Forrest to join him with his whole force, but refused to do so, and went to Richmond to get the order countermanded. It is the general understanding that all the territory west of Pearl River is to be abandoned for the present. The above statement not only corresponds with the report from Bayou Sara with regard to movements of troops from East Louisiana, but with that of a scout who recently passed through Mississippi and Louisiana. A deserter from Kirby Smith's army, who has been engaged in the commissary department for the last two years collecting tithes and purchasing supplies, states that in the Trans-Mississippi Department rations were issued for 90,000 men in February last, including rations for those in hospital and all ineffective. Out of this 90,000 not more than 50,000 are or could be made able for duty. There is no place except on Red River where they could subsist a large army for any length of time. A special courier who deserted from General Parsons' headquarters states that he saw an order from Richmond to General Kirby Smith directing him to cross his entire available force to the east bank of the Mississippi. The determination of the command was general not to cross under any circumstance. A great many deserters are reported lying in the vicinity of the mouth of Black River, La., and if a gun-boat was stationed there a great many would avail themselves of the opportunity to escape. The rebel gun-boat Missouri, lying at Shreveport, is very strong, but unable to make headway against the current. A report by telegram from Baton Rouge, March 26, states that General Hodge has gone to Jackson, Miss., instead of Richmond. The sub-divisions in Forrest's command have been discontinued by him, and all commanders ordered to report direct to him. The Fourth Louisiana Cavalry, Colonel Powers, and the Eleventh Arkansas Mounted Infantry, Colonel Griffith, are ordered to join him, leaving only a few independent scouts and jayhawkers in East Louisiana. Dates from North Carolina of the 19th and 20th instant through rebel papers report continued fighting on those days between Johnston and Sherman at Bentonville, N. C., in which, on the 19th, our forces were forced back one mile. On the 20th the battle was renewed, and finally our forces apparently resumed the offensive. Confederate loss, 500; Federal loss, 5,000. Report from Mobile through same source March 22 states that a column 2,000 strong is about to move from Pensacola, and another 10,000 strong from Milton, Fla., under Canby; destination, Selma. Thomas is to make a simultaneous movement from Vicksburg. Other accounts place the entire force operating against Mobile and Selma at 30,000. West Point, Miss., March 17, General Forrest's scouts report 6,000 Federals camped at Buzzard's Roost, eighteen miles west of Tusculumbia, and one brigade of cavalry camped between Iuka and Eastport. General Forrest has been promoted to be lieutenant-general. Col. N. N. Cox, of Forrest's command, and Col. Alexander W. Campbell, of Forrest's staff, have been promoted to be brigadier-generals.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,

Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

(In absence of Capt. S. M. Eaton, chief signal officer, Military Division of West Mississippi.)

COLONEL: My scouting parties have just returned, and report that the rebels crossed the Amite yesterday.

C. H. PARKHURST,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Comdg. Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
Maj. George R. Davis,
Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Comdg. Post Napoleonville:

The general commanding desires me to call your attention to the fact that the current of smuggling has been turned from Plaquemine and The Park and directed through Napoleonville, Paincourtville, and vicinity. The general has directed that in future no goods will be allowed to be landed from the boats running on Bayou La Fourche at any point except Napoleonville, between Donaldsonville and Thibodeaux, except to planters who are well known as friendly to our cause. He desires me further to call your attention [to the fact] that a lack of effort and active interest has been manifested by your provost-marshal and others in ferreting out and detecting these smugglers. No less than four smugglers have been arrested during the last week by orders from these headquarters after having passed through the hands of the Napoleonville authorities. The general commanding desires that no person, man or woman, be allowed to pass through your lines, passes or no passes, without a knowledge on your part that they are not carrying with them a lot of contraband goods under cover of a pass or a permit for personal baggage, as was the case of the two women recently captured at Napoleonville. Your examination of their loaded skirts and other conveniences will show you what an amount of goods and notions can be carried by one person. On the 6th of March a man by the name of Enaud, or Haiznau, passed through Napoleonville to New Orleans. He is a Frenchman, small, strongly built, beard black, eyes gray, complexion red, about forty years of age. This man has been engaged for a long time in smuggling, and is supposed to be a rebel spy. If he has not already passed through your place you may catch him, if on the alert. The general commanding is anxious to have this business effectually crushed out, at least so far as it is carried on through Napoleonville and vicinity; refers it to you as commanding officer at that post, with such information as he has been able to obtain, feeling confident that you will leave no means untried to carry out his instructions.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. B. Campbell,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Saint Louis, Mo., March 27, 1865.

By order of General McNeil:

C. G. LAURANT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., March 27, 1865.

Col. C. HARDING,
Commanding Fourth Sub-District, Kansas City:

COLONEL: I have this day enlarged your district by adding La Fayette County, and have designated Lexington as your headquarters. You will as soon as possible relieve the companies of the First Cavalry Missouri State Militia, who have been doing loose garrison duty at that point, and move them to these headquarters. If desirable to move your quartermaster and commissary, your application to that effect will be approved and promptly forwarded to department headquarters for the order. I will consolidate another squadron of the First Missouri State Militia in a few days near Camp Peery and send it to you. Captain Wyckoff marched last night in the direction of Clinton, instructed to intercept, if possible, a band of guerrillas, of which you have notice per telegraphic dispatch of yesterday. He is ordered on his return to report to you from the first point he reaches in your district. I can probably give you a company of the Seventh, under Captain Arnold, and probably another, under Captain Spedden. These consolidated companies will be most effective troops, and should be kept constantly in the brush. I would recommend that the troops be removed entirely from Pleasant Hill, and ration depot be made at Lone Jack, Snibar, and Wellington. These, with an active force at Independence, must result in the clearing of the guerrilla country. Reciprocal action—sudden dashes, and prompt execution in killing, burning out, and deporting the women—will in a short time give peace to the country. The greatest care should be taken to protect the peaceful and well disposed, and for that reason you will provide yourself with ample transportation and have your forage. That of the people or of the railroad contractors is never to be used when it can be avoided, and when so used properly replaced in kind. You will give Brigadier-General Cooley such aid as you can in enrolling and organizing the militia of his district, but not to let this interfere with the primary duties of hunting guerrillas. I shall have a squadron at Marshall, in Saline County, and as soon as possible Order No. 3 company. The officers will be instructed to co-operate with you and keep you advised of all movements in their neighborhoods. General Dodge arrived here last night and left for Saint Louis this morning.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN McNEIL, Brigadier-General, Commanding District.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., March 27, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding, Kansas City:

I have information that the parties of guerrillas reported to you yesterday passed up on the eastern line of Cass County yesterday. There is a report at Kingsville, or Rainey, that about fifty came in the vicinity of Chapel Hill a few days since and scattered in the county.

JOHN McNEIL.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., March 27, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding, Kansas City, Mo.:

I sent Captain Wyckoff with his company of consolidated recruits last night in direction of Clinton, with orders to scout for the reported band of guerrillas, and when found hang on to their trail. When that is done he is ordered to report to you at the nearest post to where he might be. I have added La Fayette to your district, fixing headquarters at Lexington. Relieve the companies of the First Missouri State Militia at that place as soon as possible. I will give you two or three more cavalry companies in a few days. Keep them all in the brush. Let me know if you desire to remove the quartermaster and commissary to Lexington.

JOHN McNEIL, Brigadier-General, Commanding.

KANSAS CITY, March 27, 1865.

Major Mullins, Pleasant Hill:

The guerrillas reported moved east of Cass and have scattered. Scout for them whenever you have horses to spare. If Wyckoff comes... into Pleasant Hill use him for the purpose and report to me. I intend to move headquarters to Lexington this week if I can. Keep me posted.

HARDING.

KANSAS CITY, March 27, 1865.

General McNeil,

Warrensburg:

Dispatches received. Will move to Lexington as soon as business on hand can be settled—probably Friday or Saturday. I do not think the quartermaster and commissary can be removed with advantage. Stage line from Independence to Pleasant Hill will soon be resumed. None of the troops ordered by General Dodge have reported yet. I have compelled citizens at Hickman Mills to join organization for their own defense. Have notified Pleasant Hill about the guerrillas scattering. I think my force as now ordered will be enough to make the sub-district secure for the summer. I will commence when the re-enforcements report.

Brigadier-General Sanborn,

Commanding District of Southwest Missouri:

Sir: Permit me to have the honor to call your attention to the fact that rebels and rebel sympathizers are committing deeds of violence in Benton County, Mo., in the vicinity of Barclay's Mills. Mr. Barclay, the man who owns those mills, and whose loyalty cannot be doubted, has been intruded upon so much by some of his disloyal neighbors that he is now afraid to stay at home. They have also tried to prevent negroes from living in that vicinity, and have threatened to run them out of the county, and also have made threats against all persons keeping negroes about them. There was also a negro man and family (moving north) robbed of all their money and a part of their plunder on or about the 14th instant within four or five miles of the mills and ordered to proceed on their way in all haste or they would be killed.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

That squad of rebels last heard from about Dover. They are commanded by one Wilhite, who was raised near Rocheport. He and Jackson were old comrades; we captured Wilhite in 1862; he was exchanged; he is a rough customer. I think a portion of them will attempt to cross at or about Rocheport, because they are well acquainted on the south side of the river in that locality. Will go down the river to-day. Wichita Indian Agency, Butler County, Kans., March 27, 1865.

Colonel Ford,
Comdg. District of Upper Arkansas, Fort Riley, Kans.:
Sir: My present location is on the extreme border of the white settlement in the district known as White Water Settlement. While there is not much outward excitement among the people there is an undercurrent of feverish anxiety and fears of apprehended difficulties with the Indians. Some very injudicious articles have recently been published in the Leavenworth Conservative and other newspapers, calculated to keep up excitement and to mislead. For instance, some writer, over the signature of “Conservative,” purporting to write from Fort Riley, stated without qualification that a raid was then being made by a large party from Texas into this part of the country. This statement, if it had any foundation, was based on a rumor then two months old.
Many people, however, don't take a correct view of the matter, and some began to pack up for moving off. The same writer publishes another article headed "Good news from the Indians," stating that Colonel Leavenworth had just held a grand council with the southwestern tribes, representing everything promising and fair, but intimating a kind of conditional friendship as existing on the part of the Indians. Such statements are calculated to mislead and deceive. The whole of this grand council affair is a romance. No such council or talk has been held with the Plains Indians. For six weeks previous to that writing, nor since, has Colonel Leavenworth been within 150 miles of them. With the motives of that writer I have nothing to do, or with his fables, only so far as they directly affect matters pertaining to my agency. I recently had a two days' visit from some Kiowa chiefs and several talks with them. In general, they seem very friendly disposed, but manifested considerable irritation on some points. In my judgment prudence dictates that there should be a careful lookout kept on all points, and I would respectfully suggest that you have a confidential agent go among those Indians, who are now about 100 miles south, near what is called the Salt Plains; one who could gain their confidence and ascertain their feelings. They manifest a great dread of soldiers. While I would not recommend that soldiers should be stationed in this immediate vicinity, if one or more companies could be stationed fifteen or twenty miles northeast from here as an outpost I think it would be nothing more than a necessary precaution, under the circumstances, and I am anxious to see it done.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. GOOKINS,
U. S. Indian Agent.

Houston, March 27, 1865.

Major-General WALLACE, U. S. Army:

Sir: I have this day received a communication from Brigadier-General Slaughter and Colonel Ford, of the C. S. Army, informing me that on the 11th instant they had met you, by your invitation, at Point Isabel under flag of truce, "to discuss measures looking to a permanent peace honorable to both parties." Their report of the interview is accompanied by a series of propositions submitted by you as a basis of negotiation. Had you submitted these propositions in advance, I feel sure the interview would not have been accorded, and that the gentlemen who met you on the part of the Confederate States would have at once declined to discuss propositions which, if accepted by their countrymen, would render their memory infamous for all future time. Stripped of all disguise, your proposition is nothing less than that we of the Trans-Mississippi States are to lay down our arms, surrender at discretion, take an oath of allegiance to the United States Government, and in return to accept such terms of amnesty, pardon, or foreign exile as our conquerors shall graciously accord us. When the States Trans-Mississippi united their destiny with the Confederacy of Southern States we pledged ourselves to share their good and evil fortune; and for four years that this fierce struggle has continued we have faithfully fulfilled our obligations, and now at the commencement of its fifth year it is still our unalterable purpose to share the common danger and the common fate. We are bound to our brethren of the Cis-Mississippi States by stronger ties than mere State obligations. Identity of political and social institutions, a common ancestry, a common cause, and more than all, common sufferings and injuries, have cemented a nationality not to be torn asunder by force, or disintegrated by insidious proposals for a separate accommodation. It would be folly in me to pretend that we are not tired of a war that has sown sorrow and desolation broadcast over our land; but we will accept no other than an honorable peace. With 300,000 men yet in the field, we would be the most abject of mankind if we should now basely yield all that we have been fighting for during the last four years, namely, nationality and the rights of self-government. With the blessing of God, we will yet achieve these, and extort from your own Government all that we ask. Whenever you are willing to yield these, and to treat as equal with equal, an officer of your high rank and character, clothed with the proper authority from your Government, will not be reduced to the necessity of seeking an obscure corner of the Confederacy to inaugurate negotiations.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. G. WALKER,
Major-General, C. S. Army.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
Commanding Armies of the United States:

GENERAL: I have just received the accompanying dispatches from the Military Division of West Mississippi, and inferring from the letter addressed to me that they are of more than ordinary importance, I send Capt. Thomas Lord, one of my aides, by steamer direct to your headquarters to deliver them to you. [Sub-inclusion No. 1.]

Brazos Santiago, Tex., March 14, 1865.

[General U. S. GRANT:]

GENERAL: Upon my arrival at New Orleans I was fortunate enough to meet Mr. Charles Worthington, collector of port of Brazos. Mr. Worthington, besides being a citizen of Texas, well known, particularly in the western part, is shrewd, discreet, and trustworthy, and intimately acquainted with such controlling rebels at Brownsville as Brig. Gen. J. E. Slaughter, commanding the West District of Texas, headquarters at Brownsville, and Col. J. S. Ford, commanding a regiment in Slaughter’s district. For the purpose of sounding General Slaughter, I sent Mr. Worthington from this post to Matamoras. He managed his charge with shrewdness and success. His report is subjoined [marked A]. Obtaining an interview with General Slaughter, he found that gentleman disposed to talk freely about the situation and about a settlement of difficulties. He then proposed that the general should meet me under a flag of truce. The proposal was accepted and Point Isabel named as the place of conference, and 12.30 p. m. Wednesday, the 9th instant, as the time. To cover the real object of the meeting, at General Slaughter’s instance the rendition of criminals was specified as the subject of conference. In this connection I call your attention to General Slaughter’s note in reply to Mr. Worthington’s. On the 9th instant a “norther” sprang up, making it impossible on the part of both of us to fulfill the engagement. On the following morning I sent a letter under flag of truce to General Slaughter, a copy of which is inclosed [marked B], in which I approved Mr. Worthington’s proposal, stated why I could not cross to Point Isabel, and asked a renewal of the arrangement. The officer to whom my letter was delivered for transmission at the same time forwarded one to me from General Slaughter, a glance at which will satisfy you, I think, that that gentleman is as anxious in the business as I am myself. In fact, general, I am minute in my narrative expressly to show you why I feel assured that the rebel authorities in this part of the world are really very desirous of a speedy peace, at least so far as concerns themselves. On the 11th instant the signals agreed on announced General Slaughter’s arrival at Point Isabel. I at once went over to meet him, carrying along supplies and tents. The general’s party consisted of his staff and Colonel Ford, and mine of Lieutenant-Colonel Woolley, Lieutenant-Colonel Catlin, Major Ross, of my staff, and Mr. Worthington. The conference lasted until the next day in the afternoon. On both sides there was an effort to make it agreeable.

If you at any time hear in the way of complaint that I have been hobnobbing and sleeping with the rebels in this region, please understand the matter and take care of me. Very early in the interview I made up my mind that both General Slaughter and Colonel Ford were not only willing but anxious to find some ground upon which they could honorably get from under what they admitted to be a failing Confederacy. In justice to them, I will add that both went into the rebellion reluctantly. I will say further that General Slaughter placed his disposition to bring about an accommodation upon grounds of humanity and an unwillingness to see his State invaded and ruined and the war decline into guerrilla murders. He and Ford insisted that they could procrastinate the final result indefinitely, but at the same time frankly admitted that if that were done the North would ultimately conquer the South as a desert. When I urged that in the present situation of the war west of the Mississippi they could not reasonably hope for assistance from Richmond and their eastern armies; that they were practically isolated; that as a consequence their highest present obligations were to their Trans-Mississippi army and citizens, whose honor and welfare they were charged with and alone bound to regard, they agreed with me without hesitation, and asked me to give them such propositions as would cover those objects and at the same time be likely to prove acceptable to our Government. It was delicate business, but I did my best. How I succeeded you will find by reference to a copy of the propositions themselves, which I have the honor of transmitting herewith. I permit me to say that they were hurriedly drawn, yet drawn with an eye special to President Lincoln’s proclamations, and to what I interpret as a prevalent sentiment of the Northern people. I was careful not to assume authorization or to commit the Government in any manner. The propositions are only offered as a basis of settlement, as an invitation to further and formal negotiations. They are addressed to the Confederate military authorities as the only ones now existing in the Trans-Mississippi region who on their side have any power and upon whom all responsibility is at present resting.

To satisfy military pride the propositions assume the settlement to be voluntary on the part of the rebels. To save military honor they are drawn with an intent to cover all classes of persons whose welfare and security are supposed to be in the keeping of the said authorities. To soldiers and citizens they offer the alternatives: If you wish to remain in the United States to become citizens, you must take the oath of allegiance; if you do not desire to become citizens again, you are at liberty to go abroad with your property. To get their consent to consider their confiscation of property of Union men void, it is proposed that the United States shall not undertake further to execute the con-iscation laws of the Federal Congress. So far as we are concerned, you will observe, this would operate prospectively, not retrospectively; in other words, confiscations by our courts had to this time would remain in force. Fortunately, it is well known that in the Trans-Mississippi States, while there have been many seizures and occupations of the property of rebels, there have been but few, if any, final confiscations by judicial decrees. In reference to slave property, both General Slaughter and Colonel Ford admitted that as a value it had ceased to be of great importance. The only condition they talked about respecting it was, that as its abolition was inevitable the interests of the negro, as well as the necessities of the people of these States, required the adoption of a system of gradual emancipation. I had no difficulty, consequently, in getting them to accept for the present a general refercence of the subject to our Congress. This reference, you will please observe, involves not a question about abolition, but simply such questions as whether the abolition shall be gradual or immediate, and whether it shall be with or without compensation.

It may be well for me to remark here that no doubt the rebel authorities will interpret the permission proposed to be given those of their people who may choose to go abroad to make preparations for departure, to include the right to sell their slaves or take them away out of the country. I submit it to our authorities whether such an interpretation may not be granted. Practically the grand result will not be affected. They cannot carry a slave to a foreign country where his freedom will not be assured; neither will a sale now retard the inevitatable liberation. Emancipation will be as certain to find the property in the hands of one man as in those of another. Is the concession of any actual materiality? It only remains for me to inform you that General Slaughter and Colonel Ford received the propositions and undertook to forward them immediately to General Walker, commanding the State of Texas, and to General Kirby Smith. Colonel Ford is to take them in person, and as he is politically the most influential Confederate soldier in Texas that fact gives me additional confidence. He will go first to Galveston, where, according to the understanding, I am in a few days to follow him. Secrecy is for the present as much required on their part as on my own. Looking forward to an interview with General Kirby Smith, I intend asking General Canby to send me General Davis of Texas, commanding a brigade in our army. Smith and Davis have been lifelong friends.

At present, general, I see nothing else important to send you, except that our consul, Mr. Etchison, whom Mejia is said to have outraged, is a humbug, a drunkard, and a fool. His official conduct was unworthy our Government. He has mutilated the books of his consulate. He charged our own citizens unwarrantable fees, and I am assured on excellent authority that it can be established that he has in his pockets several thousand dollars in gold not his own. Even his washerwoman was left unpaid. Certainly there is nothing in the affair justifying attention. Mr. Wood, our commercial agent, has, since Etchison's departure, reached Matamoros and been kindly received by Maximilian's officials. As to the rebel trade by way of Matamoros and Brownsville, I think it is only sufficient to say that I can stand on my boat and count at least 100 vessels of all kinds lying off Bagdad. Neither the port of New Orleans nor that of Baltimore can present to-day such a promise of commercial activity.

Very truly, general, your friend and obedient servant,

LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General of Volunteers, U. S. Army.

[Inclsd. A.]
Brazos Santiago, March 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. L. WALLACE:

Sir: I have the honor to report that pursuant to orders from yourself, I proceeded to Matamoros on 2d, and arrived there on the 4th day of March. In the matter of the extradition of Union men from Mexico into Texas I found that there had been only four men taken from Matamoros, and that only two of those were retained by the Confederate authorities, and they were held solely for crimes committed in Texas. No known Union man of Texas has ever been demanded. After a delay of two days I succeeded in getting an unofficial interview with Brigadier-General Slaughter, ostensibly for the purpose of talking on the matter of extradition. Finding during a prolonged conversation that he was willing to discuss other matters, not confided to me to discuss, I therefore desired that he might meet yourself under a flag of truce, feeling confident that you would gain much valuable information on the status of affairs in this department. He accepted the idea of a flag of truce, and has appointed, as you will find per inclosed letter, a rendezvous at Point Isabel for the 9th instant. Hoping that I have done as you instructed and desired, I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES WORTHINGTON,
Special Agent Treasury Department.

Sir: In reply to your communication of this date, asking in behalf of the commanding officer of the U. S. forces at Brazos de Santiago an interview under flag of truce, to discuss matters relative to the rendition of criminals, I have the honor to state that it will afford me much pleasure to comply with your request, and designate Point Isabel as the spot, 12.30 p. m. of Thursday, the 9th instant, as the time for said interview.

Brigadier-General Slaughter,

Commanding at Brownsville, Tex.:

SIR: My attention having been called to a publication in the Brownsville Ranchero, of February 25, 1865, in which the editor says that in the matter of the extradition of criminals you are willing to enter into an agreement for their rendition, I therefore take pleasure in asking you if you would be willing to meet, under a flag of truce, the officer commanding U. S. forces at Brazos Santiago to discuss these matters! If you should be willing to meet him, will you be kind enough to designate the time and place most agreeable to yourself.

I have the honor to remain, yours, most respectfully,

CHARLES WORTHINGTON.

BRAZOS SANTIAGO, TEX., Friday, March 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. E. Slaughter,

Commanding West District of Texas:

General: Our mutual friend, Mr. Worthington, submitted to me his letter to you, dated March 6, 1865, and your reply of same date, in the latter of which you were pleased to designate Point Isabel and 12.30 p. m. of Thursday, the 9th instant, as the place and time for a meeting to discuss matters relative to the rendition of criminals. Mr. Worthington’s communication met my approval, and I hasten to inform you that I was ready to meet you at the appointed time and place. Unfortunately, and very greatly to my regret, the “norther” which prevailed so violently all day yesterday made it absolutely impossible to cross the bay. I send you this note by one of my officers to express to you my disappointment at yesterday’s failure, and to inform you that I will be glad if you will renew the arrangement for a meeting at the same place to-day or to-morrow. If you accede to this proposition I hope you will make no objection if I presume to furnish a supply of refreshments for your party and my own.

Oblige me by a reply at your earliest convenience, and consider me, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEW. WALLACE,

[Sub-inclosure No. 2.]

POINT ISABEL, TEX., March 12, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. E. Slaughter and
Col. J. S. Ford, C. S. Army:

Gentlemen: At your instance I beg leave to submit the following as a basis upon which it is possible, in my judgment, to secure a speedy peace. For the sake of a perfect understanding, permit me to say:

First. The proper authorities of my Government have not authorized me to present terms or make overtures of any kind to anybody.
Second. The propositions are drawn with particular reference to the Trans-Mississippi region, and to what I think is a certainty of their proving acceptable to my Government. It should be understood, therefore, that they are by no means in the nature of finalities. It would be presumption in me to undertake to announce in any manner what may be the results of negotiations sincerely conducted by parties properly empowered.

Third. I will venture to suggest that, considering the present situation, your highest present obligations are to your army, your civil authorities, and your citizens. A voluntary settlement on your part cannot, in my judgment, be hoped, unless the honor, happiness, and security of the three classes specified are guaranteed. To this end my propositions are drawn.

PROPOSITIONS.

I. That the Confederate military authorities of the Trans-Mississippi States and Territories agree voluntarily to cease opposition, armed and otherwise, to the re-establishment of the authority of the United States Government over all the region above designated.

II. The proper authorities of the United States on their part guarantee as follows:

1. That the officers and soldiers at present actually composing the Confederate Army proper, including its bona fide attachés and employés shall have, each and all of them, a full release from and against actions, prosecutions, liabilities, and legal proceedings of every kind, so far as the Government of the United States is concerned: Provided, That if any of such persons choose to remain within the limits of the United States, they shall first take an oath of allegiance to the same. If, however, they or any of them prefer to go abroad for residence in a foreign country, all such shall be at liberty to do so without obligating themselves by an oath of allegiance, taking with them their families and property, with privileges of preparation for such departure.

2. That such of said officers and soldiers as thus determine to remain in the United States shall, after taking the oath of allegiance to the United States Government, be regarded as citizens of that Government, invested as such with all the rights, privileges, and immunities now enjoyed by the most favored citizens thereof.

3. That the above guaranties shall be extended to all persons now serving as civil officers of the national and State Confederate governments within the region above mentioned, upon their complying with the conditions stated, viz, residence abroad or taking the oath of allegiance.

4. That persons now private citizens of the region named shall also be included in and receive the same guaranties upon their complying with the same conditions.

5. As respects rights of property, it is further guaranteed that there shall be no interference with existing titles, liens, &c., of whatever nature, except those derived from seizures, occupancies, and procedures of confiscation, under and by virtue of Confederate laws, orders, proclamations, and decrees, all which shall be admitted void from the beginning.
6. It is further expressly stipulated that the right of property in slaves shall be referred to the discretion of the Congress of the United States.

Allow me to say, in conclusion, that if the above propositions are received in the spirit they are sent, we can, in my opinion, speedily have a reunited and prosperous people.

Very truly, gentlemen, your friend and obedient servant,

LEW. WALLACE,

Major-General of Volunteers, U. S. Army.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., March 28, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 28th day of March, 1865: A report from Morganza, La., states that information through private sources has been received there that a number of leading rebel officers intended to cross the Mississippi near Morganza. The commanders of the naval vessels were notified, but up to date of the report no captures had been made. A deserter from Richmond (Hays' Louisiana regiment, Gordon's division), who left there on the 20th ultimo and reached Montgomery on the 14th instant, reports meeting about 3,000 deserters and furloughed men returning to their commands in the east. Every effort is made to catch the deserters, even to employing dogs to hunt them down, which is done in Mississippi and East Louisiana. There were no troops at Montgomery or Selma, nor at any point in Northern Alabama. The whole country was stripped of men to concentrate them at the points threatened by our forces. The informant was at Camp Moore, La.; on the 20th. There were no troops in the vicinity.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

Headquarters Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, March 28, 1865.

Assistant Adjutant-General,
Headquarters Military Division of the Missouri:

Herewith I forward papers, 1 to 12,* which will give the major-general commanding the military division some idea of the present state of the department and what has taken place in it since I assumed command, December 22, 1864. My instructions from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi were to assign to the posts to be held defensive garrisons, including all arms, and detach all the force possible for field operations. Nearly 8,000 effective men, infantry and cavalry, have been transferred from the department—8,925 present and absent (see No. 1)—leaving it strictly on the defensive. For estimate of defensive garrisons, see Nos. 2 and 3. No. 4 gives in detail the disposition of the infantry. No. 5 gives an exhibit of the condition of the cavalry, and by which it appears that the posts have been much weakened in horses to comply with the order in No. 6. The horses therein referred to as being en route from Saint Louis have not been heard from. The Separate Brigade of cavalry (see No. 5) is entirely dismounted; it is not assigned to any post, and it is designed for a movable force if it can be mounted. The proportion of artillery is considered ample for the present strength of the department if the batteries can be filled up. The mustering officers in Missouri have been authorized to muster in recruits for the batteries from that State, but as existing orders prohibit the sending of officers for recruits, we are likely to lose them unless Colonel Lothrop can take steps to have them forwarded. Attention is especially invited to No. 7, and it is respectfully requested that the application therein made for the filling up of regiments be urged by the major-general commanding the Military Division of the Missouri. Similar action is requested for the resupply of horses drawn from the department by virtue of No. 6. It is reported unofficially that there are horses at Saint Louis destined for this department, and No. 6 was evidently written with that understanding. No horses have been received. Nos. 8 to 12, inclusive, refer to matters at Fort Smith and vicinity.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

II. The Fiftieth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, now at Benton Barracks, will report for duty temporarily to the commanding officer of the Saint Louis District.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
1. The commanding officer Thirteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers will detach two companies of his regiment, under command of Maj. J. M. Turley, to move without unnecessary delay, with camp and garrison equipage, to Waynesville, Mo., and relieve the detachment of Fifth Cavalry Missouri State Militia now stationed at that point. Major Turley will report at once for special instructions at these headquarters.

KANSAS CITY, March 28, 1865.

General McNeil,
Warrensburg:

The guerrillas have scattered in the Sni Hills. Mullins has not a mounted man to send for them. When the troops ordered arrive I can clear them out.

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel, &c.

Pleasant Hill, Mo., March 28, 1865.

Colonel Harding, Kansas City:

I have sent Captain Peery to Warrensburg to fit up his new company. I have not a single mounted man left. There were about twenty-five of the bushwhackers that came up last Sunday. From what I hear they have scattered in the Sni Hills. The horse equipments for Captain Eads' company have been shipped and I have enough horses here to mount his men. I would be glad that he could be relieved as soon as possible at Hickman Mills to fit up.

A. W. MULLINS, Major.

Pleasant Hill, Mo., March 28, 1865—1.30 p.m.

Colonel Harding, Kansas City:

Messengers from Captain Wyckoff have just arrived. They left the captain with his company north of Kingsville this morning on the bushwhackers' trail. He will follow them into the Sni Hills and do what he can. He sends me word that there are from twenty-seven to thirty of the bushwhackers, badly mounted.

A. W. MULLINS, Major.

Warrensburg, Mo., March 28, 1865.

General Sanborn, Springfield, Mo.:

The thirty guerrillas turned up Sunday near Kingsville. They reported a larger party coming north a week or ten days behind them.
The Osage is bank full. They will try to cross at Benefee's Mill or College Ford, near Papinsville, but can only swim their best horses. I think you will find portions on Horse Creek and Clear Creek who are waiting to cross. These men report to their friends the breaking up of Marmaduke's command and the immediate return of most of the men to Missouri.

JOHN McNEIL,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., March 28, 1865.

Maj. WICK MORGAN,
Fifteenth Missouri Cavalry, Commanding at Greenfield, Mo.:
The general commanding directs that you send out a scout of twenty-five good men, under a competent officer, into the Horse Creek country. Instruct them to scout that section thoroughly as far as the mouth of Horse Creek. The men will be taken from the garrisons of Greenfield and Melville and will take a sufficient supply of ammunition and rations. You will report the results of the scout as early as possible.

Very respectfully,
WM. T. KITTEDGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 28, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 28, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:
Send three companies of the Forty-third right down and not wait till the new regiment is armed. The other company will do to garrison Saint Joe, and we need the men in Jackson and La Fayette.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 28, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:
Hurry down the four companies of the Forty-third. Colonel Harding need make no morning reports to you. The companies asked for by you have been approved.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Glasgow, March 28, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:

I have just received information from a spy that the guerrillas are committing numerous depredations on south side of river fourteen miles below here. If I have permission to cross I will hunt them down.

J. D. MEREDITH,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Cottonwood, March 28, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Saint Louis, Mo., Dept. of the Missouri:

Just received General Orders, No. 80. Came down to see condition of road. Will assume command immediately. Will go to Kearny in morning to hurry up Sixteenth Kansas and supplies, and will immediately return to Denver.

P. EDW. CONNOR,
Brigadier-General.

Headquarters District of Iowa,
Dubuque, Iowa, March 28, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. Pope,
Saint Louis:

General: In conversation with you some time ago I understood you to say that you intended the four companies of the Seventh Iowa Cavalry to form part of the garrison of the new post to be established. This battalion has been under orders to hold themselves in readiness to march to Nebraska. I hope their services may not be needed there, as I intend them to form a part of the expedition, and if you still intend they shall form part of a garrison to a post they can be left there. Should they be sent out of my district I will have trouble to get together twelve companies of cavalry, for I will only have that number in my command that I can order, one company being out of my reach.

With respect, your obedient servant,

ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., March 29, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 29th day of March, 1865: Reports from Vicksburg are confirmatory of previous statements in regard to Forrest's forces. He is concentrating all available troops in Mississippi at Macon and vicinity, nominally to meet a raid from Thomas or Grierson. Forrest himself at last accounts was at Tupelo, Miss.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. Jackson,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

(In absence of Capt. S. M. Eaton, chief signal officer, Military Division of West Mississippi.)

Special Orders, War Dept., Adjt. General's Office,

83. Capt. H. C. Hodges, assistant quartermaster, U. S. Army, will proceed without delay to New Orleans, La., and report in person to the commanding general Military Division of West Mississippi for assignment to duty.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. Townsend,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Memphis, Tenn., March 29, 1865.

Major-General Grierson,
Commanding Cavalry Corps, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi:

General: I arrived here last night and this morning called on General Washburn and made my business known to him, showing him at the same time my orders—yours and Colonel Christensen's letters. He told me at once that I could not get the cavalry I asked for. He says he thinks it is needed here more than below and that it cannot go. I told him that I should write to you and inform you of his reply. General Thomas left here only a day or two ago, so, I presume (though I did not feel at liberty to inquire). General Washburn, in his refusal to send this cavalry, was acting under General Thomas' orders. I shall leave here this morning, as I can accomplish nothing by remaining, and go at once to Louisville, where I expect to see General Thomas, when I will urge upon him the necessity of sending these regiments down. If I do not see him, I will at least communicate with him by telegraph and get his final orders.

I am, general, very respectfully,

C. J. Walker,
Capt., 2d Cav., and Special Inspector of Cav., Dept. of the Gulf.
Lieut. Col. GEORGE B. DRAKE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

SIR: I beg leave respectfully to inform you that under General Orders, No. 23, the plantations are being worked and the freedmen employed. Previous to the issue of the order thousands of unemployed negroes were reported, and there was the greatest danger that the number maintained in the department by the Government would be increased ten-fold. As soon as the order reached the agricultural districts the owners and lessees of plantations began to work, and merchants who under the Treasury system had positively refused to advance money, seeing some prospect of making crops, offered to loan the necessary funds. Prospects that had been blighted began to revive, and now I cannot find a single laborer whose services I can secure for any purpose. I have thousands of applications for laborers, but am unable to supply any. There is now the most satisfactory state of things in this branch of the public service. The freedmen's schools were never so largely attended, and the wages of labor are increased about $2 per month beyond those of last year. This fact, taken in connection with the fall in the prices of provisions and supplies, shows improvement, and the laborers themselves are better satisfied. The main question is that of employment on the one hand and idleness and vagrancy on the other. This is settled. There is plenty of employment for all the laborers in the department, and I could give work to 5,000 more. The freedmen suffer in the midst of two extremes. On the one hand are the old slave-holders and rebels whose prejudices against the black man lead them to consider it not unmanly or inhuman to treat them harshly or brutally; and on the other are the old free colored men, who are constantly exciting the ignorant freedmen, giving them an idea that they are oppressed and wronged by the Government. This renders them discontented, whereas in the simple and natural promptings of their minds they love the Government and are grateful for its benefits. Nearly all the plantation pay-rolls for last year are filed in this office. This plan, added to the registration ordered by the commanding general, gives success to the arrangement. Contracts are enforced without cost to the freedmen, which in the civil courts would involve heavy cost and endless persecution. The plan of securing payment has all the force of the plan for paying troops by the Pay Department. Provost marshals have been instructed, and it has been the invariable rule to pay over to relatives the wages due to laborers who have died. I believe that with an ordinary crop this year the present arrangement will prove the best that could be devised. At present there are good grounds for encouragement.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS W. CONWAY,
General Superintendent of Freedmen.

SPECIAL ORDERS,

heretofore made to headquarters District of Morganza will in future be

WM. H. Dickey,
Colonel Eighty-fourth U. S. Colored Troops.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
OFFICE OF PROVOST-MARSHAL-GENERAL,
Saint Louis, March 29, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Parsons,
Assistant Quartermaster-General, Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: Immediately upon entering on my duties here as provost-marshal-general my attention was drawn to the numerous cases of steam-boat burning by rebel emissaries on the Mississippi River and its tributaries. I received direct information from several quarters of the existence of organized bands sent here by the chiefs of the so-called Confederate Government to carry out their designs on our western transportation. The records of this office also furnished evidence, collected by my predecessors, to the same effect. Believing that an energegetic effort on my part would result in exposing and securing some of the parties engaged in this infamous and murderous business, and perhaps of breaking it up altogether, I began a secret and thorough investigation of the matter here in this city, gradually enlarging the field of my operations until I had detectives in several of the principal river cities in other departments, and on one occasion I sent my agents beyond the lines. My most sanguine expectations were more than realized. I procured not only evidence of the existence of these organized bands, but also the names of the leaders of some of them, and the modus operandi of carrying on their work, together with the names and location of men inside the rebel lines who have the immediate charge of it, under the Secretary of War. Some of the parties have been arrested and are now in Gratiot Street prison awaiting trial, among whom is the leader of a gang operating in Louisville, Cairo, Memphis, and Saint Louis, with headquarters here. The evidence shows that these men were at Richmond and Mobile last summer; that they had passes signed by James A. Seddon, Secretary of War, to enable them to move through rebel territory; that they crossed the lines in Mississippi within twenty-five miles of Memphis and subsequently scattered in various directions; that they brought a large amount of gold from Richmond, which it was understood among themselves was to pay for the burning of certain Government property at Louisville and Cairo last summer, &c. Charges have been drawn up against some of them, and their cases will be brought before a military commission at an early day. I am now on the track of other parties in New Orleans, Saint Louis, Mississippi, and Ohio, but at this juncture, just as I have got the matter fairly in hand, and have become acquainted with the names of parties, their haunts, and operations, the money at my command has given out and I am powerless to pursue the investigation further without means are furnished me for that purpose. From the knowledge I have acquired of boat burners and their operations, from New Orleans to Saint Paul, and from beyond the Mississippi to New York and the Atlantic coast, from the favorable location in which I am now placed to gain information of this character, and from having agents already trained to the service at my command, I am satisfied that I could, if the only drawback, the lack of money, was removed, not only effectually break up boat burning in the West, but also bring many of the boat burners and their abettors to punishment. I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. BAKER,

Colonel and Provost-Marshal-General, Department of the Missouri.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 31, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to Brig. Gen. L. B. Parsons, assistant quartermaster-general, Washington, D. C.

I have made requisition on the Secretary of War for $10,000, as secret-service fund to be used in this and other cases. We stand in great need of the money, and have no means of obtaining it in this department.

G. M. DODGE,

Major-General, Commanding

[Second indorsement.]

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., April 18, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Hon. C. A. Dana, Assistant Secretary of War.

By order of the Quartermaster-General:

LEWIS B. PARSONS,

Colonel and Chief of Rail and River Transportation.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, March 29, 1865.

Brig. Gen. N. B. Buford, U. S. Volunteers,

Rock Island, Ill.:

SIR: Your letter of March 20 has been received and the inclosure handed to the Secretary of War, as you requested. In reply the Secretary directs me to say that Lieutenant-General Grant, in giving the order which relieved you from command at Helena, assigned no reason for so doing. It is not, however, understood that any rebuke was intended by the order. Your request for assignment to a command at the East will be referred to General Grant.

I am, &c.,

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 29, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:
The force sent from Fort Laramie reports capture of 150 lodges of Sioux 150 miles north of that post, also that ninety lodges of Arapahoes have come in and given themselves up. It is a question with me where I shall send these prisoners to. I cannot feed them so far out.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 71. Saint Louis, Mo., March 29, 1865.

3. Chaplain E. O'Brien, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, is hereby assigned to duty as superintendent of refugees and contrabands for the Second Sub-District, headquarters Cape Girardeau. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation, including servant and authorized horses.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,

PLEASANT HILL, Mo., March 29, 1865.

Colonel HARDING,
Kansas City:

Captain Wyckoff has arrived here with his company. He lost the guerrillas' trail in the Sni Hills. They told the citizens at different places that they were going north of the Missouri River. The captain thinks they purpose doing so. He was compelled to come in for want of rations for his men. His wagons will be here to-night or to-morrow.

A. W. MULLINS,
Major.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., March 29, 1865.

Brigadier-General SANBORN:

There are in the counties of Benton, Washington, and Madison sixteen fresh colonies as agricultural settlements, twelve of which are well organized. They number an aggregate of about 1,200 men, mostly armed. The colonies all build fortifications. Not less than 15,000 acres will be cultivated this summer by them. Rebels are coming daily, and those that do not dare to come in are becoming bushwhackers. I think they cannot exist there long. The colonies on Pea Ridge number 108 men. They tell me they have 4,000 acres under fence, and will cut 800 acres of wheat in July. The people everywhere are in better spirits than ever before since the war began. We truly have cause to rejoice. We ask your good wishes and your countenance and co-operation whenever opportunity offers. I would like to have the above facts made public for the benefit of Northwestern Arkansas. I do hope you will make us a visit. When shall I expect you? I find General Bussey the right kind of a man, he working for the people and to put down rogues. He expects to visit us soon.

M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 29, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:
What is being done in Carroll County? Cannot you send a stranger in there, a good, reliable officer? How would Captain Roberts, who is now there, do?

