THE WAR OF THE REBELLION:
A COMPILATION OF THE OFFICIAL RECORDS OF THE UNION AND CONFEDERATE ARMIES.

PUBLISHED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF The Hon. DANIEL S. LAMONT, Secretary of War,

BY
Maj. GEORGE W. DAVIS, U. S. Army,
Mr. LESLIE J. PERRY, Civilian Expert,
Mr. JOSEPH W. KIRKLEY, Civilian Expert,
Board of Publication.

SERIES I-VOLUME XLVIII-IN TWO PARTS.
PART I—REPORTS, CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1896.
The work of preparing the records of the war for public use was begun under the resolution of Congress of May 19, 1864, by Adjt. Gen. E. D. Townsend, U. S. Army, who caused copies to be made of reports of battles on file in his office and steps to be taken to collect missing records.

Under the provisions of joint resolution No. 91; of 1866, Hon. Peter H. Watson was appointed to supervise the preparation and formulate a plan for the publication of the records, but he did no work and drew no pay under this appointment, which expired July 27, 1868, by limitation of the resolution. This resolution also repealed the former one and work ceased.

The first decisive step taken in this work was the act of June 23, 1874, providing the necessary means "to enable the Secretary of War to begin the publication of the Official Records of the War of the Rebellion, both of the Union and Confederate Armies," and directing him "to have copied for the Public Printer all reports, letters, telegrams, and general orders, not heretofore copied or printed, and properly arranged in chronological order." Appropriations have been made from time to time for continuing such preparation. Under this act the preliminary work was resumed by General Townsend, who first outlined the plan on which the records are printed, though it appears that originally he contemplated publishing to the world only the more important military reports.

Subsequently, under meager appropriations, it was prosecuted in a somewhat desultory manner by various subordinates of the War Department until December 14, 1877, when the Secretary of War, perceiving that the undertaking needed the undivided attention of a single head, detailed Lieut. Col. Robert N. Scott, U. S. Army, to take charge of the bureau and devote himself exclusively to the work.

The act of June 23, 1874, greatly enlarged upon the first crude scheme of publication. On this more comprehensive basis it was determined that the volumes should include not only the battle reports, but also "all official documents that can be obtained by the compiler, and that appear to be of any historical value." Colonel Scott system-atized the work and the plan and presented the records in the following order of arrangement, which has been adhered to by his successors:
IV

PREFACE.

The first series will embrace the formal reports, both Union and Confederate, of the first seizures of United States property in the Southern States, and of all military operations in the field, with the correspondence, orders, and returns relating specially thereto, and, as proposed, is to be accompanied by an Atlas.

In this series the reports will be arranged according to the campaigns and several theaters of operations (in the chronological order of the events), and the Union reports of any event will, as a rule, be immediately followed by the Confederate accounts. The correspondence, etc., not embraced in the "reports" proper will follow (first Union and next Confederate) in chronological order.

The second series will contain the correspondence, orders, reports, and returns, Union and Confederate, relating to prisoners of war, and (so far as the military authorities were concerned) to State or political prisoners.

The third series will contain the correspondence, orders, reports, and returns of the Union authorities (embracing their correspondence with the Confederate officials) not relating specially to the subjects of the first and second series. It will set forth the annual and special reports of the Secretary of War, of the General-in-Chief, and of the chiefs of the several staff corps and departments; the calls for troops, and the correspondence between the National and the several State authorities.

The fourth series will exhibit the correspondence, orders, reports, and returns of the Confederate authorities, similar to that indicated for the Union officials, as of the third series, but excluding the correspondence between the Union and Confederate authorities given in that series.

The first volume of the records was issued in the early fall of 1880. The act approved June 16, 1880, provided "for the printing and binding, under direction of the Secretary of War, of 10,000 copies of a compilation of the Official Records (Union and Confederate) of the War of the Rebellion, so far as the same may be ready for publication, during the fiscal year;" and that "of said number 7,000 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 1,000 copies for the use of the Executive Departments." Under this act Colonel Scott proceeded to publish the first five volumes of the records.

*All subsequent volumes have been distributed under the act approved August 7, 1882, which provides that:

"The volumes of the Official Records of the War of the Rebellion shall be distributed as follows: One thousand copies to the Executive Departments, as now provided by law. One thousand copies for distribution by the Secretary of War among officers of the Army and contributors to the work. Eight thousand three hundred copies shall be sent by the Secretary of War to such libraries, organizations, and individuals as may be designated by the Senators, Representatives, and Delegates of the Forty-seventh Congress. Each Senator shall designate not exceeding twenty-six, and each Representative and Delegate not exceeding twenty-one, of such addresses, and the volumes shall be sent thereto from time to time as they are published, until the publication is completed. Senators, Representatives, and Delegates shall inform the Secretary of War in each case how many volumes of those heretofore published they have forwarded to such addresses. The remaining copies of the eleven thousand to be published, and all sets that may not be ordered to be distributed as provided herein, shall be sold by the Secretary of War for cost of publication with ten per cent. added thereto, and the proceeds of such sale shall be
Col. Robert N. Scott died March 5, 1887, before the completion of the work, which, during a ten years' service, he had come to love so dearly. At his death some twenty-six books only had been issued, but he had compiled a large amount of matter for forthcoming volumes; consequently his name as compiler was retained in all the books up to and including Vol. XXXVI, although his successors had added largely to his compilations from new material found after his demise.

The Secretary of War, May 7, 1887, assigned Lieut. Col. H. M. Lazelle, U. S. Army, to duty as the successor of Colonel Scott. He had continued in charge about two years, when, in the act approved March 2, 1889, it was provided—

That hereafter the preparation and publication of said records shall be conducted, under the Secretary of War, by a board of three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Army, and two civilian experts, to be appointed by the Secretary of War, the compensation of said civilian experts to be fixed by the Secretary of War.

The Secretary of War appointed Maj. George B. Davis, judge-advocate, U. S. Army, as the military member, and Leslie J. Perry, of Kansas, and Joseph W. Kirkley, of Maryland, as the civilian expert members of said board. The board assumed direction of the publication at the commencement of the fiscal year 1889, its first work beginning with Serial No. 36 of Vol. XXIV.

July 1, 1895, by direction of the Secretary of War, Maj. George W. Davis, Eleventh Infantry, U. S. Army, relieved Maj. George B. Davis, U. S. Army, as the military member and president of the Board of Publication.

Each volume includes a copious and accurate index, and for the further convenience of investigators there will be, in addition, a general index to the entire set when complete, in a volume by itself.

Nothing is printed in these volumes except duly authenticated contemporaneous records of the war. The scope of the board's work is to decide upon and arrange the matter to be published; to correct and verify the orthography of the papers used, and occasionally to add a footnote of explanation.

GEO. W. DAVIS, Major 11th Infty., U. S. A.,
LESLIE J. PERRY, Civilian Expert,
JOSEPH W. KIRKLEY, Civilian Expert,

Board of Publication.

Approved:

DANIEL S. LAMONT,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, D. C., March 26, 1896.
CONTENTS.

CHAPTER LX.

Operations in Louisiana and the Trans-Mississippi States and Territories.
January 1-June 30, 1865 ...................................................... 1-1459

VII
CONTENTS OF PRECEDING VOLUMES

VOLUME I

CHAPTER I.
Operations in Charleston Harbor, South Carolina. December 20, 1860-April 14, 1861... 1-317

CHAPTER II.
The secession of Georgia. January 3-26, 1861... 318-325

CHAPTER III.
The secession of Alabama and Mississippi. January 4-20, 1861... 326-330

CHAPTER IV.
Operations in Florida. January 6-August 31, 1861... 331-473

VOLUME II

CHAPTER IX.
Operations in Northern Virginia, and West Virginia. April 18-July 31, 1861... 1-1012

VOLUME III

CHAPTER X.
Operations in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, and Indian Territory. May 10-November 19, 1861... 1-749

VOLUME IV

CHAPTER XI.
Operations in Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona. June 11, 1861-February 1, 1862... 1-174

CHAPTER XII.
Operations in Kentucky and Tennessee. July 1-November 19, 1861... 175-565

VOLUME V

CHAPTER XIII.
Operations in Northern Virginia and South-eastern Virginia. August 1, 1861-January 11, 1862... 566-721

VOLUME VI

CHAPTER XIV.
Operations in Maryland, Northern Virginia, and West Virginia. August 1, 1861-March 17, 1862... 1-1106

VOLUME VII

CHAPTER XV.
Operations on the coasts of South Carolina, Georgia, and Middle and East Florida. August 21, 1861-April 11, 1862... 1-435

CHAPTER XVI.
Operations in West Florida, Southern Alabama, Southern Mississippi, and Louisiana. September 1, 1861-May 12, 1862... 436-894

VOLUME VIII

CHAPTER XVII.
Operations in Kentucky, Tennessee, North Alabama, and Southwest Virginia. November 19, 1861-March 4, 1862... 1-946
CONTENTS OF PRECEDING VOLUMES.

VOLUME VIII.

CHAPTER XVIII.
Operations in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, and Indian Territory. Nov. 19, 1861-April 10, 1862. 1-834

VOLUME IX.

CHAPTER XIX.
Operations in Southeastern Virginia. January 11-March 17, 1862. 1-71

CHAPTER XX.
Operations in North Carolina. January 11-August 20, 1862. 72-480

VOLUME X—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER XXI.
Operations in Kentucky, Tennessee, North Mississippi, North Alabama, and Southwest Virginia. March 4-June 10, 1862. Part I—Reports. 1-927 Part II—Correspondence, etc. 1-642

VOLUME XI—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER XXII.
The Peninsular Campaign, Virginia. March 17-September 2, 1862. Part I—Reports, March 17-June 25. 1-1077 Part II—Reports, June 26-September 2. 1-894 Part III—Correspondence, etc. 1-891

VOLUME XII—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER XXIV.
Operations in Northern Virginia, West Virginia, and Maryland. March 17-September 2, 1862. Part I—Reports, March 17-June 25. 1-818 Part II—Reports, June 26-September 2. 1-820 Part III—Correspondence, etc. 1-966

VOLUME XIII.

CHAPTER XXV.
Operations in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, the Indian Territory, and the Department of the Northwest. April 10-November 20, 1862. 1-961

VOLUME XIV.

CHAPTER XXVI.
Operations on the coasts of South Carolina, Georgia, and Middle and East Florida. April 12, 1862-June 11, 1863. 1-1025

VOLUME XV.

CHAPTER XXVII.
Operations in West Florida, Southern Alabama, Southern Mississippi (embracing all operations against Vicksburg, May 18-July 27, 1862), and Louisiana, May 12, 1862-May 14, 1863; and operations in Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona. September 20, 1862-May 14, 1863. 1-1135
CONTENTS OF PRECEDING VOLUMES.

VOLUME XVI—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Part I—Reports .................................................... 1-1188
Part II—Correspondence, etc .................................. 1-1017

VOLUME XVII—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Part I—Reports .................................................... 1-807
Part II—Correspondence, etc .................................. 1-610

VOLUME XVIII.

CHAPTER XXX.
Operations in North Carolina and Southeastern Virginia. August 20, 1862-June 3, 1863.

VOLUME XIX—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER XXXI.
Operations in Northern Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. September 3-November 14, 1862.

Part I—Reports, September 3-30 ................................... 1-1108
Part II—Reports, September 20-November 14; Correspondence, etc., September 3-November 14 ........................................... 1-739

VOLUME XX—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Part I—Reports .................................................... 1-997
Part II—Correspondence, etc .................................. 1-516

VOLUME XXI.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

VOLUME XXII—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER XXXIV.
Operations in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, the Indian Territory, and the Department of the Northwest. November 20, 1862-December 31, 1863.

Part I—Reports .................................................... 1-928
Part II—Correspondence, etc .................................. 1-1163
XII CONTENTS OF PRECEDING VOLUMES.

VOLUME XXIII—IN TWO PARTS.
CHAPTER XXXV.

Part I—Reports ................................................................. 1-858
Part II—Correspondence, etc ........................................ 1-986

VOLUME XXIV—IN THREE PARTS.
CHAPTER XXXVI.
Operations in Mississippi and West Tennessee, including those in Arkansas and Louisiana connected with the Siege of Vicksburg. January 21-August 10, 1863.

Part I—Reports, January 21-May 15, including the "General Reports" for whole period. January 21-August 10 ........................................ 1-787
Part II—Reports, May 16-August 10 .................................... 1-869
Part III—Correspondence, etc ........................................... 1-1070

VOLUME XXV—IN TWO PARTS.
CHAPTER XXXVII.

Part I—Reports ................................................................. 1-1123
Part II—Correspondence, etc ........................................... 1-862

VOLUME XXVI—IN TWO PARTS.
CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Part I—Reports, Union Correspondence, etc ........................................ 1-820
Part II—Confederate Correspondence, etc .................................. 1-581

VOLUME XXVII—IN THREE PARTS.
CHAPTER XXXIX.
Operations in North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Department of the East. June 3-August 3, 1863.

Part I—Reports ................................................................. 1-1059
Part II—Reports ................................................................. 1-1005
Part III—Correspondence, etc ........................................... 1-1092

VOLUME XXVIII—IN TWO PARTS.
CHAPTER XL.
Operations on the coasts of South Carolina and Georgia, and in Middle and East Florida. June 12-December 31, 1863.

Part I—Reports ................................................................. 1-755
Part II—Correspondence, etc ........................................... 1-609

VOLUME XXIX—IN TWO PARTS.
CHAPTER XLI.
Operations in North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. August 4-December 31, 1863.

Part I—Reports ................................................................. 1-1018
Part II—Correspondence, etc ........................................... 1-933
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CONTENTS OF PRECEDING VOLUMES.</th>
<th>XIII</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>VOLUME XXX—IN FOUR PARTS.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CHAPTER XLII.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Operations in Kentucky, Southwest Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, North Alabama, and North Georgia. August 11-October 19, 1863.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Part I—Reports</td>
<td>1-1071</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Part II—Reports</td>
<td>1-821</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Part III—Union Correspondence, etc</td>
<td>1-1017</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Part IV—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc</td>
<td>1-768</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| VOLUME XXXI—IN THREE PARTS. |     |
| CHAPTER XLIII.              |     |
| Part I—Reports and Union Correspondence | 1-852 |
| Part II—Reports                  | 1-782 |
| Part III—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-893 |

| VOLUME XXXII—IN THREE PARTS. |     |
| CHAPTER XLIV.                |     |
| Part I—Reports                   | 1-703 |
| Part II—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-633 |
| Part III—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-879 |

| VOLUME XXXIII.               |     |
| CHAPTER XLV.                 |     |
| Part I—Reports                   | 1-1335 |

| VOLUME XXXIV—IN FOUR PARTS.  |     |
| CHAPTER XLVI.                |     |
| Part I—Reports                   | 1-1058 |
| Part II—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-1107 |
| Part III—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-825 |
| Part IV—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-701 |

| VOLUME XXXV—IN TWO PARTS.    |     |
| CHAPTER XLVII.               |     |
| Operations in South Carolina and Florida, and on the Georgia Coast. January 1-November 13, 1864. |     |
| Part I—Reports, Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-646 |
| Part II—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc | 1-650 |
CONTENTS OF PRECEDING VOLUMES.

VOLUME XXXVI—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Part I—Reports

Part II—Reports, Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

Part III—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

VOLUME XXXVII—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER XLIX.

Operations in Northern Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. May 1–August 3, 1864.

Part I—Reports, Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

Part II—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

VOLUME XXXVIII—IN FIVE PARTS.

CHAPTER L.

The Atlanta, Ga., Campaign. May 1–September 8, 1864.

Part I—Reports

Part II—Reports

Part III—Reports

Part IV—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

Part V—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

VOLUME XXXIX—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER LI.

Operations in Kentucky, Southwest Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and North Georgia (the Atlanta Campaign excepted). May 1–November 13, 1864.

Part I—Reports

Part II—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

Part III—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

VOLUME XL—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER LII.

Part I—Reports

Part II—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

Part III—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

VOLUME XLI—IN FOUR PARTS.

CHAPTER LIII.

Part I—Reports

Part II—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

Part III—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc

Part IV—Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc
CONTENTS OF PRECEDING VOLUMES

VOLUME XLII—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER LIV.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Part</th>
<th>Reports</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td></td>
<td>1-1029</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>Union and Confederate Correspondence</td>
<td>1-1311</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>Union and Confederate Correspondence</td>
<td>1-1370</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

VOLUME XLIII—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER LV.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Part</th>
<th>Reports, Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc.</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td></td>
<td>1-1032</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td></td>
<td>1-861</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

VOLUME XLIV.

CHAPTER LVI.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Part</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>1-1013</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

VOLUME XLV—IN TWO PARTS.

CHAPTER LVII.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Part</th>
<th>Reports, Union and Confederate Correspondence, etc.</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td></td>
<td>1-1262</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td></td>
<td>1-806</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

VOLUME XLVI—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER LVIII.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Part</th>
<th>Reports</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td></td>
<td>1-1328</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>Union and Confederate Correspondence</td>
<td>1-1318</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>Union and Confederate Correspondence</td>
<td>1-1396</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

VOLUME XLVII—IN THREE PARTS.

CHAPTER LIX.

Operations in North Carolina (from February 1), South Carolina, Southern Georgia, and East Florida. January 1–June 30, 1865.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Part</th>
<th>Reports</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td></td>
<td>1-1135</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>Union and Confederate Correspondence</td>
<td>1-1462</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>Union and Confederate Correspondence</td>
<td>1-874</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Jan</td>
<td>Feb</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td>------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15</td>
<td>16</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22</td>
<td>23</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>29</td>
<td>30</td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>27</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>27</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>21</td>
<td>22</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>29</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
<td>12</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18</td>
<td>19</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td>26</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>29</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

XVI
CHAPTER LX.

OPERATIONS IN LOUISIANA AND THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI STATES AND TERRITORIES.*

JANUARY 1–JUNE 30, 1865.

PART I.

SUMMARY OF THE PRINCIPAL EVENTS.

Jan. 1, 1865.—Skirmish at Bentonville, Ark.
1–27, 1865.—Operations in Arkansas, including actions at Dardanelle (14th), Ivey's Ford (17th), and skirmish at Boggs' Mills (24th).
2–7, 1865.—Scout in Shannon County, Mo.
2–10, 1865.—Scout from Fort Wingate to Sierra del Datil, N. Mex.
4–16, 1865.—Expedition from Bloomfield to Poplar Bluff, Mo., and vicinity.
4–27, 1865.—Expedition from Brownsville to Augusta, Ark.
6, 1865.—Skirmish at Huntsville, Ark.
7, 1865.—Skirmish in Johnson County, Ark.
Skirmishes with Indians at Valley Station and Julesburg, Colo.
Ter.
7–9, 1865.—Expedition from Pine Bluff, Ark., and skirmish (9th).
7–11, 1865.—Scout from Fort Ellsworth, Kans.
8, 1865.—Skirmish near Ivey's Ford, Ark.
Action at Dove Creek, Concho River, Tex.
9–11, 1865.—Skirmishes in Texas County, Mo.
10, 1865.—Skirmish near Glasgow, Mo.
11, 1865.—Skirmish near Lexington, Mo.
11–13, 1865.—Expeditions from Helena, Ark., to Harbert's Plantation, Miss.
11–21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Wingate to Sierra del Datil and vicinity, N. Mex.
12, 1865.—Affair near Sugar Loaf Prairie, Ark.
12–15, 1865.—Expedition from Morganza, La., with skirmishes.
Scout from Camp Grover to Texas Prairie, Mo.
12–17, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to Miami, Mo.
14–29, 1865.—Operations on the Overland Stage Road between Julesburg and Denver, Colo. Ter., and skirmishes with Indians at Godfrey's Ranch (14th), at Morrison's or American Ranch, at Wisconsin Ranch, and near Valley Station (15th), at Gittrell's Ranch (25th), at Moore's Ranch (26th), at Lillian Springs Ranch (27th), and near Valley Station (28th).

--

*Including Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Indian Territory, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, and Texas, and the Department of the Northwest, embracing Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

Of some of the minor conflicts noted in this Summary no circumstantial reports are on file.

1 B R—VOL XLVIII, PT I
15, 1865.—Skirmish in Madison County, Ark.
15-17, 1865.—Expedition from New Orleans to Mandeville, La.
15-18, 1865.—Expeditions from Pine Bluff, Ark.
15-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Larned to Pawnee Fork, Walnut Creek, and Smoky Hill River, Kans.
16-18, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Whisky Bayou, La.
16-22, 1865.—Operations about Wayneville, Mo., including skirmish near McCourtney’s Mills, on Big Piney.
18, 1865.—Skirmish at Clarksville, Ark.
18-19, 1865.—Expedition from Napoleonville to Grand River, La.
18-22, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to the Snubar Hills, Mo.
19-20, 1865.—Scout from Donaldsonville, La.
19-22, 1865.—Expedition from Memphis, Tenn., to Marion, Ark., with skirmishes (20th and 21st) at and near Marion.
20, 1865.—The Territory of Arizona reannexed to the Department of the Pacific.
21-22, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Bayou Sorrel, La.
22, 1865.—Skirmish on the Benton Road, near Little Rock, Ark.
22-Feb. 4, 1865.—Expedition from Little Rock to Mount Elba., Ark., with skirmish at Saline River.
23, 1865.—Skirmish at Thompson’s Plantation, La.
24, 1865.—Skirmish near Bayou Goula, La.
24-Feb. 22, 1865.—Expedition from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to Eleven Points River, Ark.
26-31, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff toward Camden and Monticello, Ark., with skirmishes.
26-Feb. 4, 1865.—Expedition from Plaquemine to The Park, La., with skirmish (February 4) at The Park.
26-Feb. 11, 1865.—Expedition from Memphis, Tenn., into Southeastern Arkansas and Northeastern Louisiana.
27, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Pinney to Kimball’s Plantation, Ark.
28-Feb. 9, 1865.—Operations on the Upper Arkansas, with skirmish (February 1) at Fort Zarah, Kans.
29-Feb. 7, 1865.—Scouts from Bayou Goula to Grand River, La., with skirmish (January 30) at Richland Plantation.
30, 1865.—The Department of Kansas merged into the Department of the Missouri.
The Military Division of the Missouri created, including the Departments of the Missouri and the Northwest.
Skirmish in La Fayette County, Mo.
30-31, 1865.—Expedition from Thibodeaux to Lake Verret and Bayou Plantaion, La., with skirmish (30th) near Lake Verret.
31, 1865.—Expedition from Morganza to New Roads, La.
Skirmish near Oxford, Kans.
31-Feb. 1, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Pike to Bayou Bonfouca, La., with skirmish (January 31).
Feb. 1-5, 1863.—Scout from Warrensburg to Wagon Knob, Big Grove, Greentown, and Texas Prairie, Mo.
Scout from Warrensburg to Tabo Creek, Dover, Oaklin Church, and Davis' Creek, Mo.

2-18, 1865.—Operations against Indians on the North Platte River in Colorado and Nebraska Territories.

3-8, 1865.—Scouts in La Fayette County, Mo.
Scout from Fort Larned to South Fork of Pawnee Creek and Buckner's Branch, Kans.

6-8, 1865.—Operations in Ozark County, Mo.

7-10, 1865.—Scouts from Morganza to Fausse River and Grossetete Bayon, La.

8-9, 1865.—Expedition on the Arkansas River, near Little Rock, Ark.

8-13, 1865.—Scout from Helena to Madison, Ark., with skirmish (12th) near Madison.

9, 1865.—General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army, assumes command of the Confederate Armies.

9-19, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Devall’s Bluff, Ark., with skirmish.

10, 1865.—The Department of Mississippi declared to embrace so much of the State of Mississippi as was occupied by the troops of the Division of West Mississippi, on the river.
All troops in the Departments of Kentucky and the Cumberland declared subject to the orders of Major-General Thomas except the posts on the east bank of the Mississippi River, which were subject to Major-General Canby's orders in movements for protecting the navigation of that river.
The Department of the Gulf declared to embrace the States of Louisiana and Texas.
Skirmish at Kittredge's Sugar House, near Napoleonville, La.
Scout from Friar's Point, Miss., and skirmish.

10-11, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Lake Verret, La.

10-13, 1865.—Expedition from Thibodeaux to Lake Verret, La.

11, 1865.—Skirmish at Clear Creek, Ark.
Skirmish near Pine Bluff, Ark.

12, 1865.—Skirmish near Columbia, Mo.
Skirmish near Macon, Mo.

12-20, 1865.—Operations about Forts Riley and Larned, Kans.

Skirmish in Mississippi County, Mo.

14, 1865.—Maj. Gen. Francis J. Herron, U. S. Army, assumes command of the Northern Division of Louisiana.

14-18, 1865.—Expeditions from Donaldsonville to Grand Bayon and Bayon Goula, La., with skirmish (15th) at Martin's Lane.

16-18, 1865.—Operations about Bennett's Bayou and Tolbert's Mill, Ark.

16-20, 1865.—Scout in Ozark County, Mo., and Marion County, Ark.

16-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Larned, Kans.

17, 1865.—The Territory of Utah and that part of Nebraska Territory lying west of the twenty-seventh degree of longitude added to the Department of the Missouri.

Skirmish in Washington County, Ark.

17-18, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff, Ark., to the Arkansas River, with skirmish (17th) near Bayou Meto, Ark.

17-22, 1865.—Expedition from Plaquemine to The Park, La.

18, 1865.—The Thirteenth and Sixteenth Army Corps constituted; the former from the Reserve Corps, Military Division of West Mississippi, the latter from the troops arriving from the Army of the Cumberland.

19-22, 1865.—Expedition from Helena, Ark., to Friar's Point, Miss.

20, 1865.—Skirmish at Center Creek, Mo.

21-22, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Douglas' Plantation, Ark., and skirmish (22d).

22-24, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Bayou Meto, Ark., and skirmishes at Mrs. Voche's (23d) and Bayou Meto (24th).

24, 1865.—Affair at Switzler's Mill, Mo.

Scout from Helena to Clarke's Store, Ark.

26-28, 1865.—Expedition from Pine Bluff to McMilley's Farm, Ark., with skirmish (27th) at McMilley's Farm.

27, 1865.—Skirmish near Sturgeon, Mo.

Mar. 1, 1865.—Brig. Gen. Benjamin H. Grierson, U. S. Army, assigned to command the cavalry of the Military Division of West Mississippi.

1-12, 1865.—Expedition from Baton Rouge to Jackson and Clinton, La.

2, 1865.—Brig. Gen. Benjamin H. Grierson, U. S. Army, assumes command of the cavalry forces in the Military Division of West Mississippi.

3-7, 1865.—Expeditions from Bloomfield into Dunklin County, Mo., with skirmishes (3d and 7th) near Bloomfield and (4th) in Dunklin County.

Affair near Pine Bluff, Ark.

5-12, 1865.— Scouts from Waynesville to Hutton Valley, Rolla, and Lebanon, Mo.

7, 1865.—Maj. Gen. Sterling Price, C. S. Army, assigned to command of the Missouri Division of Infantry, and Brig. Gen. Mosby M. Parsons, C. S. Army, to the command of Parsons' Missouri Brigade.

Skirmish with Indians eighty miles west of Fort Larned, Kans.

7-15, 1865.—Scout from Glasgow to the Perche Hills, Mo.

7-25, 1865.—Operations about Licking, Mo.

8, 1865.—Headquarters Department of Mississippi transferred from Vicksburg, Miss., to Memphis, Tenn.

Skirmish at Poison Creek, Idaho Ter.

Col. Edwin C. Catherwood, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry, assumes command of the District of Rolla, Mo.

9-15, 1865.—Scout from Cape Girardeau into Bollinger, Wayne, and Stoddard Counties, Mo.

Scout from Fort Larned to Crooked Creek, Kans.

10-13, 1865.—Scout from Little Rock to Clear Lake, Ark., with skirmish (11th) at Clear Lake.

11, 1865.—Affair near the Little Blue River, Mo.

Skirmish at Washington, Ark.

Affair near Lone Jack, Mo.

12-23, 1865.—Scout from Lewisburg into Yell and Searcy Counties, Ark.

13, 1865.—Col. John Morrill, Sixty-fourth Illinois Infantry, assigned to command of the District of Rolla, Mo.

15-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Sumner, N. Mex.

17, 1865.—Col. John Morrill, Sixty-fourth Illinois Infantry, assumes command of the District of Rolla, Mo.

17-20, 1865.—Expedition from Pine Bluff to Bass' Plantation, Ark.

Skirmish at the Amite River, La.

18-30, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Gibson to Little River and Hillabee, Ind. Ter.
LOUISIANA AND THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI. [CHAP. LX.

Mar. 19-23, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to Columbus, Mo., with skirmish near Greenon.
20, 1865.—Skirmish at Talbot's Ferry, Ark.
20-22, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Bayou Pigeon, La., with skirmish (21st) at Bayou Teche, La.
Scout from Lexington, Mo.
21, 1865.—The Department of Arkansas and the Indian Territory transferred from the Military Division of West Mississippi to the Military Division of the Missouri.
21-23, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Monticello, Ark.
22-23, 1865.—Operations about Stephenson's Mill, Mo.
23-24, 1865.—Scout from Donaldsonville to Bayou Goulia, La.
24, 1865.—Scout from Bayou Beuf to Bayou Chemise, La.
Affair near Rolla, Mo.
25-27, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Indian Bend, La.
25-28, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to near Oyster Bayon, La.
26-28, 1865.—Expedition from Bonnet Carre to Amite River, La.
28, 1865.—Skirmish at Bull Creek, Christian County, Mo.
The District of the Plains formed, to consist of the Districts of Utah, Colorado, and Nebraska, and Brig. Gen. Patrick E. Connor, U. S. Army, assigned to its command.
28-30, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Pike, La., to Bay Saint Louis, Miss.
Skirmish in Southwest Missouri.
29-Apr. 2, 1865.—Scout from Waynesville, Mo.
30-Apr. 2, 1865.—Expeditions from Baton Rouge to Clinton and the Comite River, La.
31-Apr. 1, 1865.—Operations about Aquia Fria, N. Mex.
Apr.
1, 1865.—Affair near Fort Garland, Colo. Ter.
1-4, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Bayou Bartholomew, Ark.
1-30, 1865.—Scouts from Licking, Mo.
1-May 27, 1865.—Operations against Indians west of Fort Laramie, Dak. Ter., with skirmish (May 20) at Deer Creek Station.
2, 1865.—Skirmish near Van Buren, Ark.
Skirmish near Hickory Station, Ark.
2-5, 1865.—Expedition from The Hermitage to the French Settlement, La.
2-10, 1865.—Expeditions from Thibodeaux, Bayou Beuf, and Brashear City to Lake Verret, Grand Bayon, and The Park, La., with skirmish (4th) at Grand Bayon, La.
3, 1865.—Pursuit of bushwhackers near Farmington, Mo.
SUMMARY OF THE PRINCIPAL EVENTS.

8-10, 1865.—Pursuit of guerrillas in Northeast Missouri.

11, 1865.—Skirmish at Saint Charles, Ark.

12-13, 1865.—Expedition from Port Hudson to Jackson, La.

Scout from Tallahaesa Mission, Ind. Ter.

12-16, 1865.—Scout from Dakota City, Nebr. Ter.

12-25, 1865.—Scout from Fort Stanton, N. Mex.

15, 1865.—Skirmish at McKenzie's Creek, near Patterson, Mo.

17, 1865.—Brig. Gen. Thomas A. Davies, U. S. Army, assigned to command the District of Wisconsin.

19, 1865.—The Districts of Arkansas and West Louisianes consolidated to form the District of Arkansas and West Louisiana, and Lieut. Gen. Simon B. Buckner, C. S. Army, assigned to its command.

19-23, 1865.—Expedition from Memphis, Tenn., to Brownsville, Miss.

19-25, 1865.—Expedition from Terre Bonne to Pelton's Plantation and Grand Caillon, La.

19-May 27, 1865.—Negotiations for the surrender of the Confederate forces in the Trans-Mississippi Department, commanded by General E. Kirby Smith, C. S. Army.

21-22, 1865.—Expedition from Donaldsonville to Bayou Goula, La.

21-27, 1865.—Scout from Rolla toward Thomasville, Mo., with skirmish at Spring Valley (23d).

Skirmish near Linn Creek, Mo.

Skirmish near the mouth of the Big Gravois, Mo.

22-23, 1865.—Scout from Deer Creek to Sage Creek, Dak. Ter., and skirmish with Indians (22d) on Sage Creek.

22-27, 1865.—Scout from Dakota City, Nebr. Ter., to Middle Bow River.

23, 1865.—Affair near Fort Zarah, Kans.

Skirmish on Snake Creek, Ark.

24, 1865.—Skirmish near Boggy Depot, Ind. Ter.

Skirmish near Miami, Mo.

Destruction of the Confederate steamer Webb.

25, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Rodgers' Plantation, Ark., with skirmish at Rodgers' Plantation.

Skirmish at Linn Creek, Mo.

26, 1865.—Affair near Fort Rice, Dak. Ter.

26-29, 1865.—Scout from Little Rock to the Saline River, Ark.

27, 1865.—Loss of the steamer Sultan in the Mississippi River, near Memphis, Tenn.

Affair near James Creek, Mo.

Apr. 28—May 13, 1865.—Scout from Fort Cummings, N. Mex.
29—June 11, 1865.—Expedition from Saint Louis, Mo., to receive the surrender of Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson, C. S. Army.
30—May 12, 1865.—Operations in the vicinity of Braheur City, La., with skirmishes (3d) at Chacahoula, La., (4th) at Bayou Black, (9th) at Bayou Goula, and (11th) at Brown’s Plantation, La.

1-9, 1865.—Scout from Ojo de Anaya, N. Mex.
2, 1865.—Affair on the Blue Earth River, Minn.
3, 1865.—Skirmishes on the Missouri River near Boonville, Mo.
3-6, 1865.—Operations about Fort Adams, Miss.
3-21, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Laramie to Wind River, Dak. Ter.
4, 1865.—Skirmish at the Star House, near Lexington, Mo.
4-6, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Noble’s Farm, Ark.
5, 1865.—Attack on wagon train near Mullahla’s Station, Nebr. Ter.
5, 1865.—Col. Simon Jones, Ninety-third U. S. Colored Troops, assumes command of the Carrolton District, La.
6-11, 1865.—Scout from Little Rock to Bayou Meto and Little Bayon, Ark.
7, 1865.—Col. Simon Jones, Ninety-third U. S. Colored Troops, assumes command of the Carrolton District, La.
8, 1865.—Skirmish near Readaville, Mo.
8-10, 1865.—Scout in Saline, La Fayette, and Cooper Counties, Mo.
8-20, 1865.—Scout from Plum Creek to Midway Station, Nebr. Ter.
8-22, 1865.—Expedition from Spring Hill, Ala., to Baton Rouge, La.
10-19, 1865.—Scout from Fort Sumner, N. Mex.
11-14, 1865.—Expedition from Brazos Santiago, Tex., with skirmishes (12th and 13th) at Palmeto Ranch and (13th) at White’s Ranch.
12-14, 1865.—Scout from Cottonwood, Nebr. Ter.
13, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians at Dan Smith’s Ranch, near Julesburg, Colo. Ter.
14, 1865.—Skirmish on the Little Piney, Mo.
14-16, 1865.—Expedition from Braheur City to Ratliff’s Plantation, La.
15-17, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Johnson’s Farm, Ark., with skirmish (16th) on the Monticello Road.
17, 1865.—The Military Division of West Mississippi abolished, and the Department of the Gulf constituted from the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, and the District of Key West and the Tortugas.

Chap. IX.  SUMMARY OF THE PRINCIPAL EVENTS.

May 18, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians near Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter.

Skirmish with Indians on the Coteau, Minn.

Twenty-fifth Army Corps ordered to be held in readiness for transportation to Texas.

18-20, 1865.—Scout from Lebanon to Warsaw, Mo.

18-27, 1865.—Expedition against Indians in Dakota Territory.

19-20, 1865.—Scout from Sweetwater Bridge to Whisky Gap, Dak. Ter.

19-22, 1865.—Scout from Kingsville, Mo.

19-26, 1865.—Scout from Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter.

19-June 2, 1865.—Scout from Fort Kearny to the Little Blue River, Nebr. Ter.

18-20, 1865.—Scout from Lebanon to Warsaw, Mo.

Affair near Pawnee Rock, Kans.

Skirmishes on Deer Creek, Dak. Ter.

20, 1865.—Skirmish on the Blackwater, near Longwood, Mo.

Skirmishes on Deer Creek, Dak. Ter.

20-22, 1865.—Operations about Three Crossings Station, Dak. Ter.

Scout from Camp Plumb, Dak. Ter.

22, 1865.—Skirmish at Valley Mines, Mo.

23, 1865.—Scout from Thibodeaux to Lake Verret, La.

Skirmish near Waynesville, Mo.

23-26, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg, Mo., to mouth of Coal Camp Creek.

23-27, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Mouticello, Ark., with skirmish (24th) at Mouticello.

24, 1865.—Skirmish near Rocheport, Mo.

Scout from Napoleonville to Bayou Saint Vincent, La.

25-27, 1865.—Expedition from Bayou Beauf to Bayou De Large, La., with affair (27th) at Bayou De Large.

26-27, 1865.—Scout and skirmishes in Carroll and Ray Counties, Mo.

Scout from Plum Creek, Nebr. Ter.

26-June 9, 1865.—Operations against Indians on the Overland Stage Road on the Platte and Sweetwater Rivers, with skirmishes (May 27) at Saint Mary's Station, (May 26, 28, and June 1) at Sweetwater Station, (June 3) at Platte Bridge, Dak. Ter., and (June 8) at Sage Creek, Colo. Ter.

Skirmish in Chariton County, Mo.

Skirmish at Switzler's Mill, Chariton County, Mo.

29, 1865.—The District of East Louisiana formed, to consist of the Districts of Baton Rouge and Port Hudson and the Post of Clinton, and Brig. Gen. Michael K. Lawler, U. S. Army, assigned to its command.
May 29, 1865—Nov. 14, 1866.—Operations in Texas and on the Rio Grande.

2, 1865.—Operations about Fort Rice, Dak. Ter.

Skirmish with Indians at Dry Creek, Dak. Ter.

4–10, 1865.—Operations against Indians near Fort Collins, Colo. Ter.

8–14, 1865.—Attack by Indians on the Overland Stage Road in Kansas and Colorado, with skirmishes (8th and 12th) at Fort Dodge, Kans.; (9th) at Chavis Creek, near Cow Creek Station, Kans.; (12th) near Cow Creek Station, Plum Butte, and Pawnee Rock, Kans.

9, 1865.—Maj. Gen. Peter J. Osterhaus, U. S. Army, assumes command of the Department of Mississippi.

10, 1865.—Col. John D. Allen, Fifteenth Missouri Cavalry, assumes command of the District of Southwest Missouri.

12–July 5, 1865.—Expedition to the Platte and Niobrara Rivers.

13–17, 1865.—Scout from Camp Nichols, N. Mex., with action (14th) on the Santa Fé Road.

14, 1865.—Action with Indians at Horse Creek, Dak. Ter.

Col. Carroll H. Potter, Sixth U. S. Volunteer Infantry, assumes command of the South Sub-District of the Plains.

15–22, 1865.—Scout from Fort Sumner to the Oscura Mountains, N. Mex.

17, 1865.—Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger, U. S. Army, assumes command of all troops within the State of Texas.

Skirmish on Dead Man’s Fork, Dak. Ter.

17–19, 1865.—Expedition from Denver, Colo. Ter., to Fort Halleck, Dak. Ter.

24, 1865.—The Department of Mississippi created, embracing the State of Mississippi, and Maj. Gen. Henry W. Slocum, U. S. Army, assigned to its command.

24–30, 1865.—Operations about Rock Creek Station and Seven Mile Creek, Dak. Ter.

26, 1865.—The Second Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, ordered from Louisville, Ky., to Little Rock, Ark.

June 26-29, 1865.—The Fourth Army Corps arrives at New Orleans, en route to Texas.

Col. Frederick W. Moore, Eighty-third Ohio Infantry, assigned to command the post of Galveston, Tex., in addition to the Third Brigade, Second Division, Thirteenth Army Corps.

28, 1865.—The District of Kansas formed from the Districts of North and South Kansas, and Brig. Gen. Robert B. Mitchell assigned to its command.

Col. David Moore, Fifty-first Missouri Infantry, assigned to command First Sub-District of Saint Louis, vice Col. Joseph Weydemeyer, Forty-first Missouri Infantry, relieved.

29, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians near Fort Dodge, Kans.

30, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians at Rock Creek, Dak. Ter.

JANUARY 1–27, 1865.—Operations in Arkansas, including actions at Dardanelle (14th), Ivey’s Ford (17th), and skirmish at Boggs’ Mills (24th).

REPORTS, ETC.

No. 1.—Col. Abraham H. Ryan, Third Arkansas Cavalry (Union).

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS POST LEWISBURG,

Lewiscburg, Ark., January 27, 1865.

About the 1st day of January scouts reported a force of the enemy at Dardanelle and Beatty’s Mill, near Petit Jean Creek. Scouting parties were sent to Galla Rock and Norristown to prevent the enemy from crossing to north side of river. On the 10th instant the enemy were reported as moving on Perryville, evidently for the purpose of crossing the Fourche la Fave at that place, en route south, or to move onto the river bank at some point between Lewiscburg and Little Rock, for the purpose of capturing transports with supplies on the way to Fort Smith. To prevent either movement being successful, I ordered Lieutenant-Colonel Steele, Eleventh U. S. Colored, with 150 men of his regiment, and detachment of Third Arkansas Cavalry, Captain Gibbons commanding, to Perryville. The cavalry arrived at that place on the morning of the 11th, and ascertained that the enemy were encamped within a few miles of that place, and that they could not reach Perryville on account of high water, Fourche la Faye bottom being overflowed. Lieutenant-Colonel Steele's command returned to Lewisburg on the evening of the 11th. On the night of the 12th instant I ordered Lieutenant Wylie, Third Arkansas Cavalry, to proceed with fifty dismounted men of the Third Arkansas Cavalry, and fifty infantry of the Eleventh U. S. Colored, on steamer Alamo, to land on west side of Petit Jean Creek; if the landing be effected safely, to send steamer, with flat-boats, to north side of river, to cross detachment of Third Arkansas Cavalry. The landing was effected safely, and cavalry crossed on morning of 13th. Same evening Major Jenks, First Iowa Cavalry, commanding detachment of dismounted men of Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps, namely, 276 men, reported for duty. They arrived on steamers Ad. Hines and Lotus. I ordered them to proceed with steamers and his command up river till arriving at the Alamo, where he would learn from Lieutenant Wylie if it was safe for the steamers to proceed; if so, to disembark his command at Norristown, the steamers to push on to Fort Smith. At 10 p.m. the steamers Annie Jacobs and Chippewa arrived, with one section of the Second Kansas Battery,* Lieutenant Phillips commanding. I sent them forward immediately, with orders to report to Major Jenks, near Galla Rock. I had calculated that Lieutenant-Colonel Steele's movement toward Perryville would keep the enemy in that vicinity for a short time, and that before they would learn of his withdrawal and of the subsequent move up the river sufficient time would be gained to enable the boats to pass Dardanelle in safety. At the same time I felt assured the enemy would move onto the river at or above Dardanelle as soon as they learned of the boats passing Lewisburg, and unless checked at or near Dardanelle would overtake the boats before they could reach Spadra. The arrival of the section of artillery decided me in ordering Major Jenks to occupy Dardanelle with his command. He did so, landing his forces at 10 o'clock the morning of the 14th instant, the last of the fleet passing there at 12 m. At 2 o'clock same date the enemy, 1,500 strong, and one piece of artillery, under the command of Colonels Brooks, Stirman, and Newton, attacked the place. Major Jenks placed his men in the stockade, and after four hours' hard fighting the enemy withdrew, completely whipped. Our loss during the engagement was 1 killed, 15 wounded, and 2 missing. Enemy's loss, 1 commissioned officer killed, and about 80 men killed and wounded. Major Jenks speaks in the highest terms of the officers and men under his command, all doing gallant service. The artillery, under the direction of Lieutenant Phillips and Lieutenant Campbell, Third U.S. Cavalry (acting adjutant), being skillfully handled, firing 164 rounds. Expecting the attack to be renewed next morning, Major Jenks called for re-enforcements and supply of ammunition. I immediately ordered Major Mason, with sixty men, Third Arkansas Cavalry, with supply of ammunition, to report to Major Jenks as soon as practicable; also Lieutenant-Colonel Steele, with 100 men, of the Eleventh U. S. Colored Infantry, in wagons, to follow as rapidly as possible; and, placing everything at Lewisburg in proper position, proceeded to Dardanelle, arriving there the same day. The enemy did not renew the attack, but proceeded up the south side of the river after the boats; but they were too late, the boats being beyond their reach. On the morning of the 15th instant Lieutenant-Colonel Cooper, with Fortieth Iowa Infantry and one section of Fifth Ohio Battery, arrived on steamer from Little Rock and reported for duty, and were immediately set to work throwing up intrenchments. On the 15th scouts reported the enemy as re-enforced and approaching in four directions to attack on the morning of the 16th instant. Every preparation was made for their reception. On their arriving within twelve miles of our lines they retraced their steps, crossing the Petit Jean near Danville, moving in a southerly direction. On the 19th dispatches received from Colonel Judson, commanding U.S. forces at Clarksville, reporting the attack by the enemy on steamers near Ivey's Ford, and capture and destruction of the steamer Chippewa, and remainder of fleet in perilous position, on the morning of the 20th instant, at 4 o'clock, sent Captain Hamilton, with sixty men of the Third Arkansas Cavalry, to go through to the boats, render what assistance he could, and, if possible, bring any or all of them down. To cover this move I ordered Lieutenant-Colonel Cooper, with Fortieth Iowa Infantry and one piece of artillery, to Chickalah; at same time sent force of fifty infantry to follow Captain Hamilton twelve miles and return. The movement was entirely successful, Colonel Cooper breaking up their rendezvous near Chickalah and destroying 1,200 bushels of wheat stored there for the use of the enemy. Captain Hamilton returned on the evening of the 21st instant, having met near the boats Colonel Williams' brigade of colored troops on way from Fort Smith to Little Rock. On the night of the 24th Newton's regiment returned to Boggs' Mills (twelve miles from Dardanelle) to grind flour and leave before sunrise. At midnight sent Lieutenant-Colonel Steele, with Eleventh U.S. Colored Infantry and detachment Third Arkansas Cavalry, who succeeded in surprising the command, capturing the flour, his papers, 18 horses, and 20 stand of arms. I remained at Dardanelle to cover the passage of Colonel Williams' brigade and train, and evacuated the place on the morning of the 27th instant.

*Manned by Company B, Second Kansas Cavalry.

Major Jenks, commanding forces during the engagement of the 14th instant, is entitled to every praise for gallant conduct and the admirable manner in which he handled his troops on that occasion, and for prompt and faithful discharge of duty on all occasions. Captain Giesler, Third Wisconsin Cavalry, Captain Hamilton and Lieutenant Wylie, Third Arkansas Cavalry, and Lieutenant Campbell, Third U.S. Cavalry, are entitled to special mention as brave and efficient officers.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel Third Arkansas Cavalry, Commanding.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Dept. of Arkansas and Seventh Army Corps.

ADDENDA.

Medals of Honor awarded for distinguished services under Resolution of Congress, No. 43, approved July 12, 1863, and section 6 of Act of Congress approved March 5, 1863.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Rank and organization</th>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Awarded for</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ellis, William</td>
<td>First sergeant Company K, Third Wisconsin Cavalry</td>
<td>1865, Jan. 14</td>
<td>Gallantry in action at Dardanelle, Ark.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
No. 2.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., January 24, 1865.

MAJOR: On the 17th instant steamers Lotus, Chippewa, Ad. Hines, and Annie Jacobs left Van Buren, Ark., each having on board a small scout under the command of a line officer. On board of each steamer were a large number of refugees, also quite a number of officers. On the Annie Jacobs, particularly, passengers and soldiers numbered about 500, en route for different localities via this place. The Chippewa had the advance, the Annie Jacobs was next, the Lotus followed, and the Ad. Hines brought up the rear. At about 4 p. m. on the 17th instant (Ivey's Ford, eighteen miles above Clarksville) the Chippewa was discovered about one mile in advance, lying at the south shore of the Arkansas, and a few moments later I was requested to examine her through a field glass, when I immediately discovered that she was on fire in her center on the main deck. I became at once satisfied of the presence of the enemy. Being the ranking officer on board, I at once assumed the direction of affairs, giving the pilot orders to put on all steam and go on, but the order had scarcely been given before the enemy opened on us with artillery. I ordered the pilot to round to and proceed up the river. By the time the direction of the boat had been changed we were opposite the first rebel gun. There being but little steam up, and it being impossible to get the boat out of the range of the guns in any reasonable time I directed the boat to be landed on the north shore, which was accomplished under the most galling fire of the enemy, having received fifteen shot and shell, which destroyed the heaters before we landed and three after we reached the shore. In addition to the fire from the artillery a continuous fire from small-arms was poured into us from the commencement of the action. One shell burst in the front cabin, one immediately under the boiler, one at the right front of the pilot house, and two in the hold. The most indescribable confusion prevailed on board among the passengers, especially the female portion, and I ordered the landing of the boat, because it was impossible to get her out of range of the artillery, and had we been any considerable distance from the shore we would have floated into the hands of the enemy owing to the damage done to the machinery by the artillery, and for the further reason that I hoped to save the two boats which were behind. The Lotus, however, was so near that before we could warn her of the danger she was within range of the artillery, and she also landed on the north side of the river; when, fearing an attack from that side of the river, I proceeded up the beach with two men, and collected the disembarked soldiers of the Lotus, and marched them to the line formed on the bank by those who had disembarked from the Jacobs. Having restored order and made every possible preparation for the protection of the boats, I at once started a messenger up the river-bank with a dispatch to General Thayer and orders for the Ad. Hines not to approach, telling briefly of the danger, and sent to Clarksville for re-enforcements. I also ordered a forage train, which happened to be within a few miles, with an escort of over 100 men, to move to us at once; which order was promptly obeyed by Capt. Thomas Stevenson, of the Fourteenth Kansas Cavalry, commanding.
The arrival of the train after dark was mistaken by the enemy for a battery from Clarksville, and no doubt had something to do with their withdrawal before daylight, on the morning of the 18th instant. In addition to the shells already mentioned, the Jacobs received two solid shots through her pilot house; one back of the ladies' cabin, and several through her hold. The Lotus received two through her pilot house. Early on the morning of the 18th instant, a re-enforcement of 350 men and two howitzers arrived from Col. William R. Judson's command at Clarksville, and the steamer Ad. Hines, having failed to receive my dispatch, also arrived. The dispatch, however, was received by General Thayer. From the released crew of the Chippewa I learned that the enemy was 1,500 strong, with from two to four pieces of artillery, whereupon I sent the steamers Ad. Hines and Lotus back to Fort Smith, with a request to General Thayer that he would send the colored brigade, with which, in addition to our own forces, I proposed to cross the river and rout the enemy before attempting to move the boats down, on the receipt of which he promptly started the brigade down the south side of the river, under command of Colonel Williams, Seventy-ninth U. S. Colored [Infantry], on the morning of the 19th instant, and the brigade arrived opposite us on the afternoon of the 20th. On the morning of the 21st Colonel Williams moved his command down the river to Patterson's Bluff, and on the afternoon of the same day the steamers Hines and Lotus arrived from Fort Smith, upon which we embarked, and proceeded down to Spadra or Clarksville Landing, leaving the steamer Annie Jacobs with her bow on dry land, having failed in all our efforts to get her afloat, notwithstanding the continued exertions of Captain Gear, assisted by a detail of all the soldiers he could use during the whole time we remained. A guard was left with the Jacobs of 200 men and one howitzer of Colonel Judson's command, with orders to have the machinery repaired and everything put in order for moving, which I was informed by the engineer could be done in a very few days. On the 22d Colonel Williams moved farther down the river, and we moved with the boats to Dardanelle without receiving a shot from the enemy. At Dardanelle we learned from Colonel Ryan, Third Arkansas Cavalry, that there was no enemy between that place and this. We therefore left Dardanelle at daylight on the morning of the 23d and arrived here on the morning of the 24th without further trouble. I recommend an investigation of the facts in relation to the surrender of the steamer Chippewa, as I failed to ascertain any good reason why she could not have been saved, and I am told she was surrendered before a shot struck her. About the time the fire of the enemy was turned from the Jacobs to the Lotus the baggage of the passengers of the former was ransacked and a great deal of money and other property stolen. The matter is being investigated, under direction of Colonel Judson, by Lieutenant-Colonel Waugh, provost-marshal at Clarksville. I cannot in justice close this report without mentioning the gallant conduct throughout of Col. Charles W. Adams, of the Twelfth Regiment Kansas Volunteers, and Lieut. Col. Owen A. Bassett, Second Regiment Kansas Volunteers, commanding, both of whom gave me their full and faithful co-operation in all my efforts to save the boats, and displayed in an eminent degree the qualifications of coolness and courage so essential to success.

The same can be justly said of every subordinate officer present, and I regret that I have not their names. Prominent among the latter was Capt. C. O. Judson, Sixth Kansas Cavalry, who was not deterred from doing his duty by either danger or fatigue. A more faithful and gallant officer does not wear a sword in the department. Lieut. J. S. Lane,
Sixth Kansas Cavalry, fearlessly exposed his life on the shore to prevent a barge laden with Government property from falling into the hands of the enemy. Lieutenant Ross, of the Fortieth Iowa Infantry, in charge of the guard on the Jacobs, won the respect of all by his gallant bearing. Sergeant A. B. Lovell, Company H, Second Kansas Cavalry, and Citizen Troutman accompanied me up the river-bank, under a severe fire from the enemy, to aid me in getting the soldiers who were leaving the Lotus to join the command from the Jacobs. The chaplain of the First Arkansas Infantry, Rev. Francis Springer, and Chaplain Randall, of the Fifty-fourth U. S. Colored, gave their full attention to the wounded, and Citizen O. S. Dillon acted the part of fireman at the imminent peril of his life. I have received no reports to enable me to state our loss, but have directed each detachment to report direct. Quite a number were killed. Especial attention is called to Capt. William E. Gear and Pilot Gibson Morrison, both of the steamer Annie Jacobs. These officers remained at the wheel in the pilot house until the vessel was safely landed and promptly executed every order I gave. A less tenacious determination would surely have resulted in the loss of the boats and the capture of all on board. Captain Jacques, of the Lotus, in person attended to the rudder of his boat, and landed her in safety above the Jacobs. Private Vincent B. Osborn, of the Second Kansas Cavalry, had his thigh bone shattered whilst making the cable of the Jacobs fast on shore. His leg was subsequently amputated and his life is lost. And last, but not least, Maj. S. B. Hunt, surgeon-in-chief of the District of the Frontier, was wherever he was needed, in danger and out of danger, attending to the wounded. Nothing that I can say can add to his well-acquired reputation.

I am, major, very respectfully, &c.,

THOS. M. BOWEN,

Colonel Thirteenth Infantry Kansas Volunteers.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas.

No. 3.

GENERAL ORDERS, HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,

No. 18.

Washington, January 25, 1865.

The major-general commanding takes pleasure in announcing to the army that Colonel Brooks, commanding Brooks' brigade, composed of Brooks' men proper, Newton's regiment, and Stirmans' battalion, after a long and difficult march to the Arkansas River, attacked a heavier force of the enemy near Dardanelle, drove him into his works, killing 8, wounding 19, and capturing 2; loss on our side, 1 killed and 15 wounded. Colonel Brooks, hearing of the approach of steamers from above, by a forced march, with 400 men, reached the proper point at sunrise on the 16th instant. Having placed a piece of artillery and his men in ambush, at 1 o'clock on the 17th, he permitted the leading boat to come well in range, when he opened upon her with his infantry and this piece. She was raked from stem to stern and soon surrendered. She proved to be the New Chippewa. The prisoners consist of 1 officer and 29 men of the Fiftieth Indiana and 40 negroes; also the captain, crew, and a large number of refugee families from Fort Smith. After removing everything valuable the boat was fired. The steamer
Annie Jacobs next hove in sight. She was immediately attacked, and the fire was returned by the troops on board. She attempted to destroy our artilleryists; our artillery, however, soon disabled her, and she grounded upon an island. Here many men were drowned in attempting to make their escape to the opposite bank. During the engagement with the Jacobs the Lotus came down. The troops on board were driven into the water and she to the north bank of the river, where most of them escaped, the iron axle of one piece of artillery having broken. Finding the boats too distant for an effective fire of musketry, Colonel Brooks returned to his camps, taking with him 82 prisoners and the refugee families captured. Federal casualties, 27 killed and wounded, besides those who were drowned; our own loss, 1 killed and 15 wounded. A large quantity of the enemy's stores were destroyed.

Colonels Newton and Stirman and Lieutenant Lockhart are spoken of in high terms by Colonel Brooks in his report of their operations. Information has also been received from Maj. Gen. M. M. Parsons that Captain Webb, who was ordered to destroy the enemy's mills at Pine Bluff and to rid the country of graybacks, has succeeded—capturing one company, thirty-seven strong, a number of horses, arms, &c.

The commanding general takes great pleasure in returning his thanks to both officers and men of the several commands for their gallant conduct on this occasion.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. B. Magruder:

EDMUND P. TURNER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

January 2–7, 1865.—Scout in Shannon County, Mo.

Reports of Capt. Levi E. Whybark, Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

Headquarters Detachment Fifth Cavalry,
Salem, Mo., January 8, 1865.

Captain: I returned yesterday evening from a scout in Shannon County, Mo. I left here Monday with forty-five men of Companies O, D, M, Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry. I had information that there was a camp of some eighty bushwhackers on Jack's Fork, which was false; they camped in small squads, from five to fifteen in a squad. I scouted out Jack's Fork Hills and found their camp; we but two men in camp. We killed one and got both of their horses. On Birch Prairie we found another squad. There we killed another. I then divided my men in three squads, and scouted the whole county and the head of Jack's Fork. I came across a squad of eight or ten; we fired on them. They returned fire and wounded one of my men severely, but I think he will recover. There we killed 4 and wounded 2, who made their escape. We captured 6 horses and rig. I captured in all 9 horses and killed 6 bushwhackers. I found several camps in those hills. I destroyed them and burned several harboring places. We found several pens of corn out in those hills, five miles from any farm. I think that county is scouted out more thoroughly than it ever was since the war. I was down as far as eight miles of Thomasville. Freeman has disbanded his men till spring, and they are scattered all over the whole country in small squads. Texas County is full. There have been several squads of eight and ten [who] went up in the neighborhood of Rolla, Mo., a few days ago. These fellows come in and rob the citizens of all their horses and bedclothing and meat, &c. While I was gone down in Shannon County they were in this county, and robbed several families of everything they had—did not leave them anything in the world, clothing or anything to eat. I will send Captain Benz with a squad of men into Texas County to-morrow morning to rout those fellows that are in that vicinity. There is no large force this side of Batesville. If there was a scout of 200 or 300 men sent down on Spring River and in Arkansas it would pay, as there is where they take all their stolen property. Some of those fellows have moved their families back to Texas and Dent and Shannon Counties. There is plenty of corn in Shannon and down in that country to feed a scout of 300 or 400 men by camping in different places, and this county will be visited by those fellows as long as they are allowed to remain in that country. I will endeavor to keep them out of this county as well as I can.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
LEVI E. WHYBARK,
Captain, Commanding Post Detachment.

Capt. C. G. LAURANT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Rolla District, Rolla, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS DETACHMENT FIFTH CAVALRY
MISSOURI STATE MILITIA,
Salem, Mo., January 9, 1865.

Sir: I returned from six days' scout down in Shannon County. That whole country is full of rebels, scouting in small squads, as Freeman has disbanded his whole army until spring. Now they are engaged in stealing and robbing the whole country. I routed several camps of them. We had little skirmishes with them several times. We killed 6 men and captured 9 horses. I had 1 man wounded, of Company C, but not badly. I will send Captain Benz this morning into Texas County, as there are a great many in that vicinity. While I was gone they came in near Salem, and robbed several families of everything they had. There is no large force this side of Batesville.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,
L. E. WHYBARK,
Captain, Commanding Detachment.

Lieut. Col. J. A. EPPSTEIN,
Commanding Fifth Cavalry Missouri State Militia.

JANUARY 2–10, 1865.—Scout from Fort Wingate to Sierra del Datil, N. Mex.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Wingate, N. Mex., January 19, 1865.

Capt. B. C. CUTLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of New Mexico:

Sir: I have the honor to inclose herewith report of First Lieut. José M. Sanches, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, dated January 15, 1865.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
E. W. EATON,
Major, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, Commanding Post.
SIR: For the information of the major in command of the post I have the honor to report that, in pursuance of the instructions received on the 2d instant from these headquarters, I followed the trail of the Indians who during the night previous had stolen a number of sheep from people residing near this post, which trail I was ordered to follow and to do all in my power to recover the stolen sheep, and if possible to inflict severe punishment on the savages. After having gone six miles to the south of this post, I discovered the trail, and followed it by forced marches for four days as far as the Sierra del Datil. It was impossible for me to pursue the Indians any farther, owing to a severe snow-storm and to the impassableness of the mountains. I encamped there two days and sent eight of the men under my command to reconnoiter the other side of the range, with orders to try to find the trail, which I had lost the day before, and to watch for smoke or other signs of Indians. On their return they informed me that they had not been able to discover anything. Seeing that it was impossible for me to overtake the Indians, I thought it best to return slowly, allowing my animals to graze on the way. I did so, and on my return march had plenty of grass, water, and wood. My men suffered somewhat owing to the scantiness of their rations. We lived on boiled wheat for three days. This was all we had to suffer during the expedition.

I am, sir, with respect, your obedient servant,

J. M. SANCHEZ,
First Lieut., First New Mexico Cavalry, Commanding Detachment.

Second Lieut. JOHN G. DRENNAN,
First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, Post Adjutant.

JANUARY 4-16, 1865.—Expedition from Bloomfield to Poplar Bluff, Mo., and vicinity.

Bloomfield, Mo., January 15, 1865.

I arrived here at 1 o'clock to-day with the command. Had to swim the Saint Francis River. Captain Cochran did not join me at Poplar Bluff, as you directed, but afterward formed junction with me in Cherokee. We killed 19 guerrillas and took 5 prisoners. Lost our ambulance and wagon in the swamp between Current and Black Rivers. Have about fifty contraband horses and mules. It is impossible to remain here longer than one night; our stock cannot be foraged. I will march for the Cape to-morrow unless you direct otherwise. I had 1 man killed out of my command, and Captain Cochran had 1 wounded.

WILLIAM RINNE,
Lieutenant, Commanding.

Col. J. B. ROGERS,
Cape Girardeau.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO., January 18, 1865.

SIR: The command sent out under Major Robbins, consisting of detachments of Companies A, I, and M, Second Cavalry Missouri
State Militia, numbering forty-five men, twenty-five men of the Second Missouri Artillery, and twenty men of the Seventy-ninth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, was turned over to me January 4, 1863, at Bloomfield, Mo., by Major Robbins, as you directed, and I proceeded to Poplar Bluff, as ordered. Captain Cochran did not join me there as you directed in your instructions to me, the distance he had to march being too great for the short time given him to march it in. I waited for him thirty-six hours and then marched without him for Cherokee Bay. Finding the swamps impassable for teams, I left my team and ambulance at Poplar Bluff with a guard to protect them till Captain Cochran could come up, when he could move by another route into the head of Cherokee Bay and by a better road, and bring the teams, if he desired to do so, and where I could join him. The command I took with me numbered seventy men. I crossed the swamp between Cane Creek and Current River and then divided my small force into two parties. I directed one party to strike the bay near the lower end at the rebel Colonel Reves', while with the other party I struck it at the upper end, directing the party I sent in the lower end of the bay to join me at Patterson's, on the bay. By these directions I succeeded in surprising the rebels, killing 10, wounding 3 severely, and capturing 5. I had 1 man killed, and no other casualty to any of the men of my command during the expedition. Among the rebels killed were 3 officers—Lieutenant Copeland, Lieutenant Sooter, and Lieutenant Moore. The two latter belonged to the notorious Captain Bowles' company. The killed and prisoners all belonged to Reves' command. We found no considerable force together. They were scattered over the country in small bands from five to ten, not expecting a Federal force so near at hand. Captain Cochran joined me on the bay, bringing up my team and ambulance. I reported to him for orders, when he instructed me, after having done all that I could in the bay, to return with my command to the Cape by the same route in which I had entered the bay, while he would take a different route, this being necessary, as forage could not be procured for the whole command at any one place. In crossing from the bay to Poplar Bluff I lost my wagon and ambulance, drowned two mules and five horses. It was impossible to get the wagon or ambulance out of the swamp. Cane Creek was very high, overflowing its banks and covering the whole face of the country for eight miles with water from two to three feet deep, through which the command had to march and break their road through ice from one and a half to two inches thick. Our next trouble was in crossing the Saint Francis River, which we had to swim, but which was effected without loss or accident. From there to the Cape we had an uninterrupted march, where I arrived with the command on the 16th instant, having marched about 300 miles through swamps, ice, and water. The command suffered much from cold by often being compelled to swim their horses and to assist them when mired out of the mud and water. The result of the expedition was 19 rebels killed, 3 severely wounded, and 5 captured; 50 horses and mules were captured, 35 of which have been turned over to the provost-marshal at Cape Girardeau, Mo.; 5 head drowned in the swamp, 4 head claimed by citizens and given up, and 6 head stolen from the corral at Bloomfield, Mo.

With much respect, I am, colonel, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM RINNE,
First Lieutenant, Second Missouri Artillery, Comdg. Detachment.
Col. J. B. ROGERS.
JANUARY 4-27, 1865.—Expedition from Brownsville to Augusta, Ark.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD BRIGADE,
CAVALRY DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Brownsville, Ark., January 29, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report, for the information of the general commanding, that, in obedience to orders received from Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr, U. S. Volunteers, at the time of their issue commanding the District of Little Rock, dated December 29, 1864, I started from Brownsville on Wednesday, the 4th instant, with a force composed of detachments of the Eighth and Eleventh Missouri and Ninth Iowa Cavalry; in all, 1,050 effective men. The command commenced moving at 8 a.m. on the Brownsville and Austin road; reached Austin at 1.30 p.m., when a short halt was made. The day's march was continued on the Searcy road to a point about four miles from the former place, where I camped for the night, halting at 4 p.m. The whole distance traveled was fourteen miles and a half. The roads were generally in good condition, no difficulty being had in crossing wagons, except in the wood near the outer edge of the prairie near Brownsville. The weather was pleasant. The next morning I commenced moving at 7.30 o'clock, at which time it commenced raining, and continued to rain without cessation all day. The route traveled was rough and toward the latter part of the day's march exceedingly bad, the roads being entirely covered with water to the depth of from six to eighteen inches, with bogs and miry ground. Owing to the fact that the bridge over Bull Bayou on the main road was destroyed I was obliged to make a detour to the right of about three miles and to cross the bayou at a point by Davis' house, which was reached at 12 m. Much difficulty was experienced in crossing on account of the steep bank, muddy in high stage of water, and roughness of the bridge. The command reached Quares' Bridge at 3 p.m., near which point the Searcy road was left, and a road leading in an east-southeasterly direction was taken and followed till 5 p.m., when the command encamped for the night on Goodridge's plantation. Owing to the unprecedented state of the roads the train could not be brought through to camp, but was forced to remain at Watkins', four miles from Goodridge's. It rained and snowed incessantly all day and night, and the roads were in an almost impassable condition—entirely so, in fact, for the train. The distance traveled was seventeen miles. On the 6th of January, the third day out, the train, owing to the almost impassable state of the roads, was sent back to Searcy, and thence to West Point, at which point I arrived safely on the morning of the 7th instant. My advance left camp for West Point at 8 a.m., where it arrived at 10 a.m., at which hour also the steamer Ella, which had been sent to ferry the command across the Red River, arrived. The main column reached West Point at 3.30 p.m., having left Goodridge's at 12 m. The distance from this point to West Point is six miles and a half. The road was entirely submerged and the ground low, boggy, and swampy. Immediately on my arrival I made arrangements to cross the command the next day, which was successfully accomplished by 2 p.m. of the 8th instant. I then moved up the river road to Hitcher's place, two miles and a half from West Point, where I encamped for the night. The road was in good order and the weather excellent. On the 9th instant the march was resumed.
at 7.30 a.m. I moved north to a point seven miles from West Point, and northeast, and to the right of Prospect Bluff, by Prince's house, where the road was in an easterly direction, leading to a point on White River three miles from and north of Hatcher's Ferry.

Following the road, we marched six miles and a half and camped in the woods. The entire route from Prince's to camp was an almost impassable swamp, the water in three or four places being so deep as to force the command to swim their horses. After a vast deal of trouble the camping place was reached at 3 p.m. It rained constantly all day and during the night, rendering the march exceedingly difficult and fatiguing. Resuming the march the next day, the 10th instant, we reached a point two miles from Hatcher's Ferry, on the west bank of White River, at 3 p.m., when we encamped for the night, marching nearly the entire distance, nine miles, in water from six inches to four feet deep, at times swimming our horses, and through a low, miry, swampy country, in a very severe snow-storm, accompanied by a cold north wind, and enduring and surmounting hardships and difficulties caused by the inclemency of the weather and the almost impassable condition of the surrounding country and its roads rarely experienced by troops in any country. The next day, the 11th instant, the steamers Ella and Belle Peoria being in readiness, I crossed the command to the east side of White River, landing at a point two miles north of Augusta. The town was occupied at 12 m., the command encamping in the grove adjoining the town, on Hough's place. The order to "consume forage" and "gather beeves" we carried out to the letter during the entire time the command remained at Augusta. Small bodies of troops were daily sent out in every direction, and succeeded in capturing a large number of beeves and bringing in or consuming great quantities of forage. We remained at Augusta from the 11th to the 24th instant, on which day, at 8.30 a.m., in obedience to orders received at Brownsville [from] the general commanding on the evening of the 22d instant, I commenced moving south to a point opposite Nigger Hill, nineteen miles south of Augusta, where I intended to cross the column in order to avoid the trouble and delay of crossing both the White and Red Rivers. I sent the train from Augusta to Nigger Hill by boat, knowing that it would be well-nigh impossible to cross it over Bayou Cache, eight miles from Augusta, on account of the high stage of water, which was so deep that it could only be crossed by swimming horses. Having seen the column safely across this bayou, the march was resumed, most of the way on the levee, until the point opposite Nigger Hill was reached at 6 p.m. Failing to communicate with the steamer Ella, which left Augusta in the morning, I camped on the river-bank, and commenced crossing the command the next morning, the 25th instant, which was successfully finished at 9 a.m. on the 26th instant. Leaving Nigger Hill at that time, I moved the command in a northwesterly direction till the south bank of Red River was reached, where the levee road was followed for seven miles to West Point, which place was reached at 1.30 p.m. Moving on, I camped for the night on Burrows' plantation, five miles and a half from West Point and four from Searcy. The next day the march was resumed at 8 a.m., and the command, with the exception of the train and its guard, safely reached Brownsville, via Searcy, Stony Point, and Austin, at 11.45 p.m., having marched forty-seven miles in one day. The train and its guard encamped near Cypress Bayou, and the next day came into Brownsville at 1 p.m. No form of the enemy was seen or heard of except two or three small bodies on Crowley's Ridge and below Clarendon.
captured 7 prisoners, one of them a lieutenant, all of whom we sent to Devall's Bluff by boat. We also captured 407 head of cattle, 330 of which number were sent by boat to Devall's Bluff, and the balance consumed or brought into Brownsville. We also captured and brought in horses and mules. The conduct of the officers and men of the command was, with some exceptions, generally good.

To the officers of my staff, Capt. F. F. Burlock, Fourth Arkansas Cavalry, acting assistant adjutant-general; Lieut. J. J. See, Eighth Missouri Cavalry, acting aide-de-camp; Lieut. M. Santee, Eleventh Missouri Cavalry, acting assistant quartermaster, and Lieut. T. B. Horn, Eighth Missouri Cavalry, acting commissary of subsistence, I am greatly indebted for the zeal and ability with which they discharged their respective duties at all times during the scout, which in every respect was the most fatiguing and harassing one I ever made.

I have the honor, lieutenant, to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. F. GEIGER,
Colonel Eighth Missouri Cavalry,
Comdg. Third Brigade, Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps.

Lieut. W. A. MARTIN,

JANUARY 7, 1865.—Skirmishes with Indians at Valley Station and Julesburg, Colo. Ter.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Col. Thomas Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, commanding District of Colorado.

No. 1.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, KANS.,
January 9, 1865—6.10 p. m.

A large Indian force, estimated from 500 to 1,500, attacked stages on Platte route on the 7th, and a severe fight ensued; Colonel Summers and Major O'Brien in command. Indians finally repulsed. Our loss, 15; enemy, 30, including chief commanding.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff.

No. 2.

DENVER, January 7, 1865.

Indians attacked train at Valley Station; burned. Killed some 12 men. Attacked train at Julesburg. Were driven off. Two killed each side. Operators have left stations since. Unless troops are hurried out from Kearny, Lyon, or some point, people must starve. Immense excitement. I have no body to re-enforce with.

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel.

Major-General CURTIS,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

JANUARY 7-9, 1865.—Expedition from Pine Bluff, Ark, and skirmish (9th).

CAMP SEVENTH CAVALRY MISSOURI VOLUNTEERS,
Pine Bluff, Ark., January 11, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to transmit the following report, viz:

On the evening of the 7th instant I received orders from post headquarters to take charge of 150 men, consisting of 50 men of the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, under Lieutenant Kennedy, and 100 men of the Seventh Missouri Cavalry, with Lieutenants Williams, Sanders, and Slingerland, and proceed in an easterly direction in search of a force of rebels reported to have a considerable quantity of stock collected some twenty-five miles from this place. We marched at 7 p.m., found the roads very bad, and halted at 12 o'clock and fed our horses, after having marched about fifteen miles, obtaining forage from Doctor Jones, for which I receipted. We resumed the march at daylight on the morning of the 8th, and crossed Bayou Wabbaseca on a bridge, but before getting to the bridge we captured a rebel by the name of Colvin Jenkins, who is either a rebel soldier or a member of Vangine's guerrilla band. I ascertained that the stock (which was principally mules) had been moved across the Arkansas River, and there had also been a Federal scout from Brownsville in that vicinity a few days previous, which had scattered the rebel Major Watkins' command in every direction. Finding that I could accomplish nothing by going farther, I recrossed the bayou, crossing the men and equipments on a raft, swimming the horses. We camped for the night at the plantation of Mrs. Lindsay, where we obtained forage, for which I receipted. We marched at 8 o'clock on the morning of the 9th, taking the direct road for Pine Bluff, and when within twelve miles of this place I detached Lieut. J. W. Sanders, with twenty-three men, besides fourteen men of the militia with Summerville, to make a detour to left of the road. When I had marched about three miles and crossed Plum Bayou at the bridge near Mrs. Davidson's, I heard firing in the direction that Lieutenant Sanders had taken. I halted the command, and sent Lieutenant Slingerland back with thirty men to ascertain the cause of the firing. I waited an hour, and hearing no more firing came on into camp, where I arrived at 3 p.m., without any other incident worthy of note. Lieutenant Sanders arrived in camp about an hour later, and made the following report:

After being detached from your command on the morning of the 9th I proceeded about two miles, when I fell in with a party of bushwhackers (of Vangine's command) at house of Mrs. Milans. I attacked them and drove them back about forty rods to where Vangine and his principal force was, at which place they made a charge on my lines, but we succeeded in repulsing them and driving them back about one-quarter of a mile, when he was re-enforced by eighteen or twenty men and made another stand, but was driven again and chased about one mile. The loss on the side of the enemy was 4 killed on the ground and 4 wounded, also 8 horses killed or wounded so as to render them unfit for service. Our loss was 1 man wounded severely, 1 horse captured, and 1 shot.

Curtis, the wounded man, belonged to Company C, Seventh Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, and was left at the house of Mrs. Milans.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. W. TOPPASS,
Captain, Seventh Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, Commanding Scout.

Lieut. S. M. CAMBERN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Post Pine Bluff, Ark.

JANUARY 7-11, 1865.—Scout from Fort Ellsworth, Kans.

FORT LARNED, KANS., January 12, 1865.