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

CHILlicoTHe, March 29, 1865.

Brevet Major-General Fisk:
Have heard nothing of bushwhackers, except Captain Reed’s letter from you. Cannot you authorize me to raise a mounted company in Linn and Livingston each, for active service? Delay is dangerous.

I. V. PRATT,
Brigadier-General.

MACON, March 29, 1865—1.30 p. m.

Major-General DODGE:
Is it practicable for you to furnish a competent, faithful, honest officer for provost-marshal at Saint Joseph? A speedy change must be made. I have discovered a very rotten state of affairs in the conduct of the provost-marshal’s department in the northwest. Will report fully by letter. My best officers are now nearly all mustered out of the service. I have not volunteer officers enough to care for the troops and post commanders and constitute a court-martial.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

COTTONWOOD, March 29, 1865.

Major-General DODGE:
Lieutenant-Colonel Baumer reports the capture of the camp of Sioux I telegraphed you about from Kearny last week; also reports ninety lodges of Arapahoes within about forty-five miles of Laramie, coming to give themselves up and want peace. Where shall I send them! I cannot afford to feed them at Laramie. He also reports a large hostile body 190 miles northwest, working their way to North Platte. Please instruct me where to send the Indians already captured and the Arapahoes coming in.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, March 29, 1865.

Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor,
Denver:

Troops en route to Laramie and Julesburg, with those on the route, will give you 2,000 or over mounted men. I want this force pushed right on after the Indians. There are 400 pack-mules with them. There is also one regiment of U. S. Volunteer Infantry on the way to Kearny that can relieve considerable body of cavalry; also one or two more regiments will soon start for Leavenworth. About May 1 General Sully will leave Sioux City with a column and push west to Powder River and establish a post there. We will have to supply that column from Laramie. Allow no purchases or contracts made except first sanctioned by Colonel Potter, depot quartermaster, or myself. I have a large number of Canadian horses en route here which will be sent you. Notify me how many horses you want to mount your command. Write me fully as to Salt Lake, &c.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 29, 1865.

Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor,
Denver City, Colo.:

GENERAL: The District of the Plains was formed so as to put under your control the entire northern Overland route and to render effective the troops along it. With the force at your disposal you can make vigorous war upon the Indians and punish them so that they will be forced to keep the peace. They should be kept away from our lines of travel and made to stand on the defensive. Sufficient infantry to hold most of the posts will be sent you from the regiments raised from Confederate prisoners in our hands for service on the plains. They are officered by our own men. Depots should be designated where we can put in one year's supply. These depots should be well fortified. An engineer from these headquarters is now out examining the posts. I think there should be depots at Fort Kearny, Cottonwood, Julesburg, Fort Laramie, Fort Halleck, Valley Station—or some point between Julesburg and Denver—Denver, Fort Lyon, and Utah. As it is, each station is a partial depot, whereas a few depots that other posts can draw from we can put proper staff officers at them and have our stores properly taken care of and protected. The overland mail and telegraph must be protected at all hazards, and no excuse be given or allowed for stopping the mails. Order No. 41 from these headquarters prescribes manner of organizing trains, &c., and you must see that no interference with emigrant or private trains is allowed. The troops that have been lying at the different posts should, as soon as possible, be relieved and put in the field. I hear many complaints of them. Brevet Brigadier-General Ford leaves Fort Larned in a few days with 1,200 men to operate against the Indians on the Cimarron. The force at Fort Lyon will give him any aid he may require. They will also co-operate with General Carleton's troops, who are holding two routes from Fort Union, viz, one to Lyon and one to old Fort Atkinson, on the Arkansas. You are on the ground and are therefore the best judge of what will be the best use of your troops, their disposition at posts, &c. You are a stranger to me, but I have placed you in command, believing that you will bend all your energies to the common object and infuse life, discipline, and effectiveness into the forces under you, and give the Indians no rest. You will report by letter semi-monthly your operations, and telegraph me at all times anything you may have of sufficient importance. Contracts or purchases made except by my order or the order of the chief quartermaster of the department meet with great trouble in being audited and paid; in fact they are unauthorized and should be made only in most urgent cases and to answer a present emergency, and when you cannot confer with Colonel Potter or myself by letter or telegraph.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

COTTONWOOD, March 29, 1865.

Colonel MOONLIGHT:

I am in command of District of the Plains, composed of Districts of Utah, Colorado, and Nebraska; headquarters at Denver. Make no movement of troops until my return.

P. E. CONNOR,
Brigadier-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, }   HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE NORTHWEST,
No. 10.  }   Milwaukee, Wis., March 29, 1865.

Attention is called to the following proclamation.* The better to check the evil named and carry out the object of the President, all trade with Indians is forbidden north of the forty-fifth degree of north latitude, except as authorized and regulated by the proper district commanders, who will see that the spirit and intent of the proclamation are carefully observed. Persons selling or giving arms, ammunition, or equipment to Indians within that region, and without the special authority designated by the district commanders, will be liable to arrest, trial, and summary punishment according to the laws of war, and all officers commanding in that region will see to the prompt prosecution of such offenders. And all persons advising, aiding, or assisting Indians to go beyond our lines to trade, and all Indians, half-breeds, and other persons who procure arms or ammunition from "persons dwelling in foreign territory" for the use of Indians within the territory mentioned, will also be guilty of a military offense, and liable to punishment according to the laws and usages of war. The security of settlements and legitimate trade of the good citizens on both sides of our lines should be protected, and the rights of neutral powers must be respected, but avaricious and licentious persons must not combine with hostile Indians to enable them to carry on murder and massacre with our settlements; and swift and sure vengeance will overtake offenders against the provisions instituted to protect our people against Indian atrocities.

* See proclamation of the President, March 18, p. 1205.

By command of Major-General Curtis:

C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

KEOKUK, IOWA, March 29, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. SULLY,
Dubuque, Iowa:

GENERAL: I cannot judge so well as yourself in regard to proposed changes of the troops in your district and see no doubt of the propriety of the shifting companies as you suggest. Indeed, it is for you to judge of their best use. As soon as the upper portion of the Mississippi is clear of ice so boats can get up to Saint Paul and roads are passable I propose to go up perhaps as far as to the Red River of the North, and I shall hope to see you and General Sibley both for the purpose of fully understanding matters and exercising my own judgment in conjunction with yours. I have directed an order designed to carry out the object of the President's message, which will be sent you as soon as published. I thought the proclamation was plain enough, but at the suggestion of General Pope I have imposed some further restraints on Indian trade, which district commanders will have to attend to. I hope you will try to avoid any trouble with officers acting under instructions from the Interior Department. Of course, you will also respect the rights of neutrals who are within the British lines. The cupidity as well as the knavish jealousy of a few frontier traders must not draw us into acts of resentment that would involve complications between great national powers. If British traders come on our side to flourish their flag and trade with our enemies, civil or savage, our right to take and dispose of them summarily cannot be doubted, if we can catch them on our side. But it is better to bear with many indifferent or doubtful offenses when such traders would be surrounded with willing witnesses who would seek to make any retaliatory act appear as faulty and formidable as possible. I am here spending a few days at my own home, but expect to go again to Milwaukee before going to the upper country, and keep myself well posted as to business which goes to headquarters.

Hoping to see you soon, I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., March 30, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit for your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 30th day of March, 1865: A rebel prisoner gave the following information of the way in which the Confederate scouts enter our lines in La Fourche District to one whom he supposed to be a secessionist: Striking across the country from Centerville, on the Teche, they enter the Atchafalaya through Wax Bayou, south of Brashear City. Crossing the river they go up Bayou Shaffer to a point one mile below Hopkins' plantation, where the land was once cultivated, but is now overgrown with cane, briers, &c. A trail will be found there leading into the swamp on both sides of the bayou. One or two blazed trees are near. Mr. Fitz, who had a mill near there, confirms this statement, saying that some time ago a skiff with some articles in it was found at this place by some of his workmen. Mr. Henderson, at the Hopkins plantation, three miles from Tigerville, will know the exact locality. These scouts go in two directions, one toward Brashear City the other toward Tigerville, and return in the same way.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. JACKSON,
Major, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.
(In absence of Capt. S. M. Eaton, chief signal officer, Military Division of West Mississippi.)

NEW ORLEANS, March 30, 1865

Major-General Herron,
Baton Rouge:

The Confederate gun-boats were ordered down from Shreveport to Alexandria last Thursday. The heavy guns at Shreveport were being removed to Grand Ecore. The movement across the Mississippi may be expected. The force at Alexandria and below is being quietly strengthened and outposts re-enforced. Trade has been stopped. Notify the naval officers and watch the line closely.

By order of Brig. Gen. T. A. Davies:

D. J. CRAIGIE,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.
General Orders, No. 1.

In pursuance of General Orders, No. 80, Department of the Missouri, current series, the undersigned hereby assumes command of the District of the Plains, composed of the Districts of Utah, Colorado, and Nebraska, headquarters at Denver, Colo. Ter.

P. EDW. CONNOR,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

Headquarters Department of New Mexico,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., March 30, 1865.

Honorable Secretary of the Interior,
Washington, D. C., March 30, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor herewith to inclose for your information printed copies of General Orders, No. 3, series of 1864, and General Orders, No. 4, series of 1865, from these headquarters, which give an epitome of operations against the Indians within the Department of New Mexico for the last two years. You will observe in the summing up in General Orders, No. 4, that we have 3,000 Indian children now upon the reservation. It is in reference to these children that this communication is written. Last year I had the honor to request of the Secretary of the Interior that that Department furnish funds for the building of school-houses in which these children may be educated, but no answer was ever made to the letter. I now beg that you will take this important matter under consideration. It lies at the bottom of all our efforts to civilize these Indians. The education of these children is the fundamental idea on which must rest all our hopes of making the Navajoes a civilized and Christian people. It is unnecessary for me to put on paper the many arguments which I could use to convince you of the importance of having schools for these children. You can figure in your own mind 3,000 intelligent boys and girls with no one to teach them to read and write. Here is a field for those who are philanthropic, which is ample enough to engage their attention and be the object of their charities for many years. Without money to build school-houses and to buy books my hands are tied. The bishop of New Mexico has promised help in the way of teachers, but in my opinion this important subject should receive the fostering care of the Government. These children properly belong to your Department, and now, as well as when they have become men and women, are and will be objects which must engage your solicitude. I trust, therefore, that my appeal to you in their behalf will not be in vain. There is another point to which I beg to call your immediate attention. Last year I requested of you that the surveyor-general of New Mexico should cause to be surveyed the Indian reservation. This should be done at once. Not only should the exterior lines be run and be marked by durable mounds, but the irrigable lands should be laid off in ten-acre lots for assignment to different families. Perhaps even lots of a smaller size may be necessary. No permanent organization of the tribes into bands, nor identity of bands with particular fields, can be made fairly and justly until this survey is made. You are aware that there are no public surveys making either in this Territory or in Arizona which would interfere with this work.

Not one rood of land has been surveyed in New Mexico since September, 1862, to my knowledge; the reason was, perhaps, on account of the Indian difficulties. But there exists no reason why this important reservation may not at once be surveyed and be cut up into lots. I pray that this may be done at an early day.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, Headquarters District of Natchez,

FORT SMITH, March 31, 1865.

Col. M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Fayetteville, Ark.:

Colonel Stephenson reports that 100 Missouri rebels crossed the Arkansas and proceeded north, destroying the telegraph line near Horse Head. They were mounted.

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

MOUTH OF WHITE RIVER,
March 31, 1865—5.40 p.m.

Major-General REYNOLDS,
Little Rock, Ark.:

I telegraphed you from Saint Louis on the 27th to meet me at Helena this morning. Not finding you there I have come down to this place, where I desire to see you without delay. Bring the chiefs of your staff departments with you. Please acknowledge the receipt of this immediately. You know, of course, that your department was transferred to Military Division of the Missouri by War Department order of the 21st instant.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding Military Division of the Missouri.

HEADQUARTERS POST,
Lewisburg, Ark., March 31, 1865.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

COLONEL: A scout from the regiment recently captured four bush-whackers. One of them proved to have recently deserted the rebel army, and being impressed that his life was in peril for having been found with bushwhackers has, on the promise of having a pardon granted him, turned State's evidence. He has given much valuable information and has piloted a recent scout, corroborating many of his statements. He states that Captain Reasoner, pilot in Government employ, is engaged in supplying the rebels with ammunition, &c.; that he is now at the North and is daily expected back, and will bring with him 1,000 boxes of caps to leave with his family at Dardanelle for distribution. Reasoner has sent word to Heptenstall and Truett (captains of bushwhackers) to fire on the boat. When the firing has continued for some time he, Reasoner, is to run the boat to the bank and surrender; also that at one time when they had fired into the boat and wounded a woman, Reasoner was about to run the boat into the bank, but the firing ceased too soon. Reasoner has generally passed for a Union man. His family are noted rebels and reside in Dardanelle. I think the information well worthy of attention, and would advise that Reasoner be permitted to come up the river as usual, and when about to land at Dardanelle arrest him, with the packages he is about to take ashore with him.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel, Commanding Post.

FORT SMITH, ARK., March 31, 1865.

Col. M. LA RUE HARRISON,
Fayetteville, Ark.: It is reported to me that you have issued orders compelling all the people in Northwest Arkansas to join the colonies or they would not be permitted to raise any crops, and that there are many old men and widows with small boys who cannot join these colonies who will be left to starve. If you have issued such orders they must be revoked. I am clearly of opinion that such a policy is ruinous to the best interests of the people and the country. It is a military despotism. These colonies must be organized by the people for their own protection, and no person will be compelled to join. They will not be guaranteed any military protection whatever, and the military authorities will have nothing to do with coercing men to join them. I believe the colony system impracticable, but if the people want to try it they will be permitted and encouraged to do so. Loyal people, widows, and others, without teams will be permitted to cultivate their lands at home. The people residing in the country are not to be driven from their homes except for crimes against the Government, and are not to be molested, but will be protected by your command. You will immediately send me copies of all orders issued by you and continue to do so in future. It is also reported that an officer of your command said in a public speech in Fayetteville, in presence of enlisted men of your command, that he would burn the house and kill any man who would not join a colony. You will report the facts in this case. I have no use for such officers and will adopt measures to get rid of them.

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.—UNION.

FORT SMITH, ARK., March 31, 1865.

Col. M. La Rue Harrison,

Fayetteville:

My dispatch was for the purpose of eliciting the facts. I desire nothing but your own report on the subject. I am satisfied you are laboring for the interests of the people, but, if correctly informed, your subordinates exceed your instructions and oppress the people. So far as you communicated your plans when here, they were perfectly satisfactory. At the proper time I will inform you of several parties who reported to me.

Cyrus Bussey,
Brigadier-General.

CLARKSVILLE, ARK., March 31, 1865.

Brigadier-General Bussey,

Fort Smith:

M. L. Stephenson,
Colonel, Commanding.

FORT GIBSON, C. N., March 31, 1865.

General Bussey,

Commanding Fort Smith, Ark.:

Sir: There is under Major Cutler (now absent) and my agency some 5,000 or more loyal refugee Indians, embracing Creek, Seminole, Choctaw, and Chickasaw, who are absolutely on the verge of starvation, no supplies having been furnished within the last three weeks, owing in a great measure to the difficulty of transportation, teams hauling during the winter having been detained here so long that it is impossible to get them to try the trip again under such circumstances. Would you order that half rations of flour be furnished from the commissary here, to be returned or accounted for by the Indian Department, as you may direct.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Isaac Coleman,
U. S. Indian Agent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31, 1865—5.30 p. m.

Major-General Dodge,

Saint Louis:

The Secretary of War directs that all captured hostile Indians be held as prisoners and confined at convenient military posts till the Department of the Interior may see fit to provide for them. They may be made to labor and put in crops for their support. The selection of places of confinement is left to the decision of yourself and General Pope.

H. W. Halleck,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.
General Orders, Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
No. 87.

Saint Louis, Mo., March 31, 1865.

The trains of freighters and emigrants crossing the plains, and the arms and ammunition of the parties accompanying them, will not be seized or interfered with by any officer or troops of this command.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

General Orders, Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
No. 88.

Saint Louis, Mo., March 31, 1865.

I. In order that the people of Missouri may arm themselves and defend their homes, towns, and counties against guerrilla bands, outlaws, marauders, robbers, and armed rebel enemies of the United States, all restrictions upon citizens purchasing and carrying arms and ammunition for their own use in force in the State of Missouri are hereby removed.

II. Merchants or others taking advantage of this order to sell or otherwise furnish any arms or ammunition for the use or benefit of any guerrilla, outlaw, marauder, robber, or rebel enemy of the United States will be arrested and punished to the extent of the law.

III. Merchants selling arms and ammunition will keep a list of names of persons to whom they sell the same, with description, quantities of the articles sold, which said list will at all times be subject to inspection by the proper military authorities.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

FORT SMITH, March 31, 1865.

Brig. Gen. John B. Sanborn,
Springfield, Mo.:

About 100 Missouri rebels crossed the Arkansas River day before yesterday below Clarksville, and have gone toward Missouri. They destroyed the telegraph on the Little Rock line. I have no other information of them.

Cyrus Bussey,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Hqrs. Fifteenth Regt. Cavalry Missouri Vols.,
Mount Vernon, March 31, 1865.

Capt. William T. Kittredge,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Captain: I have the honor to report the result of a scout sent by me west of a detachment of Companies B and C of the Fifteenth Regiment Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, under command of Captain Roberts, which is substantially as follows:

We have scouted Spring River thoroughly from Carthage west down several miles below the line. We also scouted Center Creek and North Fork of Spring River to the mouth. We found no bushwhackers nor any fresh sign. On Spring River, about seven miles west of Carthage, we found a trail where some fifteen rebels had crossed and gone north, I presume, some five or six days ago; and some fifteen miles below there we found a trail where some six mules and one horse had crossed, going north, I suppose, six days ago. On Spring River, near the mouth of Center Creek, we found two camps, and from the sign I suppose there were from six to eight had been at each camp, and from all appearances I suppose they had been evacuated some ten days ago. There is no family on Spring River west of Sly's Mills. Those families that lived on Spring River when I was there before are gone; their wagon tracks went north.

Your most obedient servant,

SAMUEL E. ROBERTS,
Captain, Commanding Scout.

The scout left Mount Vernon the 25th instant and returned 30th. Made no discoveries. The captain informs me that there has been no forage or corn put up or fed in that country that he could discover.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN D. ALLEN,
Colonel, Commanding Regiment.

GENERAL ORDERS, HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
No. 17.
Macon, Mo., March 31, 1865.

The counties of Randolph, Howard, and Chariton will constitute the Sub-District of Howard, headquarters at Glasgow, Mo. Col. A. F. Denny, Missouri Militia, having reported at these headquarters for active service, is hereby assigned to the command of the Sub-District of Howard. Commanding officers of companies and detachments within the counties aforesaid will report direct to Col. A. F. Denny, sub-district commander.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk: THOS. J. TIDSWELL, JR.,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
No. 66.
Macon, Mo., March 31, 1865.

3. The detachment of Company M, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, stationed at Warrenton, Mo., will proceed without delay to Mexico, Mo., and report to the commanding officer of Company M for duty.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk: W. T. CLARKE,

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., March 31, 1865.

Col. B. W. LEWIS, Glasgow:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor herewith to hand you my indorsement on the paper from His Excellency Governor Fletcher and to reassure you that while I remain in command of this district I will at all times be pleased to afford you safe escorts and the best protection the means at my disposal will permit. I also inclose my indorsement upon your claim for damages sustained by the burning of your warehouse and contents by the rebel army at Glasgow in October last. The facts as set forth in your petition are substantially true, and I trust that you may eventually recover the damages sustained. The spring time is upon us and a few more weeks, at furthest, will demonstrate whether we are to have a renewal of former troubles or that peace and quiet so much to be desired. I am fully aware that very many of our best-informed citizens and most substantial loyalists are quite apprehensive that we are to be overrun with guerrillas of the most desperate and determined character, and I believe that you, to a certain extent, share in these fears.
Whether we are to have quiet or disorder rests mainly with the citizens at large. Troops alone cannot put down bushwhackers; citizens must co-operate. The national and State authorities are now in entire harmony in a vigorous effort to unite the people in a general crusade against the common enemy of mankind. I trust you will lose no opportunity to impress upon your fellow-citizens the importance of unity of effort. I fully recognize your eminent service in the past. I know how indus-triously you have labored to harmonize the conflicting elements and how earnestly you have exhorted your neighbors to join yourself and others in the restoration of quiet to your disturbed county. Had your advice been taken much of the woe that has fallen upon your fellow-citizens would have been arrested, but men would sow the wind. The harvest of whirlwind was certain to follow. How long will your neighbors give themselves over to strong delusions and believe lies? I will be pleased to hear from you frequently.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

WESTON, March 31, 1865.

General Fisk:

Thirty guerrillas crossed to this side of the river a few days ago below
Missouri City. Three of them have since surrendered to Lieutenant Praul, at Liberty. He has been scouting for the party, but succeeded in getting but one. This is the only party I hear of.

H. M. MATTHEWS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

CHILlicothe, March 31, 1865.

General Fisk:

Do I command the entire troops of the United States and Enrolled Missouri Militia in the Second District, First Division, Missouri, or not?
Who does?*

I. V. PRATT,
Brigadier-General.

CHILlicothe, March 31, 1865.

Brevet Major-General Fisk:

I have promised the volunteers to elect their own officers. There are a number of men raising these companies. I have a dispatch from Captain Tiffin to-day that there are 150 bushwhackers under Cy. Gordon and Thrailkill in Clay County; also a gang of seventeen on the river in Carroll County. The Carroll organization numbers sixty-three men.*

I. V. PRATT,
Brigadier-General.

CONFEDERATE CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 1, 1865.

Major-General Polignac,
Commanding Division, Minden, La.:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you hold your division ready to march to Alexandria by such routes as Lieutenant-General Buckner, commanding District of West Louisiana, shall direct.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 1, 1865.

Lieutenant-General Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 29, and to say that he has directed General Polignac to hold his division ready to march to Alexandria by such routes as you may direct. If you design transporting them by boats from Campti the necessary arrangements should be made to prevent delay at that point.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.
GENERAL ORDERS, Hdqrs. District of Indian Territory,
No. 1.

Fort Towson, C. N., January 1, 1865.

II. The major-general commanding has been furnished by Brig. Gen. Henry E. McCulloch, commanding the Northern Sub-District of Texas, with his General Orders, No. 33, dated December 29, 1864, which he has caused to be printed and distributed for the information of the troops of this district. Order after order has been issued from these headquarters prohibiting those in the military service in the district from leaving the same without authority from district headquarters, yet the major-general commanding is constantly receiving notice of men of the district being in Texas without such authority. In some instances complaints have been filed of depredations committed. It is hereby ordered that no officer, soldier, or employé in the military service of the Government on duty in this district shall leave the same without authority from these headquarters. Any person violating this order will, upon notice thereof, be brought before a general court-martial, and any men of the cavalry violating the same will, upon proof thereof, be transferred to the infantry or artillery. To avoid all mistakes, whenever an officer approves a pass or furlough he will transmit it through the proper channel to these headquarters. No pass or furlough will be approved here when presented in person by the applicant, and the officer who delivers the same will subject himself to a general court-martial. In addition to the imperative necessity of this course, for the good government of the troops, it is of the utmost importance that no collision or difficulties should spring up between the troops of this district and the authorities in Texas. The major-general commanding calls on all the officers of the district to give force and efficiency to this order.

By order of Major-General Maxey:

T. M. SCOTT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, Hdqrs. Northern Sub-Dist. of Texas,
No. 33.

Bonham, December 29, 1864.

Recent thefts, robberies, and murders committed in this county by lawless men renders it necessary that our country should be cleared of all men who do not properly belong to it, or who are here from the army without proper authority. Hence, all officers commanding troops in this sub-district are ordered to use their utmost exertions to arrest all such, and if officers or soldiers return them to their commands in arrest, and if persons not officers or soldiers but owing military service to the Confederate States, send them to the nearest enrolling officer, to be disposed of by him as law and order directs. No orders, leaves of absence, or furloughs or passes will be respected unless given by authority of the commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department or the commander of some district, by General Greer, commandant of conscripts, Brig. Gen. J. B. Robertson, commanding Reserve Corps of Texas, or from these headquarters. And should any party be found in the brush or banded together to resist the lawful authorities they will be fired upon at once and shot as long as they resist or try to escape. Officers of the Reserve Corps will proceed at once to enforce this order in their respective districts and counties, and will as far as practicable co-operate with the enrolling officer and will report all who fail to do their duty and prosecute all citizens who permit soldiers from the army or enrolled conscripts without proper papers to stay at or be fed from their homes or premises. Officers of the Reserve Corps being charged with the enforcement of this order, any neglect of duty by them will be promptly punished.

By order of Brigadier-General McCulloch:

B. E. BENTON,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 1.

Hdqrs. Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, La., January 2, 1865.

I. The general commanding having been informed that unauthorized persons are collecting the "tax in kind," it is hereby announced that only regular officers and agents on "tax in kind" duty, bonded quartermasters and commissaries, and those persons specially authorized by the officers in charge, or controlling quartermasters of States, can give valid receipts to a producer for his tithe tax. All other persons than those specified above are positively prohibited from giving receipts, which would be unjust impositions and worthless to the tax-payer. Commissaries and quartermasters serving with troops, and those purchasing supplies, can only collect tithes when specially authorized by the chiefs of their respective departments. Those who have collected any portion will receipt immediately therefor to the officer in charge of the district where the collections have been made, or in his absence to the controlling quartermaster of the State. They will strictly conform to the orders on this subject from the Adjutant and Inspector General's Office at Richmond. This order will be published immediately by the district commanders, who will cause every officer or soldier guilty of any violation thereof to be promptly arrested.

II. Maj. J. F. O'Brien, Provisional Army, C. S., is assigned to duty in the inspector-general's department, and will report to Col. Ben. Allston, inspector-general.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS WEST SUB-DISTRICT OF TEXAS,
Brownsville, January 2, 1865.

Capt. S. D. YANCEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have the honor to report through you to the commanding general that Lieut. Col. Mat. Nolan, of Benavides' regiment, was assassinated at Corpus Christi. I can account for this only in one way: He was walking in company with one Mat. Fox and was met by two brothers, named Gravis, whose sister had been seduced by Fox. They were determined to kill Fox, and as Nolan was sheriff of the county and would be the strongest witness against them, they destroyed him also. The murderers had not at last accounts been discovered. Capt. S. L. Scott's company, of Bradford's regiment, will shortly start for its command. I detained them for the purpose of supplying them with clothing, of which they stood absolutely in need; in fact, was next to impos-possible for them to proceed to the interior in the condition in which they were. I desire also that they act as guard to the large number of prisoners I am forced to send to district headquarters. The enemy upon Brazos Island have been re-enforced by 320 men. Their force now numbers 1,600, two thirds of whom are negroes. Since being re-enforced a party of 300 infantry and a small support of cavalry crossed over to the mainland and attacked our advance picket-line, driving them steadily back to the reserve line of pickets, who in turn drove them back. No casualties on our side; cannot say definitely as to the results to the enemy. Owing to the scarcity of corn my troops are scattered so as to procure grass. Corn is selling at such a high figure that I do not consider the resources of our Government will permit of its purchase for this command.

The most amicable relations exist between myself and the authorities in Mexico. I have negotiated a treaty with General Mejia, a copy of which I will forward to you in a few days, by which all criminals and refugees from justice on either side will be returned upon requisition, and also armed parties will be permitted to cross the river in pursuit of fugitives.

My chief quartermaster and chief commissary are both absent, using every effort to establish depots of supplies at Ringgold Barracks and San Diego (the latter seventy miles from Corpus Christi), at each of which I shall accumulate twenty days’ rations for 2,000 men. I think with the full support of chief quartermaster and chief commissary of the district I will be able to supply the wants of this command almost entirely from the interior. As soon as I can get in the muster-rolls of this command I will be able to forward exact report of number of men, how armed and equipped, and such other information as will fully acquaint the commanding general with the condition of affairs upon the frontier. Many of the horses are broken down and completely worn out, and men owning them are unable to remount themselves.
I am endeavoring to collect 500 mustangs to replace them, and send this stock to the rear to recuperate. Upon arrival here I found this command totally demoralized; plundering and robbery was perpetrated indiscriminately. I have checked this in a measure, and by my orders large numbers of deserters have either fled the country or been ordered to their legitimate commands. One company, Captain Chapman’s, composed almost entirely of deserters who have been pardoned and assigned to duty under instructions from General Magruder, have scattered since the reception of orders for the company to report at these headquarters, being fearful as to the course which would be pursued toward them. I had no force to send in company with the order to enforce obedience thereto, but I think it is best for all such men to be driven out of the country, as they cannot be depended on in case of necessity. I have divided my command into four divisions; are commanded by Col. C. L. Pyron, Col. A. C. Jones, Col. Santos Benavides, Col. J. S. Ford.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. E. SLAUGHTER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, HDQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT, No. 2.

Shreveport, La., January 3, 1865.

I. Whenever ordnance stores are lost or damaged in any brigade it will be the duty of each brigade, division, or district commander, at the request of his ordnance officer, or of any officer accountable for ordnance stores, to appoint as often as necessary a board of survey, to consist of three officers, to assess the value of or damage to such stores. The decision of this board, with the approval of the brigade, division, or district commander, will be final, and it will be the duty of the brigade, division, or district ordnance officer to notify the company commander to stop the amount on the muster-rolls when privates are found chargeable, and when officers are found chargeable, instead of reporting to the Secretary of War, as required by paragraph 921, Army Regulations, he will notify the brigade quartermaster or the chief quartermaster of the district to have the amount stopped at the next payment. Duplicates of such notifications will be sent to the chief of the ordnance bureau, Trans-Mississippi Department, to be transmitted by him to the second auditor of the treasury at Marshall, Tex. A statement of all stoppages made by the board of survey against officers and men will be furnished by the brigade, division, or district ordnance officer to the brigade inspector or other officer having charge of that duty, who will see that these stoppages are actually made. The above instructions will also be adhered to in the artillery, where the board of survey will be called by the commanding officer of the troops with whom the battery or company may be serving.

II. Ordnance sergeants will remain habitually with their regiment and will keep themselves constantly informed as to the positions of the brigade ordnance train.

III. Issues of cartridges, except to cover expenditure in action will be limited to three rounds for each man per month, for the effective strength of the command. Should it appear from the property returns that the expenditure has exceeded this limit the money value of the excess will be stopped against the ordnance officer, as presented in paragraph I of this order.

IV. The chief ordnance officer of the army or district will report, within thirty days after the expiration of each quarter, any failure on the part of the officers in the command to which he is attached to make the returns required by the regulations.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[January 3, 1865.—For Belton to Buckner, relative to transfer of troops to east of the Mississippi, see Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 765.]

GENERAL ORDERS, [Hdqrs. Trans-Mississippi Department,]
No. 3. [Shreveport, La., January 4, 1865.]

I. The following order is published for the information of all concerned:

EXCHANGE NOTICE, No. 13.] RICHMOND, December 1, 1864.

1. All Confederate officers and men who have been delivered by the Federal authorities at any place prior to November 25, 1864, are hereby declared to be exchanged.

2. All officers and men of the Vicksburg capture of July 4, 1863, who reported at any parole camp either east or west of the Mississippi River, at any time prior to November 1, 1864, are hereby declared to be exchanged.

R. OULD,
Agent of Exchange.

II. All officers and men who have been exchanged by Notices No. 12 and 13 will report for duty with their respective commands without delay.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
President Davis:

Sir: The cotton speculation on the Mississippi River has been carried on for the last ten or twelve months on a very extensive scale, under the pretense of obtaining clothing for the army, which has had, and is still having, a very demoralizing influence in the Confederate Army in the Trans-Mississippi District. In my opinion nothing but the timely movement of General Steele from Little Rock last spring, in the direction of Shreveport, ever prevented this army from becoming completely demoralized, and disbanding and going home. The same influence is at work now. The soldiers, I am sorry to say, are deserting and going home and to the enemy in consequence of the cotton speculation that is now going on on the Mississippi River, and unless there is a stop put to it I fear the consequences. Last spring a Mr. Chittisto (a considerable stage contractor) and others, sold thousands of bales of cotton to the enemy on the Mississippi River. He had, I understand, permission from General E. Kirby Smith to pass any amount of cotton through our lines and sell to the Federals, for the purpose of procuring clothing for army, cotton cards, medicines, &c. Not a suit of clothing for the soldiers, or cotton cards or medicines has ever been received that I am aware of. This fall General E. Kirby Smith has appointed Colonel Polk the head of the Cotton Bureau established on or near the Mississippi River. Colonel Parsons was ordered to report to Colonel Polk to protect the cotton trade that is carried on with the enemy. The trade is carried on, as I understand, in the following manner: Each planter or individual who has cotton to sell is first required to give or make a present of one-half of his cotton to the Government of the Confederate States without any compensation, the remaining half he then has the privilege of selling to whom he pleases under the permit and protection of General Smith. Thousands of bales of cotton have recently been sold to the enemy in this way. The wagons are guarded and escorted to the river by our soldiers. The above statement I submit to you for your consideration. The whole matter can be clearly established by abundant proof. There is, I presume, a large quantity of the cotton formerly purchased by the Confederate States of America returned to Richmond as being burned. A large quantity of the cotton so returned has been stolen, and a portion sold to the enemy. There is yet remaining in the country a good portion of the cotton, which might be brought to light by a strict investigation, and unless the cotton trade is stopped I would not give the Government (comparatively speaking) much for the cotton which she owns in this country. The above statement I respectfully submit to you for your consideration.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBT. W. McHENRY.

[Indorsement.]

True copy respectfully furnished Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck, Chief of Staff, for information.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

[January 5, 1865.—For Buckner to Belton, relative to transfer of troops to east bank of the Mississippi, see Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 765.]
Major-General MAGRUDER,
Commanding District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: Inclosed is a copy of a letter to General Maxey, directing him to remove Gano's brigade from the vicinity of Laynesport. The scarcity of forage in the Red River Valley compels the removal of the cavalry without delay from that section of country. The supplies there should be husbanded for the support of our infantry and operations in the spring. I am led to believe that in Kaufman, Dallas, and Van Zandt Counties, near the Trinity, there is considerable forage. I will transmit all the information I can collect on this subject from the "tax in kind bureau." As soon as the reorganization of the cavalry has been effected, if not all dismounted, it must be sent to the rear, where forage and supplies can be obtained. The section suggested by me is probably the most suitable one. An officer of judgment should be immediately sent to examine the country and select a camp. Strict rules and camp regulations should be prepared, and the officer in command instructed to keep up constant drill and enforce order and discipline. The best disciplined and efficient brigade should be retained for service in the district. It can be relieved whenever the condition of the cavalry sent to the rear will admit of it. I would suggest the expediency, if practicable, of transferring the carbines, revolvers, and sabers to one or more regiments, to be drilled and employed as cavalry proper. The rest of the commands to be instructed as infantry armed with long guns, made to understand that they are in fact mounted infantry, that they are to fight on foot, and are mounted only for the purpose of moving rapidly from place to place. I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General, Commanding.

[January 6, 1865.—For Smith to Cooper relative to transfer of troops to east bank of the Mississippi, see Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 764, and for Smith to Beauregard on same subject, see Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 766.]

Major-General MAXEY,
Commanding District of Indian Territory:

GENERAL: In reply to your communication of 30th ultimo, inclosing copies of your correspondence with Governor Pitchlynn upon the subject of the existing scarcity of supplies in your district, the commanding general instructs me to say that Major-General Magruder was to reorganize the cavalry of his command on the 2d instant. He has been instructed as soon as this is effected to reserve only such force as may be required for present service in his district and to send the remainder to the rear in the vicinity of the Trinity River. This will relieve in a great measure the drain made on the counties of Red River for supplies. The commanding general expects soon to be able to have your district furnished with funds. I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieutenant-General Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

General: I am directed by the commanding general to inform you that he places under your control all operations in cotton through the enemy's lines. All proposals or contracts for the introduction of supplies and the purchase of cotton will be submitted to you. Major Buckner has been directed to report to you for duty in connection with this matter. Captain Polk will be instructed to report to Major Buckner, who can control his operations in the District of Arkansas.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. Belton,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Shreveport, La., January 6, 1865.

[General E. K. Smith:]

General: Herewith I inclose to you a copy of the Texas Republican containing a lengthy communication from one Thomas C. Reynolds filled with the most gross and violent charges against myself as the commanding officer of the late expedition to Missouri. Were this but the malignant effusion of a simple individual it would be but of passing moment, but as Mr. Reynolds pretends to be the governor of the State of Missouri, and so describes himself in the communication, it assumes a grave and public character, and the interests of the State demand that the matter should be investigated. If the charges made in the communication are true, I am unfit to be intrusted with any command in the Army, and action should be had accordingly. If they are untrue, the interests of the service as well as justice to myself require that my character as an officer should be vindicated. I therefore respectfully solicit that you request Governor Reynolds, as he styles himself, to prefer charges against me, and that you order a court-martial to be convened to try the same at as early a day as the exigencies of the service will possibly admit.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Sterling Price,
Major-General.

General Orders, {Hdqrs. Trans-Mississippi Department,

Bryan, Provisional Army, C. S.; Col. M. R. Cullen, Provisional Army, C. S.; Lieut. J. W. Hardie, Provisional Army, C. S., judge-advocate.

II. All orders heretofore issued from department headquarters relating to the pay of "bonded agents" are hereby revoked. From the 1st of August, 1864, they will receive the pay and allowances of a captain of infantry.

III. Surg. L. T. Pim, Provisional Army, C. S., is announced as assistant to the chief of the medical bureau, Trans-Mississippi Department.

* For record of the Price Court of Inquiry, see Vol. XLI, Part I, p. 701

V. Paragraph VI of General Orders, No. 40, series of 1864, from department headquarters, is amended as follows: When sugar and molasses are not issued the ration of fresh beef will be one pound and a half, or of bacon three-quarters of a pound, of flour one pound and a half, or of corn meal one pound and a half.

Paragraph II of General Orders, No. 62, series of 1864, from department headquarters, is hereby revoked.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 8, 1865.

Col. Josiah Gorgas,
Chief of Ordnance, Richmond, Va.:

Colonel: Capt. P. Mohl is sent to you by General Huger with instructions to endeavor to effect the introduction from abroad of arms and accouterments to meet the necessities of the army in this department. The requisitions call for at least 14,000 stand of arms for the troops in the field. While the Reserve Corps remains unarmed, 25,000 stand of arms with accouterments could be well used in this department. I recommend that these arms and accouterments be purchased abroad on the credit of the first cargoes of cotton sent from this department to Fraser, Trenholm & Co. The delay will be too great if we wait until the present plan of the Treasury Department for the introduction of supplies has been put in practical operation. I understand that Alexander, Collie & Co. have a very large number of Enfield rifles in the West Indies, under a contract with our Government. Arrangements might be made for the immediate delivery here of these arms and accouterments, consigned to Major Rhett, chief of ordnance, and the agent of the Treasury for this department instructed to provide for the payment thereof.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. K. SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 8, 1865.

Hon. John Slidell,
Paris, France:

Sir: I have the honor again to invite your attention to the state of affairs in this department. Our cause has reached a crisis to call for foreign intervention. It cannot be too strongly impressed upon the Emperor of the French that the security of his empire in Mexico and the interests of his own Government all demand immediate interference to restore peace and establish firmly the nationality of the Confederate States. I have formed the opinion from careful observation that in the great slave districts of this department nineteen-twentieths of the planters would at this time willingly accept any system of gradual emancipation to insure our independence as a people. Major-General Polignac, who visits France on leave of absence, is charged with the delivery of this communication. He has been in correspondence with the Count De Morny, who urges his return, and expresses the belief that our interests abroad will be advanced thereby. General Polignac is thoroughly informed as to the existing state of affairs here, and understands fully our position. I commend him to you as devoted to our cause. He may possibly be made useful as a medium of communication with the French authorities.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 8.

Shreveport, La., January 9, 1865.

Col. S. M. Baird, with his command, will repair forthwith to Nacogdoches, Tex., and report to Major-General Wharton for duty.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Shreveport, January 9, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN A. WHARTON,
Commanding Cavalry, Nacogdoches:

GENERAL: Brown's regiment has been ordered to report to you. The general commanding directs me to say that from present indications your command will soon be required, and desires you to keep your command together, ready to move at a moment's notice.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

RICHMOND, January 10, 1865.

[General Sterling Price:]

MY DEAR GENERAL: We have been greatly agitated for the last two weeks by repeated rumors of your death, by apoplexy, on the 1st of December, at Dooley's Ferry. The arrival of Mr. Early last Saturday has set our minds at ease, as he reports that he saw you on the 8th. You would have felt greatly complimented had you witnessed the feeling which these rumors created and had you heard the eulogiums which Harris and others pronounced upon you. We have not yet received a line from any of you since your return from Missouri, nor have we any authentic intelligence of your expedition. Schaumburg writes to me that you brought out about 12,000 recruits. Do have the muster-rolls made out at once and sent hither direct from your headquarters. Do not transmit them through either district or department headquarters, but send them straight here. Maclean or Shaler will attend to it. If we had them here now and under existing circumstances you would receive your commission as lieutenant-general, certainly. There is a general desire here for the transfer to this side of the Mississippi of a portion of the Trans-Mississippi forces. I have done and shall continue to do all that I can to prevent this, as I believe that these troops can be more usefully employed there than here, but I fear that General Smith's inactivity will result in the loss to him of his troops. It is, however, most likely that the Missourians will not be ordered hither in any contingency and I hope that none others will be. But they will be ordered hither unless they are employed there. There is a strong effort being made on the part of the Louisianians to supersede Smith with Bragg, but most of the other Trans-Mississippi representatives are violently opposed to this. Many of them, probably the majority, would be glad if the President would send Joe Johnston thither, and I think that General Johnston would be glad to go, but I do not think there is much probability of the change being made. The opinion that I express uniformly is that General Smith is greatly overtasked, and that the way to remedy the difficulty is to create the office of Assistant Secretary of War for the Department of the Trans-Mississippi, and to devolve upon that office the administrative and political duties of the department, leaving to the commanding general only the purely military duties of his office. Whilst I am sure that this ought to be done,
I am equally sure that nothing will be done. The truth is the people of the South have very little administrative ability, and the President has less of it than almost any other man in the South. He cannot learn the art of using other men's brains and hands. It is this want of administrative ability and the removal of Johnston, with all its disastrous consequences, which have brought us to the very verge of ruin.
I cannot venture to explain to you the dangers which now threaten us.
They are very great and have appalled many who have hitherto been hopeful, but they are not by any means insurmountable, and Congress is addressing itself earnestly to the task of removing or overcoming them. Both Houses were in secret session to-day upon questions of the gravest importance, and in open sessions we are perfecting bills for the thorough reorganization of the Army. The opposition to the employment of negro troops is growing weaker daily, and I think it almost certain that at least 100,000 of them will be put in the Army next spring. General Lee, whose opinions on all subjects are omnipotent, advocates the measure warmly, and the army here seems to be anxious for the experiment to be made. The simple truth is that there is no alternative for it, in the opinion of General Lee and many of our wisest men.