SIR: In pursuance of orders received from district headquarters, organizing an independent scout of twelve men under my command, I proceeded from Fort Ellsworth on the 7th of January; traveled west up the Smoky Hill twelve miles and turned northeast toward the Saline; passed Buffalo Creek, a small stream with wood and water; three miles farther on came to the Saline two miles above the mouth of Hill Creek, and camped for the night. January 8, traveled due west up the Saline, passing through a very rough country, with few streams running into the Saline. Camped for the night at the mouth of quite a large stream running into the Saline from the south, name not known; water very salty. January 9, left the Saline and traveled southwest; came to Big Creek in twenty-four miles, and to the Smoky Hill four miles south of Big Creek; camped for the night on the Smoky Hill, between sixty and sixty-five miles above Fort Ellsworth and twelve miles above the mouth of Big Creek. January 10, traveled a little east of south, and crossed Walnut Creek twenty-two miles from the Smoky Hill; camped on a dry branch of Walnut Creek six miles south. January 11, traveled a little east of south and came to the military road at Pawnee Rock, fifteen miles northeast of Fort Larned; country along the Saline very rough and broken, but nearer the Smoky Hill it is quite level. But little timber along the Saline, consisting of scattering trees along the bank. Big Creek is well skirted with timber, is six or eight feet wide and six inches deep—a favorite camping place for Indians; but few trees along the Smoky Hill where we traveled. Distance from the Smoky Hill to the Saline, fifteen miles above Ellsworth, twelve miles; from the Smoky Hill to the Saline, sixty miles above Ellsworth, eighteen miles; mouth of Big Creek nearly due north of Fort Larned, distant fifty or fifty-five miles. Not the least sign of Indians seen on the trip; buffalo tolerably plenty and very tame, showing that they have not been hunted by the Indians. Our scout extended up the Saline and Smoky Hill sixty miles west of Ellsworth, and it is hardly possible there are camps east of the circuit taken.

Yours, respectfully,

D. C. NETTLETON,
Sergeant, Commanding Scout.

Col. JAMES H. FORD.
JANUARY 8, 1865.—Action at Dove Creek, Concho River, Tex.

Reports of Brig. Gen. J. D. McAdoo, Texas State Troops.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Austin, Tex., March 4, 1865.

Lieut. Col. T. M. Jack,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sir: I have the honor to inclose herewith, for the information of the major-general commanding, copy of letter from Brig. Gen. J. D. McAdoo, commanding Second and Third Frontier Districts, Texas State Troops. He has been under orders from his Excellency Governor Murrah, investigating the conduct of the officers and men engaged in the recent fight with Kansas Indians on the Concho. He makes some statements relative to Captain Fosset, commanding detachment of Confederate troops in that expedition, which will doubtless possess interest for General Walker. The court of inquiry will probably make further developments, of which the major-general commanding shall be duly advised.

I have the honor to be, sir, yours, respectfully,

W. C. WALSH,

Acting Adjutant and Inspector General.

[Inclosure.]

Hdqrs.—2d and 3d Frontier Dists., Texas State Troops,

Gatesville, February 20, 1865.

Colonel: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to verbal instructions from His Excellency the Governor, I came to this place several days ago for the purpose of investigating the facts relating to the battle of Dove Creek on the 8th of last month. I have devoted myself assiduously to the task, by full and thorough conference with officers and men who were with the expedition under Captain Totten, of the State forces, and Captain Fosset, of the Confederate forces, and who actively participated in the battle. The substantial facts, as I have gathered them, are about as follows: About the____ day of____ last, Captain Gillentin, of the Second Frontier District, who was out with a scout beyond the settlements, reported to Major Erath's headquarters that he had discovered a large Indian trail crossing the Brazos River and going in a southwest course. He asked for large reinforcements, whereupon Major Erath ordered Captain Totten, the senior captain of the Second District, to proceed as soon as possible, with about_____ men, to reinforce Captain Gillentin and follow the trail. He did so, striking the trail about where the Indians had crossed the Brazos River. The trail was a large one, and separated into two trails. Captain Totten took the one running nearest to the settlements. It continued in a southwesterly direction, diverging from the settlements and pointing to the headwaters of the Concho. The other trail (said to be the larger) bore in a more westerly direction still farther from the settlements. The trail followed, from its general appearance, the number of wigwams at the camping places, &c., showed that the party of Indians numbered several hundred. The evidences seemed abundant to all with whom I have conversed that they were civilized Indians, and there was nothing discovered that led to the belief that they were unfriendly, further than the simple fact that they were Indians traveling upon the soil of Texas without any notice being given to the civil or military authorities of the country of their presence in the country or of their intentions. The distances from their respective camps showed moderate travel, and at some of the camps they had remained several days. Here they left signs of dressing great numbers of buffalo and deer skins, and pieces of broken tableware, cups and saucers, plates, &c., scraps of calico, and other goods were found about the camps. At one place a newly made grave was found. The body was exhumed. It was that of a child two or three years old, well and tastefully dressed. The grave was dug with a spade, and a vault made similar to graves prepared by the whites, with a board at the head. Captain Fosset, of the old Frontier Regiment, was in advance of Captain Totten on the trail. On the night of the 7th of January Captain Totten received information by express from Captain Fosset that he (Fosset) was within a few miles of the Indian encampment, and urging him to join him before daylight next morning. Totten was some thirty-five miles in the rear. He pressed forward, joining Fosset early in the day on the 8th. Fosset and his men were in the saddle within three miles of the Indian camp when Totten arrived. The two commands halted but a few minutes, during which a brief conversation was had between the two commanders, after which, without any council of war, without any distribution of orders, without any formation of a line of battle, without any preparation, without any inspection of the camp, without any communication with the Indians or inquiry as to what tribe or party they belonged to, without any knowledge of their strength or position, the command "forward" was given, and a pell-mell charge was made for three miles. Captain Fosset, with the Confederate forces, charged toward the right of the encampment, and Totten, with the State forces, charged the left and center. Owing to the roughness of the route and the distance to the camp, the men were strung out for probably a mile or more, those having the best horses dashing into the camp first and others as they came up.
Chap. LX.] ACTION AT DOVE CREEK, TEX. 27

The attack was a surprise. The Indians were generally in their wигwams. No fire was made by the Indians until after they were fired upon and some of them killed. They showed no disposition to fight. The women were screaming about the camp, some of them in plain English declaring they were friendly. After the first few guns were fired by our men the Indians fell back into the ravines and brush in rear of the camp and opened a fire upon our men with the most deadly effect. In a very few minutes about fifteen of Totten's men (four of them officers) were killed and about as many wounded. The Indians were completely sheltered and Totten ordered his men to fall back. A scattering fire was kept up until late in the evening, when our forces retired, bringing off their wounded and leaving their dead on the field. A very heavy snow fell that night, and the command moved very slowly back toward the settlements. What part was taken by Captain Fosset, after the separation of the commands when the charge was ordered, is unknown to me, except by rumor, as I have seen no one who was with him in the charge. I cannot learn that he attacked the camp at all. He seems to have had a fight, a sort of running fight, over the Indians' horses, which were in a valley above the camp when the charge was made, for he lost some five men killed and a number wounded. He also, it is reported, lost nearly all the horses which he had taken from the Indians—recaptured. Some days after the battle Captain Totten, with a squad of men, returned to ascertain the movements of the Indians and to bury the dead. He found the camp abandoned by the Indians, evidently in haste, immediately after the battle. They had not buried their own dead, and our men lay as they had fallen on the field—none of them scalped. Captain Totten reports that they left immense quantities of their baggage and property, including several hundred axes, spades, and other implements of husbandry, and immense numbers of buffalo and deer skins. The Indians had gone west. Captain Totten followed the trail until it entered the plains, a distance only of a few miles Lieutenant Mulkey, of Fosset's command, who was with Fosset in the expedition but with Totten in the charge, is of the opinion that the Indians pushed their way probably to the Pecos or possibly into Mexico. He does not think it possible for them to have gone northwardly, their horses being extremely poor and the country being entirely destitute of grass. Lieutenant Mulkey is an old Indian guide, of Indian descent, born and raised in the Cherokee Nation, and is well acquainted with Indian character and habits. He believes the Indians to be chiefly Kickapoos, with some admixture of other tribes. From their general outfit and movements he does not believe they were unfriendly, and he informs me that he so told Captain Fosset, suggestting to him that they ought to be communicated with before being attacked. Captain Fosset declined to communicate with them, saying that he recognized no friendly Indians on the Texas frontier. I met with many rumors before my arrival here that flags of truce raised by the Indians had been disregarded and their bearers shot down in cold blood. I have met no one who saw any flags of truce, but it is currently reported, as on good authority, that an Indian went out from the encampment with two children to Captain Fosset where he and his command had taken some of the Indian horses, and unarmed, with his hands raised, told Captain Fosset that they were friendly Indians, and that if he would see their principal chief all things would be made satisfactory. Fosset told the Indian he recognized no friendly Indians in Texas. The Indian then told him he was his prisoner. Fosset's reply was, "We take no prisoners here," and thereupon ordered him shot, which was done. He also, it is said, ordered the children shot, but the men interposed and they were taken as prisoners, though they subsequently made their escape in the retreat. This Indian who was shot by Fosset's order is said to have been a Pottawatomie, and to have had a pass signed "W. M. Ross, agent of the Pottawatomies," authorizing the bearer "to hunt until February 4, 1865." He showed his pass to Fosset before he was shot.

In the partial investigation I have been able to make of the affair I have deemed it due to the public service to order a court of inquiry in regard to the conduct of the officers and men engaged in the battle.
The court will meet at Lampasas Springs on the 15th of March next.
It would be proper for me to state that although the general public opinion is, among those who were in the expedition and others acquainted with the facts, the Indians were friendly, or at least were on no hostile errand, yet, in connection with rumors which have some time been rife that Kansas jayhawkers, with Indian allies, were expected on this frontier this spring, it is supposed by some that these Indians may have been a pioneer or spy expedition preparatory to the spring operations. I am informed by Major Erath that Brig. Gen.
H. E. McCulloch, commanding Confederate forces on the Northern Sub-District of Texas, as well as Brigadier-General Throckmorton, commanding First Frontier District, Texas State Troops, anticipates raids upon this frontier, as above indicated, from information in his possession deemed reliable. My own opinion is, from the route these Indians were traveling, their having their families and apparently their entire property with them, that they were a moving party, probably going to Mexico to escape the turmoil of the present war. They were outside of our settlements and still diverging in their course from them. There were no evidences showing that any parties were being sent in the direction of the settlements, and indeed nothing about their movements to excite suspicion except the fact of their presence in the country unexplained. And I consider the attack upon them without a parley as extremely unfortunate, if not culpable. I shall keep scouts out to watch for their reappearance upon this line, and to ascertain, if possible, where they have gone. If they should be found, I shall endeavor to open communication with them, learn their true character, and if they are found to be friendly or disposed to be so, take the necessary steps in the premises.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. D. McADOO,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Col. JOHN BURKE,
Adjutant and Inspector General, Austin.

BURNET, TEX., February 28, 1865.

COLONEL: Since my communication of the 20th instant, in reference to the late battle with the Indians on Dove Creek, I have seen Captain Mullins, of Coleman County, who had been sent out with about 100 men from the Second Frontier District to ascertain, if possible, the course the Indians had taken and their whereabouts. He went as far as the head of the South Concho, but, the horses becoming entirely broken down and starved, he was forced to return without making any discoveries. The winter has been so severe in that elevated mountain country that the grass is entirely destroyed. Captain Mullins believes, from a statement made to him by a man by the name of Tankersley, living on the Concho, some fifteen miles from the battle-field, that the Indians had returned to the northward. The trail, I am satisfied, however, had not been followed sufficiently far to indicate the direction they had taken; and I, in the absence of authentic information, should rely more upon the opinion of Lieutenant Mulkey, that they had gone in the direction of Mexico. On my arrival here this afternoon I received a letter from Maj. John Henry Brown, commanding Third Frontier District, dated Fredericksburg, February 21, in which he says young Hester, of Mason, who is vouched for as trustworthy, has arrived here from Eagle Pass. He states that he saw and conversed with those Concho Kickapoos in Piedras Negras. The Indians repeated their friendly intentions; said that when our men appeared they sent a woman with a child out with a white flag; that our men killed the woman and compelled them to fight; that their total loss was 11 killed and 7 wounded. The Indians expressed the opinion to Hester that the men who attacked them were lawless men, desirous of plunder, and not authorized by the Government, &c. They were buying some supplies, and said they were going farther—into Mexico. Though I do not know young Hester, I am free to say that, from all the information I have been able to gather in reference to these Indians, I regard his story as very probably true. I think the Indians were originally going to Mexico, and that they actually did go there after the fight. What shall be done? These Indians ought to be communicated with. If they are what they represent themselves to be, would it not be well for a commissioner to be sent to Mexico to hunt them up and confer with them? Though these Indians may not believe the attack made upon them was authorized by Government, yet, if unexplained by Government, and no effort is made to explain to them the position of the Government, it is greatly to be feared that they will return to avenge their losses in the attack. The fate of this frontier may in a great measure depend upon an amicable treaty with them. I am now en route for my headquarters at Fredericksburg.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. D. McADOO,
Brig. Gen., Comdg. 2d and 3d Frontier Dists., Texas State Troops.

Col. JOHN BURKE,
Adjutant and Inspector General, Austin.

JANUARY 9–11, 1865.—Skirmishes in Texas County, Mo.

ROLLA, MO., January 16, 1865—110 p. m.

I have the honor to report that Capt. William Monks, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry, had several skirmishes with Yeates’ band of guerrillas in Texas County on the 9th, 10th, and 11th instant, in which he killed 9 and wounded 1. The wounded guerrilla escaped. Captain Monks’ men must be good marksmen, as it is seldom so large a proportion of hits prove fatal.

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

JANUARY 10, 1865.—Skirmish near Glasgow, Mo.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Capt. Thomas B. Reed, Ninth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.
No. 2.—Capt. Alexander Denny, Forty-sixth Infantry Enrolled Missouri Militia.
No. 3.—Lieut. Thomas Gannon, Ninth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

No. 1.

Report of Capt. Thomas B. Reed, Ninth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS,
Glasgow, Mo., January 17, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to inclose official reports of Captain Denny and Lieutenant Gannon of their recent scout after Jackson and his band. The killing of Forte Campbell, near Fayette, the arrest of Mrs. Fanny Duff, her exposition and the arrest and rigid examination of other parties more or less in sympathy with Jackson and his band, in connection with a thorough scouring of the country by small squads in search of the wounded brigand, caused his hasty removal and a timely report of that removal. The killing of his escort and the exciting chase that ensued are fully shown by accompanying reports. I would respectfully ask you to approve the distribution of the captured revolvers and money, made by Lieutenant Gannon among those engaged in the chase after Robinson and Jackson. It may be reasonably hoped the earth is forever rid of this monster, and this recognition of their services would seem to be an appropriate reward.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. B. REED,
Capt., Comdg. Sub-Dist. Howard, Randolph, and Chariton Counties.

Capt. G. A. HOLLOWAY,
Asst. Adj. Gen., District of North Missouri, Macon, Mo.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,
Roanoke, January 14, 1865.

I beg leave to submit to your honor the following report of a recent scout after the notorious Jackson and band, which resulted in the killing of Gray Brown and John Robinson, of said band, Jackson alone escaping to tell the tale, though hatless and bootless and badly wounded. At midnight on Monday night, the 9th instant, I received information that two of Jackson's men were seen at 9 p.m. same night, in Chariton County, three miles north of Switzer's Mill. From the information received I had reason to believe they were making for Persia [Perche] or Boons Lick Hills. Determined to head them off if possible, I gathered ten men and hastened to the junction of the plank and Keytesville roads. From this point I sent a dispatch to Captain Reed, Ninth Missouri State Militia, at Glasgow, instructing him to send out on the road leading to Haze's Bridge, on East Fork of Chariton, to act in concert with myself, after which I took the Keytesville road. In less than a mile from the plank road I came upon Jackson and two of his men at the crossing of the creek near William Eddings', six miles east of Glasgow. It being cloudy and in the timber, I got within thirty yards of the enemy before I discovered them. After hailing him several times without any response, I dismounted my men and opened a brisk fire, which drove the enemy from the creek, firing back as they retreated. Jackson's horse was killed from under him. A little farther on Gray Brown fell from his horse, mortally wounded. Jackson here mounted Brown's horse, and he and Robinson made their escape into the woods and hills. I concluded to remain there until daylight and take the trail. Sent a second dispatch to Captain Reed informing him of what had taken place and my intentions. At daylight I was promptly joined by Lieutenant Gannon and some twenty men of Captain Reed's command, when the hounds took the trail, which was difficult to follow, in consequence of the scarcity of snow, especially after the trail struck the Fayette and Glasgow road. Consequently the men were scattered and divided into different squads, all eager for the chase. At 1 o'clock Lieutenant Scarf, of my company, and Lieutenant Gannon, with some eight or ten men belonging to mine and Captain Reed's command, all of whom deserve great credit, came upon Jackson and Robinson at the house of one Johnson, some ten miles of Glasgow, in the Boons Lick Hills. Pushed them so close that Jackson left his boots. Here a running fight kept up until they reached the brush, where Robinson was killed and his horse captured. Jackson was hotly pursued until night set in, when Lieutenant Gannon sent a dispatch to Fayette, which was promptly responded to by Lieutenant Williams with a squad of men, who took the trail next morning at daylight, but with what success I have not learned. We captured from the enemy 2 horses, 2 saddles and rigging, 1 sleigh and harness, 1 fine gold watch, 7 revolvers, hats, blankets, and many other things of less value; also, $75 or $80 in greenbacks. I feel that much credit is due Captain Reed and Lieutenant Gannon and the men under his command for their prompt action; also, Lieutenant Scarf and the men of my command—in fact, all did their duty nobly, for which both officers and men have my sincere thanks.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ALEXANDER DENNY,

No. 3.

GLASGOW, MO., January 12, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report the result of a scout sent out by you from these headquarters at 5 a.m. on the 10th instant. I proceeded, as directed, to the house of William Eddings, about six miles north of this place, where I met Capt. A. Denny, Company F, Forty-sixth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, with about ten men of his company. He stated that he had a fight with bushwhackers, three or four in number; that he killed one of them, Gray Brown, and that the bushwhackers had one wounded man with them, as they had a horse and sleigh, by which they hauled him, and that during the firing the man got out and the horse turned around and ran back in the direction from which he came. At daylight I ordered Lieutenant Lehman, Company H, Ninth Cavalry Missouri Militia, to proceed with fifteen men and get the horse and sleigh and any articles that might be therewith, and to send them to headquarters, Glasgow, Mo., and then to proceed in a northwesterly direction in pursuit of the bushwhackers. I proceeded myself, with fifteen men of Company G, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, and Captain Denny and squad. We followed the track with difficulty for about a mile, when we lost it. I then divided the detachment into small squads and moved in an easterly direction. I came upon the track again leading into a road. I had then with me Lieutenant Scarf, Forty-sixth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, with three of his men, and four men of Company G, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia. I hurried in a gallop and came in sight of the bushwhackers (two) at 12 m. They were running from a house. I gave chase and came upon them while one of them was throwing down the fence. I had then but one man (Lieutenant Scarf) with me. The others’ horses being nearly given out, could not keep up with us. We exchanged about eight shots. When five of my men came up I ordered a charge by them. The one dismounted (Robinson) could not recover his horse, and ran into the woods on foot. I pursued them about a mile through a brushy woods and came upon them while crossing a ravine. I shot one of them (Robinson) dead, and pursued the other (Jackson) until night, when I could not keep his track. I camped and sent a dispatch to Fayette for a squad of men, which arrived about 11 p.m., Lieutenant Williams, Company A, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, in command. The following morning at daylight I started them on the track, myself and squad returning to this post. Jackson is severely wounded. I got a statement from two persons that the blood was running down his left leg and that he could not use his right foot in the stirrup. He was barefooted and bareheaded. I found on the body of Robinson as follows: Belt and 6 revolvers, 4 portemonnaies, containing in all $72.25; 2 pocketknives, 1 pocket compass, 1 gold pen and silver holder, and the likenesses of two young ladies. I also got the hat and boots of Jackson, all of which effects I equally divided among the few enlisted men that were with me during the chase. Their names are as follows: Sergeant Rice, Privates Hayden and Shepherd, Company G, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, and two privates Company F, Forty-sixth Enrolled Missouri Militia.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. GANNON,

Commanding Sub-District.

JANUARY 11, 1865.—Skirmish near Lexington, Mo.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. John F. Phillips, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry, commanding District of Central Missouri.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, January 12, 1865.

A squad of bushwackers made their appearance near Lexington yesterday. Command at Lexington whipped them and drove them west. Another band is reported in river bottom below Waverly. I have my available cavalry already in these localities and they are hunting them diligently. Have ordered one more squadron to Lexington, and shall make La Fayette and Saline too hot for those bands and those who feed and succor them.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.
LEXINGTON, January 12, 1865.

Yesterday guerrillas made their appearance at Lawyer Green's, on south edge of town, fired into the house, and left, going south on Greentown road. Lieutenant Williams, with fifteen men, went in pursuit. Came up with them five miles from town. Guerrillas charged on advance, but were repulsed. Fell back stubbornly, and would form and fight at every suitable place; run as soon as our boys would charge on them. A running fight was kept up for one mile. Our boys ran out of ammunition and returned to camp. The enemy were going in direction of Greentown. There were fifteen in the squad that we had the fight with. Another squad on the old Independence road. I hear of them in small squads in different directions. Quantrill reported with 100 men in bottom below Waverly. No casualties on our side.

WM. MEREDITH,

Captain, Commanding, &c.

Colonel PHILIPS,

Commanding.

JANUARY 11–13, 1865.—Expeditions from Helena, Ark., to Harbert's Plantation, Miss.

Reports of Capt. Eli Ramsey, Sixtieth U. S. Colored Troops.

HQRS. COMPANY C, SIXTIETH U. S. COLORED INFANTRY,

January 14, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to orders received from the general commanding, on the 11th day of January, 1865, I embarked at 8 p. m., on the steamer Dove, with two commissioned officers and fifty men of Company C, Sixtieth U. S. Colored Infantry; also one lieutenant and twelve men of the Eighty-seventh Illinois Mounted Infantry, under my command; proceeded up the Mississippi River, landing on the Mississippi shore about fifteen miles above Helena, between McNeal's and Harbert's plantations. We put ashore our infantry, the boat anchoring off, with instructions to the lieutenant commanding mounted infantry to move up to Harbert's in one hour. I marched the infantry around out into the country about four miles. Came up in the rear of Harbert's place, surrounding it, to capture Willis Harbert, a deserter (colored). Hearing the dogs bark near where we passed at a plantation below he mounted his horse and left one-half hour before we came up. I then assembled the forces and proceeded to the river-bank, the boat having arrived in due time. We stationed our pickets and bivouacked on the bank for the night. In the meantime the mounted men came ashore and accompanied me to Mr. Owens' residence, some six miles distant, in search of Government horses said to be in his possession. They were not at his house. Ordered him to see that they were brought in the next day. Returned to the boat about 4 a.m. 12th January, 1865. The men suffered from cold considerably during the night, although they had fires. As soon as morning dawned I made a detail to go to the barns on the Harbert place to load and haul in corn, using an ox team and wagon on the place for that purpose. Hauled till about 1 p.m., and got in about 200 bushels of corn in the shuck. About 12.30 p.m. Mr. Owens came in,
in company with Mr. Bostick. The four United States Government horses I ordered came in soon after. Learned that one Stone had been in the neighborhood of Austin selling ammunition, but was not there now. Having accomplished all that was in my power to do in carrying out my instructions, I moved up above the wreck of the steamer Diligent and had some plank, the remains of an old cotton boat, put on board. Then, re-embarking my troops, returned to Helena, arriving here about 3 p. m. 12th January, 1865.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELI RAMSEY,

Captain, Sixtieth U. S. Colored Infantry, Commanding Expedition.

Capt. T. C. MEATYARD,
Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Eastern Arkansas.

HDQRS. COMPANY C, SIXTIETH U. S. COLORED INFANTRY,
Helena, Ark., January 14, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to orders received from the general commanding, I embarked with one commissioned officer and forty men of Company C, Sixtieth U. S. Colored Infantry, and one commissioned officer and twenty men of the Eighty-seventh Illinois Mounted Infantry, under my command, at 9 p. m. 12th January, 1865, on board steamer Dove; proceeded up the Mississippi River, landing on the Mississippi shore about two miles below Harbert's plantation, landing the mounted infantry and dashed up to the Harbert place, surrounding it, to try and capture one Willis Harbert, colored deserter. Found him out in a corncrib, about one mile from the place, asleep, with a horse saddled outside, ready for him to escape if in danger of capture. Returning to the landing at Harbert's, the boat had arrived. Stationed my pickets, the troops remaining on board during the night. At daylight the infantry were ordered on shore, and two army wagons and teams which I took up, and they commenced hauling in the corn on the place. During the day two white families and one colored, refugees, desiring to come within the lines of the Union army, came aboard; all of their effects were brought in and the cotton they had raised during the season. About 500 bushels of corn were got in the day, of which 200 bushels belonged to a Mr. Bond, one of the refugees brought down. I believe him to be a loyal man. We re-embarked our troops at nightfall and returned to Helena.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELI RAMSEY,

Captain, Sixtieth U. S. Colored Infantry, Commanding Expedition.

Capt. T. C. MEATYARD,
Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Eastern Arkansas.

JANUARY 11-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Wingate to Sierra del Datil and vicinity, N. Mex.

FORT WINGATE, N. Mex., January 22, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report for the information of the major commanding post, that in compliance with Special Orders, No.
7, dated headquarters Fort Wingate, N. Mex., January 10, 1865, I left this post on the 11th of the same month with Second Lieut. George C. Strong, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, four non-commissioned officers, thirty-six privates, and a citizen guide, and proceeded in the direction of the Rito Quemado, Rio del Mangos, and Sierra del Datil, for the purpose of ascertaining, if possible, whether any parties of Indians had passed those places toward the Rio Grande del Norte. On the fourth day out I camped within six or seven miles of Rito Quemado, and at 2 o'clock in the morning of the next day sent a party forward to see if there was any signs of Indians at that place. At daylight I followed on with the remainder of the command, and arrived at Rito Quemado about 8 a. m. The party in advance had come onto the tracks of four horses at this place, which looked to be about six days old, and going in an easterly direction toward the Sierra del Datil. I did not follow this trail, as I wished to go to the Rio del Mangos, which lay farther south. Camped in a cañon for the night, about four miles from Rito Quemado. Next day went to Rio del Mangos. At this place there was no indication whatever of any one having lately passed. Next morning started for Sierra del Datil, traveling in a northeast direction. At about 3 p.m. came upon the trail of four horses going in the direction of Rito Quemado. This trail was fresh, not looking to be over one day old, and probably the same party (on their return), whose trail I had crossed two days before at Rito Quemado. For fear they might be spies sent forward, and that a larger party might be coming, I determined to take their trail and follow it back, which I did, traveling most of the night. The next morning I came to where they had been encamped. Here I became satisfied that this was the only party, or if there were more they had no stock, for in several places I found rat-holes, which they had dug into and where their fire had been, indicated that they were living upon that animal, which would not be the case if they were returning with stock. I thought it would be useless to follow this trail any farther, and would return to the post. Taking a northeast course, I crossed the Sierra del Datil, passing La Cebolletta and arrived at the post on the 21st instant, having been absent eleven days and traveled, as near as I can calculate, 181 miles. I am satisfied that no parties of Indians, except those mentioned before, have passed either way.

I am, lieutenant, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
NICHOLAS HODT,
Captain, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers.

Lieut. J. G. DRENNAN,
First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers and Post Adjutant.

February 3, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded for the information of the department commander. It appears that no large party of Navajoes went to the river between Rito Quemado or Rio del Mangos and this post. If any did go they must have passed south of Sierra del Mangos.

E. W. EATON,
Major, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, Commanding Post.
No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 16, 1865—10.30 a.m.

Captain Fenex, with a detachment of Enrolled Missouri Militia from Forsyth, captured Alfred Cook's entire band, fourteen in all, near Sugar Loaf Prairie, in Arkansas, on the 12th instant. All were driven into a cave and there smoked out. Cook and his two lieutenants were killed in the affair. These three have been most brutal and bloody men.

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

No. 2.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., January 17, 1865.

I would respectfully report to you that on the 8th instant I started a scout of twenty-five men, under the command of Lieutenant Kissel, to look after old Snavles' [Schnable's] whereabouts, and, if possible, to capture or exterminate Alfred Cook and his band, that had so long been a terror to the loyal people of Taney, Christian, and Stone Counties. After reaching the Sugar Loaf Mountains, about thirty miles south of Forsyth, Lieutenant Kissel there learned, through strategy, that Cook, with his band, was in a cave some two miles from his house, when he immediately determined to press Cook's son, a small boy, to pilot him to the cave, which he did, and found Cook and thirteen others with him. After surrounding the cave he demanded an unconditional surrender of all in the cave, which was refused. He then gave them four hours to consult, with the promise that all that surrendered in that time should be carried to Springfield and there be turned over to the proper authorities to be dealt with according to law. He made this proposition as the last hope of salvation for them. At the expiration of the time allowed nine of the party surrendered, leaving in the cave some five others [with] Alfred Cook, their leader, which explains the reason that Cook and Ed. Brown were not brought to Springfield. The lieutenant and his brave boys continued the siege until the next morning, when Cook and his party succeeded in getting their Southern rights. All praise to the lieutenant and his brave boys.

Respectfully yours,

WM. L. FENEX,
Captain Company M, Seventy-third Enrolled Missouri Militia.

Brigadier-General SANBORN.
Hdqrs. Second Veteran Cav. New York Vols.,
Morganza, La., January 17, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that, in accordance with instructions from headquarters U. S. Forces, my command, consisting of a detachment of my regiment, left camp on the morning of the 12th instant in four detachments. The first down Bayou Fordoche, under Lieut. Col. A. L. Gurney; the second on Lower River and False River roads, under Major Fassett; the third on Poydras College road, under Major Cameron, and the fourth on Poydras road, commanded by myself. The second, third, and fourth concentrated at Poydras College same day, and were joined by first detachment at junction of Bayous Grossetete and Maringouin at 1 p.m. 14th instant, when I again divided the command into three detachments, one of them flanking Bayou Maringouin to the right one mile and a half, coming up in the rear of Barrows' plantation; the other two detachments on each bank of Bayou Grossetete to Rosedale and below, I holding the point at Governor Johnson's plantation, the junction of Bayous Grossetete and Maringouin. I found the roads upon all bayous in good order, but bridges all swept away by high water and the swamps all full. No force can now cross at Atchafalaya at any point between Red River and Plaquemine to come to the Mississippi River on account of the water. There is no heavy force on the opposite bank of the Atchafalaya, but detachments and squads of men stationed at every important point up to Alexandria. I found no accumulations of corn except that raised upon plantations. The different detachments of my command encountered the pickets of the enemy at New Roads, on False River; at Morgan's Ferry road, on Fordoche; at Livonia, on Fordoche; and at Erwin's and Rosedale, on Grossetete. The force on False River and vicinity, commanded, respectively, by Major Pryne, Captain Miller, and Lieutenant Williams, is an irregular force, living upon the people, mounted on fleet horses, who run away at the first approach of danger. They are the men who in the night steal up and fire upon our advanced posts. Of this force 1 was killed and 2 wounded. This Major Pryne is endeavoring to raise a battalion, and pretends to have orders to commence conscripting on the 22d instant. He has now about fifty men. The force upon the Fordoche scout between that, new Texas, and old river roads, commanded by Lieutenant Collins, and consists of about twenty men. The force upon the Maringouin, State, and Lyon's Ferry roads, commanded by Captain Ratliff, consists of one company of Second Louisiana Cavalry, and numbers about sixty men. This is the legitimate courier-line between the Mississippi River and the Atchafalaya, and a very reliable one. The Rosedale force, commanded by Lieutenant Stilwell, about fifteen men, who figure [between] West Baton Rouge and the Grossetete, are mostly engaged in contraband trade. Their reserve is the canebrake. I left camp on the 12th instant and returned on the evening of the 15th, during which time the command marched about 100 miles. The result of the expedition is 9 prisoners of war, horses and equipments, 1 prisoner paroled on account of being sick, 21 horses, 67 mules, 1 new ambulance and harness, a large quantity of waterproof percussion caps, powder, and a rebel mail. Casualties none. Scarcely any property was taken except that found in the woods. As an incident I would mention that I ran upon Mr. McCullum and McFarland, who reside at the first plantation below our pickets on the river road, near the junction of the State and Fordoche roads, in company with two Confederate soldiers. They were all armed, and were endeavoring to force a colored man down to the Atchafalaya, where they were going to sell him to be taken to Texas. Both the soldiers were captured, but the citizens escaped to the woods. On the night of the 14th some of Pryne's men attempted a little strategy in order to surprise and capture two men on outpost. They placed a white sheet over a horse, and then led him along up to the pickets, one man on each side. The disguised horse not looking so much like a cow as they imagined it would, the picket fired upon them, killing one instantly. The other escaped.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. H. CHRYSLER,

Colonel, Commanding.

JANUARY 12-15, 1865.—Scout from Camp Grover to Texas Prairie, Mo.

Report of Capt. Milton Burris, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

HDQRS. COMPANY I, FIRST MISSOURI STATE MILITIA CAV.,

Camp Grover, January 16, 1865.

Sir: By your direction I left Camp Grover at 2 a.m. on the 12th instant, with ninety-two men of the First and Seventh Missouri State Militia, and Lieutenants Berry and Phillips, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and one wagon and team, with ammunition for Captain Meredith, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry. I arrived at Lexington at 11 o'clock same day, fed and rested there until 2 o'clock same day, then started in direction of Greentown, and after traveling three miles in that direction I divided my command and sent one-half the force, under Lieutenant Berry, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry, in the direction of Wellington, with orders to scout the brush thoroughly as far west as Wellington, and report to me at Greentown the following evening. I with the other portion of the command scouted the brush northwest and south of Greentown thoroughly. I came upon two guerrillas near the guerrilla Rider's house. They made their escape by taking to the brush. Met two others in the road near Tucker's Mill. They made their escape similarly. The morning of the 14th I divided my command into four detachments and scoured the brush thoroughly from Greentown to Texas Prairie and to Chapel Hill. Saw three guerrillas near the Snibar Post-Office. Struck the trail of eight guerrillas and followed them into the brush south of Texas Prairie to a house where Clifton's and Watson's wives live. There they scattered and took to the brush in the Sni Hills. Found two horses at said house, one U.S. horse and one mare. Mare supposed to be contraband. Brought them into camp with me on the 15th. On this day turned them over to the proper authorities.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MILTON BURRIS,

Captain Company I, First Cavalry Missouri State Militia.

Col. JAMES McFERRAN,

Commanding First Missouri State Militia Cavalry.
JANUARY 12-17, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to Miami, Mo.

Report of Capt. George T. Hamblin, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

Hdqrs. Company I, Seventh Cav. Mo. State Militia,
Camp Grover, near Warrensburg, Mo., January 17, 1865.

Colonel: I have the honor to report to you that, in obedience to orders received from you the 12th instant, I marched in about ten miles south of Dover, Mo., and there camped for the night. On the morning of the 13th I broke camp early and traveled in the direction of Dover. Came within five miles of the above-named town, hearing of no bushwhackers. I then marched in the direction of Waverly, Mo., scouring the country thoroughly as I marched, leaving Waverly about one mile to my left, hearing of no disturbance as I marched. I then marched to Grand Pass Church and camped five miles east of said church. On the morning of the 14th instant I resumed my march down the Missouri River, scouring the large bend of the river completely, finding everything quiet on down to Miami, where I learned several robberies had been committed by one Captain Burnside's and gang of outlaws in disguise at night. I left Miami just before nightfall and marched two miles; camped for the night. On the morning of the 15th I again moved out early in the direction of Waverly, on the bluffs, scouring the country as we marched, until within about four miles of Waverly, where I camped for the night. On the morning of 16th I went into Waverly and searched completely the town for bushwhackers, but found none. I then moved out in the direction of the German Settlement, leaving said settlement about five miles to my left. Camped on Davis' Creek. On the 17th instant I marched direct for Warrensburg, Mo. In all my travels I saw no bushwhackers, nor heard of any.

Colonel, I am, very respectfully, yours, &c.,

GEO. T. HAMBLIN,
Captain Company I, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

[Col. JOHN F. PHILIPS,
Commanding District of Central Missouri:]

JANUARY 14-29, 1865.—Operations on the Overland Stage Road between Julesburg and Denver, Colo. Ter., and skirmishes with Indians at Godfrey's Ranch (14th), at Morrison's or American Ranch, at Wisconsin Ranch, and near Valley Station (15th), at Gittrell's Ranch (25th), at Moore's Ranch (26th), at Lillian Springs Ranch (27th), and near Valley Station (28th).

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. Robert R. Livingston, First Nebraska Cavalry.
No. 2.—Lieut. Judson J. Kennedy, First Colorado Cavalry.
No. 3.—Lieut. Albert Walter, Second Colorado Cavalry.

No. 1.

Fort Rankin, February 5, 1865.

I have the honor to report the following Indian atrocities on road to Denver since January 14, 1865, as nearly as I can learn them, together with casualties on either side: Beaver Creek stage station, eighty-two miles west, burned about the 14th. At Godfrey's ranch, seventy miles west, four men fought large force about the 14th, and succeeded in driving them off. At Morrison's, or the American Ranch, sixty-eight miles west, Indians attacked, captured, and burned the ranch about the 14th [15th]. A passing train found three Indians and seven white bodies in the ruins partly burned. Mr. Morrison, his wife, and child are missing. At Wisconsin Ranch, fifty-six miles west, a few ranchmen fought large force on the 15th and retreated to Valley Station, killing three Indians, after which ranch was burned. Near Valley Station, fifty-three miles west, on 26th [28th], Indians burned Government hay—100 tons. Twenty soldiers went out to drive them off; were surrounded and forced to retreat. In conflict 13 Indians were killed. No soldiers hurt; 3 Government horses wounded. At Charles Moore's, or Washington Ranch, fifty miles west, several men fought large force of Indians on 26th, but succeeded in driving them off. At Lillian Springs Ranch, thirty-three miles west, three men fought 500 men on 27th, killing 3 Indians; men escaped, after which ranch was burned. Antelope stage station, fifteen miles, Buffalo Springs Ranch, eighteen miles, Hallow's ranch, twenty-two miles, and Spring Hill stage station, twenty-seven miles west of here, were burned on the 28th. At Gittrell's ranch, eight miles west, fifteen ranchmen fought 500 on the 25th, killing seven and wounding several others. Ranchmen escaped to this post in evening, after which Indians burned the ranch and captured a train of twenty-two wagons loaded with Government stores and private freight. Buler's ranch, two miles east, and Julesburg stage station, one mile east, burned on 28th. Just after the battle near Valley Station a train of eleven wagons and two coaches, with thirty passengers, mails, &c., left Lillian Springs, going west. Indians came down road in large force shortly after and attacked the ranch. Neither coaches nor train has been heard from since—telegraphic communication being interrupted. All cattle between Julesburg and Wisconsin Ranch, 1,500 head, were driven off between the 24th and 29th.

Respectfully,

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel, Commanding.

Capt. JOHN PRATT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Valley Station, January 16, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report my arrival, with my command, at this station Sunday noon, without anything requiring immediate record on the route. I had only just unsaddled when the scene changed, and I discovered my rear guard and some citizens' trains being attacked by a considerable body of Indians, and also the American and Wisconsin Ranches all ablaze (distances respectively nineteen and five miles). The station and outbuildings being merely shells and unprotected, I ordered them fortified by some Government corn and adobes that were near by, and took twelve men in pursuit of the Indians and to save the family at the Wisconsin Ranch, if possible, and succeeded in getting them to camp that evening. The attack, as near as I can learn, was made by from 300 to 400 Indians, covering a scope of about twenty miles on the river. There were 8 whites, including Mrs. Morrison and two children killed and 15 Indians. All of the inmates of the American Ranch were killed, and 1 man killed and 1 wounded on the north side of the river. The Indians seem very bold, and some 200 of them camped on the river last night. Their signal fires could be seen in all directions. I sent ten men down the Platte last evening, but have sent for them this morning. Several of my men are sick this morning. The indications are that they have the measles. The wounded men twelve miles below are not able to be moved and need a surgeon very much, as also one that I have here in camp.

I am, sir, with much respect, your obedient servant,

J. J. KENNEDY,
Second Lieut., First Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Company C.

 ACTG. ASST. ADJT. GEN., DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter.

Valley Station, January 17, 1865.

SIR: My rear guard was attacked, about one mile from Valley Station, on Sunday noon, the 15th instant, just as my command was going into camp, by the Indians. An attack was made on the Wisconsin and American Ranches about the same time. Destroyed stock and killed the inmates of the American Ranch. I went out with part of my command to protect the family at the Wisconsin Ranch, and succeeded, after dark, in getting them to camp. The Indians camped on the river Sunday night, killing all the cattle they could find. Monday morning about 300 of them drove ten men, that were sent to save some property, up the river. I went out with twenty-five men soon after, but they had all left the river. Their camp-fires could be seen in the vicinity of Buffalo Springs, about ten miles distant, last night. The wounded men twelve miles below are not able to be moved and need surgical attention very much. Several of my men are sick with the measles.

J. J. KENNEDY.

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General,
Denver.

Valley Station, January 29, 1865—9 p.m.

Six hundred and fifty head of cattle driven off and all Government hay burned yesterday by Indians. I sent out eighteen men, who followed them fifteen miles, and had a fight with a large party for three hours. Killed 10 Indians and 7 ponies; I had 3 horses wounded. I started in pursuit with twenty of my men and twenty of Lieutenant Walter’s men last evening and came upon their camp, about 300 strong, at daylight this morning, which we attacked and routed with a loss of 20 Indians killed and several ponies. Succeeded in recapturing some 400 head of cattle. Three of Lieutenant Walter’s men slightly wounded. Some 200 of the red devils followed us twenty miles back. The impression is that all the ranches and stations between here and Julesburg will be destroyed, and all communication cut off, unless there are more troops sent on the road. Indians seen on all sides and large fires below, supposed to be ranches and stations. Lieutenant Walter leaves with his company in the morning.

J. J. KENNEDY,
Lieutenant, Commanding.
No. 3.

JUNCTION, COLO. TER., February 1, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor of addressing the colonel commanding district a report of my march from Denver to Julesburg and from there back to the Junction:

The detachment started from Denver the 14th of January, in compliance with Special Orders, No. 8, extract 7, headquarters Denver, Colo. Ter., January 9, 1865, having an advance guard, rear guard, and flankers in proportion to the strength of my command. The 18th of January, in the forenoon, about eight miles south of the Junction, my scouts discovered a party of ten Indians. My scouts gave them chase, but the Indians ran away with great speed. On the morning of the 19th, at Morrison's ranch, four miles of the Junction, between 2 and 3 o'clock, my pickets fired at the approaching Indians. In less than three minutes my command had their horses saddled, bridled, and completely under arms, formed a line of skirmishers (as the moon was rising) in front of the camp, advancing carefully in search of the Indians, having my reserve at the proper distance, but the Indians disappeared as fast as they came. The following night we camped near Godfrey's ranch, thirty-three miles east of the Junction. The same game was repeated by the Indians, but the same result. After that I was not molested by them at night. I arrived safe with the train the 22d day of January at Julesburg. The 23d I received a telegram dated January 21, 1865, from headquarters, Denver, Colo. Ter., to escort an ox train to Living Spring. I left Julesburg the 24th of January to comply with said telegram, and proceeded to Gillett's ranch, nine miles west of Julesburg, where I found the owner of the train. His cattle were captured two days before by the Indians. Immediately after my arrival I sent a party after them with one guide, with orders to return before dark in camp and not to stray away from each other. Five returned with the guide, bringing twenty-two head of stock with them; three of my men were missing. Early in the morning of the following day I sent out another party, with two guides, in search of the three missing. After a careful search during that day returned without them. The names of the missing men are Peter Brine, Frank Thompson, and Ed. Kelso. The owner of the train could not start from there. The 26th of January I marched to Silver Springs. During that day the Indians were in sight on both sides of the river and in my rear, keeping a respectful distance. The 27th I reached Valley Station. The following day I left Valley Station. After twelve miles' marching I was overtaken by an expressman of Lieutenant Kennedy's command, with the news that he was fighting with 200 Indians and wanted assistance. I turned my command about and in one hour and forty minutes I arrived at Valley Station, finding that the fight had ceased, the Indians having taken 500 to 600 head of cattle with them. I detailed twenty of my men and Lieutenant Kennedy with the same number of his command. Started at 3 p. m. in pursuit of the Indians in direct northerly direction. At 10 o'clock at night we came in sight of some stock. We concluded to remain at that place during the night. At daybreak we continued our march. At sunrise we discovered the Indians moving out of their camp, over 100 in number. The Indians

*Lieutenant Walter belonged to the First Colorado Cavalry, but was probably in command of a detachment of the Second.
having noticed our approach, after a few minutes' interval the fight commenced. The skirmish was kept up two hours, my command killing 9 Indians, and the Indians injured 3 of my men slightly. None of my horses killed or wounded. I recaptured with my command 200 head of cattle. The men strictly obeyed my orders and commands during the fight. The most of the fighting was done on foot. After I reached the level ground the Indians retired back to their bluffs, looking very distressfully after us. We arrived at Valley Station in the evening of the 29th. The 30th I started for Godfrey's ranch, twenty miles from Valley Station. The Indians were more numerous in sight that day than ever before, moving up the river. Arriving at Godfrey's ranch, I noticed that evening the smoke of the ranches set on fire beyond Valley Station, and between Valley Station and Godfrey's ranch. The 31st of January I marched for the Junction, escorting three families in my wagons, including Godfrey's, to this place. The Indians during that day followed my command close in my rear, and scattered, ten miles from the Junction, into the bluffs. At 4 p.m. I arrived at the Junction; my horses are in very bad condition; I find it necessary to inform the colonel commanding district, [and] to state the following facts: Recruit Matheson I was obliged to leave at the hospital in Julesburg for being entirely unfit for the service. He expressed himself as not having been inspected by the military surgeon in Denver. J. F. Wisely, post surgeon at Julesburg, declares that said Recruit Matheson was not fit for service before he enlisted. The horseshoes of the horses under my command are different weight and sizes on single horses. In consequence half of the horses are lame. The percussion caps of the Starr carbines are most worthless; but one out of four will explode. The detachment stationed at the Junction before I relieved them, according to the statement of Citizen Ashcraft, had no guard out during two nights in succession. Upon my arrival at this place the detachment did not act soldier-like. I am scouting the country.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ALBERT WALTER,

Col. T. MOONLIGHT,
Commanding District.

JANUARY 15–17, 1865.—Expedition from New Orleans to Mandeville, La.

Office of Provost-Marshal,
Algiers, January 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report in detail of the late expedition to Mandeville, La., being furnished with the necessary orders and instructions from Major-General Hurlbut:

Embarked on board the schooner Cazador at New Basin, New Orleans, with 2 sergeants, 1 corporal, and 11 privates selected for the expedition from the Fifty-sixth Ohio Veteran Volunteers, and 2 privates from Company F, First New Orleans Volunteers, 3 special officers, 2 boatmen, and 1 citizen of Algiers as a guide, numbering in all 21 men who took part in the expedition. Sailed from New Basin on the afternoon of Sunday, January 15. Arrived at north shore of Lake Pontchartrain during the same night, but owing to unfavorable weather, and not being acquainted with the coast, were unable to land. During the whole of Monday, January 16, we beat about the north shore of the lake, overhauled the schooner James Stockton at Pass Manchac, examined her papers and found them correct. In the evening passed near the town of Mandeville, headed direct for New Orleans. Sailed in this direction until some time after nightfall, when tacked about and ran up to wharf at Mandeville, dropping anchor about 1 o'clock at night. But one man was visible on the wharf, whom we easily decoyed on board, and by threats induced to consent to pilot us to the office of Lieutenant Robinson. Leaving a small guard in charge of the schooner, I proceeded with the remainder of my force to Lieutenant Robinson’s quarters. First stationing my men so as to command every place of egress from the house, I opened the front door, and in company with special officers walked in, and striking a light, discovered Lieut. Winslow Robinson, commandant of the Lake Shore District; Capt. W. E. Ligon, assistant commissary of subsistence of General Hodge’s staff; Bvt. Second Lieut. G. W. White, First Louisiana Cavalry, C. S. Army, and Judge Bethune, of Georgia, all of whom surrendered at once, and I proceeded to take possession of all contraband articles about the premises, consisting of one large telescope glass and a quantity of letters, papers, and books appertaining to Lieutenant Robinson as commander of Lake Shore District. The object of the expedition being accomplished, I returned with the prisoners and property on board the schooner, having been absent from the wharf not to exceed thirty minutes. Immediately set sail for New Orleans, bringing with us the mulatto man whom we had used as a guide, and leaving the town wrapped in as profound quietude as we had entered it, not seeing an individual save those brought away. Arrived at New Orleans about 6 o’clock on Tuesday morning, January 17; turned over the prisoners to Lieutenant-Colonel Wood, provost-marshal-general military division, and the papers and property to Major-General Hurlbut. Every man engaged in the expedition performed his duty so well that to particularize would be impracticable. Owing to the small capacity of the vessel, the men were necessarily crowded into very small space, and cramped, uncomfortable positions, and during the time we were sailing near the coast on the 16th, to prevent discovery, all the soldiers had to remain below deck in the most painful situations, yet no murmur or word of discontent was uttered by a man on board. Each individual man deserves much credit for the manner and promptness in which his duty was performed.

I have the honor to be, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. POWELL,

Maj. D. J. BENNER,
Chief of Staff, Department of the Gulf.

ADDENDA.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 22, 1865.

Capt. A. POWELL,
(Through headquarters Department of the Gulf.)

CAPTAIN: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt, through headquarters Department of the Gulf, of the report of the expedition which left this city for the town of Mandeville, on Lake Ponchartrain, on the 15th instant, under your command, and which resulted in the capture of three noted rebel officers and Judge Bethune, of Georgia. The admirable skill, courage, and promptness which marked this gallant little affair merits the highest commendation, and I am charged with the pleasant duty of conveying the approbation and thanks of the commanding general to yourself, as well as to the little band who accompanied you, and who, by their good conduct and patient endurance, aided materially in securing the successful results of the expedition.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

JANUARY 15-18, 1865.—Expeditions from Pine Bluff, Ark.

HDQRS. COMPANY M, THIRTEENTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY,

Pine Bluff, Ark., January 19, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that on Sunday, the 15th instant, in compliance with your orders and instructions, with thirty men under my charge, I made a march on the Little Rock road, as an escort to the telegraph repairer, for the purpose of repairing the lines which had been cut. Advanced about twelve miles, where we found the wires down, a considerable portion of which we succeeded in repairing, when one of the climbers of the repairer broke, and being unable to accomplish any further repairs, I undertook to track out the depredators. Moved south five miles until we came to the house of Mr. Rodgers, where I found him and a Doctor Norris (formerly a surgeon in the Confederate Army); also a considerable portion of telegraph wire, about the quantity missing at the point where the wire was cut on the road, together with a Harper's Ferry musket and a quantity of ammunition, after Mr. Rodgers having denied there being any arms upon the premises. I took these two persons (Mr. Rodgers and Doctor Norris) in custody and returned to this post by way of Mr. Woods', one mile east of Mr. Rodgers' place, where I learned that the wire had been cut by two men named Benjamin Riggins and John Jones. Monday, January 16, being again detailed for the same as the previous day, I left this post with thirty men at 8.15 a.m. and marched to the point where the telegraph wires were cut, which were then repaired by Mr. Lawler, the telegraph operator; after which, in accordance with instructions, I advanced in a southerly direction to the house of Mr. Woods, whom I took prisoner. From this point I changed my line of march in a westerly direction until I reached the Hot Springs road, which I followed westward for two miles, and then took a southerly direction one mile to the house of Doctor Ursury. Was informed by the gentleman's wife that he had gone on a visit to some neighbors, which report I doubted, and then moved forward a quarter of a mile, when I countermarched back to the house of Doctor Ursury, and this time found it deserted. Shortly afterward my attention was attracted to a woman running in the direction of the house, and from the direction she came from I discovered a body of about twenty-five men deploying into line. I immediately ordered my men forward and gave the command "charge," but before I got within carbine range the enemy broke in confusion, leaving some horses and equipments; but, my men failing to keep up with me and the enemy scattering in so many directions, I found it impossible to overtake them, and so abandoned the chase. From what I could learn this force consisted of fragments of Webb's, Kidd's, and Wilson's commands. I was informed by one of my men, who saw and knew him, that Doctor Ursury was among the number; his wife also cried out to us not to kill him. I then traveled a settlement road, nearly due south, to Mr. Geans', about five miles, where we encamped for the night, nothing further of note occurring this day. Tuesday, January 17, moved westward to Mr. Roden's place, where we came to the Little Rock and Warren road, which we traveled four miles to Mr. Clegg's, whom I took prisoner. After moving on this road two miles farther we traveled a settlement road running south, and marched about twenty miles to White Oak Bluff, on Saline River. Moved five miles below, south, on this road to Mr. Hamilton's, where we encamped for the night. Here I learned that Mr. Ingraham and Mr. Roden had been run away by "graybacks." Nothing further occurred this day. Wednesday, January 18, moved north from Hamilton's three miles, where we struck the Camden road, on which we moved east seven miles to Hudson's, where we found five guns secreted; this after the occupant of the house, Mrs. Hudson, denying there being any arms upon the premises. Two of the guns were found at the cotton gin of Mrs. Hudson, where I found a Mr. Alexander engaged in ginning cotton. There was enough cotton there to make some fifteen bales. Eleven bales were already packed. I took Mr. Alexander in custody, and then returned to Pine Bluff, arriving here at 4 p.m. without any accident having happened to my command.

I am, lieutenant, your obedient servant,

CHARLES H. TEMPLE,

First Lieut. S. MONTE CAMBERN,

 Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

JANUARY 15-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Larned to Pawnee Fork, Walnut Creek, and Smoky Hill River, Kans.

FORT LARNED, January 22, 1865.

SIR: The following journal of a scout sent by your orders to ascertain whether any Indians were camped on Pawnee Fork, Walnut Creek, or the Smoky Hill, to the west and northwest of this place, is respectfully submitted.

January 15, scout, consisting of thirteen men, started at 7.30 a.m.; traveled up Pawnee Fork—creek forks twenty-five miles west of Fort Larned; traveled two miles up the North Fork and camped; timber plenty on both forks for camping purposes; buffalo plenty; traveled twenty-seven miles. January 16, traveled up the North Branch of Pawnee Fork till noon; left it at the last large clump of timber and came to Walnut Creek in sixteen miles, northwest; creek forks three miles above camp; timber plenty; traveled twenty-seven miles. Jan-
January 17, traveled up the North Fork of Walnut Creek; turned to the right p. m. and camped on a small creek running into the Smoky Hill; buffalo suddenly disappeared to-day—a pretty strong sign that we are in the vicinity of Indians; traveled thirty-five miles. January 18, traveled northeast down the creek and came to the Smoky Hill in ten miles; river dry in places; passed a high cedar bluff on the south side of the river eight miles below, the only camping place for Indians in this vicinity. Colonel Sumner's old trail crosses the river just below the cedar bluff; camped on the river ten miles below the bluff; no timber to-day except at the cedar bluffs and a few scattering trees on small creeks; traveled twenty-eight miles. January 19, traveled down on north side of the river; came to level country p. m.; camped on a small creek called by the Indians Bluff Creek; plenty of timber on the creek; a great deal of camping has been done here by the Indians; three lodges, made of hay and brush, near the mouth of the creek were probably occupied by a war party of Indians twenty or thirty strong, about a month ago; traveled thirty-five miles. January 20, traveled down the river on the south side nine miles, and finding that we could not well reach Fort Ellsworth, we turned due south and reached Walnut Creek in eighteen miles; traveled twenty-seven miles. January 21, traveled south and got to Fort Larned in about twenty-eight miles. There had been a party of Indians on the head of Walnut Creek about six weeks ago, probably a small war party. The Indians who were camped at the mouth of Bluff Creek were probably there for the purpose of committing depredations on the road. They evidently had no ponies and probably made their excursions on foot. The Sioux, I am informed, go to war in this manner. The cedar bluff where Colonel Sumner crossed the river is 140 or 150 miles above Fort Ellsworth and 90 or 100 miles from Fort Larned. We were about fifteen miles west of the cedar bluff, making 150 or 160 miles above Fort Ellsworth. Curtis, the Indian trader, corroborates the above distances. The country up Pawnee Fork is level, affording a good road for a command with transportation. The country on the upper Smoky Hill in the vicinity of the cedar bluff is very broken and would prove very difficult for wagons. The streams bear evident signs of high rises, but do not stay up long at one time. It is my opinion that the depredations committed by Indians are done principally by war parties of from 20 to 150 warriors, and that the main camps are far to the west or northwest. Accompanying you will find a map showing the route taken on this and previous scout.*

Yours, respectfully,

D. C. NETTLETON,
Sergeant, Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Scouts.

Col. JAMES H. FORD.

JANUARY 16-18, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Whisky Bayou, La.

Report of Capt. Luther T. Park, Eleventh Wisconsin Infantry.

CAMP ELEVENTH REGT. WIS. VETERAN VOL. INFNY.,
Brashear City, La., January 19, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to orders received, I embarked, with 100 men from the Eleventh Wisconsin Veteran Vol-

* Omitted.
united Infantry, on board of gun-boat 41 and the steamer Carrie, supplied with five days' rations and eighty rounds of ammunition, on the night of the 15th, at 8 o'clock. At 1 a.m. on the 16th we left Brashear City, La., and proceeded up Bayou Teche into Grand Lake, arriving at Constitution Bayou at 10.15 a.m. From Constitution Bayou to Round Lake and from Round Lake to Bayou L'Embarras, arriving at Captain King's plantation, of the C. S. Army, at 2 p.m. I landed my troops here and found about 700 pounds of sugar. I loaded this on the steamer Carrie. At this point I captured Capt. D. E. Grove, of Grove's battery, and Privates Robert Wilson and Charles Harris, of Grove's battery. At 3.20 p.m. I embarked all my troops and proceeded up the bayou. At 5 p.m. I anchored in the stream. At 6.15 a.m. on the 17th we got under way and proceeded up Bayou L'Embarras into Little Devil Bayou, arriving at Grand River at 8 a.m. I then steamed down Grand River to Hart's house. I here landed and found that Hart had run to the swamps. At this place I found 600 cigars and 11 pairs of misses' gaiters belonging to a man by the name of Gallahan, which I brought to Brashear City and turned over to post quartermaster, as per receipts inclosed. I then proceeded down to Lee's plantation, arriving at 9.30 a.m., and took the said Lee a prisoner. I captured at this point about 1,300 pounds of sugar, which I turned in, as per receipts inclosed. At the house I found 1 large rifle and 2 pistols, and about 8 pounds of powder, all of which I destroyed. I then returned to Ofutt's Mill, landed and took on about 10,000 feet of lumber, which I turned over, as per receipts. At 11.30 a.m. I steamed up Grand River to Whisky Bayou, arriving at the head of Whisky Bayou at 1.30 p.m. At this point I lowered away three boats, loaded with armed men, and sent them up a bayou about two miles, to a place where there had been a steam-boat bid. At 3.30 p.m. they arrived back at the boats. We then headed down to Lake Mangoula and anchored for the night at 5 p.m. On the morning of the 18th, at 6.30, I started down Bayou Chene. At the plantation of Captain Olivier I took eleven refugees on board; at the mouth of Bayou Sorrel I took on board seven more, making a total of eighteen. I then steamed down through Bayou Chene into Lake Chico; from Lake Chico out through Chico Pass into Fausse Pointe Lake; then down through Grand Lake to Brashear City, where I arrived at 6 p.m. on January 18, 1865. At King's plantation I took on board two negroes. I also picked up a negro in Bayou Sorrel, who had a pass from Captain King, of the C. S. Army; brought him to Brashear City. The prisoners I turned over to the provost-marshal at Brashear City. Inclosed are receipts for property taken while on expedition on Grand River. I heard of several parties of Confederate soldiers.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

LUTHER T. PARK,

Col. C. L. HARRIS,

Commanding Post, Brashear City, La.

The above letter was forwarded to Captain Speed, assistant adjutant-general, Defenses of New Orleans, with receipts from Captain Upham, commissary of subsistence, U. S. Volunteers, for 2,000 pounds of sugar and a receipt from Lieutenant Mayers, acting assistant quartermaster at Brashear City, for 600 cigars, 11 pairs of misses' gaiters, and 10,000 feet of lumber inclosed.

4 R E—VOL XLVIII, PT I
JANUARY 16–22, 1865.—Operations about Waynesville, Mo., including skirmish near McCourney's Mills, on Big Piney.

Report of Capt. Richard Murphy, Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry, commanding Post of Waynesville.

Headquarters Post of Waynesville, Waynesville, January 23, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to submit the following as my report of scouts, marches, &c., for the week ending January 22, 1865:

January 18, Sergeant Hickman, Company II, Fifth Missouri State Militia, returned with the train from Rolla, having traveled sixty miles.

January 19, Lieutenant Bates returned from scout reported last week. He came upon a camp of three guerrillas a short distance above McCourney's Mills, on Big Piney, two of whom, after some sharp firing, he killed, leaving the third, as he supposed, mortally wounded. I have learned since that he is not mortally wounded, but is likely to recover, and I have sent out a squad to bring him in to this post. The names of the men killed were McCourney and Anthony, and of the one wounded, Bradford, and not "Stephens," as reported by telegraph. Upon reliable information of another camp of guerrillas in the vicinity of Spillman's Mill, on Big Piney, I sent Lieutenant Bates immediately upon his return on a scout to that place. The scout was composed of twelve men. They have not yet returned. January 20, Sergeant Clawson returned from scout up Roubideaux. He traveled 100 miles; met with no success. Upon information of guerrillas near Rocktown, I sent a scout of a sergeant and ten men to that vicinity, who have not yet returned. January 21, Capt. James Quinn with ten [men] started to Rolla as escort to Waynesville train. Not yet returned.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

RICHARD MURPHY,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Capt. C. G. LAURANT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Rolla, Mo.

JANUARY 18–19, 1865.—Expedition from Napoleonville to Grand River, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Brig. Gen. Robert A. Cameron, U. S. Army, commanding District of La Fourche.

No. 2.—Col. Willard Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 3.—Capt. Orin A. Avery, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 1.

District of La Fourche, Thibodeaux, La., January 25, 1865.

Inclosed I hand you the report of an expedition made from Napoleonville in pursuit of some Confederates known to be loitering and recruiting in the neighborhood of Grand River. They were not found, but I have from other sources what I believe to be correct information that they and others were in the neighborhood, and had a picket at Grand Bayou when our forces arrived there. The picket immediately notified the whole country and they escaped. The horses of the regiment (the Third Rhode Island Cavalry) are in such bad condition as to make them almost, if not quite, unserviceable for the kind of country we have to operate in. The killing of Lieutenant Clapp was very unfortunate, indeed, but I cannot see that his men were to blame.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Post Napoleonville, La., January 20, 1865.

CAPTAIN: In obedience to your order dated 16th January, 1865, and telegram of January 17, 1865, I sent Capt. O. A. Avery, of this regiment, with about ninety men to Bayou Pierre Pass, and on arriving there and searching the house indicated nothing could be seen or heard of the parties they were in search of. The expedition resulted in the loss of twenty horses, three of which were drowned crossing the bayou and the remainder were used up. The death of First Lieut. A. Clapp was occasioned by the following circumstances: He, with a party of four men, surrounded a house, and Lieutenant Clapp gave the corporal in charge of the party orders that if any one attempted to run out of the house after he entered to halt them twice, and if they did not halt to fire upon them. He entered the house, and while inside some one shot at a dog outside (supposed to be one of the guides), and Lieutenant Clapp rushed out of the house to see what the firing was, and it being very dark and the guard, not able to distinguish, halted him three times, and as he did not halt the guard fired, resulting in the death of the lieutenant. No blame can be attached to the guard, as he simply obeyed orders, and there is no doubt that from the clamor and noise made by the dogs that the lieutenant did not hear the order to halt.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. SAYLES,
Colonel Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 21, 1865.

Respectfully returned.

You will cause the officer who was in command of the expedition to make out a full report of all the incidents connected with his scout. He will also make a statement as to how his horses were used up and what disposition was made of them. This report you will forward to these headquarters at the earliest possible date, with copies of all orders and instructions directing the expedition.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 3.

Report of Capt. Orin A. Avery, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Camp of Third Rhode Island Cavalry,
Post Napoleonville, La., January 20, 1865.

Adjutant: I have the honor respectfully to report that, in obedience to orders from the colonel commanding, at 2 a.m. on the 18th instant, with Companies B, I, and K, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, I proceeded from camp up the bayou as far as Ford's plantation. I then sent Lieutenant Clapp with fifteen men, turning to the left, going to a point on Grande Bayou where the draw bridge was recently burned, to stop all communication from Madam Labarre's to Bayou Corn. I took the remainder of the command and proceeded up the bayou as far as Martin's Lane, to the left; down Martin's Lane to Grande Bayou, arriving at Madam Labarre's at 6 a.m. It was with the utmost difficulty that I was enabled to reach that point in consequence of the roads, which were almost impassable. I got all of the command safely across the bayou at 8.30 a.m., but under great difficulty, the bayou was so much obstructed with driftwood and snags. I joined Lieutenant Clapp about three miles down on the opposite side of the bayou, and proceeded from there to Bayou Corn, arriving there at 11 o'clock. I had the command across Bayou Corn at 3 p.m., but was obliged to send back a considerable distance for sugar coolers with which to cross the bayou. From there I proceeded to Bayou Pierre Pass, arriving there at 6 p.m. I formed my command in line of battle, and took Lieutenant Clapp and twelve men, crossing Bayou Pierre Pass a little after 6, leaving the remainder of the force under command of Captain Pomroy. I was obliged to cross the bayou a second time in order to reach the point that I wished. From there I sent Lieutenant Clapp with four men to the house of Pierre Herbert, where Victoiree Trahan and one other Confederate soldier were supposed to be stopping. Lieutenant Clapp ordered the house to be surrounded, instructing the guard to challenge any person seen running from the house, and if the challenges were unanswered to fire. The lieutenant and the guide were running around a point of the house when the guard challenged him. Receiving no response, he challenged a second time. Still getting no answer, he fired, the ball striking Lieutenant Clapp in the forehead, killing him instantly. Owing to the darkness that prevailed it was impossible to discern faces or forms at any distance, and the shooting of Lieutenant Clapp was purely accidental. When I instructed Lieutenant Clapp to surround Pierre Herbert's I proceeded myself, with four men, to another house, where a brother of Pierre Herbert resided, but discovered nothing whatever. On returning I met Lieutenant Clapp's party, who had left the body of the lieutenant under cover of some shrubbery while they came to report to me. I procured a conveyance and returned for the body, which I brought with me, and crossed to Bayou Corn, and arrived at Bayou Corn about 1 o'clock on the morning of the 19th instant. I discovered nothing whatever of any enemy, and was told that there had been nothing seen in that vicinity for some time, except an enrolling party, which were there four or five days since. I had the command safely across Bayou Corn at about 5 o'clock. I lost three horses by drowning. They were so completely exhausted that after swimming across the bayou they were utterly unable to come out of the water from sheer weakness, and having no means at my disposal to get them out, I was compelled to abandon them. Of the remainder of the horses there are about twenty rendered unfit for service, being completely worn out in crossing and recrossing so many bayous. I proceeded from Bayou Corn to Grande Bayou and commenced crossing immediately. We were all across about 9 o'clock, and arrived in camp at 12 m. on the 19th. I succeeded, with great difficulty, in bringing the worn-out horses in with me.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ORIN A. AVERY,
Captain, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding Expedition.

First Lieut. JAMES MAGILL,
Acting Adjutant Third Rhode Island Cavalry and Post.

JANUARY 18-22, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to the Snibar Hills, Mo.

Report of Lieut. Daniel Shumate, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

HDQRS. COMPANY I, FIRST MO. STATE MILITIA CAV.,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 23, 1865.

COLONEL: I have the honor to report to you that, in compliance with Special Orders, No. 14, dated headquarters post Warrensburg, Mo., January 18, 1865, I marched from Camp Grover on the 18th instant with forty men of the First and Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia. I camped on the headwaters of Blackwater, twenty miles northwest of this place. On the morning of the 19th we resumed the march by the way of Chapel Hill. We there entered the Snibar Hills, in La Fayette County, Mo. I there divided my command, placing Lieutenant Daly in command of the detachment of Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia. We scouted through the Snibar Hills, visited a number of families who generally report having seen small bands of marauders roving through the country who occasionally call on them for something to eat. The people say that they are forced to cook for them. From thence we passed to Greentont Valley and camped. On the morning of the 20th we scouted through the valley in the direction of Greentont. Lieutenant Daly with his command went to Greentont. I continued west of Greentont and went within five miles of Wellington. We there turned back and went by the way of Greentont and camped in that vicinity. On the morning of the 21st we started in the direction of the Snibar Hills. We scouted through the timber of the valley; also through the Snibar Hills. We camped two miles north of Chapel Hill. We saw five guerrillas and considerable of sign. There are families in that part of the country who come under the purview of my order, but owing to the scarcity of horses and wagons and the inclemency of the weather I failed to bring them to these headquarters. On the morning of the 22d we started for this post. We arrived at camp late in the evening.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DANIEL SHUMATE,

[Col. JAMES McFERRAN.]

JANUARY 19-20, 1865.—Scout from Donaldsonville, La.

HQRES. DETACHMENT THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Camp, Donaldsonville, La., January 20, 1865.

I have the honor to make the following report of a scout which left this post last night under my command, in pursuit of Captain Williams' band of guerrillas:

I left the post about 7 p. m. with fifty men from my detachment and four lieutenants, three from said detachment. Near Trasimond Lundy's plantation we discovered a building, used as a school-house, on fire, and when my advance guard reached the place they received some half a dozen shots from the guerrillas, who immediately took to the field and woods, and, owing to the extreme darkness, it was impossible to follow them with any prospect of capturing them. I then proceeded up the river as far as Dominique's Store and divided the command by sending one-half by a cut-off to the rear of Thompson's plantation, where I have been informed that Williams had been that day. I moved with the balance of the command up the river road to the front of the same plantation. We saw nothing of the party on either route. I then advanced up the road as far as Mrs. Adams' plantation, arriving there at midnight and encamped for the night. Immediately after mounting in the morning I received information that a portion of the party were on a cut-off on the plantation next below, and ordered Lieutenants Cross and Riley, with twenty-five men, to start in pursuit. The guerrillas, however, had too much the start, and with that and the great superiority of their horses, made their escape into the swamp as closely pursued as the condition of our horses would permit. We did not get within range of them. Upon the return of Lieutenant Cross the command moved down the river road, and when near Sigur's plantation saw Captain Williams and some twelve or fourteen men of the party making their way in rear of the negro cabins to a cut-off. Pursuit was at once ordered, and Lieutenant Cross, Lieutenant Vance, and Lieutenant Riley, with twenty-five men, followed upon the rear, but owing to the inefficiency of their horses the capture of Williams' party was impossible. The command then returned to camp. I beg leave in conclusion to say that, in my opinion, it is useless to attempt to capture this or any other of these moving bands of mounted men by my detachment until it is better mounted. If we had to-day been properly mounted we should have easily captured the entire party.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES H. PARKHURST,
Lieut. Col. Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding Detachment.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.
REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. Herman Lieb, Fifth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, Assistant Inspector-General.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
ASSISTANT INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Memphis, Tenn., January 22, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit for your consideration the following report:

On the afternoon of the 19th instant, when preparations had already been made to cross into Arkansas with 450 cavalry and 200 infantry, a scout reported that all of Colonel Lyles' and Shelby's men had left and gone to Mississippi County; that but Reves' band was below, and in rear of Merriweather's farm, about eight miles from the city, and that General Dobbin and staff were on the plantation of Mrs. ———, nine miles west of Marion and thirteen of Mound City, with but a small escort. The scout had spoken with him that day (the 19th); consequently the infantry detachment was countermanded. Embarking I found that, contrary to the statement of Captain Van Vliet, one of the boats would contain but 110 horses, making a force of 310 on both. I sent the Raine, in charge of Captain Moore, Seventh Indiana Cavalry, with 200 men, after the Reves party, while myself and Colonel Funke took the Belle Peoria and landed at Mound City at 4 a.m. April 20. Proceeded toward Marion. When within one mile of the town the advance was halted, but dashing forward captured the two vedettes. One-quarter of a mile farther met the cavalry outpost, the advance dashing on to them, wounding 1 mortally and 1 slightly in arm, who, with 1 other, was captured, with 7 horses. The balance made their escape. Marching forward, the enemy making but little resistance to our advance except light skirmishing, it was resolved to remain till day-break. The main force was drawn up in a field to the left of the road; the right was protected by the bayou and a gully to the front. Outposts were thrown to the front on both roads. In the meantime we received positive information that Colonel Lyles was distant but a few miles with part of his old command, from 200 to 250 men, and the detachments of Missouri troops of 150, making in all 400 men. At day-break the houses were searched and Mr. Grider, a notorious smuggler, was captured. He attempted to wrest the pistol out of the hands of the guard. Having been overpowered he attempted to bribe them by giving them various sums of money. On searching him I found in his possession an order to proceed to the counties of Crittenden, Jackson, and Mississippi, all opposite Memphis, to procure such quartermaster's stores as he could obtain, signed Major-General Hindman. Having received the above information and expecting that Captain Moore's detachment would strike the military road one mile west of Marion, I concluded to withdraw one mile to Mr. Cross' plantation. Soon the enemy followed, keeping up sharp firing, but not pressing us in the least.
We remained until 11 o'clock, when we commenced to retire to the river. The enemy presented himself in small squads to our right, and, fearing some flanking movement, we moved back to the fork of the Mound City and Hopefield road. Soon the enemy seemed to become bolder, drawing up in line 600 yards to our front (toward Marion). I directed Colonel Funke to embark his horses gradually, and using the men as infantry, skirmishing was kept up until the arrival of Captain Moore, with his detachment, by the Hopefield road. Captain Moore succeeded in capturing Revès' pickets, but did not succeed in surprising their camp, which had just been evacuated. He captured 1 lieutenant and 6 men on picket duty. Captain Moore arrived at Mound City at 5 p.m. The heavy fog on the river prevented the pilot from bringing the boats to Memphis last evening and both boats arrived at Memphis at 7 a.m. today. The captures are as follows: One lieutenant of Shelby's command, 11 men of Shelby's and Lyles' commands, 20 horses, and 4 mules. Loss, 1 man dangerously wounded.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. LIEB,
Colonel and Asst. Insp. Gen., Department of Mississippi.

Capt. F. W. FOX,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Mississippi.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD BRIGADE, CAVALRY DIVISION,
Memphis, Tenn., January 23, 1865.

Sir: The details from different regiments (400 men in all) reported to me by your order on the night of the 20th [19th]. According to instructions I reported to Colonel Lieb, assistant inspector-general, for orders. The colonel told me that two boats would be ready on the levee inside of Fort Pickering at 8 p.m. and that my command had to be divided, one detachment going up and the other down the river. I ordered the Seventh Indiana and the Second Wisconsin (200) on board the steamer John Raine, but the other boat, Belle Peoria, could only carry 110 horses, and as there was no other transportation to be had I sent ninety men back to camp. Colonel Lieb told me that he had information that about fifty or sixty rebels were in the vicinity of Merriweather's place, about eight miles down the river, and that I should send the largest part of my command there, as there was only General Dobbin with staff and a small escort reported to be above, after whom I concluded to go with the balance of my command. The senior officer of the two detachments on board the steamer John Raine was Captain Moore, of the Seventh Indiana. I furnished him with a guide, and instructed him to leave with his command at 3 o'clock in the morning, in order to be there at daybreak, to disembark three miles below Merriweather's place, and try to get in rear of said rebel camp, and, if possible, to capture it. Should he ascertain that there was a rebel force in the country, to strike the Mound City and Marion road about six miles from the river, but if he did not hear of any to strike the same road close to the river. At moonrise (2 a.m.) I started from the landing, accompanied by Colonel Lieb, up the river; at Mound City I disembarked the men and at 4 o'clock started from the river toward Marion. The guides which Colonel Lieb had furnished reported to me that the day before Lyles' and Dobbin's command had left that part of the country, and that no troops were in that part of the country except General Dobbin with staff and a small escort, who stayed at a certain house about thirteen miles from the river. I had to rely on those guides entirely, as none of my men nor I had ever been in that part of the country. We marched only about four miles when my advance ran against the rebel pickets.
57

SKIRMISH NEAR FORT LARNED, KANS.

The two vedettes were captured, and from the reserve 1 was killed, 2 wounded, and 2 more taken prisoners; 7 horses were also captured there. The balance of the men got away on account of the darkness.

At a trot I moved my men forward into Marion across a bridge over a deep ditch. About half of the men got across when the bridge broke down. The roads forked in town, and I sent about twenty-five men on each of those roads, who were soon engaged in a lively skirmish.