I inclose a copy of the consolidation bill as it passed the House to-day and also of the amendments which I proposed to it. My first section failed by only three votes. My second was amended so as to remove all restrictions upon the eligibility of officers, and I then voted against it myself. I do not like the bill and voted against it. I think the Senate will materially modify it. The currency seems to be past cure, but we have adopted a measure which may re-establish it. Vest received his credentials yesterday as Senator. General Clark and Counrow denounce the appointment bitterly as unjust to the people on the nor'h side of the Missouri. Vest has not yet offered to take his seat. He may be refused admission, but I do not think that likely.
We are all well and generally vote together and are looked upon as supporters of the Administration. They are all friends to you. I kept very quiet until the military bills came up, but have talked a vast deal upon them. Fortunately we have no reporters. Six weeks ago gold was worth in Richmond twenty for one. It now commands over sixty for one. I fear that it will command even more than that in another week. Flour is worth $700 a barrel, &c.

Wednesday morning, January 11.—Colonel Carroll, the newly elected member from Arkansas, has just arrived. He tells us that you had not, when he left on the 14th of December, gotten together more than 2,500 of your reputed recruits. Why don't some of you write to us and let us know the truth? I place no reliance upon the verbal statements of any person as to the strength of armies, and shall never ask any action to be taken by the Government on any such statements or rumors. You all complain of the inaction of the Government here, and yet it cannot act prudently without official information as to the status of things there. You all must not expect us to act any more upon rumors of reputed organizations. Neither the President nor the Secretary of War will listen to us, and they ought not; nor ought any one else who has a grain of sense. Crow, to whom I have shown this sentence, and who is a man of mighty good sense, says that there is no use in writing thus, as he knows from experience that it will not be regarded or attended to. I do hope that he is mistaken and that we may receive from you information upon which we may act without incurring the certainty of being set down as dupes or liars. The gloom thickens daily. I have this moment heard some facts as to the supply of subsistence for this army, which, whilst they do not alarm me, do terrify a great many. They would alarm me if I did not feel sure that when the utter incompetency of our present administrative officers becomes as evident to others as it is to me, measures radical and dangerous, it is true, but stern and vigorous, will be adopted and be found efficacious. It is right, however, that you should know that a very large number of our people are greatly alarmed and ready to seek safety in any alliance that can be made with France or even in reconstruction. I do not, however, think that their fears are well grounded. I send you extracts from the latest papers which will give you all the news that you have not probably received or which I am at liberty to communicate. I have written very fully within the last ten days to Cabell, Maclean, Parsons, and others and presume that my letters have been received by them. I have no time to write to any one else to-day, nor any more to you. Please give my kindest regards to them, to Brinker, Monroe, and, indeed, all of my friends near you. I will write to some of them in a few days. The messenger who takes this leaves this afternoon. All of the delegation desire me to express their very sincere delight that the rumors of your death were baseless. They are all friends of yours. I understand that my wife is still in Saint Bonis and under military surveillance at home. I hear nothing from her directly.

Again, with the sincerest love to you and to all of my old friends, I am, faithfully, &c.,

SNEAD.

Headquarters District of Arkansas,
Washington, January 11, 1865.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Boggs,
Chief of Staff:

GENERAL: I am informed by Lieut. Col. Clay Taylor, just from Camden, Ark., that two Federal boats are now on the Ouachita River en route to Camden to get cotton. I object to these boats coming up to Camden, and have ordered them to be stopped at or near Spring Hill, La. They should be halted at all events below the Mervie Saline, as I do not wish the enemy to learn the position of my pontoons and works, which information they would most certainly get if allowed to come higher up the river, and particularly if allowed to come to Camden. This is evidently the first step toward taking possession of the Ouachita River. I have given instructions to the parties ordered to stop these boats not under any circumstances to interfere with or damage the boats or anything on them, and to strictly respect the flag of truce under which these boats are coming up the river. In accordance with instructions from department headquarters directing me to have destroyed all the cotton that was in danger of falling into the hands of the enemy, I have ordered all cotton east of the Ouachita River to be destroyed.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. MAGRUDER,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS,} HDQRS. BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION, } TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 1.

Marshall, Tex., January 13, 1865.

I. The following act of Congress is published for the information of all concerned:

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That every person not subject to the rules and articles of war who shall procure or entice a soldier or person enrolled for service in the Army of the Confederate States to desert, or who shall aid or assist any deserter from the Army, or any person enrolled for service, to evade their proper commanders, or to prevent their arrest to be returned to the service, or who shall knowingly conceal or harbor any such deserter, or shall purchase from any soldier or person enrolled for service any portion of his arms, equipments, rations, or clothing, or any property belonging to the Confederate States, or any officer or soldier of the Confederate States, shall, upon conviction before the district court of the Confederate States having jurisdiction of the offense, be fined not exceeding $1,000, and be imprisoned not exceeding two years.

Approved, January 22, 1864.

II. Enrolling officers are instructed to call the attention of citizens to the said act of Congress, and to collect such arms as certainly belong to the Government in the hands of citizens of their respective counties or parishes. It is not at all probable that there are any Enfield rifles, or rifle muskets in this department belonging to private individuals. They are the property of the Government, and will be seized as such.

III. Enrolling officers are enjoined to use the utmost activity and every exertion to collect these arms, and will report specifically the arms taken, with the names of the persons from whom they were taken, to the commandants of their respective States.

IV. Enrolling officers will not send conscripts to these headquarters for assignment. They must be sent to the camps of instruction.

By command of Brigadier General Greer:

W. STEDMAN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, ARK., January 13, 1865.

Colonel Johnson:

Colonel: I am in receipt of your letter of November 9, which I read with pleasure. There is no news of any interest here at this time. All eyes are directed toward Richmond and the department on the coast east of the Mississippi River. Of the result of the raid into Missouri you have heard days ago. I regret exceedingly I cannot report favorably of the condition of affairs here; probably they will improve soon, but our army is wanting in everything save discipline to make it effective for the coming campaign. I hope for the best. By a united heart and hand we will succeed here. Our infantry of this district I think has been increased about 4,000 men by dismounting cavalry. Our force in the department is ample were it properly prepared for the field. Remember me in kindness to my friends in Richmond, and I trust the next news we get from you will be of General Lee's great victory.

Very truly, yours,

CHAS. S. MITCHELL.

of Staff, for information.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE, MISSOURI INFANTRY,

Col. GEORGE G. VEST,
Member of Congress, Richmond, Va.:

MY DEAR COLONEL: Please accept my warmest thanks for your good letter handed me on yesterday, and permit me to say I feel obliged to you for the very complimentary manner in which you chose to speak of me. I fully believe you appreciate my friendship for you, and I take this occasion to say, while you are absent I am trying to guard well your interest here. In regard to my appointment I have only to say, if my services and seniority do not entitle me to it, I do not want it, nor shall I ask for promotion, but leave the matter entirely with those who feel and know the interest of the service. General Magruder has recommended me for promotion, and I am led to believe General Smith will consider favorably my interest. Since reading your letter I have directed that complete returns be made of my brigade and forwarded, as you suggested, by some reliable person, direct. This General Magruder has consented to. In a few days I hope to be able to forward the returns. At this time I am actively engaged in reorganizing the recruits assigned to me from the dismounted cavalry of General Price's army, which, when finished, will make my command one of the most effective in the department, and should I be permitted to command it during the next campaign I will try and see that it does honor to the noble State they represent.

Parsons is now commanding the Missouri division of infantry, but will be returned to his brigade so soon as General Price returns from leave of absence. This division will distinguish itself whenever called into action. It is regarded as the best one this side of the river.
Affairs here are in any other state than a satisfactory one. The great want of subsistence in this district is truly alarming. Already our forces are forced to draw their supplies and occupy Red River. By ref-ence to the map you will see that a great part of the district on this side of the Arkansas River is not fully protected. It is true we have a small garrison at Camden and a few mounted men in that direction, but I hold that country is given up for the present. But we have the satisfaction of knowing that it is also untenable for the Federals. I hope, nevertheless, by a united heart and hand, we will be able to destroy any army the enemy may send into the interior of the department. Our effective force against any army that may advance will certainly reach 35,000 men, and if well commanded will protect all the territory we now hold in the department. You seemed very much depressed when you wrote, but I trust ere this the invincible army of General Lee has again been victorious, and his army ready to act against Sherman on the coast. The reverses met east of the Mississippi River by our armies I hope will be cured by some masterly stroke of our troops. I hope for the best. Do write to me soon and often, and do not fail to remember me in kindness to General Clark and the delegation, also to Colonels Garland and Carroll, of Arkansas. Say to General Clark his family in Missouri were well when our troops were in that State. John Clark’s family came out with him and are well. Write to me in regard to the appointment of a Senator, who ought to be appointed, since Reynolds refuses to appoint General Clark. My father and family are in San Antonio, but I look for them here soon. I will send any items of interest to you as they occur here.

Very truly, your friend,

CHAS. S. MITCHELL.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS WEST SUB-DISTRICT OF TEXAS,
Brownsville, January 13, 1865.

Capt. A. H. May,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to forward herewith an official copy of letter written by me to General Mejia, a perusal of which will indicate to the major-general commanding the necessity which called for it. Should the courts proceed in this matter notwithstanding my appeals, following the example of General Smith in a former case, I shall, in the absence of all instructions, prevent the exportation of all cotton, regardless of the nationality of the owners. I also forward a copy, with translation, of an agreement for the rendition of criminals, refugees from justice, entered into by General Mejia and myself, for the preservation of order on this frontier. Its effects have so far proved highly beneficial. Three men (who chanced also to be deserters from Jones’ light battery, as well as criminals) have been returned upon my requisition, and others occupying similar positions will doubtless soon follow in their footsteps. The mistaken idea that they were returned as deserters from the C. S. Army soon gained ground in Matamoras, causing an emigration therefrom of some 200 deserters and renegades, who had been of great injury to us in inciting others to desert. The U. S. consul, I am credibly informed, addressed General Mejia a very insulting letter on the subject, stating that the United States Government had the “will and the power” to protect its citizens. This letter is said to have been returned with indorsements demanding a perusal of the consul’s exequatur. I have no fear for the result. I have the honor to state that I have turned the Mexican prisoners captured from Cortina over to General Mejia. I was induced to do this because they were almost entirely naked and I did not consider it profitable or advisable to maintain prisoners at expense of Government when there was no power to recognize them as subjects for exchange.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. E. SLAUGHTER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure No.1]

HEADQUARTERS WEST SUB-DISTRICT OF TEXAS,
Brownsville, January 10, 1865.

Señor General Don Tomas Mejia,
Commanding Nuevo Leon, Coahuila,
District of Matamoras, &c., Matamoras, Mexico:

General: I have the honor to state for your information that a few days since the judge of the district court of Matamoras notified me of the possession of certain claims by citizens of Mexico against the Confederate States; that if payment were not promptly made he should feel it his duty to issue his writs of attachment in the cases and to order the seizure of cotton belonging to the Confederate Government, and to take such other steps as would lead to the forcible collection of said debts. Under these circumstances I feel it to be my duty to urge you, if in your power, to stop any proceedings touching this subject until the matter can be laid before the Imperial Government for its consideration and decision. To enable them to form a correct opinion of the case, I will state, as briefly as possible, a history thereof, and also cite a few authorities which lead me to the belief that his honor the judge is in error as to the legality of seizing Government property. Sometime in 1863 Major-General Magruder issued an order directing Brigadier-General Bee, then commanding the line of the Rio Grande, to impress cotton to meet exigencies of the service. It seems that General Bee made a compromise with cotton owners, and accepted the use of 25 per centum in lieu of impressing the whole. This is a brief history of the origin of the claims. Your assistance is earnestly requested in arresting proceedings in the premises until His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor Maximilian, can be advised of the facts and his pleasure known. The impressment law is a branch of the war-making power of the Confederate States Government, and has been so declared by the courts of different States adjudicating the same, and maintaining its constitutionality. If there were no express constitutional grant for the exercise of this power it would inure to the Government from necessity and in pursuance of the right of eminent domain and self-preservation. Vattel declares: "The right of self-preservation is paramount to all other considerations." Mr. Wheaton lays it down as a principle that "In the exercise of the means of self-defense, no independent state can be restricted by any foreign power." It can be safely affirmed that the impressment of cotton and other property by the officers and agents of the Confederate Government, duly authorized, was in accordance with law and violated no rights of owners. If the act of impressment was not in pursuance of law, it is obligatory upon the party complaining to establish the fact before a tribunal of the Confederate States having jurisdiction in the case. Should it appear that the impressment was unwarranted by law, the Confederate Government would incur no responsibility. The officer or agent transcending his powers would be personally responsible for his own wrong. If the impressment of property should be made in conformity with law, it is then the act of the Government of the Confederate States, and no sovereign could pass upon the act, much less an inferior court, unless by express permission of that Government. Should the judge of the district court of Matamoras proceed in the face of these facts, in my opinion he would utterly violate the plainest principles of international law, and also the adjudication of the courts of the most enlightened nations. The French tribunals have decided that no proceeding can be carried on against property of any kind belonging to a foreign sovereign:

Aucune poursuite ne peut être exercée contre les biens de toute espèce appartenant à un gouvernement étranger. Il a été jugé que personne ne peut former en France une saisie arrêt sur les fonds d'un gouvernement étranger, et que les tribunaux sont incompétents pour établir sur la validité de cette saisie-arrêt.—Foelix, Droit international privé, page 164. Quoted by Wheaton, pages 152-3, bottom note.

The particular case cited—copy of certificate accompanies—was an impressment, a loan, or a spoliation. If the former, the consequences of its legality or illegality have already been discussed. If a loan, it is a debt due the party and is governed by the laws and comity of nations, and for those reasons cannot be adjudicated by a foreign court unless by consent of the Confederate States. If a spoliation committed by our own Government upon the property of a Mexican citizen, it is not a question to be decided by courts but a political question to be adjusted by the two Governments. In the event of a failure or refusal on the part of the Confederate Government to make restitution, the Government of Mexico would have the right as a dernier resort to make reprisals upon our property to indemnify it; but no such power is vested in any tribunal, much less an inferior court of that country. The right of the Confederate States to immunity with respect to their property on the high seas, in the ports, or within the territories of neutral powers arises from the principles of public comity and convenience extended among sovereigns and the presumed consent of nations, as evinced by usages and customs, and the immunity is presumed to exist as a part of civilization, and is to be allowed until expressly retracted, and this presumption is presumed to be a part of the voluntary and adopted laws of nations. It rests upon the same basis which exempts a sovereign or his ambassador from arrest or detention in a foreign country, also his ships in foreign ports, &c. The fact that the Confederate States have not been recognized by other powers does not preclude them from claiming and enjoying the immunities accorded to other nations. The law of nations accords to them the status of a sovereign. The intended sovereignty of a state does not in any degree depend upon its recognition by other states. A new state springing into existence does not require the recognition of other states to confirm its internal sovereignty. The existence of the state de facto is sufficient in this respect to establish its sovereignty de jure. It is a state because it exists.—Wheaton's Elements, sixth American edition, page 30, paragraph 6.

A nation with an organized government, with the whole machinery of the different departments in effective operation, an immense army in the field, cannot be denied international sovereignty. A nation having armed vessels upon the high seas, flying its flag from their mastheads; granting letters of marque and reprisal; capturing enemies' property, declaring what is contraband of war, whose ships enter foreign ports on a footing with other national vessels, purchase supplies, and are allowed to be repaired at public docks; whose enemy recognizes her as a belligerent by the exchange of prisoners captured upon land and sea, and in many other ways; which has sustained the shock of four years' war with a government rich in all the elements of power and aggression, has done enough to establish a character of external sovereignty, and has a just right to claim all the privileges and immunities and courtesies accorded to sovereign powers whose flags reflect the light and the glory of centuries. The recognition of the Confederate States as a belligerent by the governments of both hemispheres imparts to their property the character of nationality and secures it from arrest, detention, or seizure while upon the soil of a neutral. Property captured by our cruisers has been respected accordingly by the great powers of Europe. This recognition of the Confederate States as a belligerent is strictly in accordance with the laws of nations and has the sanction of the civilized world. Wheaton lays it down as a principle, that "If the foreign State professes neutrality it is bound to allow impartially to both belligerents the free exercise of those rights which war gives to public enemies against each other."—Elements International Law, sixth American edition, section 7.

Now, if the Government of Mexico assumes the character of a neutral it is bound to respect equally the rights of the belligerents. Would that Government justify the seizure, detention, and sale of property belonging to the United States and within the limits of the empire under similar circumstances? It would be an anomaly to recognize the Confederate States as a belligerent and at the same time deny them the rights properly accruing from the recognition. Allow the principle that the property of a State may be seized for the satisfaction of creditors by virtue of a writ from any court because it may be upon foreign soil would be ruinous. Then a British bondholder could attach the funds of Mexico in the branch of the great national bank at Paris, or seize upon the supplies for the Imperial army, whether stored at Hamburg, Amsterdam, or Liverpool. The assumption that non-recognition divests property of national character and exemptions would be attended with like inconveniences and dangers to the public interests of the State owning it. Under this rule an American bondholder could attach and ultimately sell cannon, ammunition, clothing, or provisions purchased and paid for by the Imperial Government of Mexico and found anywhere without the territories of the Emperor. The commerce now being carried on by the Confederate States through their authorized agents and their citizens with Mexico was established by the consent of the Mexican authorities and guaranties of protection were given. The right to seize upon property of the Confederate States for the satisfaction of creditors was not claimed and would not have been accorded by the agents or representatives of the Confederate Government. The exercise of that right now by Mexico would be an act of bad faith. The Confederate Government has done and will do all in their power to satisfy the demands of all their creditors. These suggestions are presented for consideration with an assurance on the part of the Confederate Government that you entertain for them and the cause they are fighting for the most friendly feeling of neutrality, and that your powerful influence will be exerted in their behalf in preventing the consummation of acts which cannot promote the interests of either Government. The evidences of wisdom, moderation, and far-seeing statesmanship which have characterized the Imperial Government are but so many guaranties that the Confederate Government can rely with confidence upon the Emperor for a decision based on a love of justice and a profound veneration for the great principles involved.

I have the honor to renew my assurances of regard and esteem. Your very obedient servant,

JAS. E. SLAUGHTER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
Correspondence, Etc.—Confederate.

Matamoras, December 19, 1864.

Having exclusively in view the prompt administration of justice, the generals commanding the lines of both frontiers have agreed, in order to obviate the crimes committed within their respective territories and jurisdictions, mutually to deliver over persons accused of crimes under certain circumstances, and which are enumerated in the following articles:

Article I. They agree that when a requisition is made in the name of the generals themselves or through the agents intrusted with the administration of criminal justice in the districts or sub-districts (partidos) of the frontier, they will mutually deliver over persons accused of the crimes enumerated in the following articles, committed within the jurisdiction of the party making the demand, and which criminals have sought asylum in or are found within the territory of the other.

Art. II. They will be delivered in pursuance of the foregoing article on proper application being made for the persons accused as principals, auxiliaries, or accomplices of any of the following crimes, viz: homicide, voluntary, including assassinations, parricide, infanticide, and poisoning; assault, with intent to commit murder; mutilation; incendiary; rape; kidnapping, defined as arresting and carrying off, either by force or under false pretenses, a free person; counterfeiting, including the forging, making, or introducing knowingly or putting into circulation false money, bank bills, or other current paper, with the intention of defrauding any person or persons whatsoever; the introduction of or fabrication of instruments for making counterfeit money; the appropriation or peculation of public funds, or the appropriation of the same, with the pretext of a revolution in the frontier States; theft, robbery, defined not only the taking from the person of another by force or criminal intent, goods or money of whatsoever value, either by violence or intimidation, but also he who commits a breach of trust, abusing the confidence or trust placed in him prior to his transgression; housebreaking, meaning thereby the going to and entering the house of another with criminal intent; cattle stealing and larceny; the taking of effects or movable goods of whatever value.

Art. III. All expenses of detention and extradition which arise from carrying into effect the preceding arrangements will be allowed and paid by the authority of the territory in whose name the requisition has been made.

Art. IV. The articles of the present confidential arrangement will be by no means applicable to crimes of purely a political nature; neither will it comprehend the return of fugitive slaves, nor will it be applied to persons who have committed crimes prior to the 1st day of November of the present year in which this arrangement has been entered into.

Art. V. None of the parties are obliged, under the present arrangement, to deliver over their own citizens.

Art. VI. Notwithstanding the conveniences which to the parties arise from the execution of the present arrangements and the probability the parties making them have that in due time they will be formally accepted by their respective Governments, elevating them to solemn treaties, the present, therefore, has no official character, but made purely in confidence between the undersigned commanders, notwithstanding they, in compliance with their duty, privately and reserving participate, to their Government what they have done in this matter, and reciprocally on both sides of the Rio Grande they oblige themselves to execute and comply with it from this date, and continue the same until expressly advised that their acts in the premises are disapproved by their respective Governments.

Art. VII. Requisitions made on this city will be directed as before designated, but those necessarily made on the military commanders named by the respective generals, who will carefully instruct them previously, in conformity with this arrangement.

Done in the city of heroic Matamoras, on the 19th day of December, 1864.

TOMAS MEJIA.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Washington, January 14, 1865.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Boggs,
Chief of Staff:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 5th instant (5147) has been received. I had reorganized Shelby's and Cabell's brigades, and have ordered Shelby to Red River County, Tex., before your letter was received. As I have explained to you in my letter of the 11th instant, I expect to send Shelby north of the Arkansas River to bring the absentees from the army now scattered in that section of the country; consequently it is necessary for him to go to some point like Clarksville where he can have his horses shod, and make the necessary preparation for the anticipated expedition. In order to carry out your instructions to burn the cotton east of the Ouachita River, and further to obstruct the communication of the enemy via the Ouachita River, and from Pine Bluff to Mississippi River, which is now in daily use, and if a favorable opportunity should arise, to take possession of Pine Bluff, I have ordered General Clark to establish his command in Union County, Ark., near the Louisiana line and in rear of Pigeon Hill, Ark.; also Brooks' command I have stationed near the Arkansas River, between Little Rock and Fort Smith, which I deemed of great importance. In order to carry out my views in regard to Shelby's expedition north of Arkansas and Van Zandt Counties, as they are required for immediate use here from the points where I wish not take over 1,500 cavalry with the list submitted to me by the department commander, there appears to be 20,000 bushels of tithe corn, 38,000 bushels in Upshur County, the next county to it.

The counties of Van Zandt and Kaufman have only 14,000 bushels of corn; the county of Dallas has very little corn also. Instead of these, which are proposed by the department commander before he saw the list of counties with tithe corn, I respectfully request that should Shelby not be allowed to remain in Red River County, that he be subsisted in Titus and Upshur, except that portion which I propose to send north of Arkansas River. The enemy appears to be concentrating troops at Little Rock, a very small garrison being reported at Pine Bluff, and Fort Smith being either evacuated or left with a small garrison. I think also that his veteran infantry are being sent down the Mississippi River, and that he proposes an invasion with his cavalry into Northern Texas, either by this route or the Line road. The remainder of Shelby's cavalry cannot consequently be safely sent farther than Red River, Titus, or Upshur Counties. I inclose you a letter from General Shelby, complaining that the officer at Clarksville refused to issue supplies to his troops. In view of the facts that the corn, fodder, and other supplies in Sevier County, Ark., have been used by troops not belonging to this district, and also that a large quantity of subsistence stores, which had been accumulated at Laynesport for the use of General Price's army, was taken and consumed by Gano's command, and which, if they had not been taken, would have been ample to supply Shelby for a considerable time, I would respectfully ask that these officers be instructed to issue to General Shelby's command such supplies as may be required. I have no engineer to place in charge of the works on Red River. Captain Mackey, Engineer Corps, is here, and as he is thoroughly acquainted with the country, I desire that he should be retained here to take charge of this work.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. MAGRUDER,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Washington, January 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. T. J. CHURCHILL,
Commanding Division:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you distribute the recruits of your command at once to the different companies. You will arm them and make them ready with ammunition and equipments, as far as you can, for the field at once. Hold three brigades in readiness to march at a moment's warning to Dooley's Ferry and Fulton, each bringing all their axes, spades, &c., for working upon fortifications.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. M. KIMMEL,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Washington, January 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. F. FAGAN,
Commanding Cavalry:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you order General Shelby to hold his command in hand to advance by way of Fulton, get ammunition there, and proceed to the front via Washington to meet the enemy. If he hears of the enemy via the Line road he will cross at Laynesport, if possible. The ammunition is at Fulton, say 90,000 rounds of all kinds. It must be sent at once to Shelby by empty wagons returning to Clarksville. You will get ammunition for Clark's and Cabell's brigades from Lieutenant-Colonel Taylor, ordnance officer of this district. A battery for each division of cavalry will be turned over ready for service with appropriate ammunition at once by Major Magruder, chief of artillery.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. M. KIMMEL,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Brigadier-General SHELBY,
Commanding Cavalry:

GENERAL: I sent you an order yesterday, by direction of the major-general commanding, to impress what beeves you could find in the counties of Red River and Lamar, and to send them here without delay. He requests me to-day to write that 1,000 beeves are required here at once; that the line of the Ouachita, including Camden, will have to be evacuated; that his troops have been several days without beef, in consequence of the failure of the department officers (over whom he has no control) to furnish beef; that 1,200 beeves to enable this army to subsist in front even a week in case of an advance; that by the greatest and perhaps fated neglect of those whom he cannot control this district is on the verge of ruin, and that therefore he is compelled in order to save it, even temporarily, under the present system, to impress beef in Texas whatever may be the consequence; but that you will therefore select your most suitable officers and men and endeavor to persuade the farmers to sell, and only impress when the beeves cannot be obtained by purchase. The impression law must be followed strictly. The major-general commanding is informed that there are many beeves in Hopkins County, Tex. You will get, therefore, 400 from each of the counties named, or apportion the number to each county, according to what may be its estimated capacity to furnish. Funds will be sent you; if possible, to pay upon the spot. As soon as 150 beeves are obtained send them, and push the matter as rapidly as possible. Consult some patriotic citizens as to the beeves in the three counties named (Lamar, Red River, and Hopkins). Tell them that there is preparing a great raid from Little Rock for Northern Texas, as far as the major-general commanding can judge, and that the beeves can be returned to them, if they desire it, as soon as the officers at Shreveport can obtain them. Send your unarmed men (good herdsmen) for the beeves.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
M. M. KIMMEL,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Major-General MAXEY,
Commanding District of Indian Territory:

GENERAL: In consequence of the threatening attitude of the enemy in front of this army, the major-general commanding has directed me to say to you that as the department commander some weeks since directed him to take command of Gano's brigade in case an emergency should arise which would require their services to repel the enemy from this district, that you will direct the commanding officer of that brigade to hold his command in readiness to move in this direction at short notice, prepared to meet the enemy.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
M. M. KIMMEL,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Circular.

Hdqrs. District of Indian Territory,
Fort Towson, C. N., January 16, 1865.

The following letter, received from department headquarters, is hereby published for the information and guidance of the officers of this military district; a compliance therewith is required:

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,
Adjutant-General’s Office, Shreveport, December 30, 1864.

Maj. W. H. Haynes,
Chief Clothing Bureau:

Major: I am directed by the general commanding to say that in making the uniform frock coats in future you will be guided and governed by the regulations prescribed for the "uniform and dress of the Army," published in General Orders, No. 9, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, series of 1861, and the plates accompanying said orders. In the matter of trimming the regulations cannot in all cases be carried out, but as to the length of the coat, it can always be done, and must be. You will give the necessary orders to meet the requirements of these instructions to the several officers of your department; and any deviation therefrom will subject the delinquent party to trial by court-martial, and removal from the position he may occupy. The district commanders will each be furnished with a copy of this letter.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

S. S. Anderson,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Indorsement.]

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, December, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to Major-General Maxey, commanding district of Indian Territory, for his information, and who will see that these instructions are fully carried out in his district.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. Anderson,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

By order of Major-General Maxey:

T. M. Scott,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, No. 14.

Headquarters Churchill's Division,
Camp Lee, January 16, 1865.

V. Brigadier-Generals Roane, McNair, and Hawthorn will hold their brigades in readiness to march at a moment's notice to Dooley's Ferry and Fulton, each bringing all their axes, spades, &c, for working upon fortifications.

By command of Major-General Churchill:

J. J. Gaines,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters District of Arkansas,
Washington, January 17, 1865.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Roggs,
Chief of Staff, Shreveport, La.:

General: I wrote you a few days since that Fort Smith was being evacuated, and that it would not be well to send up any considerable number of troops for its occupation and defense; first, because of the want of supplies; secondly, most of the troops ought to be kept in hand for the spring campaign in Arkansas and Louisiana. Nevertheless I think some portion of Maxey's Indian troops and a few white troops raised in that country should, if they can be supported, occupy such forts as may have been abandoned in that region of country. The object of my letter of the 9th instant (No. 73) was to guard in time against the removal of the main body of Maxey's troops too far from the District of Arkansas or Louisiana to take part in the battles next spring.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. MAGRUDER,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Washington, January 17, 1865.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Boggs,
Chief of Staff, Shreveport, La.:

General: I should have mentioned in my letter of yesterday, on the subject of withdrawing Colonel Lyles and his command from north of the Arkansas, that since my letter No. 34, Fulton, January 5, 1865, informing you that I would order General Shelby north of the Arkansas to bring out the commands remaining there, I have thought it better from recent indications of the enemy, who is concentrating his cavalry at Little Rock, to retain General Shelby on this side of the river; hence my recommendation of General Jeff. Thompson for the purpose of performing the duty on which I had designed sending General Shelby, provided General Smith sees proper to send General Thompson on that service.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. MAGRUDER,
Major-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 17. }

HDQRS. DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Washington, January 17, 1865.

XXIV. Paragraph IX, Special Orders, No. 4, dated January 4, from these headquarters, is so modified as to read as follows:

The regiments of Lyles, McGhee, and the unattached company of Earle in Northeast Arkansas will remain in Northeast Arkansas, and will constitute a brigade, to be commanded by Col. O. P. Lyles. All other troops are ordered forthwith south of the Arkansas River. The commanding officers of Dobbin's, McCray's, and Freeman's brigades, now north of the Arkansas River, are hereby directed to take immediate steps to collect the men belonging to their respective commands, and will proceed with the portion which they may have collected, by the 1st of March at furthest, to such points on the Arkansas River as may in their judgment be deemed best and cross them to this side of the river. This order must be strictly obeyed, and these officers will report to these headquarters with such men as they may have with them, or alone if they cannot get the men, in accordance with the above instructions. In consequence of the alleged scarcity of forage and supplies on the various routes, it is suggested that the men be sent south in parties of 100 to 150 strong, under officers of firmness, industry, and vigilance.
From information recently received and since the publication of Special Orders, No. 4, dated January 4, 1865, it would seem best that they should cross Arkansas River west of Little Rock. Couriers will be sent in advance advising the major-general commanding of the date of leaving their encampment, and stating about what time they will reach the Arkansas River and when they have crossed the river. Should these commands be crossed at a point below Pine Bluff they will proceed directly to Pigeon Hill and take post, announcing to these headquarters their arrival at that place. Should they be crossed above Little Rock they will proceed to Fulton and take post, announcing their arrival. The commanding officer of each detachment, as soon as they cross the Arkansas River, will report by letter to Major-General Fagan or to these headquarters. All officers or men who remain north of the Arkansas River in violation of this order are hereby declared deserters, and will be treated accordingly.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. B. Magruder:

EDMUND P. TURNER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 22, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to department headquarters.

By H. HANNAHS,
(In the absence of the general.)

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 17.
HEADQUARTERS CHURCHILL'S DIVISION,
Camp Lee, January 19, 1865.

I. In accordance with paragraph VII, Special Orders, No. 18, District of Arkansas, ordering the detaching of two brigades of this division for the purpose of finishing with the utmost rapidity the works at Dooley's Ferry and Fulton, Brigadier-General Roane with his brigade will proceed without delay to Fulton, and Brigadier-General Hawthorn to Dooley's Ferry, for the object above specified. These brigades will remain at these points during the winter, unless otherwise ordered by district commander.

By command of Major-General Churchill:

J. J. GAINES,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 20, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. B. MAGRUDER,
Commanding District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to acknowledge receipt of copy of your instructions to Brigadier-General Shelby of January 9, 1865, directing him to take possession of the cantonment at Laynesport, &c.; also copy of your letter to General Maxey, of January 16, 1865, and to say that the instructions contained in those letters are unauthorized, and you will revoke them forthwith. The cantonment at Laynesport will remain under General Maxey, and he has been so instructed. If you deem it necessary to move any cavalry into the interior of Texas, you will order one of the brigades under your command.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, Hqrs. Trans-Mississippi Department,
No. 6. Shreveport, La., January 21, 1865.

Hereafter no leave of absence will be granted by district commanders for a longer period than thirty days, unless upon certificate of disability, and in the case of medical officers satisfactory evidence must accompany the application that proper medical attendance has been secured for their commands during their absence. Applications for extension of leave of absence from a medical officer must be made through the chief medical officer in the district of the branch of service to which the applicant belongs. No leave of absence exceeding seven days will be granted to a medical purveyor without reference to the chief of medical bureau.

11. During the temporary absence of Capt. John E. Garey, chief quartermaster, Maj. W. H. Haynes, quartermaster, will take charge of his office.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, January 21, 1865.

Brig. Gen. E. Greer, Chief of Conscript Bureau:

General: You have been instructed by telegram of this date to order out the Reserve Corps in the counties of Texas on and south of the thirty-second degree of latitude and north of the San Antonio River and east of the twenty-first degree of longitude, and the general commanding directs that these men be instructed to bring with them all the arms they may be able to collect. When assembled they will be placed in command of Brigadier-General Robertson and ordered to report to General Walker. The general commanding wishes you to expedite with all the energy possible the collecting of these troops and preparing them for active service. The emergency is pressing, as the movements of the enemy indicate that a powerful attempt will be made on the Texas coast.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, January 21, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. H. Forney,
Commanding Division, Minden, La.:

General: I am instructed by the general commanding to say you will hold your command in readiness to move at a moment's warning.
When moved you will pass through this place and go in the direction of Houston. Boats have been ordered to Minden to transport your division. Further and fuller instructions will be sent you to-morrow.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, January XI, 1865.

Maj. Ocn. J. H. Forney, Commanding Cavalry:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the general commanding to write you as follows: The movement of the enemy's troops down the Mississippi and the concentration of a large force at New Orleans, with other information received, indicate an intention on the part of the enemy immediately to assume the offensive. An effective force of at least 30,000, including A. J. Smith's corps, from Nashville, is available for this purpose. An attempt in force is about being made against either Mobile or the Texas coast, while a formidable naval expedition ascends Red River. Keep your command in readiness to move promptly, as circumstances may require, either toward Houston, Sabine Pass, or Natchitoches. The roads, especially that toward Houston, should be examined, and provision made for crossing streams, so that your march may be as expeditious as possible. Major-General Walker will be instructed to notify you of the enemy's appearance on the coast. You will be directed to march to the support of General Buckner or of General Walker, as may be determined by the movements of the enemy's land forces. Forney's division is ordered to Texas.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, January 22, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. H. FORNEY, Commanding Division, Minden:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you move your division as rapidly as possible to this place. You will select for the artillery battalion under your command two batteries to accompany the division to Texas. These two batteries should be carefully chosen with a view to their efficiency for service and the condition of the horses. I am also instructed to inform you that three boats have been ordered to Minden to assist in transporting to this point the heavy baggage and the two batteries of your command. The road through the Red River bottom is certainly impracticable for loaded wagons and probably so for empty ones. Such as cannot be transported in the boats had better be sent here by way of Bellevue and Benton. The road from Fillmore to Bellevue, by way of Mr. Hutchinson's, is in good condition. Three hundred Enfield rifles now here will be turned over to the unarmed men of your division upon its arrival at this place.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
MAJ. GEN. J. B. MAGRUDER, Commanding District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to inform you that the enemy are concentrating forces from Arkansas and Nashville at New Orleans. From the strength of this force it is evident they intend immediate operations against either Mobile, Galveston, or Red River, and at the same time will move a naval force up Red River. He has ordered Forney’s division to Texas to be in position to move either to Houston or Natchitoches. He has directed that Churchill’s division be moved to Minden, where they will occupy the winter quarters of Forney’s division.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

P. S.—Move so as to avoid crossing Lake Bodeau.

MAJ. GEN. S. B. MAXEY, Comdg. District of Indian Territory:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to inform you that the enemy are concentrating a large force in New Orleans, drawn from their troops in Arkansas and Tennessee. Their movements indicate immediate operations against either Mobile, Galveston, or Red River. He anticipates that a movement will be made at the same time by a cavalry force from Little Rock and desires that you will keep your force well in hand to co-operate with the troops in Arkansas against such movements.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

Maj. Gen. J. G. WALKER,
Commanding District of Texas, &c., Houston:

The concentration at New Orleans of formidable force and preparations made indicate immediate offensive operations. Your coast or Mobile probable objective point. The position at Galveston is untenable against powerful land attack, assisted by fleet. Prepare to evac-ate and withdraw garrison when combined attack is made with force too strong to be resisted successfully. Guns and garrison must not be lost. Strengthen defenses at Houston. If necessary, impress requisite slave labor. Confer with the governor by letter. Forney's division has been ordered to your support and moves, by Shreveport and Crockett, to Huntsville. Wharton's cavalry corps is held in readiness to respond to your or General Buckner's call as enemy's land force present themselves on your coast or in Red River Valley, not to be called for till enemy's infantry in force develops itself. Reserve Corps of Texas ordered out and to report to you, with General Robertson. Put yourself in communication with General Robertson.

E. KIRBY SMITH,

General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 22, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN G. WALKER,
Commanding District of Texas, &c., Houston, Tex.:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the general commanding to write you as follows: Reliable information has been received of the movement of a large body of the enemy on transports down the Mississippi, and of the concentration at New Orleans of a formidable force of all arms. Preparations indicate immediate offensive operations and Mobile or the Texas coast as probable objective points. A naval expedition up Red River seems also to be contemplated, possibly to be accompanied by a land force. If the expedition fitting out at New Orleans is intended for the Texas coast, Galveston or Sabine Pass will be the first points of attack. Important to us is the possession of both these ports, with the limited means at our disposal they are untenable against the attack of an expedition of combined land and naval forces, so formidable as that represented as preparing at New Orleans. You have been telegraphed to-day to be prepared for the evacuation of Galveston, and the removal of its guns and garrison, should the land force brought against it be too formidable for successful resistance. The greatest energy should be employed in strengthening the position at Houston, where in the event of an invasion from the coast you will receive the support of Wharton's and Forney's divisions. Brigadier-General Robertson has been directed to report to you with the Reserves of Texas, which have been ordered to rendezvous with such arms as they can bring. You can direct their concentration at Houston or such other point as you may deem advisable. You should give directions for the disposition of the unarmed men; they might be employed on the fortifications until they can be armed. Inclosed for your information is a copy of a letter of instructions to Major-General Wharton. He is in position to move to the support of either General Buckner or yourself, but the commanding general does not wish him committed to either line of march until the development of the enemy's plans shows conclusively the point at which his heavy infantry column is to be employed. Forney's division with two batteries of artillery should pass through this place on the 26th instant, and should reach Huntsville on the proximo, where it will remain until further orders.

I am, general, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

*See January 21, p. 1337.
XXXIII. Col. Smith P. Bankhead, artillery, Provisional Army, C. S., will proceed without delay to headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department, and will report to General E. K. Smith, commanding, &c., for assignment to duty.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, January 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. B. Maxey,
Commanding District of Indian Territory:

GENERAL: I am directed by the general commanding to call your attention to his letter of yesterday, informing you of the concentration of the enemy's forces at New Orleans. The movements of the enemy require the immediate concentration of the disposable force of the department. He therefore directs that you will send Gano's brigade forthwith, by way of Marshall and Henderson, to Rusk, with orders to report to Major-General Wharton for instructions. General Wharton will be informed of these orders, and instructions as to their final destination will meet them at Rusk or on the road.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

Headquarters Churchill's Division,
Camp Lee, January 23, 1865.

Brigadier-General HAWTHORN,
Commanding Brigade, Dooley's Ferry:

GENERAL: You will move with your brigade to-morrow morning without delay to this point.

T. J. CHURCHILL,
Major-General.

Richmond, January 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. STERLING PRICE:

My Dear General: Colonel Douglas, the chief engineer of the Trans-Mississippi Department, leaves here in the morning to return to Shreveport, and although I have heard nothing direct from you in response to the communications I have made to you from time to time, still I will not permit the occasion to pass without informing you that I am yet alive. Your orders of leave to me were until further orders, with certain verbal explanations which, I presume, you recollect, but have not had the power of fulfilling. Should you march into Missouri this coming spring with the intention of occupying permanent position in that State I should be pleased to be informed of the fact, and to receive the orders to return that you assured me should be sent upon that contingency, whenever it happened. I regard a movement into Missouri in heavy force as essentially necessary to everything in this direction. That diversion should be made in order to hold engaged the power of the Northwestern States, and to relieve General Lee of that much pressure here. The earlier it is made the better. We have both been contending for this view of the case for more than two years. Richmond and Petersburg in all probability will have to be abandoned in the spring as necessary to the preservation of Lee's army. Do what we will now, much territory will have to be given up for the same reason. Nevertheless, if Kirby Smith and yourself march to the Missouri River in force, occupying the power of the Northwestern States in their self-protection, and Lee's army can be maintained and preserved twelve months longer, we shall gain independence. The Northern Government is as apprehensive of the future as the Government of the South, and the people of the North are as tired of the war as we are. In the first place, a cotton famine now threatens all the maritime and manufacturing nations embracing the North; then again the financial system and public credit of the North, sustained so far only by straining every resource, will break down, as the New York Herald has continually predicted for some time past; again, Mr. Lincoln, after the 4th of March, can no longer be regarded by foreign nations as the foreign agent or representative of the Southern States, they not having participated in his re-election by the States North as they did in 1860, and the European powers only having made treaties of recognition with the original States by name and not within the States of the after confederation, or with those of the still later United States as a unit or in general terms. And again in the midst of all these circumstances of embarrassment, the Washington Government, under a prolongation of the war for another year, will be compelled to resort to an enforced draft that will lead to civil commotions inevitably. In Grant's present army there are only from 18,000 to 20,000 voters; the rest are aliens and negroes; but foreign recruitment with the North is now pretty well over. I can now, in the midst of all the gloom and despondency around me, consequent upon our recent disasters, and in anticipation of the evacuation of Richmond and Petersburg, see my way, for the first time since the war opened, to a successful end, provided the Government and country remain firm, and Missouri is invaded in force, and Lee's army is maintained and preserved.

Fort Fisher, at the entrance of the Cape Fear River, has fallen after a desperate resistance, but Wilmington is still defended. Fort Fisher, which, in the first instance, as Admiral Porter says, was reduced by bombardment into a pulp, was afterward blown to atoms by the accidental firing of the magazine by Yankee negroes in search of provisions, with lighted candles, killing 200 of the victors. The obstructions in the river and other defenses must still be overcome before Wilmington falls. Sherman will occupy the winter in efforts to take Charleston and Wilmington and Branchville. In the spring I am quite sure he will join Sheridan in the Valley to sweep down upon Lynchburg and the Danville railroad, thus destroying and holding our only remaining line of supply here, and forcing Lee to an evacuation. Our authorities are preparing for the probable result by removing machinery, &c. The Congress calls for Lee as generalissimo, with full powers in respect to our armies, for the restoration of Joseph E. Johnston to command, and for cabinet and other changes. Secretary Seddon has already resigned. It is not known precisely who will take his place, but Breckinridge and Kemper are talked of, and Cobb, of Georgia, it is thought, will take the seat of Benjamin. The legislature of Virginia has unanimously backed the Congress. The consolidation act will be passed in a day or two with many modifications and alterations from the bill as first reported. These are so numerous that we do not know yet what it will be. The question of putting our slaves in the service has been debated for two months without decision, but General Lee has written a letter saying it must be done, and at once, as absolutely necessary to our future struggle, and I presume the thing will now be done. Slavery having been regarded as a domestic matter with the States has caused the trouble, but as property the Government may undoubtedly impress them; and so it will be decided, I think. The time has come that is to decide our fate, and everything should be done and surrendered to the cause. Life, property, and honor are all lost by submission as fully as by subjugation. I send you a copy of the Enquirer containing the call upon me for the State senate and my reply to it. Perhaps you may find time to glance over them. My election, I am assured, is quite certain. Nevertheless, do not let this interfere with the request I have made to you to call upon me at the right time to go with you into Missouri. Old Cooper and myself have been at war ever since I reached Richmond, but I have at last, I believe, whipped him out of his boots and breeches, and I understand the Congress calls for his removal among the rest. My health is perfect and I no longer dissipate since my children have joined me.

I beg to be remembered to all of your military household, and believe me still, warmly your friend,

JOHN TYLER,
C. S. Army.

P. S.—The public journals and Madame Rumor have had you dead, circumstantially, twice in the last four months. The country rejoices that you yet live.

Brigadier-General Parsons,
Commanding Brigade, Fulton, Ark.:

GENERAL: I am directed by the major-general to say that you will move your brigade without delay to Lewisville. Upon your arrival at this point you will find other orders awaiting you for your guidance.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 22.
HEADQUARTERS CHURCHILL'S DIVISION,
Camp Lee, January 24, 1865.

1. Major Upshaw, commissary of subsistence, will immediately take possession of the corn belonging to Roane's brigade, now in store at Camp Lee, for the manufacture of meal for the troops of this division.

2. The following details will be ordered to report immediately to Major Upshaw for fatigue duty, viz: Brigadier-General McNair, one lieutenant and twenty-five men; Brigadier-General Tappan, one lieutenant and twenty-five men.
III. Paragraph III, Special Orders, No. 16, from these headquarters, is hereby revoked. The detail ordered to report at the saw-mill near Spring Hill will rejoin their commands at once. This order will be sent to Spring Hill at once, to Mr. W. H. Smith, in charge of the mill, in order that these men may be relieved and return to their command to-morrow.

By command of Major-General Churchill:

J. J. GAINES,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

W. G. HALE, Esq.:

Sir: Learning that you will shortly visit the city of Mexico as the agent of wealthy merchants in Matamoras, in order to obtain if possible from the Imperial Government greater facilities than now exist for the entrance of Confederate vessels into Mexican ports contiguous to the Rio Grande, and as the important matters which you will thus have in charge will necessarily bring you into frequent official intercourse with the highest authorities of the Mexican Empire, I have deemed it advisable to avail myself, to some extent, of your services during your visit. The relations of the Confederate States with the French and Mexican Governments are at present, for various reasons, of the most interesting character. It is very desirable that the most perfect understanding should exist between them. You will doubtless be able to obtain much valuable information, not only as to the popular sentiment in that Empire, but also learn the views, purposes, and future policy of the Imperial Government in reference to the C. S. Army. Communication from you on these points will be received with great interest, and will be forwarded to His Excellency President Davis for his information. I need scarcely inform you that, as the military commander of this department, I am simply charged with the duty of its defenses, and have no authority to clothe you with any official character whatever; yet I deem the establishment of liberal commercial regulations, such as you desire, as of the utmost benefit. Nothing tends more than these commercial ties to promote, preserve, and cement friendship and alliances between nations, and I earnestly hope that your visit will tend to render stronger the relations of friendship now existing between the two nations, and be but the initiatory step to the institution of negotiations, through agents properly accredited, having the same and even more enlarged and liberal objects in view.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. K. SMITH,
General.

Your attention is especially called to the proposed line of couriers from Monroe. The general commanding has received prompt and reliable information from that source.

Maj. Gen. JOHN A. WHARTON,
Commanding Cavalry, Nacogdoches:

GENERAL: The commanding general directs me to inform you that Debray’s brigade has been added to your command. Bee’s brigade (late Gano’s) is also en route to report to you. Arrangements have been made by which you will receive 1,200 Enfield carbines from Navasota. I am further instructed to say that a brigade of four regiments, or a division of two brigades of three regiments each, should be organized from your command, to be armed and to serve as cavalry. The regiments for this service should be selected with a view to their fitness for that arm. If one brigade is only thus organized, Brigadier-General Debray should be assigned to the command. It was the intention of General Buckner to have equipped his brigade as cavalry. Two of the three regiments have been drilled for the purpose and are already tolerably well instructed. It has become necessary to withdraw the cavalry of the District of Arkansas from the Red River Valley into Texas. General Buckner is sending his cavalry to the rear. In order to save the country from being consumed by the host of mounted men in the service, the commanding general will soon be forced to reduce their number by at least one-half. He desires you to impress upon your officers the absolute necessity for such a course and the probability of its being resorted to at an early day. The general commanding would be glad to have your views as to the best means for effecting this object, not only in your own command but in the cavalry generally. He proposes when the reduction is made to leave all four brigades of mounted troops under your command.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: The commanding general directs me to inform you that Lieutenant Walsh has just crossed the Mississippi River and states that it is practicable by concert of action to cross the arms now at Brandon, Miss. The commanding general directs that you place an officer in charge of this important duty and again undertake to cross the arms. Captain Montgomery, assistant quartermaster, was, upon the capture of Major Springer, sent to this department for the purpose of taking charge of the line of communication in this department. Captain Montgomery makes his headquarters at Vernon, La., and has a cavalry force at his disposal to assist in keeping up communication. Lieutenant Walsh was sent by Captain Montgomery to the Cis-Mississippi Department for the purpose of ascertaining if arrangements had been completed there. The line is now ready to work with system, and the general commanding suggests that you will take advantage of it for the purpose above mentioned. Lieutenant Walsh will be ordered to call upon you in person, and if you desire it will be directed to report to you.

Telegram received. The island must not be evacuated before an enemy comes. If the attack is made by combined land and naval force too strong for resistance, the garrison, at least, can be saved. If the expedition from New Orleans is destined for Mobile no attack will be immediately made at Galveston. Improve the time and strengthen garrison with all your disposable means.

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.
COLONEL: I am instructed by Major-General Churchill to direct that you, assuming command of Davie's regiment, as well as your own, will move your command without delay to Minden, La., there to report to these headquarters. These instructions are based on paragraphs XII and XIII, Special Orders, No. 25, headquarters District of Arkansas.

I am, colonel, very respectfully,

C. E. KIDDER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

IV. Brigadier-General Roane, with his brigade, will move on Saturday morning at sunrise for Minden, La. The brigade will take the Shreveport road. Nine miles from Lewisville the command will take a left-hand road, and one mile from this point a right-hand road.

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Boggs,
Chief of Staff, Shreveport, La.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose a letter from Major-General Magruder, commanding District of Arkansas, to myself, bearing date 19th instant, and my reply thereto, bearing date 27th instant; also copy of a letter received from him this morning, dated 15th instant, and my reply thereto. These letters are forwarded because General Magruder, as you will observe, announces his intention of forwarding a copy of his letter of 19th instant to department headquarters, and I desire that the whole correspondence shall be filed there. I also inclose copy of my letter to him of 15th instant, to which he refers in his letter of the 19th. Conscions that I have but done my duty fearlessly, I am perfectly willing and anxious that the department commander or the President, as General Magruder intimates, be possessed of and decide the case upon the record. It is exceedingly difficult for me to keep up with this correspondence. After requesting me on the 6th to hold the command in readiness to co-operate with him, he orders the brigade commander on the 8th to move to Van Zandt County, on the Trinity, which, however, he states was a clerical error, and on the 15th reiterates his request of the 6th. In the meantime the matter is settled by General Smith, by letter of 23d, ordering the brigade to Rusk to report to General Wharton. Such correspondence is doubtless annoying to the department commander, as it certainly is to me, and my reason for sending at all is that, in view of the notice he serves of an intention to file his letter, I desire to file all, both his and mine, connected with the case.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. B. MAXEY,
Major-General, Commanding.
Headquarters District of Indian Territory, Fort Towson, January 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. B. Magruder,
Commanding District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: Your communication of the 6th instant, requesting Gano's brigade to be held in readiness for active service in view of concentration of troops at Little Rock, just received. The inclosure (copy of report signed John P. Bull), dated 6th instant, shows that General Thayer had arrived at Little Rock, and that his troops were expected on Saturday and Sunday; that two regiments arrived on Saturday morning and the remaining arrived during Sunday. I should think you would get a positive statement from Colonel Brooks, who, I am informed by you, was sent to operate on the river between Fort Smith and Little Rock. I inclose, as requested, a copy of effective strength of Bee's brigade. Recently Hardeman's battalion was sent to Bagby's brigade and Martin's regiment to Northern Texas, temporarily, thus materially depleting the present effective strength. Officers have been ordered to report to you for definite instructions as to route and country between the Ouachita and Arkansas Rivers you desire them to examine. By the same mail I was surprised to find a communication from you to the commanding officer of Gano's brigade, directing him to move the brigade to Van Zandt County, Tex., which order seems based on decisions or orders of the general commanding the department. I am at a loss to understand this irregular course. I have no such instructions from General Smith, and from my knowledge of General Smith I am satisfied there must be some misapprehension, as he would certainly direct me to issue necessary orders to that brigade or send his orders through me. I shall ask General Smith what his wishes are, as it is utterly impracticable for me to hold the command ready to move north, as you request, on the 6th and at the same time move it south, as you request, on the 8th. Information strictly reliable received from Pine Bluff as late as 3d instant shows their commissariat well supplied and is being constantly increased.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. B. MAXEY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Maj. Gen. S. B. Maxey,
Comdg. District of Indian Territory, Fort Towson, C. N.:

GENERAL: I am directed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 15, 1865, in which you state in effect that you have received a letter from him directing the commanding officer of Gano's brigade "to move his brigade to Van Zandt County, Tex.," and that it is utterly impracticable for you [to hold] the command ready to move north, as he requests, on the 6th instant and at the same time move it south, as he requests, on the 8th; and in reply he directs me to state that the words "Van Zandt County" was a clerical error occurring in the office. It should have been "to some point on or near Red River, above Clarksville." With this change you will perceive that there is nothing inconsistent or impracticable suggested by his letter alluded to. On the 6th instant he requested the commanding officer of Gano's brigade to hold himself in readiness to move north. On the 8th instant he received a copy of a communication from General Smith to you directing that Gano's brigade "should move to some point on or near Red River, above Clarksville." It was proper to obey this order as soon as possible, not only because General Smith ordered it, but because the want of forage in my district made it absolutely necessary. Nevertheless, in view of the enemy's preparations at Little Rock and Pine Bluff, he considered it due the public interest to request that you would not move your troops to a distance too remote for co-operation, but that you would keep them as near the Arkansas line as supplies would permit.

From the tone of your communications to him and to department headquarters, concerning the affairs of the district he has the honor to command, he fears that he may not expect that hearty co-operation so essential to the interests of the country. When Colonel Gurley, commanding Gano's brigade, stationed in this district, after having been informed of General Smith's wishes as to the removal of that brigade, and in defiance of the Sixty-second Article of War, refuses to obey the orders of his superior officer, General Shelby, to afford protection to public property of the same description as that which had been lost under similar circumstances in this district not long since, and gave as a reason that he had received your orders to obey no one except yourself, General Smith, and the Secretary of War, the major-general commanding deems it his duty to take such steps as will vindicate military discipline and punish willful violation of law, if he has to appeal to the Chief Magistrate of the Government to sustain him in his efforts to uphold discipline and to punish insubordination. The major-general commanding desires me to state further that General Smith having directed you to co-operate with him, it is his duty, which he shall always perform with pleasure, whether appreciated by you or not, to give you such information as he may be able to obtain of the movements of the enemy. You state that you think the commanding general could have received information from Colonel Brooks. Of course he could have received information from him had it been possible to communicate with him, but we have no accounts of him whatever, although he marched a month since to the Arkansas River with positive orders to report every week. It is feared that his couriers, as well as those sent to him, have been cut off. The major-general commanding has sent a company to force their way to him. The major-general commanding is informed that a large number of wagons, mules, quartermaster's and commissary stores have been arriving for some weeks at Pine Bluff and Little Rock, and such stores continue to be accumulated. A copy of this communication will be sent to the commanding officer of the department.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. M. KIMMEL,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 19th instant, written by Maj. M. M. Kimmel, assistant adju-
Chap. LX.) CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.—CONFEDERATE. 1349

tant-general. You say that "the words 'Van Zandt County' were a clerical error occurring in the office." The words in your letter addressed to "Commanding Officer Gano's brigade," from "headquarters District of Arkansas, near Fulton, January 8, 1865," are as follows:

The commanding general has directed me to say to you that the commanding general of the department has decided that the forage and other supplies in vicinity of Laynesport, Ark., is necessary for the support of this command and in consequence has ordered your brigade to move from Laynesport to Van Zandt County, on the Trinity.

The italics are mine. Of course, I could not have known that the words "Van Zandt County, on the Trinity" were by clerical error used for those contained in the letter of the department commander, of the 5th instant, to me (No. 5141), in which I was directed to order the brigade "to some point on or near Red River, above Clarksville, where supplies and forage can be obtained." I had no means of knowing that you did not mean precisely what you said.

In your communication to which this is a reply you say:

When Colonel Gurley, commanding Gano's brigade, stationed in this district, after having been informed of General Smith's wishes as to the removal of that brigade, and in defiance of the Sixty-second Article of War, refuses to obey the orders of his superior officer, General Shelby, to afford protection to public property of the same description as that which had been lost under similar circumstances in this district not long since, and gave as a reason that he had received your orders to obey no one except yourself (myself), General Smith, and the Secretary of War, the major-general commanding deems it his duty to take such steps as will vindicate military discipline and punish willful violation of law, if he has to appeal to the Chief Magistrate of the Government to sustain him in his efforts to uphold discipline and punish insubordination.

I do not know whether you design the above for Colonel Gurley or myself. It is due to Colonel Gurley to say that whilst he properly [holds] himself amenable to my orders as his immediate superior officer in his communication of 17th instant to General Shelby, whilst declining to recognize General Shelby's authority over him, his brigade, or the property in his charge, he held the following language:

I have no apprehension of any attempt to destroy public property. The present condition of this command as to subordination and discipline warrants me in assuring you that public property in our hands will be taken care of. Should it be necessary, however, for the protection of property, I would willingly yield you full control of this entire brigade for that purpose.

The correspondence between General Shelby and Colonel Gurley on the above subject discloses no sentiment on Colonel Gurley's part in conflict with the above. On the contrary, everything he has written that has come to my knowledge coincides therewith. I can only speak of the written correspondence, as I have not seen Colonel Gurley since the question was raised and have no reason to believe he has expressed a sentiment conflicting with the above. If the above is designed for me I have the honor to say that I have no wish to influence the action General Magruder may see fit to take. I discharge my duty conscientiously, in strict accordance with the laws and orders as I understand them, and hold myself amenable to my commanding officer for the manner in which I perform my duty, and I am at all times ready and willing to have the most rigid scrutiny and investigation of my official conduct on this or any other question. You further say:

The major-general commanding desires me to state further that General Smith having directed you (me) to co-operate with him, it is his duty, which he shall always perform with pleasure, whether appreciated by you (me) or not, to give you (me) such information as he may be able to obtain of the movements of the enemy.
I believe your records and files will prove that I have not been derelict in this particular. The part italicized I pass by. Your letter indicates that you take exceptions to my reference to the information you might obtain from Colonel Brooks. What I said was precisely this:

I should think you would get a positive statement from Colonel Brooks, who, I am informed by you, was sent to operate on the river between Fort Smith and Little Rock.

The statement of John P. Bull was from information not of his positive knowledge. Colonel Brooks was where he could know of his own observation as to these movements. Movements about Fort Smith are of deep interest to this district as well as yours, and I suggested a source of information that would leave no doubt. This is what the sentence was designed to mean, and does mean, and nothing more. What I say I say plainly. I think if you will read my letter of 15th instant you will be satisfied that upon this point the sentence can justly bear no other construction. As a matter of course it was impossible for me to have known that communication with Colonel Brooks was interrupted. You say that you fear you may not expect that hearty co-operation so essential to the interests of the service. I believe the records of the country, as well as of the State of Arkansas, prove that I have "co-operated" with the troops in that State with some good results. I shall never fail, general, to obey the orders of my commanding officers, nor will I fail to protect, as far as in my power, the rights of any command intrusted to me. Whilst I jealously guard my own rights, I will not infringe upon those of others. Having been ordered to co-operate with you, I shall do so cheerfully and to the best of my ability, and regret that any necessity should have arisen for this correspondence.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. B. MAXEY,
Major-General, Commanding.

I am advised by you that you will furnish a copy of your letter to the general commanding the department. A copy of yours and this response will be forwarded by me to complete the record.

MAXEY.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF INDIAN TERRITORY,

Maj. Gen. J. B. MAGRUDER,
Commanding District of Arkansas, Washington, Ark.:

GENERAL: I am directed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt this morning of your letter (No. 1319), written by Maj. M. M. Kimmel, assistant adjutant-general, bearing date January 15, requesting (in consequence of the threatening attitude of the enemy on your front) that the commanding officer of Gano's (now Bee's) brigade be directed to hold the same in readiness to move in the direction of Washington at short notice, prepared to meet the enemy. In reply I am directed to inclose a copy of letter from department headquarters bearing date 23d,* by which it will appear that he was directed to order that brigade to move forthwith to Rusk (Cherokee County, Tex.), via Marshall and Henderson, and report to Major-General Wharton.

* See Boggs to Maxey, p. 1340.
In compliance with the instructions contained in said letter, I am further directed to say, marching orders have been given that brigade.

I am, general, very respectfully, &c., your obedient servant,

T. M. SCOTT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., January 30, 1865.

General S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to call the attention of the War Department to the necessity of prompt action upon the papers which have been forwarded from this department recommending the retirement of officers on account of disability. The efficiency of many of the commands is becoming seriously impaired and the evil increases daily. From the difficulty in communicating with Richmond, it has not been deemed advisable to forward the muster-rolls. Many of the papers have been returned with the indorsement that no such officer is known. This is a great hardship and should be remedied if possible. I would suggest either that I be empowered to retire officers, subject to the decision of the War Department, or that the department will act upon the recommendations. The papers are never allowed to go forward without the indorsement of the intermediate commanders, which is of itself evidence of the position of the officers.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 30, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN A. WHARTON,
Commanding Cavalry, &c., Nacogdoches, Tex.:

GENERAL: I have carefully considered the question of reorganizing and reducing the mounted force. The necessities of the country as well as the best interests of the service require its immediate and material reduction. It is greatly in excess of its proportion to the other arms of the service; it numbers more than half the whole army in the department and its further maintenance has become an impossibility. I expect, general, your co-operation and assistance in effecting the end desired. I propose reorganizing your command, leaving you two divisions of two brigades each, one of cavalry proper and one of mounted infantry. I intend that your regiments shall be kept up to a minimum of 400 effectives, and you will be allowed to recruit them to that number. Including Brown's regiment and Bee's (late Gano's) brigade, you have in your command twenty-one regiments or battalions. Retaining twelve for your reserve corps, there remain nine to be dismounted, which I propose shall be organized into a division of two brigades, to be commanded by Bee or Steele, as they may decide. I shall make three regiments the standard of brigade organization for cavalry throughout the department. Debray must command one of the cavalry brigades; he has two regiments already in part armed and drilled in that arm of service. You should select your regiments for the cavalry proper, for their horses and for their drill and adaptability of the men for that arm. I will give no positive rule by which the regiments to be dismounted must be selected. I believe it would be most just and recommend to you that the regiments longest in service be continued mounted, except in case of superior qualifications in discipline, conduct, and efficiency as cavalry in the junior regiments. The division commanders will be Bee, Steele, and Major; the brigade commanders, Debray, Gano, Hardeman, and Lane for the mounted brigades. The commanders for the dismounted brigades will be determined by the regiments composing them. I leave to you the details as to time, place, and the manner of effecting this reorganization. The Government will require the mules for transportation and at least 500 horses for the artillery from the dismounted regiments. I promise they shall be paid for from the first funds received in the department. In organizing your two cavalry brigades, collect all the revolvers of your command for their use. The revolver is not needed for the mounted infantry, and it with the saber is sufficient for light cavalry, and especially if the flank companies are armed also with rifled carbines. I have 1,000 sabers at Houston which I can give you, also equipments for the carbines which were ordered to be turned over to you. Let me know your wants and be moderate. I will endeavor to supply you. You can telegraph me, and give me your views if you differ from me. I am determined on the reorganization and reduction of the cavalry; the time and manner only are questions that admit of consideration. It is important that it should be carried into effect by you with as little delay as possible. You know the necessity of increasing the garrison at Galveston, and as the division taken from your command is to be added to the force on that island, you will see the importance of promptly and successfully dismounting and effecting its organization.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, January 30, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. B. Magruder,
Commanding District of Arkanas:

GENERAL: In replying to your letter of the 14th instant the commanding general directs me to say that he cordially approves of your sending General Shelby to collect and bring out the Confederate soldiers scattered in Northeast Arkansas. He believes if any one can accomplish it that officer will do it effectually. The concentration of the enemy's forces at New Orleans is favorable for the attempt. The great difficulties to be encountered will be from the inclemency of the season and the overflowing of the streams. If General Shelby is not sent the commanding general considers Brigadier-General Thompson as the best officer to substitute. An objection to this is that his legal right to command might be questioned.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS TRANSMISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Maj. Gen. J. G. Walker,
Commanding District of Texas, Houston:

GENERAL: I have written General Wharton directing him to dismount nine regiments of his command, to be organized into a division of two brigades. I propose giving the command of this division to General Steele, and directing him to report with it to you, to assist in the defense of Galveston. I have determined upon reducing the cavalry force throughout the department. Already has it been partially accomplished in Arkansas, and I wish your assistance and co-operation in effecting it with the troops under your command. Gillespie's, Anderson's, and Bradford's regiments should be dismounted and made part of the garrison at Galveston. I leave to yourself the time and manner, and only impress upon you the necessity and importance of promptly and successfully carrying it into effect. These three regiments you will organize into a brigade, which, with that at Galveston to be commanded by Col. A. Smith, will form a division for General Hawes. I shall endeavor to strengthen your means of defense at Galveston by increasing its garrison, but so apparent is the natural weakness of the position that I am daily more strongly convinced of the impracticability of making a successful defense against an attack in force. The recent fall of Fort Fisher, the only remaining stronghold on our coast, except Galveston, is an additional evidence of the impossibility of contending against the heavy armaments the enemy can concentrate for the attack of a position. Galveston must not be evacuated until the enemy have developed an intention of making a combined land and naval attack in force. The position is of too much importance to be given up until the last moment. A show of strengthening it should be made, whilst secretly preparing for the evacuation. The garrison must be saved in all events; the guns and material if practicable. The re-enforcements from the dismounted cavalry in your district will enable you to strengthen the garrison and to improve and hold the work at the bridge, so as to cover the withdrawal of the troops.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS WESTERN SUB-DISTRICT OF TEXAS,
Brownsville, January 30, 1865.

Capt. A. H. May,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to state, for the information of the major-general commanding, in reply to confidential letter, No. 4731, department headquarters, November 30, and letter of, July 30, to Major-General Magruder, and No. 333, district headquarters, current series, that I had not replied to the two first as I have been, and still am, endeavoring to collect data on which to base a report and exact history of this command, the necessity of the country, &c. When it is recollected that this command was composed entirely of wild bands of men, scattered from San Antonio to this point, and utterly regardless of orders, and without the means of complying with them if they had desired to do so, the major-general commanding will form some faint idea of the difficulty of obtaining the desired information. The whole object of this command in the western country I have conceived to be to protect Mexico, the necessity for which increases as the conflict grows. When Galveston falls, as it may, it will then be our only source from which all the articles required to be purchased from abroad can be obtained. The question is, how can this best be effected? So long as the enemy can be kept on Brazos Island it will be too expensive, as well as inconvenient for him, to keep a corresponding force, which can alone be effective in injuring this trade. Should he be allowed to occupy Brownsville or Corpus Christi, he will have by spring excellent grass, and an opportunity of moving as large a portion of his troops as he may deem necessary. His force at present amounts to 1,600 infantry, 250 cavalry, 1 battery of artillery, and I am credibly informed that they are attempting to increase these their cavalry force. To hold this force in check my force is about 1,500 effective men; 170 are in Northern Division under Colonel Pyron; a portion stationed at Camp Verde guarding country against depredations of Indians, daily occurring; another portion stationed at Eagle Pass, guarding trade in that direction, as also protecting the country against Indians. The disturbed condition of country in Mexico, as well as on this side of the river, will not, in my opinion, admit of the reduction of one man from this duty. On the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass to Edinburg, a distance of 280 miles, I have a force of 200 men. This force is also engaged in protecting trade and watching bands of banditti constantly in alarm since my arrival here, for fear they would be induced by the Yankees to make a raid through the country, capturing cotton and carrying it to Corpus Christi or Padre Island, the practicability of which can easily be seen by the map. Deducting the force required for the above and I have but 1,100 men for the purpose of watching this point, Corpus Christi, the coast, and scouting the country for jayhawkers, bands of deserters, &c., west of Guadaloupe.

In accordance with orders, I have been busily engaged in ferreting out men belonging to other commands and sending them forward. The difference between the cost of a bale of cotton crossed at Rio Grande City and one brought down on this side is $10.50. The difference upon imported articles will, of course, be the same. If this position is abandoned no one will be willing to haul on a line as low as Rio Grande City, and the trade will necessarily have to go to Laredo or Eagle Pass, which would almost double the amount, and at the price at which cotton ranges now would effectually put a stop to the trade; besides, if the forces are withdrawn from the armies in the east joining these hordes will be more than equal to the number of troops drawn from here. It is evident to me that by using my force as above stated I shall do more toward strengthening the army in the interior than by sending the small force here to their assistance. But this is a question for the decision of the commanding general, and not for me. I shall therefore issue the order immediately for Giddings' battalion to proceed, to obey his orders, I do not send Showalter's regiment, as I do not know whether it is the general's intention for that regiment, as in letter to General Magruder this regiment never was referred to as a part of Colonel Ford's command. However, no time will be lost, as the time they can get off the roads at present do not admit of the movement of troops, and by the time they can get off the general will have had time to inform me of... his views. If the latter troops are left I may possibly be able to hold this point, but it is exceedingly doubtful. As soon as this reduction is known the country will be abandoned by the citizens. One other point of view, which with the Confederacy in a different condition I would not make, is this: That I believe fully one-fourth of the command ordered east will desert. Had we plenty of men I should say let them go. These are the men, in a great measure, from whom we are to expect depredations, and I would not even be surprised if they joined the enemy. The other day when some deserters were returned to me by General Mejía, in accordance with an arrangement made with him, 300 deserters are said to have left Matamoros, 125 of whom are known to have fled to the enemy at Brazos. In view of all I have said, I do not believe you could increase the garrison at Galveston, even if you should order my whole command in this district, more than 600 or 800. Finally, I would suggest to the commanding general that I be permitted to retain my present force in this district; that no more recruits shall be received. If the plans which I have already inaugurated succeed, the question of supplies can be set at rest. I shall hold the remainder of the troops ready to move, awaiting the answer of the general by next mail.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. E. SLAUGHTER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[January 31, 1865.—For Davis to Smith, assigning the latter to the charge of military operations on both banks of the Mississippi River, &c., see Vol. XLI, Part I, p. 124.]

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., January 31, 1865.

Brig. Gen. R. P. MACLAY:

GENERAL: The question of the legality of your appointment has come up in such a form that I am satisfied it will have to be tested, if you remain at present in command of the brigade; should it thus be presented it may be impossible for me to sustain you. The papers in regard to your appointment, and of others made at the same time, have been presented to the President in such form that a categorical answer must soon be given. Until such an answer has been received, I do not think it is advisable that you should resume command. I send you a sixty days' extension of your leave, and, if a favorable answer is received before its expiration, you will be at once returned to duty. I regret the necessity that compels me to a course of action which is alike mortifying to you as well as myself, but when I assigned you to duty I had every reason to believe from the President's letters and indorsements that he would sustain me in the course taken; that action you, as I, know was without the authority of law at the time.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the commanding general to inclose you the accompanying copies of telegrams* from Major-General Parsons, commanding at Camden, and to say that this information, taken in connection with the report from Major-General Gardner that the enemy was concentrating a force at Vicksburg for service in this department, would seem to indicate that they intend to operate on the Ouachita River and to occupy Monroe.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hon. Robert Rose, Shreveport:

Sir: Your request to cross the Rio Grande on private business in Mexico is most cheerfully granted. The proper officer has been directed to furnish you the necessary official evidence of this permission. I avail myself of so favorable an opportunity through you of expressing to the authorities of the Imperial Government the deep interest that I take in all that concerns the prosperity and welfare of their people, and at the same time I desire you to convey to them the sincere pleasure and gratification which I feel in the assurances received from so many sources of their generous sympathies and friendly dispositions toward the Government which I have the honor to represent as the military chief of this department; also to assure them of my ardent desire to cultivate and extend still further the amicable relations already existing, and which I trust will continue to exist between two coterminous nations having like aims and pursuits, and perhaps the same great and glorious destiny. Having entire confidence in your patriotism, intelligence, and knowledge of foreign intercourse (you having heretofore been connected with the former Government of the United States in a diplomatic capacity), and wishing you complete success in the object of your present visit, I invoke for you there the consideration due your well-known character and high social position here.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

SHREVEPORT, February [1,] 1865.

Hon. Robert Rose,
Shreveport, La.:

SIR: Whilst in the city of Mexico I desire you, on some fitting occasion, to make known to His Majesty the Emperor, that in the case of unexampled catastrophe to our arms and the final overthrow of the government which I have the honor to represent as the military chief of the States west of the Mississippi River, an event I do not now apprehend, but which yet may possibly occur in the future, it is my fixed purpose to leave my native land and seek an asylum in Mexico. Bred to the profession of arms, having such education in my profession as the best military schools in the United States offer, with the benefit of foreign travel and some experience, such as is acquired by the command of armies actively engaged in the field for more than two years, it is my desire still to continue in the exercise of the profession of my choice. Having some knowledge of the French and Spanish languages, and having been on duty at one period on the Mexican frontier, my humble services and such influence as I could exert might be rendered available to His Majesty's Government. I therefore authorize you to tender them to him in the possibility of the contingency above alluded to. The national antipathy that would exist in the minds of many citizens of the Confederate States to those of the North, together with their intelligence, endurance, and daring as soldiers, might, in contemplation of possible collision between the Imperial Government and the United States of the North, render very desirable such a corps of Southern soldiers as might be induced by the offer of liberal terms to colonize the Empire, and thus greatly strengthen it. Should you find that this offer and the accompanying views are not wholly inappropriate to be alluded to, you will please tender my services to the Emperor, and at the same time assure him of my heartfelt wish for the eminent success of his reign, and the honor, welfare, and happiness of his people.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose copies of telegrams* received from Maj. Gen. M. M. Parsons, at Camden, since those transmitted to you on yesterday. The commanding general directs me to say to you that you must expect a movement up the Ouachita. The country the enemy are marching through is so destitute of supplies they must establish a base. The only route from Pine Bluff is via Monticello and Hamburg, Ark., and Bastrop, La., to which point there is a ridge road, gravelly and in good order. From Bastrop to Monroe the road is very difficult and at this time almost impracticable. Forney's division, now here, will be retained at this point till further developments. Inclosed for your information is also a copy of a dispatch sent to-day to General Parsons.*

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 1, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: The commanding general directs that when you find the enemy are likely to occupy the country about Monroe you will instruct your cavalry before retiring to burn all the cotton liable to fall into their hands, especially that held by Calderwood and others suspected of disloyalty.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 1, 1865.

His Excellency H. FLANAGIN,
Governor of Arkansas, Washington, Ark.:

GOVERNOR: Your letter of the 26th ultimo is received. The movement of Churchill's division to Minden, La., places it in a better position for the defense of Arkansas, partially relieves the upper portion of the valley of Red River from the drain they would make on it for supplies, and facilitates a more rapid concentration to oppose an advance of the enemy from any quarter. I have no fears that a movement will be made from Little Rock, by the Little Missouri, toward Washington and the upper Red River Valley. No more egregious folly could be committed by the enemy. Almost impracticable in summer, it would be impossible at this season. The garrisons on the upper Arkansas have been reduced, and troops from the enemy's command in that district have been sent down the Mississippi to New Orleans. The concentration of a force near the mouth of the Arkansas and at Vicksburg, with information received, indicate that the enemy intend operating on the only good and feasible line open to them from the District of Arkansas by a march through Monticello and a combined movement to occupy Monroe, La., and the lower Ouachita. The enemy have concentrated a force of some 25,000 infantry and 6,000 cavalry at Morganza, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans. Information induces me to believe that an expedition is now projected against Mobile, but that in the spring the whole force will be thrown against this department. The preparations

* See p. 1361.
being made point to one of two lines of operation, either from the Texas coast or up the valley of Red River. Churchill, at Minden, will have comfortable winter quarters already constructed, and is in position there to meet an advance from every point from which Arkansas can be threatened. I am making every effort to check the trade in cotton with the enemy. I some time since instructed General Magruder to burn all the cotton east of the Ouachita. On the 11th ultimo he wrote as follows:

In accordance with instructions from department headquarters, directing me to have destroyed all the cotton that was in danger of falling into the hands of the enemy, I have ordered all cotton east of the Ouachita River to be destroyed.

Material for clothing has been and is being sent to Arkansas to be made up for the troops. Large amounts of clothing have already been distributed, and trains are bringing supplies from Mexico as rapidly as the great distance to be traversed will allow.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

GENERAL ORDERS, no. 25. HDQRS. DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS, Washington, February 1, 1865.

I. Major-General Magruder assumes command of the District of Arkansas.

II. Major-General Fagan will resume command of the cavalry of the district.

III. In addition to his present duties, Maj. C. B. Moore, quartermaster, is charged with that of inspector of the quartermaster's department for the District of Arkansas. He will proceed to visit the office of each officer of the quartermaster's department in the district, and make minute and critical inspections of all matters pertaining to the quartermaster's department. He will receive definite instructions from the chief quartermaster of the district and will make detailed reports to him at the close of each inspection as to the efficiency of the various officers, the condition of their books and accounts, and all information that will be of benefit to the quartermaster's department.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. B. Magruder:

W. A. ALSTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT, Shreveport, La., February 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. M. M. Parsons,
Commanding at Camden, Ark.:

If the enemy's intention to occupy Monroe is fully developed send the steam-boats in Ouachita to Red River, placing a trusty officer first on board each, with orders to destroy without fail if liable to capture. If impracticable to send them here, have them at Camden, where their destruction can, if necessary, be surely accomplished.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
GENERAL ORDERS, \{ HDQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT, \}
No. 7. \{ Shreveport, La., February 2, 1865. \}

I. For the purpose of enforcing General Orders, No. 57,* series of 1864, from department headquarters, enrolling officers are directed to inspect the rolls of detailed men employed in the Government establishments in their districts. Officers in charge of these establishments will, upon application of the enrolling officer, furnish the rolls and exhibit the orders detailing the men.

II. Application for the revocation of any special order must specify the paragraph, number, and date of the order.

III. In order to facilitate the supply of forage and subsistence to detachments of the Reserve Corps, officers of the tax-in-kind service will direct their agents in charge of depots to supply, as far as practicable, the requirements of such commands as are on duty, taking the requisitions and receipts of the officer in command for the forage and subsistence issued to them.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 2, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: The commanding general directs me to inform you that he had ordered nine regiments of Wharton's command to be dismounted and placed at General Walker's disposal for the defense of his district. Wharton's command will then consist of two divisions of two brigades each. Each brigade will be composed of three regiments, which will be kept recruited up to a minimum of 400 effective men. One of Wharton's divisions will be armed and equipped as cavalry proper and instructed as such; the other considered and used as mounted infantry. The general commanding desires to be informed whether you have yet dismounted Harrison's regiment. The horses are much needed for your batteries.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 2, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches, La.:

GENERAL: I inclose a copy of a telegram just received, which confirms the previous intelligence that the enemy are moving toward Monroe. The commanding general instructs me to say that this movement must be delayed, if not interrupted by the bad weather. If the rains which have fallen here lately have extended through the section in which the enemy are reported it will be impossible for their artillery and heavy wagons to move. he means at your disposal to oppose the enemy's intention, which is evidently to establish himself at Monroe and open communication with the Mississippi, making the Ouachita his base of operations for a spring campaign. All your disposable cavalry should be thrown in his front. By placing obstacles in his march he may be delayed in a country where, the impracticability of the roads and the scarcity of supplies may alone cause a failure of his expedition. The general commanding proposes ordering Forney's division to Mansfield or in the vicinity of Natchitoches, as you may deem the most advisable. The commanding general deems the latter point probably the better, as the troops would have a shorter distance to march should they be required to move to Texas to the support of General Walker.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

P. S.—Since writing the above additional information has been received from a reliable scout, which the commanding general believes to be correct. A copy of his dispatch is inclosed.*

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. B. MAGRUDER,
Commanding District of Arkansas, Washington, Ark.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose a copy of a telegram† sent to Major-General Parsons, at Camden, which is transmitted to you for your information. The commanding general instructs me to write you that he is convinced that the present movement of the enemy has Monroe for its objective point, and the occupation of the lower Ouachita; and that Major-General Churchill, at Minden, is in the best possible position. The enemy cannot operate against Camden in force or move at this season from Pine Bluff on any other than the ridge road via Monticello, Hamburg, and Bastrop. If Parsons' division is at Camden the garrison there is sufficient. It is difficult to subsist even that force, and to supply a larger one at this time would be impracticable.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, HQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 8.

Shreveport, La., February 3, 1865.

Under the regulations of overland commerce with Mexico, established by the President on the 3d of August, 1864, and published in General Orders, No. 77, series of 1864, from department headquarters, all carriers engaged in the exportation of cotton and tobacco west of San Antonio or Goliad, Tex., and leaving either of those points after the 1st day of February, 1865, must have clearance papers for their wagons or other vehicles from the deputy collector of customs at one of these places, viz., from Mr. Samuel Sampson, at San Antonio, or Mr. John N. Rose, at Goliad. Any such wagons or vehicles with cotton or tobacco moving westward from either of these places after the 1st day of February, 1865, without such clearance will be liable to seizure under the ninth and tenth paragraphs of the regulations. The military commander of the Western Sub-District of Texas will cause the same to be executed in accordance with the said regulations.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, HQ HEADQUARTERS CHURCHILL'S DIVISION,
No. 25.