In the mean time I learned from prisoners and negroes that Lyles' command, about 400 strong, was on the other side of the town in camp, and as soon as the bridge was repaired I withdrew my men, except a small picket on each of those roads, across the bridge, formed them in line, and concluded to await daylight. At 7 o'clock I fell back one mile, where I fed my horses. I waited there until 11 o'clock, and as by that time I had not received any information about Captain Moore's command I concluded to fall back slowly toward the river, expecting to meet him there. We had continual skirmishing with the enemy, and they kept following us up toward the river. One-half a mile from the river

I halted and waited until 3 o'clock, when I put the horses on board of the boat. At 4 o'clock Captain Moore came in with his detachment and reported that he had found several small detachments of the enemy, had several skirmishes, killed 1, wounded 1, and took 1 lieutenant and 7 men prisoners; also captured 8 horses and 3 mules. One of his men was wounded. Captain Moore, not learning of any body of troops being there, joined me by the nearest route, but the distance being farther than was represented was the reason of his delay in not joining me sooner. We embarked in our boats, but on account of the heavy fog did not arrive until yesterday morning. The result of the expedition was 2 men killed, 3 wounded, and 1 lieutenant and 12 men taken prisoners; also 20 horses and 6 mules captured. The prisoners were turned over to the provost-marshal, and the horses and mules were distributed to the following regiments, viz: Seventh Indiana, 8 horses and 2 mules;

Eleventh Illinois, 9 horses and 2 mules; Fourth Illinois, 3 horses and 1 mule, and Second Wisconsin 1 mule.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

OTTO FUNKE,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Expedition.

Col. E. D. OSBAND,
Commanding Cavalry Division, Department of Mississippi.

JANUARY 20, 1865.—Skirmish near Fort Larned, Kans.

FORT LYON, COLO. TER., February 4, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report, for the information of the colonel commanding, that the coach from the east arrived here on the 1st instant, bringing news to the effect that the sutler trains destined for Fort Lyon, which left Fort Larned on the 17th day of January, 1865, with an escort of twenty-five men First Veteran Cavalry of Colorado and six men of the Second Colorado Cavalry, were attacked by a party of Indians when three days this side of Fort Larned. Our loss was 1 man killed and 2 wounded, viz: Private Fields, Second Colorado Cavalry, killed; Robert F. Cole, Company A, First Veteran Cavalry of Colorado, severely wounded; Private Donihue, Second Colorado Cavalry, severely wounded. The Indians lost 3 killed and 3 wounded. They were supposed to be Cheyennes and Arapahoes, and numbered about forty-five. The train returned to Fort Larned. I inclose a rough sketch* of the defenses I am throwing up at this post. The nature of the ground requires the peculiar construction represented in the draft. I will continue to keep the colonel commanding advised of any movements of importance in this vicinity as frequently as possible.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
E. W. WYNKOOP,

Major First Veteran Cavalry of Colorado, Commanding Post.

Lieut. Ira I. Taber,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Colorado.

JANUARY 21-22, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Bayou Sorrel, La.

BRASHEAR CITY, LA., January 22, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report, in obedience to orders, I embarked on gun-boat 43 at 3.30 p.m. on the 21st instant, with twenty men of Company D, Eleventh Infantry Wisconsin Veteran Volunteers, and proceeded to the mouth of Bayou Groesbeck, on Bayou Long; there disembarked in small boats and went up the bayou about three-quarters of a mile; landed and divided my men in squads and made a thorough search of the land on both sides of the bayou for a distance of one mile, when I came to a small bayou which connects with Bayou Groesbeck. About sixty yards up this bayou I found a small palmetto tent, which evidently had been occupied by two men. In it was a small anchor for sinking torpedoes, which I sunk in the bayou. But failing to discover the torpedoes, I embarked my command and went up to Bayou Millian Point, where I disembarked with four men and proceeded to the house of William Duvall, a private of Company B, Twenty-sixth Louisiana, whom I captured. I then proceeded to the mouth of Bayou Sorrel, where I disembarked and secreted six men, with instructions to stop boats coming down Bayou Long and going up Bayou Sorrel. From here I went to Mr. Hebert's, leaving four men there to guard that point, and from thence to Mason's, and searched the premises for John Spence. Failing to find him, I returned to Hebert's, called in the guard which I had left there, and went back to the mouth of Bayou Sorrel. The men whom I had there secreted had captured Sergt. James Malcon and Private John S. Hebert, of Company
B, Twenty-sixth Louisiana, during my absence. I again embarked and went down the bayou to the mouth of Bayou Groesbeck. Here I secreted nine men, and proceeded with the remainder to the east side of Bayou Long, opposite to the mouth of Bayou Groesbeck; disembarked and established a picket. About two hours after I had posted the pickets I discovered a boat coming down the bayou with one man in it, which I brought to, and the occupant proved to be Second Lieut. C. Penisson, Company B, Twenty-sixth Louisiana Infantry, whom I took prisoner. Here I remained until sunrise on the 22d, when I embarked and return to Millian Point, where I disembarked and awaited the return of the gun-boat from Belle River, she having gone there to anchor. The boat arrived at 8 a.m., when I embarked and returned to Brashear City, arriving at 2 p.m. The prisoners I turned over to Lieut. S. E. Shepard, provost-marshal, Brashear City, La.

*Omitted.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

RICHARD CADDELL,

Capt. R. E. JACkSON,
Post Adjutant.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS POST,
Brashear City, January 22, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded.

Learning that a few rebel soldiers were in Bayou Long in charge of a torpedo and their whereabouts, I sent Lieutenant Caddell and twenty men of the Eleventh Wisconsin Infantry up in the gun-boat 43 to capture them. For particulars of the expedition I refer you to his report

C. L. HARRIS,
Colonel, Commanding.

JANUARY 22, 1865.—Skirmish on the Benton Road, near Little Rock, Ark.

CAMP THIRD U. S. CAVALRY,
Little Rock, Ark., January 23, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report, as field officer of the day, Second Brigade, Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps, that I visited the picket on the Benton road at 4 p.m. yesterday upon information received that the patrol on that road had been fired into within a mile and a half of the picket-post. Upon my arrival I found that the patrol, consisting of fifteen men and an officer, had been ambuscaded while on their return trip by a force of about twenty-five or thirty of the enemy. The enemy allowed the patrol to pass on until it arrived directly opposite their line, when they opened a flanking fire upon it, wounding 3 men, 1 of whom they captured. There are also 3 men missing, making a total of 6 men. I remained at the picket-post until 3 o'clock this morning, and finding everything quiet I proceeded to visit the pickets at the Big and Little Maumelle, Fort Smith, and upper-river roads, and found everything correct.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. HAWLEY,
Captain, Third U. S. Cavalry, Field Officer of the Day.

Lieutenant LYMAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Respectfully forwarded, and recommend that the patrol be discontinued. The enemy are invited by it to collect in force and waylay our small parties. It has been my misfortune to lose from my command within three years more than 100 men while on daily patrol duty. The roads in this country are such that the enemy have every advantage.

Respectfully, &c.,

Cyrus Bussey,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Second indorsement.]

Hdqrs. Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps,
Little Rock, January 23, 1865.

In my opinion a patrol toward Benton should consist of twenty-five to fifty men. The cavalry force here at present is not adequate to furnish that number daily.

J. R. West,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

JANUARY 22- FEBRUARY 4, 1865.—Expedition from Little Rock to Mount Elba, Ark., with skirmish at Saline River.

Little Rock, Ark., February 5, 1865.

Sir: In obedience to your orders I reported to Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr, commanding expedition to Mount Elba, on the 22d of January, 1865, and was assigned as surgeon-in-chief. The command was composed of the First Iowa Cavalry, First Missouri Cavalry, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, Thirty-third Iowa Infantry, Forty-third Illinois Infantry, Twenty-eighth Wisconsin Infantry, Fiftieth Indiana Infantry, One hundred and twenty-sixth Illinois Infantry, One hundred and sixth Illinois Infantry, Twenty-fifth Ohio Battery, one section First Arkansas Battery (colored), and pontoon corps. We left Little Rock January 22 at 11 a.m. and arrived at Mount Elba January,—at 1 p.m. Infantry halted here; pontoon was put down; cavalry crossed over the Saline River at 5 p.m.; advanced on the Camden road twenty-five miles and back to Mount Elba on the next day. On the 29th we commenced our march for Little Rock, where we arrived at 3 p.m. February 4, 1865. The health of the troops was remarkably good during the march; but very few were in the ambulances at any time. One man was killed in a skirmish at Saline River, the only casualty that occurred during the time we were out. (See accompanying report.*) The medical officers all did their duty faithfully and efficiently. I heard of no complaints whatever. I wish to call your attention particularly to Lieutenant Cory, commanding ambulance corps, First Division. He is a good officer, and managed his department very efficiently, so much so that not a single complaint was made about transportation. I forward herewith reports of the commands while absent, with the exception of those that went from Pine Bluff, who were ordered to make them to the senior surgeon at that post.

* Not found.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. R. WEEKS,
Surgeon, U. S. Volunteers, in Charge of Expedition.

Surg. J. R. SMITH, U. S. Army,
Medical Director, Department of Arkansas.

JANUARY 23, 1865.—Skirmish at Thompson's Plantation, La.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Donaldsonville, La., January 23, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to make the following report of the attack made by Williams' guerrilla party upon the couriers coming from Plaquemine to-day:

When they arrived near the Sigur plantation a party of some sixteen came out from the cut-off between the advance and the main body of the couriers and started in pursuit of the advance couriers. Sergeant McTwiggan, in charge of the couriers, ordered the men to advance. They hesitated for a time, but at last, after a vigorous application of the saber by the sergeant, his men followed him, but too late to come up with the party until they reached Thompson's lower plantation, where a skirmish took place, and the rebels were driven back down the cut-off. The sergeant then withdrew his men back to the road and was there again attacked by another party of nearly the same number, and followed as far as Narcisse Landry's plantation, continually skirmishing. George A. Walbridge, of Company H, was seriously wounded and left at Thompson's plantation. After leaving Thompson's plantation the horses of five of the men became exhausted and four of the men were captured. I regret to say that the conduct of the men at first is deserving of the most severe condemnation, but they afterward did as well as they could, according to the statement of the sergeant in command. I can only repeat what I have before said in reference to the inefficiency of the horses of this command. It has caused the capture of four men to-day, which would not have happened had the men been properly mounted.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES H. PARKHURST,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Lieut. LEONIDAS R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

JANUARY 24, 1865.—Skirmish near Bayou Goula, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Brig. Gen. Robert A. Cameron, U. S. Army, commanding La Fourche District.

No. 2.—Lieut. Col. Charles H. Parkhurst, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 25, 1865.

A party of cavalry, thirteen in number, belonging to the Third Rhode Island Cavalry, at Donaldsonville, Colonel Fiske just telegraphs me, undertook to return from Plaquemine yesterday. He sent a lieutenant and twenty men up to Bayou Goula to meet them and escort them through. Before the lieutenant and his party arrived at Bayou Goula they were attacked by a party of twenty-four rebels. Two of our men were wounded at the first fire; the remainder of the thirteen surrendered without firing a gun. The lieutenant and his party arriving, he pursued the rebels a few miles, but recaptured nothing. This command constantly complain that they cannot capture these guerrillas, because they, the Third Rhode Island, are so badly mounted, yet the rebels manage to get away with prisoners mounted on the same kind of horses. Colonel Fiske will forward a written report, which will be sent forward as soon as it arrives.

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Capt. Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans.

No. 2.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Donaldsonville, La., January 25, 1865.

I have the honor to make the following report of the capture of the couriers from Plaquemine yesterday:

Sergeant Dodge, in charge of the couriers, was attacked yesterday about a mile above Bayou Goula by Captain Williams, whose party consisted of twenty-four; twelve in front and twelve in rear. Sergeant Dodge disgracefully surrendered his entire command. Bernard McDonough, Company C, was shot through the arm, and was paroled and is now in hospital. The whole loss was twelve men, horses and equipments. I have ordered Sergeant Dodge to be reduced to the ranks.

Your obedient servant,

CHARLES H. PARKHURST,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

JANUARY 24–FEBRUARY 22, 1865.—Expedition from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to Eleven Points River, Ark.

Reports of Col. John B. Rogers, Second Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO., February 27, 1865.

Major: I have the honor to report that on the 24th ultimo I left this place, pursuant to instructions from the general commanding, with a detachment from this sub-district numbering 300 men and a section of the Second Missouri Light Artillery. I proceeded as far as the Indian Ford, on the Saint Francis River, where I was joined by a detachment from the Third Sub-District, numbering 200 men, under command of Captain McClanahan, Second Cavalry Missouri State Militia. I then proceeded with the whole force into Arkansas, intending to proceed as far as Jacksouport and attack the forces said to be near that place under the rebel general McRae. About the night of the 26th of January it commenced raining heavily, rendering the roads nearly impassable and filling the streams so as to cause much inconvenience in crossing them. When I reached Current River, on the northern line of Arkansas, I found it impossible to ford it, and no ferries at that point and none to be heard of on the river at any point near there. I immediately sent out parties and succeeded in finding a small flat-boat some twenty-three miles down the river near its junction with Black River, but a large extent of swamp was between the command and the boat found, which swamps it was necessary to cross; and the rain continuing, the swamps were full, and it was deemed impracticable to move my train through them. I therefore left the train under a strong guard and marched with the balance of the command, carrying five days' rations, wading for miles through water from one to three feet deep. After a very laborious march I reached the boat, and found it capable of crossing but eight men and their horses at a time. After crossing, another swamp very difficult to cross stretched for miles on the other side of Current River on the road toward Pocahontas. I however proceeded to that place, where I received reliable information that McRae had been driven from near Jacksouport by a force sent from Devall's Bluff for that purpose, and that there was no enemy in force north of the Arkansas River on that line and no enemy that would stand to fight, but small bands of guerrillas were prowling through the country, who fled at our approach. I therefore divided my command, ordering the detachment from Pilot Knob to return to that post by way of Doniphan, thoroughly scouring the country, for the purpose of exterminating, as far as possible, the guerrillas, while with the balance of the troops I pushed on as far as the vicinity of Eleven Points River, some ten miles below Pocahontas. We found the country almost entirely destitute of forage. We killed several guerrillas in that vicinity. Being unable to hear of any force of the enemy, and finding it nearly impossible to subsist either men or horses, I returned to Cherokee Bay, thoroughly scouting the country in pursuit of the guerrilla bands of Reves and Bowles. We succeeded in killing several of them and capturing many horses and mules stolen by them from Missouri and several U. S. horses and mules. Finding that I could do no further good in that country without a permanent occupation of the country, I returned to this post, reaching this place late on the evening of the 22d instant. Nineteen guerrillas were killed, and I captured and turned over 77 head of horses, 26 mules, 21 head of cattle, and 1 jack. I found that country infested by small bands of guerrillas, who will not stand to fight, but subsist by plundering the inhabitants, and the swamps and canebrakes of that region afford them secure shelter, rendering it extremely difficult to find and destroy them. I think a post at either Doniphan or Pocahontas would soon effectually dispose of them. I find the sentiment of the people of Northern Arkansas friendly to the United States Government—much more so than in Missouri—and I think it but needs fostering and protection to revive their affection for the old flag. The oppression and wrong suffered by them from the usurped authority imposed on them serves but to render their remembrance of the olden time the more to be valued by them. I think a local force could be raised there, loyal and true, sufficiently strong to guard themselves, if arms were furnished them and an opportunity given them to organize.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel, Commanding Expedition.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO., December 27, 1865.

MAJOR: I have the honor to make the following additional report, omitted in my report of this date, and herewith inclosed:

While in Northern Arkansas and Southern Missouri large numbers of Union refugees immediately prepared to avail themselves of the opportunity thus presented of escaping from the despotism and dangers oppressing them. They were nearly all of the better class of citizens, many of them wealthy farmers, but they owned that if they remained longer there they would almost certainly be conscripted into the rebel army, or, resisting that, be killed. They stated that to attempt to escape, excepting under protection of our forces, would be certain death—a statement, incredible as it may seem, I found to be only too true, as one of them, moving a little too quick, and being in advance only about four miles, was shot. There were about thirty families, and I could not abandon them to their fate. I did move slowly, and so arranged my force as to protect them and their teams and household goods and what little stock they had along with them, occasionally taking teams of oxen for one day to assist their jaded teams (with the consent of the owners), all of which were returned to the owners. I obtained and gave some of the more destitute meal to subsist upon, paying for same from my own money, and at other times obtaining it from wealthy rebel citizens. It was a case of stern necessity. It was starvation or food for women and children. It delayed my return a few days, but humanity demanded the delay. I could not abandon them; they had already suffered incredible hardships. They will not become a charge upon the Government, but will all be able to earn a livelihood. Although this may not have been strictly military, I confidently rely upon the well-known charity and kind feelings of the commanding general toward these unfortunate victims of this accursed rebellion to justify me in thus acting toward them.

I am, major, very respectfully,

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel, Commanding Expedition.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,

JANUARY 28–31, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff toward Camden and Monticello, Ark, with skirmishes.

PINE BLUFF, January 31, 1865—1.45 p. m.

I left here with my command on the 26th instant. My detachment of cavalry sent to scout along the Saline killed one and captured several rebels on the way, and arrived at Mount Elba on the 26th and ran into a squad of rebels, of whom it killed and captured several, losing one man killed. I arrived at Mount Elba on the 27th. It took three hours and ten minutes to lay down a bridge of seven boats, but I got the cavalry several miles beyond the Saline that night. The next day they went about twenty-eight miles from Mount Elba toward Camden and within about twenty miles of Camden, the distance being greater than I was at first informed and the Moro very hard to cross. They ran into a party of about seventy rebels, commanded by Major Hunter, and scattered them, killing two and capturing several. The rebels had no idea of their approach. I also sent scouts nearly to Monticello and toward Camden. My scouts captured altogether 34 prisoners, being Confederates in arms and on furlough, and bushwhackers; 1 captain and 2 lieutenants. We killed 3, and lost 1 killed and 2 soldiers and a guide wounded. I do not think there is any force at Monticello except a recruiting party. There seems to be a small force at Long View, below Warren, guarding a bridge. News from Camden confirmatory of previous reports. Captain Anderson, Eighteenth Illinois, commanding pontoon battalion, is incompetent and inefficient, and I recommend that he be dropped from the service. He was slow in traveling and slow in laying the bridge. His men left Little Rock unprovided with shoes, and he did nothing at Pine Bluff to provide them or to exchange their bread, which was damaged. The troops behaved very well. Some vacant houses were burned along the road, and I have not as yet been able to find out the perpetrators.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. A. CARR,
Brigadier-General, Commanding Expedition.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,

JANUARY 26–FEBRUARY 4, 1865.—Expedition from Plaquemine to The Park, La., with skirmish (February 4) at The Park.

Reports of Capt. L. Frederick Rice, Thirty-first Massachusetts Infantry.

HEADQUARTERS POST PLAQUEMINE,
Plaquemine, La., January 30, 1865.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to transmit herewith the report of L. Frederick Rice, Thirty-first Massachusetts Volunteers, commanding the expedition sent out from this post by order of Brigadier-General Sherman, commanding Defenses of New Orleans. His command is still in the vicinity of The Park and keeps up a daily communication with this post.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. G. SHAW,
Major, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, Commanding Post.

[Inclosure.]

THE PARK, January 29, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of my proceedings since leaving Plaquemine in a more comprehensive form than I have heretofore been able to do:

5 RE—VOL XLVIII, PT 1
In accordance with your orders I sent the major portion of my company, under Lieutenant Barber, to Indian Village, leaving Plaquemine soon after noon January 26. His report of his doings previous to my own arrival at Indian Village was sent to you yesterday. Remaining in Plaquemine until the morning of the 27th, I left there with fifteen men and seized ships at Mr. Kleinpeter's and Madam Bauty's. I had them taken down to the mouth of the Bayou Jacob, where, leaving the horses and the remainder of the men, I went up the bayou about two miles, but without success. I found the bayou blocked with trees, and concluded it useless to go farther; I however found and destroyed four skiffs. At a house I found two double-barrel shotguns and a Remington pistol. The occupant of the house, a young man, gave his name as Joseph Langlois; said that the pistol had been left there a few days before by a Confederate soldier, deserter. As I knew that one such had come within our lines within a short time, and as the young man told a very plausible and connected story regarding his antecedents, I concluded to leave him and take the arms. The guns being very much out of repair and rusted badly, I threw them into the bayou as being of no value to the provost-marshal and uselessly loading the horses. Having accomplished this, I returned to my horses and continued on toward Indian Village, where I arrived between 3 and 4 p.m. You will therefore see that it was my party that your scout reported as near the Devil's Elbow. Stopping at Indian Village long enough to hear what he had been about, as soon as it was dark we proceeded, dismounted, to The Park, where, after a careful search, I threw out pickets and quartered my men for the night. The next morning I found two skiffs, and crossed Bayou Plaquemine with a dozen men. I searched the swamps from here to about halfway to the village. I found by the tracks that the rebels had gone toward Grossetete by two paths, one deep in the swamp and not approaching Bayou Plaquemine till over a mile above here, and the other skirting the bayou all the way. The tracks showed that not more than five or six men had traveled the latter path, while the former gave signs of over twenty. This path was very bad to follow. It required us to wade over knee-deep for many hundred feet. In the afternoon Lieutenant Barber, by my orders, with twenty men, crossed at the village and proceeded up the Grossetete road about a mile, finding where the rebels had re-entered the road from the swamp, but seeing no one. I ascertained yesterday how Williams crossed Grand River. Having crossed lower Grand some distance from The Park, he reached upper Grand near where Bayou Plaquemine comes into it. Here he found the flat by which the party of men and young ladies came from Grand Coteau, who reached Plaquemine on the afternoon of the 26th between 6 and 7 in the morning, and the flat-boat had been there but a short time. He crossed his men in this flat, making his horses swim. This morning I again crossed the bayou with a small party and commenced where I left off yesterday; continued up as far as Lieutenant Barber went. The rebels, after waiting at the bank of the bayou, as I mentioned before, again struck back into the swamp, which they did not leave till some distance above the village. I saw both ends of this path, but after following it in nearly waist-deep I concluded not to follow it all the way. This afternoon I sent Lieutenant Barber, with twenty mounted men, down as far as the second Le Blanc, about four miles this side of Roan. He found that Williams passed through the Bayou Goula road and crossed lower Grand near Hyde's, this side of Toffie's. This is all the information I have been able to collect. The water is rising in the swamps and very cold, so it seems as though none but a desperate man would attempt to pass. Williams' horses and men are badly used up, so I think nothing need be apprehended from him for a fortnight at least. When I came down the day after Brown and his men came from Grossetete I was told that they crossed at Leonard's, and that he had a new flat-boat concealed in the willows. I found the flat to-day, but he denies any knowledge of it. I therefore send him to you.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. FREDERICK RICE,
Captain, Thirty-first Massachusetts Volunteers.

Lieut. C. H. BARNEY,
Post Adjutant, Plaquemine.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF PLAQUEMINE,
Plaquemine, La., February 5, 1865.

Capt. Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to inclose herewith the official report of Capt. L. Frederick Rice, commanding the mounted expedition sent out from this post, concerning the skirmish on the morning of yesterday at The Park.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. G. SHAW,
Major, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, Comdg. Post.

[Inclosure.]

THE PARK, February 4, 1865—1 p.m.

Sir: I have the honor to make the following report of the occurrences of the past night more in detail than I could do this morning. Somewhere near midnight the vedette posted below my position here, nearly opposite the junction of Bayou Plaquemine with Grand River, heard a party approaching through the water that covers the road still farther down. Hastily alarming the camp, we were enabled to make the proper disposition for their reception before the rebels opened fire. The vedette fired four shots as he fell back, and the rebels advanced, with loud yells, which had but the effect of disclosing the extent of their deployed line which the darkness and fog would not permit us to see. I at first took a small squad to the lower extremity of the buildings of Madam Sellier, but being warned by the splashing of the water that the rebels were sending a portion of their force around between me and the swamp, with the probable intention of striking my flank or rear, I fell back a short distance to the fence just below the saw-mill, where I took a position which I retained during the entire affair. The rebels advanced to the fences next below me, and tearing them down passed through, at the same time opening fire. Waiting for an opportunity, I commenced and for perhaps half an hour the work was quite brisk. During this time one of my men, Michael Hagerty, was killed and one of the rebels wounded and captured. Soon after reinforcements arrived from Indian Village, and almost immediately the rebels commenced retreating. I am happy to state that not a single instance of misconduct among my men was observed by me; while at the same time it was the timely arrival of Lieutenant Bond, with a small mounted squad, soon followed by Lieutenant Barber, with all the force that could be spared from the village, that probably prevented our being ultimately surrounded and possibly defeated. As soon as the retreat of the rebels became apparent I sent forward a line of skirmishers to find whether the silence was a feint to draw us out, but could find no one. About daylight two men, Z. Parker, of King's company, and Edwin Estene, of Whitaker's company, were discovered badly wounded in Mr. Hamilton's house, where they had been left by the rebels on their retreat. The latter died about noon, and the former is unlikely to survive the night. Soon after daylight five men of King's company—Savage, Bronette, Neff, Wood, and Gillette, representing themselves to be Northern men and deserters, came in and gave themselves up. Their statement is confirmed by the wounded Parker. Soon after noon Lieutenant Lewis arrived, and I sent him down as far as Toffie's. He learned that the rebels had retreated to Kill's plantation, eight or nine miles below here, and were in a saw-mill on the opposite side of the river. He also ascertained that at least two of those who escaped were wounded. Not apprehending a repetition at present of last night's amusement, I have ordered Lieutenant Lewis back to Plaquemine. Should anything further occur I will notify you forthwith. The rebels came from Bayou Pigeon with the intention of re-enforcing Whitaker on Bayou La Fourche, but being unable to resist the attraction of the apparently tempting bait we offered, they came up here. The officers drank freely on the way up, and one of their first cries was, "No quarter." The means of transportation used were a flat carrying forty men, five skiffs, and three pirogues.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. FRED'K RICE,
Captain, Thirty-first Massachusetts Volunteers.

Lieut. C. HENRY BARNEY,
Post Adjutant, Plaquemine, La.

JANUARY 26—FEBRUARY 11, 1865.—Expedition from Memphis, Tenn., into Southeastern Arkansas and Northeastern Louisiana.

HDQRS. CAVALRY DIVISION, DEPT. OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., February 25, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to forward the following report of the late cavalry expedition into Arkansas and Louisiana under my command. The expedition consisted of detachments of the following brigades and regiments:

First Brigade, Col. J. P. C. Shanks: Seventh Indiana Cavalry, 155; Fifth Illinois Cavalry, 349; First Mississippi Cavalry, 57; total, 561.
Second Brigade, Lieutenant-Colonel Dox: Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, 260; Eleventh New York Cavalry, 340; total, 600. Third Brigade, Lient. Col. Otto Funke: Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, 340; Third U. S. Colored Cavalry, 450; Second Wisconsin Cavalry, 400; Fourth Illinois Cavalry, 270; total, 1,460; making a total of 2,621 men. At 5 p.m. on the evening of the 26th of January, 1865, the troops were embarked on the transports John Raine, Autocrat, Laurel Hill, Fanny Ogden, Sallie List, Carrie Jacobs, Virginia Barton, Tycoon, Illinois, Ida May, Starlight, Belle of Peoria, Maria Denning, and Landes. By 10 p.m., the embarkation being completed, the fleet started for Gaines' Landing, Ark. Nothing of interest occurred during the trip. On the morning of the 28th we arrived at Eunice, a point six miles above Gaines' Landing, at 4.30 a.m. Owing to the darkness a collision occurred between the steamers Landes and Ida May, by which the latter was considerably damaged. The troops being disembarked, I immediately ordered the steamers John Raine, Autocrat, Illinois, Laurel Hill, and Maria Denning to proceed to Gaines' Landing, there to await further orders from me; and in order to save all unnecessary expense I relieved the smaller boats and ordered them to report to the quartermasters under whose charge they had been previously. At 8 a.m. we took up the line of march for Bayou Mason and arrived at the ferry at 1 p.m., the advance guard capturing a few pickets that had been stationed at the ferry for the purpose of preventing any cotton being brought to the Mississippi River unless properly permitted by the Cotton Bureau.
Commenced ferrying the command across the bayou, which was completed at 2 a.m. on the morning of the 29th. At this point I left one squadron of the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry to guard the ferry, also thinking that probably they might be able to pick up any small scouting parties that would approach the bayou. January 29, marched at 8 a.m. down the western bank of the bayou to Mason's Lake, where we struck off in a southwesterly direction toward Bayou Bartholomew, the road running through an almost impassable swamp for a distance of twelve miles. Reached Bayou Bartholomew at Judge Belzer's about 2 p.m. Finding a considerable quantity of corn at this plantation, I directed the rear brigade to procure and take with them forage for night and morning, and then follow the command to the next plantation, about four miles down the bayou. This last four miles of road was of even a worse character than the preceding twelve, and several pack-mules became so completely exhausted from fatigue and frequent miring down that they had to be abandoned. January 30, marched at 8 a.m. down the bayou to Holloway's Ferry, a distance of twenty-five miles, nothing of interest occurring except the capture of some prisoners by the advance guard and horses and mules by flanking parties sent out for that purpose. Also burned a large steam grist-mill which was in the employ of the Confederate Government. At Holloway's Ferry I sent a detachment of the Fourth Illinois Cavalry across the bayou. At the distance of a mile and a half from the ferry they found a supply depot, which contained, besides a considerable amount of commissary stores, about 100 stand of arms and a large amount of ammunition. These, with the building, were destroyed. January 31, marched at 6 a.m. Hearing that the C.S. transport Jim Barkman was loading corn for the use of the troops at Camden at a point ten miles down the bayou called Poplar Bluff, I immediately sent a det-tachment of the Fifth Illinois Cavalry, at a rapid gait, to intercept and capture her, which was successfully performed, together with her crew and some 10 or 15 other prisoners, who were picked up in the vicinity. I placed a commissioned officer and twenty-five men on board the steam-boat and ordered them to proceed down the bayou to Turner's wood-yard, where I intended encamping for the night, instructing the officer to take in tow all the ferry-boats he might find. At Poplar Bluff I ordered to be burned a distillery and grist-mill, together with a large lot of cotton and corn, which I was informed was the property of the Confederate Government.
February 1, marched at 6 a.m.; proceeded along the bayou to Knox's Ferry; here left the bayou and took the Bastrop road; directed the officer in charge of the steamer to await me at Point Pleasant, a landing about two miles from the town of Bastrop. From the best information I could obtain I was led to believe that Colonel McNeill had a force of some 800 men at Oak Ridge, and judging that the heavy rains had rendered the country below Oak Ridge toward Bœuf River impassable, and that consequently if pushed he would endeavor to go toward Monroe, I determined on sending the Third Brigade to Oak Ridge, at the same time pushing the First and Second Brigades through Bastrop, La., to a point called Great Mills, where the Oak Ridge and Monroe road crossed Bœuf Bayou, hoping by this disposition of my forces to either capture his command or at least force a fight. I also directed Colonel Shanks to send a portion of the force under his command to Monroe. February 2, remained at Bastrop, La., all day with the Fourth Illinois Cavalry and detachments of the three brigades left in charge of the pack train. Foraging details brought in a large number of horses, mules, and negroes. At 3 p.m. Colonel Funke arrived, and reported that on reaching Oak Ridge he found that McNeill's force had been greatly exaggerated, it amounting only to some sixty men, poorly armed, who, hearing of his approach, fled and scattered about in the swamps. He succeeded in taking several prisoners and capturing some very good horses and mules. February 3, detached two squadrons of the Fourth Illinois Cavalry, with orders to proceed to Prairie Mer Rouge (which I was informed was the finest agricultural portion of that section of country) and burn all large quantities of forage, cotton, &c., that he might find; also to bring in all serviceable animals and negroes, and to rejoin the command at Hamburg, coming up the west side of Bayou Bartholomew from Knox's Ferry for that purpose. Moved the command two miles below Point Pleasant and commenced ferrying across the bayou, using the steam-boat for that purpose. In the interim Colonel Shanks returned and reported that he had gone, as directed, to Grant's Mills; found no enemy; had also sent a detachment into Monroe; found the place nearly deserted, all Government property having been moved by Harrison across the Washita River. Completed the crossing of the command by 2 a.m. morning of the 4th. As soon as this was effected I burned the steam-boat and sunk her hull in a narrow part of the channel. February 4, marched at 6 a.m. in a northeasterly direction toward Hamburg, Ark. Marched twenty-eight miles and went into camp near Louisiana State line. From this point I sent a small detachment of the Second Wisconsin Cavalry, with orders to proceed north along the bayou, gather up all the stock they could find, and to rejoin me at Gaster's Ferry. February 5, marched at 6 a.m. Owing to the continuous heavy rain the country was completely flooded, and the character of the soil was such that after a few horses had passed over the road it became a perfect quicksand, while on each side of the road the land was so spouty that it afforded no footing whatever, the animals immediately miring down. Notwithstanding this I reached Hamburg with the advanced brigade. The other two brigades experienced considerable difficulty, as it became necessary for them to bridge several small streams that had been forded by the advanced brigade. They also lost several animals and some material, and were unable to reach Hamburg till the 6th. This was the most severe weather we experienced during the trip, being not only wet but also intensely cold. Several contrabands perished from cold and exposure in their wet condition. February 6, the detachment of the Fourth Illinois sent to Prairie Mer Rouge rejoined the command, and reported having burned about 200,000 bushels of corn, some cotton, and brought in several horses, mules, and negroes. They also captured a few prisoners. February 7, marched at 5 a. m., and after experiencing difficulty, on account of all the small creeks and sloughs being very full, reached Collins' Mill with a part of the Third Brigade at 7 p. m. February 8, remained at Collins' all day in order to give the rear brigade an opportunity of closing up, as it had been considerably delayed by bridging streams and the wretched condition of the roads. February 9, marched at 6 a. m. through the town of Shanghai to Bayou Bartholomew; crossed the bayou at Taylor's Ferry and went into camp at Hughes' plantation with a part of the First Brigade, the provost guard, and the prisoners at 3 p. m. February 10, marched at 6 a. m. Crossed Bayou Mason at 11 a. m., and reached Gaines' Landing at 2 p. m. February 11, embarked the Fourth Illinois Cavalry (who had acted as provost guard during the expedition) with the prisoners captured on board the steamer Laurel Hill and the Fifth Illinois Cavalry in steamer Autocrat. As soon as these boats had returned to Gaines' Landing with coal for the remainder of the fleet, I embarked the command and returned to Memphis. Taking into consideration the exceedingly adverse circumstances under which the expedition was made, the losses, both in men and material, are singularly light. The following is a report of these losses: Men, 1 killed, 2 captured, and 7 left sick, unable to ride; total number lost, 10. Horses, 203; mules, 49; horse equipments (sets), 20; pack-saddles, 6; carbines, 30; pistols, 38; picket ropes, 1. Our captures of stock foot up as follows: Horses of superior quality turned over to regiments, 182; horses of superior quality turned over to division quartermaster, 94; mules (serviceable) turned over to regiments and division quartermaster, 358, showing a net gain of stock of 73 horses and 309 mules. We also brought in 440 negroes, of whom 200 went into the service. The remainder were principally women and children. During the expedition 44 prisoners were captured and a large number of deserters and refugees brought in. We also destroyed at various points large amounts of cotton, corn, and meat; also burned several mills, distilleries, and store-houses, which were in the use of the Confederate Government. I submit herewith extract from [report of] Col. J. P. C. Shanks, commanding First Brigade, in reference to First Lieut. Charles H. Hare, Company I, Seventh Indiana Cavalry:

On the evening of January 29, 1865, when in camp at Quindley, on Bayou Bartholomew, Private Hendrickson, of Company I, Seventh Indiana Cavalry, presented him, Lieut. Charles H. Hare, with a $20 gold piece, with the remark that he, Private Hendrickson, made him, Lieut. Hare, a present of it; and further, that on the evening of the 31st January, 1865, in camp at Furness, said Private Hendrickson delivered to Lieut. Hare twenty pieces of gold coin of the value of $20 each, asking Lieut. Hare to keep it for him. Lieut. Hare states that when camp was called the following morning he returned the twenty pieces of gold to Private Hendrickson, and that Private Hendrickson left camp that morning before the column moved, and was that day captured (I have since learned, killed). Lieut. Hare further states that he knew at the time he accepted the present of one piece of gold, and when he received on deposit the twenty pieces, that they had been gotten by Private Hendrickson on the expedition, and had been rightfully obtained by him. Lieut. Sloan, Company E, Seventh Indiana Cavalry, reports to me that he saw Lieut. Hare in possession of twenty-one pieces of gold ($20 each) four days after Private Hendrickson was lost; and since his return from the expedition Lieut. Hare has told Major Carpenter that he had the money after Hendrickson's capture, but that it was now lost. He has kept it so concealed as to be beyond recovery. I ask that First Lieut. Charles H. Hare, Company I, Seventh Indiana Cavalry, be dismissed the service dishonorably and without pay, with an accompanying order, that the order of dismissal be read in all the cavalry camps of the division.

I heartily approve and indorse the recommendation of the brigade commander, considering that the interests of the service imperatively demand that an example should be made of any commissioned officer who so far degrades himself and the position he occupies as to countenance, in any manner whatever, pillaging or marauding. This expedition had for its object the destruction of Harrison's command. As will be seen from the intercepted dispatch from him, herewith inclosed, it could not reach him without crossing the Washita River, at this point from one-half to three-quarters of a mile in width, and no boats of any kind in the vicinity to effect a crossing with. Desertions, furloughs to favorites, &c., have already placed Harrison's command hors de combat. He cannot raise in his whole brigade 500 properly mounted and equipped cavalry, and the only regiments he had that were worth anything were taken from his command and sent beyond Red River. The corn being burnt by us, and the horses and mules most thoroughly hunted up and taken possession of, he cannot possibly this season or during the next year subsist anything more than a scouting party on this side of the Washita River. A force of 100 men located anywhere on the west bank of the Mississippi River can scout the country to the Washita with safety, and would be amply sufficient to protect the whole country. What may be true of the country opposite Natchez and from there to Trinity I cannot speak of with any degree of certainty. A force could operate from Natchez now to the Tensas River even better than in the country through which we passed. In and around Bastrop every white resident has from ten to fifty bales of cotton, which constitutes his entire property. If the Government would send steam-boats to Washita City, properly convoyed by gun-boats, 5,000 bales of cotton could be obtained from this class of persons, nearly all of whom desire to leave the country with their families and become loyal citizens of the United States. It is but justice to the officers and men composing the expedition to say that the hardships of the trip were the most severe ever encountered by cavalry in this country. Anything less than their high discipline and determination would have failed to bring the expedition to a successful termination. To brigade commanders, and through them to every officer and soldier in the division, I desire to return my thanks for their indomitable energy and perseverance, as well as their soldierly conduct.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. OSBAND,
Colonel Third U. S. Colored Cavalry, Commanding.

Capt. F. W. FOX,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Mississippi.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS HARRISON'S BRIGADE,
Monroe, February 1, 1865.

Col. A. J. MCNEILL,
Commanding Fourth Louisiana Cavalry:

COLONEL: We have just received news from Capt. John C. McKowen corroborating your statement. He reports that the enemy were sixteen miles above Bastrop at 12 o'clock to-day. If this should be true, and you are cut off, collect your forces and follow them in their rear, annoying them as much as possible. We will concentrate at Columbia, and if they occupy Monroe you must use your own good judgment in getting to us.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. V. GREEN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Office of the Provost-Marshal, District of Eastern Arkansas, Fort Pinney, Ark., January 28, 1865.

Captain: I have the honor to report to you that, in accordance with an order dated Helena, January 25, 1865, and signed by the general commanding, I prepared an expedition to capture Stewart and Dustin, deserters and smugglers. Captain Ferguson, of the gun-boat No. 28, furnished boats sufficient to carry nearly fifty persons. During the day I obtained a colored guide from Friar's Point by sending one of my men with him into the weeds and exchanging clothing, and in his disguise no one knew him. I also, by pretending to find an old acquaintance on the hill, got a man who lived at Mrs. Kimball's house and pressed him in as a guide. His name is Charles Phayer. Captain Ferguson kindly consented to land his boat at the fort, and placed my men on the boat unobserved by any one on the other side of the river.

At 2 a.m. of the 27th I manned the boats with my men and went down the river opposite to the old town cut-off, and landed and divided into two parties, one commanded by myself and the other by Captain Parks, of the Sixty-ninth U. S. Colored Troops. We left a guard of six men and a corporal with the boats. I was to go in the rear of the house and he in front. At the early dawn we charged up to the house on the double-quick. No alarm was given before we were all around the house. Leaving the men in position, Captain Parks, six men, and myself entered the house to search it for men. We found Dustin's boots, socks, coat, &c., and I was well satisfied he was in or near the house. I asked Mrs. Kimball to tell us where he was, so as to save her house from being burned or goods much injured by thorough search, as we were sure to get him. She said he had never been there but once, and that was on last Monday week. I found his revolver under Mrs. Kimball's pillow. I ordered the floor to be torn up, and found him under the floor with his Henry rifle. I ordered the men to fire under the house and set the house on fire in three places. He left his hiding place and came out, without arms, at the other end of the house from where he was in the first place, and throwing up his arms exclaimed, "Oh, my God; oh, Captain Thomas, save me." Two men were wounded by Dustin or by careless shooting by my men, and I had not time to investigate which. The wounds were not severe.

When Dustin was captured his guard said as he passed Mrs. Kimball he handed her a small roll. He confessed he gave her something over $500. Dustin also claimed he gave the Irishman $300 to buy goods on the hill. I found $187 on his person and took it. The property and money captured was as follows: Money with me and property in charge of Captain Parks at Fort Pinney, viz: money from Irishman, $187; Mrs. Kimball and claimed by Dustin, $330; Confederate money about (Mrs. Kimball's), $100; goods in a bag, handkerchiefs, &c.; 1 Henry rifle and revolver of Dustin's; 1 worthless shotgun. The man Charles Phayer and Mrs. Kimball were no doubt engaged together with the deserters in the smuggling business. We brought the boat away. Captain Ferguson brought his boat down after the officers and men and landed them at the fort, and he brought Mrs. Kimball to the general.
With many thanks for the kindness of Captain Ferguson, I have the honor to be, captain, your most obedient servant,

B. THOMAS,

Captain, Commanding Fort Pinney.

Capt. T. C. MEATYARD,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

JANUARY 28—FEBRUARY 9, 1865.—Operations on the Upper Arkansas, with skirmish (February 1) at Fort Zarah, Kans.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. James H. Ford, Second Colorado Cavalry, commanding District of the Upper Arkansas.

No. 2.—Capt. William H. Greene, Second Colorado Cavalry.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT of the Upper Arkansas,

Fort Riley, Kans., February 9, 1865.

Major: I have the honor to state, for the information of the general commanding, that since my last communication of January 28 up to the present date all is quiet throughout the district. No large parties of Indians have been discovered by our scouts along the line of the Arkansas River, and with the exception of an attack upon a fatigue party chopping wood one mile from Fort Zarah no casualties have occurred. Upon the morning of the 1st of February a fatigue party of eight men, chopping wood on the Arkansas one mile from Fort Zarah, were fired upon by Indians; one man mortally wounded. Lieutenant Coy, with Company C, Second Cavalry of Colorado, immediately started in pursuit. The morning being extremely foggy, enabling the Indians to advance under its cover, also concealed their retreat. All that the party sent in pursuit were able to discover was a few moccasin tracks on the sand-bar in the river. On the 6th of February a report was received at these headquarters from Jesse H. Leavenworth, Indian agent, now at Council Grove, that Company D, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, at that place, were in a state of partial mutiny, having shot the lieutenant of their company, mortally wounding him, and had it not been for ten men of Company D, Second Cavalry of Colorado, would have carried into effect their threat of burning the town. Immediately upon receipt of this Lieutenant Wise, Company D, Second Cavalry of Colorado, with the available men of his company, proceeded to Council Grove (acting under instructions from these headquarters) to investigate the affair, arrest all the guilty parties, and send them to Fort Riley, Kans., for trial. The report having implicated the captain of the company, he was directed to arrest him, and the whole company if necessary. Owing to the messenger not being sent in time the company had left the Grove some six hours before the lieutenant arrived (acting under orders from the commanding officer District of South Kansas), and having passed out of the limits of this district Lieutenant Wise deemed farther pursuit unnecessary. Upon investigation the following facts were ascertained: That Company I, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, Captain Kendall commanding, acting under orders from the commanding officer District of North Kansas, pursuant to instructions from department headquarters, were ordered to Council Grove Kans., in the District of the Upper Arkansas, to report to Maj. Gen. James G. Blunt, commanding District of South Kansas; arrived there on the ______ of January, 1865; left there on the 5th of February, 1865, for Humboldt, Kans. On the night previous to their departure eight of the enlisted men fired upon the lieutenant, severely wounding him. He drew his revolver and drove them off. He was carried into the hotel. The men shortly after returned to complete their work, but were prevented by a few soldiers of Company D, Second Cavalry of Colorado, stationed at that place for the protection of Government property stored there. Finding these men determined to protect this officer they withdrew, returning again, however, with more men, declaring that they were going to kill him if they found him, and that they would search the town, burn the hotel, and threatening the lives of the citizens, but that they would finish the job. It appears that the captain was cognizant of this and even present at the time the lieutenant was shot, making no effort to control his men. I inclose Lieutenant Wise’s report.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel, Commanding District.

By J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

(In absence of colonel commanding.)

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Department of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth.

---

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Zarah, February 1, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that this morning, while eight men of my command were on fatigue duty cutting wood about three-quarters of a mile from this post on the Arkansas River, a party of Indians stole upon them and fired upon them, mortally wounding one private, S. M. Dutton, of Company C, Second Colorado Cavalry. The morning was very foggy, it being impossible to distinguish objects distinctly more than 100 yards. I immediately sent Lieutenant Coy, with thirty men, in pursuit of the Indians. He was out for several hours, but could find no trace of them, except a few moccasin tracks on the sand-bar in the river.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. H. GREENE,
Captain, Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Post.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

*Omitted.
HEADQUARTERS EXPEDITION,
Bayou Goula, February 10, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to make the following report of the expedition under my command, which reached this place January 27, 1865, and found on my arrival a detachment of the Eightieth U. S. Colored Infantry, under command of Maj. William A. Hatch: On the evening of the same day a scouting party was sent out, under the command of Major Hatch, who thoroughly explored the country for seven miles back and returned without discovering the enemy. On the 29th ultimo I sent out a cavalry force to the rear of a brulé south of Thompson's back plantation and east of Mr. Randolph's plantation. Here a guerrilla camp was discovered and broken up, and a house, the haunt of these men, and 200 bushels of corn were burned. This was rendered necessary from the fact that the camp was so far in the swamp that the corn could not be brought out without great labor. Then the party moved south from Richland plantation, driving a party of twenty or more guerrillas, commanded by one Brown, a Confederate captain, to another camp on a small plantation owned by Alexander Ambreaux. Here they disappeared in the swamp, where it was entirely impracticable to follow them. Our party then retired two miles, to the Richland plantation, posted pickets, and encamped. During the night the guerrillas attempted to break through our pickets, were fired upon, and retreated with one man severely wounded. On the following morning a small infantry force was sent to their assistance, when the guerrillas were again driven into the swamps and scattered in every direction. The infantry pursued some of the stragglers to the rear of Mrs. E. J. Randolph's back plantation, but were unsuccessful in overtaking them. Our whole force then returned to camp at this place, successful only in breaking up the guerrilla haunts and destroying their camps. Immediately after their return two companies of cavalry were sent out, one to the said swamp and the other to Mrs. Randolph's back plantation, for the purpose of intercepting and cutting off any of their band lurking about there. After remaining two days they were ordered into camp. February 2, a company of cavalry was sent out, proceeding from Andrew Mills' plantation, on Bayou La Butte, for the purpose of examining the roads and scouting for the enemy in the direction of Grand River. This road is crossed by fifteen small bayous, which were very high in consequence of the overflowing of Grand River, and there being no bridges they swam five of them, filled with logs and cypress roots. It required the greatest care and labor on the part of both officers and men to cross them without drowning or disabling the horses. They were, however, effected with the loss of only one horse. Upon reaching the river they learned that Captain Brown had made the river a day or two before by the way of Lake Long. As the water was breaking through the levee in many places and sweeping across the road, we were unable to proceed farther down the river. The force then moved toward Indian Village and encamped near there, and the next morning started for camp, reaching here about 3 p. m. From that time till the 5th instant, in consequence of incessant rains and the impracticable roads, we remained in camp to rest both men and horses. February 5, I received a dispatch from Major Shaw, commanding at Plaquemine, containing the information that Captain Rice, Thirty-first Massachusetts Mounted Infantry, had been attacked at The Park early this morning by a rebel force of 500. I immediately took three companies of cavalry and started for his relief. Having passed two miles beyond Plaquemine I met a returning force of the Thirty-first Massachusetts, who reported that the rebels had been driven across Grand River. I then returned with my companies to this place. Lieutenant Miles, of the engineer corps, accompanied all these expeditions, and with his knowledge of the country was of great assistance in carrying out the object of the expedition. He has been so faithful in all of his duties that praise is a poor recom pense for his valuable services. February 7, Lieutenant Miles, with a cavalry escort, proceeded toward Grand River and completed his survey. He has received all the assistance I could give him, both from cavalry and infantry. The parties sent out in these expeditions have been instructed to seize all arms in the possession of persons without proper permits, which will be turned over in obedience to your orders. Every search and seizure has been made under the charge of a commissioned officer, with instructions to carefully and faithfully perform their duties. In the execution of your orders the country between Donaldsonville and Plaquemine has been cleared of the enemy and their haunts broken up. I would respectfully suggest that the easiest and most practicable mode of observing the general avenues of approach from the Grossetete country to the La Fourche, and checking the passage of the enemy, would be to establish a post at Bayou Goula, composed principally of cavalry. This post would be easily defended, and by care and watchfulness could warn and protect the La Fourche country. With reference to your instructions that no plunder or license be permitted, the utmost care and vigilance has been exercised, and every effort has been made, on the part of both officers and men, to fully carry out the object of the expedition. Where either officers or men have failed in their duty, punishment has been speedy. If there are any of the enemy remaining we have been unable to discover them. We have been obliged to take some private property, but only in cases of extreme necessity, and orders were issued at the outset from these headquarters that no property [should be taken] without authority from the same. In the several scouts that have been made and in swimming bayous the men lost the larger portion of their rations, and I was compelled, in order to subsist my men, to take some beoves. One cow belonging to Mr. Sneed and six yearlings belonging to Mrs. Randolph comprises all taken under my orders for the use of my command. Owing to the scarcity of wood some six cords were taken from Colonel Butler's plantation, for which proper certificates have been given.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. SAYLES,

Colonel Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding Expedition.

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

JANUARY 30-31, 1865.—Expedition from Thibodeaux to Lake Verret and Bayou Planton, La., with skirmish (30th) near Lake Verret.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Brig. Gen. Robert A. Cameron, U. S. Army, commanding District of La Fourche.

No. 2.—Capt. Thomas W. Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 3.—Capt. John H. Alexander, First Louisiana Cavalry.
On the 29th ultimo I heard of a party of guerrillas in the neighborhood of Labadieville and this side of Napoleonville stealing horses. Finding telegraphic communication was interrupted with Napoleonville, I sent Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry, after them from this place. They tracked a few of them to Lake Verret, where they escaped in a small boat, exchanging shots as they went, one man of our party being wounded; the damage to them unknown. A full report from Captain Alexander, commanding the expedition, has been sent you. On the 30th ultimo Major Davis, commanding at Napoleonville, heard of their main force. (See telegram, marked A, inclosed.) I telegraphed him to pursue them. (See telegram, marked B.) A full history of what then transpired please find in the inclosed telegrams, reports, letters, and orders in their order from A to I, inclosed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Capt. Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans, La.

[Indenture.]

DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS, February 7, 1865.
Respectfully forwarded to department headquarters.

T. W. SHERMAN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

P. S.—I have given orders for pickets to be established beyond Napoleonville upon a road practicable for horses, and over which Major Davis says these guerrillas succeeded in getting between Napoleonville and Thibodeaux. This road, which is from two to four miles from La Fourche Bayou, not having been guarded as it should have been, is the cause of the whole affair at Labadieville. It is a road of which I was not until yesterday aware, and which was not reported after the reconnaissances made last summer with the view of getting a correct topography of the country.

T. W. S.

[Ninclosure A.]

NAPOLEONVILLE, La., January 30, 1865.

Capt. B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

We had an engagement to-day with the Confederates between here and Lake Verret, commencing about 10 a.m. and lasting about an hour. Confederate force reported upward of sixty. Will have more particulars soon.

GEORGE R. DAVIS,
Major, Commanding Post.
Major Davis,
Napoleonville:

Pursue the guerrillas. Chase them out if possible. You can have re-enforcements from this place if necessary.

By command of Brig. Gen. R. A. Cameron:

B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Napoleonville, January 30, 1865.

Capt. B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I will start immediately with about sixty men, leaving a competent officer in command here with about 125 dismounted men and twenty-five mounted to protect this place, including the infantry.

G. R. Davis,
Major, Commanding Post.

Headquarters Third Rhode Island Cavalry,
January 31, 1865.

Capt. B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General, District of La Fourche:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, pursuant to instructions received by telegram, I scouted the country on the east side of Lake Verret and to the brulé, on the Texas road, last night, and found no guerrillas. The only report that I was able to obtain was that there was a fight there yesterday for some time, and it was reported that quite a number were engaged. I started some upon my way back near Foley's plantation. They passed through Beasley's plantation. After pursuing them some distance, it being very dark, I returned to this post. Early this morning I sent out a few mounted men on the Canal road and some to Paincourtville, with orders to proceed as far as Grand Bayou and then through the brulé, this side of Grand Bayou and the lake to the Canal road. I hear that some twenty-two were on the plantation of Doctor Ford, on Bayou La Fourche, this a.m. and that the men sent out by me are only a few miles behind them. They have in their party of guerrillas the horses belonging to Messrs. Cox and Foley; some ten or twelve in number, and seven or eight mules belonging to Doctor Ford.

I have the honor to be, captain, your obedient servant,

GEO. R. Davis,
Major, Commanding Regiment and Post.

Napoleonville, La., January 31, 1865.

Capt. B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Captain Sayles has just returned, and reports the guerrilla party to be commanded by Whitaker. Followed him to and beyond Bayou Grand; could not overtake him. Our horses are too inferior to move rapidly.

GEO. R. Davis,
Major, Commanding Post.
Capt. B. B. Campbell,

Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that upon the 31st ultimo Captain Sayles, in command of forty men, went upon a scout for Whitaker's gang, pursuant to instructions from me. He went the most direct route to Grand Bayou and with all possible dispatch. He found upon arriving there that they had crossed about one hour previous. He had no instructions to cross Grand Bayou, and did not. He returned to this post and reported, and I immediately telegraphed you regarding the same. In consideration that the horses he had with him (they were the best at this post) had been upon a scout to Lake Verret, in the vicinity of Bayou Saint Vincent, the previous day, and had also been upon a scout to Lake Verret the previous night (not returning until between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning), and not very good even in the best shape, and that the gang he was pursuing were mounted upon good and fresh horses, many of them of the best stock the country affords, it was not thought that a further pursuit would lessen the distance between the two parties. When he left in the morning I was quite confident that he would intercept them at or near Grand Bayou in case they attempted to cross, and I accordingly gave him orders to proceed to the bayou only, and I then believed that Whitaker would be found in the brule this side. I would further state that I feel as deeply mortified at the escape of these thieves as any one possibly can, and endeavored to do all that my instructions and position as commander of the post demanded with that which I had to do with. From the time this party made its appearance upon Bayou La Fourche, I have had small scouting parties out in every direction. I have been myself and have sent my best officers. On the 30th ultimo Captain Bicknell with a small force was sent in one direction and Captain Sayles in another. The evening of the same day I went myself to Lake Verret. Up to this time they (the gang) had not crossed the Canal road with their plunder. I remained upon that road nearly all night, my men being at different places. When I was returning some of them said they saw one or two mounted men. They went for them and went into the woods and found nothing. I returned to camp, and early in the a.m. sent out Captain Sayles. He carried out the instructions given him, and of course is free from censure. My scouts and scouting parties have been sent out secretly. Had I gone with the captain to Grand Bayou I should have crossed and made further pursuit. My command has not been idle, although it has not accomplished that which was expected.

I have the honor to remain, your obedient servant,

GEO. R. DAVIS,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Comdg. Post Napoleonville.

Thibodeaux, La., February 1, 1865.

Maj. GEORGE R. DAVIS,
Commanding, Napoleonville:

The general commanding directs me to say that your report of the scout toward Grand Bayou in pursuit of Whitaker's gang is very unsatisfactory. It is rather strange and much to be regretted that you should allow this gang of thieves to come almost within sight of your camp, steal quite a number of horses and mules from the plantations above and below you, and then allow them to escape with their plunder, your force following them only to Grand Bayou. They should have been pursued to Grand River, where, if closely followed, they would have been compelled to abandon their stolen stock. You will forward a report of your last day's proceedings.

By command of Brig. Gen. R. A. Cameron:

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

February 2, 1865.

Major Davis,
Napoleonville:

The general commanding desires a written report from Captain Sayles of his expedition toward Grand Bayou in pursuit of the guerrillas, together with a copy of all orders and instructions given him in reference to said expedition.

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters La Fourche District,
Thibodeau, La., February 4, 1865.

Major Davis,
Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding Post Napoleonville:

Captain Sayles' report of his scout to Grand Bayou came to hand direct without indorsement from you. It would be sent back, calling attention to paragraph 451, Revised Army Regulations, were it not that too much time has been already taken up and the reports required from the general commanding the district too long delayed in waiting for this report. From this report it would seem that you allowed Captain Sayles to start out on this important scout without any written instructions, and verbally ordering him no farther than Grand Bayou. He should have had written instructions, and should have been ordered to proceed as far as Grand River, where he would, without doubt, have taken all the stock and stolen property, and a portion, if not all, of the force he was pursuing, as it would have been impossible for them to have succeeded in crossing Grand River in time to avoid capture, having only about an hour the advantage of the pursuing party at Grand Bayou. He should also have had orders to take a sufficient supply of rations and ammunition to have enabled him to make the expedition. Grand River is considered our line, and if the force stationed at Napoleonville fail in clearing the country in the vicinity of that place, lying between Bayou La Fourche and Grand River, of these roving bands of guerrillas, they fail in the object for which they are stationed at that point. The peace and quiet of the people, the protection of their lives and property, and the safety of the levees depend very much upon the vigilance and watchfulness of the commander and force stationed at Napoleonville.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.
No. 2.

HDQRS. COMPANY H, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Napoleoniwi, La., February 3, 1865.

CAPTAIN: Pursuant to instructions, I have the honor to make the following report of my scout to Grand Bayou on the 31st of January, 1865:

I left this place on the morning of the 31st of January, in command of about forty men, pursuant to instructions from Major Davis, to capture a party of guerrillas that are supposed to be in the brulé, this side of Grand Bayou. I took the most direct way to Grand Bayou to cut them off in case they attempted to cross. I went upon the gallop until within about one mile and a half of Grand Bayou, when it became so muddy that I could not possibly go faster than a walk, and even at that pace some of the horses got stuck in the mud and had not the strength to get out, and consequently had to be left behind. Upon arriving at the bayou I heard they had crossed three-quarters of an hour before, and were making off as fast as possible. Having no instructions to cross Grand Bayou, and knowing they had so much start at that place, and that it would take some time for me to cross (the only means by swimming), I scouted around in the vicinity; found a mule that they had left behind (which has since been returned to Doctor Ford, from whom it was taken), and then returned through the brulé to see if any were still lurking behind. I came to camp and reported to Major Davis.

I am, captaiu, your most obedient servant,

THOMAS W. SAYLES,
Captain Company H, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

My orders were verbal, communicated to me by Major Davis in person, and as follows: To take what men I wanted and be sure and get the best horses; proceed to Grand Bayou with all possible dispatch, and make an effort to capture some guerrillas, which he thought would be found lurking in the brulé this side of the bayou; intercept them at Grand Bayou if they attempted to cross.

Respectfully,

THOMAS W. SAYLES,
Captain, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 3.

HDQRS. COMPANY K, FIRST LOUISIANA CAVALRY,
Thibodaux, La., February 1, 1865.

CAPTAIN: In obedience to orders, I have the honor to respectfully submit the following as a report of the movements of my command while out in search of guerrillas:

On Sunday night I proceeded to Labadieville, where I was informed the rebels had gone to Lake Verret and would be found near Bayou Planton. I then marched to within one mile of the lake, and halted until daylight. I then moved down to the lake. When within a short distance of the Shell Bank we were discovered by their picket, and before we could reach them they embarked in a sail fishing boat, staying long enough to fire a volley at our advance guard (wounding Sergeant Pelletier and one horse). Bayou Plarton being between us, pursuit was not practicable. When they left the Shell Bank they made for the upper end of the lake. After searching for their boats on the edge of the lake, and satisfying myself that none were left, I came back to the Brulé Labadie and went to the Lake or Bayou Coopee Caries, but found nothing but signs of where they had been the night before. I then came back nearer Labadieville and halted until yesterday morning, when I again started for the lake, crossing the direct road. When near Foley’s plantation I was informed they were immediately in front of us on Bayou Blue. When we got in rear of the plantation we could not trace them any place, but found where they were preparing a landing place at the mouth of Bayou Blue. Being unable to find where they had gone, and not being supplied with rations sufficient to justify another day’s delay, I returned, crossing the roads leading to the points I had previously visited. I am satisfied that they have not yet taken the horses away, and do not think they can if the Canal road to the lake is guarded. I would have gone to the lake by that route if I could have been satisfied that they had gone that way. Their number I should judge to be about thirty. They halted on Hymel’s plantation and fed themselves and horses, I was informed by the negroes, on Saturday night. The casualties of the expedition were as follows: Orderly Sergt. Emile Pelletier wounded in right arm, and one horse wounded in the neck.

I have the honor to be, captain, your obedient servant,

JNO. H. ALEXANDER,
Captain, Commanding Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., February 1, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded.

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

[Second indorsement.]

DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
February 3, 1865.

This report is in its general tenor unsatisfactory. It appears that a raid had been made on Labadieville by a mounted force of the enemy. This force must have arrived from some landing place on the lower portion of Lake Verret, or else it must have come by the way of Napoleonville, which can hardly be presumed, inasmuch as there is a mounted force at that place to guard the passage. The number of roads on which this mounted force could operate are so few in number and of so short an extent, together with the fact that the horses had, in order to escape, to be embarked at no point on the lake above the canal (see topography of the country), and therefore within certain well-defined limits (see again the topography of the country), that the failure to capture at least the horses is inexcusable. I desire to do no one injustice, but to me the whole thing is unsatisfactory.

Respectfully forwarded to headquarters Department of the Gulf.

T. W. SHERMAN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
JANUARY 31, 1865.—Expedition from Morganza to New Roads, La.

HDQRS. SECOND NEW YORK VETERAN CAVALRY,
Morganza, La., January 31, 1865.

SIR: I beg leave to submit the following report of the recent scout:

In compliance with orders from headquarters U. S. Forces at this post, I marched my command at 2 a.m. as follows: Two squads, under command of Major Fassett, to New Roads by the lower river and the cut-off; three squadrons, in command of Major Van Voast, to Waterloo, with orders to send one squadron, under Captain Sanford, up False River to the dyke opposite New Roads. I followed one hour after with one squadron to hold all the cut-off roads from the river road leading to False River. Sabers were ordered to be left behind, and all arrived as ordered at the different posts before daylight. The rain was falling in torrents. As the gray morning was creeping through the mist the alarm was sounded upon each door, "The Yankees are coming." At Waterloo the trap was empty, as a gun-boat lay within a few yards of the town. At New Roads 5 were in and 5 were taken, and 3 horses and equipments, and 5 revolvers. They tried hard to escape. Some burrowed themselves under the houses previously prepared. The captain came very near escaping. He lay under a house covered with a gray blanket, and then covered with dirt and sand. One of the boys looked under, cocked his carbine, and said, "Come out; its no use trying to hide. Come out or I'll send a blue pill through you," when the captain raised up his head and politely but earnestly remarked, "Don't shoot." I send you the names and rank, and the prisoners under guard: Capt. G. H. Miller, Fifth Louisiana Cavalry; First Lieutenant Bondman, Fifth Louisiana Cavalry; Charles Mouram, Scott's cavalry; Alphonse Mouram, West's battalion; E. Sanchez, Second Louisiana Cavalry; one of Ratliff's scouts. They are all active and intelligent men. The officers were Major Prime's main support, and their loss to him will be great. Prime, the redoubtable major of the Fifth Louisiana Cavalry, had left the day before for Grossetetete. All returned to camp at 1 p.m., being out eleven hours. Casualties none. Lieutenant Collins and eighteen men visited West Baton Rouge, and returned to the up river and Williamsport on the 25th. Ratliff is on his old ground on Maringouin Bayou, with four picket-posts on the Fordoche. Stillwell is at Rosedale and Prime on False River.

Hoping to present you Major Prime in a short time, I remain, your obedient servant,

M. H. CHRYSLER,
Colonel.

JANUARY 31, 1865.—Skirmish near Oxford, Kans.

OLATHE, KANS., February 1, 1865.

Two houses were burned in Aubrey last night. Doctor Bell's house was one burning yesterday morning. That Vaughn had his gang together I concluded something was up. Before night I started, with eighteen men, toward Oxford. When about half way I discovered Aubrey burning and struck for the nearest point on the direct Aubrey and Oxford road, surmising that they would go from the former to the latter place. Just after striking the road, two miles south of Oxford, I ran into the whole gang. We were on the high prairie. They were nine in number. Knowing that nothing else could be done, I gave the command to fire and charge, which was done. They charged into the timber and remained there, and we returned. They were about fifty yards distant when we fired. Do not know that any of them were hurt.

W. F. GOBLE,
Lieutenant and Assistant Provost-Marshal.

Maj. H. H. HEATH,
Provost-Marshal-General, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

JANUARY 31–FEBRUARY 1, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Pike to Bayou Bonfouca, La., with skirmish (January 31).

FORT PIKE, LA., February 1, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report to headquarters Fort Pike, La., pursuant to Special Orders, No. 12, dated January 31, 1865, the results of an expedition to Bayou Bonfouca, and following:

Tuesday, January 31, 1865, sent on board the sloop Rosetta, with one sergeant, one corporal, thirteen privates, fifteen in number, to Bayou Bonfouca. Started from Fort Pike, La., at 3 p.m. en route for the above place. Arrived there at 5 p.m., having a very good breeze until I reached the bayou, when I discovered a sailing craft in the bayou. Having a reverse wind, I had to haul in my sails on the sloop Rosetta and pole her up the bayou to within 250 yards of Bayou Vincent, Mrs. Cooper's being my destination, which lay on the Bayou Vincent. The sailing craft, which was the schooner Perseverance, was loaded with wood bound to New Orleans, La., Mr. Raymond Terence, master and owner of the above-named vessel. She lay at anchor about fifty yards from Bayou Vincent, when I ran my sloop Rosetta into the left bank of Bayou Bonfouca for the purpose of getting a yawl-boat to tow me up the Bayou Vincent, when a party of guerrillas, nine in number, rushed to the right bank of the bayou and demanded the sloop Rosetta to come across to them, or otherwise they would fire into me. Previous to this time I had taken the precaution to put my men in the cabin of the sloop. I then cautioned my men to be ready and keep cool, when the guerrillas opened fire on the boat. They did not give me time to come across to them when they discovered the U. S. uniform on the two sailors and myself (all the other men were below). I then called the men on deck and gave the command, "fire." After firing two rounds they took to the swamp. The schooner Perseverance immediately got under way with all her sails set, and coming toward my sloop, I thought discretion was the best part of valor. I dropped down to the mouth of Bonfouca Bayou, not knowing but what there might be more men on board of her and intending to run me down. I ordered my men ashore at the old lighthouse, where they could have a good range on the schooner and at the same time a good cover for themselves.
When she came in hailing distance I ordered her to come to anchor or I would fire into her. She immediately came to. I went on board and found that the guerrillas had been on board and robbed the crew of all their money and clothes; then they demanded of the captain $1,000, or they would burn his schooner. The captain not having the money convenient could not give them the money. If I had not just been in time the schooner would have been burned. I went in pursuit of them, but lost track of them entirely, but was informed that they had gone to Bayou La Combe. I sent a colored man by name of St. John to Mrs. Cooper's to ascertain if they had damaged any of her property. He returned at 3 a.m. February 1, 1865, and stated that they had been there, but did not disturb anything, but took a man by the name of Johnson who was in her employ. She was well protected by armed citizens from Pearl River.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MICHAEL GALLAGHER,
First Lieut., 74th U. S. Colored Infantry, Comdg. Company A.

FEBRUARY 1-5, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to Wagon Knob, Big Grove, Greentown, and Texas Prairie, Mo.

HDQRS. FIRST MISSOURI STATE MILITIA CAVALRY,
Warrensburg, Mo., February 6, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report to you that, in compliance with proper orders, I started from Camp Grover on the morning of the 1st of February, 1865, with thirty-eight men, for five days' scout. I moved in the direction of Columbus, and near that place I divided my force and sent eighteen men, under command of Lieutenant Phillips, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry, to the vicinity of Renick Mills, to camp in that vicinity, and on the 2d to meet me near Wagon Knob. I, with twenty men, moved in the direction of Wagon Knob and camped on the head of James' Branch. On the 2d instant I met Lieutenant Phillips near Wagon Knob. I there divided the force as before and sent Lieutenant Phillips to scout in the vicinity of Buck Knob, and to meet me at a certain point south of Wagon Knob. I went through the head of Big Grove and passed on to near the head of Tabo Creek and camped. On the morning of the 3d instant I divided my force again and sent eight men with Sergeant Kelly, Company L, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry, to scout through the head of the Big Grove and meet me near the Wagon Knob. I, with ten men, moved in the direction of Greentown and Tucker's Mill. Near that place I visited the house of the bushwhacker Rider, and found his family to consist of his wife Alice and six children; one boy ten years old, one boy nine years old, one boy seven years old, one girl six years old, one girl four years old, and one girl two years old. I went from there to Texas Prairie and visited the family of Welch. He and two sons are in the brush. I found his wife Mary and four children; one boy twelve years old, one girl ten years old, one boy seven years old, and one boy five years old. I then started in the direction of Chapel Hill and soon found a trail of two guerrillas. I followed them until late in the evening, and came up with them at one Widow Cobb's, in the south edge of Texas Prairie. They were just about ready to leave when I came in sight. I charged on them. My animal being faster than those of my men, I alone was able to get in easy range of them. I wounded one of them. They saved themselves by reaching some scattering brush, and the dusk of the evening prevented us from getting both of them. I camped that night in that vicinity, and next morning passed Buck Knob and joined Lieutenant Phillips and Sergeant Kelly south of Wagon Knob.

Being satisfied that there were more bushwhackers in the direction of Tucker's Mill, I moved my whole force under cover of the Wagon Knob and concealed my horses and left a guard with them. I divided my men into three parties—nine men with myself, nine men with Lieutenant Phillips, and eight men with Sergeant Kelly, Company L, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry—and moved in the direction of Tucker's Mill, myself in the center, Lieutenant Phillips on my right, and Kelly on my left. After proceeding some two miles I came upon a trail of six bushwhackers, and followed them about three miles in the thick brush and completely surprised them, and fired a volley into them at a distance of about forty paces while they were standing in a close circle around a small fire. What damage was done them I am unable to state, but am satisfied that several of them were wounded. I captured all of their horses and equipments, six in number, and two Sharps carbines. The brush being very thick I was unable to follow them after they were dismounted. I camped that night, the 4th, near Wagon Knob, and on the 5th returned to camp with all of my captured property.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MILTON BURRIS,
Captain Company I, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

Capt. A. R. CONKLIN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Warrensburg, Mo.

FEBRUARY 1—5, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to Tabo Creek, Dover, Oaklin Church, and Davis' Creek, Mo.

Report of Capt. George T. Hamblin, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

HQRS. COMPANY I, SEVENTH CAV. MO. STATE MILITIA,
Camp Grover, near Warrensburg, Mo., February 5, 1865.

COLONEL: In obedience to Special Orders, No. —, headquarters of District of Central Missouri, Warrensburg, Mo., I have the honor to report:

On the 1st day of February, 1865, I left Warrensburg, Mo., in charge of Lieutenant Crain and forty-eight enlisted men of the Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, and proceeded on the Lexington road as far as Mound Prairie Church. Thence I proceeded in a northeast direction to Tabo Creek, distant eight miles from Mound Prairie Church, where I camped for the night. On the morning of the 2d I moved down the creek, having out skirmishers. I scouted the brush thoroughly for the enemy. I had gone but a short distance when my advance came upon three guerrillas, whereupon the guerrillas and my advance exchanged several shots. I moved rapidly forward and gave chase after the retreating guerrillas. I, with eight of my men, pursued them some eight miles, whereupon I gave up the chase and returned to where I first started the guerrillas and found that the command had moved to other localities. I then proceeded in the direction of Dover, where I found the command. It being late in the day I camped for the night. Distance traveled on the second day, twenty-five miles. On the morning of the 3d I received information that some four or five guerrillas had been seen lurking around in the neighborhood of the Widow Jay's farm, some four miles east of Dover, on the Waverly road. I moved on the morning of the 3d in search of the above-reported guerrillas. After arriving at the place I made a thorough search for them, but was unsuccessful. I then proceeded to the house of Mrs. Jay, where I found one Savage revolver and a small lot of ammunition. I then moved with the command to Tabo Creek. I then proceeded up the creek some five miles above Dover, scouting the brush thoroughly in search of the enemy. It being late in the day, I stopped to feed. Not long after the command had stopped an accident happened to one of the enlisted men of my command, causing me to camp for the night. Distance traveled on third day, twenty miles. On the morning of the 4th I moved up on the west side of Tabo some nine miles, scouting the brush thoroughly in search of the enemy. Thence I moved across the creek in an easterly direction some eight or ten miles in the vicinity of the Oaklin Church. It being late in the day, I camped for the night in the vicinity of Oaklin Church. Distance traveled on the fourth day, twenty-five miles. On the morning of the 5th I moved with the command in a southwest direction to Davis' Creek, scouting the brush thoroughly for the enemy. I then moved with the command in the direction of Warrensburg, Mo., by way of Kirkpatrick's Mill, arriving at Camp Grover, near Warrensburg, Mo., on the evening of the 5th of February, 1865. Distance traveled, thirty miles on the 5th.

Your most obedient servant,

GEORGE T. HAMBLIN,

Col. J. F. PHILIPS,
Commanding District of Central Missouri.

FEBRUARY 2-18, 1865.—Operations against Indians on the North Platte River, in Colorado and Nebraska Territories.

SUMMARY OF THE PRINCIPAL EVENTS.

Feb. 2, 1865.—Attack on the Overland Stage Station at Julesburg, Colo. Ter.
4-6, 1865.—Action at Mud Springs, Nebr. Ter.
8-9, 1865.—Action on the North Platte River, near Rush Creek, Nebr. Ter.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. Robert R. Livingston, First Nebraska Cavalry, commanding Eastern Sub-District of Nebraska.
No. 2.—Lieut. Col. William O. Collins, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, commanding Western Sub-District of Nebraska.

No. 1.

Report of Col. Robert R. Livingston, First Nebraska Cavalry, commanding Eastern Sub-District of Nebraska.

HDQRS. EASTERN SUB-DISTRICT OF NEBRASKA,
Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., February 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to verbal instructions received from the general commanding district, I moved from this post to Fort Rankin, Colo. Ter., on the 30th ultimo, arriving at the latter post on the night of the 3d instant, about 4 a. m., hurriedly taking with me such troops as were available for the march from the various posts of this sub-district, amounting in all to 300 men, all of whom had but lately returned from the expedition under Brig. Gen. R. B. Mitchell toward the Republican River. I marched the whole distance, 210 miles, in four days. On my arrival at the post of Alkali, on the afternoon of the 2d instant, I ascertained that Capt. N. J. O'Brien and Lieutenant Ware, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, had left there the morning of the 1st instant for Julesburg, Colo. Ter.; that Indians had been reported in force about the post of Fort Rankin, and that Lieutenant Brewer, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, fearing Captain O'Brien might be attacked, had sent thirty men and one mountain howitzer to Beauvais Station to meet and escort the captain to his post. Captain O'Brien had been detained behind his command at O'Fallon's and Alkali by business connected with transferring one mountain howitzer to each of these posts, by order of General Mitchell. While the troops sent to escort Captain O'Brien to his post were absent therefrom, leaving the garrison at Fort Rankin only fifteen strong, I discovered a large column of smoke in the direction of Julesburg from Alkali and immediately thereafter received telegram from Fort Rankin stating Indians had attacked and were burning the Julesburg stage station. I immediately ordered the troops to prepare for an early start, and marched day and night until I arrived at Julesburg, where I learned that three bodies of Indians, none of which were less than 600 strong, had appeared around the fort the morning of the 2d instant. Their attack on the stage station was evidently a ruse to obtain possession of the fort. Just out of howitzer range on the west and north were stationed bodies of Indians, while the third body destroyed the stage station; their intention evidently being to induce the weakened garrison of Fort Rankin to attempt a defense of the station, thereby leaving the fort an easy prey. Lieutenant Brewer wisely determined to hold his post and could give no protection to the station, which was consumed in a most tantalizing manner, each building being consumed separately, the Indians firing one and then waiting to see the effect; then another, and so on till all were consumed. Captain O'Brien and the escort sent to meet him came in sight too late to do anything toward saving the buildings. Upon his approach the Indians slowly withdrew and allowed him to enter the fort. As soon as daylight broke, after my arrival at Fort Rankin, I dispatched scouts to the west, where the Indians were reported to be encamped. The scouts returned, reporting that they found an encampment of about 300 warriors apparently evacuated the previous day. I then sent detachment out toward Valley Station and Pole Creek Crossing to repair telegraph lines and scout the country. They returned next day, stating that twelve miles of line on the Denver road and thirty-three miles on the Laramie road were utterly destroyed. The command on the Laramie road also reported an extraordinarily large Indian trail one mile in width to have crossed that road about twenty-five miles west of Fort Rankin about two days since; while the command on the Denver road reported that they had found an encampment on the north side of the South Platte, twenty-three miles west of Fort Rankin, which had apparently been abandoned two or three days only, and estimated to contain 800 lodges, some of which were of the largest size known to be used by Indians. Anticipating that these Indians might swing around to the east after crossing North Platte, I advised you by telegraph that I considered it unadvisable to follow them with my small force, fearing that the road east of Fort Rankin might be infested by them during the advance of my command should I pursue them. On reflection, deemed it not impracticable to obtain additional forces from Laramie and increase my command to a numerical strength sufficient to punish the Indians if met; and learning from the scouts out that the enemy was evidently passing round to the north of Laramie, I applied to district headquarters for permission to send an express to Fort Laramie with orders to have the troops of that post co-operate with me in a combined movement against these Indians, intending to extend the pursuit as far as Horse Creek if necessary, where it was supposed by those best informed in Indian habits that the enemy would move to. In answer to my request, the general commanding district informed me his instructions were such as prevented him from granting my request, and directing me to repair the telegraph line. After some further correspondence by telegraph on the subject of repairing telegraph lines I set to work with my whole energy to replace the broken portions of the lines, which were found to be most effectually destroyed; the poles being cut close to the ground and carried off, while the wire was twisted and entangled in the most inextricable manner, a large portion of it being carried away. I sent to Cottonwood for poles, whence I obtained 315 on the 10th instant at 4 a. m., Captain Kuhl, First Nebraska Cavalry, having by superhuman exertion procured poles and wagons, and forwarded them under orders to march day and night. At 8 a. m., 10th instant, I started out the poles on both lines, the repairing party on the Denver line consisting of 100 men and two pieces of artillery, under command of Capt. E. B. Murphy, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, the artillery being commanded by Lieut. Eugene F. Ware, Seventh Iowa Cavalry. The command on the Laramie line consisted of Capt. John Wilcox, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and 100 men and one piece of artillery, whom I had sent out twenty-four hours previously to dig holes for poles on that line, and Captain Weatherwax, First Nebraska Cavalry, and 100 men with one piece of artillery accompanying poles.

All the wire I had obtained up to this time was insufficient to fill the gap on the Laramie line, and I directed a party to proceed to Mud Springs, seventy miles west of Fort Rankin, on Laramie road, to telegraph for the necessary wire to be sent from there, with instructions to march it day and night to the broken line. On the 11th instant I was informed by my troops on Laramie road that Lieutenant-Colonel Collins, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, commanding Western Sub-District of Nebraska, had fought the Indians on 4th instant at Mud Springs; had skirmished with them until the 9th instant, when he left them at mouth of Rush or Willow Creek. The families and plunder had evidently crossed the North Platte at mouth of Rush Creek, where the ice was carefully sanded to enable cattle to cross, and the warriors or fighting parties of Indian force were loitering behind to defend them and check pursuit. I confess that I then regretted deeply that I had not moved my whole force in that direction, as I had at first desired, for I felt that, in connection with Colonel Collins' troops, we could have punished these Indians severely and probably retaken a good portion of the stock and property they had carried off. I, however, confined myself to the task assigned me, and, by dividing each repairing party into a day and night corps, succeeded in completing the circuit on the Denver line on the 12th instant, and on Laramie line on 17th instant. The heavy wind-storm of the 16th instant injured the line at the crossing of South Platte, which was repaired and communication opened with California.
on 18th instant. I cannot speak in too high terms of praise of the conduct of the officers and men of my command. To Captain Murphy, Seventh Iowa; Captain Wilcox, Seventh Iowa; and Captain Weatherwax, First Nebraska Cavalry, I am greatly indebted for their ceaseless efforts to carry out my instructions, instilling every officer and man of their commands with zeal to repair the injuries done to the telegraph with utmost dispatch. Having accomplished the work assigned me, I directed the troops to return to their respective posts and put themselves in readiness for the field immediately.

I beg respectfully to call the attention of the general commanding district to my monthly report of military operations in this sub-district, and the fact that every prediction therein contained has been verified. My frequent requests for additional troops, I am aware, have been seconded strongly by him but for some reason unknown to me a perfect silence is the only response I have received in reply to urgent demands for more troops.

I see but one method of protecting this road through my sub-district, which is applicable to all other portions of the road, and unless adopted I fear that additional trouble with the Indians will follow. I would establish posts every twenty-five miles along the road, with garrisons of 100 men each. At each post the Overland Stage Company should have a stage station. Halfway between these posts that company should have stage stations and permanent guards of twenty-five men, and one commissioned officer should be stationed at these for protection of property and furnishing relays of mounted escorts to the coaches, which escorts should accompany the stages from post to post each way. By this means the transit of the mails and passengers would be insured; but I feel satisfied that no assurance of safety can be given otherwise.

I would also earnestly beg that steps be taken at once to establish a telegraph office at every military post. The importance of this is too apparent to need comment, for where a large force of the enemy threatens any one post under present distribution of telegraph offices no re-enforcements can be obtained except from those posts where telegraph offices are already established, numbering now only five in a distance of 210 miles, and separated from fifty to sixty miles apart. The attention of the general commanding is earnestly entreated to this improvement in the defense of this road.

This Indian war has been steadily increasing in magnitude since its commencement, and I have no doubt a concentration of hostile Indians will take place next spring on some of the branches of Big Cheyenne River, having a system of raiding operations in view along the full extent of the line from Missouri River to the Rocky Mountains. Last spring, though superior in extent to the anticipated operations of the coming season, the Indians succeeded in distracting plans of pursuit by simultaneous attacks hundreds of miles apart, and I look for a repetition of that plan for the reason that it was then successful. I think it altogether probable that the road east of Fort Kearny will be attacked in the spring, and we should make timely provisions for defense at once, by establishing new posts and giving that portion of the line protection. To this end I would recommend posts at Wood River, Center, Grand Island, and another halfway from Grand Island to Columbus; one at Columbus, for the protection of the road to Omaha; and on the road to Atchison I would recommend posts at Sand Hill Station, Mud Creek, Pawnee Ranch, Little Blue Station, and Big Sandy Station. These additional posts would call for an additional force—at least 500 men to the present aggregate of this sub district. This would give us a defensive system of protection to transit of material over the great Platte route; but, to make the route more secure, offensive operations on a large scale should be vigorously carried on against these hostile Indians, and the war should be so conducted as to compel every warrior to defend his own wigwam instead of leaving it in security while engaged in plundering and murdering our citizens on these Indian raids. Various conjectures have been made as to the present locality of these hostile Indians. My scouts and Colonel Collins, who were on the trail, believe them to have gone toward L'Eau-qui-cour, or Niobrara River, ultimately to reach the Mauvaise Terre country; but that is only conjecture, and I am of the opinion that the way to find them, encumbered as they are with plunder and cattle, they cannot travel with rapidity, and I have no doubt, unless their proverbial cunning misleads us, they will be easily found, inasmuch as they seem defiant and made no exertions to keep out of Colonel Collins' way, but, on the other hand, confidently charged his command at Rush Creek.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel First Regiment Nebraska Cavalry Veteran Volunteers, Commanding Eastern Sub-District of Nebraska.

Capt. JOHN PRATT,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., District of Nebraska, Omaha, Nebr. Ter.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS WESTERN SUB-DISTRICT OF NEBRASKA,
Fort Laramie, Nebr. Ter., February 15, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that about 4 o'clock on the evening of Saturday, the 4th instant, I was informed by telegraph that Mud Springs, a telegraph station 105 miles east of Fort Laramie, was attacked by Indians. There were at Mud Springs Station at that time nine soldiers and five citizens, one of the latter connected with the telegraph company and the others herding stock in the vicinity for Messrs. Creighton and Hoel. I immediately ordered Lieutenant Ellsworth, commanding Company H, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, then at Camp Mitchell, a post fifty miles east of Fort Laramie and fifty-five miles west of Mud Springs, to proceed without delay, with all the men he could spare, to the relief of Mud Springs Station; to travel all night, and if possible reach there by morning. He obeyed the order promptly, and was at Mud Springs by daylight the morning of the 5th, with thirty-six men, making the distance in twelve hours without stopping. In the meantime I left Fort Laramie about 7 p.m. on the 4th instant, with about 120 men, consisting of detachments of different companies of the Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry and part of Company D, Seventh Iowa Cavalry Volunteers, being all that could be mounted and spared from Fort Laramie. My command traveled all night and reached Camp Mitchell during the forenoon of the 5th instant. The night was severely cold and several men were so much frozen as to be unable to proceed any farther. After a short rest I took twenty-five men and went rapidly forward, reaching Mud Springs about 2 o'clock the morning of the 6th instant. The balance of the command followed under Captain Fouts, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and reached Mud Springs about 8 o'clock the same morning, having made 105 miles in thirty-six hours, including stoppages. The small party with me made the same distance in seventeen hours, actual travel, and thirty hours, including the delay at Camp Mitchell. I found that the Indians had been in great numbers on Pole Creek on the 3d instant; that on the 4th they began to appear about Mud Springs, attacked the station, stole the stock there, consisting of about 15 ponies and horses belonging to citizens, 1 mule and 3 horses belonging to the Government; also the cattle herd of Messrs. Creighton and Hoel, which was on Raukin's Creek about four miles distant; that on the morning of the 5th, soon after the arrival of Lieutenant Ellsworth, they had appeared around Mud Springs in large numbers, seemed surprised at the increase of men at the station, and after a little firing their attack ceased, but many continued in sight on the hills all day. At daylight on the morning of the 6th instant they began to come over the bluffs from all directions, and about the time of the arrival of the main body they commenced a desultory firing and made efforts to cut off some of the party coming in. It was evident that they had come to take the post and expected to do so. The men and stock were fatigued by night travel, all chilled and many frost-bitten. The station is also utterly indefensible, being surrounded by hills and knolls full of gullies, enabling the Indians to ambush and creep upon us at points where they could not be reached by a cavalry charge. Shortly after our main body got in they attacked us in force and with great boldness. The suddenness of the attack, the condition of the men, and the character of the ground interfered with proper discipline and system on our part, and the fighting at first was rather miscellaneous. We found it necessary to imitate the Indians, get under banks and creep up to favorable positions, watch for an Indian's head, shoot the moment it was shown, and pop down at the flash of his gun. The men got quite handy at this game and soon made any ground occupied by the Indians too hot for them. It was common to see a soldier and an Indian playing bo-peep in this manner for half an hour at a time. At one time there were some 200 Indians behind a hill and in its ravines, where they could come within seventy-five yards of the buildings at the station. From this point arrows came in showers, the Indians shooting them keeping entirely out of sight. The arrows were apparently discharged at an angle of about forty-five degrees, making a curve and descending upon us at about the same angle. Many horses and mules and some men were wounded in this manner. It became evident that this point must be cleared, and arrangements were made for two parties to charge, one on foot to drive them out, the other on horseback to head them off, when the Indians, finding half a dozen rifles leveled at each head that was shown, abandoned this position. We immediately took possession of it, dug a rifle-pit on the highest point, and had no more trouble from that quarter. After about four hours' fighting, we began to press them back in all directions and soon drove them off.

About 3 o'clock their fire slackened and they withdrew into the hills, but many continued in sight on the bluffs until dark. In this day's fight we had seven wounded, three of them seriously, and some horses and mules killed. The loss of the Indians must have been at least thirty in this engagement. Most of the officers and men estimate it to be much greater. It is impossible, however, to be certain, as their dead and wounded are immediately carried off; indeed, it is common for the warrior to be fastened to his horse so that his body will be brought off in case of accident. The number of warriors engaged was from 500 to 1,000, the latter probably nearer the mark. They were armed with rifles, revolvers, bows and arrows. Many were mounted on American horses and there were white men or Mexicans among them. They had plenty of ammunition. Minie-balls were common, and they were bold and brave. They generally shot too high, else we should have suffered much more. Early in the engagement I telegraphed to Maj. Thomas L. Mackey, commanding at Fort Laramie, to send down a field piece, it appearing difficult to dislodge the Indians from their sheltered positions without one. Directly afterward the line was cut. About 3 o'clock I sent a strong party to repair it. The break was found about a mile west and mended. Soon afterward it was cut again. At dark another party was sent out and found two poles cut down and the wire gone for four poles at or near the same place. By taking wire from the line east it was repaired, so that we were able to keep up communication with Fort Laramie. During the night we fortified and prepared to take the offensive. In the morning no Indians were in sight. Leaving Captain Fouts in command of the station, we reconnoitered in force ready to meet them and found the whole country covered with trails. They seemed to concentrate and tend generally toward the springs on Rush Creek about ten miles distant, and we satisfied ourselves that their main camp was there. Before daylight of the morning of the 8th, Lieut. W. H. Brown, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, arrived with a howitzer, having come from Fort Laramie in thirty-four hours including stoppages. On the morning of the 8th an expedition was organized for pursuit, Captain Fouts being left in command of the station. The country is very broken and in Indian fighting an attempt to surprise is always probable. The camp was found where we expected, at Rush Creek Springs. It was deserted, but there were evidences that it had been recently and hastily left; that they had been there about three days and were in great numbers. The camp covered several miles. Over 100 beef-cattle had been slaughtered in it. Empty oyster, meat, and fruit cans were plenty. Flour sacks, a quantity of codfish, and indications of the spoils of ranches and trains were scattered everywhere. Quantities of meat cut up for use and skins pegged down for drying and tanning were left upon the ground. Pressing forward on the now fresh trails, in four or five miles we reached the valley of the Platte, near the mouth of Rush Creek. When within a mile of the river we came in sight of the Indians on the other side scattered over the plains between the bluffs and the river, grazing their horses. There were no tepees or lodges, no travois or lodge poles, no women, children, or dogs in sight. They had all gone forward into the bluffs which at this point are about five miles north of the river, leaving the warriors only behind. The lodge trails were very broad and fresh, apparently made that morning and the evening before.

It was now clear we had underestimated the numbers against us. With a field-glass they could be distinctly seen and examined. There were at least 2,000 warriors in sight. It was evident that all the hostile Indians that had been committing depredations and holding the country along the South Platte were concentrated here. The river was about half a mile wide and frozen over. While we were looking for a crossing they saved us the trouble by commencing to swarm down to the river-banks and come over on the ice, not opposite, but one or two miles above and below us. We had barely time to corral our train before they were upon us on every side. The position chosen was the best we could get, but there were many little sand ridges and hollows under cover of which they could approach us. A very great change had come over the men since the morning of the fight at Mud Springs. They were rested and free from excitement, had confidence in their officers, obeyed orders, and went to work with a will. Sharpshooters were pushed out, and the hillocks commanding the camp occupied, and rifle-pits dug upon them. The Indians of the plains are the best skirmishers in the world. In rapidity of movement, sudden wheeling and hanging over steep and difficult ground, no trained cavalry can equal them. Hunting the buffalo is the best possible school. We were not strong enough to charge or scatter. It was necessary to be prudent, and at first take the defensive. They dashed up very boldly, but soon fell back from our bullets, and resorted to their old game of skulking and sharpshooting. At this game they were well met by our men. At one point we were greatly annoyed by a party of ten or fifteen behind a little knoll about 400 yards distant, and it became evident they must be dislodged. A detail was made of sixteen mounted men, part from the detachment of Company D, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and part from a detachment of the First Battalion, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. The party was placed in command of Lieutenant Patton, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and he was ordered to charge at full speed, revolvers in hand, to clear out the Indians behind the hillock, and, having done so, wheel and return immediately. It was admirably done; the skulkers were routed and fled. In the meantime there were from 150 to 200 Indians on the rising ground beyond the contested hillock, which was about midway between us and them. When they saw the charge they swarmed down to save their men, and our party had a short hand-to-hand fight with their advance and then wheeled and returned as ordered. In this charge we lost two men, Private John A. Harris, Company D, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, who fell in the fight, and Private William H. Hartshorn, Company C, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, a veteran, who was on a very spirited horse, and either his own ardor or inability to control his horse, or both, led him forward into the thickest of the Indians, and we saw him no more alive. Many Indians were killed and wounded in this charge. They fell immediately back before our fire as the charging party returned. A small party immediately went out and brought in the body of Harris. The Indians had no time to scalp him or take his arms or clothing, and they were brought in with him. The body of Hartshorn was found next morning about one mile from our camp, horribly mutilated, with ninety-seven arrows sticking in it. It is not unlikely that some chief of note was killed by him, or some one else in the charge, and that each one of his relations and friends put an arrow in him and left it, as it is sometimes their custom. Both bodies were brought to Fort Laramie for burial. I desire especially to call attention to the conduct of Lieutenant Patton and his little body of men. The charge was a very gallant one, and the desired objects were fully accomplished. Toward night we could not bring the Indians in reach of our fire. They retired behind the hills and were returning across the Platte until dark, when very few seemed to be on the south side of the river.

About sundown an incident worthy of notice occurred. Private Miller, Company C, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, had shot an Indian, and he lay on the ice in plain sight about half a mile distant. Our enemies retreating and night coming on, horses and mules were ordered to be watered a few at a time, not in the river, but at the creek, which was the nearer. A party going by mistake toward the Platte, where the dead Indian lay, a cry was raised and the Indians on both sides came flocking to the point, evidently supposing that we were after the body. Recall was sounded, our men came back, and the Indians retired, but in the morning the body was gone. The Indians never permit their killed to fall into the hands of their enemies if it is possible to prevent it. We camped on the battle ground and continued to prepare and occupy favorable positions during the night and morning. About sunrise on the 9th they began to come over above and below, until some 400 mounted warriors were counted, without any apparent diminution of the number left on the north side of the river. They found us ready, skirmished about for awhile, exchanged a few shots, and then began to recross and put off rapidly for the bluffs. At noon very few were to be seen. They were evidently hurrying away into the sand hills to overtake their families that had gone on the day before. A few scouts could be seen on the other side of the river, left to watch us, and when we moved up the river we saw them, eight in number, crossing to our deserted camp like wolves, to pick up something as a trophy or to dig up or scalp any dead they might find. Farther pursuit would have been injudicious and useless. With their numbers they could at any time compel our small party to corral and fight. We could drive them off and follow again with the same result, but could not afford to give them the least advantage. In following them to L'Eau qui court we should be in the sand hills, when they would have had greatly the advantage in ground and where our stock could not exist. In each engagement the Indians fired everything around them that would burn. We continued to see the smoke of their fires as they went north for at least fifty miles. We broke camp about 2 o'clock, moved up the Platte about fifteen miles, where the command was divided, part under Lieutenant Brown, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, going on to Camp Mitchell and Fort Laramie, which had been left with insufficient garrisons, and the remainder returning to Mud Springs with me. On the morning of the 10th I took about seventy-five men and proceeded to Pole Creek, to open communication with Julesburg.

At Pole Creek we met Captain Wilcox, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, with his command, repairing the line. On the 11th we started to return to Fort Laramie. Made Pumpkin Creek, ten miles west of Mud Springs, that night. On the 12th made Camp Mitchell, forty-five miles, and on the 14th reached Fort Laramie, fifty miles. We found the Pole Creek Station burned, and between that point and Mud Springs the poles were gone for ten miles and a half, consecutively. East of Pole Creek Station they were reported gone for a still greater distance. The Indians had evidently good teachers and did their work well. They have got over their superstitious idea that it is bad medicine to touch the telegraph. Of the conduct of the officers and men connected with the expedition I cannot speak too highly. In extreme cold weather, in the dead of winter, the main body marched nearly 400 miles in ten days, much of the time by night, without tents or shelter, camped on the ground, often without fire, on short rations and forage, and met and repulsed in every engagement a brave and cunning foe, numbering at least ten, probably fifteen, to one. Their patience and endurance, their cheerfulness and courage, their readiness to obey, and promptness and skill to execute could not be surpassed. The expedition was organized into four squadrons, the first composed of a detachment from Company D, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, officered by Captain Fonts and Lieutenant Haywood; the second, of a detachment from Company I, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, officered by Captain Apt, Lieutenants Harlan and Moloney; the third, of a detachment from Company H, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, commanded by Lieutenant Ellsworth; the fourth, of a detachment composed of men from Companies A, B, C, and D, of the First Battalion, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, officered by Lieutenants Patton and Herriman; and the howitzer in charge of Lieutenant Brown, commanding a squad of men, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, sufficient to man the piece. Assistant Surgeon Zeigler, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, accompanied the expedition. Captains Glenn, regimental commissary, and Reeves, assistant district inspector, both of the Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, were also with it as volunteers without command, being anxious to take part in an Indian fight, in which they were fully gratified. Lieutenant Harlan acted as quartermaster and commissary, and Lieutenants Herriman and Moloney as adjutants, the first at the commencement of the expedition and the last at its close. All did their duty well and I do not feel at liberty to particularize, except in the case of Lieutenant Patton and his party. Their charge was a very brilliant affair; challenged and received universal praise. Mr. Martin Hogan, telegraph operator, was employed as guide and did valuable service. The howitzer, under command of Lieutenant Brown, was admirably served, but did not prove as useful as was expected owing to the defective character of the ammunition, many of the shells failing to burst at all and some bursting at the muzzle of the gun. I append the report of Lieutenant Brown upon the subject, and ask that proper steps be taken to condemn such of our ammunition as is worthless or doubtful and that better be furnished to the troops stationed in the mountains. Much of the howitzer ammunition at Fort Laramie has been in the magazine for eight or ten years. All supplies for this service should be of the best quality, as they are forwarded but once in the year and mistakes cannot be seasonably corrected. The casualties attending the expedition were much fewer than could have been anticipated. It arises from the fact that the Indians, when near us, fired too high, not understanding their new arms and ammunition, and that our men obeyed orders, fought systematically, and manifested great prudence and adroitness in imitating the Indian cunning. Moving and fighting in the Indian country is a distinct branch of the service that few understand and that can only be learned by actual service.

In the engagement at Mud Springs 3 men were wounded seriously and 4 slightly. In the battle at the mouth of Rush Creek 2 men were killed, 9 wounded. In addition to this, 10 men were seriously frost-bitten in our night marches, making a total of 28 killed and disabled. The total loss of the Indians in all the engagements is variously estimated from 100 to 150. I append the report of Asst. Surg. A. F. Zeigler, and as to casualties also his supplemental report, detailing the brutalities inflicted upon the body of Private W. H. Hartshorn, Company C. It is well to know the character of the enemy we have to deal with. This party of Indians has rarely been equaled in size. It is usually difficult for large numbers to remain long together for lack of subsistence, but in this case their stolen stock and plundered stores furnished them abundant supplies. The party was made up of all the Cheyennes, Ogalallas, and Brulé Siouxs south of the Platte, together with probably a few Kiowas, Arapahoes, and perhaps some straggling Apaches and Comanches. It numbered from 800 to 1,000 lodges and from 2,000 to 3,000 warriors. The last-named bands are most likely on and south of the Arkansas River for the winter, but many come up to depredate on the main and South Platte when grass comes. The party we met has no doubt gone north to the Powder River country, to join the hostile Indians there, and may be expected to continue their depredations along the North Platte till severely punished. Their probable route from where we left them will be through the sand hills to L’Eau-qui-cort, then across the heads of White River and the South Fork of Cheyenne to Powder River. Small parties may remain, but the main body will go there to secure their families and recruit their stock until spring. They are well armed and mounted; have many rifled muskets and plenty of ammunition, including minie cartridges with ounce balls; are full of venom and bent on revenge for the loss of their people south. So soon as they reach the Indians north they will excite and perhaps compel them to become hostile. The posts on the Platte, especially Deer Creek and Platte Bridge, which are within 100 miles of Powder River, will be in immediate danger. More troops should be sent out here immediately to hold the posts in the sub-district, and when spring opens important expeditions should be organized to penetrate the center of their country.

Having been nearly three years in this service and being about to leave it, I venture to add a word as to the policy to be pursued. I beg to repeat the suggestions which I have heretofore made, that the permanent cure for the hostilities of the northern Indians is to go into the heart of their buffalo country and build and hold forts till the trouble is over. A hasty expedition, however successful, is only a temporary lesson, whereas the presence of troops in force in the country where the Indians are compelled to live and subsist would soon oblige them to sue for peace and accept such terms as the Government may think proper to impose. The Black Hills, Big Horn Mountain, Yellowstone country, are all rich in minerals, but this wealth cannot be made available while hostile bands of Indians are roaming over the country. If these Indians could be induced to remove north toward the main Missouri and remain there, it would open up an immense region for mining and agriculture which cannot be now reached. They would be in a fine buffalo country, and out of the way of collisions with the whites, which are always liable to occur if they are near together. It would also separate them from the southern Indians, and prevent the plotting and combining which now exists between them. There are two points I would respectfully indicate as suitable locations for the posts spoken of, one about the head of the Little Missouri of the Mandans near the Three Buttes, and the other at some proper place on Powder River. An expedition starting from the Missouri near Fort Pierre and following the old traders’ trail west of the forks of the Cheyenne, thence to the head of the Little Missouri of the Mandans, thence to Powder River, would be joined at some proper post by another from Fort Laramie, and if in sufficient force it could hardly fail to accomplish its object.

I am, captain, your very obedient servant,

WM. O. COLLINS,

Capt. JOHN PRATT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Nebraska.
SCOUT FROM FORT LARNED, KANS.

February 3-8, 1865.—Scouts in La Fayette County, Mo.

Warrensburg, February 8, 1865—10:20 a.m.

Have had heavy scouts through La Fayette County for five days. They killed bushwhacker N. B. Mitchell and wounded 4 or 5 others; captured 8 of their horses, equipments, and 2 Sharps carbines and 1 revolver. They scoured the country thoroughly and broke up two important guerrilla haunts. Families who harbored bushmen were discovered. A special report will be made in their case.

JNO. F. PHILIPS, Colonel, Commanding District.

Major-General Dodge.

February 3-9, 1865.—Scout from Fort Larned to South Fork of Pawnee Creek and Buckner's Branch, Kans.

Fort Larned, February 13, 1865.

Sir: In obedience to instructions received to scout in the direction of the Cimarron, I proceeded on the 3d of February, crossed the Arkansas River near the mouth of Coon Creek, twelve miles south of this post. Struck the trail of a party of about twelve Indians immediately on crossing the river. The Indians were traveling up the river, and had to all appearances passed about twenty-four hours ahead of us. We followed their trail on the 4th, and passed where they had camped about noon. On the 5th we crossed back to the north side of the river, and on the 6th traveled west a distance of about thirty-five miles. Struck the South Fork of Pawnee. On the 7th we traveled down the South Fork; passed the mouth of the middle branch, called Buckner's Branch, and camped at the junction with the North Fork. On the 8th we traveled down Pawnee Fork, and reached Fort Larned in twenty-five miles. The crossing of the river is very bad. In crossing back on the 8th we were obliged to cut the ice across the river, and several of the men had to wade the river and lead the animals. We followed the trail of the Indians fifty miles southwest of this post, where we crossed the river, and struck the South Fork of Pawnee fifty miles above this post. Nosigns of Indians on Pawnee. The party of Indians were undoubtedly the same who fired upon our men at Fort Zarah; had been watching the fort from the sand hills on the opposite side of the river. They made no effort to conceal their trail; camped in the sand hills and turned their ponies loose to graze. Mulberry Creek runs into the Arkansas fifty or sixty miles above this post. Thirty miles south of the mouth of Mulberry is Crooked Creek, with plenty of timber and water. It is my opinion that the Indians turned up Mulberry and crossed over to Crooked Creek, or continued on south to the Cimarron. I would call your attention to the fact that all recent depredations have the appearance of being committed by Kiowas and Comanches.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. C. NETTLETON, Sergeant, Commanding Independent Scouts.

FEBRUARY 6-8, 1865.—Operations in Ozark County, Mo.

CAMP BAKER,
Douglas County, Mo., February 12, 1865.

General: I have the honor to state to you, general, that on the morning of the 6th I started a detachment consisting of twenty-three men, under command of Lieutenant Alsup. On the night of the 7th he camped at the residence of James Martin, in Ozark County, Mo. On the 7th he fell in with two of Tracy's and one of Elliott's guerrillas, who were immediately placed hors de combat. We found in their possession one Savage revolver, one single-barrel shotgun. They all had bountiful supplies of subsistence, which we effectually destroyed. Our pickets were fired on the same night, but with no effect. On our return on the 8th we were fired on from the brush by one man. Owing to that region being infested by straggling bands of guerrillas I shall start another scout immediately. Lieutenant Alsup reports finding the remains of three citizens of Ozark County, captured in November by guerrillas and supposed to have been murdered by them. Their names were James Martin, sr., John Allcorn, and John Coil, all good loyal men and too old for the service.

I have the honor to subscribe myself, very respectfully, yours,

MOSES L. ALSUP,

Brig. Gen. J. B. Sanborn,
Commanding District of Southwest Missouri.

FEBRUARY 7-10, 1865.—Scouts from Morganza to Fausse River and Grossetete Bayou, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Morganza, La., February 12, 1865.

Captain: I have the honor to transmit, for the information of the major-general commanding, a report of a scout made by my order by detachments of the Second New York Veteran Cavalry. Learning on the 8th instant that the enemy was exhibiting unusual activity in the direction of Fausse River and Grossetete Bayou, I directed Colonel Chrysler, commanding Second New York Veteran Cavalry, to send out detachments to reconnoiter on the several roads. You will find the general result in his report. I have since been informed that the enemy was punished more than we at first supposed, quite a number being wounded and one certainly dead. Captain Ratliff has been seriously injured by a fall from his horse in escaping. Some small re-enforcements have lately crossed the Atchafalaya, which have spread themselves in squads over the parish, having, it is said, been ordered to make a general conscription. The inhabitants are very much alarmed and appeal to me for protection. I have sent out detachments again to-day. I learn to day from parties on whom I can rely, and who saw them, that on the night of the 8th twenty paroled prisoners from Hood's army crossed the Mississippi at Tunica Bend on their road to Texas. Persons who have just come down the Red River report that the rebels have raised the guns from the sunken gun-boats.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DANIEL ULLMANN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Capt. J. C. STONE,
Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans.

No. 2.

HQRS. SECOND VETERAN CAVALRY NEW YORK VOLS.,
Morganza, La., February 10, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: In accordance with instructions from headquarters U. S. Forces to scout the parish, I beg respectfully to report that on the night of the 7th instant I sent one battalion down the lower river road to the cut-off and through to New Roads and up the False River to Madam Paleuge's, but did not succeed in overtaking the party, who had conscripted thirty men from False River Island, mostly Arcadians, and taken them over to Grossetete Bayou. My information led me to think that the conscripting party came from Bayou Sara, and in consequence I sent a battalion to Bayou George, the party sent out on the night of the 7th having returned to camp at daylight on the morning of the 9th. Subsequently I learned that the party conscripting came from across the Atchafalaya, when I at once sent one battalion out the Fordoche to Grossetete, under command of Captain Sanford. He found all their forces concentrated at the head of Maringouin, probably ordered there to protect the conscripting party which was headed by Captain Barrow, who is raising a company for the Fifth Louisiana Cavalry. A sharp little fight occurred here, and the enemy were driven to the cane. On the evening of the same day the Third Battalion, under Major Van Voast, was sent to support Captain Sanford, and the whole country was scouted and the enemy driven to the swamps. From prisoners I learn that there were within two miles Captain Ratliff's company, thirty of Jamet's company, Captain Williams', Lieutenant Stelwell's, and Captain Barrow's party, in all about 180 men. The whole command returned to camp this evening, having marched about seventy-five miles. They attempted to ambush us at every point where the cane concealed them on the opposite side of the bayou. I have lost in this affair 5 men captured, 1 wounded; 2 horses killed and 3 wounded. We have captured 2 Confederate prisoners of war, 1 mortally wounded, 2 slightly. As you will see by this report, we are second best. The reason of losing the five men by Captain Sanford was in consequence of the breaking of a bridge after the five men had crossed on a charge. Two of their horses were shot and the column could not follow. On seeing this, twenty-five men of the enemy cut them off and they could not be recovered. Our wounded man was brought to camp. He is seriously, though not dangerously, wounded. The wounded rebel was brought part of the way. He was evidently dying and was left on the road.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. H. CHRYSLER,
Colonel, Commanding.

Lieut. O. A. RICE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

FEBRUARY 8, 1865.—Skirmish near Sturgeon, Mo.*

Report of Lieut. Luther T. Hayman, Ninth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

Sturgeon, Mo., [February] 8, 1865—10 p.m.

I came upon Jackson and party just before dark. Did not succeed in killing any. Think 2 are severely wounded, but made their escape in the darkness. Captured 5 horses, several guns, pistols, &c. Have 2 of my men wounded. Will take their trail at daylight in the morning. They are going in the direction of the Perche.

L. T. HAYMAN,
Lieutenant, &c.

Lieutenant CLARKE.

FEBRUARY 8-9, 1865.—Expedition on the Arkansas River, near Little Rock, Ark.

Hdqrs. Second Brig., First Div., 7th Army Corps,
Little Rock, February 9, 1865.

Major: I have the honor to report that Lieutenan-Colonel Gustafson, who went down the river on steamer Davenport last night, has returned and reports that he proceeded down the river ten miles, and, landing on the north bank, went in pursuit of the guerrilla party reported to be in that vicinity. He was unable to overtake the rebel force, which had retired down the river at 9 p. m. without molesting our outposts and doing no damage, except to rob a few families and carrying off some negroes, men, women, and children; number not known. He also reports that Colonel Whipple will be in soon, and that the rebel force was eighty strong.

Very respectfully, &c.,

J. M. WILLIAMS,
Colonel, Commanding Second Brigade.

Maj. G. W. BURCHARD,

* Erroneous, see p. 128.
REPORTS.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF EASTERN ARKANSAS,
Helena, Ark., February 13, 1865.

Sir: For the information of General Reynolds I have the honor to report that on the 8th instant I sent a scout of 175 men, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Crebs, of the Eighty-seventh Illinois Mounted Infantry, which proceeded in a northwesterly direction, to Moro, then crossing Bayon De View into the settlement called the "Colony," where at Vaughn's he found Dobbin's headquarters, but the troops dispersed. He destroyed between 2,000 and 3,000 bushels of corn which had been collected there. He also subsisted his men upon the bacon found there, and it being impossible to bring it off, he destroyed Dobbin's headquarters transportation. In the "Colony" he made captures of several soldiers. He marched thence to Madison, on the Saint Francis River, where I had sent two armed boats to meet him and convey his troops back to this place, meeting on the march squads of the enemy with whom he skirmished, killing 2 and wounding several others, with the loss of 1 man, whose horse being killed was taken prisoner. The command all returned to this place on the night of the 13th instant, having with them 20 prisoners of war and 18 horses and mules captured, having marched about 300 miles, swimming Caney Creek, Bayou De View, Second Creek, and L'Anguille River. I make the following extract from Lieutenant-Colonel Crebs' report:

From information received from citizens and soldiers captured, I feel authorized to say that the chief object of Lyles and Dobbin, who are personally at this time between Madison and Memphis, is to collect the rebel tax on cotton passing to Memphis, on obtaining which it is forwarded to the city at once as cotton belonging to citizens, and from the proceeds of such sales supplies for the enemy—such as arms, ammunition, and clothing—are clandestinely brought through the lines for the use of the command, it being the intention in this way to procure an outlet for the command for the spring campaign. As one evidence of this will state that a Colt army revolver, captured in the skirmish on Sunday near Madison, was before that day unused, and the man upon whom it was captured admits he obtained it but a few days before from Memphis.

From which it will be seen that Memphis supplies the rebels of the District of Eastern Arkansas, and thus induces the large number of their disorganized troops to infest the country between White and the Mississippi Rivers.

N. B. BUFORD,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
No. 2.

HDQRS. EIGHTY-SEVENTH REGT. ILLINOIS VET. VOL. INFNTY.,

Helena, Ark., February 14, 1865.

General: In obedience to your orders to me, dated February 7, I started at 8 a.m. on the 8th instant, with 175 men, on a scout to the interior. My route led me through La Grange, Moro, Cotton Plant, and above that through the lower part of what is called the "Col-ony," terminating in that direction at Alexander Miller's, nearly east, and distant about ten miles from Augusta. From this point I re-crossed Bayou De View, taking a general course east or southeast to Madison, on the Saint Francis River, where I found transports awaiting, we embarking upon which I returned to camp, reaching here at 2 o'clock last night. Distance traveled, including scouts from the line of march, about 300 miles. We found the roads next to impassable from mud and water. The streams on the line of march were numerous and from recent rains greatly swollen, rendering the crossings difficult and dangerous; four of which, namely, Caney Creek, Bayou De View, Second Creek, and L'Anguille River, I had to swim, and one, the "bayou," twice. In addition to places above named, often for miles together we found water in the swamps from knee-deep to the skirts of the saddles, and, the weather being cold, the men, from being continually wet, suffered greatly. We found the country generally infested with roving soldiers from the commands of Dobbin, Lyles, McGhee, Raibon, and perhaps others. Jackman, with a small body of Missourians, had also been there a short time since, but their present whereabouts I could not learn. I feel warranted in saying that there are as many as 1,500 or 2,000 men on the east and west side of the Saint Francis River, south or southeast of a line running from Memphis to Augusta, on the White River, but entirely disorganized, scattered through the country, and living off the citizens. They have couriers and signals, by means of which the approach of an enemy is rapidly telegraphed, and if the force is small they will collect and resist; if large, they hide at once in swamps and thickets impenetrable except to those thoroughly acquainted with the country. At a place ten miles from Cotton Plant and eight miles from Alexander Miller's, at Vaughn's, we found the headquarters of Dobbin; captured a number of papers, none however of value; found his headquarters transportation, which I destroyed, and between 2,000 and 3,000 bushels of corn, which I burned, and also a small amount of meat, which I appropriated for the use of the command, being at the time without rations, except bread. Approaching Madison, we had a severe skirmish with the enemy, in which we killed 2 and captured 1, dispersing the balance in all directions. Had the misfortune to lose one man captured in the mêlée. His horse being shot, he was hurried off in the thicket and could not be found. From information received from citizens and soldiers captured I feel authorized to say that the chief object of Lyles and Dobbin, who are personally at this time between Madison and Memphis, is to collect the rebel tax on cotton passing to Memphis, on obtaining which it is forwarded to the city at once as cotton belonging to citizens, and from the proceeds of such sales supplies for the army—such as arms, ammunition, and clothing—are clandestinely brought through the lines for the use of the command, it being the intention in this way to procure an outfit for the command for the spring cam-
I'MPLX. 105 SCOUT FROM PINE BLUFF, ARK.

As one evidence of this will state that a Colt army revolver, captured in the skirmish on Sunday near Madison, was before that day unused, and the man upon whom it was captured admits he obtained it but a few days before from Memphis. I respectfully request that Private Hutson A. Keith, of Company I, who captured it in a hand-to-hand fight, and for his general good conduct, having in the last six months in the same way captured two other prisoners and killed in honorable fight a lieutenant in the rebel service, as a mark of commendation, may be permitted to retain the same as private property. As the result of our expedition, in addition to destroying the property above enumerated, we captured 1 surgeon of the Tenth Arkansas Regiment Mounted Infantry, 1 deserter from our army, and 18 enlisted men; also 18 mules and horses, which have been turned over to the post quartermaster.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. CREBS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Scout.

FEBRUARY 9-19, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Devall's Bluff, Ark., with skirmish.

Hdqrs. Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry,

Pine Bluff, Ark., February 20, 1865.

Lieutenant: In obedience to orders I proceeded, on the 9th instant, with seventy-five men of our regiment (Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry), to Devall's Bluff with the unserviceable horses at this post. Arrived there Sunday, 12th instant, at 4 p.m. By the permission and advice of Captain Howe, acting assistant adjutant-general at Devall's Bluff, I remained there Monday and Tuesday to rest my horses and get some of them shod that greatly needed it. Started back Wednesday morning and, being ordered to bring in beef-cattle, and knowing I could get none on the road I went out on, I concluded to cross Bayou Meto lower down, in order to find cattle, which caused my return to be delayed two days longer. I arrived yesterday evening with sixty head of beef-cattle, which I turned into the Government corral on the other side of the river. My advance guard ran into a squad of Captain Ralston's guerrillas as I went along, and killed their lieutenant, Samuel Robertson, and wounded several more. Upon my return I encountered Lightfoot's, Husband's, and Tibbitt's men under Vaugine, and had several skirmishes with them, killing two and wounding some (number not known). I procured a guide at Devall's Bluff, named George J. Connell, who was recommended to be a strong Union man and who knew the country perfectly well. He rendered me very valuable services indeed. I was informed by citizens that the steam-boat Superior landed at Doctor Price's, a few miles above the mouth of Bayou Meto, on Wednesday a.m., and commenced trading groceries and merchandise generally for cotton. I saw large amounts of salt, shoes, &c., and powder, lead, shot, and caps which seemed to have just been purchased and which the citizens said they purchased off the steam-boat Superior. I first encountered Vaugine about seven miles this side of Bayou Meto. He was going on down with three of our men (prisoners) whom he had captured from our pickets. I chased them about six miles and until I saw they would not fight me. They hung around us, shooting occasionally at my advance, then the rear, then the flanks, for at least twenty-five miles; and, being mounted on good horses, they could always escape when pursued. Encumbered as I was with cattle, I could not capture any of them. I found several guns of different patterns, all except two of which I destroyed, because of the great inconvenience of carrying them into camp; also all the ammunition I found I destroyed. I captured some horses and mules, which I turn over to the quartermaster.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. NORRIS,
Captain, Commanding Detachment.

Lieut. S. MONTE CAMBERN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

FEBRUARY 10, 1865.—Skirmish at Kittredge’s Sugar House, near Napoleonville, La.

HEADQUARTERS,
Post Napoleonville, La., February 11, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that my picket was fired into by a party of twelve men at 2 a.m. February 10, 1865. They immediately gave notice of the same. They fell back slowly to near the road leading from Canal to near Kittredge's Sugar House, where twelve or fourteen men fired into them from behind a fence, capturing the outer vedette and shot his horse. I immediately re-enforced the picket and started a lieutenant and ten men after them to attack them if he came up with their force and to track them if possible. I then mounted about fifty men and started at 4 a.m. out on the road leading to Brulé Saint Vincent to head them off. I found they had not passed that way, neither had the picket that was posted near the road in rear of Kittredge's Sugar House heard of them. I then took the road leading in rear of the plantations, passed down in rear of Beasley's pike to Pugh's; found they had been there and had gone down the Canal road. I passed down to the Canal road, and my advance was fired into just below the saw-mill. I hurried on, and dispatched some dismounted men into the swamps after those who had fired on the advance. I then moved down to the lake, where I found a man attempting to cross. I opened fire on him, and after firing about twenty shots at him he turned about and came in. At this time another boat with three men and a woman left the point on the left-hand side. They were too far off to be brought to. I went down on the shore of the lake to the left and sent another force upon the right of the road (dismounted). I found nothing. It was through a swamp all the way. After knocking all the boats to pieces I withdrew my forces from the lake, leaving a few dismounted men to watch. I then made a thorough search through all the swamps and hiding places in the vicinity; went down to the lake on the right-hand side of the road (indicated on the map by a dotted line). I then came back;
sent down to the lake and found no further appearance of the enemy; returned as far as the Texas road (leading to the left); dismounted my men; took one-half and went to Little Texas about dark, and returned to the horses on the Canal road and then returned to camp, arriving about 9 p.m. I found no indications of the party that I was pursuing after they left Pugh’s. I do not believe they had crossed the lake. I scouted through all the swamps, mounted and dismounted, and have done my utmost to find them without effect. I re-enforced the picket in rear of Kittredge’s Sugar House as soon as I returned, to prevent them getting away. They are lying in the swamps somewhere around this place. I have heard nothing of the two companies sent by you from Thibodeaux, and if they come mounted to Little Texas and then through the Canal road they will be obliged to move very slow. It is almost impossible to pass mounted on this road. It is deep mud all the way, besides four bayous or ponds, which on an average are three feet deep. I have sent down the Canal road this morning to see if anything farther of the enemy is known. Those people that live below the church toward the lake are in my opinion a set of scoundrels. I believe they knew where they were. I could get no information whatever from them. I send you this morning the prisoner I captured; with him 1 Colt’s revolver, 1 double-barrel shotgun loaded with buck and ball, a small quantity of cartridges, 1 hand howitzer about eighteen inches long.

I have the honor to remain, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. R. DAVIS,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
La Fourche District.

FEBRUARY 10, 1865.—Scout from Friar’s Point, Miss., and skirmish.

HDQRS. COMPANY C, 87TH ILLINOIS MOUNTED INFANTRY,
Helena, Ark., February 11, 1865.

SIR: I would respectfully submit the following report of the scout of yesterday, 10th instant, of which I was in command:

Left Friar’s Point at daylight. Captured rebel at Mr. George’s, five miles from point; learned that two rebels had spent the night at Comack’s; took eight men and went to capture them, while the command remained on the road. I sent two men in rear of the house while I approached in front. Just as I opened the gate, only a few yards from the house, they ran out and opened a sharp fire upon us. I dashed through the gate and gained the rear of the house, then called for my men to rush with me into the house, when I found there were but two able men with me; one of them dismounted, the other’s horse badly wounded. Thinking I was outnumbered, I dismounted, and ordered my dismounted man to ride my horse and bring the command instantly. I ordered a negro, who displayed great bravery, to fire the house. Just then Comack ran out and said they had escaped. I then saw them crossing the field at full speed. As soon as I could get the men I pursued until all hope of capture was lost. On my return to Comack's I then for the first time discovered my loss, and that Stanley was one who had escaped. My loss was 1 private killed, 2 privates severely wounded, and 1 sergeant flesh wound in arm, 4 horses shot—two so badly they could not travel. Learning the character of Stanley, that he had just rode up and ordered breakfast, I left the house standing, having my men to care for, prisoners and citizens to guard, and knowing that Stanley had escaped and would convey news to any who might be at Shufordsville; and having learned Stanley's stopping place, I deemed it proper to return with what information I had, with the hope that I would be sent back immediately to complete the work for which I was sent. Doctor Robinson was present and assisted in caring for the wounded. Doctor R. and Comack were brought in. We captured 3 prisoners—Roland, Comack, and Lawler. Comack is private Forty-fourth Mississippi Infantry; Lawler is private Twenty-third Mississippi Infantry; Roland claims to belong to Sixth Texas Cavalry, but was on duty with Stanley. Brought in 4 mules and wagon from Dickerson, 2 rebel horses, and Doctor R.'s horses; also feather bed and clothing for the use of the wounded. The property will be turned over to the proper officers. The wounded are doing well.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. WILLIS,
Captain Company C, Eighty-seventh Illinois Mounted Infantry.

The ball cut out of one of the wounded men fits the rifle we found empty in Comack's house. Comack claims the rifle, and said it had not been shot.

Respectfully,

J. E. WILLIS,
Captain.

Lieutenant-Colonel HILL.

FEBRUARY 10-11, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Lake Verret, La.

CAMP NINETY-THIRD U. S. COLORED INFANTRY,
Brashear City, La., February 12, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that on Friday, February 10, 1865, in accordance with orders from Col. C. L. Harris, commanding post, I went on board the gun-boat 43 with fifty men of the Ninety-third Colored Infantry and forty-one men of the Eleventh Wisconsin Veteran Volunteer Infantry. Leaving the wharf about 3 p.m., we proceeded up Bayou Long and Bayou Magaselle to Lake Verret for the purpose of cutting off and capturing a party of rebels that were driven out from the direction of Texas Brulé, and whom it was supposed would endeavor to make their escape by way of Lake Verret. On reaching the lake, which we did about 8 o'clock in the evening, we came to anchor just out of sight of the point where it was supposed the rebels would embark. Myself and the commandant of the gun-boat then ran up the lake far enough to ascertain that no boats were moving upon it, and also that there was no road along the shore by which they might approach to discover us. We lay at anchor until nearly daylight, then ran up the lake and landed at the mouth of a canal, along which the road runs from Lake Verret to Napoleonville. Here the water was shallow near the bank, and we were forced to land the troops in small boats. I landed with about ten men and a lieutenant as quickly as possible, and leaving orders for the rest to land and follow immediately, marched rapidly toward a saw-mill located about one mile from the lake, with the intention of arresting all the men in the vicinity, to prevent them from giving notice of our approach; but on reaching the mill I was told that our cavalry had been there the day before, and also to the lake. I had discovered upon landing and examining the road that a small squad of cavalry had been to the lake and returned, but thinking it might have been the rebels, and the men at the mill deceive us, I sent orders to Captain O'Neil to halt his men, hoping by concealing our force to draw them out. I then proceeded about three-quarters of a mile farther to where the road branches off toward Texas. Here I became fully satisfied that our cavalry had been there the day before and had returned. Thinking there had been some misunderstanding with regard to time, and that there was no possibility of effecting the object of the expedition, I returned to the lake and re-embarked at 8.40 a.m. While the troops were on shore the commandant of the gun-boat searched for boats, but could discover none. We left the lake about 9.15 a.m., and proceeded to Brashear. At the saw-mill before mentioned quite a number of men were actively engaged in sawing lumber, and as none had accumulated about the mill, and none seemed to have been used in the vicinity, it appeared very probable that it was sawed for the use of rebels in building boats or for other purposes.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN LYNES,

Capt. R. E. JACKSON,
Post Adjutant.

FEBRUARY 10-13, 1865.—Expedition from Thibodeaux to Lake Verret, La.

HDQRS. COMPANY K, FIRST LOUISIANA CAVALRY,
Thibodeaux, La., February 13, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to respectfully submit the following as a report of the marches of Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry, and Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry, on reconnaissance to Lake Verret:

At 3 p.m. on the 10th I marched from here with eighty-four men, on Labadieville road through Brulé Landry, or Little Texas, to within five miles of Lake Verret. The roads were so bad I stopped at Bondsmun's plantation. Lieutenant Pomponeau, with six men, dismounted, went to the lake at a point between Coupée Lannes and Shell Bank, but was unable to discover anything. He was told that at 7 p.m. on the 10th instant a party of several boats moved down Lake Verret and into Lake John (supposed to be rebels). At daylight I started for the lake, crossed several swamps (in one of which one horse of Sixteenth Indiana was killed on a snag), and finally dismounted and went to the lake, no signs of any rebels having been there. Opposite the Shell Bank there was a gun-boat lying and seven small boats running from either shore to the gun-boat. The boat carried no colors, and would not answer our salutes nor pay our colors any attention at all, but moved to this side of the lake between Bayou Blue and Bayou Plarton, and commenced disembarking, for what purpose I could not tell. I watched the boat at different points all day, and was unable to tell whether it was in the possession of rebels or not. I left the Shell Bank at 10 a.m., and retraced my steps to Brulé Texas, taking the road to Bayou Blue. We had to wade over two miles in water from six inches to three feet deep, reaching the lake at 5 p.m., but found nothing but one small skiff (which we destroyed), and the steam-boat. After leaving the lake I had the trestle-work destroyed on Bayou Blue. The road leading from Texas to the canal being impassable, I marched back to Kittredge's plantation and halted to rest and feed until daylight the 12th instant, when I again started for Napoleonville, where I arrived at 10 a.m. and reported for orders, which I received at 7 p.m. I started at 8 p.m. from Napoleonville, and arrived here at 2 a.m. this the 13th instant. During the entire march I did not see or hear of a rebel, and I think they left before we started from here. It is almost impossible to move a command through the woods at present, mounted.

I have the honor, captain, to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. H. ALEXANDER,

Captain Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

FEBRUARY 12, 1865.—Skirmish near Columbia, Mo.

ROCHEPORT, February 12, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: About 1.30 o'clock this morning, with eighteen men, I attacked Jim Carter's camp. We killed three men and crippled all the rest. I think they had ten Arkansas men in camp. We got all their horses, clothing, and a number of pistols. The camp was within six or seven miles of Columbia, due north. In accomplishing this I regret to say that Sergt. Thomas J. Hern, of my company, was killed the first shot that was fired. Private Tuder was severely wounded. We walked a mile with our boots off and completely surprised them.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. N. COOK,

Captain Company F, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia.

Lieutenant CLARKE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

The names of the killed are Jim Carter, William Cavanaugh, Tompkins Robinson.

ADDENDA.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., February 14, 1865.

Capt. H. N. COOK,
Company F, Ninth Cav. Mo. State Militia, Rocheport, Mo.:

CAPTAIN: The general commanding directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your report of the 12th instant of the fight with Carter's band, &c. He extends to yourself and the brave boys of Company F his hearty congratulations on your complete success, and desires to commend the sagacity and earnestness which characterized this whole affair. It has added another to the already well-won laurels of the Ninth Cavalry. In the loss of Sergeant Hern the whole command will sympathize with your company and with his afflicted father, who thus has lost the best blood of his household. Allow me, in conclusion, to thank you for the vigor you have so unceasingly shown during the whole period of your stay at Rocheport, and that your management of matters meets with approval at these headquarters.

I have the honor to be, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant, Aide-de-Camp and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

FEBRUARY 12, 1865.—Skirmish near Lewisburg, Ark.

LEWISBURG, February 13, 1865.

Colonel Witt, with from 60 to 100 men, from direction of Quitman, last night attacked Capt. Jeff. Williams, the noted scout, at his residence twenty miles north of this place, killing him. Witt went in direction of Dover. Yesterday rebels were reported in force at Danville. If so, Witt's move may be in conjunction, to enable one of the parties to cross the river. I have sent Captain Carr with seventy men to trail Witt down and prevent any crossing from south side of river.

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock.

FEBRUARY 12-20, 1865.—Operations about Forts Riley and Larned, Kans.

FORT LARNED, KANS., February 20, 1865.

Sir: Pursuant to instructions, dated headquarters District Upper Arkansas, February 12, 1865, I have the honor to make the following report of scouts, &c., for the past ten days:

In accordance with the above instructions, I left Fort Riley the 12th instant en route for this post, where I arrived the 18th (nothing of importance transpired while on the route), and found everything in a very satisfactory condition, the country north and west and southwest being as thoroughly scouted as practicable with the force employed, the Independent Scouts only being on that duty. There has been only occasionally an Indian or a small band seen in this vicinity, and these I should judge to be only scouts or spies watching the roads. One was seen but a short distance south a few days since by one of the men. Upon this being reported to the commanding officer he sent out a party of twenty men, who struck a trail of what they judged to be a band of twenty-five, moving west and north. Sergeant Nettleton, with the Independent Scouts, has been sent west and north to the Republican, thence to Fort Ellsworth, to return by Fort Zarah. He will doubtless return to this post within the next ten days, when I will forward a full report of his scout.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. D. JANES.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Riley, Kans.

FEBRUARY 13, 1865.—Skirmish in Mississippi County, Mo.

NEW MADRID, MO., February 16, 1865.

I left here Monday morning, with ten men, in pursuit of a band of bushwackers I heard of the night before going into Mississippi County. I ran onto eight of them Monday night. Killed 2 and captured 6, with their arms, &c. They were from Clarke's command up here on a stealing expedition alone. Could hear of no others in the country.

JAS. W. EDWARDS,
Captain Company B, Second Missouri State Militia, Comdg.Post.
Brigadier-General Ewing.

FEBRUARY 14-18, 1865.—Expeditions from Donaldsonville to Grand Bayou and Bayou Goula, La., with skirmish (15th) at Martin's Lane.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. Willard Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 2.—Capt. James R. S. Cox, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Post Napoleonville, La., February 22, 1865.

CAPTAIN: On the night of the 15th instant, learning that a party of rebels had crossed Grand Bayou on the road leading to Doctor Martin's plantation, I immediately took about eighty men, composed of cavalry and thirty infantry and started for them. I had previously telegraphed Colonel Fiske of the fact, for the purpose of meeting them in one or the other of the two directions. Marching as rapidly as possible, reached Doctor Martin's plantation about 12 o'clock. Sending the adjutant in advance with a small detachment, to learn if possible the whereabouts of the enemy, I halted the column and awaited his return. He met a part of Captain Cox's detachment, who informed him that he had met them and driven them back across the bayou, capturing 1 man.

*See February 16-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Larned, Kans. Report of Sgt-David C. Nettleton, Second Colorado Cavalry, p. 117.
and 7 horses. I made inquiries at the different plantations, and could learn no more of the enemy. I then returned to camp. Having verbally informed the general commanding the day succeeding this expedition at Thibodeaux of what had been done, and supposing that the detachment from Donaldsonville, who alone had succeeded in meeting them, had made a full report of the raid and its consequences, I did not deem a written statement necessary.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLARD SAYLES,
Colonel Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Comdg. Regiment and Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

No. 2.

Reports of Capt. James R. S. Cox, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT 16TH INDIANA MOUNTED INFANTRY,
Donaldsonville, La., February 15, 1865.

I have the honor to report that, in compliance with instructions of Colonel Fiske, I took F and K Companies, fifty-five men, of my detachment, down the Bayou La Fourche road. Met a party of rebels in Doctor Martin's lane. Pursued them till they scattered in the swamp, with the following results: Our loss, 1 horse (leg broken by shot). Rebel loss, 7 horses, 2 shotguns, and 1 prisoner. Captain Macklin, Company K, rendered valuable aid.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. S. COX,
Captain, Commanding Detachment.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS POST OF DONALDSONVILLE,
February 15, 1865.

Approved and respectfully forwarded.

This party of guerrillas were under command of Captain Whittington, Second Louisiana (rebel) Cavalry. One of the prisoners captured reports that this force came from Attakapas. They crossed Grand River at Bay Natchez. The prisoner states that there were 100 in the party that crossed the bay, and fifty in the party that came to the Doctor Martin place last night, but from the best information I can get I don't think there were more than half of that number.

W. O. FISKE,
Colonel First Louisiana Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., February 17, 1865.

Respectfully returned for completion.

This report is entirely too meager and wanting in details.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS POST OF DONALDSVILLE,
February 18, 1865.

Respectfully transmitted with reference to indorsement of General Cameron.

By command of Col. W. O. Fiske:

LEONIDAS R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT 16TH INDIANA MOUNTED INFANTRY,
Donaldsonville, La., February 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that at a personal interview with Colonel Fiske on the evening of February 14, I received verbal instructions from him to proceed immediately on a scout to Doctor Martin's plantation, as he had received a telegram reporting a rebel force in that vicinity. At 10 p.m. I started with F and K Companies of this detachment, numbering fifty-five men. At the mouth of Doctor Martin's lane we discovered a party of rebels. Gave chase for about four miles till they scattered in the swamps and our horses were belly deep in the water. Four horses were hitched in lane near the bayou, concealed by bushes. We captured 7 horses and equipments, 2 shotguns, and 1 prisoner. Our loss was 1 horse (leg broken by shot.) Returning toward the bayou we encountered a person who alleged he was a citizen, whom I arrested. The information gleaned amounted to this: Captain Whittington, Captain Dunn, and Lieutenant Fox, with 100 men, crossed Bay Natchez February 12; were encamped at Bay Pierre Pass; that fifty men were present with Captain Whittington in the lane that night. I do not believe there were a third of that number. We carefully searched the houses and sugar mills in that vicinity and found nothing. On returning from the swamps the adjutant of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry reported Colonel Sayles and three companies of that regiment half a mile below, on the bayou road. Reached camp at 4 a.m. February 15.

Very respectfully,

J. R. S. COX,
Captain, Commanding Detachment.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT 16TH INDIANA MOUNTED INFANTRY,
Donaldsonville, La., February 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to special orders from post headquarters, Donaldsonville, La., to proceed to Bayou Goula for the purpose of scouting in that vicinity, with F and K Companies, and detachment of B Company, numbering seventy men total, I started at 4 p.m. February 17 up the river road. Upon reaching the lane at Saggle's front plantation I halted and rested one hour, feeding a squadron at a time. Citizens informed me that King, Williams, and Brown were back of Bayou Goula with 150 men. I did not credit it, however. Proceeding through the lane three miles to Richland's plantation, found nothing. Thence through the swamps, where my command occupied one hour in crossing one mud hole, to Thompson's plantation, where I had been informed that Captain Brown and seven men were secreted. Surrounded and searched the house, capturing one prisoner, arms, and horse. Thence we marched to Hartman's plantation, where found no sign of rebels. Learning that the roads through the swamps to the Bayou Goula road were impassable, I retraced my steps, coming out to the river road through Randolph's plantation. Entered Bayou Goula at gallop. I threw a chain of sentinels around the town and searched for rebels, but found none. We then proceeded five miles down the Bayou Goula road to Ventress' plantation. Captain Brown and seven men had been there at sunset. Returning through Bayou Goula to Randolph's plantation, we fed and rested. Returned to camp about 4 p.m. February 18, having traveled an estimated distance of sixty miles. From the best information I learn that King was not in that vicinity. Brown's command is small, numbering about twenty, but effective. Williams' command numbers about thirty. The prisoner captured gave his name as Smart, private, Captain Brown's company, Seventeenth Arkansas. An old negro informed us that the prisoner's name was Joseph Green, and rank lieutenant. He was one of the squad that obtained whisky from the Ben Franklin while lying lately at Reed's plantation. I am greatly indebted to First Lieutenant Bahncke, First Louisiana Volunteer Infantry, and to Captain Macklin, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry, for aid and information in regard to the country. I regret to add that the family of Mr. Thompson claim to have lost, on the night of the 17th, the following articles: One silver cake basket, 1 silver waiter, 1 fine gold watch, 3 blankets, 1 papier-maché cigar stand, 2 guns, 14 dozen large silver spoons, 1 dozen silver teaspooes, 1 dozen silver forks, 1 pack playing cards, napkins, and tablecloths. I gave orders that nothing should be molested about the premises, placed a guard in the room where most of these articles lay on the sideboard, and cleared the room as quickly as possible. I have found the pack of playing cards and one blanket. The other two were Government blankets, and were taken by my orders. One of the guns was broken; the other is in possession of Colonel Fiske. Of the other articles, if in possession of my men, I have not been able to ascertain their whereabouts after a most thorough search.

Very respectfully,

J. R. S. COX,
Captain, Commanding Detachment.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS POST OF DONALDSONVILLE,
February 19, 1865.

Approved and respectfully forwarded.

I am having a thorough examination made to ascertain the guilty parties in the robbery of Mr. Thompson's house, and shall take every method to have them brought to punishment. I think no blame can be attached to Captain Cox, as he took every means to prevent it. Expecting to find quite a number of the enemy in the house, he was in charge of the men outside, and knew nothing of the robbery until the next morning.

W. O. FISKE,
Colonel First Louisiana Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.
FEBRUARY 16-18, 1865.—Operations about Bennett's Bayou and Tolbert's Mill, Ark.

HDQRS. COMPANY H, 46TH REGT. MISSOURI VOLUNTEERS,
Ozark County, Mo., February 16 [1865], 1865.

GENERAL: I have to report that on the 16th of February, 1865, I, with forty-eight men of my command, proceeded to Bennett's Bayou, Fulton County, Ark. From there to Tolbert's Mill, on Bennett's River, where we found one guerrilla or bushwhacker, whom we succeeded in killing, and being satisfied that the mill was a resort for rebels and guerrillas, I ordered it burned. I also succeeded in killing one other guerrilla near the same place. I then returned from there to Douglas County, thoroughly scouting the country through which we passed, and arrived at camp or quarters on the 18th without the loss of anything.

Very respectfully,

WM. N. ALSUP,
Brig. Gen. J. B. SANBORN.

FEBRUARY 16-20, 1865.—Scout in Ozark County, Mo., and Marion County, Ark.

HDQRS. COMPANY B, SIXTEENTH MISSOURI CAVALRY,
Lebanon, Mo., February 22, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I beg leave to submit to you the following facts connected with a scout made by me with a detachment of Company B, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, in obedience to the order of Lieut. Col. John F. McMahan:

I left this place on the morning of the 16th instant, with fifteen days’ rations, and proceeded to Little North Fork, in Ozark County, Mo. Here I met with four citizens of Douglas County, Mo., viz, Isham Lamar, Johnson Lamar, William Lamar, and George Lamar, who reported to me that they had been to White River, near the Widow Magness', and had found some rebels in a cave and wanted assistance to catch them. I immediately started in search of the cave, the Lamars accompanying me as guides. On arriving at the cave I found three bushwhackers, viz, Williams and Riddle, one unknown, who on our approach started to run, but Williams was killed and the others wounded, who made their escape in the bluffs and brush. After this affair I prepared to move on down the river and did so, but the Lamars would not go any farther, and on the day following they were seen driving twelve head of cattle up the Little North Fork through a Union settlement. I mention this, as I am reliably informed that these men are in the habit of driving off stock from that county and converting it to their own use. After leaving the cave I went down the river; crossed at the mouth of the Little North Fork at Mr. Yochan's. I learned that there were four rebels up the river four miles, and also three miles down the river there were four others. On agreement with Captain Piland, Forty-sixth Missouri Infantry, I took a few men and went up the river, and he took some and went down the river. On arriving at the house where they were reported to be I found two rebels, whom we killed. Captain Piland found two and killed them. I then heard there were eight rebels on the head of Musick's Creek, in Marion County, Ark., near Pine Mountain. I proceeded to the place, but found no one there except women and children. I found six rifled guns. The rebels have lately built a grist-mill here, and I think it is a good place to catch a bushwhacker almost any time. This was the 18th instant. I then started back, came to White River, at the mouth of Big Creek, but could not cross, and had to go down to the mouth of the Little North Fork, where I crossed, and proceeded to this place, arriving on the 20th instant.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. SALLEE,

Captain Company B, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers.

Capt. WILLIAM T. KITTREDGE,

Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Southwest Missouri.

FEBRUARY 16-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Larned, Kans.

FORT ZARAH, KANS., February 21, 1865.

Sir: I have just returned from a scout of six days' duration. Started from Fort Larned on the 16th. Scouted up the North Fork of Pawnee; thence northwest to Walnut Creek; up the South Fork of Walnut Creek to a large body of timber about 120 miles above Fort Zarah; thence down Walnut Creek to this point. No Indians in the country. All signs of war parties from two to four months old. Will proceed to Fort Larned to-morrow, and be governed by orders received heretofore or any awaiting me at that place.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. C. NETTLETON,

Sergeant, Commanding Independent Scouts.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,

FEBRUARY 17-18, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff, Ark., to the Arkansas River, with skirmish (17th) near Bayou Meto, Ark.

HEADQUARTERS THIRTEENTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY,
Pine Bluff, Ark., April 19, 1865.

CAPTAIN: In obedience to your orders of this date I have the honor to submit the following report:

That on or about the 17th of February, 1865, I commanded a scout of about seventy-five men and one officer, to wit, Lieut. Z. P. Curlee, of our regiment, and camped the night before a short distance the other side of Bayou Meto, about fifty miles below this place and about five miles from the Arkansas River. Early on the morning of the 17th I commenced crossing the bayou. It was quite full, about fifty yards wide, and the horses had to be swum over. As soon as one platoon of men and horses were over I ordered Lieutenant Curlee to take the platoon and search the country around for the enemy for a distance of two miles out and return by noon, directing him to search well on each side the main road to a swamp on the right and lake on the left, which extended out over one mile and a half, and if he should find an enemy to fight him, and if too strong to send me word and fall back himself. The lieutenant returned in due time, bringing one Thomas Farrelly with him, and reported to me that he had found armed men at and around the residence of this man Farrelly; that he had had a slight engagement, or rather a running skirmish, and had killed 1 man and captured 1. That upon searching the house of Farrelly he had found arms and considerable ammunition, also ammunition secreted upon the person of Farrelly. He said there was a rebel bushwhacker lived there by the name of Hagler, who fought them until they killed him; and believing as he did that Farrelly's house was a harbor for bushwhackers and unauthorized bands, he deemed it his duty to burn the house. He said he was careful to have everything removed to a safe place, as he supposed, before firing the house; and that whilst removing the plunder out of the house the prisoner made his escape. I observed the men closely as soon as they returned, and discovered no sign of any plunder of any kind in their possession or about them. I rode along privately with Farrelly for over a mile, and in answer to my interrogatories whether the "boys" had taken anything away, or had pillaged the house previous to setting fire to it, he said they had not. He said he had but $50 in greenbacks and some Confederate money (I disremember how much), and brought no accusation against any one for taking any plunder. I heard nothing of any gold or any more money. I inquired of Farrelly if he had ever taken the oath of allegiance. He answered, "No; it has never been required of me." I know nothing of the burning of any other building, or anything else save the dwelling house. I inquired of him about corn. He said he raised very little last year, and that it was nearly all gone. I inquired about the cotton crop. He said he had raised fourteen bales last year, and had sold nine bales and delivered them yesterday to the steam-boat Superior for dry-goods, groceries, ammunition, and medicines that Curlee found at his house. I heard nothing of the killing of the mare or any other stock. This man Hagler who lived at Farrelly's was a notorious rebel bushwhacker, and operated with a gang commanded by one Ralston, who lived several miles higher up the bayou. Farrelly said he did not know it was any harm to keep Hagler and family there for pay, and that Hagler paid him well for it.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. NORRIS,
Captain, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, Commanding Scout.

Capt. S. MONTE CAMBERN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

FEBRUARY 17-22, 1865.—Expedition from Plaquemine to The Park, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Maj. Richard G. Shaw, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.
No. 2.—Maj. Edmund C. Burt, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF PLAQUEMINE,
Plaquemine, La., February 23, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to forward herewith the report of Maj. E. C. Burt, commanding the expedition sent to The Park and vicinity, in pursuance of telegraphic instructions received from your headquarters February 17. I examined personally the parties arrested by Major Burt; released Messrs. Irwin and Charleville, and sent the remainder under guard to the provost-marshal-general at New Orleans. Since the report of Major Burt was written I have again sent a party of the Independent Scouts up Grossetete. They learned that all the enemy's force in that vicinity were concentrating at Alexandria, except Ratliff's and King's commands, the latter of which refused to go. They surprised and captured a rebel outpost consisting of three men, securing their arms and horses.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

RICHARD G. SHAW,
Major, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, Commanding Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

No. 2.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Plaquemine, February 22, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that, pursuant to verbal instructions from Maj. R. G. Shaw, I left Plaquemine late in the afternoon of the 17th instant with fifty-seven men and one officer of my own detachment, and a company of Independent Scouts numbering two officers and thirty-four men, dismounted, and proceeded to The Park, reaching there about 8 o'clock that evening. Finding no suitable camping-ground for my command at that point, I established a strong picket and returned to Indian Village. I saw no traces of guerrillas, but one of my men learned from a citizen that five of them came through the swamp from the direction of the river that morning and crossed the bayou about half way between The Park and Indian Village, swimming their horses. On the 18th my pickets at The Park stopped a small flat-boat which came down Grand River, and took from it Felix Bellocq, wife and child (he claiming to be a Confederate agent), Mrs. Monier, Mrs. Clement, and Mrs. P. Thrahan, owner of the boat, with three negro men. They had a large amount of baggage, and on the person of Felix Bellocq was found considerable mail matter, while on the person of Mrs. Monier were found a number of private papers, including several very important ones belonging to Mr. Bellocq. The same day my pickets at the mouth of Bayou Grossetete arrested a Mr. Isaac Irwin and Mr. P. O. Charleville, with two negro men, who came down Bayou Grossetete, and as I found on them some rather suspicious papers, I forwarded them, together with the first-named party, to headquarters post of Plaquemine. On the 19th I sent a lieutenant and seven men of the scouts down Grand River in a boat, with instructions to go as far as possible and return that night. After going about two miles below The Park, the boat leaking badly, they landed and proceeded on foot, going with the utmost difficulty about five miles below The Park, and beyond that they report the country impassable, being completely flooded, the levee on Grand River being broken in many places. I also sent a small party of the scouts up Bayou Grossetete some eight or ten miles, but with no results. On the 21st a deserter from King's heavy artillery came in and gave himself up to our pickets at The Park. He reports that all of the rebel companies that have been in the habit of making raids into La Fourche District have been ordered to Alexandria, and most of them have gone. He does not know of any guerrillas being this side of Grand River below Plaquemine at this time. I have had the company of scouts scouring the country in small squads in all directions around The Park and Indian Village, and from them have learned that the swamps in all directions are utterly impassable for any number of men. As I was suffering somewhat from an attack of fever and chills, I came into Plaquemine yesterday for medical treatment, which accounts for my being here.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. C. BURT,
Major, Commanding Detachment Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. C. H. BARNEY,
Post Adjutant.

FEBRUARY 19–22, 1865.—Expedition from Helena, Ark., to Friar's Point, Miss.

HDQRS. FIFTY-SIXTH U. S. COLORED INFANTRY,
Helena, Ark., February 22, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in compliance with verbal instructions received from the brigadier-general commanding, 11 officers and 270 men of the Fifty-sixth U. S. Colored Infantry, a detachment of mounted infantry, under command of Captain Anderson, and one piece of artillery, under command of Lieutenant Chappell, embarked on the steamer Curlew at 1 a.m. February 19, 1865. This command landed at Friar's Point, Miss., at 4 a.m. same date; the cavalry proceeded in the direction of Shufordsville, and the infantry covered Friar's Point by a picket-line. Doctor Pillow was captured at Landford's place and sent to Helena. No armed force was found in the town. The cavalry command returned to Friar's Point about 4 p.m. same day, after having captured about thirteen troopers, with their horses and equipments. Captain Anderson immediately re-embarked for Helena, after leaving one officer and twenty troopers at Friar's Point. On the 19th, 20th, and 21st a scouting party of two companies and a small detachment of cavalry, the whole under command of Maj. H. A. Wells, went out in the direction of Shufordsville and Moon Lake respectively. They brought in 32 colored men, women, and children, 21 mules, and 1 horse. Most of this property, as well as the slaves, belonged to Mr. Irvine, who has, by his own statement, four brothers in the rebel service. Only two men of the lot of slaves were found to be fit for soldiers; the rest, 4 men, 10 women, and 16 children, were transferred to the care of the commanding officer at Fort Pinney, as I had no subsistence for them. Five colored men, 3 women, and 2 children came within the lines for protection on the 21st. The men wish to enlist in the regiment, and the women and children will be turned over to the superintendent of freedmen at Helena. The trading boats Anna and Freestone landed at Friar's Point, under written authority from His Excellency the President of the United States, for the purpose of receiving cotton, &c. At 3 p.m. on the 21st Lieutenant Murray reported to me with the steamer Curlew, and handed me a letter of instructions from the commanding general, in obedience to which I embarked my command as soon as the scouting party had returned. The embarkation was completed at 5.30 p.m., but on account of high winds the boat had to lie at her landing until daylight of the 22d. W. A. Alcorn, a private of the rebel cavalry, surrendered himself as a prisoner of war, and gave information where his brother, R. J. Alcorn, also a private in the rebel service, could be captured, which capture was effected by Lieutenant Spring, commanding the cavalry detachment. Lieutenant Spring has been directed to turn over the prisoners, with one horse, saddle and bridle, and two revolvers, to the provost marshal at Helena.

The command arrived at Helena at 9.30 a.m. on the 22d instant.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHAS. BENTZONI,
Col. Fifty-sixth U. S. Colored Infantry, Commanding Expedition.

Capt. T. C. MEATYARD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

FEBRUARY 21-22, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Douglas' Plantation, Ark., and skirmish (22d).

CAMP THIRTEENTH CAVALRY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS,
Pine Bluff, Ark., February 23, 1865.