Camp Magruder, February 3, 1865.

V. Captain Sleeper will send out daily a scout from his company with instructions to arrest all men found committing any depredations upon the citizens in this vicinity; also all men absent from their commands without the written permission of the brigade commander. All men so arrested will be brought, under guard, to these headquarters.

By command of Major-General Churchill: C. E. KIDDER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 4, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: I recommend to your favorable consideration the proposition of Maj. John Adams, whom I have known since my arrival in this department as a patriotic, liberal, and true man. The proposition to take out the 1,000 bales which are exempted from taxation by the Federal Government should, I think, be judiciously accepted. It will bring safely back into our lines one of the Washington boats, and may be made the means of placing them in Red River.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 4, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: Your communication of the 28th ultimo, with the accompanying plan for making available the cotton within our lines, has been received. In reply thereto the commanding general instructs me to say that the first paragraph as proposed should be modified as follows: Permits, in duplicate, for the passage of — bales of cotton through our lines, to be issued by the commander of the District of West Louisiana, the holder of said permits to present one of them with $50 in specie or approved sterling exchange (for each bale) to the bonded agent or commissioned officer, who shall be appointed for that purpose at district headquarters, and who shall give a corresponding receipt for the money. On the presentation of the receipt and of the duplicate permit to an officer at the outpost, appointed to receive the same, the cotton authorized by the permit will be allowed to pass through our lines. The officer receiving the bonus and the officer at the outpost will each make weekly reports to district headquarters of their transactions, these reports to be consolidated and forwarded monthly to department headquarters. The moneys received for bonus by the bonded officer or agent at district headquarters will be turned over by him immediately to the C. S. depositary, to be placed to the credit of the War Department. The commanding general thinks this change advisable for several reasons. It simplifies the transaction and enables you to keep it under control. The points through which cotton is permitted to pass should be limited. It might well be confined to passage on boats down the Red and Ouachita Rivers. Trade with the enemy is prohibited by law, and can only be justified upon the plea of the extreme necessities of the army, the responsibility resting entirely with the commanding general. Therefore, there should be a thorough system of checks established and measures taken to show clearly that the moneys received have been properly accounted for, and should go into the Treasury, to be drawn out by warrant under the usual restrictions of that Department. The preamble of your draft, I am also instructed to say, should be changed so as to represent that the pressing wants of the army create a military necessity for rendering available for supplies the cotton near the enemy's lines. The necessities of the people cannot create a military necessity justifying a violation of the law. In other respects the plan submitted by you is approved by the commanding general.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CHURCHILL'S DIVISION,
Camp Magruder, February 4, 1865.

Major BLOCHER,
Commanding Artillery Battalion:

MAJOR: Major-General Churchill directs that you move your battalion at once to this place and occupy the quarters erected by the artillery battalion attached to Major-General Forney's division. He further directs that upon your [arrival] you report in person at these [headquarters for] instructions.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. E. KIDDER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS CHURCHILL'S DIVISION,
Camp Magruder, February 4, 1865.

Major Blocher,
Commanding Artillery Battalion:

Major: The major-general commanding division directs me to say that owing to the difficulty of procuring forage at this point, you will not move your battalion to this camp, but will remain in your present encampment until further orders.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. E. KIDDER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 4, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. B. MAGRUDER,
Commanding District of Arkansas, Washington, Ark.:

General: Your letter of the 27th ultimo is received. The general commanding directs me to say that he is unable to understand your views as therein expressed, your communication not being clear or concise either as to the present or proposed organization of commands, and the strength of each. Complete returns of every regiment should have accompanied your letter. The present organization, as the commanding general understands it, is unsatisfactory, retaining in service seventeen regiments and two battalions, a larger force than the necessities of your district require, and a much greater one than can be subsisted, mounted. The commanding general has directed the dismounting of nine regiments of Major-General Wharton's command, and he is reducing the mounted force of the Districts of Louisiana and Texas. It is impossible longer to maintain a large cavalry force in this department. If a sense of justice and of patriotism does not satisfy the men that the interests and necessities of the country all demand its reduction they are valueless as soldiers. Three regiments are sufficient for a brigade of mounted men. A greater number is cumbersome and cannot easily be foraged in one locality. You can retain the organization proposed, two divisions of two brigades each, but the brigades must be reduced to three regiments each. This will leave twelve regiments mounted; the remainder should be immediately dismounted. Inclosed is a copy of a letter addressed to Major-General Wharton upon the subject of the reorganization of his command.* If you adopt the plan recommended to General Wharton, and concentrate the revolvers and cavalry arms in one brigade, you may have sufficient to arm it effectively as cavalry proper. Your requisitions for any deficiency will be filled if possible.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Maj. Gen. J. F. FAGAN,
Commanding Cavalry, &c., District of Arkansas:

General: The commanding general instructs me to reply to your telegram of this date, as follows: General Buckner has been directed to throw all of his available cavalry in front of the enemy moving toward Monroe. The commanding general does not believe that it is practicable even for cavalry to operate now. The only road passable for troops, if there be one, is the ridge road, by Monticello, Hamburg, and Bastrop, upon which the enemy are reported to be advancing. To operate on their flank it will be necessary to move through bottoms and low country, which now must be impassable. Wagons cannot be used. There is little or no forage or subsistence in that section, and, with but little hope of effecting anything, the horses would be broken down and lost and the command rendered unfit for service in the spring. Though anxious to reduce the cavalry, the commanding general does not wish them all dismounted nor to have it done in that way. He has just received information that Bee's brigade, near Laynesport, cannot move in any direction because of swollen streams and impassable roads. They are as yet unable to obey the first order sent them.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE CORPS, STATE OF TEXAS,

Brenham, Tex., February 4, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel Jack,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Houston, Tex.:

COLONEL: I have the honor to inclose list of battalion and regimental commanders called into the field by recent orders from headquarters Bureau of Conscription, as also a copy of said order. By it only two companies of Lieutenant-Colonel Shannon's battalion will take the field, his battalion being divided by the thirty-second parallel of latitude. Major Schmitzd has only three companies moving, for the same reason. The organizations are just being completed. Blank muster rolls have been sent out to them, with orders to send them in corrected, as those heretofore received do not give a correct data as to the number of men actually present. This information will be forwarded to district headquarters as soon as received. The recent heavy rains will prevent the concentration of the battalions, for what length of time will depend upon the weather. The streams are too much swollen to be crossed with any dispatch, and some can hardly be crossed at all when very high. If the rain promises to continue I will get the battalions of De Witt, Bean, and Schmitzd over on the east side of the Brazos if possible before it rises. I had selected the west side, opposite to Hempstead, for them. I am having the regimental and battalion commanders to recommend some suitable person for assistant quartermasters and assistant commissaries of subsistence, requiring each to send up the bond required by law, and when received will forward them by special messenger to department headquarters. In the meantime I will give to these parties a certificate stating the facts and authorizing them to act until their applications can be acted on by the proper authority. If their acts cannot be acknowledged in foraging and subsisting and procuring the necessary articles to keep them in the field, I respectfully ask of the major-general commanding to assign for the time such officers as are necessary to act until the action of the proper authority can be had on their bonds. If neither of these courses can be taken it will be impossible to keep these troops in the field. I respectfully ask for instructions from the major-general commanding at his earliest convenience. I inclose the bond of Mr. Milby, recommended by Major Kennard for assistant quartermaster of his battalion, for indorsement of the major-general commanding district. A regimental morning report will be forwarded as fast as the regiments and battalions arrive at camp, and full musters-rolls as soon as they can be made out.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. ROBERTSON,

Brigadier-General, Commanding Reserve Corps.

GENERAL: Under date of January 11, 1865, you write that, "In accordance with instructions from department headquarters, directing me to have destroyed all the cotton that was in danger of falling into the hands of the enemy, I have ordered all cotton east of the Ouachita River to be destroyed." The commanding general desires to know whether or not this order has been carried into effect. Information he has received induces him to believe that it has not been executed, although no official intimation to contrary has been given by you.

The effective total of the entire command is—*

The above act of legislature was passed December, 1863, and a State force ordered to be organized to defend the frontier. This force is only a paper organization, and General Walker has to send Confederate forces there to protect these counties when necessary. I shall go to Galveston soon and inspect all troops there and all others in this district. I would thank you to send me a copy of all general orders since June, 1864, care of General E. K. Smith. I shall not pay attention just now to the posts out of my line of travel, until I furnish you the history of the troops. Do I act as you wish in this respect? If not please notify me, as I desire to fully comply with your wishes. I sent you through General Smith my report of Wharton's cavalry, which I hope will give you satisfaction.

Brig. Gen. E. McNair,

Commanding Brigade:

GENERAL: Major-General Churchill directs that during his absence temporarily you assume command of this division.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. E. KIDDER,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS Trans-Mississippi Department,

Shreveport, February 7, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,

Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: You were informed by letter No. 5510, February 2, that instructions had been given to dismount nine regiments of Wharton’s command. The commanding general directs me to say that he desires these regiments to be made efficient as infantry with as little delay as possible. He anticipates some trouble in dismounting them, much more in disciplining them. He believes that both objects will be best accomplished by the presence of some old and tried infantry regiments which can be distributed among the newly organized brigades, sustain their commanders, and offer an example to the dismounted regiments. He proposes ordering King’s brigade to Houston (where the cavalry will be dismounted), and with the regiments of that brigade to reorganize three new brigades, each composed of infantry and dismounted cavalry. Brig. Gen. James E. Harrison, just promoted by the President, will command one of these brigades, Brigadier-Generals King and Steele the other two; the latter, as senior, to command the division. The promotion of Colonel King has not been approved by the President. By this arrangement he will be retained in command of a brigade. The elements of order which will be infused throughout this new organization will, the general commanding hopes, render the division effective for service in the field by the opening of the spring campaign. The commanding general regrets the necessity which induces him to remove King’s brigade from your command, but believes that it will ultimately result in benefit to yourself, as he is convinced that when the division is made efficient the enemy’s movements will call it to the District of Louisiana. This plan for strengthening General Walker may prevent the necessity of sending Forney’s division from your command. Churchill’s division also is at Minden in position to support you. The commanding general suggests the importance, whenever you feel able to accomplish it, of adding another brigade to Polignac’s division by dismounting four regiments of Louisiana cavalry.

I am, general, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS Trans-Mississippi Department,

Maj. Gen. JOHN A. WHARTON,

Commanding Cavalry of Nacogdoches, Tex.:

GENERAL: I am directed by the commanding general to inform you that he has ordered Brig. Gen. James E. Harrison to proceed immediately to your headquarters. General Harrison is fully possessed of the views of the commanding general and he desires you to consult him, believing that he will be of assistance to you in dismounting the regiments of your command which are to be converted into infantry. The enclosed extract of a letter of this date, * addressed to General Buckner, will explain the organization which the commanding general hopes to effect.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 8, 1865.

Brig. Gen. H. P. Bee,
Commanding Brigade:

GENERAL: The general commanding desires me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 3d instant, and to say that you are not under the orders of Major-General Magruder, and will therefore proceed at once to obey the orders from these headquarters directing you to report with your command to Major-General Wharton, at Nacogdoches, Tex. Should you have reached Lewisville you will proceed via Shreveport.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Maj. Gen. S. B. Maxey,
Commanding District of Indian Territory:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 25th ultimo, and desires me to say he regrets you do not see "any particular service you can be here (there) longer." Your duties as an administrative officer are very extensive, and the manner in which you have conducted those duties has done credit to yourself and been a source of great satisfaction to him. The necessities of the service may at any time strip one district of its best troops and throw the mass of troops into another district, but this should not interfere with the administrative duties connected with a district.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

General Orders, \{ HDQRS. DIST. OF INDIAN TERRITORY, \}
No. 6. \}
Fort Touson, C. N., February 9, 1865.

I. Capt. E. M. Bacon, assistant quartermaster, Provisional Army, C. S., having reported to these headquarters, in obedience to Special Orders, No. 289, paragraph XIX, headquarters Department Trans-Mississippi, Shreveport, La., November 18, 1864, is hereby announced as chief paymaster of the District of the Indian Territory, and will be respected as such. Captain Bacon will immediately enter upon the discharge of his official duties.

By order of Major-General Maxey:

T. M. SCOTT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Houston, February 9, 1865.

Col. J. E. McCord:

Information from the frontier, deemed reliable, goes to show that the recent difficulties with the Indians on the Concho were in all probability the result of imprudence and folly on the part of our own people, and that the Indians were friendly and committing no depredations upon the settlement. I therefore consider it, under all the circumstances, judicious to suspend your march to the frontier until we can obtain further information. I deem this necessary, partly in reference to information I have today received from New Orleans, that the Yankees are on the point of sailing with a formidable force for the coast of Texas, as is believed. You will therefore confine your preparations to your frontier expedition, but do not march until further orders. In the meantime send me by special express, if necessary, any information of importance throwing light upon the condition of the frontier which you may receive.

J. G. WALKER,
Major-General, &c.

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, La., February 10, 1865.

His Excellency Jefferson Davis,
President of the Confederate States:

Sir: I have the honor to inclose to Your Excellency the following official papers for your information in reference to an organization of frontier State troops in Texas who are solely under the control of the State authorities: First, a copy of the law of the State of Texas under which they were organized; second, a copy of a joint resolution passed by that State in reference to them; third, general order of Brigadier-General Greer in reference to these troops; fourth, my instructions to Major West; fifth, correspondence between Major West and the governor of Texas; sixth, Major West's report to me; seventh, my order to Brigadier-General Greer; in all eleven inclosures. His Excellency Governor Murrah informs me that he has corresponded fully with the War Department on this subject. It thus becomes unnecessary for me to give any detailed history of this State organization further than to say that it contains not less than 4,000 able-bodied men, of whom two-thirds may safely be estimated as liable to conscription; that they are scattered along an Indian frontier, which could be securely guarded by one-fourth their number, aided as they could be by the Reserve Corps from all the frontier counties. They are also held by the State in direct violation of the enrollment acts, and to that extent those acts are practically nullified. I sent Major West, assistant adjutant-general, of my staff, to confer with Governor Murrah and the legislature, then in session, with a view of securing these men to our armies. The legislature declined the inclosed propositions offered by me, and as I cannot force these persons into Confederate service without a collision with the State authorities, and as the governor informs me in one of his letters (inclosed) that the Senators from Texas intended laying the matter before Congress, I have agreed with His Excellency the Governor to defer all further action until your determination in the matter was received. I now most respectfully ask for instructions as to the enrollment, assignment, &c., of conscripts from the frontier counties of Texas, now connected with the State organization.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

CHAPTER XXXVI.—An act to provide for the protection of the frontier and turning over the frontier regiment to C. S. service.

SECTION I. Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of Texas, That all persons liable to do military duty who are at the passage of this act bona fide citizens of the following line of counties, and all counties lying north and west of said line, to wit, Cooke, Wise, Parker, that part of Johnson west of the Belknap and Fort Graham road, Bosque, Coryell, Lampasas, Burnet, Blanco, Bandera, Medina, Kendall, Atascosa, Live Oak, McMullen, La Salle, Dimmit, and Maverick, shall be enrolled and organized into companies, not less than twenty-five or more than sixty-five men, rank and file.

SEC. II. That it shall be the duty of the governor, immediately after the passage of this act, to cause the counties designated in the preceding section to be divided into three districts, as nearly equal in territory and population as may be, in each of which districts he shall appoint a suitable person, with the rank and pay of major of cavalry, who shall be the ranking officer of the district to which he is appointed, and which officer shall be charged with the organization of the men subject to duty in his district, and with the control of the companies when organized and the defense of the same, as provided herein, and under such other regulations as the governor may prescribe.

SEC. III. That the commissioned officers of each company of fifty men or more shall consist of one captain and two lieutenants; if less than fifty men, two lieutenants. The non-commissioned officers shall consist of one sergeant and one corporal for every ten men.

SEC. IV. That each member of a company shall be required to keep himself furnished with a suitable horse, gun, and ten days' provisions, and all necessary equipments (including ammunition).

SEC. V. That no person who is not an actual resident in good faith of the frontier district, herein specified, at the passage of this act shall be a member of the organization provided for by this act; and it shall be the duty of captains of companies, and of the commanding officers of the several districts, to exclude non-residents of the frontier district from membership in said organization; and in case of doubt, strict and full proof under oath shall be required to the satisfaction of the officers.
SEC. VI. That the companies organized under the provisions of this act shall be required to keep at least one-fourth of their number in the field in actual service, making equal divisions of time; and the officers commanding districts shall have the power and authority to order out the whole force, under such restrictions, regulations, and requirements as the governor may devise, for the control and management of the organization herein provided for.

SEC. VII. That every officer and private of each of said companies shall before entering upon duty be required to take an oath before some one authorized by law to administer oaths, that he will use his best endeavors to arrest and deliver to the nearest C. S. authorities, every person reported or known to him to be a deserter either from the State or C. S. Army, and also all persons from the interior counties who are avoiding conscription or draft service.

SEC. VIII. That the pay of officers and privates while engaged in actual service, as provided in the sixth section of this act, shall be as follows, to wit: Captains, $3 per day; lieutenants, $2.75 per day; sergeants, $2.50 per day; corporals, $2.25 per day; and privates, $2 per day; and no other pay or allowances shall be made to officers or privates than the per diem as above provided.

SEC. IX. That any officer or private willfully failing or refusing to perform his duty, or guilty of any other offense, shall be reported by one of the commissioned officers of his company to the district officer, whose duty it shall be to order the sitting of a court-martial, to consist of not less than three nor more than five commissioned officers, who shall proceed to hear the evidence, and shall acquit or convict as the merits of the case may demand; and in case of conviction the court may assess such punishment as is prescribed by the rules, regulations, and articles of war for the Army of the Confederate States: Provided, If any person convicted of a minor offense be of conscript age he may, at the discretion of the court, be delivered to the nearest officer of the Confederate States for service in the Army of the Confederate States.

SEC. X. That it shall be the duty of the governor to appoint such person or persons as he may choose to draw from the proper authorities of the State the fund appropriated for the pay of the men organized under this act, such person or persons so appointed to give bond or security for the faithful performance of the duties required of them; the payments to be made to the men as often as once in every four months.

SEC. XI. That it shall be the duty of the adjutant-general to furnish the companies organized under this act with necessary amount of ammunition, upon proper requisitions made by the commanders of the several districts.

SEC. XII. That the governor shall, upon the completion of the foregoing organization, turn over the frontier regiment with all the equipments to the C. S. service, provided the Confederate commander will account to the State for all property so turned over at its proper value; otherwise the governor shall make such disposition of said property as shall best subserve the interest of the State. Any law conflicting with this provision be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. XIII. That the governor shall cause to be made such other regulations for the government and control of the organizations herein provided for as he may deem necessary, to the end that the force so provided shall be made as effectual as possible to defend the frontier, and should Confederate troops be kept on the frontier, and in the event that the enemy should invade any portion of the State near the frontier, the governor shall have the power to order the commanders of such districts as may be contiguous to the scene of danger to take the whole or part of their respective forces, but in no event are such forces to be kept away from their own proper field of operations for a longer time than one month, unless such forces are used against an Indian enemy.

Sec. XIV. That this act take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Approved, December 15, 1863.

H. P. PRATT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

JOINT RESOLUTION.

Be it resolved by the legislature of the State of Texas, That the governor be, and he is hereby, required to discharge from service in the frontier organization all persons now embraced in said organization who were not bona fide citizens of the frontier on the 1st day of July, 1863.

Approved, November 15, 1864.

STATE OF TEXAS, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert J. Townes, secretary of state of the State of Texas, do certify the above to be a true and correct copy of the original now on file in my department.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto signed my name and caused the seal of my department to be affixed at Austin this 22d day of November, A.D. 1864.

R. J. TOWNES,
Secretary of State.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 40.

III. Conscripts in that portion of the State of Texas defined in Special Orders, No. 10, current series, from this office, who have been enrolled are allowed to form temporary organizations for the defense of the Texas frontier. The commandant of conscripts for Texas will cause them to be organized into companies in the Confederate service, and will permit them to remain at home whilst their presence is necessary for the protection of the frontier. He will require the muster-rolls of said companies to be returned to him, and will forward them to these headquarters. Whilst in service on the frontier the companies will receive neither pay nor allowances as soldiers.

By command of Brigadier-General Greer:

W. STEDMAN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

AUSTIN, TEX., OCTOBER 19, 1864.
through you that of the legislature of Texas, to the subject of frontier protection in connection with the enrollment acts of the Confederate Congress. It is highly important that there should be a distinct understanding between the State and the Confederate authorities on this subject. By the enrollment acts above referred to all male residents of Texas, between certain ages specified, are declared liable to military duty in the Army of the Confederate States. Certain classes of persons named in another act, for reasons of public policy, are exempted from service. There is, however, no exemption of any one by reason of his geographical locality. Those on the exposed coasts of Texas, upon its turbulent Mexican frontier, together with those on the Indian frontier, and in the interior of the State are alike called upon for military service. The law was intended to operate alike on all persons in the State liable under its terms to military duty. A system has been adopted by the State for the protection of the frontier that precludes the possibility of enforcing the conscript act without producing a disagreeable conflict between the State and Confederate authorities. By this system the State retains, at a great and unnecessary expense to her, in the service, as the commanding general is informed, over 3,000 men liable to service in the Confederate Army. These men should at once be transferred to the Confederate service. The State by holding them practically sets at naught the enrollment acts of Congress and (without intending such consequences) invites deserters and others anxious to evade their duty to their country to repair to these favored counties, and thus the number of persons who are screened from Confederate service are daily increased until now it would probably not fall short of 4,000 men. These men surely cannot all be needed for frontier protection. One-fourth of the number, it would seem, would be ample, and if so the remaining three-fourths are an enormous and unnecessary drain upon the resources of your State. Besides, it is the duty of the Confederate Government, and not of the State of Texas, to protect the Indian frontier, and the commanding general directs me to say that after these conscripts have been enrolled and turned over to the Confederate States he will at once order the old frontier regiment back, or if other troops are preferred, then a like number of other mounted troops will be ordered there to guard the frontier and in addition the Reserve Corps within the counties named will be at once organized and will act as a support to the mounted regiment that may be doing duty on the frontier. By this means the dissatisfaction in other parts of the State at the unequal operations of the conscript law will be allayed. A large force, more than sufficient for the purpose, will be left for the protection of the frontier; an expenditure of over $3,000,000 annually will be saved to the State, and an effective force of not less than 3,000 men added to our army in the field. Under the circumstances the commanding general indulges the sanguine hope that Texas, prompted alike by prudent self-interest and patriotism, will accede to his wishes and thus rid herself of an enormous debt, and at the same time swell the depleted ranks of our army.

I have the honor to be, governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. S. WEST,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

Austin, November 23, 1864.

Maj. C. S. West:

Sir: Your note, dated Austin, November 18, 1864, has been received, and in reply I have to say that the communications referred to as addressed by yourself to me, at the instance of General Smith, were placed before the legislature, as you requested, together with a special message from me on the subjects embraced in the communications.

The joint resolutions furnished you was the only action taken upon the subject of the frontier organization.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. MURRAH.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Shreveport, La., February 10, 1865.

His Excellency P. Murrah,
Governor of Texas:

Governor: The general commanding directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your various communications with regard to the frontier organization and to state to you that in accordance with the statements made to you by Maj. C. S. West in November last the whole matter has been referred to the President for final action. Your communication of November 29, complaining of a breach of this understanding as to the frontier troops, was evidently written by you under a misapprehension of the facts. No such order as you complain of has ever been issued from department headquarters, nor was any such order issued by Brigadier-General Greer. Colonel Martin, misconceiving the effect of an order from Brigadier-General Greer as to the disbanding of certain local companies, issued the order of which you complained. So soon as it came to the knowledge of the general commanding it was promptly revoked, before the receipt of your communication on the subject. A copy of his letter to Brigadier-General Greer was forwarded to you at once for your information by Colonel Bryan. Another is herewith inclosed. You need not fear a breach of this agreement on the part of the department commander. He will await the pleasure of the President. He has, however, urged upon him the impropriety of retaining on the Texas frontier so large a body of men liable to conscription when their services are so much needed elsewhere.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. S. WEST,

Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

Austin, November 23, 1864.

General E. Kirby Smith:

Sir: Your letter of October 21 in relation to the frontier organization has been received. Major West, of your staff, will inform you of the action of the legislature upon the subject. Your views on that subject were placed before that body, but they refused to interfere with the existing laws of the State on that subject. The organization stands, therefore, as before and under the same authority. I hope this will lead to no conflict between the State and Confederate authorities. Allow me to suggest to you, as a matter of policy, that this organization should not be interfered with by the Confederate military authorities until the future action of Congress upon the subject shall be known, as the Senators in Congress from this State have promised to have this subject definitely settled during the present session.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

P. MURRAH.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., December 17, 1864.

Brig. Gen. E. GREER,
Chief of Bureau of Conscription:

GENERAL: I inclose you two letters on the subject of the frontier organization, which I wish you would return with your remarks. Also send me the digest of the orders, instructions, and State laws on the subject. You will immediately countermand any orders given for the enrollment and conscription of the men in the frontier organization. The order was not made with my knowledge or sanction, and to the governor has the appearance of a want of candor and good faith on my part.

I am, general, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 10, 1865.

General FLORENTINO LOPEZ,
Commander in Chief:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of November 5, 1864. It afforded me great gratification to learn that our coterminous frontier on the Rio Grande was to be commanded by so gallant and enlightened a soldier as yourself. Permit me in the sincerest manner to assure you that the kind and liberal sentiments which you have been pleased to express in favor of our struggling nation are in the highest degree gratifying to the authorities of our Government, and I have had the honor of forwarding to His Excellency the President your communication to myself, knowing how earnestly he desires to cultivate the most agreeable and friendly relations with the Imperial Government of Mexico, and how fully he, as the supreme head of our Confederation, reciprocates the sentiments you have so kindly expressed. I have not the power, under our laws, of constituting Maj. P. Ducayet an agent to act fully in the capacity which you indicate, but I have performed every act in my power to secure his selection by placing his name before His Excellency the President with the strongest recommendations in his behalf. It is due to you that I should here offer to you my excuses for the apparent neglect with which your kind communication has been treated until this time. This neglect, however, existed only in appearance; it had no foundation in reality whatever. Your letter, owing to the great distance, the many water-courses, and the great uncertainty of the routes of travel between this point and the city of Monterey, did not reach me until many weeks after you had penned it, and in fact until near the close of the past year, at a period when my whole time was filled with the military preparations to meet our vindictive enemy, who seems to threaten this department with another invasion. This, I trust, will explain to you in the most satisfactory manner the cause of my long delay in replying to your letter. Permit me, general, in conclusion, to assure you that every effort will be made on my part and on the part of all my subordinate officers to reciprocate most fully the many kindnesses and attentions uniformly extended to you both by the civil and military functionaries of our Government, and, if possible, by our acts to cause the friendly relations now existing to become still more cordial and to increase in strength every day.

I have the honor to remain, general, with sentiments of the highest esteem, your most obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 10, 1865.

Señor J. M. Agüilar,
Superior Political Prefect, Monterey, Mexico:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your gratifying communication of November 5, 1864. Let me assure you that your warm expressions of sympathy in behalf of our noble cause were received by me with the most heartfelt pleasure. I have also caused your letter to be laid before His Excellency the President, to whom such manifestations of friendly interest by distinguished officers of foreign Governments cannot be but agreeable. Your communication would have been answered at an earlier day, but it was many weeks after it was written before it was received by me, and the engrossing nature of my military occupations have not always allowed me the time that I might desire to devote to those things which would be agreeable to me. To this and to no other cause attribute my silence, and accept my apologies. Your exceedingly complimentary allusion to the Hon. John A. Quintermo, the agent of our Government at Monterey, is gratifying in the extreme, and it is to be hoped that he will continue in the future as he has in the past so to conduct himself as to secure the friendship and esteem of those officers of the Imperial Government with whom he has been officially connected, and also to possess in the fullest degree the confidence of his own Government. I have not the power to fully clothe Maj. F. Ducayet with the agency for which you so warmly recommend him, but I have used every exertion to secure the position for him, and trust soon to be successful.

With the hope that the friendly relations now existing between our Government and that of the Empire may grow still stronger, and with my kindest wishes for your own health and prosperity, I remain, with sentiments of the highest respect, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Shreveport, La., February 11, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I have the honor to call your attention to the inclosed communication from Maj. W. H. Haynes, acting chief quartermaster for this department. The service here is virtually without funds. Under the act of Congress approved February 16, 1864, published in General Orders, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, No. 30, series of 1864, every article impressed must be paid for at the time of impressment. The credit of the Government is now so low, owing to its failure to pay its heavy indebtedness represented by certified accounts, that farmers and others absolutely refuse to sell to it. They already hold its unpaid certified accounts for large amounts and naturally do not wish to credit it any longer. The tax collector is at their door threatening summary proceedings against their property unless they pay their taxes, and at the same time they hold the certificates of indebtedness of the Government for double and treble the amount of taxes. These things are of daily occurrence, and spread discontent and dissatisfaction widely among our producers at home. The legislatures of the States have passed stringent laws against illegal impressments; the impressing officers have no money, and can only proceed in violation of law. If they attempt this they will be resisted by force and prosecuted in the courts of the country. All these evils arise from the want of funds. This want is pressing and urgent in the extreme, and the great necessities of the department, the importance of the subject as connected with the efficiency of the Army, render it necessary that I should again thus strongly and truthfully present this matter, even at the hazard of being considered importunate. Estimates of indebtedness have been sent forward. The Hon. P. W. Gray, the C. S. Treasury agent for this department, has been appealed to in vain. This department is practically without funds and without the means of procuring them. I send this by the hands of Lieut. D. H. Cooper, jr., aide-de-camp, in the hope that the suggestions in the inclosed letter of Major Haynes may be adopted, and the sum of at least $30,000,000 or $40,000,000 be sent for the quartermaster's department at once. The pay department is in the same deplorable condition. Many troops in the field have not been paid a dollar in sixteen months; some not a dollar in nearly two years. The entire indebtedness of the pay department for bounty, clothing, money, and pay proper is over $50,000,000. Half that sum in pay funds would greatly relieve the soldiers and improve their efficiency. I request that you will bring this matter to the consideration of the President.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

[Inclosure.]

OFFICE CHIEF QUARTERMASTER TRANS. MISS. DEPT.,
Shreveport, La., February 8, 1865.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Boggs,
Chief of Staff:

GENERAL: I beg leave to call the attention of the general commanding to the fact that this department is without sufficient funds to meet its current expenses, without which much inconvenience and annoyance must necessarily arise, and which will culminate in an almost total suspension of its operations, unless the difficulties can be speedily overcome. The recent law of Congress, as published in General Orders, No. 30, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, March 7, 1864, places it beyond the power of the officers of this department to purchase even by impressment, lately our main reliance of securing necessary supplies of quartermaster's stores in the department, owing to the impracticability of procuring them by contract, or by purchase in the open market with certificates of indebtedness or certified accounts. Something, then, should be done to obviate these troubles, and I suggest to the general commanding, if it is impracticable for the Hon. P. W. Gray, agent of the Treasury, Trans-Mississippi Department, to meet demands upon him, the expediency of sending an officer of this department direct to Richmond with estimates for this office, now on file in the adjutant-general's office; and to avoid delay it is recommended that the officer be instructed to communicate with the Department at Richmond from the first telegraph or signal station, stating our necessities, and if possible procure orders on the nearest depository for funds, to be returned here without delay in the hands of a special messenger. I will also allude to the fact that the certificates of indebtedness placed at the disposal of this office were of a character that almost precludes their use, 80 per cent. being in the large sums of $1,000 each. This should be corrected, if it is expected at the Department that any beneficial result is to accrue from the use of such funds. It is with great difficulty these certificates are paid out at all, the people demanding a currency receivable for taxes, though if small bills, say of the denomination of hundreds, were furnished, it would give more satisfaction, and might be appropriated to a good advantage. As matters now stand, a planter, in accepting these certificates of so large a denomination, does it under a conviction that the Government is doing him a great injustice, and feels aggrieved that he is not paid in a different character of funds. In my judgment, it is of vital interest to the department commander that he take steps to insure, if it be practicable, the arrival in his department of the best class of currency. The outstanding debts of this branch of the service alone will, in my opinion, reach the enormous sum of $20,000,000, a large proportion of which is due since the organization of the district or department. Scarcely a farmer is to be found on our thoroughfares who has not one of these "promises to pay," and under a misapprehension of facts charges, very naturally, to inefficiency on the part of officers of this department these troubles, and when one of them attempts a purchase is coolly told to pay up old scores, when certified accounts will again be received. We cannot use certified accounts; cannot use the large size certificates of indebtedness; cannot impress; have no currency; the army is in want; it cannot be supplied, and the general commanding has, in a few words, our condition. Strong, energetic, immediate, and continuous action is required on this subject until the remedies are obtained. Not less than $1,000,000 monthly will suffice for current expenditures.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
W. H. HAYNES,
Major and Acting Chief Quartermaster.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 11, 1865.

Hon. P. W. GRAY,
C. S. Treasury Agent:

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you the within communication from Major Haynes, acting chief quartermaster for this department.* This truthful statement of the deplorable condition of that department for want of funds I deem it my duty to call to your especial attention. The failure of the Treasury Department to furnish the funds necessary to pay the debts of the Government has, in a great measure, destroyed its credit. Practically, nothing can now be bought in this department on the promise of the Government to pay. The Government has failed to fulfill its promises for want of funds. The obtaining of supplies by purchase and voluntary sale to the Government is virtually at an end. Impressment, then, is the only means left. Under the act of Congress of 16th of February, 1864, articles must be paid for at the time of their impressment. This cannot be done without money. The want of funds thus effectually cuts off the Government from obtaining supplies in any mode known to the law. The necessities of the service are great. It is my duty to call attention plainly to these matters. I trust if you have not the means of furnishing funds to fill the different requisitions made upon you by

* See Haynes to Boggs, next, ante.
legal modes, you will at least resort to some temporary expedient for the purpose of restoring the lost credit of the Government, in order that supplies may be obtained from some source. Cannot a temporary loan be negotiated, or cannot you, by a timely and patriotic appeal to the different executives, use the State credit until you can obtain funds? Cannot the certificates of indebtedness be made available to the citizens in payment of their taxes for the present at least? In short, can there not be some means resorted to by which money can be obtained for the use of the Government? I urge these things upon you as agent of the Treasury Department, impelled by a keen sense of the immense responsibility resting on both of us in this matter, and with the hope that you will communicate, at the earliest moment, with the Treasury Department, and either receive from them sufficient funds to serve our purpose for the next twelve months or else obtain authority to issue notes here in such denominations and such quantities as the exigencies of the service render imperatively necessary.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Shreveport, February 11, 1865.

Hon. L. T. WIGFALL,
C. S. Senator, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I have the honor to inclose to you a copy of two letters of mine, on the want of funds in this department, the one to Mr. Seddon, the other to the Hon. P. W. Gray.* These statements of the embarrassments of this department arising from the want of funds are there truthfully made. The evils are not exaggerated; they are real, existing, and imminent. The estimates of indebtedness have been forwarded. I have addressed you on these subjects before; their importance requires me again to urge you, if possible, to see the Secretary of War and also the Secretary of the Treasury, and induce the latter to send to the Hon. P. W. Gray at least $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 at once. This want of funds is also sensibly felt by the people at large. The tax collector is importunate and demands, under threats of summary proceedings, their taxes. They have not the money to pay them, whilst they hold the certified accounts of the Government which, if paid, would enable them to meet this demand. From this springs discontent and dissatisfaction among the people. Please consult with the other representatives from this section of the Confederacy and enlist them all, if possible, in a common effort to secure funds at once for this department. It is vitally important that we should have them. If there is no bonded officer of this department there to receive them, they can be sent at once by some proper bonded officer. I have written to your colleague on this subject.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HOUSTON, February 12, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. E. Slaughter,
Commanding Western Sub-District:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 30th ultimo, and to reply that in view of the threatening aspect of affairs on the Rio Grande, that for the present and until further orders you can retain all your forces on the Rio Grande. I hope with them you will be able to hold Brownsville. A well-known merchant of New Orleans, who was in Havana about the 4th of this month, sent word by the Wren, which has just arrived, that Jack Hamilton was about to sail from the mouth of the Rio Grande with three regiments, with which, added to the force now at Brazos Santiago, it is his purpose to push up the river to Brownsville and Rio Grande City, in order to cut off the cotton trade. Without this information it would seem not impossible that something of the kind is in contemplation, since on any other supposition it would seem unnecessary to keep the troops on Brazos Island there any longer. Together with this raid upon Brownsville, it is highly probable that the attack, long threatened, upon Galveston will be made simultaneously with the advance upon Brownsville. I inclose you a letter to Mr. Perkins, requesting him to send Lieutenant Lane in pursuit of the absconding depositary, Palmer. Use every effort to have this man recaptured and brought back. Lieutenant Lane is represented to be a man of persevering determination and incorruptible honesty. I fear, however, if Palmer has not already been apprehended he has embarked for Europe or Havana; if not, you can doubtless, under your late conversation with the Imperial authorities, procure from General Mejia an order for Palmer's extradition.

J. G. WALKER,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, Hdqrs. Trans-Mississippi Department,
No. 10, Shreveport, La., February 13, 1865.

I. The following order is published for the information of the department:

The following will supersede General Orders, No. 76, present series, which are hereby revoked:

I. All details heretofore granted under authority of the War Department to persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years are hereby revoked, and all such detailed men, together with those within the said ages, who hold furloughs or temporary exemptions by reason of pending applications for detail will be promptly assembled at the camps of instruction and appropriately assigned among the armies for service; except that men detailed and now actually employed in the service of the Government as artisans, mechanics, or persons of scientific skill (and those detailed and now engaged in the manufacture, collection, and forwarding of indispensable supplies for the Army and Navy) will be continued in their present employments until their respective details are revised.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

II. In accordance with the above order, all details of men who do not hold certificates of medical boards showing unfitness for service in the field are revoked, with the following exceptions: Men detailed from department headquarters on the ground of justice, equity, and necessity, where that ground still exists and is stated in the order of detail; clerks who are experts and whose services are indispensably necessary, not exceeding one for each officer, except in the bureaus at Marshall, Tex., and those in the service of the Post-Office, Treasury, and Adjutant-General's Departments; men detailed in field service, in which class is embraced those constantly engaged in collecting cattle, horses, and mules, and in hauling indispensable supplies from one post to another; artisans, mechanics, and persons of scientific skill in the service of the Government; contractors with the Government whose personal services are certified by the chief of the department with whom they have contracted to be indispensable to the execution of their contracts and whose individual attention is given thereto.

III. Officers are not permitted to relieve men regularly detailed to them. When they wish details revoked application must be regularly made, stating the reasons.

IV. Men whose details are revoked for misconduct or neglect of duty will not be again subject to detail during the remainder of their term of service.

V. No detailed man will be furloughed unless he has a certificate of a medical board or is recommended by the officer with whom he is serving for extraordinary skill and attention to duty.

VI. Able-bodied agriculturists who are detailed from department headquarters, and whose details are hereby revoked, will be allowed until the 1st of May, 1865, to renew their applications. If they are not redetailed by that date enrolling officers will send them to their commands without delay.

VII. Men detailed as mechanics, artisans, or persons of skill, other than those in the service of the Government, will be allowed until the 1st of May, 1865, to have their details renewed. If not renewed by that time they will be sent to their commands.

VIII. Leaves of absence and furloughs granted by Brig. Gen. H. T. Hays, Provisional Army, C. S., for thirty days, will be respected.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches, February 14, 1865.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Boggs,
Chief of Staff, Shreveport, La.:

General: Should it not be deemed proper by the War Department to assent to my recommendation of the promotion and assignment to the Louisiana division of my corps of Brig. Gen. Harry T. Hays or Saint John B. Liddell, I respectfully request, if the assignment can be appropriately made, that Maj. Gen. Carter L. Stevenson be ordered to report to me to command the Louisiana division formerly commanded by Major-General Polignac.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. B. BUCKNER,
Lieutenant-General, Commanding.
Respectfully forwarded and recommended.

My return and communication to the War Department exhibit the necessity for assigning competent division commanders to duty with the troops in this department. Major-General Stevenson has been previously applied for by me.

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 24, 1865.

Brig. Gen. D. H. COOPER,
Commanding, &c.:

GENERAL: I am directed by the general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 10th instant, and to say that the proposed expedition of General Shelby and yourself cannot be undertaken at the present time. Instructions have been received from the War Department assigning you to duty in command of the District of the Indian Territory. He will act upon the order and has requested the War Department to revoke it. Your letter of June 30, 1864, was forwarded to the War Department, with the following indorsement:

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
July 31, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to General S. Cooper, Adjutant and Inspector General, Richmond.
Brig. Gen D. H. Cooper cannot perform properly the duties of a general officer and superintendent of Indian affairs.

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

Pickler's battalion will be retained in the Indian Territory, and Wells' regiment will march with Bee's brigade. He regrets there are no funds in the department for any purpose, and would be glad to order what is necessary to meet the indebtedness if there were any from which to order. The supply of arms in this department is not sufficient to meet its wants, and their distribution must depend upon the most pressing wants of the service.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

Executive Office,
Shreveport, La., February 15, 1865.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President:

MY DEAR SIR: At the request of many citizens of Louisiana I write you this. It is their ardent desire that Brig. Gen. Harry T. Hays should be promoted and assigned to duty in this department. There is at present a division of Louisiana troops in this State without a major-general commanding. I have therefore the honor to join with the good people of my State in urging upon you their request. The officers and men of the division to which we wish him assigned are especially anxious to have him as their commander. As no officer in the Confederacy has distinguished himself more on the battle-field or deserved better of his country, this promotion would meet the cordial approbation of every Louisianian.

Very truly, your friend and obedient servant,

HENRY W. ALLEN,
Governor of Louisiana.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 15, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,
Natchitoches, La.:

GENERAL: Governor Allen goes to your headquarters for the purpose of arranging definitely with you a plan of operations by which he can export cotton for the State of Louisiana. Whilst the principle is clear that the State cannot claim the privilege of exporting cotton through our lines, I will confirm any arrangement made by you with Governor Allen, reserving the privilege of canceling all contracts or agreements and closing our lines to the exit of all goods whatsoever at any time I find it necessary to do so. I inclose you a copy of my letter to Judge Gray, in which I asked for his co-operation and support in the utilization of cotton near your lines. I have as yet received no answer, and I understand that Judge Gray will be violently opposed to any plan permitting cotton to pass our lines, and he claims that his failure to provide supplies under the President's regulations will be consequent upon the decline in the value of cotton arising from the opening of the trade through our lines. I find that strong opposition is being made by others, and if Judge Gray opposes me I shall close the lines entirely to the egress of cotton. I informed Major Adams, who showed me his agreement made with Major Haynes, that he must take no steps in carrying it into effect until I had heard from Judge Gray. I would recommend that you approve no other agreement of a similar nature, until the matter is definitely settled, as they are all liable to revocation at any moment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 30. HDQRS. DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS, Lewisville, February 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. M. M. Parsons, commanding Camden and its defenses, will in addition to his present duties assume command of the District of Arkansas during the temporary absence of Major-General Magruder.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. Bankhead Magruder:

W. A. ALSTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT, Shreveport, February 16, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: I am directed by the general commanding to inclose here-with the application of Colonel Yager to take his regiment to the Cis-
Mississippi Department, and to say that upon a similar application from officers of General Wharton's command he returned the following answer:

The department commander is anxious to cross troops to the east side of the Mississippi River. He knows and has experienced the difficulties to be encountered in effecting it. He believes that it is now impracticable, but if accomplished it can only be done by the individual consent and co-operation of the men comprising the command. If any regiment, brigade, or division can be found in which a majority of the men are willing to cross the Mississippi and will give their individual efforts to make the attempt successful, General Wharton is authorized to transfer officers and men, filling up the commands that desire to go from the regiments which are to remain, and transferring those who do not desire to go to the regiments which remain behind.

He directs me to say that these are his views upon the subject, and that you are authorized to act in accordance therewith.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 10, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you will order Colonel Likens with his regiment to report to Major-General Wharton at Hempstead, Tex. He is determined to dismount a large portion of the cavalry, and to prevent complaints has selected regiments from each command and has taken those most recently organized. Likens' is a new regiment and will be dismounted. Bagby's old regiment, the Seventh Texas, will be ordered to report to you in place of Likens'. He desires to know to what point you wish the Seventh Texas ordered, and he will send telegraphic instructions for it to move at once. As an additional reason for ordering the Seventh Texas to you, he desires me to say that as Bagby's appointment has not as yet been confirmed, his own regiment should constitute a portion of his command. He has also directed that the regiment of Col. Peter Hardeman be dismounted, and desires that you order it to report to Major-General Wharton, at Hempstead, unless it is now in the vicinity of Crockett, Tex., in which case he will send telegraphic instructions from here. In reply to your letter concerning the disposition of King's brigade, he desires me to say that he had determined to order King's old regiment (now in Forney's division) to Hempstead for the same reason as mentioned in the case of the Seventh Texas, in order that it might constitute a portion of his command; King's regiment will be replaced by Chisum's regiment, which he intends to dismount, and is now en route for this place; that he desires to break up the present brigade commanded by General King and distribute the regiments in the third brigade formed by dismounting the cavalry, of which General King will command one and General Harrison the other, the old regiments of each being placed in their respective brigades. He desires me also to say that you can move Forney's division to Natchitoches whenever you wish to and he will replace it here by Churchill's.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.
HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 16, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. G. Walker,
Commanding, &c., Houston:

Your dispatch concerning expedition for Brownsville is received. Information from New Orleans states that 5,000 men have sailed for Brazos and forty-odd thousand troops are concentrated at New Orleans and additional troops are still passing down Mississippi River. All boats on Mississippi are being impressed and concentrated. It will therefore be impossible to re-enforce the command at Brownsville. If not able to repulse enemy, the force at Brownsville should fall back up the river.

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,

No. 35.

III. Major Blocher with his artillery battalion will move at once to Collinsburg, or the vicinity of that place, where he will encamp and remain till further orders, reporting direct to these headquarters.

IV. Information having been received from the chief of artillery Trans-Mississippi Department, that funds for the purchase of fodder for the artillery horses of this division could be obtained at Shreveport, Major Blocher, commanding artillery battalion, will at once send his quartermaster to that place to receive such funds as will be turned over to him for the object above specified.

By command of Major-General Churchill:

C. E. KIDDER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,

No. 43.

VII. Paragraph XI, Special Orders, No. 8, current series, from these headquarters, is revoked. Lieutenant-Colonel Sims with his battalion of mounted infantry will proceed to Bonham, Tex., and report to Brig. Gen. H. E. McCulloch.

VIII. Paragraph VI, Special Orders, No. 37, current series, from these headquarters, is revoked. Colonel Martin will proceed forthwith with his regiment to Hempstead, Tex., and report to Major-General Wharton.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

P. B. LEEDS,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 17, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches, La.:

GENERAL: A portion of the cavalry which are to be dismounted having reached Marshall, Tex., the general commanding has directed them to be halted there, and directs me to say that he desires you to order Brigadier-General King with any one regiment of his brigade, except the Fifteenth Texas Infantry, forthwith to this place. He intends to send General King with the regiment selected and the Eighteenth Texas Infantry from Forney's division to Marshall to form a brigade with the dismounted regiments, which brigade he will attach to General Forney's division. The remaining regiments of King's brigade, under command of the senior officer present, will be sent forward to Hempstead. As the dismounting of the cavalry will not take place until their arrival, the general commanding directs that they may be sent as soon as possible.

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. E. HOGGS, Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT, Shreveport, La., February 17, 1863.

Maj. Gen. J. A. WHARTON, Commanding Cavalry Corps, Nacogdoches:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you will proceed to Hempstead, Tex., with your whole command. After assembling at that point you are directed to dismount nine regiments, viz, Baylor's, Chisum's, Martin's, Terry's, Col. Peter Hardeman's, Wells', the Twenty-ninth (De Morse's), Twenty-third (Gould's), Thirty-fifth (Likens'). Chisum's regiment will be dismounted at this place and assigned to Forney's division in place of the Eighteenth Texas Infantry, which will be ordered to one of the brigades formed of the dismounted regiments. Wells' and De Morse's regiments will be dismounted at Marshall, Tex., where they now are. One regiment of the brigade at present under the command of Brigadier-General King will be ordered to Marshall, which, with the Eighteenth Texas Infantry and the regiments dismounted at that point, will constitute a brigade, to be commanded by Brigadier-General King. The remaining regiments of King's present brigade will be ordered to Hempstead, Tex., to be distributed among the brigade formed by the regiments dismounted there; the Fifteenth Texas Infantry to be assigned to Brigadier-General Harrison's brigade. Brigadier-General Major will command the other brigade formed of the dismounted regiments and King's present brigade. Major-General Maxey will be assigned to the command of the division. The remaining cavalry regiments will be formed into a corps of two divisions, to be commanded by yourself. The divisions will be constituted as follows:

First Texas Cavalry Division, Brigadier-General Bee commanding—First Brigade (Brigadier-General Debray commanding): Twenty-sixth Texas Cavalry (Debray's regiment), Thirty-second Texas Cavalry (Woods' regiment), Brown's regiment, Texas cavalry. Second Brigade (Brigadier-General Lane commanding): Lane's regiment, Madison's regiment, Fifth Texas Cavalry (Colonel McNeill's regiment).

Second Texas Cavalry Division, Brigadier-General Steele commanding—Third Brigade (Brigadier-General Steele commanding): Twelfth Texas Cavalry (Colonel Parsons), Twenty-first Texas Cavalry (Lieutenant-Colonel Giddings), Thirty-third Texas Cavalry (Colonel Duff), Waller's regiment, Texas cavalry. Fifth Brigade (Brigadier-General Hardeman commanding): Fourth Texas Cavalry (Colonel Hardeman), Thirtieth Texas Cavalry (Colonel Gurley), Nineteenth Texas Cavalry (Colonel Watson), Morgan’s Texas cavalry.

Should causes arise which would make it desirable to do so, you are authorized to make changes in regiments to be dismounted and consequent changes in the organizations, reporting these changes to these headquarters, that the final organizations may be determined upon and announced. Under no circumstances will the dismounting of the nine regiments finally selected by you be delayed. The infantry division formed will be ordered to report forthwith to Major-General Walker, and you will, upon the completion of the organization of your corps, report by letter or telegraph to these headquarters for instructions.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,

Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

RICHMOND, VA., February 18, 1865.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General, Confederate States of America:

GENERAL: The existing crisis seems to invite the expression of our opinion touching the combination of those elements of strength which remain in a measure undeveloped in our Trans-Mississippi domains. I have therefore the honor to propose: First. That prompt and energetic measures be taken to bring into the field such warriors as the civilized and semi-barbarous Indian nations, viz, the Cherokees, Creeks, Chickasaws, Chickasaws, and Seminoles, may be still enabled to furnish us the complements of their effective strength, thus adding a probable contingent of between 15,000 and 20,000 warriors to our armies. Second. That measures be promptly taken to employ the Comanche Nation and other cognate tribes, viz, the Sioux, Blackfeet, Pawnees, &c., now hostile to the Federal power, as an appropriate and energetic contingent, numbering probably some 20,000 warriors, who, when stimulated by adroit emissaries, would carry terror throughout the western border as far as the Canadian frontier. Third. That measures be promptly taken to induce the Mormons (ever strong adherents to States’ rights doctrines) to initiate predatory warfare along the Pacific border, stimulating the trans-mountain Indians to active co-operation, thus neutralizing the military resources of those distant States known to be lukewarm in the present aggressive warfare, and thereby gaining time, which is to us an important element of defense. Fourth. That encouragement be given by prompt and efficient diplomacy to emigration from the neighboring Mexican States for enrollment as an active contingent for field service. This should embrace the valley of the Rio Grande, including New Mexico. The present condition of Mexico favors this important object, enabling us, probably, to draw largely from those disaffected political elements hostile to the present dominant power, especially if we pursue some well-considered and systematic policy on the question of the Monroe doctrine. Fifth. That measures be immediately taken to organize and take into the field one-fifth of the effective slave population of that department, changing the tenure of their service from slavery to peonage, thus protecting the slave and industrial interests and meeting the existing military necessities of the country.

88 R E—VOL XLVIII, PT 1
The troublesome question of eventualities in the minds of many is readily met by the impending necessity of retaining a mercenary array in time of peace, which would absorb the remnants of the servile element whenever peace shall dawn upon the nation. Thus may we combine the reserve corps of those States, the slave force, the Indian force (semi-civilized and savage), the Mexicans and Mormons, in strength sufficient to retain complete military possession of that department, enabling General Smith's army to move promptly into Tennessee, and thus co-operate with the armies of the east to meet and roll back the bloody tide of fanaticism now threatening to engulf us. With such armies wielded under the inspiration of a magnanimous will, there is much reason to believe that the impending abolition crusade may be stayed, or else, indeed, that we may define and mark our boundaries of eternal hatred as high as heaven and as deep as hell, as a memorial in the annals of mankind of a grand effort by a proud and gallant people to defend their firesides and their civil liberties as they inherited them from their revolutionary fathers. The deep interest felt by me in the success of our arms constitutes my excuse for thus tendering observations on the military resources of that distant though important field, founded on a long period of military service along that extensive Western frontier, rendering me in some measure familiar with those elements of strength, as well as geographical outlines noticed in this memorandum.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

DANIEL RUGGLES,
Brigadier-General, Provisional Army, C. S.

[Indorsement, 1 February 23, 1865.]

As the subject-matter of this letter takes a wide range and involves questions of state, I am compelled to submit it for the consideration of the Secretary of War.

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 13. } Shreveport, La., February 20, 1865.

1. The establishments for the manufacture of clothing, camp and garrison equipage, are constituted depots, and are placed in charge of the following officers: Houston, Tex., Capt. E. W. Taylor, assistant quartermaster; Huntsville, Tex., Maj. W. D. Beard, quartermaster; Mound Prairie, Tex., Maj. J. J. Busby, quartermaster; Gilmer, Tex., Capt. A. U. Wright, assistant quartermaster; Shreveport, La., Capt. J. W. Bossert, assistant quartermaster. These officers will report to and receive their instructions from Maj. W. H. Haynes, Chief of Clothing Bureau.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS ROSS' BRIGADE CAVALRY,
Deasonville, Miss., February 20, 1865.

Lieutenant-General Smith,
Commanding Trans-Mississippi Department:

GENERAL: Authority has been obtained to furlough one-half of my command and send officers and men to Texas, to recruit and fill their depleted ranks by compelling the return of absentees and deserters from the brigade. I therefore respectfully solicit your authority for my officers to recruit their regiments and an order compelling the deserters from my command to return. I have evidence establishing the fact that Lieut. Col. O. Steele, commanding a cavalry battalion in Texas, and many other officers of similar grade, are harboring deserters from my brigade and holding them to duty with their commands. Such conduct will eventually break up the organizations of troops from the Trans-Mississippi Department, and I respectfully invite your attention to this matter, knowing that you recognize the necessity of keeping these men on this side of the Mississippi River. No power on this side can keep them faithful when they feel certain that they can go home and serve with other commands and elude punishment by taking shelter under the authority of some regimental commander near their families, where they incur no danger and endure no hardships.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. S. ROSS,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS ROSS' BRIGADE CAVALRY,
Deasonville, Miss., February 20, 1865.

Major-General Walker,
Commanding Department [District] of Texas:

General: I have been authorized to furlough one-half of my command and to send officers to the Trans-Mississippi Department on recruiting service, and to bring back absentees and deserters from the Third, Sixth, Ninth, and Twenty-seventh Texas Regiments and Willis' battalion. The opinion prevails here that deserters from the Trans-Mississippi troops serving in this department are encouraged in Texas, and that the authorities there cannot or will not apprehend and return the offenders to their proper commands. Men therefore desert with impunity and attach themselves to regiments and batteries nearer their homes, where no danger is incurred and few hardships endured. And I respectfully invite your attention to the fact that officers in your department are harboring and protecting such deserters and refuse to send them back to their proper commands. Among this number I will instance Lieut. Col. O. Steele and Colonel Gould, both of whom, I believe, command Texas regiments in your department.

The attention of the War Department has been directed to the matter by the lieutenant-general commanding this department and it is hoped the proper remedy will be applied. Something must be done to deter Trans-Mississippi troops, serving east of the Mississippi River, from deserting and going home (where they have heretofore been allowed to remain unmolested) or all such organizations will be broken up. I am confident you will feel and acknowledge the importance of giving the officers from my command all the assistance in your power to enable them to recover their men. And I respectfully solicit the exercise of your authority to compel officers who are holding my men to duty to release them and drive them back to their proper commands, and to prevent any who may hereafter desert from taking refuge at home or in your department.

I am, general, very respectfully, &c.,

L. S. ROSS,
Brigadier-General.
III. Maj. Gen. S. B. Maxey is relieved from the command of the District of the Indian Territory and will report in person at department headquarters. In relieving General Maxey from his present for more important duties, the general commanding takes occasion to express his entire satisfaction with the manner in which he has discharged the various and laborious duties of that district.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

P. B. LEEDS,

Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 21, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: I have just had an interview with Major Venable, commanding the forts at Alexandria, from which I am convinced that the guns in position there will be of but little avail against an attack of the enemy's iron-clad boats. If the works at Grand Ecore can be prepared in time, I suggest for your consideration the propriety of concentrating all our heaviest guns at that point. This will give us a strong battery to fight iron-clads, and which may have support from a land force, impossible at Alexandria. If four of the heaviest rifles are taken from the works at Alexandria, the guns that remain will be sufficient to close the river against transports, while their removal will not materially diminish the length of the siege to take the place. This suggestion is made for your consideration; if you approve it no time is to be lost in making the change. At all events I should like to have your views on the subject. If by sending forward additional teams to assist in transporting the heavy guns from Sabine town they can be gotten sooner to Grand Ecore, I recommend that it be done at once.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

[February 22, 1865.—For General Orders, No. 4, headquarters Armies of the Confederate States, promulgating instructions for promoting the efficiency of troops in action, see Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1249.]

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 22, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN A. WHARTON,
Commanding Cavalry, Nacogdoches:

GENERAL: I have directed the dismounting of nine regiments from your command. The reduction of the cavalry has become a measure of absolute necessity and will be made to fall equally upon the troops of the different States of the department. The proportion of cavalry is greatly in excess over the other arms of service. Their horses are consuming the breadstuffs of the country. Already have we been forced back in search of forage to the inland streams of Texas. If continued mounted they would soon be driven from the country without an effort on the part of the enemy. All good and true men must recognize the necessity for this reduction. The law authorizes it and every patriot will readily acquiesce. The regiments dismounted by you will be organized into a division of infantry and sent to the support of the garrison at Galveston. I could have ordered these regiments temporarily dismounted and have placed them on the Island of Galveston, but I preferred dealing with them as men, as soldiers, and as patriots, believing that a manly appeal would convince them of the justice of the measure forced upon me by necessity. I promise that the horses taken for the Government shall be paid for from the first funds received.

I am, general, very respectfully,

E. KIRBY SMITH,

General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Shreveport, February 22, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. B. MAGRUDER,

Commanding District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you order the brigade of Missouri infantry now at Washington, Ark., to Collin-sburg, La. He also directs that you will forthwith relieve the Missouri brigade now at Camden by 1,000 of your cavalry command and order that brigade to Collinburg, La. The cavalry ordered to Camden will be dismounted and their horses left in rear, where they can be foraged.
General Dockery has been directed to send 600 of the Reserve Corps to Camden as a portion of the garrison. When this command shall have reported at Camden for duty you will relieve 600 of the 1,000 cavality, which you are directed to send to relieve the Missouri brigade.
A copy of the instructions to General Dockery is herewith inclosed.*

I am, general, very respectfully,
your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,

Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Shreveport, February 22, 1865.

Brigadier-General Dockery,

Commanding Reserve Corps, District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you order 600 of the Reserve Corps to report to Major-General Magruder at Camden, Ark., for garrison duty at that place. He desires that you select this garrison with a view not to interfere with the agricultural interests of the country. They should be as well armed and equipped as possible and will serve as infantry. They should not be permitted to keep horses at Camden.

I am, general, very respectfully,
your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,

Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

* See next, post.
Maj. Gen. J. G. Walker,
Commanding District of Texas, &c., Houston:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to say that he has determined to dismount a large number of the cavalry regiments in this department, and has given the inclosed letter of instructions to Major-General Wharton, directing him to dismount nine regiments of his command. He desires that you will render General Wharton assistance, if he requires it. So soon as the dismounted division is organized the cavalry command will be ordered from Hempstead. The march of Bee's brigade having been delayed by high water, he will dismount the regiments of that brigade at Marshall and form them into a brigade to be attached to Forney's division.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

Brigadier-General Boggs,
Chief of Staff, Trans-Mississippi Department:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 20th instant at hand and contents noted. The artillery of this division is now encamped at Rocky Mount, twenty-eight miles from Shreveport, on road thence to Camden. From its present camp the artillery would be able to move to Shreveport at any time it might be needed. If, however, it be still deemed necessary for the guns, &c., to be sent to Shreveport, I will instruct Major Blocher, commanding, accordingly.

Awaiting further instructions on this subject, I am, general, very respectfully,
T. J. CHURCHILL,
Major-General.

Capt. A. H. MAY,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor, for the information of the major-general commanding, and in reply to his confidential letter, No. 385, to inclose copies of my letter under date of February 8, with reply dated 9th, my letter of February 13, and reply of 14th to and from General Mejia, commanding Imperial forces upon the Rio Grande. He will perceive from these that upon receipt of the first information I took such steps to secure the detention of Judge Palmer as were in my reach until I could gather positive information on which to base a formal demand. I inclose a copy of letter also, received last night, from Hon. J. A. Quinterro, C. S. commissioner at Monterey, which will show what steps have been taken in this matter. Lieutenant Lane and party leave to-morrow morning on the mission indicated in the letter of the major-general commanding. I secured from General Mejia an order for Judge Palmer to be taken to such point above Camargo as he (Lieutenant Lane) might indicate, where he would be turned over to the C. S. forces and taken to San Antonio. I have hopes of the success of our efforts.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAS. E. SLAUGHTER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS WESTERN SUB-DISTRICT OF TEXAS,
Brownsville, February 8, 1865.

General Tomas Mejia,
Commanding, &c., Matamoras:

GENERAL: Inclosed I have the honor to submit two official extracts from the San Antonio Herald. One an editorial, the other an extract of a letter from Judge Palmer to the editor for publication. The general supposition and impression is that Judge G. W. Palmer, who is C. S. depositary at San Antonio, has decamped with a large amount of Government property. His family reached Matamoras last night in a private stage chartered for the occasion. He is at Monterey. From remarks which his wife and family have uttered, it is supposed that they intend proceeding to the City of Mexico. I have not as yet succeeded in procuring sufficient proof of his guilt to warrant me in demanding his return. But I respectfully request that you issue such orders to the commanding officer at Monterey as will secure his detention until the necessary proof of his guilt can be obtained and the demand be made. It is evident, as you will see by the extract inclosed, that he can be no friend to your Government, or he would not have published in his paper information, gleaned by him from General Lopez in private conversation, relative to the feeling of the Imperial Government and its officers for our Government.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES E. SLAUGHTER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

MATAMORAS, February 9, 1865.

General J. E. Slaughter,
Commanding Sub-District of Texas, Brownsville:

GENERAL: I have the honor of acknowledging the receipt of the note, No. 239, dated yesterday, which contained two extracts from the San Antonio Herald regarding Judge Palmer, who is justly suspected of having fled from the Confederate States with considerable funds. By a special mail, which I send to Monterey to-day, I have written to General Lopez to have great vigilance exercised over this said Palmer until you can collect with certainty the data that may prove his guilt. Still, in case he should succeed in getting to Mexico, it would not be difficult to effect his capture in San Luis Potosi, or in Queretaro. Accept, general, the assurances of my great appreciation and profound esteem,

TOMAS MEJIA,
General, Commanding Nuevo Leon, Coahuila, and Tampos.
General Tomas Mejia,
Commanding, &c., Matamoras:

General: I have the honor to inform you that I have this day received the accompanying writ for arrest of Judge G. W. Palmer from the Hon. Thomas J. Devine, judge C. S. district court, Western District of Texas, issued to the C. S. marshal, and in accordance with the arrangement entered into between us for the “rendition of criminals and refugees from justice,” I have the honor to demand his return to me for examination and trial. When last heard from he was at Monterey.

Please accept, general, the assurance of my most profound esteem,

JAMES E. SLAUGHTER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

MATAMORAS, February 14, 1865

General J. E. Slaughter,
Commanding Western Sub-District of Texas, Brownsville:

My Dear General: Conformably to the first information which you gave me of the crime and flight of Judge Palmer, I notified General Lopez, in order that he should watch him in Monterey, also informing the Hon. Agustin Quinterro of the circumstances, that he might not lose the said judge from his sight. By virtue of your last note regarding this business, in the next mail, which leaves this city on the 16th instant, I will direct General Lopez to give orders to secure the arrest of Palmer and have him brought to Piedras Negras, from whence he will be given up to the military authority of the Paso del Aguilor, or any other contiguous point which you may designate. This arrangement would be preferable, in order to avoid the alarm and unfavorable interpretations which, under the pretext of these captures, the Yankees and other covert enemies of the Empire may spread over the commerce of Matamoras. I think, moreover, that it would be better to proceed in this manner, while in the meantime I may receive from Mexico news of the Emperor having sanctioned the extradition treaty.

Please accept, general, the assurances of my sincere friendship and high consideration.

Your most obedient servant,

TOMAS MEJIA.

MONTEREY, February 19, 1865.

General J. E. Slaughter,
Brownsville:

Sir: I am in receipt of your communications of the 12th and 13th instant, and in reply I have the honor to inform you that George W. Palmer, C. S. depositary at San Antonio, left here for the interior on the 28th ultimo. He is accompanied by Maj. John F. Bryant, of the Confederate Army, and Adolfo Mennet and D. L. Wilson, of Texas. They left this city during my absence at Matamoras. Having learned on my arrival here that Palmer was at Saltillo, I immediately called on General Lopez and requested him to order his arrest. He sent Colonel Barructa on Sunday last, the 12th instant, who returned on Tuesday evening, the 14th, reporting not to have found him. With this date a requisition for the arrest of Palmer and Bryant has been issued to the authorities of San Luis Potosi, Queretaro, the City of Mexico, &c., with instructions to send the aforesaid parties to this city in case their arrest is made. Palmer’s wife and daughters are still at Paschal’s hotel.
They have been ordered by the authorities not to leave the city. Mr.
F. L. Paschal, formerly of San Antonio, had some funds in his possession said to have been left with him by Judge Palmer. He was brought before General Lopez, and being threatened with arrest, he produced a draft in favor of Palmer for $1,600, drawn by William Stone, of Eagle Pass, payable by Louis Coindreau, a merchant of this city. Also a draft for $3,120.75, drawn by Sappington & Owings at Eagle Pass on P. Milmo of this city, payable to said Palmer. This draft is dated January 18, 1865, and accepted by said P. Milmo, who now refuses to pay it, on the ground that it is not indorsed by Palmer. Mr. Coindreaux paid yesterday his draft for $1,600, and said sum is deposited with the political prefect. Mr. Palmer’s wife who is accompanied by one Mr. Fisher (formerly a clerk of Sappington & Owings), has employed a lawyer in order to get possession of said money and draft.
She was, no doubt, advised by Paschal, whom I suspect of being more friendly to thieves than to his native country. Mr. Sappington is here.
He claims to be a warm friend of the Confederacy, yet he has not shown much interest in recovering the money said to be owed to Palmer.
Most of the Americans now in this city are men who, after having left the Confederacy not to render military service, seem to be keeping their arms to the elbow in the most disgraceful transactions. Speculation in cotton has quite demoralized our people on this frontier. I have hopes that Palmer may yet be arrested. You may depend, general, that everything in my power will faithfully be done to bring Palmer to justice. The miscreants who sympathize with him in this place, and will no doubt turn to be my enemies, can at no time intimidate me in the discharge of my duties.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

J. A. QUINTERRO.

C. S. TREASURY AGENCY, TRANS-MISSISSIPPI,
Marshall, Tex., February 24, 1865.

General E. KIRBY SMITH,
Department Headquarters, Shreveport, La.:

GENERAL: Your letter, with inclosure, of the 11th was only received on the 20th instant. I am fully aware of our alarming and calamitous condition. It is faithfully described by you, and must now overwhelm us unless the Government provide relief. After the best reflection I can bestow I despair of being able to devise any means by which our vast expenditures (numerically at least) can be sustained for even a limited period. The temporary expedients which you suggest I might resort to for the purpose of restoring the lost credit of the Government are outside of my authority, but I should regard it as patriotic in such an emergency to assume responsibility could I thereby accomplish so desirable an object; but if I assume the power to borrow money, from what source could I obtain even a temporary loan? Were I to declare the certificates of indebtedness receivable in payment of taxes it might be attended with seeming benefit, but it should be a substantial one to justify such a step. It would do us more harm than good, and is inadequate to accomplish a partial relief. I agree that an appeal should be made to the executives of the States. They would do what they can to assist us, and should know [how] to prepare for the worst. It is due to them to be apprised of our extremity. Through their joint efforts something might be accomplished. We have no other help in the absence of timely provision by the General Government than that to be derived from these States and the patriotism of their citizens. Besides, the cause is their own; a failure to sustain the army would be their overthrow.

I have, as requested by you, freely communicated our condition to the Secretary of the Treasury and inclosed to him a copy of your letter. I herewith inclose to you an open letter, which I trust you will be able to dispatch at once by special and reliable messenger to Richmond, earnestly pressing upon the Secretary the importance of promptly supplying the department with funds. As long ago as the 30th December last, upon the receipt of your letter of the 27th of December by Maj. S. K. Hays, stating an arrangement by which Major Hays was to undertake the transportation of funds from Richmond, I gave to that officer a similar letter to the one now inclosed to Mr. Trenholm, urging upon him the importance of the subject. I also gave him a letter of introduction recommending him as an officer worthy of confidence in the business, and had hoped, as indicated in my reply to you by Major Hays of same date, that the arrangement would be successful in transmitting funds, but I have since learned that he was afterward employed upon other duty. I have still hope that the Government couriers, Messrs. Ewell & Co., will shortly arrive with some addition to our funds, but must say that I do not expect a sufficient amount by them to meet, even for a short time, the military necessities of the department.

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

P. W. GRAY,
Agent Treasury, Trans-Mississippi Department.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 24, 1865.

Major-General MAGRUDER,
Commanding District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: The commanding general directs me to say to you that in assigning Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson to the command of the Northern Sub-District of Arkansas he would suggest that the troops of that sub-district be organized into two brigades, to be commanded, respectively, by Cols. T. H. McCray and Archibald S. Dobbin. The question of rank between these two officers is settled at department headquarters by recognizing the claim of Colonel McCray to precedence, as just and legal. If it be practicable to cross the troops from the Northern Sub-District to the east side of the Mississippi, the commanding general directs you to order it to be done immediately. Our necessities there are urgent, and it is his desire to re-enforce them by every means in his power. The commanding general also directs that you take measures for bringing south of the Arkansas River all troops who may remain in Northern Arkansas as soon as the season will admit of it.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. BELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
II. The following order from department headquarters is published for the information of all concerned.*

By virtue of the foregoing order, the duties of district commander and superintendent of Indian affairs, which have for the last fourteen months been discharged by the undersigned, will upon the arrival of Brigadier-General Cooper be turned over to that officer. In leaving the district the undersigned returns his grateful acknowledgments to the army and people of this district, and of the Northern Sub-District of Texas, from whence his supplies have been drawn, for their support of his administration. He feels that he has discharged his duty, and that the troops of the district have done gallant and good service since he has been in command. As superintendent his duties have been onerous and complicated. He has used every exertion in his power, with the limited means at his command, to relieve the necessities of the unfortunate but patriotic refugee Indians. He has conferred freely with the civil authorities of the different nations in alliance with the Confederacy, and has done all in his power to suppress lawlessness.

His record as district commander is made and he abides by it. The undersigned would earnestly impress upon every officer and soldier upon every citizen of the district the absolute necessity of harmonious and united action. With this success cannot be doubtful; without this disasters will certainly come. It is his deliberate judgment that the prospects of ultimate success were never brighter than at this moment. What we now need more than all things else is a united and bold front. For the good of the service, which is your own good, the undersigned would earnestly impress upon all the absolute necessity of upholding and sustaining the new district commander in the arduous and complicated duties that will devolve upon him. No man will more heartily rejoice at his entire and perfect success than the undersigned. His success will be the success of the cause and of the people.

S. B. MAXEY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Richmond, Va., February 25, 1865.

His Excellency P. Murrah, Governor of the State of Texas:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor calling my attention to a communication addressed to you by General J. B. Robertson touching the furloughing of the Texas brigade, serving with the Army of Northern Virginia, and expressing your own desire that the command should be permitted to return to Texas for the purpose of recruiting, &c. Deeply sensible of the continued and important services rendered by that gallant and veteran band, it would have been most gratifying to me to accord with your views in allowing them to return to their homes where they might recuperate and again rejoin the Army of Northern Virginia, to render additional service to their country. To this end your letter was referred by me to General Robert E. Lee. For your information I give you the answer of General Lee in his own words:

Headquarters Army of Northern Virginia.

Respectfully returned to His Excellency President Davis.
I should be much gratified to comply with the request of Governor Murrah, could I do so consistently with the interests of the service. But small as the Texas brigade

* See Special Orders, No. 45, Trans-Mississippi Department, p. 1396. is, it cannot be spared now. It contains some of the best troops in the army, and its loss would be severely felt. The campaign is just opening, and our want of men is so great that even a smaller number than the Texas brigade could not be spared. The only way I can see to allow them to go home, is to send some other troops from Texas to take their place. I should be much gratified to see the brigade recruited to a division, but to send it away now would be very injurious to the service. R. E. LEE.

I trust the reasons assigned by General Lee for non-compliance with Your Excellency's request at this time will prove satisfactory. JEFF’N DAVIS.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 21, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of 24th instant. General Forney informed me Wednesday evening that he had been ordered with his division to Natchitoches. On Tuesday and Wednesday last Chisum's regiment of cavalry, escorting Federal prisoners from Tyler, arrived at Shreveport. Forney had been instructed to dismount this regiment and add it to his division. In my interview with him Wednesday evening I instructed him to delay his march until the dismounting of Chisum's regiment had been effected. He informed me that this would occasion no material delay, as the streams were up and the roads in such condition that his command could not move. There was no order issued from this office and no instructions other than those given by myself in the interview with General Forney Wednesday evening. This regiment was dismounted yesterday, and Forney has instructions to march in obedience to orders from your headquarters.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 26, 1865.

Commanding Officer Martin's Regiment:

SIR: The commanding general directs that you will change the march of your regiment and proceed to Marshall, Tex., as rapidly as possible, and report to Brigadier-General Bee.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, February 27, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: Major Buckner’s communication from Monroe of 21st Feb-ruey with your indorsement is just received. The steamer Barkman was burned in the Bartholomew. The Fletcher and Morgan Nelson have by telegraph to Camden been ordered to Monroe, where they will be at the disposition of Major Buckner for the purpose of procuring corn.
The Ouachita country above the Louisiana line is absolutely stripped of forage. To maintain that line the garrison at Camden is compelled to supply itself from the lower Ouachita and its tributaries. It is of vital importance for the protection of Northern Louisiana, as well as the planting interests in the Red River Valley, in the District of Arkanssas, that Camden should be held by us. General Magruder estimates that 30,000 bushels of corn will meet his necessities and enable him to maintain the line of the Ouachita until the coming crop can be gather-ered. The boats will be at the disposal of your officers, and I wish you would instruct them to use dispatch and energy in securing and removing the corn from the Bœuf. What is not needed for the District of Arkansas and your cavalry on the Ouachita can be transported up Little River to within sixteen miles of Alexandria, and be made available for the troops in the lower portion of your district. As the wants of the garrison at Camden are pressing, I wish the first load of the Fletcher sent to that point. You can afterward, as your necessities will allow, increase the amount of corn sent to Camden to 30,000 or even 50,000 bushels. The boats will remain under your control, and General Magruder instructed that he can depend upon your officers forwarding to Camden the corn necessary for the support of that garrison.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 27, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. S. B. BUCKNER,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to say that after consultation with Major-General Forney he has determined to reorganize his division, forming four brigades, to be constituted as follows:

First Texas Infantry Brigade—Brigadier-General Waul commanding: Eighth Texas Infantry, Twenty-second Texas Infantry, Thirteenth
Texas Dismounted Cavalry, Twenty-ninth Texas Dismounted Cavalry.

Second Texas Infantry Brigade—Acting Brigadier-General Waterhouse commanding: Third Texas Infantry, Seventeenth Texas Infantry, Nineteenth Texas Infantry, Sixteenth Texas Dismounted Cavalry,
Chisum's regiment dismounted cavalry.

Third Texas Infantry Brigade—Eleventh Texas Infantry, Fourteenth Texas Infantry, Gould's battalion Texas dismounted cavalry, Martin's regiment Texas dismounted cavalry.

Fourth Brigade Texas Infantry—Acting Brigadier-General King
commanding: Sixteenth Texas Infantry, Eighteenth Texas Infantry, Twenty-eighth Texas Dismounted Cavalry, Thirty-fourth Texas Dismounted Cavalry, Wells' regiment dismounted cavalry.

Chisum's regiment has been dismounted and is attached to the Second Brigade. The Twenty-ninth, Martin's, and Wells' regiments Texas cavalry have not arrived. They will be sent to Natchitoches to be dismounted and assigned. Before publishing the proposed organiza tion the general commanding desires to know if you wish to make any changes, and also that the cavalry regiments may be dismounted.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., February 28, 1865.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederate States:

Telegram of January 31* received 23d February. It is physically impossible to cross troops over the Mississippi at this season. When the streams fall and the river bottoms become passable the attempt will be made if the enemy's operations here permit. This will not be before June. If it is desired I should cross with the troops, to whom shall I turnover the command of the department? I cannot at this season control military operations on both banks of the Mississippi, and should not be charged with its responsibilities. In the summer, to a certain extent, it may be practicable. Now the communication by individuals is uncertain, dangerous, and difficult in the extreme; by bodies it is impossible. The enemy has massed a force of not less than 50,000 men between Morganza and New Orleans, and has collected a formidable fleet of gun-boats and transports. Mobile is believed to be their objective point. Both that place and Red River are reported as theaters of intended operations. Red River has overflowed its banks, and the season is most propitious for a successful advance.

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General, Commanding.

b Colonel McCord, commanding, near Bastrop, Tex.

Maj. Gen. J. G. Walker, Commanding District of Texas, &c.:

GENERAL: I am directed by the general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated January 29, and to say that the heavy rains and impassable condition of the roads will delay the dismounting of the cavalry at Hempstead and their reorganization into an infantry division for the support of the position at Galveston. Gillespie's, Anderson's, and Bradford's regiments, which are ordered to be dismounted, will make a small addition to your force on the island. Until the arrival of the division which will be organized at Hempstead you can strengthen the garrison by any means in your power from the Reserve Corps or the troops at other points within your district. In regard to the defense of Galveston there is only one point which he wishes to impress upon you, the garrison must be saved and arrangements must be made for communications with the mainland, so as to leave means at your disposal for the withdrawal of the garrison at the last moment. The importance of the position, in both a political and military point of view, requires that we should hold possession of that place as long as we possibly can, and no efforts should be spared to strengthen its defenses and increase the probability of our being able to hold it. On the other hand, the position is so weak and the means at the disposal of the enemy so extensive (Galveston being the only port in our possession) the place must fall and that speedily whenever a concentration of land and naval forces is brought against it. The problem which you have to solve is the holding the position at Galveston as long as possible without the sacrificing of its garrison. You may be unable to withdraw the guns and the material may be lost, but the garrison should be saved. In regard to the fortifications at Houston he directs me to say that it is the great strategic point in that section of country and the object of defenses there or in front of it is to delay the enemy until re-enforcements can arrive. An extensive system of works should not be begun at once. The means at your disposal should be concentrated to the completion in detail of strong works at the most important points. If time admits, these works can be afterward connected by a more extensive system.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

General S. Cooper,
Adjutant and Inspector General, C. S. Army, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your instructions of the 23d December, 1864, in respect to paragraph XXXV, Special Orders, No. 171 (1864), from your office, assigning Brig. Gen. D. H. Cooper to the command of the District of the Indian Territory.† I inclose you a copy of the order relieving General Maxey and assigning General Cooper to that command.‡ General Cooper enters upon this duty when affairs in that district are in a better condition than have before existed since my arrival in this department. This favorable change is due in a great measure to the successful administration of General Maxey. I shall give General Cooper my full support. The change has not the concurrence of my judgment, and I believe will not result beneficially. Cut off as the department commander is from direct communication with Richmond, he should not be made responsi-

Maj. Gen. T. J. CHURCHILL,
Commanding Division, Minden, La.:

GENERAL: You are directed to move your command to Shreveport, La. Boats will be sent to Minden to transport your baggage, in order that your trains may be brought empty.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

NATCHITOCHES, March 4, 1865.

Mr. A. R. MCDONALD:

SIR: Although I have positively prohibited the exit of cotton in the direction of the enemy's lines and the introduction of goods within our own, yet as you have acquired large quantities of cotton from our citizens under the promise of export privileges, you will be allowed to complete your arrangements and export the cotton on the presentation of satisfactory evidence that it will be shipped to Europe without the payment of a revenue tax to the U. S. Treasury. The boats for the exportation of the cotton that you bring within our lines in the fulfillment of your promise shall be entitled to protection. You will bear in mind that you must not receive cotton belonging to the Government, and any act knowingly committed by you in contravention to the interests of the public service will cause the immediate revocation of the privileges herein granted.

E. KIRBY SMITH,

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 17. } Shreveport, La., March 4, 1865.

I. The following general system of furloughs is adopted for the troops serving in the field in this department, and will not be suspended except by authority of the department commander:

First. Each company will be entitled to furloughs for 10 per cent. of its “total present for duty,” this total to include extra-duty men present with the brigade or division. Applications under this paragraph will show the actual condition of the company as to the members present and absent. The men now absent on furlough of indulgence will be included in this percentage.

Second. The length of these furloughs shall be determined by the distance to be traveled. In each case the soldier will be given twenty days at home, and one day additional for each twenty-five miles to be traveled in going from and returning to camp.
Third. Soldiers furloughed under this order who remain away from their commands beyond the time granted will be borne upon the company records for twenty days as absent without leave, during which time the company will not be entitled to the furlough privilege. At the expiration of the twenty days they will be dropped from the rolls as deserters. Failing to return immediately upon the termination of the furlough, charges will be preferred against them and punishment inflicted, unless the delay be satisfactorily accounted for.

Fourth. Furloughs will be granted by division commanders, and will show upon their face that they are granted under the provisions of this order.

Fifth. Nothing in this order shall be construed as limiting the number of furloughs upon medical certificates of disability.

II. Surg. C. M. Taylor, Provisional Army, C. S., is announced as medical director of general hospitals for the Trans-Mississippi Department.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Lodi Plantation, March 5, 1865.