Sir: I have to report my return from scout. On the morning of the 21st, pursuant to orders, I proceeded with fifty men down the river on the south side as far as Douglas' plantation, where we arrived at 10 o'clock at night, the rain falling in perfect torrents. Camped under an old cotton shed. Saw no force on the way down, but after passing the Smith place found plenty of tracks of horses going up; should judge to the number of fifty or sixty. After having camped I received at Douglas' the information that a force under a Colonel Clark was in below, and that they were expected up the river for the purpose of burning cotton and arresting deserters. A negro at Douglas' told me that they were only three miles below; the truth of the statement, however, I do not pretend to vouch for. Upon learning the same I doubled my picket force and intended to move out so soon as the rain ceased. At 1 o'clock, or thereabouts, my pickets on two sides were charged upon at the same moment and driven in, and in an instant a volley was poured into the men under the shed where they were huddled together to keep out of the rain. This fire was promptly returned, checking their charge, and forcing them back. The enemy rallied and made a second charge, forcing my men back from their horses. I immediately brought my men up again, with orders to retake the shed and save their horses; which was done, driving the enemy over the levee and holding them there until all the horses were brought out into line. The enemy in the meantime sounded recall and appeared to have moved off between the levee and the river. I then ordered all my men to mount, except one platoon, which I took and went in search of casualties. I found 4 men wounded, 2 severely. I carried the wounded to the house (Mr. Douglas'), where I had every assurance that they should be cared for as well as circumstances would admit. Upon counting I found that three or four men were missing. I think that none were killed, unless they were shot down on the picket-post. However, it being so very dark and raining, I might have overlooked them. Several horses were shot dead and two or three wounded. After making the best arrangement I could for the wounded men, and not knowing the design of the enemy, I concluded not to remain longer and moved out, taking a back route to avoid being ambushed. We succeeded in reaching a cotton gin where we remained until it became sufficiently light to travel, when we took the road leading across Choctaw Bayou and between that and Bayou Bartholomew to Pine Bluff, where we arrived at 8 o'clock last night. The country is full of small parties of rebels. We met and gave chase to three that we ascertained to be Captain Burt and two other officers of General Shelby's staff. At Doctor Jackson's twenty-five had fed and just left in the direction of this place. We followed them about two miles, when they left the road and took to the woods. I could find no cattle worth driving. There being so much water on the ground and bushes I did not go into the cane, the only place where cattle can be found at this season. I regret the loss of my men, and for the wounded ask that something be done. I did not go to see whether any of the enemy were left dead or wounded, but am inclined to think that some were. Their number was, I think, fully equal to my own, judging from their firing.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. W. DAVIS,

Captain, Thirteenth Cavalry Illinois Volunteers, Comdg. Scout.

Lieut. S. MONTE CAMBERN,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
FEBRUARY 22-24, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Bayou Meto, Ark., and skirmishes at Mrs. Voche's (23d) and Bayou Meto (24th).

HDQRS. COMPANY L, THIRTEENTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY VOLS.,
Pine Bluff, Ark., February 26, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to orders received, dated headquarters U. S. Forces at Pine Bluff, Ark., February 22, 1865, I took command of a force of eighty men and proceeded to the north side of the Arkansas River for the purpose of making a scout, but was unable to get all the men across the river. I left fifteen on this side. I proceeded to the picket at William Scull's, where I arrived at daylight, and took the force stationed there with me, which augmented my force to ninety men. I then marched to Walker's farm, where we arrived at 10 a.m. on the 23d, and captured one of Captain Hicks' men. We then moved to Henry Young's farm, where we arrived at 12 m., and captured two men of the same command. We then moved to Mrs. Voche's farm, where we arrived at 4 p.m., and had a fight with Captain Husband's command. Lieut. E. Orton, Company F, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry Volunteers, made a gallant charge with his platoon, completely routing the enemy, capturing 3 prisoners and severely wounding 1 man. Captain Husband is also reported killed. We then moved to General Williams' plantation, where we captured Lieutenant Richardson, of Hicks' company, and a private of Vaugue's band. We then encamped for the night. I ordered the horses to be fed from General Williams' forage and my men to be furnished with supper and breakfast, for which I gave receipts. On the morning of the 24th we marched for Bayou Meto, where we arrived about 9 a.m., and had sharp skirmish with Major Watkins. After the skirmish had lasted a few minutes Lieutenant Temple, Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, made a gallant charge with his platoon, leading the charge in person some fifty yards in advance of his men, completely routing the enemy, who fled in all directions. Lieutenant Temple ordered each of his men to pick his man and capture him, saying that he would bring in the major, and nobly did he keep his word. After running the major about three miles and a half, he captured him in Bayou Meto, where the water was swimming deep. In this action the enemy lost in captured Major Watkins and six men. If there were any killed or wounded I did not see them. I wish to state here that Lieutenant Curlee, although not engaged, behaved himself in a soldierly manner, being always at his post and ready to go in if required. Also the behavior of the "grayback" was all that could be desired. We then turned about and started for Pine Bluff, where we arrived at 9 p.m. on the 24th. On our way back we captured Lieutenant Grestol, of Major Watkins' command. The results of the expedition may be briefly summed up as follows: We marched over 100 miles, fought the enemy twice, defeating him both times; captured 13 prisoners, among whom were 3 officers, without the loss of a man or horse.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,

G. W. SUESBERRY,

Brig. Gen. POWELL CLAYTON,
Commanding U. S. Forces, Pine Bluff.
LOUISIANA AND THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI.

FEBRUARY 23-MARCH 2, 1865.—Scouts from Salem and Licking, Mo., to Spring River Mills, Ark., with skirmishes.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Col. Edwin C. Catherwood, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry.
No. 3.—Capt. William Monks, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry.

No. 1.

ROLLA, March 2, 1865.

I respectfully report that a scout of fifty men of the Fifth Missouri State Militia from Salem, with about the same number of the Sixteenth Volunteer Cavalry from Licking, has just returned from the Arkansas border. Reports having killed 15 guerrillas, captured 12 horses, 3 mules, and a number of small arms. Freeman is reported to be near Batesville with 100 men. It is rumored that there will be a concentration of the guerrillas about the 15th of March.

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,
Licking, Texas County, Mo., March 1, 1865.

GENERAL: The scouts under Captain Monks, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, and Captain Benz, Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry, have returned. They formed a junction at Thomasville and proceeded to Spring River Mills, Ark., where it was reported Freeman was reorganizing his command. Freeman's command is scattered (as currently reported) to meet the 15th of March. Freeman, with about 100 men, is said to be at Batesville, Ark. The scout came upon several small squads of guerrillas, killed 15, captured 12 horses and 3 fine mules, 300 pounds of cotton, and some small arms. I will have the horses and mules branded and issued to Monks' command as they need them. The country around here is particularly quiet. I inclose you papers* found on the bodies of guerrillas, showing how they obtain supplies.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. C. CATHERWOOD,
Colonel Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers.

Brig. Gen. E. B. BROWN,
Commanding District of Rolla.

No. 3.

LICKING, TEXAS COUNTY, MO., March 3, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to your order of February 22, 1865, I moved camp and marched sixteen miles, camping

* Omitted.
AFFAIR AT SWITZLER’S MILL, MO. 125

at Wilbern Gilmore’s. Early on the 23d I divided the command, sending Captain Benz, of the Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry, through Spring and Birch Valleys, with orders to form a junction at Wallace’s, nine miles northwest of Thomasville. Moved with my command and marched twenty-five miles to Goldsberry’s, on the headwaters of Jack’s Fork. Moved on the 24th, and, on reaching Wallace’s, attacked a band of guerrillas, killing one and wounding another very severely. Continued pursuit, routed and killed three, breaking up their camps, and scattering them in every direction. Continued pursuit, and near Thomasville was attacked by a force commanded by Dick Kitchen, charging them. After a brisk engagement, routed them in all directions, supposing several to be wounded. Several of my men had their clothes cut by balls, but escaped without any wounds. Marched twenty miles, camping at Colonel Old’s, near Thomasville. After camping, sent out a scout west, routing several and killing one, and breaking up their camps. Captain Benz came up and camped with us, reporting that he had routed several bands, killing two. Moved on the 25th, sending Captain Benz in the direction of Frederick's Fork of Eleven Points River, with orders to form a junction at Spring River Mills, in Arkansas. Moved with my command in the direction of Warm Fork of Spring River, attacking a band of guerrillas nine miles north of Spring River, killing five and routing several. Marched twenty-five miles, camping at Spring River Mills. Captain Benz came up and reported that he had routed and scattered a band of guerrillas on Frederick’s Fork, killing one, supposing others to be wounded. On the night of the 25th they continued firing for upward of an hour from a bluff at a distance of 300 yards, but could not dislodge them on account of the river and bluff being between us. Moved on the 26th; marched to Frederick’s Fork, sixteen miles. While marching attacked Freeman’s command of thirty men, charging and routing them, killing two, and encamped at night at Couch’s, on Frederick’s Fork of Eleven Points River. Moved on the 27th. Routed several, killing one. Marched sixteen miles, camping at Thomasville. Moved on the 28th; marched nineteen miles and camped on Turkey Oak. After camping sent out a scout; broke up a camp of guerrillas commanded by Captain Copeland. Moved on the 1st day of March, marching to Spring Valley, a distance of sixteen miles. Marched on the 2d, reaching camp at Licking, marching thirty miles. Distance marched, 183 miles. Property captured, 15 horses, 3 mules, one-half bale of cotton, wagon, and harness. Absent from camp nine days.

Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM MONKS,
Colonel CATHERWOOD.

FEBRUARY 24, 1865.—Affair at Switzler’s Mill, Mo.

GLASGOW, February 24, 1865.

Jackson, with seven men, killed a man by the name of Poe at Switzler’s Mill and hung two negroes, besides robbing another citizen. I have sent plenty of men to scour the country. This occurred this day at 12 o’clock.

ED. A. KUTZNER,
Colonel.
FEBRUARY 24, 1865.—Scout from Helena to Clarke's Store, Ark.

HELena, Arn., FEBRUARY 25, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following report of the recent scout to Clarke's Store, Ark.:

Under orders from the general commanding the district, I embarked on the steamer Curlew at daylight on the 24th instant, with fifty men of the Eighty-seventh Illinois Mounted Infantry. Captain Ramsey, of the Sixtieth U. S. Colored Infantry, who was instructed to co-operate with me, was already aboard with fifty men of his command. We proceeded to Berry's Landing, at the foot of Ship Island, and disembarked the horses without difficulty. Captain Ramsey remained in charge of the boat, to follow in two hours, whilst, in command of the mounted force, I proceeded up the river by land. On reaching Rodgers' plantation, two miles below Clarke's, in order to cut off every means of escape, I divided my force, leaving Lieutenant Shelton in command of twenty men, with instructions to remain an hour at Rodgers' and then move forward on the direct road. I took the remaining thirty men, marched by a circuitous route through the swamps, by reason of the recent rains almost impassable, and gained the roads leading into Saint Francis County and up the river just in time to bag the soldiers and citizens who were fleeing from Lieutenant Shelton. None escaped. I delivered six prisoners to the provost-marshal last night, and have in my possession two horses, two saddles and bridles, which I will turn in to the proper authorities. One horse was killed. The other prisoners in the disguise of citizens were with their friends trading, without horses and unarmed. I was largely indebted for my success to the very correct information furnished by the guides, Messrs. Fisher and Borgy, in regard to the roads. On the 24th instant there had been two trading boats, the Lady Pike and May Duke, at the landing exchanging supplies for cotton. One man had permits for goods to the amount of $1,600. The shore was lined with salt and flour barrels, &c. I carefully examined these supplies, but found nothing of a contraband nature. The permits were in proper form and the goods agreed in kind and quality with the invoices. The papers were all approved by Major-General Dana and countersigned by Captain Bryson, of the Navy. Mr. Hews, one of the owners of the May Duke, had remained to finish up the business. The boats seemed to have been in a great hurry, as the cotton had been taken on board and the stores piled upon the shore, to be taken away at leisure by the purchasers, who, as the captures verified, were in one case out of every four bona fide rebel soldiers. Unable to detect any fraud in the papers or anything contraband in the goods, and having been instructed by the general to interfere in no way with authorized and legal cotton trading, my duty was at an end and I embarked my men upon the steamer, which had just arrived, and returned to Helena. But I cannot forbear to express a regret at what seems to me to be a suicidal policy, of furnishing aid and comfort to the enemy by feeding and clothing them. By authorizing such trade the Government appears to me to be guilty of treason against itself. Such, of course, is not the intention, but such is the result.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. N. WASSON,

Captain, Eighty-seventh Illinois Mounted Infty., Comdg. Scout.

Capt. T. O. MEATYARD,

Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Eastern Arkansas.
FEBRUARY 28–28, 1865.—Expedition from Pine Bluff to McMilley's Farm, Ark., with skirmish (27th) at McMilley's Farm.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Capt. George W. Suesberry, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry

No. 1.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., March 1, 1865.

A scout, commanded by Captain Suesberry, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, attacked Captain Maybery's guerrilla band about twenty-five miles from this place on north side the river. Killed 8 and captured 3.

JAMES M. TRUE, Colonel Sixty-second Illinois Infantry, Commanding.

Maj. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 2.

HDQRS. COMPANY L, THIRTEENTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY,

Pine Bluff, Ark., March 1, 1865.

SIR: In obedience to orders I received on the 26th day of February, 1865, I assumed command of a detail of sixty men of the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, and proceeded to the north side of the Arkansas River for the purpose of making a scout. I landed the last boat-load of my command across the river at 10 o'clock at night of the 26th, and then started for the McMilley farm, which was my destination. Marched all night; arrived at Wabbaseca Bayou at daylight, when I found the bridge out of repair, which repaired, and crossed the bayou. Resumed the march and arrived at my destination at 8 p.m. on the 27th. There I found Captain Maybery, of the Confederate Army, with fifty men. I had a sharp skirmish with them (the enemy), which lasted about thirty minutes. Killed 8 of Captain Maybery's command and took 2 prisoners. Captured 3 mules and 2 horses. Completely routed the enemy and burned their camps, all without getting any of my men hurt. Lost 3 horses. After routing the enemy I, with my command, took dinner on the ground formerly occupied by the enemy, and fed our horses off their forage, &c. Rested my command about two hours, then resumed march for Pine Bluff. Marched back to Mrs. Patton's farm; there camped for the night. Mrs. Patton furnished 130 pounds of bacon, also forage for our horses, for which I gave receipts. On the 28th resumed march. Arrived at Pine Bluff at 10 a.m. after a brief stretch of two days and nights. Scout arrived without the loss of a man.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEO. W. SUESBERRY,
Captain Company L, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, Comdg. Scout

First Lieut. S. MONTE CAMBERN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
FEBRUARY 27, 1865.—Skirmish near Sturgeon, Mo.

Report of Lieut. Luther T. Hayman, Ninth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

STURGEON, February 27, 1865.

I came upon Jackson and party just before dark. Did not succeed in killing any; think two are severely wounded, but made their escape in the darkness. Captured five horses and several guns, pistols, &c. Two of my men wounded. Will take their trail at daylight in the morning. They are going in the direction of Perche Hills.

L. T. HAYMAN,
Lieutenant, &c.

MARCH 1-12, 1865.—Expedition from Baton Rouge to Jackson and Clinton, La.

HEADQUARTERS NORTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,
Baton Rouge, La., March 14, 1865.

General: The cavalry returned on the morning of the 12th instant, having been out just twelve days, and during the very worst weather we have had this season. All the bridges had been swept away, and it was necessary to rebuild those over White’s Bayou, Redwood, and the Comite, and, indeed, the road for almost the entire distance from Redwood to the Comite had to be repaired. Had there been no delay or change in the movement above, this column could readily have gone to Liberty and the railroad, but as it is the movement undoubtedly had the desired effect. General Bailey made his headquarters at the Comite, and sent portions of his force into Jackson and Clinton twice. Scott’s force was under orders to join Forrest at some point on the Mobile railroad, but was kept back by Hodge, and is still at the covered bridge near Liberty. The impression exists among persons from outside that in a very short time the entire country from here to Vicksburg will be completely abandoned by the rebels, and it is noticeable just at this time that there is a strong disposition on the part of almost every one outside our lines to get on good terms with the Federal authorities. While on this expedition General Bailey was unfortunate in losing seven Government teams, they being captured by a portion of Hodge’s command. It seems they were after forage, and had gone farther than ordered, when surrounded by a body of rebels, but General Bailey coming up with re-enforcements the wagons were destroyed and the teams carried off. General Bailey’s report has not yet been received, but will soon be forwarded, and will explain this matter more fully. I propose sending two regiments as far as the Comite in a few days to stir them up again.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. J. HERRON,
Major-General, Commanding.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
New Orleans.
MARCH 3–7, 1865.—Expeditions from Bloomfield into Dunklin County, Mo., with skirmishes (3d and 7th) near Bloomfield and (4th) in Dunklin County.

BLOOMFIELD, MO., MARCH 4, 1865.

I sent Captain Campbell, of the Fiftieth Missouri Infantry, with fifty men of the Seventh Kansas and Second Missouri State Militia, into Dunklin County yesterday. They came upon a company of rebels twenty-five miles below here this morning and killed six of them, including Captain Howard, the leader of the band. Captain Campbell had two men wounded. The report is that Colonel Clark is below with 75 or 100 men. Campbell is still out, and I will send him some more men immediately.

H. M. HILLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

BLOOMFIELD, MO., MARCH 9, 1865.

I will send a force to watch for Hilderbrand at the Indian Ford. My men ran into Captain Howard's guerrillas last Friday and killed the captain and eight men. They came upon Bolin's gang Tuesday and killed two and wounded several.

H. M. HILLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

Colonel BEVERIDGE,
Pilot Knob, Mo.

MARCH 4, 1865.—Affair near Pine Bluff, Ark.

Hdqrs. Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry,
Pine Bluff, Ark., March 5, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, according to orders, I proceeded with thirty men of our regiment (Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry) yesterday to repair the telegraph. Left Pine Bluff at noon. Hindered and turned out of my way three miles by high water. After the line was found in running order by the repairer, I started in a southwest direction with a hope of coming in contact with some guerrilla band or rebel scout (being heretofore credibly informed of three haunts and places of rendezvous). About sunset I came upon the trail of the enemy near Doctor Ursury's; could get no definite information from Ursury's family; they represented them to be about fifty strong. I started upon their trail, and the ground being quite soft I was enabled to follow by occasionally dismounting to examine which way they went when the road forked. About 9 o'clock my advance vedette perceived a light some distance ahead. I halted the column and sent two men ahead to reconnoiter; they reported the enemy encamped in and around some houses about a quarter of a mile ahead. I instantly moved forward with fourteen men dismounted, intending to draw their fire and retreat to my horses (which were to follow at a respectable distance in rear), mount, and charge with revolver and saber. Drawing near I deployed my fourteen dismounted men as skirmishers and moved up within forty yards of their camps, fired two volleys with carbine, which so completely surprised them, and threw them into such consternation, that I immediately ordered a charge, which order was readily and gallantly obeyed, completely routing them from their camps and also from all the houses in which they had taken shelter. They were panic-stricken and fled in every direction. I found the command to consist of Captain Kidd, Lieutenant Dixon, Lieutenant Emillie, and twenty-four men. I only know of five being killed; don't know how many wounded. Captured 2 prisoners, 14 horses and 5 mules, 10 stand of arms, 3 U. S. cavalry saddles, and 2 U. S. cavalry curb bridles. Not one of my men hurt, though I was closely grazed myself in two or three places. I had necessarily to travel a circuitous route on my return, because I knew nothing of the country or the roads. I started back immediately. Arrived this morning at 7 o'clock, having traveled not less than fifty-five miles. Not being able to convey the arms in I destroyed them all, except three which are returned to post headquarters. The horses and mules are turned over to the quartermaster, the saddles and bridles are at regimental headquarters. Inasmuch as the citizens in the country adjacent the road are using the telegraph wire for various purposes, I would respectfully suggest that summary punishment be inflicted wherever any of the wire is found.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. H. NORRIS,
Captain Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, Comdg. Scout.

Lieut. S. MONTE CAMBERN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Pine Bluff, Ark.

MARCH 5-12, 1865.—Scouts from Waynesville to Hutton Valley, Rolla, and Lebanon, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF WAYNESVILLE,
Waynesville, Mo., March 13, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to submit the following as my report of scouts, marches, &c., required by General Orders, No. 25, headquarters District of Rolla, series of 1863, for the week ending March 12, 1865:

March 5, upon reliable information being received at this post concerning a band of guerrillas that were in this vicinity, I sent Sergt. S. B. Louis with six enlisted men in pursuit of them. Andrew Lawson, a citizen of Waynesville, was captured by those guerrillas some eight miles north of this place, and was taken from thence as far south as Houston, Mo., and was shot by them. The sergeant while in pursuit of them found the body of Lawson at that place. The sergeant pursued them as far south as Hutton Valley, having met with no success, returning on the 10th instant, having marched 150 miles. March 5, some guer-escort with Government train to Lebanon, Mo., returning on the 12th instant, having marched sixty miles. March 11, Lieut. U. Bates with eight enlisted men was sent to Rolla, Mo., to escort Waynesville post train to this, returning on the 12th instant, having marched sixty-four miles. A stage escort of six men is furnished daily from this post to the California House, who travel fifteen miles.
"

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. KAISER,
Major, Commanding Post.

Capt. J. H. STEGER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Rolla, Mo.

MARCH 7, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians eighty miles west of Fort Larned, Kans.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, March 19, 1865.

General: Your telegrams of 18th just received. Indians attacked a train eighty miles west of Fort Larned on the night of the 7th, but were driven off. Second U. S. Infantry has arrived and been stationed as follows: One company here, one at Saline, one at Ellsworth, two at Zarah, and three at Larned. Will immediately establish post at or near old Fort Atkinson. I will need at least 250 more horses to mount my cavalry. Requisitions for horses for my regiment have been sent in. Captain Boyd is at Leavenworth and will attend to it. We need pack-saddles. I start for Larned in the morning. Shall go through in one day. All cavalry will be concentrated at Larned immediately, except enough to keep up courier-line. Lieutenant Baldwin, artillery officer, has been ordered in. I wish you would send me a good artillery tactician in his place. I need one immediately.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel and Brevet Brigadier-General, Commanding District.

Major-General DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri.

MARCH 7-15, 1865.—Scout from Glasgow to the Perche Hills, Mo.

GLASGOW, March 26, 1865.

Lt. J. H. WAITE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of North Missouri:

Lieutenant: I herewith transmit you report of a scout made by me in the Perche Hills. I have since made another scout in the same locality, a report of which I will forward you in a few days.

Respectfully, yours, &c.,

J. D. MEREDITH,
Captain Company D, Thirty-ninth Missouri Volunteers.
GLASGOW, HOWARD COUNTY, MO., March 24, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: In compliance with telegraphic orders from Brig. Gen. C. B. Fisk, commanding District of North Missouri, I have the honor to send you the following report:

SPECIAL ORDERS, Headquarters Sub-District of Howard, No. 16. Glasgow, Mo., March 7, 1865.

Captain Meredith, Company D, Thirty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteers, with twenty men, will, in accordance with telegraphic dispatch from Brigadier-General Fisk, proceed forthwith to hunt down the notorious guerrilla Jim Jackson and his nefarious band, and all other bushwhackers. Will be particular to have good order and discipline observed by his command, returning as soon as pursuit proves fruitless.

By order of:

ED. A. KUTZNER, Colonel, Commanding.

In obedience to the above order, with Lieutenant Self and twenty men of my company and two citizens as guides, I started on the morning of the 7th instant in search of guerrillas, moving in the direction of what is known as the Perche Hills, in Howard and Boone Counties. After scouting the country for two days without gaining any information of importance, I sent Lieutenant Self with several men to the house of Mr. Lewis Barnes, the only loyal man I could learn of in that part of the country, to ask him to accompany us as guide. The men whom I had with me for that purpose I found did not know the country thoroughly. The lieutenant found Mr. Barnes at home, too unwell to go with us, but willing to do all he could. He gave him the names of parties in the neighborhood most likely to harbor guerrillas, and consequently most likely to be cognizant of their haunts and hiding places. In order to gain the desired information, I ordered Lieutenant Self and four men to disguise themselves as bushwhackers, visit the houses indicated, receive any aid voluntarily offered, and learn if possible the camp (if any) of the bona fide guerrillas, I with the remainder of the command stopping in camp to give the lieutenant time to perform his mission. After waiting two or three hours I followed the lieutenant until, coming to the house of Anthony Drane, I stopped to feed and make inquiries. After asking about seed I asked Mr. Drane if he had seen or heard of any troops being in the neighborhood. He answered no. Had he seen or heard of any bushwhackers? No. Had he seen any strange men passing about? No. I then told him I thought I had seen tracks leading to the house, but the ground was frozen and I could not tell positively. He said, "There have been no men here, and I have not seen any passing." At this time one of my men came and whispered to me that Lieutenant Self was outside the house and wished to see me. I went out, and the lieutenant told me he had stopped with his squad at the house in the morning; that he had asked Mr. Drane if he knew of any Federals being about, and was answered, "no." The lieutenant then asked him if he knew where any of the boys were, as he wished to get with them. Mr. Drane told him he did not, but that he himself was a "Southern man from the ground up," and that he wanted the lieutenant and his men to come in and get dinner. The lieutenant told him he was afraid to stop for it, but if he had any eggs his (Self's) men would like to have a few. Mr. Drane told him he should have them, and going into the house soon had a large number of eggs cooked and brought to the boys. He (Drane) then asked Lieutenant Self if he could do anything more for him. Self told him that one of his men needed a pair of socks, and if he (Drane) could give him a pair he (Self) would be obliged to him. Drane went in the house and got a pair of socks and gave them to Lieutenant Self, remarking as he did so that he wished they were better (they had been worn and washed), as when he gave he liked to give the best. Lieutenant Self then took his leave, Mr. Drane telling him the best roads to travel to avoid Federal scouts, should any be out.

After my conversation with Lieutenant Self I re-entered the house, and in the presence of several of my men questioned Mr. Drane closely. He persisted in saying he had seen or heard of no one. I ordered my men to mount, and detailed a corporal and two men to set fire to the premises, which was done. Lieutenant Self and his men (still in disguise) had visited several other houses in the neighborhood, the residents of which professed to be Southern men. They did not seem so particularly anxious to assist, but told Lieutenant Self he might rest assured they never would report on him. I let it be known that I had burned Mr. Anthony Drane's house and why I did it; that I considered parties who would willingly harbor bushwhackers (or men supposed to be such) equally guilty with outlaws themselves, and that they must either take every opportunity of reporting them to the proper authorities or leave the country. If they did not, I would, as far as in my power, treat them with the same severity I would a guerrilla. This was in the eastern part of Howard County. From this point I moved down on to Perche Creek, scouting the brush on the creek and its tributaries, but without success, as I could get no information from any of the citizens as to bushwhackers, roads, localities, or anything else, and I became satisfied that a large majority of the citizens of this region would harbor guerrillas. After camping at night I sent a sergeant with twelve men to the residence of Joseph Graves, in Boone County, to feed. On his return the sergeant told me he thought Mr. Graves was a bad man, and that he had expressed himself in the most disloyal manner. On starting in the morning, wishing a guide to a place known as Dripping Spring Meeting-House, I sent a corporal to bring Graves along to pilot us to said place. After they had overtaken the column (which they did after we had moved a short distance) Lieutenant Self had a conversation with Graves, in which he (Graves) told the lieutenant that he had always been a Southern man, and that he had had no cause to change his principles. The lieutenant asked Graves if he had seen any bushwhackers lately. He answered that he had not. Lieutenant Self then asked him if he would have reported on them if he had. Graves answered, "No," as it might get him into trouble. Lieutenant Self then asked him the question, "Would you feed guerrillas and not report them to the authorities?" Graves answered, "I would not report on anybody." I asked Graves a number of questions and received the same answers. The conversation took place in the presence of the lieutenant, myself, and several others who were riding with the advance. I had one or two other men with me at the time. They plainly and boldly said they had been Southern men at the beginning of the war, and were so yet; that they had no reason to change their principles. I told them such men could not live in that country; that they must either leave the State or go to some military post and remain. Graves I retained, and after more conversation with him ordered his execution. I considered him a quiet, determined, and influence and one who could and would do more harm by his acquiescence and aid (unarmed though he was) than if he were in the brush with his revolvers belted around him. "Desperate diseases require desperate remedies," and the disease is getting desperate when the number of guerrillas is rapidly increasing in a country, and a large proportion of the citizens are ready and willing to harbor and aid them. The killing of a few such men will do more good than anything else for a country like the Perche and Blackfoot Hills, for it will deter others. Where guerrillas cannot be fed without being reported they cannot remain. We were in sight of the bushwhackers several times, and I did my best to come up with them, chasing them for two days, but found it impossible to come up with them, as the citizens would almost invariably put me upon the wrong trail.

There is but one Union family in the Blackfoot Hills, and this is the family of a Federal soldier (named Schwabe, I think). This family told me the guerrillas were harbored in the neighborhood; that they had seen them several times within a few days riding about, accompanied by three or four young women. After scouting about for a day or two I concluded to divide my squad, and did so, sending Lieutenant Self with ten men and one of the guides up the east side of Perche Creek to meet me at a given point at the expiration of two days. With the other ten men and one guide I started up the west side of Perche, but after going some distance, hearing of some bushwhackers (through negroes), I divided my men again, taking four men with me and sending the remainder to scout the Franklin Hills. About this time, receiving information from a most reliable citizen that a sister of Bill Hines was staying at a house in the neighborhood, and that I would probably find Hines and his brother (both notorious bushwhackers) about there, I started in search of them. On arriving at the house mentioned the family denied to me that Miss Hines had been there, but finally admitted it, and I, knowing that the Hines' had been at the house a number of times to visit her, I burned the house and ordered the owner (Mrs. ———) to either leave the State or go to a military post to live. Here I got on the trail of two men, whom from description I thought to be Lewis Hoard and Younger Grubbs (bushwhackers), and followed it to Brick Chapel Meeting-House, but not being able to find Hoard and Grubbs, and losing all trace of them, I started on my return to Perche Creek. In the vicinity of the Brick Chapel a family resided who had a son in the brush (I have forgotten the name, as I have lost my memorandum). They had harbored and fed him for months. My informants here were negroes, but I questioned them closely, and was perfectly satisfied of the truth of their statements. I had a conversation with the lady of the house, and she expressed herself in the most disloyal manner. I burned the house, as it was a harboring place for guerrillas. Lieutenant Self found no guerrillas, nor did he destroy any property on his route, but reported to me that he saw a squad of the Ninth Missouri State Militia (a lieutenant and seventeen men), who were reporting themselves to the citizens as a portion of the "Thirty-ninth Missouri, from Glasgow, under command of Lieutenant Johnson." The other squad of my command burned the residence of Bas. Maxwell, and ordered him to leave that part of the country. Maxwell is notoriously one of the worst men in the country. Doctor Holman, surgeon of the Thirty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteers, sometime ago gave me his name and a statement of his deeds and doings, all proving him a dangerous man. The squad who burned his house, however, did it on information received at the time in the neighborhood. With the three squads we scouted the country thoroughly, but it raining and the roads becoming almost impassable, I decided on returning to camp, which I did, arriving at Glasgow on the 15th instant. Though the order heading this report is the only written one I received, my verbal instructions from Colonel Kutzner were not to stop at county or district lines, and to treat aiders and abettors with the same severity I would armed bushwhackers. On my return the colonel told me I need not make any report to him, and he therefore does not know what I did. I maintained good order and discipline in my command.

Respectfully submitted.

Your obedient servant,

JOHN D. MEREDITH,
Captain Company D, Thirty-ninth Infantry Missouri Volunteers.

[Indorsement.]

Headquarters District of North Missouri,
Macon, Mo., March 31, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to Major-General Dodge, commanding Department of the Missouri, for his information.

Captain Meredith will be continued in arrest while I wait instructions from department headquarters. The captain, I believe, makes a truthful statement. I have made diligent inquiry of the best citizens of Boone County, and learn that the parties burned out were notorious for harboring bushwhackers, and one or two of the destroyed dwellings were simply of the lowest class of bawdyhouses, and where the guerrillas did congregate most. No order for the destruction of property or the killing of an unarmed citizen ever emanated from my headquarters. I have no doubt, however, that there are 100 families in Boone and Howard Counties who ought to emigrate or die. It seems to be a difficult matter to remove them. There is hardly a bushwhack feeder or harbore in the district that cannot, if ordered away, procure certificates from Union men that he has been a faithful, honest citizen. Men who occupy high positions of honor and trust will, for a fee, undertake the salvation of the devil himself. In the spring and summer of 1864 one Truman, a detective, was sent into my district by General Rosecrans, with orders to do as Captain Meredith has done. Truman killed several citizens, burned houses, and sequestered much property. He was arrested, imprisoned, tried by military commission, found guilty of murder, arson, and larceny, and sentenced to be hung. He is now at large. Most of the witnesses and informants against Truman have been murdered and burned out by parties as yet unknown.

CLINTON B. FISK, Brigadier-General.

MARCH 7-25, 1865.—Operations about Licking, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF LICKING,
Licking, Texas County, Mo., March 25, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report the following scouts for the month of March, 1865:

March 7, Sergeant Mustion with twenty men left camp; was absent five days; killed 1 man, captured 2 horses; marched 120 miles; returned March 12, 1865. March 14, Sergeant Walker with twenty-two men left camp; was absent six days; killed 1 man; marched 160 miles; returned to camp 20th March. Corporal Maroney with ten men left camp; was absent three days; marched eighty-four miles; returned March 17. March 15, Corpl. W. F. Geaslin with six men left camp; was absent three days; killed 1 man, captured 5 horses and 1 mule; marched seventy-five miles; returned March 18. March 16, Corporal King with eight men left camp; was absent two days; killed 1 man. Bushwhackers killed 2 U. S. horses and 1 of Captain Samples' horses. Marched forty-six miles. March 18, Sergeant Craddock with seven men left camp; was gone two days; killed 1 man, captured 2 horses; marched fifty-seven miles; returned March 20. March 22, Sergeant Walker with twelve men left camp; was absent two days; wounded 2 men, captured 3 horses; marched eighty-three miles; returned March 24. Lieutenant Hazard with twenty-three men left camp; still out; March 23, Corporal Sullivan with eight men left camp; still out. Total miles marched, 625. Total men killed, 5. Total horses killed, 2 United States, 1 private horse. Total horses captured, 12. Total mules captured, 1.

Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM MONKS,

Captain, Commanding Company K, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry.

Colonel MORRILL,

Commanding District of Rolla, Rolla, Mo.

MARCH 9–15, 1865.—Scout from Cape Girardeau into Bollinger, Wayne, and Stoddard Counties, Mo.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO., March 15, 1865.

Lieut. Robert Davis, Company F, Second Cavalry Missouri State Militia, with twenty men, returned last night from a scout of seven days in Bollinger, Wayne, and Stoddard Counties. He reports killing Lieutenant Reed, of Howard's guerrilla company, and 5 men, and capturing 2 horses, with no casualty on his side.

H. M. HILLER,

Lieutenant-Colonel.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,

MARCH 9–15, 1865.—Scout from Fort Larned to Crooked Creek, Kans.

FORT LARNED, KANS., March 15, 1865.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Riley, Kans.:

Sir: In reporting this scout we have deemed it expedient to transmit a copy of our journal as giving a more complete record of the past eight days' work than could otherwise be given you.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

R. W. JENKINS,

First Lieut., Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Scout.

H. D. JANES,

Scout, &c.
Thursday, March 9, 1865, left Fort Larned, Kans., pursuant to verbal instructions from the colonel commanding district, with sixty-seven men, in company with the stage escort, at 2 p.m. Traveled over a rolling prairie to Coon Creek, twelve miles, where we arrived at 5 p.m. Found good water and plenty of buffalo grass, but very little wood.

Friday, 10th, broke camp on Coon Creek at 7 a.m. A steady drive up the Arkansas bottom for eight hours brings us to camp No. 2; distance traveled, thirty miles. At 12 m. we struck a burnt district, which we are still in. No grass to be found except on an occasional island; fuel plenty.

Saturday, 11th, left camp this a.m. at 5 o'clock. At 8 a.m. we reached the point where the road leaves the bottom and where we determined to cross the river. At this point we bid farewell to the stage escort, and packing what corn and rations we could (leaving the balance on the ground until our return) we crossed the Arkansas, landing safe on the south bank at 11 a.m. Immediately pulling out in a southwest course, we struck, about three miles from the crossing, a wagon and lodge-pole trail which led us to Mulberry Creek. Following up that stream for nine miles we made camp No. 3 at 3 p.m. Found plenty of wood, but no grass, and water only in pools. Saw to-day the first fresh Indian sign, and about sundown the pickets reported the approach of two Indians; but they, discovering our whereabouts, did not come within reaching distance.

Sunday, 12th, left camp at 8 a.m., and following up Mulberry a mile and a half we struck the wagon and lodge-pole trail which in two hours carried us on to a high ridge which we thought to be the divide between Mulberry and Crooked Creeks, and which is almost entirely destitute of wood, grass, and water (a little of the latter to be found in pools). At 2 p.m., thinking the trail was taking us too far to the west, we left it and struck directly south. At 4 p.m. we came in sight of a stream, supposed to be Crooked Creek. In following down the divide to one of its branches we struck a fresh lodge-pole trail supposed to have been made by the band (afterward reported to be fifteen strong) that discovered us last night. At about 12 m. to-day we discovered a heavy column of smoke directly south of us, supposed to be on the head of the headwaters of one of the branches of Crooked Creek. The smoke was visible the balance of the day. Went into camp about 5 p.m. on a small branch. Found plenty of wood, water, and grass. About 7 p.m. we discovered a fire a short distance below us. Upon examination there proved to have been about 100 camp-fires, some of which were still burning. We also found a trail of about forty lodges coming from the direction of the headwaters of Mulberry Creek, crossing this branch at this point a few hours previous to our arrival, and running due east. Monday, 13th, left camp at 8 a.m., and following this branch, which runs due south, we, at 12 m., struck Crooked Creek. Following down that stream (which runs south of east) until 2 p.m., when, discovering an Indian (supposed to be on picket) to the north, we changed our course toward that point. As we proceeded the Indians became very plentiful in every direction and all making toward a body of timber in our front. About 4 o'clock one of the Indians came to us, giving up his arms and reported himself an Arapahoe, of Little Raven's band. That chief, he said, had been killed. He led us to their village, consisting of twenty-four lodges, which was deserted (apparently in great haste) and signaled his chief to come to us from the bluffs, where we could see a good many warriors and almost any amount of squaws and papooses.
The chief, after some hesitation, came to us, and shaking hands, invited us to the village, doubtless for a "talk." But we thought best to move on up the creek and let the talk go for the present. Proceeding up this branch (whose course is due south) about a mile we found another village of eighteen lodges, also deserted. Marching about a mile farther up the creek we went into camp about 7 o'clock with plenty of wood, water, and grass. We learned from our captive and his chief that the Comanches, numbering from 1,000 to 1,500 warriors, were encamped on the Cimarron about twenty miles distant from this village, and that the Apaches and Kiowas, numbering from 500 to 800, were encamped on Crooked Creek about six miles below this point. This report we believed, from the fact of seeing, soon after leaving our course down the creek, a heavy column of smoke arise from the timber on that stream at a point we had aimed to strike. Judging from this information, and from the increasing signs of large bodies of Indians in our immediate vicinity, we thought it would not be advisable to destroy the villages that we passed through. To-day we have crossed innumerable fresh trails of from 50 to 200 ponies running in all directions. After resting for three hours we, at 10 p.m., again broke camp and traveled a due north course and arrived at our old camp on Mulberry Creek (camp No. 3) at 5 o'clock, where we rested until 10 a.m., when we again pulled out, following the wagon and lodge-pole trail out to the Arkansas River, which it struck about 200 yards from our deposit of corn. Crossing the river at 1 p.m. we stopped two hours to feed, and then moved down to camp No. 2, where we arrived at 8 p.m. Wednesday, 15th, left camp at 7 a.m. and reached Fort Larned at 3 p.m. and reported to Captain Moses, commanding post.

R. W. JENKINS,
Lieutenant, Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Scout.

MARCH 10-13, 1865—Scout from Little Rock to Clear Lake, Ark., with skirmish (11th) at Clear Lake.

PINE BLUFF, March 13, 1865.

Seven men of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry have just come in who state that they left Little Rock on Friday last, with Captain Giesler, on a scout. That they were surprised and scattered on Saturday near Clear Lake by a force of rebels numbering near 200, and that a large portion of this party was killed or captured. These men will be sent to Little Rock by first boat.

JAMES M. TRUE,
Colonel Sixty-second Illinois Veteran Infantry, Commanding.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock.

MARCH 11, 1865.—Affair near the Little Blue River, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS FOURTH SUB-DISTRICT, CENTRAL DISTRICT OF MISSOURI,
Kansas City, March 15, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to state, for the information of the general commanding the district, that on Saturday last, the 11th instant, 1 placed one of my men upon the Warrensburg stage as driver and placed three more inside, for the purpose of catching the two or three bushwhackers who have recently been robbing passengers. The stage was attacked by five men about three miles below the Little Blue. My men gave them battle and drove them off, killing one, mortally wounding another, and killing a third. The remaining two got re-enforcements and again attacked the stage with fifteen men. The driver endeavored to escape with the stage, but was overtaken and robbed, and one horse was taken from the team; the other men and a passenger took to the brush and made good their escape to Independence. The commanding officer, Maj. B. K. Davis, at Independence, has no cavalry, but he pressed twenty-eight horses, mounted men upon them, and pursued the bushwhackers. At the same time I ordered a company of infantry to be stationed at the crossing of the Little Blue, and a party of cavalry, dismounted, to be stationed at Lee's Summit on the prairie half way from Independence to Pleasant Hill. I also directed Major Mullins, commanding at Pleasant Hill, and requested the commanding officer at Lexington to send out mounted scouts. The result of these operations has been to show that the bushwhackers scattered near the line of the railroad. My men are still scouting, but have come across none of the guerrilla party. I have re-established the escort for the stage, but cannot keep it up for more than a day or two, for my cavalry is all about to be mustered out.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel, Commanding Sub-District.

Capt. C. G. LAURANT,

MARCH 12, 1865.—Affair near Lone Jack, Mo.

PLEASANT HILL, MO., March 13, 1865.

My foot scout has just returned. Had a fight last night two miles east of Lone Jack with two bushwhackers. The latter escaped, though one of them went off evidently wounded. My men captured two revolvers from them. My men had privately surrounded a house, and these bushwhackers afterward came to it, when the fight occurred.

A. W. MULLINS,
Major.

Colonel HARDING,
Kansas City.

MARCH 12-23, 1865.—Scout from Lewisburg into Yell and Searcy Counties, Ark.

LEWISBURG, March 23, 1865—7.30 p.m.

Lieutenant Boles, Third Arkansas, returned this p. m. from twelve days' scout in Yell County. Coffee is expected daily in that section to come from Centre Point, with 300 men, to take away wheat from Fourche la Fave Bottom. Boles killed a few rebels near Danville. Sergeant Arnold returned from scout to Searcy County, killed 2 rebels, had 1 man wounded. Rebels are getting quite numerous in vicinity of Dover and Illinois Bayou. I think they are expecting to re-enforce McRae and Dobbin east of White River, or the latter to come through Dover en route south. If the former, it will be to annoy your railroad communications.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN, Colonel.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING, Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock.

MARCH 15-21, 1865.—Scout from Fort Sumner, N. Mex.

FORT SUMNER, N. Mex., March 22, 1865.

Lieutenant: I have the honor to report, for the information of the major commanding, that, pursuant to Special Orders, No. 33, dated headquarters Fort Sumner, N. Mex., March 14, 1865, I left this post on the morning of the 15th instant with one non-commissioned officer and four privates, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsity of certain reports received at this post in regard to depredations committed by Indians from this reservation and to bring to this place all Navajo or Apache Indians that I might meet with. On the 15th, 16th, and 17th instant I examined the country lying between this post and Mr. Hamilton's ranch on the Rio Conchas. I found no sign of Indians, and from all the information I could get from persons of whom I made inquiries, I judge there have been no Indians in that section of country for some months past. At Mr. Hamilton’s ranch I made strict inquiries in regard to Indians being on the Rio Turpentino, and whether they had been killing stock, as was reported here, but from all I could hear on this matter I am led to believe that the reports made by parties in Las Vegas in reference to the Navajoes stealing and killing sheep and cattle are without the least foundation. These reports were first started by peons, who, it is quite likely, first sold the sheep and then, to save themselves, like many other men in this Territory of a little higher standing, but of the same species, laid it to the account of the unfortunate Navajoes. About the time these sheep are said to have been stolen, a party of Navajoes who were out on pass for the purpose of hunting, brought into this post and turned over to Brigadier-General Crocker, then in command, 500 sheep, which were lost in a snow-storm and found by the Indians some thirty-five miles above here. Information to the effect that the sheep were here and that the owner could get them was sent to the ranches above here. The owner came down and the sheep were given to him. Now, it does not look quite consistent that, at the very time these sheep were brought down, a part of the same Indians were stealing stock from the same herds that the sheep mentioned were lost from. I left Hamilton’s ranch on the morning of the 18th instant and proceeded to Anton Chico. I made inquiries of herders whom I passed on the road, if they were troubled by the Navajoes or Apaches, and they all informed me that there had been no Indians there for several months. At the town of Anton Chico I was told the same. On the 19th I came to Mr. J. M. Giddings' ranch, on the Pecos. On my arrival there it was reported to me that the Navajoes, to the number of twenty-five or thirty, were encamped on the river some ten miles above, and that they had been stealing and killing cattle belonging to farmers on the river. As it was near night when I arrived at Mr. Giddings' I did not go up that evening; but on the morning of the 20th I took one non-commissioned officer and two men and made a thorough examination of the country for fifteen miles up the river. I could find no sign of Indians, nor could I find any one that could either show me where the Indians had been or to whom the stock that they had killed belonged. I am of the opinion that a large share, if not all, of the reports in regard to the Indians killing stock originated in this way. No one can show any proof that the reports are true, but at the same time they credit and circulate them about the country. On the night of the 20th I encamped at the Alamo Gordo, and on the 21st returned to this post, meeting no Indians on my entire trip.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. EDGAR,
First Lieutenant, First New Mexico Cavalry.

Lieut. CHARLES T. JENNINGS,

MARCH 17-20, 1865.—Expedition from Pine Bluff to Bass' Plantation, Ark.

CAMP THIRTEENTH CAVALRY ILLINOIS VOLUNTEERS,
Pine Bluff, Ark., March 21, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report the safe return of the scout of 100 men which left Pine Bluff on the 17th, and of which I had command. I crossed to the north side of the Arkansas River on the morning of the 17th; proceeded by way of Doctor Jones' and Colonel Withers' plantations to Five Forks Bayou; crossed Five Forks and passed through about five miles of horrible swamp road, and reached Hull's back plantation just at dark. Made a halt of about an hour, and until it became quite dark, when I proceeded to Creed Taylor's plantation, where I learned that Vaugine was at home on Doctor Bass' place, about three-quarters of a mile distant, and where, if possible, I intended to surprise and capture him. Upon receiving such information I immediately proceeded with the column to within a short distance of the house in which Vaugine was; dismounted fifteen of my men, leaving the remainder at a halt, and went forward to surround the house, when, just as we were getting over the fence around the dooryard, one of my bugles that was with the rear guard sounded (the rear guard having got lost from the column in the darkness of the night) and spoiled my plan. Vaugine, at the sound of the bugle, sprang from his bed and made his escape. His wife informed me that he had no intimation of our approach until the bugle sounded, and that we would undoubtedly have captured her husband, together with a soldier of his by the name of Smith that was at the same house and escaped with Vaugine.
After finding my bird had flown I proceeded, by Walker's or the Ashby plantation, to Benjamin Richardson's and camped at 1 a.m. March 18. My rear guard did not come up with me again, but made the best of their way back to Pine Bluff, undoubtedly on double-quick time. From Richardson's I went through by Swan Lake and struck the river at Lewis'. Proceeded down the river to General Williams' and camped for the night. Vangine playing around us at a respectful and safe distance, showing himself at certain points, I suppose more for annoyance than for any purpose of attack.

On the morning of the 19th commenced gathering up cattle. Found them generally very poor. As far as possible I avoided taking milk cows and work oxen belonging to citizens living on their own plantations. Camped on the night of the 19th at Lewis Boggs'. On 20th reached Pine Bluff with about ninety head of cattle—very poor beef, but the best to be had at this season. Crossed the river on steamer Argosy. Returned to camp at 5 p.m.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
G. W. DAVIS,
Captain, Thirteenth Cavalry Illinois Volunteers, Comdg. Scout.

Capt. Guy S. Alexander,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Of the within ninety head of cattle at least twenty head are entirely unfit for beef.

G. W. D.

MARCH 18–30, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Gibson to Little River and Hillabee, Ind. Ter.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Capt. Maxwell Phillips, Third Indian Home Guard (Kansas) Infantry.
No. 2.—Charles O. Davis, Chief of Scouts.

No. 1.

Report of Capt. Maxwell Phillips, Third Indian Home Guard (Kansas) Infantry.

FORT GIBSON, C. N., March 30, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to orders from the commanding officer Third Brigade, Third Division, Seventh Army Corps, on the 18th day of March, 1865, I took command of a detachment consisting of four companies of the First Indian Regiment and two companies of the Third Indian Regiment, in all 324 men, and proceeded southwest in the direction of We-wo-ka. At Deep Fork, fifty miles from Fort Gibson, I found the stream too much swollen by recent rains to be fordable. A mounted scout of the enemy was on the opposite bank when I reached it. They immediately retreated. I ordered four mounted scouts to swim over and scout the country in front, and proceeded to construct a raft to cross my command on. Three of the scouts ordered over crossed, and found that the enemy had consisted of fifteen or twenty men, and that they had retreated and scattered. Henry Parris (scout) behaved in a cowardly manner, refusing to cross when ordered to, and did not cross till after I had crossed with a portion of my infantry. I crossed my command over Deep Fork partly on a raft, partly on driftwood, and partly by swimming, and continuing in a southwesterly direction, crossed North Fork, which I found quiet low, and arrived at We-wo-ka, eighty-five miles southwest of Fort Gibson, on the 24th instant. From We-wo-ka I sent scouts to Little River Town, twenty five miles southwest, and to Hillabee, twenty miles east, and to Canadian River, twenty miles southeast. The scouts returned and reported no enemy, but the evidence that parties had been into both Little River and Hillabee about a week previous, and that they had driven large herds of cattle in a southwesterly direction. The scouts from Little River reported that the iron bridge across Little River was broken down, and that the greater portion of the wrought-iron rods and bars were taken away. Finding no enemy, I returned and reached Fort Gibson on the 30th instant. I found considerable quantities of cattle on the route, especially between Deep Fork and North Fork. There are no citizens now living in that part of the country. I was unable to find any grain. The mounted scouts under Mr. Davis were altogether unacquainted with that country. With the parties sent to Little River and Hillabee I mounted Indians on transportation mules for guides. My transportation consisted of fifteen pack-mules. I find pack-mules considerably superior to wagons for a command without artillery marching through that country, as they can pass over mountain roads and narrow passes impassable for wagons, and travel faster.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. PHILLIPS,

Captain, Third Indian Regiment, Commanding Detachment.

No. 2.

FORT GIBSON, C. N., March 31, 1865.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report to you:

On the 19th instant I was ordered by Lieutenant-Colonel Dole, commanding Third Brigade, Third Division, Seventh Army Corps, to take six men and report to Captain Phillips in command of a detachment of troops that went southwest as far as We-wo-ka. I started with J. H. Greene, John McDonald, Jos. Pugh, and Jeff. Davis, citizen scouts; Charles Hicks and Henry Parris, detailed soldiers. On the 20th I overtook Captain Phillips' command about twenty-five miles west from this point. I reported to the captain and he ordered me to proceed to the Council Ground and drive some beef-cattle to that point for the command, which I did. We there rested a short time until the command moved up. The captain then ordered me to take my men and go south as far as Hillabee, on the South Canadian. He also sent an Indian pilot with me. I camped that night within three miles of the command. On the 21st I attempted to cross the Deep Fork of the North Fork of the Canadian, but found it impossible, it being very high. I turned up the said stream and met the command at the ford. I reported to the captain. He said he was glad that we did not cross. He sent one of my men back to Fort Gibson that night. We made a raft of logs tied together with ropes, but failed in crossing. The next morning the captain ordered me to send four of my men with their horses across the river. They hesitated some time, as they considered it very dangerous. They agreed for one of the Indians to take their horses and cross. The captain tried, but could not get any man to attempt in crossing. He then gave peremptory orders that the river had to be crossed. My men made several desperate efforts to cross, but failed. Again they tried two ponies, loose and clear of incumbrance. They succeeded in getting them across. I then hired a negro to take another horse across, which he did. The captain then dashed precipitately into the river and with the support of a puncheon he crossed. Jos. Pugh followed and overtook him before he crossed; J. H. Greene and Jeff. Davis crossed also; Jos. Pugh recrossed. Greene and Davis went with the captain out some five or six miles south and returned the same night. On the same evening Mit-ka-hut-ka, chief of the Creek Indians, constructed a raft made of logs tied together with ropes. The next morning we swam our horses, including pack-mules, &c. We then crossed ourselves and transportation on the raft. The captain then ordered me to take three of my men and proceed to the North Fork of the Canadian. I did so and camped three miles from the command in front. On the 24th I reported to Captain Phillips. He ordered me to take my men and proceed to We-wo-ka and there await the arrival of the command, which I did. The next morning the captain ordered me to take two of my men, with an Indian guide, and proceed to Little River Town and report to him the same night. He also ordered me to send three of my men, with a negro guide, to Hillabee and report to him the same night, which they did. On the 26th he told me that I had to drive a herd of cattle to Fort Gibson, and that I might get them where I thought best. I told him that I would camp that night eight miles west of the Council Ground, on Grove Creek. He promised to send a lieutenant, with twelve or thirteen men, to assist me in driving cattle. If he sent them they never reported to me. The next night I camped on a tributary of Cane Creek. On the following morning one of my men was unable for duty and another one had a broken-down horse. I took three men and gathered about 110 head of average beef-cattle and started with them. In the evening two of Captain Phillips' teamsters left the command about two miles and came to me, and drove in about thirty head of cattle to my herd that was near by on the prairie. I soon met the captain with about seventy head of cattle. We lotted them all that night at the McIntosh place. The captain said that we would camp the command about one mile and a half from there, but would next morning send back his mounted men to assist me in driving the cattle to the Arkansas River, which he failed to do. I waited until about 9 o'clock before I started. I then started the cattle and drove them around a prairie divide in order to avoid brush thickets. I intersected the main Texas road, it only being about half a mile down to Rabbit Ford, our usual place of crossing with cattle. On arriving there I found the river not fordable. We herded the cattle and rested our horses. I then drove the herd to the Nevins pen, on the bank of the river, without the loss of one. I there tried to lot them. They stampeded on sight of quite a number of Indians on foot, and scattered all over the bottom. I succeeded in collecting and turning them, and they then stampeded and scattered the second time. I pursued them and brought the most of them back the third time. By this time the Indians were crowding every path and corner where they thought they might chance to get a beef. They then commenced firing; the cattle then scattered in every direction. I then gave them up as lost. The captain came up in the meantime and ordered me very rashly to regather that herd. I told him that it was utterly impossible. He said it had to be done.
My men being very tired and their horses extremely jaded, they refused to go, but finally I started with the three men who helped me drive the herd at first, and two more of my men that crossed the river, and lotted between sixty and seventy head at the Nevins pen, about one mile south of the Arkansas River.
I certify upon honor that the above statement is correct.

CHARLES O. DAVIS,
Chief of Scouts.

Lieut. Col. F. W. Schaurne,
Comdg. Third Brigade, Third Division, Seventh Army Corps.

MARCH 19-23, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg to Columbus, Mo., with skirmish near Greenton.

Report of Lieut. Rush G. Leaming, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

CAMP GROVER, March 24, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that in compliance with Special Orders, No. 3, dated headquarters post, Warrensburg, Mo., March 19, 1865, I left Camp Grover with a scout of thirty men, moving north on Lexington and Warrensburg road to Davis' Creek; thence west, scouting the country well to the head of Davis, at which place we found signs of bushwhackers having fed in the woods near a Mr. Hamlet's, whose son is in the brush and was seen in that immediate neighborhood the night before by a Union man. Said Hamlet had on his farm five shod horses in good condition, also one double-barreled shotgun, loaded, which was used (he affirmed) in shooting wild geese. I brought in this gun and took from him one horse to replace a U. S. horse that had become very lame. Hamlet said he had not seen his son for many weeks and had forbid his coming to his house or having anything to do with the family. From the headwaters of Davis' Creek I continued west across a small prairie by the way of Hopewell, striking the timber south of Chapel Hill, scouting through it; thence north (leaving Chapel Hill on the west) up Greenton Valley, and while in the timber some six miles south of Greenton, near Hook's farm, I came upon five bushwhackers. We immediately fired on them, ran them out of the timber across an old field, where they returned the fire, crossed the road, and entered the thick brush. The ground here being very miry I dismounted a part of the command, sent them after the bushwhackers afoot, and taking seven of the best mounted men, I moved around the north point of the woods to cut off their retreat into the Snibar Hills. Before reaching their regular crossing-place I saw them enter the timber north. Followed them some five or six miles, but found it impossible to catch them, as their horses were fresh and ours partly ridden down before we came onto them. After the dismounted men had returned to their horses five more bushwhackers came up the road the first passed on. The sergeant in command of the squad I had left at Hook's farm started immediately in pursuit, ran them into the woods south of the farm, but could not get a shot at them. I then moved up the valley to the town of Greenton, where I was expecting to meet a scout from

10 R R.—VOL XLVIII, PT 1
Lexington. Not meeting the scout, I marched northeast of Greenton, thence west (leaving Wellington on the right about four miles) to Thorp's Ford, on the Sni, continuing west to Butler's Mill, on the Big Sni, with the expectation of crossing here into Jackson County, where I supposed the guerrillas would go after being driven from Greenton Valley, but this stream was so swollen by the recent rains I could not cross. I then moved southeast, scouting up a branch of the Sni; thence through the timber east of Mr. Fickle's farm, south of Mr. Armstrong's, to Columbus, returning to camp the evening of the 23rd instant. I found the citizens not inclined to give information to Federals as to guerrillas, forage, or best routes of travel. Until they were aware we had run bushwhackers out of the country they would persist in saying they had not seen or heard of any guerrillas in that part of the country for weeks and months.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

RUSH G. LEAMING,
First Lieut. Company F, Seventh Missouri State Militia Cav.

Maj. M. C. HENSLEE,
Commanding Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

MARCH 20-22, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Bayou Pigeon, La., with skirmish (21st) at Bayou Teche, La.

BRASHEAR CITY, LA., March 22, 1865.

Sir: In accordance with general instructions, I wish to submit to the general commanding the following report of an expedition which has just returned from Grand Lake and Bayou Pigeon:

On the afternoon of the 20th instant a note was received at these headquarters from Captain Leonard, commanding naval fleet at this post, asking for a detail of men to go on board the boat No. 49, and up into Grand Lake for the purpose of complying with a request from General Cameron in bringing within the lines the family of Mr. Williams, a Government employé at this post. By command of Lieutenant-Colonel Atkins, then commanding post, a detail of forty men, in charge of a lieutenant from the Ninety-third U. S. Colored Infantry, was made, embarking at 7 o'clock on the night of the 20th. From the report made by the officer commanding the detachment I can collate but this: The boat landed at Indian Bend, eight miles above Franklin, and the detachment of infantry marched across to Bayou Teche, distant one mile, seeing but four or five mounted and armed men, however. While at Bayou Teche a party of from twenty-five to thirty of the enemy rode down to the bayou on its southern bank, and dismounting, fired a number of shots at my detachment. They then made some movements toward crossing in small skiffs and sugar troughs, but were prevented by the fire of my men. The detachment remained near an hour and a half on shore and then returned to the boat. They gained little or no information in regard to the strength of the enemy in that vicinity, but were informed that it was expected that a flat-boat would that night cross Grand Lake from Pigeon Bayou loaded with horses captured or stolen from the La Fourche country. Upon receiving this information Captain Leonard, of the gun-boat, determined to lay in wait for them at the mouth of Big Bayou Pigeon and send a messenger to the gun-boat Glide, then still at Brashear, to come up and guard in like manner the mouth of Little Bayou Pigeon. On leaving Indian Bend—I must here, however, state that the detachment from my command, being short of rations for this unexpected extension of absence, killed and took on board sheep not exceeding ten or twelve in number, thought to be necessary to subsistence. The gun-boat No. 49, containing my detachment, lay at the mouth of Big Bayou Pigeon during the night, but without discovering any intention to cross the horses. Indeed, the nature of the night (a steady gale blowing until morning) would doubtless have prevented the execution of such a project had it been contemplated. The next morning, the 22d instant, she explored the bayou for a distance of eight miles, the yawl, containing the commander of the gun-boat and Lieutenant Griffin and ten men of my regiment, going four or five miles farther up, discovering nothing. They then returned to this post, leaving the Glide at Little Bayou Pigeon awaiting further developments in regard to the horses, and arrived at the landing at 7.30 this evening. The family of Mr. Williams, for peculiar and domestic reasons, could not be induced to come with him.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SIMON JONES,
Colonel Ninety-third U. S. Colored Infantry, Commanding Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

MARCH 20-22, 1865.—Scout from Lexington, Mo.

Report of Lieut. Daniel Shumate, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

LEXINGTON, MO., March 24, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following report to you:

In compliance with your instructions, on the morning of the 20th instant I marched from this post in command of eighteen men of my company. I took the Georgetown road as far as the Tabo Church, twelve miles east of this post. I there found a trail of six bushwhackers going west. I took the trail and followed it as far as Joel Ewing's. Night came on and I camped. During the night a heavy rain fell and put out the trail. I took the direction, however, and soon came to the Widow Demastus', and there found that five guerrillas had just left there, going west. A young-looking woman, said to be the widow of the guerrilla Wilhite, who was killed a year ago, made a great effort to make me believe that the party that had just left there had gone east. The mud was very deep, however, and it was very plain that they had all gone west, the same way that they came in. I took the track, and in half a mile I met five other guerrillas going east. I was within about 300 yards of them when I saw them. They discovered me at the same time. It was something over a mile to the timber; nothing in the way but two fences and deep mud. A desperate race for life or death ensued. They got to the timber 75 or 100 yards ahead of us. There were several shots fired, and I thought we wounded one man. They then separated and we followed three of them five or six hours. They kept in the bush only a short distance ahead of us. We ran our horses down and were compelled to give up the chase. We rested our horses and moved out to a suitable place to camp. On the 22d I scouted the country south of Wellington, and became satisfied that the guerrillas had gone into the Snibar Hills, and owing to the jaded condition of our horses I thought it altogether impracticable to follow them, and consequently I came in one day sooner than I was ordered. Arriving in Lexington late in the evening of the 19th from a hard march, that being the day you were ordered to start me on this scout, and meeting with the guerrillas at the point I did, rendered it impracticable for me to make the connection with the troops from War-rensburg as instructed by you. I would earnestly recommend the banishment of the Widow Demastus, with her family, the Widow Wilhite included. She makes that her home. She lives half a mile west of the Columbus road, four miles north of Chatam Ewing's, near Mr.
Powell's, who lives on the Columbus road.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DANIEL SHUMATE,
Second Lieut. Company I, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

Capt. WILLIAM MEREDITH,
Commanding Post.

MARCH 21-23, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Monticello, Ark.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Capt. John H. Norris, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry.

No. 1.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., March 25, 1865.

I have the honor to report that I sent out a scout of 110 men from the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, under Captain Norris, on last Tuesday evening, with instructions to go as far as Monticello, for the purpose of breaking up some conscripting and bushwhacking parties that were in that section of country. They returned on Thursday evening, having gone to that place, and report killing 2 of the enemy and bringing in 12 prisoners, destroying 19 musketoons, 7 Richmond muskets, 4 Enfield rifles, 11 double-barrel shotguns, 17 rifles, 15 pounds of powder, and quite a quantity of fixed ammunition, some buckshot and rifle-balls; also a small rebel mail, though nothing of importance. They also brought in 11 horses and 6 mules captured from the enemy. One man missing from the scout while on patrol, supposed to be captured.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

JAMES M. TRUE,
Colonel Sixty-second Illinois Veteran Infantry, Commanding.

Lieut. Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock, Ark.
No. 2.

HDQRS. COMPANY M, THIRTEENTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY,
Pine Bluff, Ark., March 24, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following report of a scout under my command:

In obedience to orders, I left this post with 112 men and two officers at 4 p. m. Monday [Tuesday], 21st instant, and marched through Cornersville, by way of upper Monticello road; thence on the direct road to within nine miles of Monticello. There I made a detour to the right and came into Monticello on the Warren road, arriving there at 6.30 a. m. Tuesday [Wednesday], 22d instant. Having my column previously divided into three divisions, instantly upon arriving in sight I sent one division, under Lieutenant Kennedy, guided by Mr. Boatner, around town to the right, another, under Lieutenant Orton, guided by Mr. Milton, to the left, ordering them to leave two or more pickets at each suitable place to guard the town, which was done in a very few minutes. With remainder of the men I entered the town. There were but few Confederate soldiers there that morning, and but few shots were fired. Though they had been expecting a scout there for a week, and kept the Pine Bluff roads guarded or picketed, and the soldiers generally go out of town of a night, yet they were completely surprised and ran in all directions, and unfortunately some few made their escape. There is a band of men down there called the "Old Man's Company," composed of men exempt from conscription. Their chief duty is to return deserters, enforce the conscript laws, and furnish, in any manner they can, military information for the enemy. Some of them who had not left town I brought in. Immediately upon entering the town I proceeded to search the houses for the enemy, sealed papers, arms, or ammunition. This search was conducted by the two lieutenants and resulted in the finding of 19 musketoons and yagers, 6 Richmond muskets, 3 Enfield rifles, 9 double-barrel shotguns, 7 rifles, 2 cans of powder, and a large quantity of fixed ammunition, lead, buckshot, and rifle-balls; also a small rebel mail, which is herewith sent to post headquarters. Having accomplished all I could in Monticello, and being credibly informed that a battalion of Magruder's cavalry were expected there hourly since Sunday, I was afraid it might be transcending my orders to go on to Long View. I therefore concluded to return, and on my way back to search for Captain Owen and Captain Kidd, who I learned were operating through the country toward Bayou Bartholomew. I moved out, about 10 a. m., through neighborhood roads to the residence of Lieutenant Carpenter, rebel army, ten miles. Halted, fed, got breakfast, and rested until 3 p. m. As I was just beginning to prepare to move on, I was attacked by fifty or sixty of Shelby's men, under Captain Patterson. They did not come very near, however, until our carbines convinced them of the impropriety and impracticability of such a rash act, and after rallying once and making a very feeble attempt to flank me to the left, they ran off promiscuously to the woods. I then moved slowly and cautiously to Mr. Helm's, about six miles from Bayou Bartholomew, and eighteen miles below Busby's Bridge; camped there for the night. Moved at sunrise yesterday morning, 23d instant, on the neighborhood roads coming into the lower Monticello at Willson's, twenty miles from this post, and from there directly back to camp, arriving about 6 p. m. yesterday, having marched 140 miles, killing 2 and capturing 11 of the enemy; capturing 19 musketeons and yagers, 7 Richmond muskets, 4 Enfield rifles, 11 double-barrel shotguns, 17 rifles, 15 pounds powder, a quantity of fixed ammunition (mostly for musketeons and shotguns); also a small quantity of lead, buckshot, and rifle-balls, and a small rebel mail; also 11 horses and 6 mules. I ordered the arms broken and ammunition destroyed, for want of transportation. The horses and mules are turned over to the regimental quartermaster Thirteenth Illinois Cavalty; the prisoners to the provost-marshal. One of the prisoners, named John B. Manion, voluntarily surrendered himself, and desired to be taken to Pine Bluff under guard. He can and is willing to give much valuable information, and to conduct a party where valuable prisoners and papers may be captured, and being violently opposed to being exchanged or serving with the rebel army any more, I greatly desire that he may be examined by the general and released from confinement. One of my men ventured too far out when patrolling (I suppose) at Monticello and I fear was captured, for he could not be found when I assembled the men to leave. His name is Benjamin F. Hancock, private, Company I. No other casualty. Mr. Milton proved valuable as a guide, having a good knowledge of the country and all the neighborhood roads. Mr. Terrel's horse gave out at Cornersville and he went no farther. Captain Youngs, formerly Fifth Kansas Cavalry, rendered me great service by his skill and experience in managing my advance guard. But I cannot express the obligations I feel under to Mr. James W. Boatner, the other guide. He certainly deserves great credit for his energy, sagacity, skill, and prudence; and from his almost perfect knowledge of the country and people (knowing every family and every pathway), his services are really invaluable as a guide.

Hoping I may be allowed the privilege of further efforts, I am, captain,
your obedient servant,

J. H. NORRIS,
Captain, Commanding Scout.

Capt. GUY S. ALEXANDER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Pine Bluff, Ark.

MARCH 22-23, 1865.—Operations about Stephenson's Mill, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF SALEM,
Salem, Mo., March 24, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that the stockade or fort built at Stephenson's Mill, sixteen miles southwest of this post, on Current River, was burned on the 22d instant, by three bushwhackers, who, after making general threats of death and destruction against any person who should report them, and ordering the miller to have a quantity of meal ground for 250 rebels by 12 o'clock yesterday, proceeded westward from the mill and have not since been heard of. I received this report on the night of the 22d, and started Lieutenant Thornton with twenty men early yesterday morning to make a scout to the mill, and thence some distance down Current River, with a view of ascertaining where these bushwhackers came from and whether any bands may be expected in from that direction. I have not heard from the lieutenant, and am satisfied that there were but three bushwhackers in that section. There have been no troops stationed at the mill for about three weeks past, as I understand. Captain Jones, commanding one of the citizen guard companies of this county in a neighborhood south-west of this post, reports that a scouting party sent out by him has just returned and report things quiet and no sign of bushwhackers in his section. Inclosed find John P. Graham's communication reporting the burning of the stockade or fort.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. D. HUBBARD,
Captain, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry Vols., Commanding Post.

Capt. J. H. STEGER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure.]

MARCH 15 [22], 1865.

Capt. W. D. HUBBARD,
Commanding Post, Salem, Mo.:

CAPTAIN: There were three bushwhackers came to N. Stephenson's Mill at 12 o'clock and burned the fort and gave orders to have meal enough for 250 men by to-morrow at just 12 o'clock. One of the men we knew. We know they are bushwhackers, and when they left they went west. There is a chance for murder behind. I told them I would report, and they said if I did they would kill me. This report is true. Yours,

JOHN P. GRAHAM.

MARCH 23-24, 1865.—Scout from Donaldsonville to Bayou Goula, La.

HDQRS. COMPANY K, 16TH INDIANA MOUNTED INFTY.,
Donaldsonville, La., March 24, 1865.

In obedience to verbal orders from Colonel Fiske, received on the evening of the 23d instant, I proceeded with Company K, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry, to Bayou Goula, at which place I arrived at midnight. In searching the town I found two rebel soldiers concealed in the houses. After placing a guard over the captured rebels I proceeded to Madam Randolph's plantation, situated about seven miles from the river. I arrived there at daybreak and surrounded the mills and other houses. Captain Brown and two of his men were there, but escaped, having been warned of my approach by some means. I captured on this plantation Captain Brown's and one other horse, and two carbines, abandoned by the enemy in the hurry of their flight. After searching the place I started on my return and arrived here about 4 o'clock this evening.

In submitting this report I subscribe myself, your obedient servant,

J. E. MACKLIN,
Captain Company K, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

MARCH 24, 1865.—Scout from Bayou Bœuf to Bayou Chemise, La.

BAYOU BŒUF, LA., March 25, 1865.

In pursuance to orders received from you, I have the honor to report that yesterday morning I started from camp with six men for the purpose of scouting through the swamps in search of rebels, or in order to discover, if possible, their number or whereabouts. I visited the house of Pierre Diegle, a man whose loyalty has been suspected for a long time. Seeing that his boat was not moored in its accustomed place, I asked him where it was. He replied, without hesitation, "My son has it fishing." Scarcely crediting this statement, I left him in charge of the men. After having waited about two hours for his son's return I went into his back yard. Here I found the uniform of two men of my company hidden under some old lumber, said men having deserted from my company the night before last. I asked Diegle to whom the clothing belonged. He said he did not know, but that he had found it near the water and had hidden it himself. Now, the point at which this man lives (at the mouth of Bayou Chemise) is the only point of ingress the rebels across the lake have for this section of country. All the men who go into the Confederacy must pass his place, and the doubts concerning his loyalty are founded on the suspicion that he materially assists deserters and smugglers across the lake. Again, had his son been fishing with the boat it would have been almost impossible for him (the son) to have been beyond the range of my eyesight. Lastly, colonel, I can say, setting aside my personal dislike for the man, I firmly believe that his son was, at his instigation, taking the two deserters over the lake at the time I visited his house.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

NUMA A. POMPONEAU,
Second Lieutenant Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry.

Lieut. Col. JOHN L. RICE,
Commanding Troops, Bayou Bœuf.

MARCH 24, 1865.—Affair near Rolla, Mo.

Report of Sergt. John Y. Baldwin, Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

WAYNESVILLE, MO., March 26, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to submit the following report to you:

I was ordered, by Special Orders, No. 52, with six enlisted men to escort Government train to Rolla, Mo., on the 23d day of this month. On my way to return, about seven miles west of Rolla on the Springfield road, I, with two of the escort, went into the house of the Widow Yowell to get a drink of water, while the other four sat down on the side of the road. Immediately an officer and a sergeant and three privates, dressed in Federal uniform, made their appearance with their revolvers cocked, at the place where the four of my men were sitting, and demanded their surrender. The men were taken by surprise and surrendered, when the leader of the gang made the inquiry whether there were more of them. The answer was that three of them were in the house, when three charged upon the house and asked me to surrender. I leveled my gun at him and told him that was the way that I would surrender. I fired and shot him off his horse. The balance of the gang, shooting in through the window after seeing their comrade killed, took refuge, and put to run, when I and the two with me put after them as hard as we could run, as we were on foot, to recapture our comrades, who were also on foot. Again I took aim at one of the gang and pierced him through, when the balance of the bushwhackers commenced shooting at the prisoners, three of the prisoners running toward me and one in the direction of Rolla, who has not been heard from since. Two of my men were wounded and taken to Rolla. Their names are George Hoffman and John C. Odle.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN Y. BALDWIN,
Sergeant, Company E, Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

Maj. J. B. KAISER,
Commanding, Waynesville, Mo.

MARCH 25-27, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Indian Bend, La.

HEADQUARTERS POST,
Brashear, La., March 27, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to submit, for the information of the general commanding, the following report of an expedition undertaken in accordance with orders from these headquarters of date March 25, 1865, for the purpose of destroying or capturing a barge said to have been used by the enemy for the purpose of transporting a number of horses over Grand Lake and into their lines:

This expedition consisted of a detachment of thirty men from the Ninety-third Regiment U. S. Colored Infantry, under command of Lieut. W. H. Johns, of that regiment. The troops embarked on gun-boat No. 43 at 7 p. m. on the 25th instant, and immediately proceeded by way of Grand Lake to Indian Bend, arriving at that point by daylight of the 27th. At 7 a.m. the infantry disembarked and marching one-quarter of a mile to a small bayou, discovered and seized the barge, which was taken alongside the gun-boat, and by her brought safely to this post, to which the expedition returned at 2.30 p.m. on the 27th. I have the assurance of the lieutenant in command that no injury was done to any personal property by the expedition. None of the enemy were encountered and no new information obtained. No harm was sustained by any member of the expedition.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SIMON JONES,
Colonel Ninety-third U. S. Colored Infantry, Commanding Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

MARCH 25-28, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to near Oyster Bayou, La.

HEADQUARTERS POST,
Brashear City, La., March 29, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following report of an expedition, undertaken in accordance with orders from these headquarters, for the purpose of taking possession of a large oyster-boat which lay stranded on the beach at a point six miles west of Oyster Bayou, on the Gulf coast:

The expedition consisted of a detachment of forty men of the Ninety-third U.S. Colored Infantry, under command of Lieut. W. Y. Crosthwait, of the same regiment. It embarked on the steamer Cornie at 7 p.m. of the 25th instant, and proceeding down the Atchafalaya River, reached the point of destination without incident worthy of notice. Here, after three hours' hard labor, the boat was gotten in tow, it having lain at a distance of 105 yards from the water's edge. The object of the expedition having been accomplished, it returned to this post, bringing the boat aforementioned, and arriving at 12 m. of the 28th. No signs of the enemy were seen and no information obtained of his forces or intentions. No casualties occurred to any member of the expedition.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SIMON JONES,

Colonel Ninety-third U. S. Colored Infantry, Commanding Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,

MARCH 26-29, 1865.—Expedition from Bonnet Carré to Amite River, La.