Lieutenant WARTELLE,
Comdg. Detachment Second Louisiana Cavalry, near Opelousas:

LIEUTENANT: I am directed by the brigadier-general commanding to write you as follows: Special Orders, No. 57, from these headquarters, has this day been issued, in pursuance of several permits from the chief quartermaster District of West Louisiana, approved by General E. K. Smith and recorded in Cotton Bureau at Shreveport, allowing J. Marks to carry beyond our lines, by way of Courtableau, 187 bales of cotton. This cotton will pass through your lines and the pickets and outposts on the lower Atchafalaya will, on production of a clearance of the custom-house authorities at Washington, La., permit it to pass without hindrance. You must be careful that this number (187) of bales pass at one time and in one voyage. This pass (No. 57) is good but for one time and will be of no effect after March 18, 1865. This cotton can only pass along the indicated route. This pass or order to transmit this cotton will be null and void and will not be respected by the pickets unless approved by yourself or Captain Prescott, commanding the company. You will send some intelligent non-commissioned officer with and in charge of the cotton to your advanced post, who shall then see that not more than 187 bales of cotton is being carried out of the lines. He shall also take up the pass (or Special Orders, No. 57) and you or Captain Prescott will indorse on it a certificate of the day and post when and where the cotton passed and forward it to these headquarters. But, to avoid hindrance to the party taking out the cotton by our scouts, you will give J. Marks the certificate inclosed (to be signed by yourself or Captain Prescott). You are directed to use the utmost caution and activity in this and all similar cases to prevent frauds being committed under pretense of law.

Very respectfully,

D. F. BOYD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

General S. Cooper,
Adjutant and Inspector General:

Sir: I have the honor to recommend the promotion of Maj. Gen. John B. Magruder to the grade of lieutenant-general in the Provisional Army of the Confederate States, and respectfully request that it may be brought to the favorable notice of the President for his action. General Magruder commands a corps consisting of one division of four brigades Arkansas infantry, one division of two brigades Missouri infantry, one division of two brigades Missouri cavalry, numbering from 12,000 to 15,000 effective men. General Magruder merits reward for his recapture of Galveston before I was assigned to the command of the department and for the successful military administration of his district. I will make no recommendation in regard to the date from which this promotion should take effect. The President must judge whether it should go back to the recapture of Galveston or whether it should be made subsequent to that of Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 18.

A bureau of the Engineer Department is hereby established, and until further orders will be located at Shreveport, La. All papers, reports, &c., required by regulations to be sent to Richmond will be forwarded to the chief of bureau, Trans-Mississippi Department. Lieut. Col. H. T. Douglas is announced as chief of engineer bureau. He will continue to discharge the duties of chief engineer.

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., March 7, 1865.

His Excellency President JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederate States, Richmond, Va.:

I desire employing my whole force in co-operation with the armies east of the Mississippi. Two movements can be undertaken: an invasion of Missouri or a march across the Mississippi. Both are physically difficult; their successful execution is uncertain; near 400 miles of destitution separates us from Missouri. The Mississippi, carefully guarded by iron-clads, with at least 200 miles of exhaustion, separates us from supplies in Mississippi. If crossing is effected it will be without transportation or artillery. I desire strictly to carry out the wishes of the Executive, and ask instructions from War Department as to which movement shall be made. Neither can be undertaken before June, or possibly July. I will push preparations for both, awaiting instructions. My effective strength in department is 19,000 enlisted men of infantry and artillery; 17,000 enlisted men of cavalry, of which seventeen regiments (6,000 enlisted men) are being dismounted; in addition 4,000 enlisted men are absent on furlough, 10,000 absent on details, including all details under conscript law; 6,000 Reserve Corps in Texas, 2,000 in Louisiana, and 2,000 in Arkansas. Reserves only in part armed. If not instructed to move to Missouri, I desire permission to visit Richmond, to justify in person to you my administration of this department. General Buckner will command during my absence, and will push preparations for crossing troops.

E. KIRBY SMITH, General.

HOUSTON, TEX., March 7, 1865.

General E. Kirby Smith, Shreveport:

A very reliable agent of the secret service has just arrived from New Orleans, and brings the information from the Catholic Bishop Odin and other reliable sources that the expedition now fitting out there is for operations against Texas. It is to be commanded by Canby and to consist of 40,000 men, to sail about the 10th instant.

J. G. WALKER, Major-General.

Captain: I inclose hereina copy of an indorsement on a communication sent to Major-General Wharton. I am instructed by the commanding general to say that he is exceedingly anxious to secure the crossing of troops to the Cis-Mississippi, but has no hope of effecting it unless the men go willingly, individually. The paper inclosed embodies the only plan by which organizations can be made, the officers and men of which will be desirous to cross.

Capt. J. G. Clarke, Asst. Adjt. Gen., Forces Front Lines, Dist. of West Louisiana:

Captain: I have the honor to transmit you the latest information from the picket front, as follows: At 10 a.m. yesterday, 6th, all quiet at the mouth of Red River and along the Atchafalaya. The water had risen fifteen inches during twenty-four hours up to that time. At Fort De Russy, at 8 a.m. yesterday, the water was at a stand. On 5th instant (after the report of 8 a.m. was sent in) two gun-boats entered Red River under flag of truce. As nothing more is said of them by the commander of the outpost it is presumed that they did not ascend, but passed out of the river. He has been directed to forward more specific information. From Franklin to Berwick Bay all quiet along the Teche on the 5th instant, but the corporal commanding guard of three men on board of schooner Malta (mistook vessel) report that a Federal (armed) transport entered Vermillion Bayou last Friday, 3d instant, captured and safely carried off the schooner and tug. The corporal states that he made every effort in his power to burn or sink the vessel before she fell into the hands of the Federals. Sergt. J. B. Hébert, Second Louisiana Cavalry, acting scout, was attacked a few days ago by a party of four Federals, cavalry, on La Fourche. He killed one, wounded another, drove off the rest, and brought the horse, arms, and equipments of the killed man. They are creoles from La Fourche.

Very respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

II. In accordance with instructions from department headquarters, Brig. Gen. M. M. Parsons will resume command of Parsons' Missouri brigade.

SPECIAL ORDERS, Headquarters District of Indian Territory,
No. 63.
Fort Towson, C. N., March 7, 1865.

I. The great scarcity of mechanics and tools outside of the army, rendering it nearly impracticable for farmers to secure the necessary repairs for their agricultural implements, now almost useless, and it being very important that the planting interests of the country should be fostered and every aid given to the producers of subsistence, not inconsistent with other interests of the service, in their efforts to raise as large crops as possible, all officers and agents, under the orders of the commanding general of this district, who have control of workshops of any description suitable for repairing farming implements, are hereby directed to set apart as many days in each week, not less than one, as the exigencies of the service will permit, for repairing such farming implements as may be brought to them by the citizens of this Territory for that purpose. Great industry and energy are required of officers in charge of and employés in the Government workshops, and the necessary repairs must be executed as rapidly as possible. The work done at these shops being gratuitous on the part of the Government, the citizens will see the justice and propriety of their furnishing, as far as practicable, the material necessary for the repair of their implements, and they are earnestly requested to do so.

By order of Brig. Gen. D. H. Cooper:

T. M. SCOTT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

General S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General, Richmond, Va.:

The following dispatch is just received from General Walker at Houston:

A very reliable agent of the secret service has just arrived from New Orleans, and brings the information from the Catholic bishop and other reliable sources that the expedition now fitting out there is for operations against Texas. It is to be commanded by Canby and to consist of 40,000 men, to sail about the 10th instant.

J. G. WALKER,
Major-General.

The country is flooded, the streams out of their banks, and the movement of troops is impossible. General Wharton, with two divisions of cavalry, has been for nearly a month under orders of march for Texas, and from the impassable condition of the roads has been unable to move. If the expedition preparing at New Orleans sails on the 10th for Texas, a concentration cannot be made in time to prevent the occupation of Houston.

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, March 8, 1865.

Hon. P. W. Gray,
C. S. Treasury Agent:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of 2d instant. I did not come to any determination in regard to opening the trade through our lines. I was awaiting the receipt of your letter in answer to mine on this subject. General Buckner was instructed that until I received your orders no system of trade would be adopted and no permits should be granted under that system. After receiving your letter I proceeded to Natchitoches, and after consultation with General Buckner determined not to sanction any system of trade through our lines with the enemy, and directed him to publish immediately a general order announcing that no cotton would be allowed to pass out. An exception was made to a limited amount (I think under 400 bales), which was paid by the Government for supplies received under a contract with Major Hays, chief quartermaster District of West Louisiana, approved by General Buckner, and a limited amount of cotton on the Ouachita belonging to the State of Louisiana, which was authorized to pass under the provisions of a contract made by that State for supplies. The cotton furnished under the contract of Major Stone and others, under the administration of Generals Taylor and Walker, were not to be allowed to pass our lines, but were subject to the regulations of the Treasury Department. I have been long making up my mind in regard to the policy to be adopted in this matter. I have carefully considered it in all its bearings and suspended my decision until information could be collected from every quarter. In deciding I have been much embarrassed by the knowledge of our necessities on the one hand, and on the other by the effect upon the market of opening the cotton trade, and the consequent difficulties which by the fall in price of cotton might have been experienced by you in carrying out the President’s regulations. This latter consideration more than any other determined me to close our lines, and I wish again to assure you that you will always find me ready to co-operate with and assist you in the discharge of your difficult duties.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

His Excellency Jefferson Davis,
President Confederate States:

Sir: I have been attacked in the columns of the Richmond Whig. I know that efforts have been made through other journals east of the Mississippi to prejudice the public mind and destroy confidence in the purity of my motives and in my ability to command. Whilst giving my energies to the maintenance and defense of the department specially intrusted to my charge, I have ever felt the deepest interest in the struggle elsewhere, and have never failed to co-operate with the means at my disposal in insuring its success. I have faithfully and honestly, to the extent of my abilities, discharged the great duties confided to me. I do not know that I have given you entire satisfaction. I do know that you are often embarrassed in doing what you believe to be for the general good. I desire to aid and not embarrass you in your action, and request that this letter may be regarded an application to be relieved from the command of the department whenever you believe that the public interests will be advanced thereby.

I am, most respectfully and sincerely, yours,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

General: The commanding general directs that if the Sabine can be passed you order Forney's division immediately by the most direct and practicable route to Huntsville, Walker County, Tex., where it will await further instructions from department headquarters. The regiments of Bee's brigade, which are to form part of that division, will be ordered to Huntsville, where they can be dismounted. This disposition of Forney's division is consequent upon the information received from General Walker and forwarded to you concerning the expedition preparing at New Orleans. Churchill's infantry have been ordered to this point. The Missouri infantry and Shelby's cavalry have been brought down to within thirty miles of Shreveport.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

General Smith wishes to know which is the best route and what depots can be relied upon for the march of Forney's division from Natchitoches to Houston. He proposes to send them to Woodville, and refers particularly to the routes by Liberty and Swartwout, or would it be advisable to move by Jasper to Beaumont?

W. R. BOGGS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., March 11, 1865.

President Confederate States:

SIR: Your letter of December 24, 1864, was received through the hands of Brigadier-General Harrison.* In regard to the military operations connected with the campaign of last spring in this department, the great distances marched, the deficiencies of transportation, the exhausted condition of the country, and the great difficulties encountered have not, I think, been fully appreciated. Especially is this the case in the exhausting effects of that campaign on both men and material. Immediately after the evacuation of Alexandria by the enemy I determined to push the advantages gained and to operate with my whole disposable force in Arkansas and Missouri. The larger proportion of that force was under General Taylor's command in Louisiana. His letter of May 24, 1864 (transmitted to you with his correspondence), represents the exhausted condition of his command and the impracticability of operating against the enemy in Arkansas and Missouri before fall. Our artillery was without horses, our transportation used up. The bullets of the enemy and long marches through a country without supplies had decimated our animals and left us unable to move. This applies equally to all the troops engaged in that campaign. With the limited means at our disposal time was absolutely essential to prepare us for taking the offensive. I immediately applied myself to the task of preparing for active operations late in August. The order directing the crossing of the troops to the east side of the Mississippi, received about the middle of July, broke in upon my plans, and my whole attention was then turned to its successful execution. The months of July and August were consumed in fruitless efforts to cross the river. General Taylor reported the transfer of troops to the other side impracticable, and on the 23d August General Buckner was ordered from department headquarters to suspend the crossing, and General Magruder was instructed to push preparations as rapidly as possible for operations in the valley of the Arkansas. The concentration not being effected until the season was far advanced, and heavy rains making movements slow and difficult, nothing was accomplished beyond a demonstration against Pine Bluff in favor of Price's advance into Missouri. The cavalry expedition into Missouri was directed by me after the receipt of the order transferring the infantry of my command east of the Mississippi. It was intended as a diversion in favor of our army in Georgia.

and was the only possible assistance to our cause elsewhere which could be afforded with means then at my disposal. Though this movement did not realize the expectations of General Price, the objects for which it was undertaken by myself were effected. A concentration of the enemy's forces in Missouri was compelled. Fully 30,000 of his soldiers were employed there, and troops which were en route for Sherman's army were diverted from that destination and sent to operate against Price. I have been thus explicit, as your letter conveys the impression that the inactivity of my army, after the victories of last spring, disappointed your expectation. I could not have followed the movements of an army which embarked at New Orleans and sailed for the Atlantic, or which moved in transports up the Mississippi to a distant theater of operations. The Mississippi was an impassable barrier, and by the expedition into Missouri I made the only diversion in my power. The various promotions conferred upon me by yourself and the confidence which you have always reposed in my abilities have more than done me justice. I have always endeavored to merit this confidence, and I earnestly desire to promote the common welfare, and would willingly sacrifice every personal consideration to that end. I will as a soldier strive honestly and faithfully to obey all your instructions. If you doubt my ability or believe that another can better execute them, I request that he may be sent to relieve me of the responsible and onerous duties with which I am charged.

I am, most respectfully and sincerely, yours,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

Maj. Gen. J. G. WALKER,

Forney's division has been ordered from Natchitoches to Huntsville by shortest practicable route. No calculations can be made on his march on account of high water.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S BRIGADE,
March 11, 1865.

Capt. W. A. WHITAKER,
Commanding Detachment East of Teche:

CAPTAIN: The brigadier-general commanding directs me to write you as follows: It is a matter of first importance that he should be furnished immediately with reliable intelligence of the movements of the enemy at New Orleans, the strength of their force, their destination, and the time fixed upon for their departure. You will therefore select, say, some two of your best and most reliable men and send them at once into the city of New Orleans to find out not vague rumors but correct accounts of the number of the enemy, their location (whether in the city or at what points outside of the city), and if possible the corps, divisions, and independent detachments; the number of each and the name of the commanders; whether any portion of the enemy's force has left New Orleans, and if so, the name of the corps, division, brigade, or detachment; its strength, destination, and the time it left New Orleans, and particularly whether any force has left the city for Mobile or the coast of Texas; if so, its strength, commander, and time of departure. In a word, captain, the men you select for this mission are intrusted with the most important duty that a soldier can possibly be called upon to perform. They must bring or send you without delay accurate information of everything and every movement of the great expedition which the enemy is now fitting out at New Orleans, and must immediately dispatch such information to these headquarters. Besides your own men you will also use such other persons for this purpose as you can. If you need money to accomplish your object let the brigadier-general commanding know at once and it shall be furnished you. All important dispatches should be duplicated. You are also charged not to let this matter of getting information from New Orleans interfere with the expedition upon which you have been specially ordered. During your expedition and pending your hearing directly from New Orleans through your own agents, you will dispatch to these headquarters any information you may receive of the enemy's movements in the city or on the river.

Assuring you, captain, that much depends on your own judgment and activity to insure success to the undertaking of which I have written above, I am, very respectfully, yours,

D. F. BOYD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,

Capt. J. G. CLARKE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: Since the picket report of this morning the following intelligence has reached these headquarters from Pointe Coupée up to 8th instant: Transports still pass down the river loaded with troops; on the 5th one and on the 6th two loaded with infantry, and on the 7th a boat loaded with cavalry, passed down. Four regiments of negroes and about 100 white cavalry are at Morganza, under the command of Brigadier-General McKane [McKean], General Ullmann having gone down the river. The garrison is very quiet, making no raids into the interior above Morganza. The river is rising very rapidly.

Very respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S BRIGADE,
March 12, 1865.

Capt. J. G. CLARKE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: The Red River and Atchafalaya fronts were quiet up to 6 a.m. yesterday, and in the preceding twenty-four hours the Red River at its mouth had risen only six inches, being a much less ratio of rise than for the last six days. Up to night before last all was quiet on the Bayou Teche and Berwick City. Owing to the high winds and stormy weather my scouts from the La Fourche, who have to cross the extensive system of lakes in the frailest kind of boats, have failed to make passage for the last two days, but up to the 7th instant all was quiet within the La Fourche. The only movements of troops reported up to that date was the withdrawal from Brashear City of the Eleventh Wisconsin Infantry, Colonel Harris commanding and commandant of the post, and the relieving of the Thirty-third Illinois, which for a long period has been scattered along the New Orleans and Opelousas Railroad guarding it from Bayou Des Allemands to the Black Crossing. The troops withdrawn were replaced by negro troops. Brashear City and the forts were on the 7th under command of Colonel Jones, commanding negro regiments. Two deserters from the Third Rhode Island Cavalry, stationed at Napoleonville, came into our lines on the 10th and report no new movement in the La Fourche. This cavalry regiment is weak and much demoralized, over twenty or thirty deserters from it having come in to me in the last two months. Its main camps are at Napoleonville and Donaldsonville.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

(Same to Major Smith, assistant adjutant-general.)

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,
March 12, 1865.

Capt. W. A. WHITAKER,
Commanding Detachment:

CAPTAIN: The brigadier-general commanding directs that you modify the instructions sent you from these headquarters dated yesterday, 11th instant: That you do not send any of the enlisted soldiers of your command into the city of New Orleans or within the enemy's lines to gain information of the expedition now being fitted out there unless they volunteer to go. That you may not misunderstand, I repeat, be careful not to force them to go or to order them on that duty unless they go willingly and at their instance. But you will use every effort to get persons not connected with the army to go on that mission. It is hoped that you can get some one living within the enemy's lines to give you the desired information. Lest you may not have received the instructions of yesterday, I inclose you a copy.

Very respectfully,

D. F. BOYD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,
Shreveport, March 13, 1865.

Maj. W. H. Thomas, Chief of Subsistence:

Major: The maintenance of our troops in the field is dependent upon the receipt of supplies from the planters in the district in which they are serving. You will instruct your officers that the supplies must be had. If necessary, they will resort to impressment, and must call upon the district commander for a sufficient force to enable them to carry out these instructions. The question is reduced to one of two alternatives: the withdrawal of the troops, or the purchase of supplies on certified accounts. The troops cannot be withdrawn, and I trust that when the facts are presented to the planters their patriotism will induce them freely to part with such supplies as they can spare for the use of the army. I have made arrangements through the Treasury Department by which I hope to obtain an adequate supply of funds, which will be disbursed in the redemption of your certified accounts, given in receipt for supplies purchased or impressed under these instructions. In every case where an impressment is made the amount of supplies allowed by law for the support of families must be exempted.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
E. Kirby Smith,
General.

I. Brig. Gen. Harry T. Hays has been assigned by the Secretary of War to the duty of collecting and forwarding to their commands all officers and men in this department who belong east of the Mississippi River.

II. All officers and men who have come into this department by any authority other than by special order of War Department will immediately report in person to Brigadier-General Hays at Natchitoches, La.

III. All officers and men belonging east of the Mississippi River who have been assigned to commands or duty by department, district, or subordinate commanders will at once be relieved by their immediate commander and ordered to report in person to Brigadier-General Hays, at Natchitoches, La.

Capt. A. O. P. Pickens,
* Commanding Outpost, &c.:

Captain: No person, whether courier officer or courier, in fact no person whatsoever, will be permitted by you or your pickets to cross the Atchafalaya River without your authorization, given in accordance with your instructions, except at the point at Lyon's Ferry where the courier communicates with Captain Ratliff, and at this point only the courier will be permitted to pass. Until further orders no boat or skiff on the Atchafalaya will be left under the control of Lieutenant Leonard. His couriers are not intended to cross the Atchafalaya, and when communications from Lieutenant Collins come you will send them at once yourself without delay. If the courier-line on the west side of the Atchafalaya need boats or skiffs you will furnish them, but keep under your own guard alone. Notify Lieutenant Leonard that you will furnish him with such boats as he may need for courier duty, and if he or any other person undertakes to use or take boats without your approval, arrest them unhesitatingly and send them, with statements, to my headquarters. You and you alone command the picket front on the Atchafalaya and you are held responsible to close and keep our lines, and particularly to break up the cotton trade. You will investigate every attempt, whether successful or not, to pass cotton; and it is strange to me that you cannot break it up. If cotton passes over illegally at Pointe Coupee, pursue and burn it, impressing the teams and arresting every one concerned in it. If you do not break up this cotton trade with the means at your command, I will regretfully be forced to the conclusion that you are not vigilant and energetic. Cotton order, No. 30, from district headquarters, has been sent you and under no circumstances will you allow a bale to pass your pickets except on permits countersigned at these headquarters. You state you have left a skiff with Lieutenant Leonard. You will withdraw that skiff. If Mrs. Boone or any other person having a right and the means will keep a ferry, let them do it under your orders, always having a guard over the ferry. Increase, if necessary, your pickets along the Atchafalaya so as to insure the closing of your lines against persons and trade. Lieutenant Leonard, his couriers, and every person along your lines are subject to your orders in all that relates to your picket-lines and such rules as you establish, and you will energetically enforce your authority.

I am, captain, yours, &c.,

Maj. Gen. J. G. WALKER,
Commanding District of Texas,

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to say that he has ordered General Maxey to report to you, to be assigned to the command of the division to be formed of the dismounted cavalry and King's old Texas brigade. The command will be formed into two brigades. He further directs that a third brigade be formed, withdrawing one regiment from each of the infantry brigades, commanded respectively by Brigadier-Generals Hébert and Harrison, and one of the three dismounted regiments (Anderson's, Bradford's, or Gillespie's). The regiments withdrawn from Hébert's and Harrison's brigades will be replaced by the two other dismounted regiments. He directs that this brigade be attached to Maxey's division. He further directs that the cavalry commands of your district be organized into one brigade.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Hon. John C. Breckinridge,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to call your attention to the great need of funds for military purposes in this department as set forth in the inclosed papers, being copies of a correspondence between the Hon. P. W. Gray, C. S. Treasury agent, Trans-Mississippi Department, and myself upon this subject, and also of a letter from Judge Gray to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, and estimate of pay funds. The Treasury agents have not succeeded in crossing sufficient funds to this department. Over $50,000,000 are already due for the pay of troops alone. I respectfully urge that Col. Phil. Stockton and Maj. Richard Howard, commissaries of subsistence, whom I have ordered to Richmond for the purpose, may be intrusted with the transportation of the above specified amount, or as much of it as possible, to be placed in the treasury here and drawn out on warrants as required.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,

General.

ENGINEER BUREAU, TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, March 15, 1865.

General E. Kirby Smith:

GENERAL: I have the honor to call your attention to the defenses of the District of Texas with a view to the preparations necessary to defeat an advance of the enemy into the interior of the country, should he gain a foothold at any point on the coast from Sabine Pass to the Brazos. I consider the reduction of the defenses of Galveston and of Sabine Pass a work of so short a time, if prosecuted with vigor and the usual combinations of the enemy, that I shall discuss the question which I now consider it our duty to direct our energies and attention to, regarding those works in the enemy's possession. I have previously recommended that an interior line of defense, looking to the coast, should be adopted, and suggested Liberty, on the Trinity River, the head of navigation, and on the railroad from Houston to Orange, as one point to be fortified, and Richmond, on the Brazos, and on the line of railroad from Harrisburg to Alleyton, as a second point. In this suggestion I had in view what to my mind is an absolute certainty, viz, that the enemy, after establishing himself on the coast, would move on Houston as an objective point in his campaign. My plan was to make Liberty and Richmond intrenched camps for defense by 2,000 or 3,000 men, while Houston was strongly fortified and the enemy forced to take it by siege. In holding the positions at Liberty and Richmond you force the enemy to move over long lines or to expose his flanks in advancing directly on Houston from Galveston. In the first instance you gain time and seize every strong point in your retreat, delaying the enemy and forcing him to develop. In the second, by enterprise and skill you are in position to inflict disastrous defeat upon him. I of course do not attempt for a moment to prove that either of the points is impregnable and cannot be turned, but, taking the ground that fortified positions are only intended to force the enemy to develop and to delay his operations, and around which an army should operate, I believe that my plan, if carried out, will result in material good. Houston is the heart of Texas, the point at which the railroads center, and if occupied by the enemy affords him a point within easy and rapid communication with his depot, which he may either establish at Beaumont, moving via Sabine Pass or Galveston, having captured that position, and from which he may at leisure and with perfect security discuss his further advance.

Take Galveston and we are at once forced to abandon Sabine Pass and the mouth of the Brazos, and with the probability of losing our material and men at both points should we attempt to concentrate our forces at Houston, as we should have the longer lines to move over to reach that point; or on the contrary, take either Sabine or the mouth of the Brazos, and Galveston is turned and must be abandoned. By fortifying Liberty and Richmond we have points on either line to meet the enemy and delay his movements, affording us time to remove our men and material from the opposite one and the center, Galveston, while forces from the interior may be hurried to our assistance. Of course, Houston can be turned, but if we are strong there and can delay the enemy's advance we may beat him before we are obliged to abandon it. In my humble opinion the line from the mouth of the Brazos to Sabine Pass is more dangerous to us than any other from Brownsville to Memphis. If I am correct in my judgment, we should have our interior line ready, and be prepared to meet the enemy on his debouch from the coast, and I earnestly recommend that those points above referred to may be fortified, and that we direct our attention to preparing for the removal of the men and material from Galveston at the shortest possible notice, and to this end I would recommend the construction of fifty skiffs, about twenty-one feet long, four feet beam, with a view as a dernier resort to facilitate the removal of the garrison to the mainland. With no intention to intrude my views upon you, I give them in accordance with my duty for your consideration.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. T. DOUGLAS,
Chief of Bureau.

LIEUTENANT: The brigadier-general commanding directs that you inform him minutely and without delay whether you know of any cotton being run out to the enemy from the section of the Atchafalaya where you were lately on duty; and if so, when and where, the parties by whom owned, to whom sold, and such others as may have been aiding and abetting in this unlawful trade and passage of cotton through our lines; whether you knew, had reason to suspect, or heard from any source entitled to respect that any officer or soldier of the C. S. Army was directly or indirectly engaged in such trade or passage of cotton, or knew or suspected the same without reporting it or taking proper steps to prevent it. If so, you will furnish their names and the time and place of their misdemeanor. You will also state what you may know or have heard of a man named Foote, said to be engaged in running cotton through our lines to the enemy. You may also report the names of other persons who you may know or suspect to be engaged in this unlawful trade, and the several points where you know, suspect, or have heard that cotton is improperly crossed over the Atchafalaya. You are required, lieutenant, to furnish at once a full, clear, and positive answer to each and all of the questions above propounded.

General SAMUEL COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to transmit herewith the official reports* of the expedition into Missouri, under the command of Maj. Gen. Sterling Price. Upon the termination of the campaign in this department in May last, I at once set about preparing for an offensive movement into Missouri with all my available force. While engaged in these preparations orders were received directing the crossing of the Mississippi River by the infantry of my command. This changed my whole plan of operations. The only diversion in my power by which our armies elsewhere could be aided was a cavalry expedition into Missouri. General Price was ordered into Missouri with all the cavalry of the District of Arkansas. Every facility was given him in fitting out his expedition. He crossed the Arkansas with some 4,000 effective men, well supplied with an efficient artillery train, and with ample material for his army. Immediately after the battle of Jenkins' Ferry, and preparatory to the prosecution of the campaign in Arkansas and Missouri, General Shelby, with 1,200 picked men from his command, was ordered into Northeast Arkansas. He was directed to break up the railroad communication between Little Rock and White River, and was instructed to collect and organize the absentees and conscript element scattered through that country. This duty was thoroughly and efficiently performed by General Shelby. The railroad to Devall's Bluff was broken up and the supplies at Little Rock thereby so reduced that we could have moved in force with our infantry north of the Arkansas that position, in all probability, would have been evacuated without a blow being struck in its defense. General Shelby succeeded in collecting and organizing into three brigades a force of some 8,000 men, commanded by Colonels McCray, Dobbin, and Shanks. By a series of rapid and successful moves the enemy's detachments were defeated, his own command in part armed and equipped, and the control of the White River country secured. Every effort made to collect and render available the element organized by General Shelby had hitherto proved fruitless. These men, many of whom were deserters, were poor and with large families, had lost nearly everything by the ravages of the enemy, and could not be made to abandon their homes in an unprotected and exposed position and join the commands east of the Mississippi or south of the Arkansas River. The best disposition by which their services could be made available was to employ them in Missouri. General Shelby was directed to hold his entire command in readiness to accompany General Price. The junction of the two columns was made before crossing the Missouri frontier, and General Price received an addition of at least 8,000 men to his command, of which 4,000 were armed and equipped. General Taylor was placed in command of the troops which were to cross the Mississippi, and was directed to conduct the movement in person. All the means in the department were put at his disposal to insure success (see correspondence relative to crossing troops forwarded to the War Department August 28, 1864*). General Taylor reported the crossing impracticable and recommended their employment elsewhere. On the 25th of August orders were issued at department headquarters for the concentration of the infantry in Arkansas, and General Magruder, commanding that district, was directed to push preparations for the attack of the Federal forces at Pine Bluff and Little Rock, and the reoccupation of the Arkansas Valley. The lateness of the season and heavy rains prevented any result from the last movement other than a temporary diversion in favor of the Missouri expedition.

* See Vol. XLI, Part I.

The movement of General Price accomplished all the objects for which it was inaugurated by me. A concentration of the enemy's forces in Missouri was compelled; at least 30,000 of his soldiers were employed there, and troops en route for Sherman's army were diverted from that destination and sent to operate in that State. A large number of recruits were obtained, and but for the losses incident to the retreat the results of the expedition would have been most brilliant.

I am, general, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

SHREVEPORT, LA., March 16, 1865.

Hon. R. W. JOHNSON,
C. S. Senate:

MY DEAR SIR: I have prepared the papers for Major Burton, and ordered Captain Lewis to accompany him for the successful accomplishment of his instructions. The inclosed letters clearly demonstrate the importance of sending funds in large amounts immediately to the relief of this department. I have sent Colonel Stockton and Major Howard on a similar mission with that of Major Burton and Captain Lewis; they are both trusty officers with the energy and experience requisite to insure success. I hope the Trans-Mississippi delegation will insist upon the funds being furnished and these officers being intrusted with its transportation across the river. The Treasury messengers do not keep us supplied, and, if either this or some other efficient method for our relief is not resorted to, I cannot be held responsible for the consequences. I inclose you two dispatches lately sent to the President, which I wish destroyed after being read. They were sent in cipher, and are too important to be risked in crossing the Mississippi; also copy of two letters* which were forwarded a few days since. Your relations with the President will, I am sure, be good; the interests of the country require they should be so. Will you impress upon him, if you have the opportunity, that I am striving for the general good of the cause, and to merit his personal regard; that, let my enemies say what they may, I will honestly and faithfully carry out the instructions of the War Department and his wishes to the best of my abilities. I hope you will urge the appointment of general officers, as recommended by me at the close of the campaign last spring. The inclosed memorandum exhibits clearly the necessity for appointing general officers. Of seven major-generals three only are commanding divisions, whilst the return shows twelve divisions of troops in the department. A good efficient lieutenant-general who can ably support the department commander is greatly needed. I doubt whether any aid can be expected in this respect. General Walker, as well as Magruder, can be promoted; the former is ranked by both Price and Forney, and unless he is promoted cannot be retained in command of a district. Communication with Richmond is growing more difficult daily. You can and must have appreciated the necessity of granting more powers to the department commander. He should have the power of assigning to duty all appointments or promotions created under the law (subject to the approval of the President and confirmation by the Senate). He should have a controlling influence over the Treasury agency established at Marshall. The whole control of cotton is in the hands of Judge Gray; the support of the army is dependent upon his action. He has tendered his resignation, is overwhelmed by the responsibilities thrown upon him, and has not the business capacity for conducting the purchasing bureau upon a scale commensurate with our wants. I feel a delicacy in advancing these opinions as I am department commander; but they are necessities created by the circumstances and the times in which we live. If I cannot be trusted another commander should relieve me with whom these powers can be safely confided. I do not court the responsibilities of this vast command. I shall labor conscientiously to discharge them, but the greatest kindness the President could confer upon me would be to relieve me by some one in whose ability as well as correctness he can implicitly confide.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,

General.

Maj. J. P. SMITH, Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: I have the honor to report that at the mouth of Red River and on the Atchafalaya River everything up to yesterday morning was quiet. There were ten gun-boats lying at or near Ackland's, on the Mississippi River. Bands of deserters and jayhawkers are infesting the country north of Red River and between the Black and Mississippi Rivers. I have ordered Lieutenant Griffin with a detachment of cavalry into that section of country. The ratio of rise at the mouth of Red River has declined to three inches in twenty-four hours. A great flood from the Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers is pouring into the Ohio, but on the 7th instant the river was falling at Saint Louis. On the lakes and lower Teche all is quiet. The pickets report no accumulation of supplies at Brashear City, and that the garrison consists of two regiments, negro troops, and 250 white artillerists of an Indian regiment. A few days ago 250 negro troops crossed Berwick Bay and came up the railroad track about a couple of miles for the purpose of destroying a bridge over Black Bayou, which was falsely reported to the enemy as having been rebuilt, and then recrossed to Brashear City. I send you a New Orleans paper of 13th instant sent me by Captain Murphy, commanding Lower Teche.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SHREVEPORT, March 16, 1865.

Maj. Gen. Sterling Price:

My Dear General: I thought till last evening that there was no doubt about my going to Richmond. General Smith told me last night that while he thought I would be of service in effecting the object of the mission to Richmond, it was not essential that I should go, as it had been determined to send Major Burton, and that he would not order me to go unless I desired it. I do not desire it and shall therefore remain. Major Burton starts in the morning for Lewisville, and will call to see you. He says he will be glad to have Mr. Barr accompany him, and that he will call to see you and will take great pleasure in carrying your letters and doing anything in his power for you in Richmond. I returned yesterday from Marshall, when I found your letter of 9th. Have to go back to Marshall to day to proceed on my return trip by Linden, and may not get back to Lewisville before Burton starts for the east. I saw Governor R. only for a few minutes, and in company.

Very truly, your friend,

E. C. CABELL.

Maj. J. P. SMITH:

MAJOR: There is nothing of interest to report from the mouth of Red River and along the Atchafalaya. All was quiet there at sunrise yesterday, 16th. The water rose three inches in the previous twenty-four hours, and some portions of the Mississippi River front in Pointe Coupée Parish were under water. Up to 6 p.m. Wednesday, 15th instant, all was quiet at Berwick Bay and along the Teche. Sergeant Smith, one of my scouts in the La Fourche country, reports that the corps of General A. J. Smith and Steele left Kennerville for Mobile about 5th instant, but that there is still a force in New Orleans which is to follow them. He has sent a party living within the enemy's lines to New Orleans, and he expects full and valuable information as soon as he can return. No re-enforcements have been sent to Berwick Bay, but a dispatch was reported as received at Brashear City on the 13th instant, stating that Colonel Harris' regiment (white), Eleventh Wisconsin, would probably be sent back to the bay. It is reported that the enemy is fitting out an expedition in launches in Bayou Bœuf, some ten miles east of Berwick Bay, supposed to be intended for Grand Lake and the bayous east of the Teche. A large quantity of oars was brought up from New Orleans to that point on the 14th instant. A scout from Thibodeaux reports that the Third Rhode Island Cavalry [sic], by the Second Louisiana Mounted Infantry. Four hundred additional negro troops had arrived at Thibodeaux. I send you inclosed New Orleans Times, 14th instant, obtained from the La Fourche. Red River had risen two inches in twenty-four hours up to 6 a.m. yesterday, 16th instant, at Fort De Russy and mouth of Choctaw Bayou, about forty miles below Alexandria.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CAPTAIN: The brigadier-general commanding directs me to call your attention to the expedition which you report as fitting out on Bayou Bœuf and believe to be designed for the lakes and bayous east and north of you. Keep a sharp lookout lest it is also designed to fall upon your rear and cut you off. You had better keep Captain Whitaker informed as nearly as possible of the movements of the enemy in Bayou Bœuf, and of any changes which they may make in their programme. The newspaper (New Orleans Times) of 12th instant, which you are informed had been taken from the package en route to this place, was stolen or lost between Cheneyville and this point.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,

General SAMUEL COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General, C. S. Army, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: The copy of Brigadier-General Hays' letter of October 19, 1864, with inclosures, forwarded from the War Department December 2, is received. When General Hays reported to me, under orders from the Adjutant-General to collect all absentees from commands east of the Mississippi, I directed every assistance to be given him, and believed that I was carrying out the instructions of the War Department when General Orders, No. 72, department headquarters, September 14, 1864, were published. This order affected all who came into this department subsequent to the fall of Vicksburg, an event which took place soon after I assumed command here. Previous to that time it was believed that but few absentees had crossed the Mississippi, and a specific date was named in the general order to prevent confusion and misunderstanding respecting the men who escaped capture at Arkansas Post and those who remained in the department when General Hindman's troops crossed the river. The latter, by instructions from the War Department to General Holmes, were allowed to remain as part of his command, and formed so large a proportion of the effective force of the Arkansas troops that their removal would have been equivalent to breaking up some of the best organizations in that district. The former were collected and organized soon after the fall of the post. In some cases nearly entire companies and regiments had escaped capture. No order had ever been published transferring them from the department. They were regularly on duty here when the exchange of their comrades was effected at City Point and information had been received that the Arkansas Post prisoners had left Richmond under orders to return to this department. Colonel Logan, Eleventh Arkansas Cavalry, reported for duty at these headquarters under orders from the War Department, and was instructed to report to the commander of the District of Arkansas, and was by him directed to collect the absentees of his regiment. Colonel Griffith, commanding the Seventeenth Arkansas Cavalry, subsequently reported here, with instructions to collect the absentees from his regiment. Every aid was given him to effect this object, and he received authority by special order to recruit for the Eleventh and Seventeenth Regiments in the counties of Sebastian, Yell, and Perry, and north of the Arkansas River. When Colonel Griffith was ordered to report to General Hays with his regiment (the Seventeenth), he was directed to turn over the men of the Eleventh to Colonel Logan. I cannot find any communication from General Hays claiming Colonel Logan and his command, nor can I find that any orders have been issued at these headquarters forbidding them to report to General Hays. If they belonged to the other side, they were covered by the provisions of Department Orders, No. 72. Certainly had the matter been referred to me by General Hays I would promptly have carried out the instructions of the War Department. The men in McCord's regiment, claimed by Colonel Griffith appeared, on examination, to belong neither to the Eleventh nor to the Seventeenth Regiment, but had been left in this department when General Hindman's troops crossed the river, and the Secretary of War had authorized General Holmes to assign them to commands.

Pursuant to instructions contained in General Cooper's letter of May 2, 1864, such men as applied for transfers to commands in this department were assigned, awaiting the action of the War Department on their applications. Upon the arrival of General Hays this system was suspended. Less than 100 assignments were made under its operations. Most of the applications have been returned from Richmond disapproved, and in every case the applicant was immediately ordered to report to Brigadier-General Hays. The only exceptions to the provisions of General Orders, No. 72, were the few assignments above referred to, made under the authority granted in General Cooper's letter of May 2, 1864. General Hays was so informed in a communication from department headquarters dated September 29, 1864, herewith inclosed, marked A. I am surprised at the complaints made by General Hays in his letter of October 3, 1864. By reference to General Orders, No. 72, department headquarters, it will be seen that his letter was written but a few days after the announcement of his arrival and the publication of that order, before a sufficient time had elapsed for its promulgation to the troops, and before its effects could be known. Had General Hays made to me the complaints which he did to General Bragg, in his letters numbered 3 and 4, he would have received full explanations and entire cooperation in carrying out his instructions. I believe that General Orders, No. 72, would effect all that was contemplated by the War Department. The inclosed copies of Department Orders, No. 11 and 54, of 1863, and No. 2, 1864,* are evidences of the efforts made by me to return absentees and deserters to their commands east of the Mississippi. In every case all the aid possible has been promptly given to officers engaged in collecting them. I have also the honor to inclose a copy of General Orders, No. 20 (1865),† which was published on the receipt of the copy of the communication of General Hays, indorsed at the War Office November 26, 1864. I have been thus explicit in answering that communication, as I believe that if the facts had been fully understood at the War Department I would not have received the censure indorsed thereon. I request that this communication may be laid before His Excellency the President, by whom that endorsement was made.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

* Not found as inclosures, but see Vol. XXII, Part II, pp. 837 and 1068, and Vol. XXXIV, Part II, p. 851.
† See Order of March 13, p. 1422.
General SAMUEL COOPER,

Adjudant and Inspector General, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to state that the following officers or agents have been recently sent into this department by Col. W. Richardson Hunt and Maj. T. H. Price, for the purpose of obtaining supplies of lead, viz, Maj. J. B. Pleasants, Captain Nance, Lieut. R. H. Dickey. The fact of these officers following each other closely, together with the instructions which have been furnished them, evidences a great solicitude in obtaining a supply of lead east of the Mississippi River. I am satisfied that lead can be obtained directly from Mexico if proper energy is displayed and proper orders are issued from the War Department. It never will be by the overland route and across the Mississippi. The streams are now out of their banks, the bottoms are submerged, and the country is impassable for trains of wagons. The deficiency of transportation here is great and there is no money to make purchases with. Impressments cannot be resorted to under the law without the money to pay for them, and the people refuse to submit to it. The lead will have to be transported a distance of nearly a thousand miles from the Rio Grande to the Mississippi, and should it ever reach the banks of that river its successful crossing is very problematical. Capture would most probably be the result of the attempt. The ordnance department finds great difficulty in supplying the wants of our army owing to the distance it has to be transported and the want of funds for payment. The little that we have on hand, if successfully crossed, would afford no relief. Lead can be obtained in any amount in Mexico. The present Government will not oppose obstacles in its exportation. I would therefore suggest that either or both of the following courses be pursued: First. That the Hon. P. W. Gray, agent of the Treasury Department, be directed to obtain control of one or more of the mines in Mexico; that schooners be freighted for ports or points on the coast of Florida or elsewhere, as might be judged best by the War Department, shipments to be made in chartered vessels, cotton deposited as indemnity to owners of vessels in case of loss, with high freights or charters offered and premiums for successful runs. Second. That means (cotton or corn) be placed in the hands of Major-General Huger, chief of ordnance bureau Trans-Mississippi Department, with instructions to make purchases in Mexico, to have the lead run to the coast of Florida; or that he be authorized to contract with parties for delivery of lead at desired ports or points and empowered to offer such high rates as will make the matter a success, he in that case to have sole control of means of payment and management of the business. Responsible parties will contract here with General Huger, if he is furnished with adequate means of payment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,

General.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT’S CAVALRY BRIGADE,

Lodi Plantation, March 18, 1865.