MILITARY STATION, GAINNIE'S LANDING,

Bonnet Carré, La., March 31, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to instructions received by telegraph from General Sherman, I started in pursuit of the party of rebels that captured Captain Darling, the provost-marshal of this parish. The captain was captured about the hour of 10 o'clock on the night of the 25th of March, 1865, and no information reached this post until about 2 o'clock the next morning. I then started a party in pursuit, under Lieutenant De Croy, who, on reaching the house of the captain, was told by Mrs. Darling that the rebels had taken the captain across the river. I then sent another party, under Lieutenant Darker, across the river in skiffs, who returned the same afternoon, having searched the country for fifteen miles around, and who discovered that the captain had been taken in a boat through the swamps in the direction of Lake Maurepas. Before the party returned the order of General Sherman was received by telegraph, ordering farther pursuit. I then started with forty men, at 11 o'clock on the night of the 26th, and reached College Point at 10 o'clock the next morning. Heard that a few guerrillas had been there on the Friday previous, but had left by the Blind River for the Amite River, but heard from some negroes that they might be caught at the Orange Grove road, leading to the Bayou Conway and New River. This road is three miles from Donaldsonville, and was reached at 10 o'clock. A party sent to scour the swamps in that direction could not move on the road, owing to the great quantity of water in the swamps. I then started for Donaldsonville, intending to strike the Amite River by way of Doyal's plantation. Reached Donaldsonville at 8 o'clock, and there met Lieutenant Brown, of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry, who had just returned from the pursuit, having learned that the rebels had crossed the Amite River at a place called Gun Pommet, over thirty miles from Donaldsonville. He also learned from a scout that another small party had crossed the Amite River by way of Bayou Timite. Both parties had crossed on the morning of the 26th, and that further pursuit was useless, as they had gone in the direction of Clinton. A scout named Frelding, residing at Donaldsonville, heard that Doyal's and Botic's guerrillas were at the French Settlement on the 24th of March conscripting and collecting deserters from the rebel army. I telegraphed to General Sherman from Donaldsonville, asking if I should cross the Amite River, and did not receive any answer, but sent a dispatch to the commander of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry stating that further pursuit was too late, and that my command should not cross the Amite River. I then returned, reaching Bonnet Carre at 6 o'clock on the evening of the 29th. Mrs. Darling stated so positively that the captain had been taken across the river, I think some of the party must be captured, but the search on the west side of the river occupied the time that should have been given to quick pursuit, and the guerrillas gained ten hours' start. Several citizens have been arrested and identified as being with the guerrillas on the night they captured the captain, and it is supposed their idea was to avoid the draft by capturing the provost-marshal and his papers. The guerrillas were under the command of Captain Bringier, or Botic. His headquarters are at Clinton, and Captain Doyal and he are conscripting for the rebel army. I have heard that both these captains belong to the regular army of the Confederacy. They were joined by a party of citizens, and the plot must have been covered with great secrecy and care. The telegraph wire was torn down between New Orleans and this post, and must have been done by these citizens concerned in this plot. The total distance marched was about ninety-four miles, and on my return I pressed some plantation wagons to carry my men, who were very much fatigued by the first day's march.
Ciup.IXl EXPEDITION TO BAY SAINT LOUIS, MO.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWARD BYRNE,

Lieut. P. J. MALONEY,

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS SOUTHERN DIVISION OF LOUISIANA,

April 4, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to department headquarters.

The prisoners sent down by Colonel Byrne will be duly examined, though with not much prospect of getting at the threads of the plot in carrying off Captain Darling. The energy this cavalry regiment has displayed on foot is highly creditable.

T. W. SHERMAN,

Brigadier General, Commanding.

MARCH 28-30, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Pike, La., to Bay Saint Louis, Miss.

HEADQUARTERS,

Fort Pike, La., March 31, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, in accordance with your telegram of March 27, 1865, received March 28, I started for Bay Saint Louis on the sloop Rosetta immediately, but was obliged to put back into The Rigolets and wait until the next day, March 29. Starting again, I reached the bay at 11 p.m. on Thursday, and found that Captain Monet, of Forrest's cavalry, left the bay on Wednesday morning. He was at home on leave of absence, and on no official business, although he watched our transports closely. I brought from Bay Saint Louis two deserters from the rebel army. If the boat could have reached the bay the first time starting they would have taken this Captain Monet, but the wind was so high it was impossible to sail to the bay in any boat now at this post.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ALFRED G. HALL,

Lieut. P. J. MALONEY,

MARCH 29–APRIL 2, 1865.—Scout from Waynesville, Mo.

WAYNESVILLE, Mo., April 2, 1865.

CAPTAIN: In compliance with instructions from the colonel commanding District of Rolla, I submit the following as a report of a scout under my command:

I left Rolla, Mo., on the 29th of March, 1865, with sixty men, and marched fifteen miles; camped at Jackson's Mills. Owing to a freshet the march was not resumed until the 31st of March. I then scouted the hills and hollows of the country thoroughly, but nothing was seen, killed, or captured. Camped at Coppage's Mill, on Spring Creek. April 1, I moved to Big Piney, found it impassable, and marched over the hills to Wayman's Mill and went into camp. The roads were almost impassable, on account of quicksand. April 2, I moved for Waynesville, swam Big Piney, and arrived here at 2 p.m., having seen nothing but quicksand and water on my way. Captain Murphy returned from a scout in the neighborhood of Houston. States there have been several bushwhackers in that section during the past two weeks. I relieved Captain Maus, of the Fifth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, and am now in command of the post. There was a bushwhacker shot to-day near town by some of Captain Murphy's recruits. His name I did not learn. Nothing further of importance has occurred to-day.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES M. TURLEY,
Major, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry, Comdg. Post, Waynesville, Mo.

Capt. J. H. STEGER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Rolla, Rolla, Mo.
MARCH 30-APRIL 2, 1865.—Expeditions from Baton Rouge to Clinton and the Comite River, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. John G. Fonda, One hundred and eighteenth Illinois Infantry (mounted), commanding Cavalry Brigade.

No. 2.—Lieut. Col. Thomas Logan, One hundred and eighteenth Illinois Infantry (mounted).

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Baton Rouge, La., April 3, 1865.

Major: I have the honor to submit the following report:

In compliance with orders, I left Baton Rouge at 9 a.m. March 30 with 300 men of the First Texas Cavalry and Sixth Missouri Cavalry, and moved in the direction of Port Hudson, at which place I arrived at 4 p.m. the same day, and went into camp about one mile and a half from the fort near the Jackson road. I started from Baton Rouge with one day's rations and drew at Port Hudson sufficient for one day and a half; being unable to draw rations in time at Baton Rouge I drew at Port Hudson. On the afternoon of March 31 I moved in the direction of Jackson, La., but by an obscure road, falling into the main road seven miles from Jackson. From this point I pushed on and reached Jackson about 5 p.m. No notice of my coming had reached the town. Two prisoners and two horses were captured. At sundown I left the town by the Clinton road. After following the main road some distance I left it, and in order to conceal my movements moved by an obscure way, falling into the main road again near Clinton. My advance entered Clinton at 11 o'clock. It was a complete surprise. We captured all the men on picket, seven in number. I remained in Clinton about one hour, and made as thorough a search for prisoners as I deemed prudent. My men were becoming scattered, and I feared that should I remain longer it would be difficult to get them together again. One squadron did get separated from the column and returned to Baton Rouge. I left Clinton by the Greensburg road and camped three miles from the town. Some time after my pickets were posted a negro attempted to pass through the line and was shot. At daylight I allowed my men to unsaddle, feed, and groom their horses, and cook their breakfasts. While at this place a Major Clark was captured by the pickets. An orderly that was with him fired at and wounded the man on post. I left this camp soon after sunrise and returned to Clinton. Passing through the town I took the Baton Rouge road, but afterward left it and fell into the Greenville Springs road, and arrived at Roberts' Ford, on the Comite, at 7 p.m. April 1. Sunday morning, April 2, I crossed my command by swimming the horses and passing the equipment over in a small boat, and arrived at Baton Rouge at noon. The results of the expedition are the capture of 11 prisoners, 3 of whom are officers, and about 20 animals. No force was encountered, and from the best information obtained the rebel force under Powers and Griffith has fallen back to Whitestown, where they have three guns and the stock captured from General Bailey. I think there is no good reason why this rebel force should be allowed to hold a position so near During my absence Lieutenant-Colonel Logan was left in command of the cavalry, with orders to move out on the different roads and attract attention from my columns. For the result of his movements I respectfully call attention to a copy of his report.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN G. FONDA,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

Major DES ANGES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

No. 2.

Report of Lieut. Col. Thomas Logan, One hundred and eighteenth Illinois Infantry (mounted).

HEADQUARTERS 118TH ILLINOIS MOUNTED INFANTRY,

Baton Rouge, La., April 3, 1865.

CAPTAIN: In compliance with the verbal instructions of the colonel commanding the Cavalry Brigade, I left camp at 12 m. on the 30th ultimo with fifty-four men of the Sixth Missouri Cavalry, under Lieutenant Slicer, and eighty-one men of the One hundred and eighteenth Illinois Mounted Infantry, commanded by Captains Brown and Robinson, and proceeded on the Greenville Springs road to Comite River; I then turned down Comite River, and near the crossing of the Benton's Ferry road I captured a Confederate soldier by the name of Lively. At the same time I captured a boy fifteen or sixteen years old, dressed in the Confederate uniform. He claimed to be a citizen, and from his youthful appearance I thought he was not a soldier and released him. On the Benton's Ferry road I met some negroes with goods and inquired of them where they bought them. They answered, of Doctor Laycock. In a short time I met an old lady and a boy with some goods, and they reported that they had bought their goods of Doctor Laycock also. I soon met two men in a light spring wagon with sugar, coffee, and salt. They said they had purchased theirs of Doctor Laycock. These men said they were from Saint Helena Parish. I ordered Corporal Price, of the One hundred and eighteenth Illinois Mounted Infantry, and six men to bring these men and goods to Baton Rouge and turn them over to the provost-marshal, and to stop on the way and arrest Doctor Laycock and bring him also. Doctor Laycock resisted arrest and fired, seriously wounding James E. Morrison, Company C, One hundred and eighteenth Illinois Mounted Infantry. Doctor Laycock was arrested, in execution of my order, and brought to town the next morning. I proceeded to the Clay Cut road, where I camped till morning. At 7 a.m. I started from camp. Sent Captain Robinson with his company by the Highland road to Baton Rouge, and Lieutenant Slicer, Sixth Missouri, by the Greenville Springs and Clinton roads. I went with Captain Brown's company on the Duff's Ferry road. I had traveled but a mile or two when the advance brought me the boy that I had released the day before. It appeared that he had followed my command eight or ten miles and was watching my movements. I ordered him brought to camp as a prisoner. Near the Amite River I captured a Confederate soldier, and besides the horse I captured with him I captured a gray horse, under the following circumstances: Two Confederate soldiers had slept in the woods about forty rods from the road, and were taking... breakfast at the house of Mrs. Simms, where I surprised and captured one of them. The gray horse was in the woods, where these men had slept, and from his looks I was confident he was a cavalry horse. It was reported that he had once been owned by the soldier I had captured, and traded to Mrs.——, and had been used in the army by young Simms, a Confederate soldier. Captain Robinson captured a man said to be a soldier. The parties all arrived at camp by 2 p.m. On the 1st instant I left camp again with the same command at 6 a.m.; traveled on the Clinton road until within four miles of Clinton, where I learned that Colonel Fonda had been at Clinton and left at sunrise, taking the Greensburg road. I then changed my direction, crossed the Comite River, and traveled in the direction of Greenville Springs; camped four miles northwest of the Springs at 7.30 p.m., having marched during the day forty-five miles. There was a picket at Redwood, Olive Branch, and Comite River, but I did not capture any of them. Moved at 5 a.m. next morning on the Baton Rouge road; crossed the Comite River at Roberts’ Ferry; arrived in camp at 1.30 p.m. April 2, 1865.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. LOGAN,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Comdg. 118th Illinois Mounted Infantry.

Capt. C. ROHRBOUGH,

MARCH 31–APRIL 1, 1865.—Operations about Aquia Fria, N. Mex.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. Oscar M. Brown, First California Cavalry, of operations March 31.
No. 2.—Lient. John Abbott, First California Cavalry, of operations April 1.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Marcy, N. Mex., April 2, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to verbal instructions from the department commander, I proceeded on Friday, March 31, to Aquia Fria to learn by actual observation if any Indians had crossed the creek near that point within a day or two, as currently reported. Before reaching the house of Juan Estaban Carrillo, situated on the north side of the creek, a trail was pointed out to me, some 400 or 500 yards south of the village, leading in the direction of the house of Mr. Carrillo, and which was stated to be the one referred to. After close examination for some distance I found that there were but two large tracks and three small ones distinctly visible, but neither appeared to be Indians’ as the toes, instead of turning inward as the toes of Indians invariably do, were either straight or slightly turned out, and the mocassin or sandal tracks were different from those usually made by Indians. From thence I proceeded to the point of the creek, where the trail crossed some 200 or 300 yards below the house of Mr. Carrillo, who accompanied me to the spot, and said that eleven Indians had crossed there the night of the 29th. Dismounting, I proceeded to examine the track, which I found to be similar to many of those made by the children and others from Mr. Carrillo's house. The parties making them evidently proceeded slowly and carelessly, observing no particular order or caution. On inquiry I learned that there were cattle herded some distance from that point and in the direction in which the trail proceeded. On my return I examined along the road and in the vicinity of Aqua Fria and found tracks exactly similar going either way. I also saw boys with sandals or bottoms of rawhide to their shoes which made identical impressions in the sand with those pointed out as Indians, from all of which I became satisfied that no Indians had passed Aqua Fria recently. But to set the matter at rest I dispatched Lieut. John Abbott, regimental adjutant First California Cavalry, agreeably to the direction of the general commanding, with five men and three days' rations, to take up the trail and follow it until the question could be definitely settled, as will be seen by the accompanying order and the report of Lieutenant Abbott, which I have the honor to submit.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

OSCAR M. BROWN,
Colonel First Cavalry California Volunteers, Commanding.

Capt. BENJAMIN C. CUTLER,

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Marcy, N. Mex., April 2, 1865.

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to Special Orders, No. 27, from these headquarters, dated March 31, 1865 (a copy of which is inclosed), I proceeded on the morning of the 1st instant, with a detachment of five men from the First California Cavalry, to Aqua Fria. At that place, near the house of Juan Estaban Carrillo, I found the trail (or more correctly) the tracks which were supposed to have been made by either Navajoes or Pueblo Indians. I followed these tracks directly across the creek and found that the supposed Indians had almost immediately taken and followed the road, as the tracks were plainly to be seen in the road and on each side of it for a distance of about two miles. I also found that the tracks or footprints proceeding toward the town were about as numerous as those going from it. After following as above the traces of the supposed Indians for about two miles the marks became fewer and fainter in and near the road till I came to a small arroyo. Here they were again plainly visible, going in each direction, up and down. Separating my party, with directions to follow the tracks till they found where the Indians had left the arroyo and crossed into the valley, I proceeded with one of the men to examine the ground beyond for the purpose of finding any traces which the Indians might have made after leaving the arroyo. I could find on the ground beyond (which was very hard) no traces whatever of where the party had left it. Judging from the general direction of the tracks going from the town that the party making them had made for the cañon in the low range of hills directly west from Aqua Fria.
and about southwest from Santa Fé, I crossed the plain or valley, and sending two men up the smaller cañon proceeded up the larger one with the rest. We went through these cañons till the two parties met, and no traces whatever having been found in either, although the ground was very soft and wet, I felt convinced that no Indians had passed through. Retracing my steps again to the plain, I separated the men for a distance of about two miles. I tried once more to find the tracks which I had lost sight of at the arroyo. After riding across the plain toward the town for about three miles we found a large number of cattle grazing, and near them one of the men found the footprints. Calling my men together we rode on, following and tracing the tracks plainly till we came to the road which we had followed going out there. After following them a short distance I found that part of the tracks led off from the road. Sending one of the men to follow these footprints, I proceeded with the rest to ascertain at what point the supposed Indians had entered the town. I followed the track across the creek into some fields, about three-quarters of a mile to the left of the road opposite the house of the man Juan Estaban Carrillo, and there found that the footprints led off directly toward his house. At almost the same moment the man whom I sent to follow the footprints where they had left the road, came riding toward me and reported that he had traced them directly to that house, and from there into the field where I then was. The footprints from the house into the fields were all in the same direction; from the field across the creek and across the valley they were about equally divided, going and coming. Among the foot tracks were those of either women or children, and at the house I found two boys whose feet were about the size of the footprints. All of the tracks both going and coming were about alike. In some of them (the smaller ones) they were precisely so. Feeling satisfied that I had traced the trail (as the man Carrillo called it) to its source, and that no party of hostile Indians would separate so widely and leave such evident marks of their passage, nor having passed through the town return to it again and go directly to one of the principal houses without being seen or leaving some evidence of their presence, I concluded that the fears of the party giving the information of the presence of hostile Indians had converted his own footprints into those of red men. I therefore returned with my men to this post.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN ABBOTT,
Second Lieutenant and Actg. Adjt. First California Cavalry.

Col. OSCAR M. BROWN,
First California Cavalry Volunteers, Commanding Post.

APRIL 1, 1865.—Affair near Fort Garland, Colo. Ter.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Garland, Colo. Ter., April 2, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that yesterday morning a party of five Ute Indians attacked a Mexican ranch, &c., fifteen miles northwest from here and killed one Mexican and some beees. The few Mexicans there fought bravely and killed three of the Utes. They brought three horses and rifles as trophies and the corpse of the deceased Mexican to La Culebra last night. To-day the fact was reported to me. I sent, immediately, soldiers to protect the Mexicans up the San Luis Valley in driving their stock near to the settlements. Those Indians belong to Major Flead's or Head's tribe,* who is at present in Colorado City. I notify him also by this messenger. I was always a friend to the Ute Indians, and am well known to them, and I am very sorry that these depredations happened, but if they go on in this way they will find me a hard fellow to deal with. The two counties of Costilla and Conejos have assisted me in fortifying this post, and I do not doubt that with their assistance I can handle the Ute tribe of this country. I am too long in this country to believe the large numbers of warriors which Indian agents are in the habit of publishing. Again I must request you to order Lieutenant Walter to join his company. Inclosed please find requisition for ordnance stores and for horses, which I beg to be filled without delay. I do not care if the horses are poor or not, so long as they are young. Good care will soon make them all right. I will write for further instructions from the general commanding before I declare regular war against the Utes. They may give up the depredators to me or civil authorities so soon as Major Flead (or Head) returns.

Most respectfully, I am, sir, your very obedient servant,
CHARLES KEBER,
Captain, Battalion First Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Post.

Lieut. Ira I. Taber,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Denver, Colo. Ter.

APRIL 1–4, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Bayou Bartholomew, Ark.

Hdqrs. Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry,
Pine Bluff, Ark., April 5, 1865.

Captain: In obedience to orders, I left this post with seventy-five men and two officers on Saturday, 1st instant, at 11 a.m., to scout down Bayou Bartholomew and drive in all the beef cattle I could find. I proceeded out on the lower Monticello road twenty-three miles, took the Napoleon road, and marched twelve miles farther to Allison's farm, and camped at 11 o'clock at night. Sunday morning, 2d instant, proceeded to Green Mount on same road, scouting the country well on each side of the main road from one to five miles. There I took the Auburn road and crossed Bayou Bartholomew at Brown's Ferry, and started back to Pine Bluff and commenced gathering up cattle. Camped at Price's, near Bayou Bartholomew, on Sunday night, and at Doctor Stewart's on Monday night, and arrived at this post Tuesday 5 p.m. with 91 head of beef cattle, 13 prisoners, and 10 head of horses and mules, and a few fire arms. Seized and destroyed twenty-one guns, consisting of double-barrel shotguns, musketoons, rifles, and yagers; also a lot of ammunition. I marched about 125 miles going and coming. Two of the prisoners, who were rebel soldiers, voluntarily surrendered them.

*Reference is to Lafayette Head, Indian Agent.
Chap. Lx.] Scouts from Licking, Mo. 163

Scouts from Licking, Mo.

They claim to be citizens and one was detailed to farm. These five are anxious to take the oath of allegiance. One sergeant had his horse shot when making a little charge. No other casualties. I report 1 rebel lieutenant killed and 1 private.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. NORRIS,

Captain Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, Comdg. Scout.

P.S.—I entirely omitted to mention the fact that I captured a very large rebel mail and also the courier. The mail is herewith sent to headquarters.

J. H. N.

Capt. GUY S. ALEXANDER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

APRIL 1–30, 1865.—Scouts from Licking, Mo.

Headquarters Post of Licking, Licking, Texas County, Mo., April 28, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that I moved from camp on the 20th of April, 1865. On marching sixteen miles I struck a trail of about fifty men moving in northwest direction. Followed them to Piney Fork of the Gasconade River. It being swimming I had to change my direction. Moved and encamped on Hog Creek, after marching thirty miles. Moved early the next morning up Big Piney for the purpose of effecting a crossing. Struck the left-hand fork of Piney at Widow Self's. Routed and killed a bushwhacker named Thompson Tucker. Struck the trail of six others. On trailing them two miles through the woods, came upon them grazing their horses, charging them and killing the notorious leader of the band, by the name of A. W. Howell. Pursued and fired a great many shots on the others. From the best information that can be had, killed one other, by the name of Mose Shumake; pursued another one; caused him to dismount and resort to the thicket, making his way into the creek and sink himself under the water, hiding his head under a drift; lay concealed until I marched out, supposing him to be drowned. Afterward heard how he made his escape. All of them were dressed in full suit of Federal uniform. A great many shots were fired by them at quite short range. One of them discharged a shot at myself not more than ten steps, but luckily missed me. My men all escaped uninjured. Encamped at Skyles'. Moved next morning, striking the trail of a band commanded by Thomas Yeates, but was unable to overtake them. Found two rebel camps. Was out six days chasing those men in every direction. After marching and countermarching about 250 miles returned to camp. I have the honor also to report the following scouts for the month ending April, 1865: April 1, Sergeant Walker with twenty-four men left camp; marched 200 miles; killed 5 bushwhackers and captured 3 horses; returned to camp April 6, 1865. April 2, Sergeant Mustion with seven men left camp; marched ninety miles; returned to camp April 5, 1865. Sergeant Mustion, April 7, with ten men started from camp; was gone three days; marched forty miles; returned April 10. April 10, Sergeant Craddock with eight men left camp; was gone two days; marched forty-five miles; returned April 12, 1865. Total miles marched, 625; men killed, 8; horses captured, 3.

Respectfully submitted.

I have the honor, sir, to be, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM MONKS,

Col. JOHN MORRILL,
Commanding District of Rolla, Rolla, Mo.

APRIL 1—MAY 27, 1865.—Operations against Indians west of Fort Laramie, Dak. Ter., with skirmish (May 20) at Deer Creek Station.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Capt. George F. Price, Second California Cavalry, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 2.—Lieut. Paul P. Grim, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry.

No. 1.

JULESBURG, COLO. TER., MAY 22, 1865.

On 20th 200 Indians attacked detachment at Deer Creek Station and were repulsed, with a loss on their part of seven killed and several wounded. They succeeded in driving away with them twenty-two horses which were on herd. Colonel Plumb gave them chase with thirty men, but could not ford the river. Succeeded in killing one and wounding several. Indians came from north side of Platte and have gone off north-east. One soldier killed. Moonlight says troops displayed great determination. A white man, supposed to be Bill Comstock, formerly of Fort Laramie, seemed to have command of Indians. Captain Brown was at Rock Spring on 11th instant. Everything all right. Telegraphed you on 18th to Saint Louis, and on 20th to Atchison.

GEO. F. PRICE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Brig. Gen. P. E. CONNOR.
(Care of Colonel Livingston, Kearny.)

No. 2.

CAMP MOONLIGHT,
On La Prelle, Dak. Ter., June 9, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the 1st of April Company K marched from Mud Springs to Platte Bridge, under command of Capt. J. M. Allen. On the 25th instant met escort of Sergeant Schonhoff and five men escorting train to Deer Creek Station, Dak. Ter. On the 27th instant a scout of eleven men, under command of Second Lieutenant Grim, on foot, south and east of Platte Bridge, Dak. Ter.; no enemy discovered. On the 28th instant an escort for the surgeon from Platte Bridge to Sweetwater Bridge, Dak. Ter., under command of Sergeant Stuart, with ten men. On the 5th of May mail party to and from Deer Creek Station, five men, under command of Corporal Emmons. On the 8th of May scouting northwest of Platte Bridge with regiment under Col. T. Moonlight, with forty-nine men under command of Second Lieut. Paul Grim; made no discoveries. On the 20th of May Corporal D. Schwankney with ten men in pursuit of Indians, and in action with Indians in the vicinity of Deer Creek Station, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Plumb. On the 23d of May Second Lieutenant Grim with eleven men in pursuit of a party of Indians that had stolen a lot of mules from a train in charge of Captain Lybe, of Third U. S. Volunteer Infantry. On the 26th of May scouting to lower Platte Bridge. On the 23d day of May Captain Allen with twelve men to re-enforce escort with regimental supply train. On the 27th of May Sergeant Hankamer with six men to re-enforce escort with regimental supply train. Moved camp during the months of April and May.

PAUL P. GRIM,
Second Lieutenant, Commanding Company.

Lieut. Col. P. B. PLUMB,
Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry.

APRIL 2, 1865.—Skirmish near Van Buren, Ark.

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS, Fort Smith, Ark., April 6, 1865.

I have the honor to report that on the night of the 2d instant twenty rebels came within two miles of Van Buren and robbed several citizens. As soon as the facts were reported to me I ordered Sergt. H. H. Jones, First Arkansas Cavalry, and seven mounted men (all the horses I had not on duty) to pursue the enemy. They came up with them several miles from town, and after a spirited engagement, routed the party, killed 2 men, captured 9 horses and equipments, without loss on our side. Papers on the bodies show them to be from Fulton, Tex., en route to Missouri. Numerous parties are passing through the country, and some have come in to carry on their guerrilla warfare. I need some cavalry very much, and believe I could drive the guerrillas all out of the country with 200 or 300 mounted men. My scouts have returned from Red River and report the enemy actively conscripting in all the counties south of here. They are concentrating at Washington and Shreveport, and were shoeing horses and preparing for active operations, but in what direction could not be ascertained. A deserter from Texas came in last night. He reports the enemy moving toward Galveston. They have been much scattered to obtain supplies. The people are much discouraged, but the leaders want to carry on the war and are conscripting all able to bear arms between sixteen and sixty-five.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Col. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas.
APRIL 2, 1865.—Skirmish near Hickory Station, Ark.

Colonel: I have the honor to report the following, which occurred yesterday on the Little Rock and Devall's Bluff Railroad:

I was on the morning train from the Bluff, in charge of the train guard, comprising nineteen men of the One hundred and twelfth U. S. Colored Infantry. When the train had arrived to within about four miles of Hickory Station it was thrown from the track, with the exception of the passenger car. Upon examination it was found that the spikes had been drawn from some eight or nine rails, two of which had been removed from the track. I immediately formed the guard to meet an attack which I had reason to expect, which had hardly been accomplished when the enemy, numbering twenty-six men, under command of one M. F. Maybery, made his appearance about one mile distant and advanced rapidly upon the train. When he had arrived within about 400 yards the train guard opened fire, which checked the enemy, causing him to scatter and retire. He did not renew the attack, but hung about at a safe distance until near 12 m., when he retired by small squads in different directions. No casualties occurred on our side. One of the enemy appeared to have been wounded, as two men were seen to assist him to sit on his horse as they rode off. One horse was seen to fall, but got up again and hobbled off. During the mêlée most of the citizen passengers started off on the prairie, but came back when ordered, except some four or five, who went away. Two of these afterward returned, having been relieved by the enemy of their personal effects, even to their clothing. One of the men who returned brought back the inclosed demand from Maybery for the surrender of the train and guard, to which I did not deign a reply. One of the passengers, Fred. Taylor, private, Twelfth Michigan Infantry, a dispatch messenger from General Shaler's headquarters, ran off and secreted himself in the grass on the prairie, throwing away his saber. After the affair was over he returned to the train and recovered his saber and dispatches. After considerable labor the locomotive and cars were got upon the track uninjured and came through safely to Little Rock.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. C. Custard,
Captain, One hundred and twelfth U. S. Colored Infantry.

Col. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas.

In the Field, April 2, 1865.

The Commander of the Cars:

Sir: I demand you to surrender the troops or guards on the cars, and they will be treated as prisoners of war. If you don't surrender I will show you no quarter. I have men enough to take you.

M. F. Maybery,
Captain, Commanding Detachment.
APRIL 2-5, 1865.—Expedition from The Hermitage to the French Settlement, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. James J. Byrne, Eighteenth New York Cavalry, commanding District of Bonnet Carré.

No. 2.—Lieut. Col. Charles H. Parkhurst, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 3.—Maj. Edmund C. Burt, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT BONNET CARRÉ,

Bonnet Carré, La., April 7, 1865.

Lieutenant: I have the honor to respectfully transmit the report of Major Burt, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, who was sent by Lieutenant-Colonel Parkhurst, in obedience to instructions from me, to the French Settlement, for the purpose of capturing a party of guerrillas or scouts, who made that place their headquarters. So far I have been unable to capture the officer or leaders of this party. The troops in the district are now so disposed that it is almost impossible for any raiding party that attempts to come within the lines to escape, all bayous and canals being strongly picketed and in direct communication with this post.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES J. BYRNE,

Colonel, Commanding District.

Lieut. P. J. MALONEY, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 2.

OPPOSITE DONALDSONVILLE, April 5, 1865.

(Received 12 m.)

My scouting parties returned at 4 this a.m., having crossed Amite and visited French Settlement. Nothing was seen of Captain Baptiste, nor has any such person been even heard of in that vicinity. Two men were captured, Thomas Brignac, private in Captain Poche's scouts, who was of the party that took Captain Darling, and the other Paul Lamber, conscripted by Captain Poche. Fuller report will be sent by mail.

C. H. PARKHURST,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. P. J. MALONEY, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 3.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,

April 6, 1865.

Colonel: I respectfully report that, in obedience to your orders, I left camp at The Hermitage at midnight, April 2, with thirty men and reached the Amite River at noon, April 3, and made several ineffectual attempts to cross. Finding it utterly impossible to cross the Amite at that point, I moved to Seviques Ferry in order to cross the river and reach the French Settlement by a different route. On arriving at the ferry I halted to rest my command. I had been there but a few minutes when Captain Benjamin came up with forty men and a small flat-boat, capable of crossing two horses at a time, which he had taken a short distance above that point. I crossed the river with Captain Benjamin and forty men, leaving Captain Ellis with thirty men to guard the ferry. Arriving on the other side at 11 p.m. April 3, from that point I marched by the only practicable route about twenty-five miles to the French Settlement, where two prisoners were captured. I could not hear of any such man as Captain Baptiste, but a Capt. F. P. Poché, who professes to be a conscripting officer, makes his headquarters at that place, and had not to exceed five men, and one of the prisoners said he had but two. Captain Poché could not be found, and one of the prisoners told me that he left for some place below the settlement just before we came into the place. I had my horses well fed at the settlement and started on my return about 1 p.m. April 4; crossed the Amite River near the mouth of Collyell Creek by means of a small flat-boat, which I brought out of the bay for that purpose. I found that part of my command left to guard Seviques Ferry about 6 p.m. Rested a short time, and started on my return; reached the headquarters at 3 a.m. April 5. The names of the prisoners are Thomas Brignac, of Captain Poché’s scouts, and Paul Lamber, conscripted by Poché, who have been sent to the provost-marshal at Donaldsville, La., to be forwarded to the commissary-general of prisoners. Captains Doyal, Gonzales, and Babien, and Lieutenant Mahoney have gone to Clinton. The inclosed papers were taken from Thomas Brignac.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. C. BURT, Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry

APRIL 2–10, 1865.—Expeditions from Thibodeaux, Bayou Beauf, and Bra- shear City to Lake Verret, Grand Bayou, and The Park, La., with skirmish (4th) at Grand Bayou, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Brig. Gen. Robert A. Cameron, U. S. Army, commanding District of La Fourche.

No. 2.—Maj. George R. Davis, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 3.—Col. J. Hale Sypher, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

No. 4.—Lieut. William D. McGuire, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery.

No. 5.—Maj. James M. Hildreth, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

No. 7.—Capt. Elias F. Stall, Ninety-third U. S. Colored Troops.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT, Thibodeaux, April 4, 1865.

(Received 4 p.m.)

On the evening of the 2d I received information from one of my confidential scouts that Whitaker with 100 men had crossed Grand Lake and was on a raid for some point in this district. I could not tell where he would strike, but I determined to look for him and to close all his avenues of retreat. I sent a gun-boat and seventy-five infantry to the head of Little Bayou Pigeon, which started last evening, and should arrive by noon to-day, which would cut off his retreat from the Pigeon, Grand River, and Cross Bayou. I sent 100 men in the small boats, which I have been preparing for such an event, from Bayou Beauf through Grass Lake, Lake Verret, Bay Natchez, and Grand River, to look for him there, and to communicate with the gun-boat if Whitaker was not found. They started this morning. I sent 100 men from Donaldsonville, by the way of Grand Bayou, at the crossing between Doctor Ford's and Janites' place on Bay Natchez, with instructions to leave their horses at Grand Bayou under guard if they could not cross them, and go on foot to Bay Natchez, and if possible to learn of Whitaker, and to communicate with the small boat expedition. They started yesterday. I ordered the cavalry at Plaquemine (fifty-two strong) to The Park to cut off any retreat that way. They started at 10 o'clock this morning. Colonel Fiske telegraphs me that Whitaker reached McCall's plantation, three miles above Donaldsonville, early this morning with fifty-men, and left with about fifty stolen mules and horses. He started all the mounted men he had left him in pursuit, only an hour behind. As Whitaker will undoubtedly retreat down the west side of Grand Bayou, I have sent fifty men to Grand Bayou from Napoleonville to re-enforce the detachment which took that road, and to communicate the whereabouts of Whitaker. A deserter from Whitaker informs Colonel Fiske that Whitaker came by the way of Grand Lake, Bayou Pigeon, and Grand River, leaving his boats in Bayou Pierre Pass, which empties into the head of Lake Verret. Colonel Sypher has just sent 100 infantry to The Park to support the cavalry there. I will give you information as fast as I receive it.

Yours,

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Lieutenant MALONEY,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans.

Thibodeaux, April 1, 1865.
(Received 4:25 p. m.)

Colonel Fiske telegraphs me that a courier from the detachment sent in pursuit of Whitaker has arrived, who reports that our party came up with Whitaker's rear guard just as he was crossing Grand Bayou and recaptured ten mules. He reports heavy firing about a mile and a half to the front. It is believed to proceed from our force sent out yesterday, with whom Whitaker is engaged. Colonel Fiske has sent orders to his pursuing party to follow as long as possible.

Yours,

R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Lieutenant MALONEY,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans.
THIBODEAUX, April 5, 1865.
(Received 12.10 p. m.)
The party sent in pursuit of Whitaker yesterday from Donaldsonville have returned. Colonel Fisk reports that Whitaker ran into our party which had started the day previous, under command of Major Hildreth, Sixteenth Indiana. Major Hildreth recaptured all the mules and horses and a number of prisoners. The remainder threw away their arms and scattered into the swamps in every direction. It is said, though not yet official, that Whitaker was so hard pressed that he threw away his clothing and swam a bayou to escape, and that one of our men holds his uniform as a trophy. Major Hildreth also captured one of the larger boats which Whitaker came in with in Bayou Corn. I anticipate that my other detachments will catch some of the stragglers.

Very happily, yours,
R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Lieutenant MALONEY,

THIBODEAUX, April 5, 1865.
(Received 8.05 p. m.)
Major Hildreth has returned to Donaldsonville, bringing 8 prisoners, 60 mules, a quantity of arms, &c. The overseer of the McCall plantation claims all the mules. I have directed Colonel Fiske to return the mules to their legal owners on satisfactory proof of ownership. If this course is not approved by General Sherman, please let me know immediately, that I may countermand it.

Truly, yours,
R. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Lieutenant MALONEY,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans.

No. 2.

Reports of Maj. George R. Davis, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

BARRACKS THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Near Napoleonville, La., April 5, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: Pursuant to instructions from post headquarters, dated April 4, 1865, I proceeded with two officers and about fifty men to Grand Bayou. Leaving Napoleonville at 2 p. m., I arrived at Grand Bayou at 4.30 p. m., at which place I found a detachment of the Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry guarding horses, mules, and prisoners. I learned that Whitaker had been attacked and the mules recaptured, and some eight or ten men captured, and that our main force was over the bayou. I then re-enforced the pickets at Grand Bayou with one-half of my command, and proceeded with the remainder (dismounted) to Bayou Corn and crossed, at which place I found Major Hildreth returning with his command. He stated that Whitaker's force had [sic]; that they swam the bayou, throwing away their guns and clothing; that he had been through to Gentil's Landing, and had found that they had escaped from him, and that there were only two boats found, which had been destroyed. Believing the duty assigned to this detachment had been performed, I returned to Grand Bayou, where the Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry had been re-enforced by another company from Donaldsonville. After finding both horses and men I returned to this post. The Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry remained at the Grand Bayou with the prisoners and mules, and were to return early this morning, requiring no further assistance.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. R. DAVIS,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. E. K. THOMPSON,
Adjutant Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

CAMP THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Post Napoleonville, La., April 11, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to submit the following report:

Pursuant to instructions received from headquarters post Napoleonville, La., on the 6th instant I assumed command of 114 mounted men of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry. At 5 a.m. April 7, 1865, I marched to within three miles and a half of Grand Bayou, at which point I dismounted forty-two men and ordered Captain Bushee to proceed with the remainder of the command and the horses of the dismounted men to Ford's Crossing, on Grand Bayou, with instructions to make such disposition of his force as would avoid surprise and disaster, and await there for further orders. I instructed Captain Sayles, on arriving at Ford's Crossing, to dismount twenty men of his company (leaving his horses and extra men with Captain Bushee) and proceed across Grand Bayou, thence to Bayou Corn and cross, and to make such disposition of his command as would prevent any person escaping from Brulé Creux by the Paincourtville and Jauntes roads, or by the woods on the Bayou Corn side. I proceeded with the dismounted men to Grand Bayou via [what is] known as "Muddy Way to Grand Bayou;" crossed about one mile below the mouth of Bayou Corn, thence through the swamp across Bayou Creux to the brulé. I then searched every house, barn, shed, and known lurking place in that vicinity, and finding no indication of Whitaker's gang I proceeded to Bayou Corn, where I found Captain Sayles with his command. I then proceeded to Jauntes' plantation, crossing Bayou Pierre Pass, and encamped for the night. I sent small detachments into different localities in that vicinity to lay concealed and watch the roads, paths, and bayous, with instructions to bring in every man they saw. At daylight on the following day I instructed Captain Scott to proceed with his company to Bay Natchez and watch the bay and communicate with Lieutenant-Colonel Rice if possible. He returned at noon and reported that on arriving at the bay he posted a picket upon one of the trees in such position that he could see about two miles down and one mile up the bay. He then marched about 1,000 yards up and down the bay, and could see nothing of the expedition that left Bayou Beauf, and therefore returned. I then sent forward six men, with orders to proceed to Bayou Pierre Pass, two on the right, two on the left, and two in a pirogue in the bayou. I then marched the whole command to the bay except a small picket-post, which I left at Jauntes'. All the lurking places on the route were searched thoroughly. I encamped at the bay for the night. At 8.30 p.m. I crossed a small detachment and sent them forward to Gross' plantation, near Bell River. I also sent a small force down the bay. They returned reporting everything quiet and not a man to be seen. Small detachments were extended from the bay to Jauntes', in rear of this brulé, to lay concealed and watch during the night. At daylight on the following morning I returned to Jauntes' plantation and endeavored to pass through to the Jim Anderson place on Bay Natchez, but could not on account of the water and mud in the swamp, being six or seven feet deep. I then proceeded to Bayou Corn and sent out small detachments in every direction, and encamped at this bayou for the night. At daylight on the 10th instant I sent a detachment in pirogues and flats, under command of Captain Sayles, up Bayou Corn. He returned about 12 m., stating that he proceeded up Bayou Corn about one mile, then to the left up Bayou Pecan, and searched all the houses; he then returned into Bayou Corn and proceeded up that some four or five miles. The people upon Bayou Pecan stated that that was the main thoroughfare of Whitaker and Brown; that this bayou runs into Bayou Corn from Bay Natchez. I then returned to Grand Bayou, mounted the command, and proceeded to this post, arriving in the evening. I took one horse from old man Whitaker's place in Brulé Creux, which was stolen from Mr. Jones, of this place, some time since; also one at Blanchard's, on Bayou Pierre Pass, and one at Dearbon's, across Bayou Pierre Pass, both stolen two weeks ago from Nicholas Pentard's, of Paincourtville. The horses have been returned to their rightful owners. I found at a blacksmith shop at Jauntes' quite a quantity of old gunlocks, pieces of old guns, lead, bullet molds, &c., which I removed. I would state, in conclusion, that I have made every effort in my power to catch some of this gang. I had a good and faithful guide; I visited many places at which no Yankee had been seen since the war [commenced]; passed through deep swamps and up bayous; have had my men lay concealed watching their main thoroughfares, and have used every effort to conceal my position and force, and have not found one of Whitaker's men in that section of the district.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. H. DAVIS,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut., K. THOMPSON,
Adjutant Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 3.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Plaquemine, La., April 24, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to instructions from headquarters La Fourche District, La., I sent all the available cavalry at this post, Captain Avery, one commissioned officer and fifty-two enlisted men of Third Rhode Island Cavalry, to The Park on the 4th of April, 1865, with eight days' rations and sixty rounds of ammunition. The force performed picket duty between Indian Village and EXPEDITION TO GRAND BAYOU, LA.

The Park, on Bayou Plaquemine, six days without seeing an enemy, and on the 9th instant they returned to this post, by orders of Brigadier General Cameron, having sustained no loss or committed any depredations.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. SYPHER,
Colonel Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, Comdg. Post.
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL LA FOUECHE DISTRICT, Thibodeaux, La.

No. 4.

BRASHEAR CITY, LA., April 8, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, [pursuant to] instructions from headquarters post Brashear, La., I proceeded to the mouth of Bayou Long with fifty men from Company G, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, at 6 p.m. April 6, 1865, arriving at that place at 8 o'clock the same evening. I landed about one-quarter of a mile from its mouth and distributed my men along the right bank of the bayou, in five posts, leaving fifteen men on board the Cornie, where we lay concealed until 6 a.m., April 8, 1865, at which time we returned to this post, as I had been previously instructed. No enemy appeared and no casualties or accidents occurred during the entire expedition.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. D. McGUIRE,

Capt. T. J. WHITEMAN,
Acting Post Adjutant, Brashear, La.

No. 5.

HDQRS. DETACH. SIXTEENTH INDIANA MOUNTED INFTRY.,
Donaldsonville, La., April 5, 1865.

SIR: In obedience to orders from headquarters U. S. Forces, dated Donaldsonville, La., April 3, 1865, I proceeded with a detachment of 100 men of my command toward Lake Natchez. I reached Doctor Ford's plantation on Grand Bayou at 4 p.m. of 3d instant, and proceeded down the bayou about two miles and nearly one mile below where Bayou Corn empties into Grand Bayou. I found it to be difficult in crossing horses at this place, so concluded I would encamp for the night and cross seventy-five men (dismounted) in the morning. I seized a boat from three citizens who were passing up the bayou and detained the citizens. At 6 a.m. of the 4th of April I commenced crossing my command, leaving a guard of one commissioned officer and twenty-five men with the horses of the command. I immediately took up my line of march through the swamp to Whitaker's plantation, a distance of three miles. We were compelled to wade through water from one to three feet deep for a distance of about two miles. On arriving at Whitaker's I found Captain Brown and four men on picket. My advance opened fire upon them, but they escaped through the swamps.
The owner of this plantation, Whitaker (the father of the rebel captain of that name), assured me there were no rebels near him. I told him that four of them had just run out of his stable, but he persisted in asserting he knew nothing of their having been there, an assertion I could not credit under the circumstances then existing. I inquired if he knew of the whereabouts of his son, Capt. William Whitaker. He assured me he did not. I then moved on about a mile. The advance met a force of the enemy concealed behind bushes. We opened fire on them. The rebels seemed prepared to make a stand, and my men charged them with a yell, drove them back in great confusion, wounding 1 and capturing 4. We pursued them and captured 4 more while attempting to cross a bayou, name unknown. I learned that the enemy was under the leadership of Captain Whitaker. They escaped by swimming a bayou or coulee running from Bayou Corn to Bayou Pierre Pass. Prisoners reported that the enemy threw most of their clothing and arms into the bayou. The men of my command picked up clothing that must have been worn by nearly twenty men, and considerable was seen floating on the water. I next proceeded to the ferry of Bayou Pierre Pass and ascertained the enemy had not escaped that route, and supposed, from information received from negroes and citizens, that they had retreated to the right of Jauntes'. We then returned to Bayou Corn and crossed over between fifty and sixty mules and one horse, captured from Whitaker, together with the eight prisoners, and left them with the guard protecting the horses of the command, on this side of Grand Bayou. I then started back to Jauntes' with seventy men and found seven rebels at Bayou Corn. Fired on them; two of them returned the fire. They then all fled to the woods, leaving one musket. After leaving a guard with the boats at Bayou Corn I moved to Bayou Pierre Pass, from where Captain Macklin with his company
(K) crossed the bayou and went to Jauntes' house, but could obtain no information relative to the movements of the enemy. On my return
I met Major Davis, of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry, with fifty men, and Lieutenants Ells and Bahucke, with about thirty men of Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry, at Bayou Corn. We remained at Bayou
Corn a short time and then the whole command returned to Grand Bayou; effected a crossing; encamped for the night, as the men were worn down with fatigue and required rest. I brought the boat found in Bayou Corn into Grand Bayou; used it for crossing the command, after which destroyed it. On the morning of the 5th I started to return to camp, satisfied that everything had been accomplished that could be under the circumstances, and arrived at this place with the prisoners, horses, and mules captured from Whitaker's command. I neglected to state that the rebel was wounded severely and left at the house of a citizen at Bayou Corn.

Hoping that this report will meet your approval, I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. HILDRETH,
Major Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.
No. 6.

BAYOU BOEUF STATION, April 8, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that I moved from this station at 2 a.m. on the 4th instant with 100 men, 50 from the Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry, 25 from the First Louisiana Cavalry, and 25 from the Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry, in twenty-two small boats. I moved via Lake Palourde, La Fourche Pass, Grass Lake, Four Mile Bayou, and Lake Verret. From the foot of Lake Verret I sent Lieutenan Steel, Sixteenth Indiana, with fifty men, to follow up the western shore, while I proceeded up the eastern shore with the remainder of the command, appointing Bayou Pierre Pass a rendezvous to be reached by both parties at sunset. Large numbers of floating craft were destroyed on both routes. At the mouth of Bayou Saint Vincent I heard a rumor that Whitaker was on Bayou La Fourche on a thieving expedition. I could learn nothing definite as to his force or his whereabouts. To get more information I moved up the bayou two miles, but as this was taking me too far away from the appointed rendezvous, I turned into a small bayou to the left and passed round into Grand Bayon. Here I learned positively that Whitaker crossed Bay Natchez with his gang two days before, and went across the country to Bayou La Fourche. I made haste to join Lieutenant Steel at Bayou Pierre Pass, designing to move with the whole command up Grand Bayon as far as the road from Juantes' Landing, secrete my boats, and march on Whitaker's rear. On reaching Bayou Pierre Pass, however, I found the Indian men were completely exhausted with rowing, owing to their inexperience. It was 8 p.m., and the men had rowed continuously for eighteen hours. I decided to remain at Bayou Pierre Pass till the next morning. Early on the morning of the 5th I learned that our cavalry from Donaldsonville had had an engagement with Whitaker on Bayon Corn, and had dispersed his whole gang on the afternoon of the 4th. This decided me to change my course, which I did at once, entering Little Bayon Natchez, which leads into Bay Natchez, and making all haste to reach Juantes' Landing before Whitaker, whom I believed to be retreating in that direction. On coming within two miles of Burnley's Landing, the point at which I expected to enter Bay Natchez, I found the bayou so narrow that the oars could not be worked. From this point I sent Lieutenant Steel with fifty men to surround Burnley's house and capture everybody on the premises. I had previously learned that cotton speculators, smugglers, mail carriers, Confederate quartermasters, &c., were wont to congregate at this house. Lieutenant Steel captured 1 lieutenant, 3 privates (Confederates), 1 cotton speculator, 1 smuggler, and the proprietor (Mr. Burnley), besides a package of mail matter and a box of contraband goods. In the meantime with the rest of the command I pushed and dragged the boats about a mile farther, when the bayou ceased altogether. I then impressed Burnley's plantation teams and negroes and drew the boats across to Bay Natchez. As soon as the boats were afloat again I pushed rapidly for Juantes' Landing. Arriving there I found no traces of Whitaker. I then made for Anderson's Landing, three miles above. I found he had landed there, but had returned, taken his boats, and was off to parts unknown. I then hurried on up Grand River, thinking he might be on that stream, and be caught between me and the gunboat at Bayou Pigeon. After proceeding about two miles I captured his colored servant, who had left him during the affair on Bayou Corn. From this man I learned that Whitaker took with him on this expedition forty-five picked men from his own, from Vincent's, Murphy's, and Williams' companies; that in the engagement with our cavalry they were badly scattered, and were making their way through the bayous as best they could. Soon after I took four of Whitaker's men, one of them badly wounded, on their way to Bayou Pigeon in a pirogue. Their story was substantially the same as that of the negro, but I could not learn from any source what route Whitaker had taken with the men who remained with him. When within six miles of Bayou Pigeon I came upon a drift of logs which choked up the stream so that it was seemingly impassable. However, after an hour's hard labor I got three boats through. Placing the prisoners in these I started for the gun-boat, leaving Lieutenant Steel in command below the drift, with instructions to lie quietly in the woods and take up other stragglers who might come along. I reached the gun-boat safely at midnight and transferred the prisoners to her. The commanding officer had no information for me. On the return from the gun-boat Private Oscar Close, Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry, was lost in some unaccountable manner. He was in a small boat, with Whitaker's negro to row for him. The boat disappeared very suddenly; could not have been gone more than ten minutes before it was missed, and yet a rigid search failed to discover it, such was the intense darkness. It is my belief that Close fell asleep and the negro killed him or carried him off into some small bayou. During the night one more prisoner was taken. I started at daylight on the 6th and returned to Bay Natchez. Here I learned positively that Whitaker had gone up Lake Natchez into Choctaw Bayou, on his way to Grossetete. As he had twenty-four hours' start of me I deemed it useless to pursue and started on my return. I tried three different outlets of Bay Natchez before I found one sufficiently clear of drift to admit of a passage. I reached Ivey's place on Bell River at sunset, and bivouacked for the night. Started again early on the morning of the 7th and proceeded by way of Bell River, Bayou Long, Bayou Milhomme, and Lake Palourde to Bayou Bœuf, reaching this station at 4 p. m. I destroyed two large flats and sixty-five smaller water craft on the lakes and bayous through which I passed, besides replacing a number of my own boats which became unserviceable during the trip. The men were kept well in hand, and every effort made by officers to prevent pillaging or other disorder. I believe these efforts were uniformly successful. I will explain my reasons for arresting the three citizens at Burnley's. W. C. Lawes is a cotton speculator from New Orleans. He had a pass signed by Major-General Hurlbut; had been at Burnley's a month, along with Lieutenant Carver, Second Louisiana Cavalry (Confederate), and several other Confederate officers, who were receiving large quantities of goods from Napoleonville via the Portage and Bayou Pierre Pass. Lawes has been a Confederate officer. He says he is a loyal man; then he will tell who carries quinine from Napoleonville to the Confederacy by way of Burnley's. Arsene Simoneaud is charged with smuggling contraband goods by his neighbors and by his wife. H. Burnley harbors the whole gang; grinds corn for Whitaker; had in his house a large mail, of which very many letters were written from within our lines, and he must know who furnishes so many goods to Confederate officers, who come to his house to receive them. My paramount object in arresting these three men was to secure my own safety while in that region. The box of goods seized contains 28 ounces quinine, 7 ounces morphææ sulphas, 6 pairs horsemen's spurs, 8 pairs flannel drawers, 3 knit flannel shirts, 3 colored flannel shirts, 1 piece brown shirting, 4 pieces blue shirting, 1 piece calico, 6 dozen spools thread, 3 boxes steel pens, 5 pocket diaries, all of which I send marked to you to-morrow by U. S. military railroad.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. L. RICE,

Lieutenant-Colonel Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 7.

BRASHEAR CITY, LA., April 7, 1865.

Sir: In obedience to orders, I have the following to report in relation to the late expedition:

I went aboard the U. S. steamer Glide with seventy-five men on the evening of the 3d instant, and immediately proceeded to the river and lakes and came to anchor at 2 o'clock the next morning off the mouth of Little Pigeon Bayou. At daylight on the 4th we entered the bayou, and after some difficulty with logs and driftwood, which in some places completely closed up the channel, we reached its head about noon that day. I went ashore at once with a few men, and was informed that Whitaker with seventy-five men had passed down the river a few days before, and was followed the next day by a lieutenant with eighteen men. They camped a short time at Judge Baker's plantation and then moved on, they said to capture horses and mules in the La Fourche District. On the 5th I heard that Whitaker had left five horses at Baker's plantation some time before, and thinking it to be my duty to secure the animals, I marched with fifty men for that place, three miles. On arriving at the first plantation I learned that Whitaker had staid at Baker's the night before and had gone into the woods that morning with seventy-five men. Thinking there might be some truth in the report, I proceeded with caution through the woods, which were very dense, but could see no signs of the enemy. I was afterward told that he had not been there. Acting Ensign Cole also went along with the men in a cutter, but saw nothing near the river. There were five horses and a mule and McClellan saddle found on the place. They were left there by Whitaker's men, so I was informed by the negroes. A white man that lived there said that he bought the saddle of a soldier. The horses, mules, and saddle were brought away, and it was my intention to have turned them over to the post quartermaster, but Captain Leonard would not permit them to be brought ashore. Colonel Rice arrived about 10 p. m. on the 5th with 11 prisoners—1 lieutenant, 7 privates, and 3 citizens—who were turned over to the commander of the boat. Colonel Rice reported Whitaker's gang badly used up. They were whipped near Napoleonville, and lost 8 or 10 men killed and wounded (prisoners), and afterward by Colonel Rice, who captured the prisoners we brought down. He desired the boat to remain in the head of the bayou until 1 o'clock the next day (6th), when if he sent no word, to go down to the mouth of Big Pigeon Bayou and remain till 12 o'clock to-day. We were unable to get through Little Pigeon before morning. We then anchored.
off the month of Big Pigeon Bayou, as directed, until 12.30 today when we returned to this place, where we have arrived without accident. Mr. Whitaker was very kind to us; he gave us forage for the horses, and two beef-cattle.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELIAS F. STALL,
Captain, Ninety-third U. S. Colored Infantry.

Capt. T. J. WHITEMAN,
Post Adjutant.

APRIL 3, 1865.—Pursuit of Bushwhackers near Farmington, Mo.

HDQRS. COMPANY B, SEVENTH KANSAS CAVALRY,
Farmington, Mo., April 4, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report the following information:

Yesterday about 9 o'clock a report was brought to me by citizen that Hilderbrand and his gang, numbering eight men in all, were Hered's place, near Big River Mills, at daylight and took breakfast. On receiving this report I immediately sent out two details, one under Sergeant Hood, the other under Sergeant Cable, to intercept the Sergeant Hood proceeded on the Potosi road about four miles, when struck their trail on the Iron road. They were evidently making their way toward Dent's Station, Iron Mountain Railroad, but hearing of 10 men being in pursuit changed their course and struck south. Sergeant Hood followed the trail as best he could, now and then getting off track as they traveled no plain roads, but took through thick woods and by-paths. They had about fourteen led horses, according to citizens' reports. About two miles from this place they ran in and to out an old black man, and killed him about seven miles from town. They crossed the Pilot Knob plank road about five miles from here, took six horses from teams on the road. My two details united about noon and followed the trail as far as Burnham's Mills, on the Bla ville road. The horses being so fatigued, having traveled some 50 miles, Sergeant Hood thought it advisable not to pursue farther. Afterward learned that they passed on the west side of the St. Francis River and probably about seven miles east of Pilot Knob on through what is called Flat Woods. I sent information by Capt. Sanders yesterday to you, that you might telegraph to Fredrick to I have the honor to be, yours, respectfully,

JOHN NOYES,
Captain, Seventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding Company i

Lieutenant-Colonel HILLYER,
Commanding Third Sub-District, Pilot Knob, Mo.

APRIL 8–10, 1865.—Pursuit of Guerrillas in Northeast Missouri.

HEADQUARTERS SUB-DISTRICT OF HOWARD,
Glasgow, Mo., April 16, 1865

Matlock, and James Rucker, three noted guerrillas of this county. He pursued them until the 10th, when he came up with them, crossing the Mississippi at Alexandria, in the northeast corner of the State. A steam-boat happened to be at the landing at the time with steam up, which was pressed into service, by which the lieutenant was enabled to place some men on the Illinois shore before Rucker and his companions had made good their landing from the ferry-boat. The three guerrillas were captured and brought back to Macon City, where they were turned over to the provost-marshal. The energy and activity displayed by the lieutenant and the men under his command entitle them to special commendation. The lieutenant desires that the names of the soldiers who accompanied him may be given you, viz, Corpl. Simpson Piper, Charles S. Day, Matthias Turner, J. M. M. Goodwin, William Wisdom, W. R. Mills, and Samuel L. Davis. He also desires to make mention of the names of the following parties who joined him in pursuit after he reached the town of Newark, in Knox County, viz, —— Downing, William Clifton, Sam. Rash, J. H. Burch, and A. N. Anderson. He took from the prisoners some $263 in money. He expended for transportation and other purposes about $117. The remainder was turned over to Major De Bolt. I would respectfully ask that this money, together with the watch taken, may be turned over to Lieutenant McKinsey and the men who accompanied him on the expedition.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. F. DENNY,
Colonel, Missouri Militia.

General C. B. FISK,
Commanding District of North Missouri, Macon, Mo.

APRIL 12–13, 1865.—Expedition from Port Hudson to Jackson, La.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF PORT HUDSON,
Port Hudson, La., April 13, 1865.

I have the honor to report that last night, having received information from Jackson, I sent Lieut. Col. N. C. Mitchell, commanding Fourth U.S. Colored Cavalry, at midnight to that place. My adjutant-general, Captain Getchell, and my aide, Lieutenant Wing, accompanied him. They entered Jackson at daylight and succeeded in capturing Captain Bannon, Thirteenth Louisiana Infantry; Lieut. J. C. Lemon, Fourteenth Louisiana Infantry, and two privates. I have directed them to be sent to Baton Rouge. A mail was also captured, but of no importance. Within the last three days a small force has visited two plantations in this vicinity (Mr. Aburger's and Miss Loudon's), taking four negroes and some mules. Captain Bannon informs me that such things are done contrary to his orders. The men taken from Miss Loudon were recaptured by Lieutenant-Colonel Mitchell this morning on his return; also one man and one mule belonging to Mr. Aburger. I have learned the names of some of these men in these raiding parties, the parents of whom live between here and Jackson, and if they continue in such conduct I shall take mules, &c, from them and make restitution for the property stolen. I believe there is an organized band to steal mules near our lines, for the purpose of selling them to citizens in the vicinity. of Clinton. The expedition returned this forenoon about 10 o'clock, the only casualty being one enlisted man wounded. The rear guard had a slight skirmish in leaving Jackson with some of Colonel Griffith's force, which is supposed to be near Jackson.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
Cyrus Hamlin,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

Capt. William H. Clapp,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Northern Division of Louisiana.

April 12-13, 1865.—Scout from Tallahassee Mission, Ind. Ter.

Report of Lieut. Francis J. Fox, First Indian Home Guard (Kansas) Infantry.

Headquarters,
Tallahassee Mission, C. N., April 13, 1865.

I have the honor to report that a scout of eight men, four mounted and four on foot, that I dispatched by Choska, west of here in the direction of Concharty, returned late last night in a great hurry and very much scared. The sergeant of the scout reports as follows: That he passed through Choskatown and told his footmen to keep on whilst he went ahead with his horsemen to look out for an enemy and gather some beef-cattle, which he performed; and having about fifteen head of cattle on the road, about five miles this side of Concharty (twenty-five miles to Concharty from here), on his return to meet his footmen, when all of a sudden nine well-mounted armed men dashed up after them, but stopped, dismounted, and fired a volley at long range; then mounted and charged, when the sergeant and his men thought "prudence the best part of valor" and charged also, but with their ponies' tails toward the foe, abandoning the beef-cattle, and arriving here minus a pony, which broke down on the retreat. The supposition is that the enemy are cattle thieves, and appeared to be white men. All well at the Mission. The Arkansas is reported very deep and impassable. I received rations and clothing all right, which had to be ferried over in small quantities in canoes at old Marshall's place. Then we pressed wagons and hauled them up to the Mission, about six miles. I hope it is true that Richmond is ours.

I remain, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

F. J. Fox,
First Lieutenant, &c.

Col. William A. Phillips,
Commanding Third Brigade.

April 12-16, 1865.—Scout from Dakota City, Nebr. Ter.

Headquarters Post Dakota,
Dakota City, Nebr. Ter., April 17, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, hearing of depredations being committed up on the South Fork of Iowa Creek, I started with a detachment of twenty men from headquarters this post on the 12th instant to scout for the Indians committing the depredations. Proceeded west up Elk Creek; thence across the hills to the West Fork of Badger Creek; thence up that stream to its head, and thence taking a westerly direction across the hills to the South Fork of Iowa Creek; thence up to the Chalk Branch; thence up that stream about ten miles, where we came on the Indians. I sent a detachment a circuitous route above the encampment to cut off the escape of the depredators in that direction, and then, by moving simultaneously on them from both front and rear, succeeded in making them prisoners. Moved them to a place where they could be easily guarded. Placed guards to prevent their escape and crossed over to the South Fork. Proceeded farther up that stream and its branches in search of another party, whom I learned from the captives were in that vicinity seven or eight days before. After searching for two days, and not being able to find the Indians, although finding two places where they had been in camp, I returned to Chalk Branch, took my captives, and brought them to headquarters of this post, where I have them prisoners. I dispatched a messenger to the agency to which the Indians belong, notifying the agent of the arrest, and said to him that, as they were not hostile Indians, upon his promise to see that proper restitution and reparation was made to the parties aggrieved I would deliver the Indians to him. I have just received his answer that he would do so, and to-morrow morning I shall send them to him under guard as prisoners. It may be proper to add that this post comprises the district of country that is settled along the Missouri River and between the Omaha Indian Reserve and the Running Water River, and that the Omaha Agency is twenty-eight miles south from headquarters this post. The captured Indians were Omahas, and the agent informs me that the other party of ten lodges, of which I was in pursuit, has not yet returned to the agency. I shall to-morrow take a supply of rations and start again in search of them. Our rations being exhausted was the cause of our return from the trip of the 16th.
Ceap. IX. 1 SCOUT FROM FORT STANTON, N. MEX.

All of which is respectfully submitted through headquarters Eastern Sub-District of Nebraska.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. JACKSON,

ASST. ADJT. GEN. OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL CONNOR,
Commanding District of the Plains, Denver, Colo.

APRIL 12-25, 1865.—Scout from Fort Stanton, N. Mex.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Stanton, N. Mex., April 26, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to Special Orders, No. 12, I left this post on the evening of the 12th of April, 1865, with eight men of Company H and seven men of Company A, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, with fifteen days' rations, in pursuit of some Indians that had stolen stock from the ranch of C. Christopher & Co., situated on the junction of the Carrizo and Ruidoso Creeks. I traveled the same evening nine miles and camped. April 13, I raised camp at daylight and marched to the said ranch, where I learned that the Indians had stolen four head of horses and four head of cattle. Two head of cattle were found the same day by Mr. Christopher, the Indians having abandoned them. I immediately followed the trail of the Indians. Five miles from the ranch I discovered an ox that the Indians had abandoned. One mile farther I discovered the fourth ox, killed by the Indians and about one-fourth of the beef taken. I marched that day in all about twenty-three miles, when I camped. The Indians, I discovered, were four in number, all mounted. April 14, raised camp at daylight, marched twenty-two miles, and camped. April 15, raised camp at daylight, marched about twenty-three miles, and camped at a hole of muddy water containing about ten gallons. This day's march was in the direction of the Guadalupe Mountains, over a dry, rocky country. Both men and animals very much given out on account of the extreme heat. April 16, raised camp at daylight, marched about twenty-four miles, and camped at a tank of water containing about forty gallons, situated in a deep, rocky cañon. About 12 m. on the same day I discovered that the Indians had separated, each taking a different direction. I followed the trail of one until dark, the trail continuing in the direction of the Guadalupe Mountains. This day's march was very fatiguing on the men, for the country was so rocky that the men's shoes were nearly worn out, having barely leather enough left in their shoes to keep the rocks from cutting their feet. April 17, busy all day hunting for the trail of the Indians, which was impossible to find. Owing to the extreme rocky country, which extended for several miles on all sides, my men were not able to discover the track of an Indian anywhere. April 18, supposing that the Indians had turned off in the direction of Dog Cañon, I raised camp at daylight and marched about eighteen miles in that direction, when I camped, not being able to go any farther on account of the condition of the men's shoes. April 19, raised camp at daylight, marched in a due west course about twenty-two miles, and camped. I was not able to follow any trails on account of their having been obliterated and grown over with weeds and grass, not having been traveled by the Indians for a considerable time. April 20, raised camp at daylight and marched twenty-three miles. I found that I had left Dog Cañon to my right. I camped that night at the foot of the mountains in front of San Augustine Spring. April 21, raised camp at daylight and marched along the foot of the mountains to the mouth of Dog Cañon, where I camped; distance traveled, about twenty miles. No trails discovered at the mouth of this cañon. April 22, raised camp at daylight and marched to the Tularosa, where I camped. April 23, remained in camp all day on account of the bad state of the men's shoes, many of their feet having been pierced by prickly pears; also to give them time to repair their shoes. April 24, raised camp at daylight, marched about twenty-one miles, and camped at the head of the Tularosa. April 25, raised camp at daylight and arrived at this post at 4 p.m. During the last five days of the campaign I was obliged to place some of the men on mules, they were so much given out.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES M. HUBBELL,
First Lieut., First Cav. New Mexico Vols., Comdg. Company H.

Capt. WILLIAM BRADY,
First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, Commanding Post.
APRIL 15, 1865.—Skirmish at McKenzie's Creek, near Patterson, Mo.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Capt. James Smith, Seventh Kansas Cavalry.

No. 1.

FREDERICKTOWN, Mo., April 20, 1865.

Captain Smith, at Patterson, reports that Lieutenant Crane, Seventh Kansas, with twenty men and Captain Leeper as guide, on the 15th instant surprised a camp of guerrillas on McKenzie's Creek, killing 4 and capturing 6 horses. Some of the prominent citizens of Fredericktown are desirous of organizing a company of mounted militia for self-protection. I would recommend such authority to be given. One battalion of Seventeenth Illinois are en route for the Cape; the balance of regiment will be as soon as they get in from the outposts. To relieve them I was compelled to call in the companies of Seventh Kansas at Farmington and Fredericktown. I shall leave one officer and seventeen men of Seventeenth Illinois here for a few days until some other disposition can be made. It is important that the infantry should be hastened to the Knob, and the commissions for officers of mounted militia be hurried up. I shall proceed to the Cape to-day.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,

Brevet Brigadier-General.

Maj. H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 2.

PATTERTON, Mo., April 18, 1865.

On the 15th instant, scouts reporting fifteen guerrillas on McKenzie's Creek, I immediately dispatched a scouting party of twenty men under Lieutenant Crane in pursuit, who surprised them in their camp, killing 4, and capturing 6 horses, together with a quantity of articles taken from the citizens, which have been returned to the proper owners. The services of Captain Leeper added greatly to the success.

JAMES SMITH,

Captain, Commanding.

Col. F. M. MALONE,
Pilot Knob, Mo.
APRIL 19-23, 1865.—Expedition from Memphis, Tenn., to Brownsville, Miss.

Hdqrs. Cavalry Division, Dist. of West Tennessee, Memphis, Tenn., April 23, 1865.

Major: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to Special Orders, No. 102, from your headquarters, I proceeded as follows: By steamer John Raine and barges—Fourth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, 250 men, Major Search; Third U. S. Colored Cavalry, 250 men, Lieutenant-Colonel Cook. By steamers Sallie List, Dove, and Pocahontas—Eleventh Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, 200 men, Major Davis. Disembarking the Third U. S. Colored Cavalry at Randolph, Lieutenant-Colonel Cook proceeded via Covington to Brownsville Landing, capturing one Wilcox, alias J. M. Luxton, who was in command of seven others, whom he was unable to capture. He could not reach the Brownsville Landing, the country being flooded. Lieutenant-Colonel Funke, in command of the troops sent up Hatchie River, proceeded up the Hatchie River, but the boats being unwieldy, pilots not acquainted with the river, made but little progress, and in order to reach Brownsville Landing to co-operate with the Fourth Illinois Cavalry he disembarked at Van Buren’s Landing, marching from there to Brownsville, arriving there on the 21st. The Fourth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, Major Search, disembarked at Fulton, which place was reached on the 19th at 2 p.m. At 3 p.m. the command moved to Brownsville, reaching that place at daylight on the 20th, capturing at that place nine prisoners (as per inclosed roll of prisoners of war*) and Col. B. J. Lea, Capt. E. J. Martin (commissary of subsistence), and Lieut. S. M. Russell. The Fourth and Eleventh Illinois returned to Fulton in the afternoon of the 22d and embarked. The Sylph and Annie E., with Dove, Pocahontas, and Sallie List, arrived at mouth of Hatchie River at about the same time. Arriving at Randolph, Wilcox, alias Luxton, was tried by drumhead court-martial (inclosed please find proceedings*), and at 6.30 was, by my order, hung by the neck until he was dead, and left hanging as a warning to his brethren in crime. The command arrived at Memphis with total loss of one man, accidentally wounded and left. Eight horses died from buffalo gnat, and gained on the expedition twelve horses. People of the country were extremely friendly, and those in the vicinity of Brownsville can hereafter, in my opinion, take care of themselves. I am under obligations to the commanding officers of gun-boats 57 and 58 for valuable assistance.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. OSBAND,
Brevet Brigadier-General, Commanding Cavalry Division.

Maj. W. H. Morgan,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

*Omitted.
EXPEDITION FROM TERRE BONNE, LA.

APRIL 19-25, 1865.—Expedition from Terre Bonne to Pelton's Plantation and Grand Caillou, La.

HDQRS. COMPANY M, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Terre Bonne, La., April 29, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, pursuant to instructions from headquarters post Terre Bonne, dated April 19, 1865, whereby I was to proceed, with a portion of my command, to Pelton's plantation, below Houma, La., for the purpose of protecting a schooner laden with molasses to go from said plantation to New Orleans, I left Terre Bonne with twenty-four men and two non-commissioned officers April 19, 1865, at 5 p.m., and arrived in Houma at 9.30 p.m., where we encamped for the night. April 20, left Houma at 9 a.m. and arrived at Pelton's plantation at 3 p.m., seventeen miles below Houma, where we found the schooner waiting for fair wind, the wind being ahead, and hence we were obliged to encamp at Pelton's for the night. Next morning, the wind being favorable, everything was got in readiness for the trip. Taking fifteen men and leaving the balance in charge of the horses until our return, we embarked on the schooner at 10.30 (April 21) and proceeded down Grand Caillou toward the Gulf, a distance of seventeen miles, where, owing to the darkness, we were obliged to anchor for the night. April 22, got the vessel under way at sunrise and continued our run down the bayou. We arrived at the mouth of Grand Caillou at 9 a.m. and went outside with the schooner, seeing her safely over the bar, some six miles at sea. No rebels, or any signs of them, were seen during the entire course. At 10 a.m. we left the schooner in a small sail-boat, which was taken from Mr. Pelton's plantation for the purpose of conveying us back again. The wind being ahead, we were compelled to beat the boat back into the bayou. After hard pulling and towing the boat with a rope from the bank, we made some seventeen miles, and went into camp on the bayou at the house of an old Frenchman, where we were refreshed with supper and a good night's rest. April 23, at 9 a.m. we resumed our course for Pelton's plantation, which we finally reached after six hours' hard pulling against wind and tide. Mr. Pelton was glad to see us on our return, and served up a good dinner to both officers and men. Possessing a plenty with which to accommodate both men and horses, he insisted on our remaining with him all night, and the men being very tired I cheerfully accepted his proposition. April 24, at 9 a.m. left Pelton's plantation for Houma, where we arrived at 3 p.m., and went into camp for the night. April 25, resumed our march at 9 a.m., and arrived in Terre Bonne at 1 p.m., not having seen or heard anything of the enemy during our entire march. And here I would add a word relative to Mr. Pelton. Too much cannot be said in his praise for the bountiful hospitality extended to myself and command during our late visit to his plantation. The men did not take sufficient rations with them to last the entire march, because on the day we started our ration period expired, and consequently there was not enough on hand; therefore we were dependent upon Mr. Pelton's bounty, which, I am happy to say, was heartily rendered.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. A. RHODES,

Captain, Comdg. Company M, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. C. S. COOPER,
Post Adjutant.
APRIL 18–MAY 27, 1865.—Negotiations for the surrender of the Confederate forces in the Trans-Mississippi Department commanded by General E. Kirby Smith, C. S. Army.

REPORTS.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, April 20, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant,
Commander-in-Chief of U. S. Forces, Washington, D. C.:

General: I have the honor to transmit inclosed a copy of my letter to General E. Kirby Smith, offering the terms accorded by you to General R. E. Lee; also a copy of my letter of instructions to Colonel Sprague. Colonel Sprague left yesterday for mouth of Red River.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., April 19, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. E. Kirby Smith,
Comdg. Confederate Forces, Trans-Mississippi Department:

General: I have the honor to transmit inclosed for your information, by the hands of Col. John T. Sprague, U. S. Army, the chief of my staff, certified copies* of a correspondence between Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant, General-in-Chief of the Armies of the United States, and General R. E. Lee, General-in-Chief of the Confederate Armies, leading to the capitulation of the latter with the Army of Northern Virginia. Official communications received to-day inform me that negotiations leading to the same result are in progress between Maj. Gen. William T. Sherman, commanding U. S. forces in North Carolina, and General J. E. Johnston, commanding Confederate forces in the same section of country. Authentic, though not official, information has also reached here of the surrender of Mobile, with its garrison, to Major-General Canby, U. S. Army. In view of these results, accomplished and in progress of speedy accomplishment, I am authorized by the General-in-Chief of the Armies of the United States to offer to yourself and the army under your command the same terms accorded to and accepted by General R. E. Lee. It seems not improper for me to invite your attention to the fact that a large part of the great armies of the United States are now available for operations in the Trans-Mississippi Department; that they are sufficiently strong to render effective resistance impossible, and that, by prolonging a contest, now manifestly hopeless for any of the purposes for which it was inaugurated, you will be made responsible for unnecessary bloodshed and for the devastation and suffering which must follow the movement of large armies into Texas and extensive military operations in that State. By accepting the terms proposed you will preserve Western Louisiana and Texas from the devastation and misery which have been the lot of nearly every Southern State east of the Mississippi, and you will aid in restoring peace to this distracted country. The duty of an officer is performed and his honor maintained when he has prolonged resistance until all hope of success has been lost. Any further continuance of hostilities simply leads to the certainty of inflicting upon a people incapable of successful resistance all the horrors of violent subjugation. Wisdom and humanity alike require that this contest, under the circumstances, be brought to an end without further suffering or shedding of blood. I am unwilling that it should be charged upon the military authorities of this military division that they omitted a single effort to restore peace without further bloodshed. In all good faith and earnestness, therefore, I proffer you the terms accepted by your General-in-Chief and beg to express the hope that you will accept them and spare the necessity of further hostile operations. Colonel Sprague is empowered to make all necessary arrangements in perfecting the object of his mission.

* Not found as inclosures, but see Vol. XLVI, Part III, pp. 619, 641, 664–666.
NEGOTIATIONS FOR SURRENDER.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., April 19, 1865.

Lt. Col. J. T. SPRAGUE:

COLONEL: You will please proceed with the least practicable delay to the most accessible point of the enemy's lines along the Red River and deliver into the hands of General Kirby Smith the inclosed letter.* In any conversation you may have with him or others in authority it must be carefully borne in mind that the arrangement proposed in the letter referred to is purely military and in no manner relates to civilians or civil affairs. It may be well for you to suggest, in any conference on the subject, though only in the way of suggestion and without committing the Government to any future policy, that the terms now offered to the rebel army under Kirby Smith or others in Western Louisiana and Texas are much more favorable than they are at all likely to have acceded to them if, by prolonging useless hostilities or maintaining a hostile position, they force the United States to concentrate large forces and complete preparations necessary for a decisive campaign into Texas. These preparations completed and the campaign opened, terms will be directed [dictated] after the violent occupation and consequent devastation of Texas, and they will be such terms as the changed circumstances render desirable, probably very different from the terms now offered. In case Kirby Smith, or any of his officers, whilst accepting these terms for those under their command, prefer to withdraw themselves to Mexico or any other foreign country without being subject to the parole, you will not oppose any considerable objection. It is possible that the rebel army in Southern Arkansas and Louisiana may prefer to break up its organization, the officers and soldiers dispersing and returning to their homes without surrendering or giving paroles, leaving their arms and the public property (artillery,  munitions of war, &c.), to be taken possession of by the U. S. authorities. Of course such a result, though very desirable, should not be made the subject of any written agreement or official understanding. It is also possible that they may propose to march off in an organized body, more or less strong, with all the material of war they can transport into Mexico, and thus practically abandon their hostile position to the United States and their attempt to cover Louisiana and Texas. In all these cases it is indispensable that you do not in any manner commit the United States Government to any policy. The only written agreement you can properly make or that you are empowered to make is substantially that concluded by the General-in-Chief with General R. E. Lee in Virginia. It will be safe for you, in case any of the propositions herein specified are advanced, to say simply that if it becomes manifest soon to the military authorities of this military division that the rebel armies [under] the general command of Kirby Smith have dispersed and that the posts of Texas are no longer in possession of a military force in hostility to the General Government, it is your opinion that only sufficient force will be sent to garrison important points in the States of Texas and Louisiana, and that these forces will no doubt be selected from the best disciplined troops, who will not molest private property or interfere with citizens except so far as directed to do so by the authorities in Washington. It might be well to allude to the assassination of the President and the deep feeling it has created throughout the United States, which feeling will undoubtedly be heavily visited upon those who continue to resist the authority of the United States, to whom the mass of people in the North attribute, however remotely, the atrocious deed. I only make these remarks as suggestions, which are to be used carefully and judiciously, if used at all, and only in the way of conversation which does not commit the authorities to any statement or the expression of any belief or intention based thereon. If the enemy accept the offer contained in my letter to General Kirby Smith you will make immediate arrangements to take the paroles of all concerned. In all respects you are charged with completing the arrangements proposed.

* See next, ante.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,

Major-General, Commanding.

No. 2.

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., May 27, 1865.

GENERAL: In compliance with your instructions of April 20 [19], I proceeded to the mouth of Red River and sent a messenger to General E. Kirby Smith, commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department, with a private note expressing my desire to see him upon important public business. In reply, he dispatched a steamer to the mouth of Red River with two officers of his staff. They reported to me that they had come for the purpose of receiving any dispatches I might have for General Smith. I declined delivering them, as I wished to see General Smith myself, as I had much to say beyond the contents of my dispatches. After consultation they concluded to conduct me to General Smith's headquarters, at Shreveport, La. Upon reaching there I placed in the hands of General Smith a copy of the correspondence between Lieutenant-General Grant and General R. E. Lee, commanding the Confederate forces in the field in the vicinity of Richmond, Va. His answer I have the honor to inclose herewith. My conversations were frequent and very full with General Smith, as well as with many other officers of rank in that service, in relation to the demand made; but the prevailing opinion was that more liberal terms should be granted to the Army of the Trans-Mississippi Department than those accepted by General Lee. The inclosed copies of papers obtained by me during my repeated conversations with the military and civil authorities of the Trans-Mississippi Department give more fully the character of my interview with them than any detailed statement I can make in this communication. At all times I declined entertaining their various propositions, which they deemed so necessary in vindication of their honor, in securing to the Trans-Mississippi Department peace and prosperity. I did not accede to the proposition that His Excellency Governor Allen, of Louisiana, should accompany me to your headquarters, thence to Washington City. I did not feel at liberty to give a safeguard to the governor of a rebel State.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN T. SPRAGUE,

Lieutenant-Colonel, U. S. Army, and Chief of Staff.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Commanding, &c., Saint Louis, Mo.

[Incloure No. 1.]

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., May 9, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Commanding Military Division of the Missouri, Saint Louis:

GENERAL: Your communication of the 19th ultimo by the hands of Col. John T. Sprague, U. S. Army, was received last evening. Your propositions for the surrender of the troops under my command are not such that my sense of duty and honor will permit me to accept. I regret that your communication should have been accompanied with a threat, or that you should have supposed that personal considerations would have influenced me in the discharge of my duties.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

[Incloure No. 2.]

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., May 9, 1865.

Their Excellencies HENRY W. ALLEN, Governor of Louisiana; PENDETON MURRHAH, Governor of Texas; H. FLANAGIN, Governor of Arkansas, and THOMAS C. REYNOLDS, Governor of Missouri:

GENTLEMEN: The surrender of General Lee, and the perilous situation of the armies in North Carolina and Alabama, seem to preclude the probability of successful resistance in the States east of the Mississippi. The army under my command yet remains strong, fresh, and well equipped. The disparity of numbers, though great, between it and our enemies may be counterbalanced by valor and skill. Under these circumstances it is my purpose to defend your soil and the civil and political rights of our people to the utmost extent of our resources, and to try and maintain untarnished the reputation which our soldiers have so nobly won in many fields. In order, however, to accomplish this great object it will require the perfect concord of the civil and military authorities, the application of all our energies, and the united and devoted support of the people. The Trans-Mississippi Department is so separated from the States on the eastern side of [the] Mississippi that communication is suspended. Since the evacuation of Richmond, the seat of government of the Confederate States has not been fixed, and it may be transferred to the western side of the Mississippi. It is impossible to confer with the President so as to meet the exigencies of the times, and questions of grave political importance beyond any military authority may arise and require prompt decision. Intending to uphold the authority of the Confederate Government by arms to the utmost, I yet feel that I should carefully avoid any appearance of usurping functions not intrusted to my discretion. Under these circumstances I esteem it my duty to consult you, in the absence of the President, as the chief magistrates of the States within the department, touching such important matters as are not embraced in my powers as commanding general and as may conduce to the common defense and welfare. I have therefore requested you to assemble in conference, when I will furnish any information in my power which may be useful in your deliberations; and without proffering suggestions, ask you to indicate such policy as you may deem necessary to maintain with honor and success the sacred cause in which we are engaged.

I have the honor to remain, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH,
General.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

MARSHALL, TEX., May 13, 1865.

We advise General E. Kirby Smith, commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department, to accept the following terms, in order that peace may be restored to the country:

First. On or about the —— day of —— that the commanding general will disband his armies in this department; officers and men to return immediately to their former homes, or such as they may select, within the now existing lines of the Confederate States, or the United States, and there to remain as good citizens, freed from all disabilities, and restored to all the rights of citizenship; the U. S. troops and authorities not to advance within the Confederate lines till after that day.

Second. Guarantees to be given that no officer, non-commissioned officer, private, or citizen shall be prosecuted in any courts for offenses committed against the United States during this war.

Third. That permission be granted to all persons (officers, civil and military), soldiers, and citizens to leave this department within —— days, through its ports or boundaries, with their arms and effects, unmolested, and go to any place, state, or country beyond the limits of the United States.

Fourth. That the present State governments in this department, now in arms against the U. S. authority, be recognized until conventions can be called with the view of finally settling any and all conflicts between the people of the respective States.

Fifth. That on or before the —— day of —— all military authority shall be surrendered to the several States, and that each State shall keep and retain —— number of men to act as a guard to preserve good order and to protect the lives and the property of the people; that a safeguard, to extend for —— days, be granted to the officers of state and others to leave the country, in case they should wish to do so. The above terms will be acceptable to the people of Louisiana.

HENRY W. ALLEN,
Governor of Louisiana.

A surrender upon the above terms will be acceptable.

H. FLANAGIN,
Governor of Arkansas.

[Inclosure No. 4.]

MARSHALL, TEX., MAY 13, 1865.

His Excellency HENRY W. ALLEN,
Governor of Louisiana:

Sir: With a view to making a complete pacification of the Trans-Mississippi Department we request you to visit the U. S. authorities. You are fully possessed of the views of each of us in writing, and we confide in your patriotism and ability. Trusting to your judgment, we will sustain your engagements in the premises.

We are, sir, very respectfully, yours,

H. FLANAGIN,
Governor of Arkansas.

THOS. C. REYNOLDS,
Governor of Missouri.

GUY M. BRYAN,
Agent State of Texas, &c.

[Inclosure No. 5.]

Memorandum for the Marshall conference.

MARSHALL, TEX., MAY 10, 1865.

The position of the Missourians both in the army and in civil life in this department is this: The people and authorities of the territory held by the Confederacy should decide whether they will continue the war. If it is to be continued, we will stand by them faithfully to the last. Should the war be discontinued, we desire time and facilities and supplies to leave the country with our personal property.

THOS. C. REYNOLDS,
Governor of Missouri.

[Inclosure No. 6.]

HEADQUARTERS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT,
Shreveport, La., May 15, 1865.

Col. J. T. SPRAGUE, U. S. Army:

COLONEL: I have had the honor to return my official reply to the demand of Major-General Pope, under instructions from Lieutenant-General Grant, for the surrender of this Department. An unofficial conversation ensued between us, in which I frankly admitted the force of recent events in the States east of the Mississippi, and you expressed a warm and benevolent desire to avoid further effusion of blood and the infliction of useless suffering upon the people. I had before your arrival convened the governors of the States composing my department for the purpose of consulting with them in reference to public affairs and questions more properly belonging to the civil than the military authorities. Having expressed a desire to ascertain the result before your departure, you were invited to remain. Since that time I have conferred fully with the governors of the States of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Missouri. The Governor of Texas, being ill, was represented by one of his staff officers. The governors so assembled have, after consideration, presented certain measures which they deem necessary to the public order and the proper security of their people, and which, if accepted, would authorize me to relinquish further resistance. Governor Allen of Louisiana, with whom you had conferences before the meeting, is fully informed of the views entertained by himself and the governors of the other States. Believing it to be the most expeditious way to arrive at a definite understanding as to the course to be pursued, it is desired that he should accompany you for the purpose of presenting to the proper authorities the terms for their consideration. In the event that the terms proposed by the governors should be accepted by the authorities of the United States I shall deem it my duty to support those views. It is expected, in the event of the propositions conveyed by Governor Allen being considered by the authorities of the United States, that aggressive movements against this department should be suspended.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. KIRBY SMITH.

NOTE.—The application of Governor Allen to accompany me to Washington I did not see fit to comply with.

JOHN T. SPRAGUE,

Lieutenant-Colonel, U. S. Army, and Chief of Staff.

[Incloure No. 7.]

Memorandum for Colonel Sprague.

The terms proposed by General Pope, considering that my army was menaced only from a distance, that it is large and well supplied and in an extensive country full of resources, were not such as a soldier could honorably accept. An officer can honorably surrender his command when he has resisted to the utmost of his power and no hopes rest upon his further efforts. It cannot be said that the duty imposed upon me has been fulfilled to the extent required by the laws of honorable warfare. To have conceded the terms demanded would, therefore, have dishonored the commander who submitted to them. It is not contended that the Trans-Mississippi Department can without assistance accomplish its independence against the whole power of the United States. It is conceded that its people, its army, and its commander desire to avoid the unnecessary effusion of blood and the attendant devastation of the country. It must also be conceded, on the other hand, that they desire to maintain their honor, without which life would lose its attractions. As the commander of the military forces, I cannot accept terms which will purchase a certain degree of immunity from devastation at the expense of the honor of its army. While we do not expect to win unaided the independence of the country, it must be conceded that the army can be beaten and the country overrun only after great and expensive preparations by the United States, affording opportunities for the development of political complications which it is the interest of the United States to avoid. If, then, it be an object on the one hand to avoid the devastation of our country, it is equally an object on the part of the United States to bring about the complete pacification of the country and the restoration of their authority without cost to themselves and without incurring the risk of political complications. It is thought that a proper course on the part of the United States would accomplish this result. An army which is well appointed and supplied, not immediately threatened, and with its communications open, cannot afford to surrender as prisoners of war. They must first be placed in such a position that their capture is a necessity. The demand to surrender, under present circumstances, is not deemed reasonable, and it is not in accordance with the laws which custom has made binding amongst nations and military men. The effect of such a demand is to leave an impression that there is a wish on the part of the victorious Government not to pacify the country and lead to a restoration of former relations, but to humiliate a people who have contended gallantly in behalf of principles which they believe to be right. It is thought that correct views of statesmanship would induce propositions on the part of the United States which, while it saved the honor of the Confederate Army, would also lead to the speedy pacification of the Trans-Mississippi Department. It is the determination of the military authorities not to submit to ignominious terms; it is their wish also to hasten the pacification of the country by every means consistent with their honor. The following propositions are of a character so reasonable under the circumstances that it is difficult to conceive of any objection being urged to them:

First. The U. S. authorities to grant immunity from prosecution for past acts to all officers and soldiers and citizens in the Trans-Mississippi Department Second. On the granting of this immunity all military resistance to the United States Government to cease.

Third. The Confederate Army to be disbanded and its officers and soldiers be permitted to return to their homes, transportation to be furnished them as far as practicable.

Fourth. Such officers and soldiers as choose will be permitted, without molestation, to leave the country, with or without their arms, in a reasonable time.

Fifth. The same permission to be granted to citizens.

Many examples of history teach that the more generous the terms proposed by a victorious enemy the greater is the certainty of a speedy and lasting pacification, and that the imposition of harsh terms leads invariably to subsequent disturbances. The propositions above mentioned contain terms which the Trans-Mississippi Department can rightly claim and the United States Government can justly concede.

E. KIRBY SMITH.

ADDENDA.*

Houston, Tex., May 30, 1865.

Col. John T. Sprague, U. S. Army:

Colonel: When I gave you, at Shreveport, a memorandum which I hoped might be the basis of negotiations with the United States Government, I commanded an army of over 50,000 men and a department rich in resources. I am now without either. The army in Texas disbanded before my arrival here. From one extremity of the department to the other the troops, with unexampled unanimity of action, have dissolved all military organization, seized the public property, and scattered to their homes. Abandoned and mortified, left without either men or material, I feel powerless to do good for my country and humiliated by the acts of a people I was striving to benefit. The department is now open to occupation by your Government. The citizen and soldier alike, weary of war, are ready to accept the authority and yield obedience to the laws of the United States. A conciliatory policy, dictated by wisdom and administered with patient moderation, will insure peace and secure quiet. An opposite course will rekindle the flames of civil war with a fierceness and intensity unknown even in this sad and unfortunate struggle. I myself shall go abroad until the future policy of the United States Government toward the South is announced, and will return to my family only when I can do so with security to my life and person.

Thanking you for your kindness to my wife, I remain, colonel, your friend,

E. KIRBY SMITH.

P. S.—Since writing the above I have information that the Missouri and a portion of the Arkansas troops still retain their organization.

E. K. S.

APRIL 21-22, 1865.—Expedition from Donaldsonville to Bayou Goula, La.

Hdqrs. Detach. Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infty.,
Donaldsonville, La., April 22, 1865.

Sir: In compliance with instructions received, at 11 a.m. 21st instant I proceeded, with Companies B and K of my command, on a scout toward Bayou Goula for the purpose of capturing or destroying a small guerrilla band under Captain Brown. I had proceeded about ten miles when my advance guard discovered three of the enemy, who turned and fled when fired upon, after returning the fire. After chasing them about three miles we captured one of them at the Andrews plantation. Pursued the other two about—— farther, when they left the river road and took to the swamps, leaving their horses, which fell into our hands. I then proceeded to Bayou Goula, arriving about dark. Found none of the guerrilla band in the place. I then sent Lieutenant Weston with Company B back to Madam Randolph's lane to scour that neighborhood. With Company K I then proceeded to Mr. Ventress'; captured two men of Brown's command at his house. From Ventress' I went to Madam Randolph's back plantation; searched the place thoroughly, but found nothing. I then went through a dense canebrake, which was almost impassable, to Richard Thompson's plantation. After searching the place and finding no enemy I returned to the river road by way of Madam Randolph's home plantation. In the meantime one of the prisoners was lost in the woods. In my opinion he will not be seen again in the vicinity of Bayou Goula. We captured on the trip 5 horses, 1 of which had to be left on the road, as he was so much run down that he was unable to travel; also captured 1 Burnside carbine and 3 revolvers. Arrived at camp at 12 m. to-day.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. HILDRETH,
Major Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.
APRIL 21-27, 1865.—Scout from Rolla toward Thomasville, Mo., with skirmish at Spring Valley (23d).

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. John Morrill, Sixty-fourth Illinois Infantry, commanding District of Rolla.
No. 2.—Capt. Frederick W. Becker, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., April 28, 1865.

Major: I have the honor to report, for the information of the major-general commanding, that Captain Becker's company (M), Thirteenth Regiment Cavalry Missouri Veteran Volunteers, which I sent on a scout on the 21st instant toward Thomasville, Mo., returned last night. Captain Becker reports that a band of guerrillas attacked his company at Spring Valley, thirty miles south of Licking. He pursued them, and in a running fight killed eight guerrillas. No casualties on our side.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN MORRILL, Colonel Sixty-fourth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, Commanding.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.

No. 2.

Report of Capt. Frederick W. Becker, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry.

CAMP THIRTEENTH MISSOURI CAVALRY VOLUNTEERS,
Rolla, Mo., April 27, 1865.

Lieutenant: In obedience to instructions from the colonel commanding district, I have the honor to make the following report:

On the morning of the 21st instant I left camp with my company, with five days' rations for men; marched to Licking, Mo.; arrived there on the 22d instant. On the morning of the 23d I left with sixty-four men and marched south thirty miles and encamped in Spring Valley. About midnight a party of bushwhackers attempted to get in my camp, but were observed by the guards and fired upon. I sent a party on foot in the direction in which they fled and succeeded in killing two of the party. On the morning of the 24th instant I tracked the same party, I supposed, and followed them to Current River. There they separated. I captured two men, who were equipped and claimed to belong to the Confederate Army, Captain Orchard's company. They tried to escape and were killed by my men in the attempt. Encamped on Current River. On the 25th 1 marched in the direction of Thomasville some twenty miles. Finding that my horses were getting bare-footed, and not being prepared to reshoe them, I returned to Current River. Killed 3 men that day; they were running from me; were mounted; 2 of their horses were killed, 1 captured; encamped on Sink-
On the 26th instant I sent a sergeant and ten men in the advance toward Black River. Two guerrillas ran from a house; one escaped and the other was killed. Some of my horses were getting lame, so I marched in direction of Rolla by the way of Meramec River. Arrived at Rolla on the evening of the 27th instant. I captured 5 horses and saddles, but was unable to bring 4, 2 being killed and 2 broke loose; 1 I have in my possession.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FRED. W. BECKER,
Captain Company M, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry.

Lieut. H. W. Werth,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Rolla.

APRIL 22, 1865.—Skirmish near Linn Creek, Mo.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. John Morrill, Sixty-fourth Illinois Infantry, commanding District of Rolla.
No. 2.—Maj. James M. Turley, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS,
Rolla, April 23, 1865.

A scouting party just returned from Linn Creek to Waynesville reports the rebels attacked the militia near that place yesterday. Killed over seven of the men, wounded the captain, and stampeded the rest. There are about 200 rebels, in five parties, all going north. Ninety crossed the Osage last night below Linn Creek. I am making every effort to strike them. We need horses badly.

JOHN MORRILL,
Colonel.

Major-General Dodge.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF WAYNESVILLE,
Waynesville, Mo., April 23, 1865.

One of my scouts just returned from Linn Creek. The rebels attacked the militia near that place yesterday; killed seven of the men, wounded the captain, and stampeded the rest. I have Captain Moore and Lieutenant Kelley out in that direction with scouts. I have not got enough men mounted to do the scouting that is necessary at this post. There are about 200 of the rebels, in four or five squads, all going north. Ninety crossed the Osage last night below Linn Creek.

J. M. TURLEY,
Major, Commanding.

Col. JOHN MORRILL,
Commanding District of Rolla.
APRIL 22, 1865.—Skirmish near the mouth of the Big Gravois, Mo.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Maj. John Small, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS: DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., April 23, 1865.

Major Small, commanding detachment of the Sixteenth Cavalry Volunteers, came up with a party of fifty guerrillas near the Osage, opposite the mouth of the Big Gravois, and killed ten of them, including Captains Eountree and Martin. I have not received any further particulars of the fight yet.

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Major BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,
Lebanon, Mo., April 25, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I started from this place on the [20th instant] after a band of rebels reported to be in eight miles of this place. They were reported to number 100, robbing houses and taking horses. I started with detachments of Companies H, B, I, and L, numbering in all about twenty-five men, with two commissioned officers, Captain Sallee, of Company B, and R. D. Mayes, of Company L, all of the Sixteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers. I started at 9 p. m. We traveled about eight miles before we struck their trail, and followed their trail all that night over very rough ground. They traveled in most all directions. The waters being up made it very difficult to gain much on them. We had to swim the Wet Glass. Near the mouth it was about fifty yards wide, and the banks being steep we were some time in getting across. We were in hearing when Captain Bollinger, from Linn Creek, attacked them, and we could not get to him for the high waters. The rebels held the ground, killing Captain Jeffery and three soldiers, one discharged from Wood's Battalion, Sixth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, and the other two of Captain Bollinger's company. Captain Bollinger was wounded in the shoulder. Captain Bollinger had twenty-four men; Captain Jeffery had six or eight citizens with him. The rebels did not tarry long after the fight. We traveled until about 10 o'clock that night, when it got so dark and the hills so rough I was compelled to stop for the night. On the morning of the 22d we came on the rebels a little before sunrise—they were crossing the Osage River—just as the skiff left the shore. The most of them had crossed. Then the firing commenced, which lasted some thirty minutes. They returned the fire for some time, but soon found out that they had different men to fight to what they had been fighting the day before. They had all the advantage of me. They took shelter under the banks of the river, and we charged them. A part of my men dismounted and went down the banks to rake up their old acquaintance. I saw twelve or fifteen afoot, and we had them hemmed so that they had no chance but to take the water or be killed, and that quick; there were two of them stripped off their clothes and one of them made it across the river. He was the only man that made it across that I saw. The river was very full and the current swift and cold. The number killed was 6 on the bank and 4 in the skiff. The skiff had six in it when it started; two of them got out of it on the shore and made their escape, and it floated off with four dead rebels and a load of saddles and blankets. I captured fifteen horses and some revolvers, though the most of them I think they threw them in the river. In looking along the bank of the river Captain Chitwood found two rebels hidden under the water by the side of a log. One of the men who was with him fired and killed one. The other was Captain Martin. He stated if the whole command had him on the same side that they would have sold out to us in a different way. He stated there would be two more squads along in a few days, and also that Price's army was breaking up into small bands of from 50 to 100, and that when we ran across them they would sell out to us very dear. They were crossing the Osage at Mining Post, about eight miles below Linn Creek.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN SMALL,
Major, Commanding Post at Lebanon, Mo.

Capt. W. T. KITTREDGE,
Springfield, Mo.

APRIL 22–23, 1865.—Scout from Deer Creek to Sage Creek, Dak. Ter., and skirmish with Indians (22d) on Sage Creek.

DEER CREEK, DAK. TER., April 24, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in compliance with instructions from Lieutenant-Colonel Baumer, commanding sub-district, I started north from this station at about 2 p. m. April 22, with thirty-five men, to overtake, if possible, a party of Indians who have been committing depredations on La Prelle Creek, and who are supposed to have gone north. I went into camp on Sage Creek, about twenty miles from this station, at sundown, not having crossed their trail up to that time. About 9 o'clock in the night we were attacked by a large party of Cheyenne and Sioux Indians, numbering from 50 to 100 warriors, well armed with guns and revolvers, but repulsed them, after a brisk fight of a few minutes, without loss to ourselves, owning, doubtless, to the Indians being on higher ground, causing most of their shots to pass over us. I think the Indians suffered considerable loss, but cannot tell how great, as they removed all their killed and wounded as soon as they fell. During the fight a part of our horses stampeded, five of which we could not again find. Deeming it not prudent to remain where my position was so well known, I moved camp a short distance, after collecting what horses I could find, and sending to this station for re-enforcements, which reached me early in the morning on the 23d, when I pursued the Indians with fifty mounted men until further pursuit was useless, as the Indians had scattered into small squads going north, northwest, and northeast, and east, when I returned to this station, having traveled between eighty and ninety miles.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. A. ADAMS,

Lieut. Col. P. B. PLUMB,
Commanding Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry.

APRIL 22–27, 1865.—Scout from Dakota City, Nebr. Ter., to Middle Bow River.

HEADQUARTERS POST DAKOTA,
Dakota City, Nebr. Ter., April 27, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in accordance with intentions as reported in my last, I went out on scout with a detachment of twenty-four men from headquarters this post, and having ordered Lieut. J. M. Nosler, commanding Post Jackson, to meet me with fifteen men of his command on the headwaters of the East Bow River, I proceeded westerly up Elk Creek, thence southwest around the head of the South Fork of Iowa Creek; formed the junction with Lieutenant Nosler on the third day at the point designated. Proceeded thence west across the hills to the Wakapana Bow; thence up that stream about fifteen miles; thence west across the hills to Rocky Branch; thence down that stream ten miles; thence west along a fresh Indian trail to the West or Middle Bow River, where we captured the Indians (about thirty Omahas). They told of a party of Poncas about fifteen miles farther up the West Bow, which I also sent up and captured. I brought them to Post Jackson, where I had a talk with the Poncas, and having told them that this country was given me to protect, I should not allow any Indians to be roaming, camping, nor trapping in it, but should endeavor to keep them all, both hostile and friendly Indians, out of this country, as the settlers, in the present excited, unsettled state of affairs among the Indians, were afraid of them all and did not want any of them around the settlements. I then sent the Poncas toward their reserve. Having some charges against the Omahas, I brought them as prisoners to headquarters this post (Dakota) and sent them to their agency under a strong guard, with a copy of the accusations against them. Upon arriving within the limits of their reserve the Indians claimed that they were on their own lands, and we had nothing further to do with them, and as they did not want to meet their agent as prisoners, refused to go; but a spirited application of halter, strap, and boot toes caused them to resume their march, and they were delivered to Col. R. W. Furnas, U. S. military agent. While out on the scout the weather was very cold and stormy, first rain, then snow fell to three inches depth, and the wind was very severe.
withstanding all these we continued our search, traveled a wild country without roads, built our bridges, cut down hills, and worked our way as we encountered obstructions. Was out six days and traveled about 200 miles, exclusive of guarding the Indians to the Omaha Agency.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. JACKSON,

Captain, First Battalion Nebraska Vet. Cav., Comdg. Post.

ADDENDA.

OMAHA AGENCY, April 27, 1865.

Capt. Z. JACKSON,

Commanding Post Dakota:

SIR: I hereby acknowledge the receipt, at the hands of Sergeant McNatt, party of Omahas you arrested and sent down. Rest assured that I will do my duty in regard to the matter and endeavor to secure for the injured parties a just remuneration. Will you inform the injured parties, Donalan and Ryan, to send in their bills for damages claimed? Have them fix the sum at the actual value of property lost and destroyed, and I will endeavor to have it allowed as soon as possible.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

R. W. FURNAS,
U. S. Indian Agent.

APRIL 23, 1865.—Affair near Fort Zarah, Kans.

Reports of Lieut. Richard W. Jenkins, Second Colorado Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Zarah, Kans., April 23, 1865.

Bvt. Brig. Gen. JAMES H. FORD,
Fort Larned, Kans.:

GENERAL: The inclosed dispatch just received from Lieutenant Jenkins, who left here yesterday noon with twenty-five men to escort Kitchen's train to Cow Creek. I instructed the lieutenant to abandon the train at Cow Creek and bring the coach, which would be due there about the time he arrived, to this post.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. PRITCHARD,
Major, Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Post.

[Inclosure.]

FIVE MILES BELOW BULWARK BUTTES, April 23, 1865.

SIR: I send by messenger to inform you that the train under my charge was attacked about daybreak this morning. Five Mexicans are missing; four of them have been found killed and scalped. The men that are killed were driving the cang yarde, or herd, just behind the train. No one saw the Indians, or heard of it, until two Mexicans came up that went to sleep on herd last night and were left behind this morning. They found two men lying by the side of the road and reported it. The train was in advance of me, having left about 1 o'clock this morning, contrary to positive orders not to start until after daylight. I have the train all together now, and shall keep it so until
I get to Cow Creek. I saw one Indian to the north of me about one hour ago. The herders have just come in and report seeing two Indians south of us. I write this on my knee; I don’t know whether you can read it.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

R. W. JENKINS,
First Lieutenant, Second Colorado Cavalry.

Maj. J. L. PRITCHARD.

FORT ZARAH, KANS., APRIL 24, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report for the information of the major commanding the post:

Pursuant to instructions received from him April 22, 1865, I left here with twenty-five enlisted men at 1 p.m. of that day to escort a train to Cow Creek, on the Santa Fé road. I marched seven miles and found the train encamped, and also went into camp near them for the night, and gave orders to the wagon-master of train not to move until daylight of the 23d April. I prepared for the march at sunrise, and then found that the train had moved between 1 and 2 a.m. Proceeding immediately down the road about nine miles, I found the loose stock belonging to the train near the road and the herdsmen (four Mexicans) killed and scalped. I soon learned from the men with the train that they had started about 1 a.m., driving the loose stock in advance. The men in charge of the stock stopped near the Plum Buttes and built a fire; about daylight the wagons passed them. Soon after a party of Indians, supposed to be some fourteen or fifteen in number, dashed upon them and killed and scalped the four herdsmen. No one belonging to the train saw the transaction, and no one of the herdsmen escaped alive to tell the tale. Having buried the murdered Mexicans, I went on and escorted the train to Cow Creek. April 24, 1865: I left Cow Creek this morning at 9 a.m. with the mail stage, and escorting it to this post, we arrived at Fort Zarah at 1.30 p.m.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. W. JENKINS,

APRIL 23, 1865.—Skirmish on Snake Creek, Ark.

HDQRS. THIRD BRIG., THIRD DIV., SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Gibson, C. N., April 25, 1865.

SIR: The first rebel scout, consisting of eighteen men, trying to push through to Benton County, Ark., with a rebel mail, was met by a scouting party from this place on Snake Creek, fifty-eight miles southwest, on the 23d instant. A company of infantry was some miles behind them. The scouts killed three rebels, left dead on the field; they suppose they wounded several others. The rebel mail was captured, and the fragments of the party driven back again. The rebels left Boggy Depot on the 16th. One citizen scout was shot above the knee, not dangerously. Grand River has been very high; is still high, though falling. Verdigris is also up. As the only way of crossing Arkansas River at present is high up, I am watching my right flank closely. In addition to the troops and scouts already out there, I sent off two other companies, under Captain Anderson, last night. I have instructed them to watch the river as far as the Cimarron.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel, Commanding.

Brigadier-General BUSSEY,
Commanding Third Division, Seventh Army Corps.

APRIL 24, 1865.—Skirmish near Boggy Depot, Ind. Ter.

HQRS. THIRD DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, April 27, 1865. (Received 11.15 a. m. 28th.)

Twenty rebels going north from Boggy Depot were attacked by my scouts fifty miles south three days since and three rebels killed and a small mail captured. The letters all speak of a combined movement of the rebel army to Missouri, to start about the 1st of May—33,000 infantry and 7,000 cavalry under Kirby Smith, Price, Parsons, Shelby, and company; at the same time a large force of wild Indians were to move into Kansas from Fort Arbuckle. An order was read to the rebel troops at Boggy announcing that General Lee had assumed command of all the Confederate forces, and that there was no hope of peace, except to fight for it. The letters were written by soldiers, and the reports are mere camp rumors. A letter from a rebel paymaster states that Stand Watie is coming up to cross the Arkansas River as soon as grass will subsist their horses, and that their horses would arrive at Boggy from forage camps in Texas by the 25th instant. They had no news of the capture of Richmond or Lee's army. I have scouts in that direction. I expect a considerable force will soon be up this way, but have no idea the rebel army will try to go to Missouri. In my opinion the line of the Arkansas should be strengthened by the addition of more troops, if they can be had.

Respectfully, &c.,

CYRUS BUSSEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

APRIL 24, 1865.—Skirmish near Miami, Mo.

WARRENSBURG, April 26, 1865—9.30 p. m.

Captain Felker, Company A, Forty-eighth Wisconsin, reports that on the 24th instant he had a skirmish with thirteen bushwhackers, killing seven of them and capturing all their horses and horse equipments. Captain Felker's company was one sent to Miami.

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel, &c.

Major BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
DESTRUCTION OF THE STEAMER WEBB.

APRIL 24, 1865.—Destruction of the Confederate Steamer Webb.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Allan Pinkerton.

No. 1.

NAVAL HEADQUARTERS,

[April 24, 1865.]

I have the pleasure of informing you that the ram Webb, when about twenty-five miles below here, at a place called McCall's Point, on the left bank of the river, [was] chased by the Hollyhock and headed off by the Richmond. She had 250 bales of cotton and a quantity of turpentine and rosin, and was commanded by C. W. Read, formerly of the U. S. Navy. All escaped to the brush except two, now prisoners of war on board the Lackawanna. She had three guns, and was trying to run the blockade. Further particulars will be obtained from the prisoners. A few men of the infantry would soon take every man. Forty-five were on board, all told. They ran her up high and dry. At 4.30 she blew up.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

H. K. THATCHER,
Acting Rear-Admiral.

P. S.—She had three guns and was struck twice by our guns in passing the city. Meeting the Richmond alone caused her destruction.

No. 2.

Report of Allan Pinkerton.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE PROVOST-MARSHAL-GENERAL,
New Orleans, April 25, 1865.

COLONEL: On the 24th instant the rebel ram Webb passed New Orleans under rebel colors and was pursued by the U. S. gun-boat Hollyhock. About twenty-five miles below the city, having come in sight of the U. S. gun-boat Richmond, the Webb was set on fire by her officers and then ran ashore on the left bank of the Mississippi. The officers and crew then abandoned her, endeavoring to make their escape, fifteen of whom afterward surrendered to the U. S. authorities as prisoners of war and were brought under guard to your office. I have the honor to report that three of the fifteen, being apparently the most intelligent, viz, George Price, pilot; John C. Osborne, paymaster's steward, and J. C. Hines, hospital steward, were, at your request, examined by me, and stated that the rebel ram Webb left Shreveport, La., on the 7th instant, going down the Red River, her destination not being known to any of the crew, all information on this point being carefully withheld from the men. About fifteen days before the departure of the Webb from Shreveport, where she had been lying in port for the last two years, her officers were changed, her crew only remaining. At that time Lieut. Commander C. W. Read, with Lieutenant Wall and Past Midshipman Scott, took command of the Webb, none of the old officers remaining. On the arrival of the Webb at Alexandria she loaded with cotton and took on a large supply of fuel, about 200 cords of wood, mostly pine knots. While at Alexandria they first heard of the assassination of President Lincoln, but none of the crew being allowed to go ashore or communicate with the citizens they had no means of learning how that intelligence was received by the people, nor could they learn the strength of the Confederate forces and fortifications there. No passengers got on at Alexandria, nor were there any passengers on her at any time. Between Shreveport and Alexandria there are two Confederate gun-boats, the Missouri and Merite, the former of which is clad with T-iron rails, with an armament of six guns; the latter is a common steam-boat, walled up with thick timber. There are also about fifteen transports on Red River in the Confederate Government service, and one, the Twilight, on the Ouachita River.

On Sunday, 23d instant, at 4.30 a.m. the Webb left Alexandria and came down the Red River about fifteen miles, where she stopped and took on board the pilot, George Price, who says that he belonged to Captain White's steam-boat battalion, stationed at Marksville, La., and had received an order to join the Webb at Alexandria, and on his way to Alexandria he met the Webb coming down. He signalled to her and she landed and took him on board. That his services had been engaged with a view to take the Webb through Atchafalaya Bayou into Berwick's Bay and from thence into the Gulf, as he was acquainted with these waters, but when he came on board the Webb and ascertained that she drew over ten feet of water he informed the officers that the route was impracticable; and the Webb then kept on down the Red River, with her cargo of cotton arranged for defense against attack, her armament being two 12-pounder howitzers aft and one 4-inch rifle forward and a torpedo projecting from the bow supported by a long pole. In her magazine were three boxes of shells and three 100-pound kegs of powder. Sixty-eight rations were issued to officers and men. Before entering the Mississippi, about three miles from the mouth of Red River, a flat-boat laden with cotton was captured by the Webb, and a small boat with officers and men from a U. S. gun-boat, being near by, made their escape up a bayou. The flat-boat and men on it were held by the Webb until dark, when they were turned adrift. This was done in order to prevent the men from crossing over by land and giving information to the U. S. gun-boats. At 8.30 p.m. the Webb, carrying the usual signal lights used by Federal boats, entered the Mississippi, passing the U. S. gun-boats stationed at the mouth of the Red River, and when nearly out of range a shell was fired at the Webb, which exploded about 400 yards from her, and she thus passed all the U. S. gun-boats, not having been hailed or molested by any of them. About every ten or fifteen miles the Webb sent a party ashore to cut the telegraph wires, and at one time some men from a woodpile approached them, when the officer in command presented a musket and frightened them away. At another time, near the mouth of Red River, when an attempt was made to cut the wires, a party of colored soldiers who happened to be near prevented the design.

About ten miles above the fortifications of New Orleans the Webb hoisted the U. S. flag at half-mast and raised steam to the highest pressure, so that she was running twenty-five miles an hour while passing the city, which was about 12 m. (24th instant). The true character of the Webb having been made known to the U. S. gun-boats, several shots were fired after her, three of which struck her, the first entering her bow about a foot above water, deranging the fixtures by which the torpedo was attached to the bows, swinging it around and under the Webb, thereby endangering the safety of the boat, so that she was stopped and the torpedo cut loose. This did not occupy more than two or three minutes. The second shot passed the chimney, severing one of the chains by which it was supported, and wounding a man slightly by a flying link of the severed chain. The third shot struck a bale of cotton and did little or no damage. As soon as the first shot was fired at the Webb the U.S. flag was lowered and the rebel flag raised, by order of Captain Read. The Webb was then followed by a U.S. gun-boat. It was the intention of the officers of the Webb to wait until dark before attempting to pass Forts Jackson and Saint Philip, and it was decided by them that they would turn back and capture the pursuing gun-boat, which would occupy their time until dark, but unexpectedly coming in sight of the U.S. sloop of war Richmond the order was given to turn the boat up the river, and after some deliberation the Webb was set on fire by the officers and crew and ran ashore. As soon as she was ashore the Richmond and the pursuing gun-boat commenced firing on her.

After the officers and crew had got safely to the shore Captain Read advised them to separate, as they would be thus less liable to capture, and, acting upon this suggestion, the aforesaid George Price, J. C. Hines, and John C. Osborne, together with twelve others, endeavored to make their escape through the country, but finding it difficult to evade the Louisiana swamps, became disgusted with the enterprise and concluded to surrender themselves prisoners of war to the U.S. authorities. Lieutenant-Commanding Read is about twenty-five years of age, five feet seven inches high, sandy complexion, slim build, light hair, sandy whiskers, and no mustache. Lieutenant Wall is about twenty-five years of age, five feet seven inches high, light complexion, brown hair, and clean shaven. Smith, Marsh, and Lewis were engineers; Price and Lewis were pilots; Blanc was master. The first names of those parties was not remembered. J. C. Hines, the hospital steward, states that in one of the Confederate hospitals at Shreveport, where he was stationed, there were 200 patients, and that sickness prevailed to a considerable extent in the Confederate army. The statements of the aforesaid three prisoners harmonized upon all the material points, and they further stated that the sentiment of the people, as far as they had observed, in regard to the rebellion was divided, some looking upon the Southern Confederacy as a failure and others expressing a wish to continue the war.

All of which is respectfully submitted by your obedient servant,

ALLAN PINKERTON.

Lient. Col. W. H. WOOD,
Provost-Marshal-General, Mil. Div. of West Mis., New Orleans.

No. 3.

C. S. STEAMER MISSOURI,
Alexandria, La., April 28, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to state that the C. S. steamer Webb, commanded by Lieut. C. W. Read, left this place at 4 a.m. on the 23d instant for the purpose of proceeding to sea via New Orleans. I have since learned that she succeeded in passing New Orleans, but twenty-four miles below that place she met the U. S. steamer Richmond. The Richmond fired a broadside into the Webb, when Lieutenant Read ran the latter into the left bank, set her on fire, and succeeded in escaping with all of his officers and crew, except two of the latter, who were captured by the enemy. The vessel was a total loss. No further information has reached me. The Missouri is still at this place, but as the military authorities manifest a disposition to abandon lower Red River I shall be compelled, perhaps, to move up the river. It is my present intention to select some point above where the river is narrow and where the Missouri will be much more formidable than she is at this place. The surrender of General Lee has produced much demoralization in this department, but I am gratified to state that it is limited to those who are not in the army.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. CARTER,
Lieutenant, Commanding Naval Defenses, Western Louisiana.

Hon. S. R. MALLORY,
Secretary of the Navy.

ADDENDA.

C. S. STEAMER WEBB,
Alexandria, Red River, April 22, 1865.

Hon. S. R. MALLORY,
Secretary of the Navy:

SIR: In pursuance of the instructions given me by you, I have reported, together with the officers ordered with me, to Lieut. Commanding Jonathan Carter for duty on this vessel. Accordingly, I took command of this ship, relieving Lieut. Commanding J. L. Phillips on the 31st ultimo. On assuming command I found the vessel totally unprepared for the service upon which I was ordered to take her, without a single gun on board, little or no crew, no fuel, and no small-arms save a few cutlasses, and as the vessel was some eight miles below Shreveport on her way here I was obliged to return to the first-named place, where I expected to obtain all my wants from General Kirby Smith, commanding this department. I was not deceived in my hopes of General Smith's assistance, that general immediately issuing orders for every facility to be given me toward the fitting out of the vessel. From him I procured one 30-pounder Parrott, for a bow pivot, and two small iron 12-pounders that may serve me in bringing to vessels, &c. Carpenters were obtained and hastened in their work, as the rapid fall of this river made me apprehensive of serious impediment to the future execution of my instructions. On returning down the river I filled up every available place in the ship with wood, not finding more than one day's coal, which, together with the wood, will give me fuel for about five days. I have likewise taken on board 190 bales of cotton, which serves as a very efficient shield to the machinery, backed as it is by twelve inches of pine bulkheads entirely surrounding the engine room. The great amount of wood I have been obliged to stow with the cotton causes an average draft of nine and a half feet, about two feet more than when light. This increase in depth immerses the buckets on the wheels so much as to enforce the necessity of lifting much weight in the passage of the buckets from the water up, thus impeding the progress of the vessel a little, which could be gotten over had I the time to shift the buckets a few inches farther up the wheel arms. Accompanying is a roll of the officers and men now on board.* I regret the necessity of leaving without Lieutenants Roby and McDermitt and Assistant Paymaster Vasser, who have not yet reported, though long since ordered. I have but two engineers understanding the machinery of the vessel, and two young third assistants, whom I cannot trust alone in the engine room for some time as yet. The two former will, therefore, be obliged to remain on watch whilst going out and whilst the double engines are unconnected, it not being advisable to work them connected when there exists a probability for rapid maneuvering. When going through Mobile I applied to Flag Officer Farrand for two engineers, there then being several on no important duty; but that officer showed so little disposition to grant my request that I was obliged to proceed without them, notwithstanding that Mr. Frick, chief engineer of the station, informed me that those for whom I had applied could easily be spared. Thus apprised of my condition, you will be enabled to better account for any accident that may result from the step I propose taking to-night, starting from this point down, so as to reach the mouth of the Red in time to commence the downward passage of the Mississippi to-morrow about 8 p.m. Off the mouth of the Red lie the Tennessee, Manhattan (monitor), and Lafayette, iron-clads, and one boiler-iron plated gun-boat, the Gazelle. The distance from the mouth of the Red to the mouth of the Mississippi is about 300 miles, and at regular distances in most of this length there are one or two of the enemy's gun-boats. To be the first to notify these of my approach is my chief aim; toward effecting this I have arranged with General Thomas to cut the wires as far down as Plaquemine by 8 p.m. to-morrow. I shall myself cut the wires below that place, and shall take every precaution to prevent the forts (Jackson and Saint Philip) from being informed of my movements, as these formidable fortifications will have to be passed in daylight. As I will have to stake everything upon speed and time, I will not attack any vessel in the passage unless I perceive a possibility of her arresting my progress. In this event I am prepared with five torpedoes (100 pounds), one of which I hold shipped on its pole on the bow. The cipher key to my future communications with you has been placed in the hands of Lieut. Commanding Jonathan Carter, who will forward the same. I must acknowledge the readiness with which Lieutenant Commanding Carter has answered to my applications for assistance.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. READ,
Lieutenant, Commanding.

Captain Carter had in view some time since the movement which I now propose to make. He had the torpedoes completed, and the lumber to make the necessary bulkheads was being sawed. These preparations were of great assistance to me.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. READ,
Lieutenant, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

Forwarded by your obedient servant.

J. H. CARTER,
Lieutenant, Commanding Naval District, Western Louisiana.

* Nominal roll, omitted, shows 17 officers and 51 men.
APRIL 25, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Rodgers' Plantation, Ark., with skirmish at Rodgers' Plantation.

PINE BLUFF, ARK. April 27, 1865.

CAPTAIN: In compliance with your request of this date, I have the honor to make the following report:

On the 25th instant I started with Lieutenant Kennedy and twenty-six men of the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry. Arrived at John Taylor's plantation about 11 a.m., where I met Lieutenant Ferris and Captain Young, who informed me that Lieutenant Dixon, with seven men (rebels), had gone up Bayou Bartholomew. Here Captain Young joined me, when I proceeded directly to Busby's Bridge, and found the party had an hour the start of me. I crossed as soon as possible and proceeded to the Widow Davis', where I learned that no party had passed there. I then struck across the country to one Rodgers', where I overtook Lieutenant Dixon with his party, when a slight skirmish ensued, resulting in the capture of two Confederates and seriously wounding another; took two horses from the enemy and recovered two negroes and two horses captured by the enemy in the morning of the same day. Returned with prisoners to Busby's Bridge and recrossed; took down the bayou; came out on the main road at McGhee's, where I learned that Captain Kidd with sixteen men had passed about two hours previous. Also learned that Lieutenant Dixon and three men had passed about an hour previous. Knowing that they had enough the start to cross the bayou at Busby's before I could get there, I deemed it inadvisable to follow them, and returned to Pine Bluff. The two prisoners captured admitted to Captain Young and Lieutenant Kennedy that they were deserters from the rebel army. I cannot speak too highly of the conduct of Captain Young, Lieutenant Kennedy, and the men comprising the expedition, and the creditable manner in which they all performed their duty. Mr. Monk has since informed me that the party took about $100 in greenbacks from him, and threatened to hang him, and got a rope for that purpose, because he would not give them more.

I have the honor to be, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. W. MALLORY,
Capt. S. MONTE CAMBERN,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Post Pine Bluff, Ark.

APRIL 26, 1865.—Affair near Fort Rice, Dak. Ter.

HEADQUARTERS POST COMMANDANT,
Fort Rice, Dak. Ter., April 29, 1865.

Since my last communication of April 18, 1865, I have learned that the Indians who made the attack and killed two of my men were Cheyennes or Platte River Indians. On the 26th instant a party of some 300 Indians attacked our mounted infantry, who were herding their horses about a mile from the post. The herders numbered some seven men, all told. Immediately on seeing the Indians they picketed their horses on a hill and stood ready for the attack. The Indians made several impetuous charges, but were each time repulsed, our men using their rifles at long range and pistols when at close quarters. Their loss was eight killed and wounded, while on our side the casualties were but one man wounded, Private Watson, Company E, First U. S. Volunteer Infantry, severely, in breast. Two horses and two mules captured. Simultaneously with the above a party of Indians attacked our loggers in the woods, but were repulsed with a loss of three of their number. Toward night a party appeared on the hills in sight of the fort. A few shells thrown among them soon made them disappear. As soon as darkness set in I dispatched two companies of infantry in different directions, to act as scouts, in order to try and ambuscade them, and after staying out all night they returned to the post unsuccessful. As soon as Captain Moreland's company of cavalry arrives from above I hope to be able to assume the offensive. I cannot speak too highly in praise of that small band of soldiers who so signally repulsed such a large body of Indians. They were within sight of the post while the several charges were made, and directly under my own eye. They appeared cool, calm, and collected, determined not to give an inch of ground. They carried out implicitly my orders and instructions to them in regard to Indian fighting. Judging from their boldness I am led to believe that a large body of Indians are encamped near this post. I think they have learned a lesson, for since the 26th instant only a few Indians have been seen, at long distances and away from reach of my guns. Capt. N. B. Greer, commanding Post Fort Union, arrived at this post on the 23d instant on leave of absence, based on surgeon's certificate of scurvy. He reports all quiet above.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. A. R. DIMON,
Colonel First U. S. Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.

Maj. DE WITT C. CRAM,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Iowa.

APRIL 26-29, 1865.—Scout from Little Rock to the Saline River, Ark.

Report of Maj. Harris S. Greeno, Fourth Arkansas Cavalry (Union).

CAMP FOURTH ARKANSAS CAVALRY,
Little Rock, Ark., April 29, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that I have just returned from a scout to the Saline River, having left camp on the 26th instant at 7 a.m., in pursuance of orders from post headquarters. My command consisted of 120 of the Fourth Arkansas Cavalry and forty men of Captain Miller's company of independent scouts. I marched to Benton, and from that place scouted the country thoroughly down Saline River twenty-five miles near Jenkins' Ferry. Near Steel's Mill, on the Saline River, we killed one man by the name of Dick Crossen, said to be a captain of a bushwhacking company and a very bad man. He had upon his person a pass from Major-General Fagan to go in charge of a scouting party to the Arkansas River and return. We also wounded two other men, one, by the name of Barnes, so severely
I was compelled to leave him. The other wounded man escaped, and I was unable to learn his name. I could hear of no parties of the enemy on this side of the Saline River. I am well satisfied there was no force of any kind in the country through which I passed. I should have crossed the Saline River and made a vigorous search for Crawford's command had it not been for the fact that the river was nearly past fording and prospects fair for a heavy rise, in which case I could not have recrossed for several days; in fact, the river was rising at the time I was there. It affords me much pleasure to be able to report the fact that I sustained no loss, either of men or horses. My horses all came back in good condition, though I found forage very scarce.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. S. GREENO,

Major, Fourth Arkansas Cavalry.

Lieut. A. S. KENDRICK,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Post Little Rock.

APRIL 27, 1865.—Loss of the Steamer Sultana in the Mississippi River, near Memphis, Tenn.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Maj. Gen. Napoleon J. T. Dana, U. S. Army, commanding Department of Mississippi.

No. 5.—Actg. Ensign James H. Berry, U. S. Navy.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,

Vicksburg, May 8, 1865.

In compliance with your verbal request this morning, I have the honor to report as follows regarding the shipment of paroled Federal prisoners from here:

The commissary of musters of this department, Capt. George A. Williams, First U. S. Infantry, was, by my order, in the latter part of March, placed in charge of the duties pertaining to an assistant commissioner of exchange, with a view to transaction of business with the rebel agents then in charge of Federal prisoners of war who were arriving under flag of truce. The rebel commissioners having positively declined to turn over any prisoners till they received an equivalent, Captain Williams was sent first to Mobile and then to Cairo, to communicate with Major-General Canby, Lieutenant-General Grant, and Brigadier-General Hoffman. During his absence Capt. Frederic Speed, assistant adjutant-general of this department, at his own suggestion, was assigned by me to the performance of Captain Williams' duties, and took entire charge of the receiving of prisoners from the rebel agents.
and of sending them to the parole camps at the North. During Captain Williams' absence at the North orders were received through me by the rebel officials from Colonel Ould, rebel commissioner, by which they were induced to parole the prisoners, and I then ordered Captain Speed to prepare their rolls as rapidly as possible and send them North as rapidly as the rolls could be prepared, calculating, as near as circumstances would permit, about 1,000 at a load for the regular packets as they passed. The first load which was sent North was expected to be about 800, as that was about the number for which rolls were completed when the Henry Ames was expected. She was delayed, however, and by the time she was ready to leave the rolls were ready for upward of 1,300, and she carried them off. I had taken great interest in expediting the departure of these brave fellows to their homes, and I went down to see this load start. The next load was by the steam-boat Olive Branch, which arrived so soon after the departure of the Ames that rolls for only about 700 were ready for her. After she left Captain Speed came to me in considerable indignation and asked for authority to place Captain Kerns, the quartermaster of transportation at this post, in arrest. He stated that he had ordered all boats to be reported to him immediately on arrival, and to await orders; that this boat had arrived in the middle of the night and had not been reported to him till 8 o'clock next morning; and that she had been unnecessarily detained after being loaded; and that he had been informed that this delay was made because she did not belong to the line which had the Government contract, and that the contract line had offered a pecuniary consideration per capita for the men to be kept for their boats; and the intention was to detain the Olive Branch till one of the contract line came along to take the load from her. I directed him not to arrest Captain Kerns till he was satisfied, upon proper investigation, that the reports he had heard were well founded. The next boat was the Sultana, and she arrived so soon after the departure of the Olive Branch that Captain Speed reported to me that rolls for only about 300 men could be prepared, and that therefore none would go by her, but they would wait for the next boat. Captain Williams had arrived from the North in the night.

Soon after making his first report Captain Speed came to my office and reported that he had consulted with Captain Williams, and had decided to ship all the balance of prisoners on the Sultana, as Captain Williams had advised that they be counted and checked as they went on board and he would prepare the rolls afterward. I expressed satisfaction at this, and asked how many there would be, and he replied about 1,300—not to exceed 1,400; that the exact number could not be stated owing to discrepancies in the rebel rolls. About the middle of the day Captain Williams came and reported that the captain of the Sultana said he would leave in an hour or two, and that a large proportion of the men were still out at the parole camp and he did not believe that proper exertions were being made to get them off, and that he had been informed that a pecuniary consideration had been offered per capita for the detention of the men and shipment of them on the other line, and that he thought Captain Speed was practicing delay purposely for the detention of the men till the Sultana should leave and a boat of the other line arrive. I then informed Captain Williams of what Captain Speed had previously reported regarding Captain Kerns and his clerks, and stated that I thought he had the rumor wrong. He promised to investigate it, and afterward reported to me that he was entirely mistaken in regard to Captain Speed. I also ordered a telegram to be sent to Captain Speed informing him that the boat would leave in an hour or two, and inquiring if any more men would go by her. After dark Captain Speed reported that all the men were in from camp. Up to this moment I considered that he had performed his difficult task with great satisfaction and efficiency. The next morning on visiting my office I inquired of Captain Speed whether the boat had left and was informed she had. I then inquired as to the exact number of men she had taken, and was astonished to hear that there were 1,900. Having never seen the boat, I inquired as to her capacity and as to the comfort of the men, and was assured by both Captain Speed and Captain Williams that the load was not large for the boat; that the men were comfortable and not overcrowded, and that there were very few boats which had so much room for troops as the Sultana. I had first intrusted the whole exchange business to Captain Williams, but he having left, Captain Speed was placed in charge of it in addition to his other duties by my orders. He assumed and managed it, as I thought, with ability, and I never had any report or complaint further than is stated above prior to the deplorable calamity to the boat, and was not informed of any other circumstances in the details of the whole matter.

I am, very respectfully, &c.,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

Brig. Gen. W. HOFFMAN, U. S. Army,
Commissary-General of Prisoners.

[First indorsement.]

VICKSBURG, MISS., May 7 [8], 1865.

Will General Dana please state what officer or officers he considers responsible for the shipment of the paroled troops within referred to, and for the proper character of the transportation?

Very respectfully,

W. HOFFMAN,
Commissary-General of Prisoners.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Vicksburg, May 8, 1865.

Respectfully returned to Brigadier-General Hoffman. Captain Speed was intrusted with the transfer and shipment of the prisoners, and assumed full and active management and control of it, and I therefore considered him fully responsible therefor. The quartermaster's department was ordered to provide the transportation, and I consider Captain Kerns, quartermaster in charge of transportation, responsible for the character of it.

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE,
Memphis, Tenn., May 23, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of the testimony taken in regard to the destruction of the ill-fated steamer Sultana; also the report of the commission appointed to investigate the matter.* This commission had been organized by me before your order was received. It appears from the testimony and report, as you will observe, that the explosion was occasioned by the want of water in the boilers. It is also shown that the boilers were defective and known to be so, and that the vessel was detained thirty-three hours at Vicksburg for the purpose of repairing them, and that they were imperfectly repaired. The quartermaster's department at Vicksburg is censured in the report of the commission for not having remonstrated with greater earnestness against the placing of so many men on one boat when there were other boats present and anxious to take a portion of the soldiers on the same terms. I think this censure is not deserved. It is plain that Colonel Hatch, chief quartermaster of the department, and Captain Kerns, master of transportation, said all that was necessary for them to say, to have a portion of the troops placed upon the steamer Pauline Carroll, and that they interested themselves to such an extent as to draw upon themselves the accusation of receiving bribes from parties interested in the boat, of which there is no proof. The business was taken out of their hands of shipping these troops as it had been in previous instances by the assistant adjutant-general of the department, whose orders must be presumed to have been by order of the commanding general, and not to be resisted by the quartermaster. There appears to have been a general suspicion on both sides that bribery was being used. Each party was accusing the other, but there is no proof to sustain such accusations or suspicions. All the parties belonging to the boat who were in any wise responsible for the disaster lost their lives at the time of the explosion or have since died.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. C. WASHBURN,
Major-General.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

No. 3.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSARY-GENERAL OF PRISONERS,
Washington, D. C., May 19, 1865.

SIR: Pursuant to your instructions of the 30th ultimo, I proceeded direct to Memphis, Tenn., and Vicksburg, Miss., to inquire into the circumstances of the destruction of the steamer Sultana in the Mississippi River near Memphis on the 24th [27th] ultimo, by which calamity a large number of paroled prisoners, who had embarked on her at Vicksburg, lost their lives, and I have the honor to submit the following report of the result of my investigations:

At Memphis I learned that a court of inquiry had been ordered by Major-General Washburn, commanding District of West Tennessee, to investigate the facts and circumstances of the burning of the Sultana,

---

*The proceedings and report of the commission were referred, by order of the Secretary of War, to the commanding general Department of Mississippi, July 29, 1865, and never received back. Another copy was forwarded to the War Department by the Commissary-General of Prisoners. See Hoffman's report, p. 217:
and at Vicksburg I learned that a commission had been ordered by Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, to make a similar investigation. The court and the commission were about closing their proceedings when I arrived at Vicksburg, and finding upon a perusal of their records that all the testimony taken would be useful to me in forming an opinion as to the merits of the case, I determined to avail myself of a copy of them, which I was permitted to do through the courtesy of the generals by whom the investigations were made.
In addition to the above I obtained such further testimony that was within my reach as I thought necessary to a full understanding of the matter. Upon a careful consideration of all the facts as presented in the testimony herewith submitted, I am of the opinion that the shipment of so large a number of troops (1,860) on one boat was, under the circumstances, unnecessary, unjustifiable, and a great outrage on the troops. A proper order was issued by the general commanding the department for the embarkation of the paroled prisoners, and there were four officers of his staff who were responsible that this order was properly carried out, viz, Col. R. B. Hatch, captain in the quartermaster's department, chief quartermaster; Capt. Frederic Speed, assistant adjutant-general, U. S. Volunteers, adjutant-general Department of Mississippi; Capt. George A. Williams, First U. S. Infantry, commissary of musters and in charge of paroled prisoners, and Capt.
W. F. Kerns, assistant quartermaster, U. S. Volunteers, and master of transportation. If there was anything deficient or unsuitable in the character of the transportation furnished, one or more of these officers should be held accountable for the neglect.

The testimony shows that it was well understood by the four officers named that the troops in question were to embark in the Sultana. She was provided by the master of transportation, with the approval of the chief quartermaster, upon the order of General Dana, though not upon a formal requisition, and Captain Speed and Captain Williams were to superintend the embarkation. Nothing was known positively as to the number of men that were to go on board, but it was the impression that there would be from 1,200 to 1,500; nor was any inspection of the boat made by either of the officers above named to determine her capacity or her condition. Neither one of them knew whether she had proper apparatus for cooking for so many men or other necessary conveniences required for troops on transports. The troops were sent to the steamer from the camp in three parties, as is shown by the testimony of Mr.
Butler, superintendent of military railroads at Vicksburg, though Captain Speed and Captain Williams knew only of the first and third parties. The second party consisted of between 300 and 400 men. As the men were being embarked Captain Kerns seems to have been satisfied that too many were going on one boat, and he so reported to Colonel Hatch, who agreed with him in this belief but failed to interfere himself, as it was his duty to do, or to make any report of the matter to General Dana, because, as he states, he had had a day or two before some difficulty with Captain Speed about the shipment of troops.
There were two other steamers at the landing during the day, both of which would have taken a part of the men, and there was therefore no necessity for crowding them all on one boat. It only required an order from Colonel Hatch or a representation of the facts to the commanding general.

Both Captain Speed and Captain Williams acted under the impression that there were only about 1,400 men to be forwarded, and having also a conviction that bribery had been attempted to induce the shipment of part of the men on the Pauline Carroll, they, during the day, resisted the proposition to divide the command between the two boats, in the belief that in doing so they resisted an attempt at fraud. It was not until the troops were all on board that they became aware of the fearful load that was on the boat, and then they seemed to think it too late to make any change, but neither of them made any inspection of the boat to see whether there was room enough for every man to lie down. The testimony shows, and by a calculation of the area of the three decks, I am satisfied that there was scant sleeping room for all the men when every part of the boat, from the roof of the "Texas" to the main deck, was fully occupied. At night it was impossible to move about, and it was only with much difficulty that it could be done during the daytime. The cooking was done either by hot water taken from the boilers or at a small stove on the afterpart of the main deck, and owing to the limited nature of this arrangement, the difficulty of getting about the boat, and the want of camp kettles or mess pans, the cooking could not be very general. Before the troops embarked there were on the boat about sixty horses and mules and some hogs, 100 or more. The great weight on the upper deck made it necessary to set up stanchions in many places, in spite of which the deck perceptibly sagged. The impression seems to have been entertained that the paroled troops, having been so long suffering together in rebel prisons, were particularly anxious to go home together in the same boat, but there is no foundation for this belief. The men were exceedingly anxious to return to their homes and were willing to put up with many inconveniences, but they felt that they were treated with unkindness and harshness when they were crowded together in great discomfort on one boat when another equally good was lying alongside willing to take them.

From the foregoing I am of opinion that the four officers above-named are responsible for the embarkation of so large a number of troops on an unsuitable vessel, Colonel Hatch and Captain Speed being the most censurable. It was their duty especially to see that the service was properly performed. Captain Williams was assisting Captain Speed and seems to have felt that there was no special responsibility resting on him, but there was a manifest propriety in his knowing the number embarked, and if there was a deficiency of transportation he should have reported it. Captain Kerns made no inspection of the steamer to see that she was properly fitted up, but he did report her to Colonel Hatch, and also to General Smith, as being insufficient for so many troops, and his report should have been noticed. He made no report of the repairing of the boilers, which he seems to have been aware was going forward, and which it has not yet been decided positively was not the cause of the disaster. Lieut. W. H. Tillinghast, Sixty-sixth U. S. Colored Infantry, was the only other officer connected with this service, but he had no directing control. It is shown by his own testimony that a bribe was proffered to him to induce him to use his influence in having some of the troops shipped on the Pauline Carroll, which he showed a willingness to accept—at least he did not reject it—and which he failed to report until after the loss of the Sultana. The testimony of the four officers above referred to is very contradictory, and I have formed my opinion from the general tenor of the testimony and the circumstances of the embarkation. Brig. Gen. M. L. Smith, U. S. Volunteers, had command of the District of Vicksburg at the time, but he had nothing officially to do with the shipment of the troops; yet as it was officially reported to him by Captain Kerns that too many men were being put in the Sultana, it was proper that he should have satisfied himself from good authority whether there was sufficient grounds for the report, and if he found it so he should have interfered to have the evil remedied. Had he done so the lives of many men would have been saved.

In reference to the immediate cause of the calamity, the testimony which I have been able to collect does not enable me to form a positive opinion. The testimony of the two engineers of the Sultana and of the inspector at Saint Louis establishes that her boilers were in good condition on her leaving that port for New Orleans, and apparently continued so until her arrival within ten hours' run of Vicksburg, when a leak occurred in one of her boilers. On the arrival of the boat at Vicksburg this leak was repaired by a competent boiler maker, and was pronounced by him a good job, though he qualifies the character of the work by saying that to have been thorough and permanent the two sheets adjoining the leak should have been taken out, and that in its then condition it was not perfect. The first engineer, Mr. Wait-ringer, testifies that after leaving Vicksburg he watched the repaired part of the boiler, which was near the front end, just over the fire bars, carefully, and it did not at any time show the least sign of giving way. When he was relieved from charge of the engine by the second engineer the boilers were full of water and in good condition, and on their return to Memphis the second engineer, Mr. Clemmans, who, being on watch at the time of the explosion, was fatally scalded, told him before he died that the boilers were all right and full of water. I was told by another engineer at Cincinnati that he had said the same thing to another person on landing at Memphis, but this other person was not within my reach. There is nothing to show that there was any careening of the boat at the time of the disaster, or that she was running fast; on the contrary, it is shown that she was running evenly and not fast. A piece of boiler was obtained from the wreck, by order of General Washburn, which I examined. It seemed to have been broken from the bottom of the boiler the breadth of a sheet and torn tapering to near the top of the boiler, tearing the iron like paper, at times through the rivet holes and then through the middle of the sheet. The lower or wider end seems to have been exposed to the fire without the protection of water, and if so, this doubtless was the cause of the explosion. But this piece of iron may have been exposed to the fire of the burning vessel after the explosion, in which case some other cause must be found to account for it. The testimony of some of the most experienced engineers on the Western rivers is given, to throw some light on the matter, but until the boilers can all be examined no reliable conjecture can be made to account for the explosion. Thus far nothing has been discovered to show that the disaster was attributable to the imperfect patching. It is the common opinion among engineers that an explosion of steam boilers is impossible when they have the proper quantity of water in them, but the boilers may burst from an over-pressure of steam when they are full of water, owing to some defective part of the iron, in which case there is generally no other harm done than giving way of the defective part and the consequent escape of steam. One engineer, who is said to be the most reliable on the river, says that even in such a case the great power of the steam, having once found a yielding place, tears everything before it, producing the effect of an explosion, and his view seems to be reasonable. What is usually understood as the explosion of a boiler is caused by the sudden development of an intense steam by the water coming in contact with red-hot iron, which produces an effect like the firing of gunpowder in a mine, and the destruction of the boilers and the boat that carries them is the consequence.

The reports and testimony show that there were 1,866 troops on board the boat, including 33 paroled officers, 1 officer who had resigned, and the captain in charge of the guard. Of these, 765, including 16 officers, were saved, and 1,101, including 19 officers, were lost. There were 70 cabin passengers and 85 crew on board, of whom some 12 to 18 were saved, giving a loss of 137, making the total loss 1,238. I have the honor to submit herewith the following papers in support of the foregoing opinions, viz: Testimony taken before the court of inquiry ordered by Major-General Washburn, marked A;* testimony taken before the commission ordered by Major-General Dana, marked B;* testimony taken by myself, including testimony of Capt. James M. McCown, Sixth Kentucky Cavalry, taken before Colonel Badeau, of General Grant's staff, marked C;* and the report of Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, marked D.†

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. HOFFMAN,

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

No. 4.

BUREAU OF MILITARY JUSTICE,
June 21, 1866.

The following report in the case of Capt. Frederic Speed, assistant adjutant-general, U. S. Volunteers, is respectfully submitted:‡

Captain Speed was tried at Vicksburg, Miss., the trial commencing January 8, 1866, and terminating June 5, under the following charge: Neglect of duty, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. Specification 1 alleges, in substance, that accused "being charged by Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, with the duty of receiving certain officers and men in the military service of the United States, paroled as prisoners of war" by the Confederate authorities, and also being charged with the duty of superintending the transfer of said paroled prisoners from Four-Mile Bridge, near Vicksburg, to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., "did neglect to avail himself of the services of Capt. R. B. Hatch, assistant quartermaster, chief quartermaster of Department of Mississippi, and Capt. W. F. Kerns, assistant quartermaster, in charge of water transportation at Vicksburg, in procuring the necessary and safe transportation for the said paroled prisoners up the Mississippi River, but did himself assume to discharge the duties properly belonging to the aforesaid officers of the quartermaster's department by deciding and directing that a large detachment of said paroled prisoners, about 1,886 in number, should be transported northward in one steamer, the Sultana, against the advice and remonstrances of the aforesaid officers," thus greatly overloading the said steamer, which on her trip up the river exploded, whereupon about 1,100 men lost their lives who would not have so lost their lives but for the misconduct of the accused. This at Vicksburg on or about the 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th of April, 1865. Specification 2 alleges in substance that the accused "did assume unwarrantable authority in directing the arrangements for the transportation" of certain paroled prisoners, "and did without authority load and cause to be loaded a large number, to wit, 1,886, paroled prisoners on one boat, the steamer Sultana," being largely in excess of the number she could safely carry, "and when at the same time other and better conditioned boats were at the post of Vicksburg, ready and anxious to take a portion of said prisoners," the accused well knowing the same. "And Captain Speed, against the remonstrances of Captain Kerns, assistant quartermaster, against crowding so many men on one boat, did with criminal neglect and carelessness cause the whole number, to wit, 1,886 prisoners, to be placed on the said steamer; and afterward from the effects of which large load of paroled prisoners," the boilers of the Sultana exploded, whereby about 1,100 of said prisoners lost their lives. The court convicted the accused under the specifications and charge, striking out the words and clauses indicated above in red ink,* and sentenced him to be dismissed the service.

Major-General Wood, commanding the department, approves the proceedings, findings, and sentence, and forwards the record to the Secretary of War for final action. It is the opinion of this bureau, after a careful study of the record, that Captain Speed took no such part in the transportation of the prisoners in question as should render him amenable to punishment; that his connection with the events which preceded the disaster to the Sultana was a wholly subordinate one; and that the facts developed in the evidence point out with distinctness other officers, whose indifference to the comfort of those placed temporarily in their charge resulted in, though without causing, the death of over 1,100 of their number. An examination of the findings of the court, contrasted with the specifications as originally laid, will show, indeed, that this was in fact the opinion of the officers who composed it. The gist of the first specification is that accused neglected his duty in that he failed to avail himself of the services of Captain Hatch, chief quartermaster, and Captain Kerns, assistant quartermaster, in procuring safe transportation for the paroled prisoners, and did assume upon himself to discharge the duties properly belonging to them; and that against their advice and remonstrances he insisted on placing all the men on the Sultana. The court find that accused did not fail to avail himself of the services of Captain Hatch, who was at the head of the quartermaster's department at Vicksburg, but only of the services of Captain Kerns, who held a very subordinate position under Captain Hatch; while the evidence shows that the Sultana was selected by Captain Hatch, and that Captain Kerns only advised against placing the paroled men aboard of her in the evening of the day she sailed, when he saw the crowded condition of the men, and when it was impossible under the circumstances to divide them into two detachments. It is further shown by considerable testimony that Captain Williams, chief mustering officer on General Dana's staff, and commissioner of exchange, was present when the men were put on the Sultana, counted them as they went aboard, declared them to be comfortable, and insisted, in a conversation with Captain Kerns, that none should go on any other boat.

* Here printed in italics.
The gist of the charge being that accused assumed undue authority and neglected to consult the officers of the quartermaster's department, and the court finding that accused did in fact consult Captain Hatch, the officer who possessed exclusive authority in the premises, the accusation of neglect of duty, as laid in the first specification, manifestly fails to be sustained. The second specification substantially avers that accused, without authority, overloaded the Sultana, against Captain Kerns' remonstrances, and that his criminal neglect occasioned the explosion of the vessel. The court, in strict accordance with the proofs, find that accused acted with authority; that Captain Kerns did not remonstrate with him, and that the explosion was not the result of the overloading of the steamer. What ground remains for visiting Captain Speed with a dishonorable and lifelong punishment, in view of the light in which the court regard his acts, is difficult to discover. The evidence shows that accused was appointed verbally by General Dana to act as commissioner of exchange during the temporary absence of Captain Williams; that Captain Williams returned the day before the men were sent to Vicksburg to go North, and that he immediately resumed the duties of his office. It is shown that Captain Kerns advised with Captain Williams against so many men going on one vessel, and that the latter insisted, very angrily, that they should all go by the Sultana; and it is further shown, by abundant evidence, that the boat, though overcrowded, was not overloaded; that in shipments of troops by steamer no attention was ever paid, throughout the war, to the legal carrying capacity of the ship; that the Sultana ran smoothly on the trip; and finally that the explosion was owing, not to the excess in the number of men she was conveying, but to the fact that since her last official survey, made ten days previous, and at which she was pronounced to be staunch, &c., her boilers had been burned, through the probable carelessness of her engineer, and had been repaired imperfectly with a patch of thinner iron.

Terrible as was the disaster to the Sultana, there is no evidence that it was caused by the overcrowding of her decks, and it is therefore difficult to say upon whom the responsibility for the loss of 1,100 lives should really rest. The engineer testifies that he considered the boilers well and sufficiently repaired, but his criminality in risking the lives of so many men, knowing, as he did, the condition of his boat, was great and without palliation. Whoever should be regarded as meriting punishment for his connection with the event, it is believed that it is not Captain Speed. The selection of the Sultana is shown to have been made by Captain Hatch, the chief quartermaster, not by the accused. Captain Speed is shown to have been in frequent consultation with Captain Hatch, who, moreover, is proved to have previously promised a full load to the captain of the Sultana, and to have sent the latter to Captain Speed in reference to the matter. Captain Williams is shown to have taken almost the entire direction of affairs on his return from the North, and to have insisted that the prisoners should not be divided; and Captain Speed, the accused, is proven to have believed the control of the arrangements to be so completely taken out of his hands that he went to the Sultana while the men were going on board only through an accident, and performed no services while there, convinced that his duties had ended when he brought the prisoners from Four-Mile Bridge to Vicksburg, and that to the commissioner of exchange, Captain Williams, and the officers of the quartermaster's department belonged the additional duty of shipping them to the North.
It would be easy, though it would extend this report to too great a length, to introduce in full the testimony on which, in all these points, the judgment of this bureau is founded. It is believed to be unnecessary, however, inasmuch as the court have, by its findings, so emasculated the allegations of the charge as to absolve the accused of all responsibility for the catastrophe. Their findings under the specifications are believed to be fully warranted by the evidence, in the face of which they could scarcely have arrived at any different conclusions. How, then, however, they could proceed to inflict upon the accused a punishment so terrible for offenses of which they virtually find him not guilty, this bureau fails to understand. It is recommended that the sentence be disapproved and that Captain Speed be publicly exonerated from the charges which have been made against his character as an officer. It is not the design of this report to cast censure upon the conduct of Captain Williams. He is shown to have been absent at the North until the day before the steamer Sultana sailed with her living freight, and cannot, therefore, be held responsible for arrangements made before his return. His persistence in confining the entire detachment of paroled men to the Sultana is believed to be accounted for partly by his knowledge that the agents of other vessels were attempting to obtain their share of patronage by bribery, which, for a short time, he believed Captain Speed to have yielded to, though he soon after publicly admitted his mistake; partly also by a confusion which is shown to have existed in his mind as to the number of those who were to be sent North; and in part by the extreme difficulty of effecting a division at so late a period. That Captain Hatch felt a consciousness of some responsibility for the disaster is believed to be shown by the fact that though three times subpoenaed to give his testimony at the trial, and though the trial was prolonged three months that his presence might be secured, he refused to obey the summons; and that, notwithstanding every effort was made to compel his presence, the Secretary of War being finally appealed to to order his arrest as guilty of contempt, it was found necessary to finish the trial without his evidence.*

J. HOLT,
Judge-Advocate-General.

SECRETARY OF WAR.

No. 5.