JAMES L. LOBDELL,

Quartermaster’s Agent:

SIR: Capt. H. B. Stevens, assistant adjutant and inspector general on the staff of Brigadier-General Thomas, officially reports that you stated to him that cotton has passed the pickets at or near Bayou Rouge or some other points. In view of this statement I call on you to aid me in discovering the guilty parties, and therefore request you to forward to me a statement of the time when such cotton passed the points, if possible, where it crossed, and the name of any party, soldier, officer, or citizen, in any way connected with it. On the 11th instant I addressed you a letter of similar import as this and based on your statements made in a letter to Major Hays, chief quartermaster, to which letter I have as yet received no reply. As I am not disposed to believe that you would make statements of the character attributed to you without proper knowledge upon the subject, I fully expect to be enabled through you to detect the guilty parties. I am determined, as far as I am able, to arrest every person, whether officer or soldier, under my command who may be accused, upon any evidence worthy of credit, of being guilty of illicit trading with the enemy, and I request you, not only in this but in any other case of unlawful trade with the enemy or improper evasion of our picket-line, now or hereafter arising and which may be known to you, to give me information in writing and at the same time to notify the nearest outpost officer so that if possible he may seize the cotton or arrest persons unlawfully passing our lines. Captain Prescott will hand you this, and I beg you to furnish him, at your earliest convenience, an answer to my two letters.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. CAV. FORCES, FRONT LINES, DIST. OF WEST LA.,

Col. I. F. HARRISON,
Commanding Harrison's Brigade:

COLONEL: You are hereby informed that on this day, in virtue of superior orders, I assume command of all the cavalry on the front lines, including therein your brigade. All your reports and papers of every kind will be forwarded to these headquarters.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Lodi, March 18, 1865.

Capt. A. O. P. Pickens,
Commanding Outposts:

CAPTAIN: The eight bales of cotton detected in attempting an evasion of our lines will be immediately burned by you, as we have not transportation to carry it into the interior and secure it from the enemy. What steps have you taken to obey my orders "to pursue the twenty-two bales of cotton east of the Atchafalaya and burn it if found?" In addition to your pickets you will establish a patrol to pass up and down the banks of the Atchafalaya, particularly at night. Lieutenant Stafford reports that there are pirogues and skiffs on the Atchafalaya not under guard. How does this happen? Twenty-two bales of cotton passed your lines and eight more were detected and prevented passing by the courier officer, and up to the present time you have been unable, apparently, to detect any guilty parties. Whenever cotton is moved to exposed positions with the intention of being passed through your lines without permission it will be destroyed. I am looking for your report on this cotton smuggling with much interest.

Yours, &c.,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. DISTRICT OF INDIAN TERRITORY,

No. 74.

Fort Towson, C. N., March 18, 1865.

I. Quartermasters at the posts and depots within this district are hereby directed to issue to the indigent farmers, who cannot otherwise procure it, seed corn at the rate of one bushel for each ten acres intended to be planted in that crop, when presented with a certificate of principal or district chief, setting forth that the applicant cannot otherwise procure the same.

By order of Brig. Gen. D. H. Cooper:

T. M. SCOTT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Cavalry Forces, Front Lines,

Lodi, March 19, 1865.

Col. I. F. HARRISON,

Commanding Brigade:

Colonel: The inclosed copy* of a telegraphic communication to department headquarters is sent you for your information and government. To ascertain whether the enemy intend advancing on Monroe, you will immediately send out scouting parties on the threatened roads until you open communication with our nearest cavalry in the direction of Camden, from whom information can be obtained and forwarded to you of the progress of the raid. The roads leading down the Bayou Bartholomew should be observed. If Major Buckner, chief of staff, is still using the Fourth Regiment of Cavalry and you require troops from this regiment to make your reconnaissances, you will apply to him in my name for permission to order sufficient detachments from this command to carry out these instructions. If Major Buckner should be where you can consult him you will advise with him relative to what orders should be issued, so as to hold McNeill's regiment ready to cross to the west side of the Ouachita without delay when necessary, and if he should not be present you will, by my orders, detach enough troops from the regiment to make the reconnaissance ordered, and will issue the proper orders to hold the regiment in such a position that it can be crossed without delay as soon as you may be satisfied that the enemy's raid is threatening Monroe. You will inform Major Buckner of any order you may give to this regiment. The rest of your command will be held so as to be under your hands, to be disposed of as future developments may direct. This will be borne in mind by you, that if the enemy advance toward Monroe you may reasonably expect that co-operating forces and gun-boats will move up the Black and Ouachita Rivers. The present stage of the roads and streams renders it doubtful whether the enemy will undertake to push the forces spoken of in the inclosed telegram as far as Monroe, but prudence dictates that the instructions contained herein should be carried out. If the enemy should advance as far as Monroe a small party of cavalry will be kept between him and the Shreveport roads, and any advance in that direction will be promptly communicated to department headquarters at Shreveport and district headquarters at Natchitoches. You will acknowledge the receipt of this communication immediately and promptly forward all the information you may obtain.

*Not found.

Very respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Colonel: Brigadier-General McNair, commanding division, directs that you, assuming command of your own, Shaver's, and Gaither's regiments, march at once with your command to this point or wherever the division may be. Upon your arrival the regiments under your command will rejoin their respective brigades.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,

Col. L. A. Bringier,
Commanding Seventh Louisiana Cavalry:

Colonel: Captain Murphy reports that some days ago indications were manifested of the intention of the enemy to fit out a number of small boats in the Béauf. If this be so, it is probable that some operations might be directed against Captain Murphy's detachment. If such should be the case, you will assume command of all the companies of your regiment and conduct their military operations. The expedition sent by the enemy in the manner indicated could not be very formidable, and it is highly probable that he is ignorant of the vicinity of your regiment; and hence while meditating a surprise might be surprised himself. Until it is determined that some degree of permanency is attached to the position of your regiment, I do not deem it advisable to change the relations of the advanced post with these headquarters. A copy of this communication will be sent to Captain Murphy, who will be directed to inform you immediately of any indication threatening an attack from the enemy on him.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
General Orders, HQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 23.

So much of General Orders, No. 11, current series, as assigns Maj. D. N. Speer, inspector of field transportation, to the charge of that department in the District of West Louisiana is hereby revoked. Maj. George Tucker, inspector of field transportation, is charged with the operations of his department in the District of West Louisiana. He will establish his office at Shreveport, La., and report to and receive his instructions from Maj. C. D. Hill, chief inspector Trans-Mississippi Department.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

INDEPENDENCE, TEX., March 20, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. Price:

Dear Sir: Since my interview with you in Washington I have determined to remain here until my exchange or release from parole was duly announced, and until I could ascertain through my friends what position I am destined to fill on reaching the army. Your kind promise to find me employment I remember with gratitude, and I would prefer serving with you to any man in the Confederacy. General Churchill has offered to use his influence to get me the position of paymaster in his division, and requests me to accept it. I am doubtful of his power to get the appointment; indeed, there are already so many unemployed officers that I imagine the chances of a new appointment poor or doubtful. Failing to get a desirable position, I would attach myself to the Reserves under General Robertson. Now, general, I am anxious to return to the army, and at the same time find myself under the necessity of economizing and must, if I can manage to avoid a long and expensive trip, and would with that view prefer remaining here until my position is decided and not go to the army or Shreveport to remain there an indefinite time unemployed. I am under obligations to you for many kind wishes and hope you will lay me under additional ones by letting me hear from you and giving me your advice in this emergency. I am looking anxiously for the result of the court of inquiry you demanded, and have no doubt of your triumph and that your enemies will be confounded, &c. I met your son to-day. Your family are well, and he is getting well of the dog bite. I see no material change in affairs in this part of the country since you left. Those in authority seem to anticipate an early invasion and that the Rio Grande will probably be the theater. It is to be hoped not, since the supplies for this country all come from that quarter and trade appears brisk. I imagine the Government officials might procure a full supply of clothing for the army from that quarter. General Robertson appears very active in preparing the Reserves for duty in the event of an invasion.

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. J. McCREERY.

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, March 21, 1865.

His Excellency P. Murrah,
Governor of Texas:

Governor: I have the honor to inclose to Your Excellency a letter from the Secretary of War, with the report of the Indian agent, in reference to the friendly disposition of certain Indian tribes who have heretofore been hostile to us. You will not fail to see at once the great importance to the Confederate States, and more especially to the State of Texas, of keeping these savage tribes, if possible, in friendly alliance with ourselves and in hostility to our enemies. To attain this most desirable end, and to carry out the instructions of the President, I have adopted the suggestion of Major Yore, and have concluded to meet the Indian chiefs early in May, if possible, at Council Grove. Brigadier-General Cooper, commanding Indian Territory, strongly recommended to me the selection of Brig. Gen. J. W. Throckmorton as one of the commissioners to represent the Confederate States in this matter, and feeling that no more efficient or prudent man could be selected, I have taken the liberty of inclusing him an appointment as such commissioner. The great distance to be traveled and the near approach of the time for the assembly of the chiefs made it highly important that the selection should be made at once. I was thus prevented by necessity from conferring with you on this subject so important to your State. I trust the short time allowed me for action will be a sufficient excuse for my failure to do so. I also hope that you will fully agree with me as to the propriety of Brigadier-General Throckmorton being present at this meeting and allow him to go upon this mission. I am not certain as to the precise locality of Council Grove. Should it be the point of that name in Kansas, near and south of Fort Riley, General Throckmorton will not be expected to attend. Some other more convenient point for meeting the wild prairie Indians will, however, no doubt be agreed upon, at which his presence will be necessary.

I am, governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant, E. KIRBY SMITH, General.

GENERAL ORDERS, HQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT, No. 24. Shreveport, La., March 31, 1865.

All persons acting as drill masters who have not received appointments from the War Department will immediately rejoin their respective commands, their acting appointments having been revoked. Those not selected from military organizations will be immediately enrolled and assigned to commands by the enrolling officer of the district in which they may now be serving.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith: S. S. ANDERSON, Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY FORCES, FRONT LINES, Lodi, March 31, 1865.

Capt. J. G. CLARKE, Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I respectfully request to be informed if it is expected that I am to issue any order to the cavalry on the Black and Ouachita Rivers relative to the prevention of the cotton trade, or whether it is the desire that this matter should be controlled by Major Buckner, chief of staff, District of West Louisiana, now in Northern Louisiana. Having taken command of the cavalry on the front lines but a few days past, I have received no official information of the state of affairs relative to this trade, but I learn unofficially that there are several boats under flag of truce in the Black or Ouachita Rivers from whom supplies are received and to whom cotton is delivered. I therefore respectfully request to be specifically instructed whether I am expected to enforce General Orders, No. 30, district headquarters, in North Louisiana, or whether the supervision and control of the cotton trade is vested in any other officer. I have not already issued any orders upon this subject, for the reason that while in charge of cavalry head-quarters I received information that our relations with these flag-of-truce boats were specially controlled by superior authority.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

MAJOR: I have the honor this morning to report all quiet along our entire front up to latest dates; at mouth of Red River, along the Atchafalaya and Courtableau up to 8 a.m. yesterday, 21st instant, and on the Teche and at Berwick Bay at 7 p.m. 20th instant. A gunboat appeared on the 19th in Cote Blanche Bay, some twenty-five miles northwest of Franklin. She was supposed to be looking for scouts and blockaders. The water was still rising at mouth of Red River about one inch in twenty-four hours. The pickets immediately on north and south banks of river reported all quiet yesterday morning.

Respectfully, &c.,

Brig. Gen. A. P. Bagby,
Commanding Cavalry Forces:

GENERAL: I am satisfied that the forces of the enemy concentrated recently at New Orleans have been greatly exaggerated. I merely express this to you as my opinion and not as a fact. The only troops of General Thomas’ command that have reached New Orleans, as far as I know, are of A. J. Smith’s Sixteenth Army Corps. This corps is composed of three divisions, commanded at the battle of Nashville by McArthur, Garrard, and Moore, respectively. Thomas had four corps in that battle. The Twenty-third (Schofield’s) is now in North Caro-
The Sixth (A. J. Smith's) is in Louisiana. The Fourth Corps (Wood's), consisting also of three divisions, I believe to be in Tennessee, from the fact that I have never heard of its arrival at New Orleans. The last I heard of it was still in Tennessee. The last of the four corps was Steedman's, which was a provisional corps only, consisting of cavalry, negro troops, and some detached brigades. The removal of either of these last two named corps would have reduced the Federal forces in Tennessee and North Georgia so much that I think it hardly probable to have been done. This, then, would give Canby Smith's corps and Steele's troops, including some cavalry from Memphis, in addition to the troops of the Department of the Gulf, the principal body of which is under Granger. I would infer from these facts that Canby cannot in the last six weeks have been re-enforced over 20,000 troops. These are merely my inferences, derived from such limited data as I possess. Of course, the secret service must be in possession of a detailed statement of the troops at New Orleans, which will either confirm or overthrow these theories of mine. I have, nevertheless, considered it my duty to express these ideas to you.

Yours, truly,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CAMDEN, March 22, 1865.

Maj. Gen. STERLING PRICE:

GENERAL: Yours of the 20th has been received. I should like very much to see you and, as you wish, have a full and free conversation. There are many things about which we should talk, on some of which I would wish your advice. I thank you most sincerely for the flattering confidence you have manifested in my friendship and ability by proposing to trust the defense of your well-earned reputation as a general in my hands, although I am satisfied you can select much able counsel. But, general, from the orders I received last night I am satisfied we are on the eve of an active campaign. For many reasons I would not wish to be out of it. It would produce dissatisfaction among many officers and soldiers of the division if the command of it, by the absence of you and myself, should devolve on another. Officers to whom I have shown your letter have so expressed themselves to me. I hope, therefore, you will excuse me. Wishing you a successful and complete vindication from all that may be charged or insinuated against you, I remain your friend, truly.

M. M. PARSONS.

Maj. Gen. J. G. WALKER,
Commanding District of Texas:

The probability of enemy operating in Texas calls for concentration to oppose him. Forney is en route, is your senior, and would necessarily claim command. I have ordered Magruder to Texas. On being relieved make your selection between commanding District of Arkansas or a division of infantry. Answer.

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.
Brigadier-General Boggs,

Chief of Staff, Trans-Mississippi Department:

GENERAL: I would respectfully ask that a steamer be ordered to Minden immediately to transport the sick and baggage of Shaver's and Davie's regiments to this point. Owing to the condition of the roads, it is impossible at present to transport them by land, and the teams of these three regiments were so jaded and worn out from constant use in the District of Arkansas that it was impossible to do otherwise than store them. Your earliest attention is solicited to the above.

I am, general, very respectfully, &c.,

E. McNair,
Brigadier-General, Commanding Division.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 68. \ Adjt. and Insp. General’s Office, Richmond, March 23, 1865.

XXXVII. Harrison’s, McNeill’s, and Capers’ regiments, Louisiana Cavalry (Third, Fourth, and Fifth), are constituted a brigade to the command of which Brig. Gen. Henry Gray is hereby assigned. He will report to General E. K. Smith, commanding Trans-Mississippi Department, for that purpose.

Capt. J. G. Clarke,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Forces Front Lines:

CAPTAIN: Colonel Harrison reports to me that “there are now in the Ouachita River the following Federal steamers (under flag of truce), viz., Chuck, Zephyr, Rob Roy, and Music;” that they are under the orders and control of Maj. J. A. Buckner, chief of staff, District of West Louisiana, who is acting under orders from lieutenant-general commanding. There is a guard of six or eight men under a lieutenant on each boat, who receive their orders from Major Buckner, who also grants all permits for the purpose of going on board of them. This furnishes you with all the information in my power, and unless otherwise instructed by you I shall not deem it my duty to give any instructions relative to the enforcement of district General Orders, No 30, in North Louisiana, as doubtless Major Buckner, chief of staff, has instructions on this subject.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. Brent,
Brigadier-General.
Maj. J. P. Smith, Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: The Atchafalaya and the mouth of Red River rose two inches in twenty-four hours previous to 11 a.m. yesterday. The Mississippi has again risen. On the 21st instant an expedition of the enemy came up Grand Lake and landed fifty negro troops just back of Charenton, on the Bayou Teche. Captain Murphy immediately attacked them with twenty men of Company F, Seventh Louisiana Cavalry, and drove them back to their transport, which opened with artillery on him. The expedition then left and sailed for Bayou Pigeon. I do not know whether a certain truce reported in New Orleans papers to have been made between the Federal General McKane [McKean] and the Confederate Captain Ratliff has been violated by the expedition, as I have no knowledge of its terms. I have ordered Captain Murphy's detachment to be re-enforced by another company of the Seventh Louisiana Cavalry, in view of this expedition and another which is being prepared by the enemy in the waters of the Black, in rear of Brashear City. The prohibition against the trade from New Orleans to Matamoras has been removed, and it is understood that it was originally caused by the suspicion of the military authorities that Col. Harai Robinson, provost-marshal, was speculating in permits. I send you the New Orleans paper of the 20th instant, received from Captain Murphy on the lower Teche.

Yours, &c.,

J. L. BRENT, Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. CAV. FORCES, FRONT LINES, BRENT'S CAV. BRIG., Lodi Plantation, March 24, 1865.

Maj. J. P. Smith, Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: Everything on the Red River, Atchafalaya, Bayou Teche, Black and Ouachita Rivers are reported as quiet. Nine gun-boats at the mouth of the Red River. Colonel Harrison, on the 22d, says that nothing has been heard of the column of the enemy reported from department headquarters as advancing from Arkansas toward Camden. His pickets are on the Bayou Bartholomew, and on the 19th instant he was ordered by me to open communication with the nearest body of our troops in the vicinity of Camden. On the 22d one steamer loaded with infantry passed up and two with cavalry passed down the Mississippi. Scouts still continue to bring reports that the main body of Federal troops have left New Orleans. Captain Murphy and Lieutenant Collins both forwarded papers of the 21st from New Orleans. The crevasses reported heretofore about twenty two miles below Alexandria have greatly enlarged themselves. There are five in all, and I fear the road on the south bank will be lost to us. In view of this fact I have given orders to keep up our communications with Fort De Russy and below by crossing to the north bank of Red River, at Madame David's.

Very respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,

Lieut. C. A. MOUTON,
Aide-de-Camp, Vermillionville:

LIEUTENANT: You are directed by the brigadier-general commanding to acquaint yourself as thoroughly as possible with the number of hands left on the plantations in La Fayette and Vermillion Parishes, and to report to him at as early day as practicable the names of the planters who are making their hands do faithful work, and also of those who are not. You will impress on the planters in his name the necessity of their planting as much corn as possible for the support of the citizens and such detachments of our army as may be necessary for the protection of this country. You will warn all planters not to plant more cotton than is required to pay their State and Confederate taxes, and you must be very careful to report those who plant an excessive amount of cotton. Give the people to understand that they must work their negroes to the fullest extent in cultivating corn. Their failure to do so will be regarded as an evidence of indifference and disloyalty to our cause. We are all well here and send our love.

Very respectfully,

D. F. BOYD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Lodi Plantation, March 24, 1865.

Capt. L. D. PRESCOTT,
Commanding Outposts, &c.:

CAPTAIN: The brigadier-general commanding directs me to inquire of you whether the planters of Saint Landry are taking steps to use their available means of planting as recommended by him through you. He directs that you look closely to this matter. Report at your earliest convenience such planters as have negroes left and not making them useful in putting in crops for the necessary support of our people, and on the other hand reporting such as are planting more cotton than is sufficient to enable them to pay their State and Confederate taxes. You are expected to consider it as a part of your duty to see the planters of Saint Landry and impress upon them the necessity of raising as much corn as possible for the support of our army and citizens. As to giving you authority to give sick men leaves of absence, it is impossible under the law. But you are bound to take the best care possible of your sick, and if you have not suitable hospital arrangements for caring for them properly, they must not suffer; and under those circumstances, using your own discretion, you may, if you see fit, allow sick men to go home for a few days, keeping your eye well on them and counting them present sick, but you must take great care that such indulgence is not abused, and remember that you are as much responsible for the conduct of such men as if they were in your camp.

Very respectfully,

D. F. BOYD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Commanding Detachment of Dismounted Cavalry:

COLONEL: Brig. Gen. E. McNair, commanding, directs that you continue your march with the dismounted cavalry under your command until you arrive at the east bank of Red River, where you will remain until the morning following your arrival, when boats will be in readiness to cross your command. Brigadier-General McNair desires to know if Cook's entire battalion has been dismounted or whether the men under your command are detached bodies of the troops from the different commands of Cabell's brigade.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. S. JOHNSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 26. } Shreveport, La., March 27, 1865.

Pursuant to instructions from the War Department, Brig. Gen. F. T. Nicholls, Provisional Army, C. S., will relieve Brig. Gen. E. Greer, Provisional Army, C. S., of the duties of superintendent of the bureau of conscription in the Trans-Mississippi Department. The general commanding takes this occasion to express his high appreciation of the services of Brigadier-General Greer in the discharge of the onerous duties of this bureau, which, from a state of utter disorganization and confusion, has under his administration been thoroughly and completely systematized, as also his regard for the firmness, justness, and impartiality that has characterized his official conduct.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, } Hqrs. Trans-Mississippi Department,
No. 73. } Shreveport, La., March 27, 1865.

IX. Brig. Gen. E. Greer will relieve Brig. Gen. J. B. Robertson of the command of the Reserve Corps in the State of Texas. On being relieved Brigadier-General Robertson will report to Major-General Magruder, commanding District of Texas, &c., for assignment to the command of one of the brigades in the division of Brigadier-General Maxey.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

P. B. LEEDS,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Cavalry Forces, Front Lines,
Lodi, March 27, 1865.

Col. I. F. Harrison,
Commanding, &c.:

Colonel: I respectfully request you to take the most suitable means to procure and forward to me information concerning the strength of the Federal forces at Vidalia, Natchez, or any other point in front of you, the name of the commanding officer, brigade, and division composing the forces, specifying, when practicable, the number of the regiment. By frequent and careful examination of persons coming from the Federal lines, statements of deserters and newspapers, and a careful record of all data received by you, in a little while the information desired will begin to develop itself. The importance of knowing the description and style of the regiments, brigades, and divisions is apparent from the fact that in this way we can identify the transfer of troops. The command of the Mississippi by the enemy necessitates on our part as particular observations of the garrisons and forces at Vicksburg and Natchez as if these points were on the west bank of the river. Proper instructions embodying these views will be forwarded to the outpost officers and scouts, who will be able by intelligence and energy to furnish you with many particulars, and such other means will be adopted by you as your discretion may select.

Very respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

General Orders, } Hqrs. Dist. of Indian Territory,
No. 12. } Fort Towson, C. N., March 27, 1865.

I. All officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, or persons serving with or attached to the army in this district are strictly prohibited from committing any depredations or outrages upon the persons or property of citizens, or other persons lawfully within the Indian Territory; and are required to protect them and their property against depredations, outrages, or wrongs on the part of others.

II. All officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers are required to arrest and turn over for safe-keeping, to the commanding officer of the nearest military post or station, any person or persons found violating or known to have violated the provisions of paragraph 1 of this order, with charges in writing setting forth the nature of the offense, the time and place, together with names of witnesses, to the end that persons so offending may be dealt with according to law.

By order of Brig. Gen. D. H. Cooper:

T. M. SCOTT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HOUSTON, March 27, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. E. SLAUGHTER,
Commanding West Sub-District, Brownsville:

Inclosed with this you will receive my reply to the propositions of Major-General Wallace, of the U. S. Army, which, after you have read, you will please forward by flag of truce to Brazos Santiago, where I presume he is still awaiting my answer, as he has not communicated with Brigadier-General Hawes, at Galveston.* It was natural in you to agree to meet Major-General Wallace under flag of truce, believing, as you doubtless did, that the propositions he would submit for discussion would be such as might lead to an honorable peace and such as officers jealous of the honor of their country would entertain. Yet I regret that you should have consented to entertain, or rather receive, the proposals actually made, since to have acceded to them would be the blackest treason to the Confederacy. No one is more desirous of terminating this war honorably than myself, but I beg that in future you will exercise the greatest caution and that you will not permit yourself to be drawn into such discussions as took place in your interview with Major-General Wallace. The fact that an officer of his high rank in the enemy's army is found at so remote a corner of the Confederacy has in itselitself something sinister and suspicious. If the terms he was prepared to propose had been such as one could honorably entertain, it would not have been necessary for him to have come to the Rio Grande to open negotiations. The nature of his propositions sufficiently explain why his overtures were not made to our authorities nearer Richmond, and they should have been returned to him without discussion, as they would have been by our Government.

J. G. WALKER,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, * HQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 27. * SHREVEPORT, La., March 28, 1865.

I. The following orders, issued by the War Department, regulating the Reserves and Bureau of Conscription, are republished for the information of the department:

II. The generals of Reserves will hereafter control the enrolling officers and conduct the business of conscription and enrollment in their respective States, under the direction of the Secretary of War, through the Conscript Bureau.

* See March 27, p. 1275.
III. Commanders of conscripts and of camps of instruction will be under the direction of the generals of Reserves.

IV. As soon as practicable, all officers and men now employed in the enrolling service, whether as enrolling officers, conscript guards, clerks, or otherwise, except such as are retired or assigned to light duty by the medical boards, will be relieved by details from the Reserve forces and sent to the field.

V. All applications for exemption and detail will be transmitted to the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription for decision. The office of Congressional district enrolling officer is abolished, and reports and returns of the commandants of conscripts will be made to the Bureau of Conscription, and a copy of each will also be furnished to the generals of Reserves. An officer may be assigned to duty in each Congressional district by the generals of Reserves as inspector of conscription.

VI. The troops raised under the act of Congress, approved February 17, 1864, styled "Reserves," constitute a peculiar force, auxiliary to but in a measure distinct from the more permanent army, and are exclusively under the orders of the general officers assigned to their command in the several States, subject to the following modifications:

When a commander of active forces requires the Reserves as re-enforcements, application will be made to the Secretary of War or directly to the general commanding the Reserves; and when Reserves are assigned, in pursuance of such application, to a district, department, or army commander, they become, during the period of such assignment, subject to his control, to the extent that he alone will direct their military movements, determine all applications for furlough, and be responsible for their being furnished with the necessary supplies, equipments, &c.; but questions appertaining to their permanent organization into companies, battalions, and regiments, the grant of discharges, details, &c., will at all times be determined by the general commanding Reserves.

When Reserves are assigned to the active forces by the War Department, its order will be necessary for their recall; but when transferred by the general commanding Reserves, he may recall them at his discretion, the orders therefor being transmitted through the commander of the district, department, or army in which such Reserves may be serving; but if their detention be deemed by him indispensable, he shall immediately submit the question to this office for decision of the War Department, in the meantime retaining the Reserves affected by such orders. During the assignment of Reserves with the active forces the commanding officer will have punctually transmitted to the general commanding Reserves a monthly return of such Reserve troops, similar to that required by paragraph 445, Army Regulations, to be made to the Adjutant and Inspector General. Whenever Reserves are serving with active forces, no discrimination in the issue of rations and supplies of camp equipage between the two classes of troops will be permitted.

VII. Generals commanding Reserves in the several States will without delay select and send officers, one to each Congressional district, empowered to summons and after inspection forward to the camps of instruction all persons holding certificates of permanent disability, and such persons assigned to light duty as in his judgment appear likely to be adjudged qualified for active service. All such as may upon examination be pronounced by select medical boards so qualified will be assigned to duty in the field.
The inspectors of conscription may be charged with this additional duty in the absence of other suitable officers.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY FORCES, FRONT LINES,
Lodi Plantation, March 28, 1865.

Maj. J. P. Smith,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: I have the honor to report all quiet on the front lines of this district. According to the latest intelligence Red River was rising slowly at its mouth, about one inch in twenty-four hours on yesterday, 27th instant, at 8 a.m., and was falling about the same rate at David's Ferry. Two steamers passed Saint Joseph on 21st instant, going down the river, loaded with troops (infantry, it is supposed); another passed down on same day, loaded with cavalry. A communication of 17th instant received this morning from Capt. W. B. Barrow, east of the Atchafalaya, states that Captain Morvant, of Crescent Regiment, and Lieut. Ed. White, of Captain Barrow's company, were captured by a Federal raiding party from Morganza on the 12th instant. Captain Barrow and Captain Carmouche pursued the enemy, killing 2 and wounding 8 men, besides the colonel commanding; the names of the colonel and command are not stated, but they are supposed to be a detachment of Fourteenth New York Cavalry. I inclose New Orleans papers of 25th instant and Saint Louis Democrat of 18th instant.

Very respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

(Copy to Capt. J. G. Clarke, assistant adjutant-general.)

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 28. } Shreveport, La., March 29, 1865.

I. The enrollment of conscripts will be made by the commandants of conscripts, under the direction of generals of Reserves in the several States. Applications for exemptions will be transmitted through the commandants of conscripts and generals of Reserves to the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription for his action. All persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years found fit for field service will be assigned to commands in the field, under the direction of the generals of Reserves of the several States. Those found unfit for field service but fit for staff duty between those ages will be sent to camps of instruction to be detailed in the staff departments, under the direction of the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription. Those unfit for duty, either in the field or staff departments, will receive certificates of exemption from the Medical Congressional Examining Board. All details from the Reserves will be made by the generals of Reserves in the several States, under the direction of the department commander.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS BRENT'S CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Lodi Plantation, March 29, 1865.

Capt. L. D. Prescott,
Commanding, &c.

CAPTAIN: The question of corn is one worthy of your gravest attention. The heavy drains on and the short crops in the Red River Valley admonish us that but little assistance can be rendered you from that source. This question is not to be considered alone in its relation to forage, but as regards food itself, and this latter aspect is to be the controlling one. You must take immediate steps to inform yourself if there be a sufficient amount of corn on hand to feed your troops and the people of your parish, and if there be a surplus on hand that and that alone must be devoted to forage purposes. We must frankly meet the necessities of our situation, and if necessary our horses must be put on grass, in order that the people and troops may not suffer for food. We are now on grass here, and the grass is not as good and nutritious as with you. The horses of the couriers must have preference over other horses, and you are instructed to give them that preference so far as to issue them small rations, not exceeding six pounds. The horses at your main camp must be grazed, and when not worked no more than a few ears, not exceeding three pounds, be given them per day. When detachments are sent out a preference should be given them. Colonel Bringier has already reduced his regiment to three pounds, and will probably, under instructions, make no issue to horses in camp. You will not vary from these instructions until further orders, and you will forward me as soon as practicable your report, showing whether, in your opinion, there be a sufficiency of corn for food, and what surplus, if any, can be devoted to forage. You must, by your personal influence and through your officers and men, stimulate the production of corn in every possible way, and where planters do not cultivate their proper breadth of corn crops you must admonish them and in addition report them to me. As before instructed, every assistance will be rendered the planters, and when their negroes are refractory their obedience will be enforced by you by details. The power of granting passes for four days is conferred on you, to be used only in favor of those whose presence at home is necessary for the production of crops, and prompt return in all cases will be insisted on. A separate register or list of all four-days' passes will be kept by you, showing the name of the party to whom granted, its date, and the date of return, which register will be forwarded to these headquarters on Saturday of each week.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, (HDQRS. TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
No. 29. )
Shreveport, La., March 30, 1865.

Until further orders all negroes conscribed under the act of Congress approved February 17, 1864, will be turned over by the commandants of slave labor in their respective districts to the following officers of the Engineer Corps: Maj. R. P. Rowley, chief engineer District of Texas, &c.; Capt. C. M. Randolph, chief engineer District of West Louisiana; Lieut. H. K. Hodges, acting chief engineer District of Arkansas. The chief engineer of each district will, under the direction of the chief of the Engineer Bureau, organize them into gangs of 100 each, selecting four of the number as foremen, over whom will be placed one manager and two overseers. Every eight gangs will constitute a section, for which a superintendent will be selected. Should any negro run away the chief engineer of the district will notify the commandant of conscripts of the State, who is required to take such steps immediately, through the enrolling officers, as will secure his return. Should the enrolling officer be satisfied that the runaway negro is lurking in the vicinity of his home he will enroll and forward another negro in his stead. The commandants of slave labor will make monthly reports to the chief of Engineer Bureau of all negroes received and delivered under their direction.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:

S. S. ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 76. ADJT. AND INSPP. GENERAL'S OFFICE, Richmond, Va., March 30, 1865.

The attention of the general commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department, and through him of his subordinates, is directed to complaints in the administration of the act of Congress approved February 6, 1864, imposing regulations upon the commerce of the Confederate States, to provide for the public defense, and of the rules adopted by the President the 11th of March, 1864, concerning the overland trade with Mexico by the military authorities in that department. The act of Congress and the regulations adopted by the President in accordance with the act, and to carry it into execution as to the commerce on the high seas, and the overland trade with Mexico, were designed with a view to secure the application of the cotton, tobacco, military and naval stores, sugar, molasses, and rice to the great object of providing supplies for the Army and necessaries for the people during the continuance of the present war. To accomplish this purpose so much of the trade as might be carried on overland with Mexico was limited to men of approved loyalty and fidelity, and each exporter was required to give bond to invest a certain portion of the net proceeds of the merchandise exported in articles of consumption not prohibited by law, and to import them into the country. The rules adopted by the President were designed to insure the fulfillment of this object. It was not the intention of the Congress, nor is it the design of the regulations, to limit the dominion of the owner of these articles while they remain under his control within the Confederate States. The act of Congress prohibits the exportation of the articles except in accordance with uniform regulations. But if there be no intention to export them from the country, and if there be no reasonable ground for believing that exportation is intended, there is no power given to the Confederate authorities, civil or military, by the act of Congress alluded to to interfere with the property.

The act of Congress provides for certain forfeitures and penalties against persons, and for seizure of the articles mentioned in the contingency that certain acts are performed having for their object the violation of the law, and the regulations under similar conditions authorize the interposition of the military authorities to aid in the execution of the law. But the military authorities cannot be too cir-cumspect and cautious in the performance of this duty. They must not suppose the power to seize all property of the kind mentioned that may be found laden on any vessel or vehicle exists. The power arises only when the officer has reason to believe that it was laden for exportation or there are circumstances indicative of a purpose to export it contrary to the terms of the act of Congress. This Department, in Order No. 43, of 1864, has explained this act, and also in letters to the generals commanding departments, to which reference is now made. The Department has been informed that many arbitrary and causeless seizures of property in transitus have been made; that the owners of the articles have been exposed to rapacity and imposition, and have been deprived of their property by officers and agents of the Government; that vexatious requisitions, not warranted by law, have been made; that delays and difficulties have been interposed in the delivery of licenses, and that exactions not warranted by the law or regulations have occurred in the administration of the department. The provisions of the laws and the regulations constitute the only restraints that can be imposed upon the trade with Mexico. The military authorities in the Trans-Mississippi Department have no other control of it than such as is warranted by the laws and regulations. They have no authority to add to them nor deviate from them. The commanding general is enjoined to cause an inspection to be made into the military agencies and instrumentalities that have been established under this act and regulations, to ascertain whether any abuses exist or acts of injustice have been done; to hold all officers or agents to a strict accountability for any violations of the law or orders, and to promote a fair and equal administration of them. In order that the people of Texas may not be exposed to the vexatious interference of military or other authorities with their cotton and other merchandise mentioned in the act of Congress, and that they may have the full benefit of the provisions of the law upon their compliance with the regulations of the President, the commanding general of the Trans-Mississippi Department is required to designate posts or depots on or near the San Antonio River, to which the articles mentioned may be conveyed preparatory to their export to Mexico. He will prohibit all officers from molesting in any form or under any pretext any property of the kind mentioned in the country east of that river, or in transitus to the posts or depots designated, or while at those posts. The Department will regard all or any interferences by the military authorities in contravention of this order as a grave offense, and upon a proper report will cause the offender to be brought to trial.

Assistant Adjutant-General.

Gen. J. B. Magruder, commanding District of Texas, &c.

By command of General E. Kirby Smith:
P. B. LEEDS,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieutenant-General Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana:

GENERAL: In reply to your communication of the 27th instant, the commanding general directs me to say that Major-General Magruder has been assigned to the command of the District of Texas. General Forney has been ordered to report to him, and while serving in that district is temporarily transferred from your command. The division of Arkansas infantry has arrived at this place and General Churchill is directed to report to you. He has been informed that his division will be moved to Marshall, where it will still remain under your command. If the enemy's movements will permit, the commanding general proposes retaining Churchill there until the works projected at that point are completed. The Missouri Division of Infantry has been ordered to this point. On its arrival General Parsons as commanding officer will be subject to your orders.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. THOMSON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Trans-Mississippi Department,

Lieut. Gen. S. B. Buckner,
Commanding District of West Louisiana, Natchitoches:

GENERAL: Your confidential communication of the 28th instant is received. I leave the matter referred to entirely to your decision. If it can be carried successfully into execution, the proposal should undoubtedly be accepted. The cost of importation of 3,000 stand of arms would alone amount to at least $60,000. I will assist and sustain you in any measures you may take for securing the cotton for payment. To guard against bad faith I would suggest that the payment should not be made until the object is secured.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

Maj. Gen. J. B. Magruder,
Commanding District of Texas:

GENERAL: The inclosed communication from Col. H. T. Douglas, chief of Engineer Bureau, Trans-Mississippi Department, is transmitted for your consideration.* His recommendation of the construction of an interior line of fortifications, extending from the Brazos to the Trinity, meets my approval. You will immediately take measures for commencing the works, the details to be carried out after consultation with Colonel Douglas, who leaves in a few days for your headquarters. The difficulty of obtaining negro labor seems almost insuperable. To secure it you may have to resort to extraordinary measures. In the meantime the troops will have to be employed in the construction of the works. The line of march from Houston and Liberty to Red River is as short as from Hempstead, and you are authorized to move Forney’s division to those points, for the purpose of employing it in the construction of those works. I have been compelled to resort to the same measures and have employed the Missouri and Arkansas troops on the fortifications at Marshall and on Red River.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

HEADQUARTERS BRENT’S CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Lodi, March 31, 1865.

Col. L. A. BRINGIER,
Commanding Seventh Louisiana Cavalry:

COLONEL: Upon yesterday Captain Whitaker was to have crossed the lakes for a raid into the La Fourche. Information has been received that the enemy has a large number of boats and launches in Bayou Black, in rear of Brashear City, capable of carrying 200 or 300 men. If this be correct, upon the crossing of Captain Whitaker, the enemy may adopt two courses: One to follow him and attempt his capture in the Bayou Pigeon, or to throw themselves on Murphy, and occupying the Teche country from New Iberia down, await Whitaker’s return. To guard against these contingencies as far as possible, I desire you to proceed to the Teche and assume command of the front. You will move the main body of your regiment either to the Teche or to some point where you can easily counteract any attack of the enemy. I will not undertake to designate that point, leaving it to your discretion, with the remark that while it is probable that the enemy may prefer to land in the vicinity of Charenton, it is not certain that he would do so, as, for many reasons, he might endeavor to strike farther to the rear of Murphy. It would be well to conceal your movement as far as possible. Captain Whitaker is informed of the danger that he is exposed to, and may find himself forced to abandon his boats and take to the swamps. He expresses no fear of being entrapped. It would then be well to have a boat ready at the Bayou Portage or Fausse Pointe to cross at once and communicate with him when necessary. Captain Murphy had better be retained in the command of his detachment, so that he may continue to perform the valuable scouting and secret service he is rendering to these headquarters, but in active operations you will act according to your discretion. The reports and intelligence from the advanced post will be forwarded without delay. As soon as Whitaker returns and you are satisfied that there is no probability of a raid of the enemy, you can withdraw with your regiment to your camp, leaving always a good reserve in the vicinity of New Iberia. Captains Murphy and Whitaker both have written relative to the fine opportunity presented for a raid to Houma. You can act according to your judgment, sending it or not, as after investigation you think best. All animals brought over by Captain Whitaker will be taken possession of by your quartermaster and held subject to my orders. Captain Murphy will show you the various orders he is acting under.

Yours, respectfully,

J. L. BRENT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

LEWISVILLE, ARK., March 31, 1865.

General Price,
Washington, Ark.: General: I inclose an extra of the Natchitoches Times of 25th instant, which, though rather old, is yet of interest; first, because it shows how the recognition reports we had some days since originated; second, it contains General Lee's report of the fight between Generals Hampton and Kilpatrick, of which we have heretofore had only rumors; and, third, it shows that, notwithstanding the contradiction received here, General Early did have a fight with Sheridan and was worsted, losing prisoners, &c., as mention is made in our papers of an effort to recapture the prisoners. Doctor Taylor received a letter this morning from Doctor Burton, dated Camden, 30th, saying that a Northern paper of the 20th had been received and that no battle had been fought up to that time. No mention of foreign news was made by Doctor Burton and it is to be presumed the paper contained none.

Very respectfully,

B. DAVIDSON.