U. S. Iron-clad Essex,

Memphis, Tenn., April 27, 1865.

SIR: I was aroused from my sleep this morning by a call from Mr. Barnshaw, who informed me that the steamer Sultana had blown up and was burning at a short distance up the river, and that the river was covered with drowning men. I ordered all the boats manned, which was done immediately, and I went in the cutter, which boat was the first ready, and we went out to the middle of the river. The morning was very dark, it being about one hour before daylight, and the weather overcast, and the shrieks of the wounded and drowning men was the only guide we had. The first man we picked up was chilled and so benumbed that he couldn't help himself, and the second one died a short time after he was taken on board. We soon drifted down to Fort Pickering, when the sentry on the shore fired at us, and we were obliged to "come to" while the poor fellows near us were crying out and imploring us for God's sake to save them; that they couldn't hold out much longer. We pulled a short distance toward the shore and hailed the sentry, who ordered me to come on shore, and who, it seems, had not hailed me before, or if he had his hail had been drowned by the groans of the men drowning in the water. I asked the sentry why he had fired at me, and he said that he had obeyed his orders. I told the sentry what had happened, and that I was picking up drowning men. The sentry did not give me any answer, and we went out again to the middle of the river, where we fell in with the gig laying near a lot of drift which was covered with men drowning, who were so benumbed that my boats' crews were obliged to handle them as if they were dead men. Before we had taken in half of them another shot was fired from the fort, and came whistling over our heads, and I saw that they were determined to make me come ashore. It was not daylight, and though our two boats and a steam-boat's yawl, which came out to lend us a hand, made a large mark to shoot at, I would not leave the poor fellows in the water to attend the sentry on shore. When the day began to dawn the cries of the sufferers ceased, and all who had not been rescued had gone down, and I, fearing that I might be fired at again, went to the shore, and when I saw the sentry he had again raised his musket, and I called out to him not to shoot, and at the same time told the sentry, who was a negro, that if there was an officer there I wished to see him. A man came down and told me that he was an officer. I asked him why I had been fired at. He said that his orders were to fire on all skiffs. I told him that these boats were not skiffs; that they were a man-of-war's gig and cutter, and again reminded him of what had happened, and of the drowning men whose cries he could not help hearing, and for the sake of humanity why could he not execute his orders with some discretion in a time like this. He said that he had as much humanity as any one, and in firing at me he had only obeyed orders. I saw a number of skiffs and other boats laying hauled up out of the water, and from appearances no one had made any attempt to launch them, and I reminded him that that did not look much like humanity. No one at the fort offered to do anything for the suffering men in our boats except the watchman of the coal barges, who, with the assistance of some of my men, built a fire on the shore, and I left a few of the rescued men by it, who wished to remain, and the others I had put on board vessels near by, where they were well cared for. Then crossed the river, and after looking carefully around I returned on board, having taken out of the water sixty men and one lady.

* Captain Speed was honorably mustered out of service September 1, 1866.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. BERRY,
Acting Ensign and Executive Officer.

Actg. Vol. Lieut. JOHN C. PARKER,

[First indorsement.]

JOHN C. PARKER,
Volunteer Lieutenant, Commanding Essex.
Respectfully forwarded to Colonel Kappner for his remarks. He will report the name of the officer who is represented to have acted so disgracefully.

C. C. WASHBURN,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS FORT PICKERING,
Memphis, Tenn., May 1, 1865.

Respectfully returned, and attention invited to the inclosed statements of Capt. L. Methudy, acting assistant adjutant-general; Senior Surg. H. H. Hood, Capt. D. C. Mooney, Third U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), field officer of the day, Lieut. D. P. Yates, Third U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), and Capt. George H. Stevens. *

Lieut. D. P. Yates, the officer who conversed with Acting Ensign Berry, denies the correctness of the ensign’s statement, and from my personal knowledge I can say that the rescued were as well cared for as possible, the injured receiving medical attendance, and all whisky, coffee, meat, and bread, and that the ensign’s statement to the contrary is a misrepresentation. Nearly 100 men were landed on five or six different places along the shore in the fort, and the reason why not more than two or three skiffs from the fort were out is that there are no more here.

I. G. KAPPNER,
Col. 3d U. S. Colored Arty. (Heavy), Comdg. Fort and Troops Attached.

[Enclosure No. 1.]

HEADQUARTERS FORT PICKERING,
Memphis, Tenn., April 29, 1865.

Col. I. G. Kappner,
Commanding Fort Pickering:

COLONEL: I have the honor to make the following statement:

At about 4 a.m. on the 27th instant it was reported to me by one of the orderlies that a number of boats and skiffs were going down the river with persons in them who had lanterns. Lieutenant Copeland, aide-de-camp, went down to the river immediately. I was stopped on my way down by two sailors, who made me acquainted with the unfortunate event, and asked me to send whisky to the landing for those of the people who had been or were being rescued. I had no whisky to distribute, but gave orders that a sufficient amount of hot coffee be made immediately, which order was cheerfully executed by the orderlies (who are negroes) and then went on down to the river. I met Lieutenant Wilson, of Company A, Third U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), who informed me that his men, who are quartered on the levee, were out and were attending to those who were rescued by the employés of the quartermaster’s department under Mr. Hare. Lieutenant Wilson asked me whether I could get any whisky for the men, and I advised him to get coffee made for them, as I did not think it could be got at short notice. He told me that coffee was then being made at his barracks. Upon arriving at the levee (which was not later than ten to twelve minutes after I received the first notice) I found Lieutenant

* Captain Stevens’ statement not found.
Yates and a large number of the Company A, Third U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), also all river guards stationed in the neighborhood, rendering all the assistance they possibly could in providing temporary shelter for those who were suffering from being scalded and bruised more than others, building fires, giving blankets, &c. The field officer of the day (Capt. D. C. Mooney) informed me that he or somebody else (I cannot distinctly remember) had sent for whisky. I then sent for the senior surgeon of the fort, not knowing that he had been notified by the field officer of the day, who soon made his appearance and performed the duties of his office. He sent to the city for ambulances to remove the rescued, and after seeing that I could do no more for the suffering, I retired. Lieutenant Copeland, your aide-de-camp, has worked in conjunction with others to the best of his abilities in administering help to the rescued; in fact, every officer and soldier (the latter were negroes) did the best they could for the suffering men after they were saved, as there are but a few small boats in the fort which were in use. To the above I certify on honor as being true, and would further state that besides mine abundant testimony can be easily procured to prove that at least that part of the letter of Actg. Ensign James H. Berry and executive officer iron-clad Essex wherein he relates that "he saw a number of skiffs and other boats lying hauled up out of the water, &c., and no one at the fort offered to do anything for the suffering men in our boats except the watchman at the coal barges," is devoid of truth.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. METHUDY,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HDQRS. FORT PICKERING, OFFICE SENIOR SURGEON,
Memphis, Tenn., April 29, 1865.

Capt. L. METHUDY,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sir: I have the honor to report that on the morning of the 27th instant I was called from my bed at about 5 o'clock by a messenger informing me that a large number of "half-drowned men" were on the river bank in the fort requiring medical assistance. This was the first intimation that I had of the result of the blowing up of the steamer Sultana. Repairing as quickly as possible to the river I found there many of the victims of the explosion. Captain Methudy, acting assistant adjutant-general, on the staff of Col. I. G. Kappner, was there before me, and was giving such directions to the men of the garrison then present as he thought might conduce to the comfort of the rescued men. Many of them were seriously injured by scalding and contusions, and all were shivering with cold, being still in their wet clothing; but large fires were blazing and stimulants administered. Having no clothing for these men in the fort, and many of them needing treatment in the hospital, I immediately returned to my office and wrote a note to Surgeon Irwin, U. S. Army, and superintendent general hospitals, stating the facts and requesting him to send ambulances and blankets. In a very short time these arrived. In the meantime, learning that a large number of the unfortunate men were in the hospital of the Third U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), at the upper end of the fort, I went there and found twenty-five of them, many occupying the beds of my patients, who willingly gave them up to their greater need. Acting Assistant Surgeon Tindall and the hospital steward, Mr. Thomas Whitten, were busy dressing wounds. All here were supplied with coffee and other stimulants. A message from Captain Stevens, Third U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), informed me that several men were in his battery (M) who needed help. I went there, but found that he had procured an ambulance and sent them to the Adams Hospital. Returning to the river at the time of the arrival of the ambulance train from the city, I found there Col. I. G. Kappner, Major Williams, Lieutenants Copeland, Atlee, Helm, Newman, Wyckoff, Wilson, and Yates. There were others, but these I remember distinctly, being brought directly in contact with them. The teams of the quartermasters, Helm and Atlee, were on the ground, but were not needed, except the two ambulance teams. Lieutenant Wyckoff, provost-marshal of the fort, supplied many of these men with breakfast. All officers present were busy in rendering such assistance as was in their power. Seven men remained in the fort at 9 a.m. These I sent in ambulances to the office of Superintendent Irwin, surgeon, U. S. Army.

In conclusion permit me to say that, so far as my observation went, all persons connected with this garrison, from the colonel commanding down to the rank and file, were deeply interested in the pitiable condition of these unfortunate men, and that all, to the best of their ability, did their whole duty in ministering to their wants.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. Hood, Surgeon, Third U. S. Colored Arty. (Heavy), and Senior Surgeon.

In conclusion No. 3.

Fort Pickering,
Memphis, Tenn., April 30, 1865.

Capt. L. Methody,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that on the morning of the 27th instant I was officer of the day and made my rounds between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning. As I was going toward Battery A I met a guard, who told me that a steam-boat had blown up and some of the passengers were floating down and were being picked up. I immediately went to Battery A, found some five or six soldiers from the wreck. These men had dry blankets furnished them and were walking around to keep warm while fire was being built. Lieutenants Yates and Wilson had coffee made and given them, and those that were burned taken into quarters and their parts that were burned dressed and flour put on. I then went to Quartermaster Helm and had him send some whisky down for them. The quartermaster's employés, under Mr. Hare, did good service in rescuing the soldiers, who were well taken care of, and everything furnished them that could be had to make them comfortable. All that were rescued near the upper part of the fort were taken to the hospital immediately, where dry clothes and beds were given them. I saw all that were rescued in the fort, and I must say they were exceedingly well taken care of; officers and men were making every exertion to make them comfortable.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. C. Mooney,
Captain, Third U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy).
Fort Pickering,
Memphis, Tenn., April 29, 1865.

Capt. L. Methudy,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Pickering:

CAPTAIN: In compliance with instructions received, I have the honor to make the following statement regarding a memorial of acting ensign and executive officer of the U. S. iron-clad Essex, who makes allegations in his document which are in violation of truth, as by numerous officers and men stationed in the fort can easily be proved:

Early in the morning of the 27th instant a shot was fired by one of the sentries on shore. I immediately went out to ascertain the cause of it, which was apparent in a moment. All the men (some thirty or forty), Lieutenant Wilson, and myself rendered instantly such assistance as we could for the poor sufferers. After two or three small boats had delivered rescued men, and a good fire, under my orders, had been built, Captain Methudy, acting assistant adjutant-general, suggested that coffee be furnished them, saying that he had ordered some made at the headquarters. I immediately ordered coffee made, then gave them all the whisky and blankets happening to be on hand, and three or four of the most suffering had been carried into the barracks and covered warmly, and the remainder had likewise been provided with blankets and clothing to make all comfortable; then a boat near us and one of the persons in it spoke to me in a manner which approached more to "slang" than to the remarks set forth in the document referred to above. Some of the men (negroes) to whom he also addressed himself said it would be well to put his sufferers (one or two, I believe) ashore that they might be better cared for, but for some reason or other he took no notice of the suggestion. Where he built or caused to be built any fires is not known to me; certainly it was not done on that part of the levee, where a large number of the rescued were landed. After making (under instructions from Surgeon Hood and the officer of the day, Captain Mooney) the men who had been landed quite comfortable, I went up the shore a short distance, where I met Colonel Kappner, Surgeon Hood, another surgeon, and Lieutenant Copeland, aide-de-camp, who informed me that all the sufferers were doing well. I have to state that our sentinels are instructed to bring to all small boats passing up or down the river, by discharging their pieces, and on the morning in question not a cap was snapped after the sad accident was known; also, that I did not make such a reply as stated by Acting Ensign Berry. The discourteous language by that officer in regard to an officer of the U. S. Army and to U. S. soldiers, if even colored, in his memorial, also the fact that he so fully explains the leading part taken by him in rescuing the suffering, are not for me to pass judgment upon; but I owe it to the officers and men of the garrison of Fort Pickering who were present and used their honest efforts to render all assistance in their power to state that the document forwarded by Acting Ensign Berry is in no way in accordance with facts. I beg respectfully to inclose a list of names of men who were landed in front of my quarters, many of whom thanked me for what we had done for them when they were being taken away in the ambulances.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DANIEL P. YATES,

15 B R—VOL XLVIII, PT 1

APRIL 27, 1865.—Affair near James Creek, Mo.

Hdqrs. Fifteenth Regiment Cavalry Missouri Vols.,
Mount Vernon, Mo., April 29, 1865.

Captain: I have the honor to report the success of a scout made by Lieut. J. P. Boyd, Company C, with thirteen men, on the 27th instant. On the night of the 26th two bushwhackers made their appearance on Center Creek and robbed Parson Oliver. The lieutenant started in pursuit at 9 o'clock next morning and trailed them some four miles west of James Creek. In the thick brush he found them. Killed both of them and recovered all the stolen property, together with their camp and garrison equipage.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN D. ALLEN, Colonel, Commanding Regiment.

Capt. William T. Kittredge, Assistant Adjutant-General, Springfield, Mo.

APRIL 28—MAY 13, 1865.—Scout from Fort Cummings, N. Mex.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Cummings, N. Mex., May 20, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to instructions received from you in a letter from Aqua Blanca, dated April 28, 1865, stating that the Indians at Pinos Altos were hostile and had or would attack that place, I left this post with thirty men of Company G, First Veteran Infantry California Volunteers, at 4 p. m., and arrived at your camp at the Hot Spring at 11 p. m. same day, having traveled a distance of twenty-five miles. Left camp at 2 a. m. 29th, and arrived at Pinos Altos at 3 a. m. on the 30th. I had seen no Indians up to that time. I learned from Mr. Granjean, who resides at that place, that no Indians had been seen since the afternoon of the 28th, when they made an attack on the herd with the loss of one Indian killed. I left Pinos Altos on the night of the 1st of May; found the Indian trail six miles to the west of Pinos Altos; followed the trail to the San Vincent ranch; camped till the night of the 2d; left at 7 p. m. The trail after leaving the ranch went in the direction of Mangus Colorado’s Ranch, toward the Gila River. After following it about four miles and a half it became so dim that I had to camp for the remainder of the night. I found water in a ravine near the camp. The next morning at daylight the guide found the trail. It turned off in the direction of the Burro Mountains. I went across to the left side of the Burros and followed an old Indian trail; camped in a cañon. Left camp on the 4th at 7 p.m. At 1 a.m. of the 5th arrived at the east side of Whitlock's Cañon; here I camped till morning, when I took twenty men and passed through the cañon. I found the trail going straight for the Sierra Bonito. I followed it for two hours and found that fifteen Indians (men) had left the main trail and gone in the direction of Barney's Station. I became satisfied that the women and children had gone to Fort Goodwin, confirming the opinion I had expressed to you at the Hot Spring in relation to their journey to Fort Goodwin. Thinking it useless to go farther, I turned back and arrived at Pinos Altos on the 7th, and carried out your instructions in relation to the arrest of Carlos Moreno. On the 10th, I sent out Sergeant Barton with fifteen men and gave him instructions to proceed to the headwaters of the Rio Mimbres and ascertain if there were any Indians in that direction. The sergeant made the trip, but saw no sign of Indians. He arrived at this post on the 14th. I left Pinos Altos on the 10th, and arrived at this post on the 13th, having been out fifteen days. The Indians sent their women and children away the same day you left your camp at Pinos Altos, so that the Indians had four days the start of me. Had they not gone to Fort Goodwin I think I could have caught them.

Pursuant to instructions received from you on the 13th instant, I dispatched a sergeant and four men on the 17th to Pinos Altos to arrest the men mentioned. The sergeant returned on the 21st, bringing them with him. Their names are Panacho Cario and Ferinomo Contreras.

G. A. B.
29, 1865, I dispatched Lieut. Col. C. W. Davis, Fifty-first Illinois Infantry, assistant provost-marshal-general on my staff, and Capt. J. F. Bennett, assistant adjutant general, on duty at these headquarters, to Chalk Bluff, on the Arkansas border, to demand the surrender of Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson and all the Confederate forces subject to his orders. These officers proceeded under letter of instruction, marked A, bearing my letter to General Thompson, marked B, herewith inclosed. After some correspondence, as shown in the report of Lieutenant-Colonel Davis (herewith inclosed, marked C), General Thompson surrendered, and in accordance with agreement thereto made Lieutenant-Colonel Davis, Captain Bennett, and Captain Ford proceeded May 20, 1865, on steam-boat to Wittsburg and Jacksonport, where the command of General Thompson was paroled, consisting of 636 officers and 6,818 enlisted men, as shown in the report of Lieutenant-Colonel Davis (herewith inclosed, marked D). General Thompson's command being in the Department of Arkansas, I immediately, upon receipt of information of its surrender, notified General Reynolds of the fact by telegraph, and sent the following dispatches to Major-Generals Pope and Reynolds, requesting that the latter (General Reynolds) send staff officers to accompany mine to Wittsburg and Jacksonport, viz:

Major-General Reynolds,

Little Rock, Ark.:

The arrangement made provides that the command shall be paroled by me. My officers will leave here on the 20th on a boat and go to Wittsburg, on Saint Francis River. I should like to have you send some staff officers to accompany them, as it is in your department, and no doubt it would have a good effect to have you represented there. Please answer where your staff officers will meet mine, so I can instruct them.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Saint Louis, Mo., May 15, 1865.

Major-General Pope,

Headquarters Military Division of the Missouri:

I hear nothing from my telegram to General Reynolds. I requested him to send one or two staff officers to meet mine at some point to go with them to parole General Thompson's troops. I think he should have some staff officers there, so as to have a full understanding of the matter. Had you not better direct him to send them? He may think that I am going outside of my duties in going into his department and receiving the surrender of Thompson. Our arrangements are all made here on the 20th. If his staff officers will report at Memphis we will call there for them.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Saint Louis, Mo., May 15, 1865.

General Reynolds sent two staff officers, who joined mine at Devall's Bluff on their way to Jacksonport from Wittsburg. The paroles, rolls of prisoners, &c., were boxed up and forwarded by express to Washington, D. C., addressed to Brigadier-General Townsend, Assistant Adjutant-General, U. S. Army. I inclose herewith paroles of a portion of General Thompson's command taken by Colonel Morrill's direction in Missouri, marked E. In addition to these, large numbers of Kirby Smith's men scattered through this State have been paroled at different points, and have universally taken the oath of allegiance. All the bands of bushwhackers in the State have surrendered at the different posts of Lexington, Cassville, Fort Scott, Bloomfield, &c., so that I can now report that peace and quiet reigns in Missouri. Lieutenant-Colonel

* See p. 230.
† See p. 237.
‡ Omitted.
Chap. LX.} EXPEDITION FROM SAINT LOUIS, MO. 229

Davis, Captain Bennett, and Captain Ford performed the delicate and responsible duties with which they were charged to my entire satisfaction and with credit to themselves.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Capt. JOSEPH McC. BELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Military Division of the Missouri.

[Inclosure A.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., April 29, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel DAVIS,
Assistant Provost-Marshal-General:

COLONEL: You will proceed to North Arkansas, via Cape Girardeau, and deliver the accompanying letter to Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson, and await his answer. Should he accept the terms offered you will make arrangements for carrying them out, paroling his command, &c. Brevet Brigadier-General Beveridge will give you all the aid you may desire and respond to any call you may make upon him. You are to understand that no other terms can be granted him, and refrain from expressing any opinion contrary to the spirit of the terms designated. This being purely a military matter, civil matters will not be treated or talked of, we having no authority whatever in those matters. Should General Thompson surrender it is probable you may need transportation for any war material he may have. In making out the paroles make them the same as made by General Grant.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

(Same to Capt. J. F. Bennett, assistant adjutant-general.)

[Inclosure B.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., April 29, 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Commanding District of North Arkansas:

GENERAL: I inclose herewith official copies of dispatches received from the Secretary of War announcing the surrender of all the armies of the Confederate Government east of the Chattahoochee River; also the official report of the surrender of Mobile. The U. S. forces have also captured Selma, Columbus, Montgomery, Macon, &c. The terms granted by Lieutenant-General Grant to General Lee will be given the forces under your command. By accepting these terms you will put an end to the further destruction of life and property in North Arkansas. To continue the struggle longer must be evident to you is useless. Should you not accept these terms, being inside of the U. S. Army, and the authorities whom you claim to be serving having no longer an existence de jure or de facto, they will immediately be declared outlaws, and no terms thereafter granted them. Lieutenant-Colonel Davis, my staff officer, will hand you this and await your answer. Should you accept, the arrangements for carrying out the terms designated will be immediately made by him, he having full authority to carry out the arrangements herein specified.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.
No. 2.

SAINT LOUIS, MO., May 15, 1865.

GENERAL: In accordance with instructions from you of the 29th ultimo, I left Saint Louis in company with Capt. J. F. Bennett, assistant adjutant-general, on the 30th ultimo, to proceed to North Arkansas to endeavor to find Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson and deliver to him your letter. We reached Cape Girardeau that night, and the next day made arrangements with Brevet Brigadier-General Beveridge for crossing the country into Arkansas. He furnished us with 200 men of the Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry as an escort, under command of Lieut. Col. D. J. Hynes. Leaving Cape Girardeau on the morning of the 2d instant, we were three days in reaching Chalk Bluff, on the Saint Francis River. On the 5th instant we were engaged in building the raft on the Saint Francis River, in foraging the country, and in trying to get some definite information in regard to the whereabouts of General Thompson. It was difficult to ascertain anything positive about him, all of our informants saying that he had not been in that vicinity for a long time, and giving us as rumors that he had gone south to meet a flag of truce. We learned that he called Harrisburg his headquarters. Learning that it would be difficult to subsist my escort on the Arkansas side of the Saint Francis River, I thought best to remain at Chalk Bluff and endeavor to get General Thompson, if he could be found, to come to me. On the 5th instant I wrote a letter (inclosed, marked A, is a copy) to General Thompson by a citizen of Arkansas. Fearing that this might not reach him, on the 6th instant I wrote another (inclosed, marked B, is a copy), which Captain Bennett, accompanied by an escort of sixty men, started with. General Thompson received my first letter on the 7th instant, to which he replied as per inclosed, C. The same day Captain Bennett met with General Thompson and made arrangements to have him accompany him on his return to Chalk Bluff. Captain Bennett will give you a report of his trip, as well as other items he has gained. On the 9th instant Captain Bennett returned to Chalk Bluff, General Thompson and four of his officers coming with him. I delivered your letter to the general, and we had several long conversations with him, the result of which was the paper from him marked D, and my reply, of which inclosed, marked E, is a copy. General Thompson seemed to have great doubts about his right to surrender a district and a force that were not surrounded or in danger of immediate capture, and before doing so he wished to consult with his two brigade commanders, and upon his agreeing to remain with us I gave him forty-eight hours to communicate with them. On the 10th instant I received from General Thompson the two inclosed letters, marked F and G, to which I replied as per inclosed copies, marked H and I. On the morning of the 11th instant I received the letter marked K, to which I replied as per inclosed copy, marked L. The forty-eight hours given General Thompson having expired at 5 p. m. on the 11th instant, he announced his decision to surrender all his forces in the communication marked M, which I acknowledged as per inclosed copy, marked N. He then wrote the accompanying letter [marked O] to you formally surrendering all the forces under his command. We selected Wittsburg and Jacksonport as the places for receiving and paroling his officers and men, because we believed them the only available points that he could collect his command, on account of the high stage of water and the destitute condition of the country, and so late a date as the 5th proximo at Jacksonport, because General Thompson satisfied us that he could not get word to his forces west of the White River and assemble them before that time. General Thompson said that he should surrender at least 5,000 men. It may be more or less, and I am unable to give an opinion which. These men will come in without a morsel to eat, and I would therefore recommend that 50,000 rations be sent to the points designated to feed them while being paroled and while they are returning to their homes. We impressed upon General Thompson as well as we could the importance of his men giving up all the arms and property taken from the enemy if they wished not to be troubled hereafter. General Thompson assured us that he would do all he could in the matter, and as an earnest of his good intention furnished us with a copy of the order that he should issue to his command. Inclosed please find a copy, marked P. In conclusion, I desire to say that Brevet Brigadier-General Beveridge gave us all the assistance we desired; that the Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry behaved as well as any troops could behave, and that Lieutenant-Colonel Tiedemann has our thanks for constructing the raft on the Saint Francis River.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Provost-Marshal-General.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,

Commanding Department of the Missouri.

[Inclosure A.]

CHALK BLUFF, ARK., May 5, 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON,

Commanding District of Northeast Arkansas:

GENERAL: I am here as a staff officer of Major-General Dodge, commanding Department of the Missouri, under a flag of truce, as the bearer of a letter from Major-General Dodge to yourself. My instructions are to deliver it to you in person, and as quickly as possible. I have the honor, therefore, to request that you will meet me as near this point as you can. My mission is purely of a peaceful nature.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,

Lieutenant-Colonel.

The original, of which this is a copy, was sent to Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson by the hand of Mr. Little, a citizen of Arkansas.

[Inclosure B.]

CHALK BLUFF, ARK.,

Saint Francis River, May 6, 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON,

Commanding Army of Northeast Arkansas:

GENERAL: I am here by command of Major-General Dodge, commanding Department of the Missouri, as the bearer of a letter from him to yourself. This letter I am directed to deliver to you personally. I am here under flag of truce, and wish to meet you in the same manner as soon as possible. This will be handed to you by Capt. J. F. Bennett, who is also an officer on the staff of Major-General Dodge.

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,

Lieutenant-Colonel.
HEADQUARTERS NORTH SUB-DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Harrisburg, Ark., May 7, 1865—2 a.m.

Lieut. Col. C. W. Davis, U. S. Army,
Bearer of Flag of Truce, Chalk Bluff, Ark.:

Colonel: Your favor dated the 5th instant, informing me that you are the bearer of dispatches from General Dodge to me under flag of truce, is this moment received. I will proceed up the ridge to meet you as you request, and will be at Gainesville by Monday, the 8th, at noon. Please come to Gainesville and await my arrival there; but should I reach that point before you I will proceed up the ridge until I meet you on the route between Gainesville and Chalk Bluff.

I have the honor to be, yours, most respectfully,
M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Chalk Bluff, May 9, 1865—1 p.m.

Lieut. Col. C. W. Davis, U. S. Army,

Present: Colonel: Having read the communication from General Dodge, of which you have been the bearer under flag of truce, asking a surrender of the forces under my command upon the terms granted to General Robert E. Lee by General Grant, I must ask a few questions before I can give a definite answer, viz: First. Should I order the men to assemble to surrender at specified times and places, will your army then have to pass over our country or simply move to the points designated to receive and parole the officers and men? Second. Will the families of those who prefer to leave after being paroled be banished? Third. Do you understand the parole given to General Lee's men to cover their private personal property at home or not? I mean, may the private soldiers retain the horses that belong to them personally, and will their private personal property at home be left to them? Fourth. After answering these questions, how long a time will you give me for a definite answer to General Dodge's proposition?

I have the honor to be, yours, respectfully,
M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding North Sub-district of Arkansas.

Chalk Bluff, Saint Francis River, Mo.,
Tuesday, May 9, 1865—5 p.m.

Brig. Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON, C. S. Army:

General: In answer to yours of this day I would say: First. Our army will not necessarily move over the country, but simply to the points designated to receive and parole the officers and men. Second. No families will be banished so long as they conduct themselves properly and conform to the laws of the United States. Third. I believe General Grant permitted General Lee's men to retain all private personal property except arms and ammunition. Fourth. I will allow you forty-eight hours for a definite answer to General Dodge's proposition.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. W. DAVIS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.
LIDDLE'S, NEAR CHALK BLUFF, ARK.,
Wednesday, May 10, 1865—6 a.m.

Lieut. Col. C. W. DAVIS, U. S. Army,
Commissioner from General Dodge, U. S. Army,
Chalk Bluff, Mo.:

COLONEL: Please send me a draft of the parole that you propose to give the officers and men, should I determine to accept the proposal of General Dodge and surrender the forces under my command. I have never seen those given General Lee and men.

Yours, most respectfully,

M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding North Sub-District of Arkansas.

LIDDLE'S, NEAR CHALK BLUFF, ARK.,
Wednesday, May 10, 1865—7 a.m.

Lieut. Col. C. W. DAVIS, U. S. Army,
Commissioner from Major-General Dodge,
Comdg. Department of the Missouri, Chalk Bluff, Mo.:

COLONEL: I desire that we should agree upon the status of the civil officers of the counties in this sub-district before I give my answers to the summons of General Dodge. I propose that all civil officers of the counties, such as sheriffs, magistrates, clerks, &c., shall perform their functions to repress lawlessness, punish crimes, &c., until the civil authorities shall settle their status.

Yours, most respectfully,

M. JEFF. THOMPSON,

CHALK BLUFF, MO., May 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Commanding North Sub-District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose herewith copies of parole given by officers and men of General Lee's army. Each man receives a certificate showing that he has been properly surrendered for his own safety.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

APPOMATTOX COURT-HOUSE, VA., April 9, 1865.

We, the undersigned, prisoners of war, belonging to the Army of Northern Virginia, having been this day surrendered by General U. S. Grant, commanding Armies of the United States, do hereby give our solemn parole of honor that we will not hereafter serve in the Armies of the Confederate States, or in any military capacity whatever against the United States of America, or render aid to the enemies of the latter, until properly exchanged in such a manner as shall be mutually approved by the respective authorities.
General B. F. Lee,

Commanding C. S. Army:

GENERAL: In accordance with the substance of my letter to you of the 8th instant, I propose to receive the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia on the following terms, to wit: Rolls of all the officers and men to be made in duplicate, one copy to be given to an officer designated by me, the other to be retained by such officer or officers as you may designate. The officers to give their individual paroles not to take up arms against the Government of the United States until properly exchanged, and each company or regimental commander to sign a like parole for the men of their commands. The arms, artillery, and public property to be parked and stacked and turned over to the officers appointed by me to receive them. This will not embrace the side arms of the officers, nor their private horses or baggage. This done, each officer and man will be allowed to return to his home and not to be disturbed by the U. S. authorities so long as they observe their paroles and the laws in force where they may reside.

Very respectfully,

U. S. GRANT,

Lieutenant-General.

[Inclosure I]

Chalk Bluff, Mo., May 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson,

Commanding North Sub-District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: In reply to yours of this date, just received, I have the honor to state that I have not come here to treat with or about civil officers. My mission here is purely of a military nature, and I shall confine myself strictly to it. I presume you are familiar with the conditions of the surrender of General Lee's army. Such terms, and none others, are now offered to yourself and the forces under your command. Major-General Reynolds, U. S. Army, commanding the Department of Arkansas, will doubtless conduct the affairs of his department with a view to the greatest good of the people therein.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,

Lieutenant-Colonel.

[Inclosure K]

Liddle's, near Chalk Bluff, Ark.,

Thursday, May 11, 1865—8 a. m.

Lieut. Col. C. W. Davis, U. S. Army,

Commissioner from General Dodge, Chalk Bluff:

COLONEL: Can you inform me whether the officers and men who were surrendered by General Robert E. Lee were permitted to pass to within the Confederate lines or not? My reason for making this inquiry is that many of those that I am called upon to surrender will prefer to go to Texas or Louisiana to remaining in neighborhoods where private animosities will keep the community in a tumult after the military authorities are withdrawn. Some will desire to take their families. Others think that their families will be safe if they absent themselves after being paroled. This is a very important matter to many on the border of Missouri and Arkansas, and you will, therefore, please let me know your understanding of the case.

Yours, most respectfully,

M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding North Sub-District of Arkansas.

[Inclosure L.]

CHALK BLUFF, MO., May 11, 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Commanding North Sub-District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: In answer to yours of this date, just received, I have the honour to give you below such a part of the conditions given General Lee by General Grant as your letter refers to:

This done, each officer and man will be allowed to return to their homes, not to be disturbed by the U. S. authorities so long as they observe their paroles and the laws in force where they may reside.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

[Inclosure M.]

HEADQUARTERS NORTH SUB-DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,
Chalk Bluff, Ark., Thursday, May 11, 1865—5 p. m.

Lieut. Col. C. W. DAVIS, U. S. Army,
Commissioner from General Dodge, &c., Chalk Bluff, Mo.:

COLONEL: The time given me by yourself to decide upon an answer to the summons to surrender the C. S. troops under my command in this sub-district, which you as commissioner from General G. M. Dodge, U. S. Army, have brought to me, having expired this moment, I must answer that upon the promise you have made me that the U. S. forces "will not necessarily move over the country," &c., I have determined to accept the terms offered, and will and hereby do surrender the forces under my command upon the terms granted to General Robert E. Lee and the Army of Northern Virginia. I request that you will meet me at Wittsburg on the 25th instant and at Jacksonport on the 5th day of June to receive and parole the officers and men of the C. S. Army now serving or being in the Northern Sub-District of Arkansas.

I have the honor to be, yours, most respectfully,

M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure N.]

CHALK BLUFF, MO., May 10[11], 1865.

Brig. Gen. M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Commanding North Sub-District of Arkansas:

GENERAL: I have received yours of this date announcing the surrender of the forces under your command to Major-General Dodge, commanding Department of the Missouri, upon the terms granted by in selecting Wittsburg, on the Saint Francis River, May 25, and Jacksonport, on the White River, June 5, as the times and places to meet the officer selected by Major-General Dodge to receive and parole the officers and men of your command.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.
HEADQUARTERS NORTH SUB-DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS,

Chalk Bluff, Ark., Thursday, May 11, 1865—5.30 p. m.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge, U. S. Army,

Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: Your communication of the 29th ultimo by Lieut. Col. C. W. Davis, U. S. Army, under flag of truce, reached me on the 9th instant. Upon the promise of Colonel Davis that the U. S. armies will not necessarily move over the country, &c., and subsist upon it unless compelled thereto by the movements of the Confederate troops, I have concluded to accept the terms you offer and surrender the C.S. troops in this sub-district, and have agreed with Colonel Davis upon Wittsburg and Jacksonport as rendezvous at which the men are to be assembled on the 25th instant and 5th proximo to be paroled. Pardon me, general, for differing with you in regard to the Government of the Confederate States. I think it still exists de jure and de facto, and though dark clouds now obscure our prospects, yet I have every faith in our ultimate success, and am only induced to surrender now to spare the people of this already desolated country the horrors of an invasion in their present condition.

I have the honor to be, yours, most respectfully,

M. JEFF. THOMPSON, Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Copy of an order which Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson proposes to issue to his command:

GENERAL ORDERS, No. —.

Having been summoned to surrender by the commanding officer of the U. S. troops in this district, and threatened with an overwhelming force that would necessarily destroy this already impoverished portion of the country if they should move through it, I have taken into consideration the utter destitution of our people north of the Arkansas, and upon the express condition that armies of the United States will not necessarily march over the land unless compelled thereto by the movements of the Confederate forces, I have agreed to accept the terms granted to General Robert E. Lee for the Army of Northern Virginia, and to surrender the Confederate forces now in the Northern Sub-District of Arkansas. Therefore, C. S. troops east of Cache River and of White River, south of the mouth of Cache, are ordered to assemble at Wittsburg on the 25th day of May that they may be paroled, and the troops west of Cache River and White River, below the mouth of Cache, will assemble at Jacksonport on the 5th day of June that they may be paroled. Where it is practicable the commanding officers will march their men to these rendezvous. Where it is not practicable they will come in such squads, or individually, as the subsistence on their route will justify. All public property, such as arms and accouterments, ammunition, transportation, horses, &c., in possession of the officers or troops must be brought to these rendezvous to be turned over to the U. S. authorities. But the private property of all, not captured from the enemy, and the side arms of the officers will be retained by the owners. A strict compliance with this requirement will be expected, as we must act in good faith if we expect good faith. It is expected that those who desire to accept these terms will be prompt in their attendance at the appointed rendezvous, and those who do not so desire will be gone out of the sub-district before these times, as the alleviation of the suffering of the women and children will be frustrated by those remaining who are not paroled.*

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,

Saint Louis, June 20, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that the expedition which left here on the 20th of May for North Arkansas to parole the command of Brig. C. M. Jeff. Thompson returned this day. At Wittsburg the number of persons paroled were officers, 193; enlisted men, 1,984. At Jacksonport we paroled of officers, 443; enlisted men, 4,854. In all, of officers, 636; enlisted men, 6,818; making an aggregate of 7,454. The total number of organizations was 157, as per inclosed list.† We received but very few arms—a little less than 500 in all. The officers, without exception, declared that their men returned from the Price raid through Missouri with but few arms. This may be true to a great extent, but I am satisfied that many left at home whatever guns or pistols they had been able to keep. There is no doubt that many others destroyed their guns rather than bring them in. There are a few more guns (some 213) in the possession of Col. O. P. Lyles, Twenty-third Arkansas Infantry, about thirty miles from Memphis, that could not be brought in on account of high water. They are new guns, have never been issued to troops, but have been stored in an arsenal in the center of a swamp. Brevet Major-General Smith, at Memphis, will send for them as soon as the ground is dry enough for transportation, and then ship them to you. General Thompson had no transportation, except 300 or 400 dugout canoes, and no public animals or property of any other description, except $4,821 C. S. money, which I received and gave receipts for. Most of the men that we paroled were without food, and I issued to them about 28,000 rations. They seemed highly pleased at the surrender, and said that all they wanted now was to be allowed to live at home. At Devall's Bluff, Major Bainbridge and Captain Nields, staff officers of Major-General Reynolds, joined us and proceeded with us to Jacksonport, and rendered very much assistance. These gentlemen endeavored to meet our party at Memphis and accompany us to Wittsburg, but having had some wrong information about the time we should be there failed. Major-General Washburn, at Memphis, Brigadier-General Thayer, at Helena, and Brigadier-General Shaler, at Devall's Bluff, offered us all the assistance they could give. At Memphis we met a staff officer and a Saint Francis River pilot, who had been sent by General Thompson to show us the way up the Saint Francis River. General Thompson met us in the most friendly manner, and acted very honorably. The only person that presented himself that we declined to parole was Col. Tim. Reeves, Fifteenth Missouri Cavalry. He is the officer that ordered the shooting of Major Wilson and six of his men in the fall of 1864, after they had surrendered. I desire to add that every one connected with the expedition took pride in doing the best they could.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. W. DAVIS,

*Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Provost-Marshal-General.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,

Commanding Department of the Missouri.

*For full text of this order, see General Orders, No. 8, May 11, Part II.
†Omitted.
ADDENDA.

I, the undersigned, prisoner of war, belonging to the army of the Northern Sub-District of Arkansas, having been, on the 11th day of May, 1865, surrendered by Brig. Gen. M. Jeff. Thompson, commanding said army, to Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge, commanding the Department of the Missouri, do hereby give my solemn parole of honor that I will not hereafter serve in the armies of the so-called Confederate States, or in any capacity whatever against the United States of America, or render aid to the enemies of the latter until properly exchanged in such manner as shall be mutually approved by the respective authorities.

M. JEFF. THOMPSON,
Brigadier-General, Missouri State Guard,
Commanding C. S. Troops, Northern Sub-District of Arkansas.

Done at Jacksonport, Ark., this 5th day of June, 1865.

[Indorsement.]

The within-named officer will not be disturbed by U. S. authorities as long as he observes his parole and the laws in force where he may reside.

C. W. DAVIS,

APRIL 30—MAY 12, 1865.—Operations in the vicinity of Brashear City, La., with skirmishes (3d) at Chacahoula, La., (4th) at Bayou Black, (9th) at Bayou Goula, and (11th) at Brown's Plantation, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Brig. Gen. Robert A. Cameron, U. S. Army, commanding District of La Fourche.
No. 2.—Col. Willard Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 3.—Maj. Edmund C. Burt, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 4.—Lieut. Eliah W. Cross, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 5.—Lieut. William Wilson, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 6.—Capt. Thomas W. Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 7.—Lieut. Charles W. Turner, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 8.—Maj. James M. Hildreth, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.
No. 9.—Lieut. Cyrus Crawford, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.
No. 10.—Lieut. William A. Ingold, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.
No. 11.—Lieut. James Steel, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.
No. 12.—Capt. James E. Macklin, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.
No. 15.—Capt. Eben F. Barker, Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Troops.
No. 16.—Capt. John R. Wallace, Ninety-third U. S. Colored Troops.

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Brashear, May 6, 1865.

I have the honor to hand you this Saturday the weekly reports of expeditions from the posts of this command except from Terre Bonne, or Bayou Bœuf Station, which left in small boats and has not yet returned up to 4 p.m. One of the expeditions from Donaldsonville resulted in the capture of three of Brown’s men. Two of these guerrillas were recent deserters from the Navy. I have asked Colonel Fiske to have the Navy take them and try them for desertion to the enemy. The water has so overflowed the country and Grand Bayou and Bayou Corn as to make it impossible for us to reach Grand River from the La Fourche. (See Major Hildreth’s report.*) The citizen, Guedry, captured on the gun-boat expedition from this place, was brought in on account of his being accused of being the means of having Lieutenant Masicot, formerly provost-marshal of Plaquemine, captured by the rebels. I think Lieutenant Masicot is in New Orleans, and would be glad to learn as soon as possible if he wishes to prefer charges against Guedry. The other three are Confederate soldiers.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

B. A. CAMERON,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Maj. Wickham Hoffman,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Southern Division of Louisiana.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Post Napoleonville, La., May 8, 1865.

CAPTAIN: In pursuance of orders received from your headquarters, I sent out yesterday, the 7th instant, a scout under the command of Captain Sayles and Lieutenant Wilson, who proceeded to the vicinity of Lake Verret and Bayou Saint Vincent in search of guerrillas and jayhawkers. They report that the country in that vicinity is completely overflowed—so much so that all of the families living in the vicinity of Lake Verret and Bayou Saint Vincent have moved toward the Bayou La Fourche, and that it would be utterly impossible for any of the enemy to get to this neighborhood without being captured. Enclosed please find the reports of Captain Sayles’ and Lieutenant Wilson’s reconnaissance.

I am, captain, very respectfully,

WILLARD SAYLES,
Col. Third Rhode Island Cav., Comdg. Regiment and Post.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.

No. 3.

Reports of Maj. Edmund C. Burt, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Plaquemine, La., May 1, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that, pursuant to orders from post headquarters, I started at 3.30 this p.m. with twenty-five men and one officer on a scout to The Park and vicinity. I reached Indian Village about 5.30, but did not take my command quite into the village, owing to the road being overflowed and the bridge afloat. I succeeded in getting through myself, and went a short distance below the village toward The Park, but found the road, as I expected, overflowed and nearly impassable, and I did not think the object of the scout important enough to pay for the danger and fatigue of pressing my command through to The Park. About 1,000 yards below the turn at Indian Village the water has overflowed the levee, causing a break through which the water rushes with great force, and I learned that there are several other breaks in the levee between that point and The Park. The whole country below Indian Village is submerged, and for half the distance between that point and Plaquemine I noticed that the back part of all the fields were covered with water, in some places coming nearly up to the road. I could neither see nor hear of any guerrillas, and while the present high stage of the water lasts there is but little probability of their venturing into that vicinity at all. The only possible way for them to travel would be by water, and the inducements for them to land are truly very small. I have nothing whatever to report in the way of casualties or captured property. I reached this post on my return about 7 this p.m.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. C. BURT,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding.

First Lieut. J. C. WHITING, Jr.,
Adjutant, Post of Plaquemine.

Hqrs. Detachment Third Rhode Island Cavalry,
Plaquemine, May 8, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that, pursuant to instructions from post headquarters, I left the post with one officer and twenty-four men about 2.30 this p.m. on a scout to Bayou Goula, which point I reached about 6.30 p.m. Pursuant to instructions I watched the coast closely for boats, and the following is a correct statement of the number found, with names of owners, localities, &c.: One small flat-bottom boat, capable of carrying three or four men, owned by colored man, David, on Madam Lawes' plantation. Mr. John Roney, living next above Mr. V. Roth's plantation, owns an old leaky skiff, which, if in good repair, would carry ten men. At Mr. V. Roth's place there is a strong, neatly constructed raft rigged for four oars and capable of transporting six or eight men across the river at one load. Colored man, Francis, living on Mr. L. Bush's plantation, keeps a small skiff in good repair, which will hold about four or five men. Benjamin Hall, living second house above Mr. Whaley's place, keeps a skiff capable of carrying two or three persons. Mr. A. Getto, first house below Mr. Hall's, keeps a skiff which can carry five or six persons. Both skiffs are tied to the same stake. Colonel Butler, near Bayou Goula, has two skiffs owned by his colored hands, the largest of which will carry eight persons with ease. Colonel Butler informed me that he had a permit from Captain Wells, of the Navy, to keep this boat. The other boat is some smaller, and for it he has no permit. The first-named boat is claimed by a colored boy, Manuel, and the second by Carter Miles (colored). I went so far into the village of Bayou Goula that I could see the coast to a point below the village, but saw no more boats, nor could hear of any others being kept. But there are parties living on the opposite side of the river from Bayou Goula and Colonel Butler's place who are in the habit of crossing to this side and back with passengers, and stealing everything that comes in their way, particularly horses, which they made swim the river, leading them from a skiff. Colonel Butler informed me that these parties had stolen the last horses he had to ride. What I learned today of these plunderings only confirms numerous reports which I have heard many times before from that locality. Having carried out my instructions, I returned, passing through Butler's cut-off, and reaching this post about 8.30 this p.m. While in Bayou Goula I learned that six of Brown's party were in the village about noon, remaining but a few moments. This Captain Brown is the only known guerrilla chief that has infested the vicinity of Bayou Goula for a long time, and his force varied from five to ten men, the last being the largest number I have heard of his having for a long time.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. C. BURT,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding.

Lieut. J. C. WHITING, Jr.,
Adjutant, Post of Plaquemine.

Hqrs. Detachment Third Rhode Island Cavalry,
Plaquemine, May 10, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that on the 9th instant at 1 p.m. I left Plaquemine with seventeen men on a scout through Bayou Goula to Donaldsonville. Reached Bayou Goula about 3 p.m., and hearing that some of Brown's men were on the road below, I proceeded more leisurely, partly to rest my horses for a dash and partly through fear that the party, if small, might be passed without being seen, as small parties will sometimes keep out of sight unless looked after very sharply. About half a mile or more above the house of Dr. J. P. R. Stone two or three of Brown's men were seen in the road and my advance dashed after them, and in a few seconds I heard rapid firing. Dashing round a sharp bend in the levee, I came in full view of the action and found some ten or a dozen of the guerrillas in the yard of Mr. W. H. Gilbert, some of whom were firing at my advance, two or three of whom were halted and fighting at the gateway, while two of them were dashing down the road in pursuit of one of the rebels, who had been unable to join his party in the yard. As I stated before, when I came in sight a few of Brown's men were making a sharp, almost hand-to-hand fight with my advance, while the rest of them were making good time toward a gate at the back of the yard (which, by the way, is a pretty good-sized field, the house setting back some distance from the road). I was seen about as soon as I saw them, and instantly the whole party made themselves scarce, closely followed by my advance, but as they passed out of the yard into a lane the rear guard turned and checked my men, the advance momentarily giving the rest of their party some little start; then taking to their heels they succeeded in getting through a gate about 100 yards down the lane, which swung to and fastened, and as the time required to open this gate had given them quite a start, I did not allow my men to follow them (simply firing after them), as all previous experience has taught me the folly of attempting to run them down when they have 100 or 200 yards the start on a straight road for the swamps, for they have but a short distance to go before they can gain the cover of the swamp, and when that is done the game is up, for a small party can scatter, and the longer we hunted for them the less would be our chances of getting them. When I came in sight of the fight I had about 300 or 400 yards to go before I could get into the yard, where the fight first commenced, and I reached the advance just as they reached the last-mentioned gate, where I stopped my men. The man before spoken of as being chased down the road by two of my men was captured, with his horse and carbine. I took him through to Donaldsonville and delivered him to Colonel Fiske. He gave his name as C. B. Calander, of Company B, Ratliff's battalion. (This company is commanded by the famous Captain Williams.) Said that he, with five or six others, joined Brown's command about one week since. He called himself a private, but the negroes who know him say he was an officer. He certainly was a very intelligent man. And here I will state that Captain Brown has been re-enforced lately, and his party probably numbers about twenty men. I have this from other parties besides the prisoner. I reached Donaldsonville about 7 p.m., and started on my return about 6 o'clock this morning. On my way back I had two little races after small squads of Brown's men, and the second time my advance guard (six men), maddened by their former ill luck, foolishly dashed after them till they gained the swamp. They had in this case about 700 or 800 yards the start, and my horses were much jaded with the long march. Still, toward the last of the race they gained fast on the rascals, and could they have had another half mile of open country they would have caught them. Being in haste to reach this post myself, I left my party in charge of a sergeant after I had brought them through the village of Bayou Goula, and rode on alone, reaching here at 1 p.m. My men came in about one hour after. In the first day's fight I had one horse shot, and the second day's racing exhausted two more so that I was obliged to leave them behind, but shall probably recover them. On my return a negro told me that Brown was badly wounded in the shoulder, but I place but little reliance in the story.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. C. BURT,
Major, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding.

Lieut. J. C. WHITING, Jr.,
Adjutant, Post of Plaquemine.

No. 4.

HDQRS. COMPANY C, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Terre Bonne, La., May 6, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to submit the following report of the scout from this station to Chacahoula Station:

I started with a detail of twelve men and proceeded down the road leading to Chacahoula Station. When I arrived at Mr. Shaffer's plantation I learned that six Confederates, dressed in citizen's clothes, and having with them two colored soldiers, prisoners, had taken a cross-road through the woods which leads to Bayou Black. I immediately started with intentions of following them through these woods to Bayou Black, but when I arrived at that place where the road strikes off to Bayou Black I learned that a lieutenant with a squad of colored soldiers from Chacahoula Station had been there before me and followed them down this road, and had just returned a few minutes before I arrived there, on his way to Chacahoula Station. Therefore I did not think it advisable for me to scout any farther on that road. I was informed by the citizens near by that one of the prisoners had escaped, and thought it the best to return to camp, where I arrived at about 7:30 p.m.

I am, lieutenant, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. W. CROSS,
First Lieutenant Company C, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

First Lieut. CHARLES S. COOPER,
Post Adjutant, Terre Bonne, La.

---

No. 5.

Reports of Lieut. William Wilson, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

HDQRS. COMPANY E, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Post Napoleonville, La., May 1, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to submit the following report of a scout that left here under my command May 1, 1865:

I marched on both sides of Bayou Saint Vincent about eight miles toward the lake, which was as far as I could go, as the country is entirely overflowed, and I do not think that there are any rebels this side of the lake. There is no place for them to secrete themselves, and if they did do so it is almost certain they would be captured, for the citizens have to leave their homes in small boats and come up to Mr. McCarty's plantation for safety.

Yours, most respectfully,

WILLIAM WILSON,
Second Lieutenant Company E, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. E. K. THOMPSON,
Post Adjutant.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Post Napoleonville, La., May 7, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to submit the following report of a scout that left here under my command May 7, 1865:

I marched down both sides of the Bayou Saint Vincent as far as I could go toward the lake. The citizens have to leave their homes in small boats and come to Mr. Jones' plantation for safety. The country is entirely overflowed with water, and it is rising every day. I do not think that there are any rebels this side of the lake. If they should come over to this side it is almost certain they would be captured. Citizens would give information immediately.

Yours, most respectfully,

WILLIAM WILSON,
Second Lieut., Comdg. Company E, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

First Lieut. E. K. THOMPSON,
Post Adjutant.
No. 6.

HDQRS. COMPANY H, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Napoleonville, La., May 7, 1865.

Lieutenant: In pursuance of written instructions this day received from headquarters post Napoleonville, I have the honor to respectfully submit the following report:

At 1 p.m. I took twenty-five men and proceeded down the Canal road to Lake Verret, making a careful examination on both sides of the canal, and also inquiries, but learned of no Confederates being or having been in the vicinity for some time. Having carried out my instructions, I returned to Napoleonville.

I have the honor to be, sir, yours respectfully,

THOMAS W. SAYLES,
Captain Company H, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. E. K. THOMPSON,
Adjutant Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 7.

HDQRS. COMPANY L, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Napoleonville, La., May 1, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to instructions from post headquarters, I have today with twenty-five men scouted the Canal road to Lake Verret, and can learn (from examination and inquiry) of no Jayhawkers or guerrillas being in that neighborhood. For two miles this side of the lake the country is flooded. Numbers of the inhabitants have been obliged to vacate their houses in consequence.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHAS. W. TURNER,
First Lieutenant, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. E. K. THOMPSON,
Post Adjutant.

No. 8.

Reports of Maj. James M. Hildreth, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

HDQRS. SIXTEENTH INDIANA MOUNTED INFANTRY,
Donaldsonville, La., May 4, 1865.

Sir: In obedience to orders from headquarters U. S. Forces, dated Donaldsonville, La., May 2, 1865, I proceeded on the morning of the 3d instant with 100 men of my command for the purpose of scouring the country between Grand Bayou and Bay Natchez, going by the way of Doctor Martin's lane to the crossing of Grand Bayou at Madam Labarre's plantation. Had considerable difficulty in reaching the bayou on account of high water and the bridges across nearly all the coulees and ditches being afloat. On reaching Madam Labarre's plantation, was informed by citizens living in the vicinity that it was impossible to proceed to Bayou Corn by that route except by boats. I then came back about three miles and took a road running across the country to Doctor Ford's lane, but found the road covered with water a distance of two miles from the bayou. On riding in with the advance guard about half a mile I found the water to be from two to four feet deep, and that the citizens had moved out, and judging, from what I know of the road, that it would be impossible to reach Grand Bayou without swimming at least half a mile. Not being entirely satisfied in regard to the route from Madam Labarre's to Bayou Corn, I returned to that place, leaving the command about half a mile from the bayou to avoid crossing floating bridges. I proceeded with a squad of men to the bayou, crossed over, and found it impracticable to go to Bayou Corn except by boats, as all the bridges on the road have floated off, and those on the plantation roads are floating. I here saw a man moving his hogs from the vicinity of Bayou Corn. He came through the field in a boat. I was told by him that Bayou Corn was much higher than Grand Bayou. Being convinced of the impracticability of proceeding beyond Grand Bayou, either mounted or on foot, during the present stage of high water, I returned to camp, arriving about 9 o'clock last night. Saw no enemy during the day, nor could hear of any being in that country since Whitaker's raid on McCall's plantation.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. HILDRETH,
Major Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

HQRS. DETACH. SIXTEENTH INDIANA MOUNTED INFTY.,
Donaldsonville, La., May 12, 1865.

Sir: In compliance with instructions from the colonel commanding, I have the honor to report that on the morning of the 11th instant at sunrise I proceeded with forty men of my command on a scout toward Bayou Goula. On arriving at the Andrews plantation, now occupied by Madam Shief, I found a horse tied in the dooryard which evidently belonged to one of Brown's party. I searched the house, but did not find the men. I then started up the river road and met a party of six men of Brown's command and charged them. After firing one round they turned and fled by way of Reed's lane. I chased them some three miles, when they left the road and took to the woods. After following their trail about half a mile I found their horses tied in a dense cane-brake. Brought the horses away, having captured one of the party on the road; the balance escaped by hiding in the woods. I then returned to the river road and met more of Brown's party, who turned and ran by the way of the Richland road. After pursuing them rapidly to Como's plantation captured one of them; the other two took to the woods after leaving their horses, which fell into our hands. After returning again to the river road I sent Lieutenant Slade with fifteen men through the plantation roads to the rear of Bayou Goula, while Lieutenant Hawkins with ten men made a dash into the town, but found no enemy in the place. I then went as far as Ventress', and could not hear of any of Brown's party being in that vicinity during the day. The country beyond Ventress' is almost entirely overflowed.
with water. Being satisfied that I could do nothing more on the trip, I returned to camp with 2 prisoners and 10 horses captured during the day, arriving at camp about midnight.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. HILDRETH,
Major Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

Lieut. L. R. HALL,
Post Adjutant.

No. 9.

Hdqrs. Company A, 16th Indiana Mounted Infantry,
Thibodeaux, La., May 4, 1865.

SIR: In compliance with orders dated U. S. Forces, Thibodeaux, La., May 1, 1865, I have the honor of submitting the following report:

I took an escort of fifty men of this command, and on the 2d instant made a reconnaissance through Labadieville in the direction of Brulés Texas [and] Landry and Lake Verret. I advanced on the road leading directly from Labadieville to the lake a distance of ten miles, when I found it utterly impossible to go farther, the entire country being submerged in water. I then retraced my steps to Labadieville; thence up the Bayou La Fourche to the Brulé Texas road, which road I took and advanced to Brulé Texas, a distance of eight miles from the bayou, where I was again compelled to stop on account of water, having traveled two miles through water, which in many places was barely fordable. After resting a short time I returned to within one mile of Bayou La Fourche and went into camp, where I remained until 2 o’clock on the morning of the 3d instant, when I broke camp and started for the residence of Lieutenant Boudreaux, C. S. Army, who I understood was prowling through the neighborhood seven miles south of Labadieville. I surrounded the premises of his mother and searched them without finding him. I was informed by the colored people of that vicinity that he was in the habit of visiting the home of his mother almost every week for the purpose (they said) of conscripting and seizing prisoners. Having satisfied myself that he was not about, I returned to camp.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CYRUS CRAWFORD,

Lieut. Fred. H. CUTLER,
Post Adjutant.

No. 10.

Hdqrs. Company C, 16th Indiana Mounted Infantry,
Thibodeaux, La., May 10, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: In compliance to orders from post headquarters, I was detailed to take charge of a detachment of men from the Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry Regiment, the 9th instant, to make a recon-
Our LX. OPERATIONS ABOUT BRASHEAR CITY, LA. 247

naissange thorough and beyond Labadieville, via Bruîés Texas and Landry to the Shell Bank on Lake Verret, of which I have the honor to make the following report:

I arrived at Labadieville about dark the 9th instant, and found it was useless to undertake to go to Lake Verret that night, from what I could learn of high water; and then, to pass the evening as lively as practicable under the circumstances, I concluded to take the command and go back of Labadieville some two or three miles to an old sugar mill toward Mrs. Boudreaux's to see if Lieutenant Boudreaux or any other of the Confederate army could be found. After arriving at the sugar mill I sent two detachments in search, one to Lieutenant Boudreaux's sister's and one to his mother's. The one started to his mother's had to return without reaching the desired place on account of high water; the one to the sister's could find no trace of any Confederates and returned. I then went into camp for the night. Next morning after feeding we took up the line of march to Lake Verret, but on our arrival at Pugh's Texanna plantation, with the exception of a few acres, I found it inundated with water, the bridges floating, which made them impassable with horses, and not hearing of any Confederates that I could get at mounted, and having no yawls by which to convey troops through that section of the country, I abandoned the expedition and returned to camp this p.m. at 3 o'clock.

Respectfully submitted.

Your obedient servant,

W. A. INGOLD,
First Lieut., Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infty., Comdy. Co. C.

Lieut. FRED. H. CUTLER,
Post Adjutant.

No. 11.

HDQRS. COMPANY G, 16TH INDIANA MOUNTED INFANTRY,
Thibodeaux, La., May 9, 1865.

Sr: In compliance with orders from post headquarters, dated Thibodeaux, La., May 5, 1865, I have the honor of submitting the following report:

I took an escort of forty men and continued the pursuit of Lieutenant Boudreaux in the vicinity of Chachoula Station, Houma, and Bayou De Large. Leaving this place on the evening of the 5th instant, I proceeded to Chachoula by way of Terre Bonne, arriving there at 3 a.m. the 6th instant, where I went into camp, after having learned that Lieutenant Boudreaux had not been seen in that neighborhood for twelve hours previous to my arrival. I learned here that he went in the direction of Bayou De Large, and on the morning of the 6th instant moved by way of Houma, in the direction of Bayou De Large, where I understood from what I considered good authority that there was to be a wedding and ball that evening, at which place Lieutenant Boudreaux, if in the neighborhood, would most likely be found. While on the way, however, I learned of the whereabouts of a social gathering on Bayou Black, seven miles above Houma, at the residence of one Bodin. To this place I sent a sergeant and ten men, with instructions to allow no one to leave until I returned from Bayou De Large, where I had first been informed that Lieutenant Boudreaux and his gang of thieves would be most likely to rendezvous. After having made the proper disposal of the men in my command I proceeded at once to the residence of Madam Boudreaux, on Bayou De Large, where I found the dancing party. I quietly surrounded the house and proceeded to examine the papers of those present, to see who and by what authority they were there. To all interrogatories concerning Lieutenant Boudreaux I could get no information, every one present denying any knowledge of his whereabouts, protesting that he had not been there or in the neighborhood for months. After having satisfied myself that neither he nor his party were there, at least while I was there, I could not do otherwise than return, which I did without unnecessary delay. Having returned to Bayou Black, I proceeded with the entire command to the residence of Bodin, where I had stationed a sergeant and ten men the night previous for the purpose of guarding the premises, and awaiting my return from Bayou De Large. Immediately upon my arrival I proceeded to carefully examine the papers of all present. Finding no one there without proper authority or in any way suiting the description of the man I was in quest of, I allowed them to disperse and go to their respective homes. Not being able to attain the object in view, having failed to elicit any information of his whereabouts, I returned to camp by way of Houma, arriving here on the 7th instant. During the expedition I was assisted by Lieut. Cyrus Crawford, who proved an efficient officer; who, having been engaged on a previous expedition against Lieutenant Boudreaux, possessed much invaluable information concerning Lieutenant Boudreaux and his gang. It is with pride that I state that the men in my command in every particular proved subordinate and performed well their part.

Trusting this report, although somewhat meager, may prove satisfactory, I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES STEEL,

Lieut. Fred. H. Cutler,
Post Adjutant.

No. 12.

CAMP SIXTEENTH INDIANA MOUNTED INFANTRY,
Donaldsonville, La., May 1, 1865.

In obedience to verbal orders received from Colonel Fiske, I proceeded with Companies K and H, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry, on the 30th day of April on a scout to Bayou Goula, for the purpose of destroying the band of guerrillas commanded by Captain Brown. I met a portion of this band on Reed's plantation, about fifteen miles from this point, and pursued them eight miles, capturing 3 men, 3 horses, 1 shotgun, and 2 carbines. After scouring the country completely and learning nothing of the whereabouts of Captain Brown and the remainder of his band, I returned to camp, arriving here about 4 o'clock this morning.

Very respectfully submitted.

Your obedient servant,

JAMES E. MACKLIN,
Captain Company K, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

Lieut. L. R. Hall,
Post Adjutant.
No. 13.

BAYOU BŒUF STATION, May 13, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I left this station on the morning of the 10th instant with fifty men and one officer of the Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry in small boats, for the purpose of scouting the lakes and bayous north of Lake Palourde. I went out of Lake Palourde via La Fourche Pass; thence through Grass Lake and Four-Mile Bayou to the foot of Lake Verret; thence up Bayou Maxile to Bell River; thence down Bayou Long to Bayou Sorrel, and up the latter into Duck Lake; thence via Little Bayou Long to Old River, Bell River, Bayou Long, Bayou Milhomme, and Lake Palourde. I arrived back here this p. m., having traveled not less than 125 miles. I saw none of the enemy and heard of none, except the scout Ned Smith. I saw no land from the time of leaving Lake Palourde until I returned. The people, without exception, have moved away or are preparing to move.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JNO. L. RICE, Lieutenant-Colonel Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL, Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 14.

CHACAHOULA STATION, U. S. MILITARY RAILROAD,

May 7, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I left Tigerville, La., on Thursday evening, the 4th instant, at 5 p. m., with twenty-two men. I marched rapidly until 3 a. m., and rested two hours. Started again, and after an hour's marching I heard that Boudreaux and party were in the swamps, and that they were going thirty miles below Houma to a Mrs. Buford's house, on Little Rio. I marched until 2 o'clock the 5th instant, and losing all trace of them, and my men being very much fatigued, I thought it folly to continue the pursuit, so I retraced my steps and arrived here at 11 p. m. on the evening of the 5th.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

First Lieut. CHARLES S. COOPER, Adjutant Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry.

No. 15.

BAYOU BŒUF STATION, LA., May 7, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I left this station on the evening of the 4th instant, in pursuance of orders from headquarters District of La Fourche, with Second Lieutenant Pomponeau and twelve men of Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry, and fifteen men from the Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry, to proceed to Bayou Chêne for the purpose of looking for a strange boat containing five or six strange persons, who were reported to be moving about there in a suspicious manner, and also to watch the entrance of Bayou Black for the rebel Lieutenant Boudreaux and any other suspicious-looking persons going or coming from there. On oaring through a small cut-off just above the entrance of the Black we discovered a large skiff having six men in it, who on being ordered to halt, did not reply, but turned to the shore and attempted to enter the swamp. We opened fire on them at once. On reaching the skiff I found it empty and several shot holes through it. It being dark, it would have been useless to pursue them into the swamp. I proceeded at once to the houses on that side of the bayon for some distance, and brought off all the men and boats that might be used as a means of escape, taking them to the mouth of the Black. Passed the night there. On the morning of the 5th instant I went to the place of that affair. Near there I learned from an Indian that he had a wounded man at his camp. On reaching there I was very sorry to find that we had fired on innocent colored men, who are employed by Mr. Henderson on Bayou Black. I have heard since that another man is wounded and one missing. Soon after returning to the Black the strange boat made its appearance, having in it a sergeant, four men, and a prisoner. They had a pass from the provost-marshal at Brashear City. We next went down the Bayou Chêne nearly to Chirsy Point, when we returned near Mr. Napoleon Beal's. We remained till morning. Early on the 6th we came back to the mouth of the Black, where we staid until to-day. I found no suspicious persons there. Mr. Charles Escudier acted as guide.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EBEN P. BARKER,
Captain Company B, Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry.

Lieut. C. S. Cooper,
Seventy-fifth U. S. Colored Infantry, Post Adjutant.

No. 16.

CAMP NINETY-THIRD U. S. COLORED INFANTRY,
Brashear City, La., May 6, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to make the following report of an expedition to Butte-a-la-Rose, in obedience to verbal orders from Col. Simon Jones, commanding post at Brashear City, La.:

I left Brashear City on the evening of May 3 in command of two companies of the Ninety-third U. S. Colored Infantry, one on board the steam-boat Cornie, the other on board the gun-boat No. 43, commanded by Capt. L. S. Fickett. We arrived at Butte-a-la-Rose on the 4th of May at about 12 m., and found it abandoned, but everything indicated that it was recently occupied by about ten men, as papers found there showed, and in command of Gilbeau. We remained there about two hours, and destroyed everything that would serve as a shelter for rebels. Two muskets were captured there. We next proceeded to Oflutt's Mill for the purpose of taking in lumber. We tied up the boats there and commenced loading the Cornie with lumber. While there we were informed by Mr. Decker that Lawrence Lee, a rebel soldier, lived but a few miles below, when we manned a small boat and proceeded there at once, and succeeded in capturing him, also Teodile Gnedy, citizen of Saint Martin's Parish, when we returned to the boats and laid up during the night. In the morning, about 11, as soon as the Cornie was loaded, we started for Brashear City. During the day the gun-boat took on board 5,000 shingles. Arriving at Bayou Chêne, tied up for the night. Mr. Decker again informed us that about a mile below Captain Crosser, of the C. S. Army, resided, to which place we immediately started with a small boat. Did not find the captain at home, but captured 2 rebel soldiers belonging to Company A, Seventh Louisiana Cavalry, Captain Murphy's company; also 1 musket and several double-barrel shotguns. Total captured, 4 prisoners and 8 guns. The latter are in my possession, subject to your orders.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. WALLACE,

Lient. J. R. FYFFE,

MAY 1-9, 1865.—Scout from Ojo de Anaya, N. Mex.

FORT CRAIG, N. Mex., May 10, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report, for the information of the colonel commanding this post, that I left this post on the 27th ultimo, under the command of Lieut. L. F. Samburn, in pursuance of Special Orders, No. 93, dated headquarters, Fort Craig, N. Mex., April 27, 1865. In pursuance of Special Orders, No. 95, dated headquarters, Fort Craig, N. Mex., April 30, 1865, I left the spring Ojo de Anaya at about 12 m. on the 1st instant, taking twenty men and ten days' rations, and took a northeast course and marched about twenty-five miles and camped in the range of mountains east of this post, where I found plenty of wood and water and good grass. May 2, the guide told me it was about thirty miles to the next water. I left camp about noon, the guide taking a northeast course for about fifteen miles, and then changed the course to southeast. He kept that course till nearly sunset, when we came to a large open plain and the White Mountains in sight on the opposite side. I concluded it was best for me to cross the plain that night, so that I would not be seen by Indians if there were any in the vicinity, the guide telling me that he could go so as to find the water the next morning. About 11 p. m. we came to a low range of black lava rock and found it impossible to cross it, and camped for the night without water. Distance, about fifty miles. May 3, left camp at daylight, the guide saying it was about five miles to water, taking a northeast course for about three hours to the place where the guide expected to find water. On arriving at the place we found no water there, and then the guide told me he had lost his course by my traveling the night before. No one knew where to find water; men and animals beginning to suffer for water. I could see snow on the mountains to our right; I sent the guide and four men with all the canteens in that direction, telling them if they found water to fill the canteens and come back and meet the command, I stopping behind to get the men as nigh the snow as I could. I was getting them along very well until about noon, when the animals began to give out. I then started with all the men and animals that could travel for the snow on the mountains. As fast as a horse gave out I left the man and horse behind. About 4 p.m. we came to the foothills, only four men with me. The guide and the four men I sent ahead, for I could see their trail often. About 5 p.m. I came up where three of the men were, with all the animals given out, and one man had gone on foot to get to the snow. He had not been gone but a short time when he returned with the canteens filled with water, saying that he had found water about a mile ahead. I gave the animals a little water out of the canteens. I arrived at the water at 5.30 with three horses and filled all the canteens and started them back with the guide, and as fast as a man came into camp his canteen was filled and sent back. By that means I got all the men and animals into camp about 7 p.m. Distance, about thirty-five miles. May 4, I sent the guide out to find the water he was looking for the day before. He was gone about three hours, and came back and reported that he had found water in about fourteen miles to the southwest. May 5, left camp about 7 a.m., taking a southwest course, crossing over a point of the mountains, and found a large stream of water running west. I followed down the stream about ten miles and camped. Distance, about twenty-five miles. I found no sign of Indians. May 6, left camp at daylight and took a westerly course and arrived at the camp I left on the 2d instant about 5 p.m. Distance, about forty miles. May 7, I laid over this day to rest the animals. May 8, left camp at 7 a.m. and arrived at the spring Ojo de Anaya about 4 p.m. May 9, left camp at 7 a.m. and arrived at the river at 1 p.m., when I found that I could not cross my animals. I went into camp about one mile below the post, on the opposite side of the river.

very respectfully, your obedient servant,

James J. Billings,
Lieutenant, First California Cavalry.

Lieut. R. Hudson,
Post Adjutant.

May 2, 1865.—Affair on the Blue Earth River, Minn.

Headquarters District of Minnesota,
Saint Paul, Minn., May 4, 1865.

General: I have the honor to report that a party of hostile Sioux Indians massacred a family of whites, consisting of four or five grown persons, and wounded a child, at a point near the Blue Earth River, in the county of that name, in this State, on the 2d instant. They were being hotly pursued at the last accounts, and as they were within the line of outposts it is to be hoped the party will not be permitted to escape, my orders to sub-commanders prohibiting the taking of any prisoners. A half-breed deserter from Brackett's Battalion, known to have accompanied the war party from the neighborhood of the British line, has been apprehended by the citizens. I have demanded his delivery to the military authorities, and if his identity is established
I shall try him by military commission for a violation of the laws of war rather than by court-martial for desertion. I have reliable intelligence of several bands being upon the war path to the Minnesota and Iowa frontier, and I am making every possible arrangement to give them a warm reception. One party of forty, under the lead of "Black Legs," a notorious ruffian, is among the number. I applied for information to department headquarters some time since whether or not the line of small posts in the District of Iowa, south from Spirit Lake, would be established this year as formerly. It is of great importance that the line should be maintained, both for the security of the Iowa frontier as a continuation of the defenses of the Minnesota border, which otherwise can be turned on the south by raiding parties.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General.

Maj. Gen. S. R. CURTIS,
Commanding Department of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.

MAY 3, 1865.—Skirmishes on the Missouri River, near Boonville, Mo.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. Chester Harding, Jr., Forty-third Missouri Infantry; commanding District of Central Missouri.

No. 2.—Capt. Arthur A. Putnam, Fiftieth Wisconsin Infantry.

No. 1.

WARRENSBURG, May 6, 1865—1.20 p. m.

On the 3d instant Captain Arnold, of the Fiftieth Wisconsin [Seventh Missouri State Militia Cavalry], attacked a party of bushwhackers attempting to cross the Missouri River, about fifteen miles below Boonville. He killed 3 and wounded 2; captured all their horses, &c., 9 in number. Guerrillas are beginning to turn their forces west and to go through Jackson County once more. I have taken the necessary precautions.

CHESTER HARDING, JR.
Colonel, &c.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,
Post of Boonville, Mo., May 3, 1865.

COLONEL: I have the honor to report an engagement with nine men of Captain Weaver's company on a large island sixteen miles down the river. Learning that a body of guerrillas intended to cross the river at that point, I started in pursuit with seventeen men of Captain Miller's company and a citizen, who had given the information, as a guide. By hard riding we reached the island a few minutes after they had crossed. I arrested a man named Turner, who assisted them to cross. Leaving a part of the men to guard our horses, I crossed over with nine men and came upon the rebels after traveling about two miles, and attacked them. Making but little resistance, they took to the bush, leaving nine horses and saddles in our possession, which we secured. I continued to pursue them till dark before we came upon them again. It being so dark they made their escape after exchanging a few shots. Not having a sufficient number of men to secure them in the heavy underbrush, I discontinued the pursuit and returned to Boonville. One of the horses, which had been taken from our guide, I turned over to him, but neglected to take a receipt. He had described the horse before we captured them. I found in Captain Weaver's saddlebag the inclosed order* from General Rains, of the rebel army, authorizing him to raise troops to operate on the Missouri border. What disposition shall I make of the prisoner?

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. A. PUTNAM,

Captain, Commanding Post.

Col. C. HARDING,

Commanding District of Central Missouri.

---

MAY 3, 1865.—Affair near Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Report of Lieut. Benjamin F. Johnson, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS COMPANY B, CAVALRY DETACHMENT,

FIRST MISSOURI STATE MILITIA CAVALRY,

Pleasant Hill, Mo., May 7, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report to you that our neighborhood was visited on Thursday night last by a band of guerrillas, ten in number. Of the number three were known to be Sy Porter, Bill Reynolds, and Dave Pool. They killed a citizen by the name of Richard Conner, and a discharged soldier whose name was John G. Harper. I with ten men followed their trail to the Snibar Hills, but failed to overtake them.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BEN. F. JOHNSON,

Lieutenant, Commanding Station, Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Col. CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,

Commanding District of Central Missouri.

---

MAY 3–6, 1865.—Operations about Fort Adams, Miss.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY EXPEDITION,

Fort Adams, Miss., May 6, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that in pursuance of orders I arrived at this point on the morning of the 3d instant; disembarked

* Not found.
the command, and in the afternoon of that day sent a scouting party down to Tunica Bend. Found nothing in that direction. On the 4th instant I sent a party through Woodville to Jones' plantation, where I was informed some torpedoes were concealed. The officer in command on his return reported that the torpedoes had been removed, and that he had learned they were being broken up and the powder was being sold to the citizens. Yesterday evening I embarked three squadrons, and landed them at Bayou Sara about 10 p.m., with orders to scout from Bayou Sara to Woodville and thence to this point. From the gun-boat officers at Bayou Sara I learned that Scott's brigade of Confederate cavalry, acting as escort to Jeff. Davis, are expected to cross the river between here and Bayou Sara in a few days; also that a force of 3,000 of our troops will be transferred from Morganza to Bayou Sara either to-day or to-morrow. The steamer Magnet brought information to the gun-boat Chillicothe (lying off the point) that Davis, with a small cavalry escort, had crossed the river at Quitman, a short distance above Natchez, on Sunday night last, but I do not credit this report. Official communication has been received at Woodville of the surrender of General Dick Taylor's army to General Canby, and I think that the majority of the scattering forces in this vicinity will come in and surrender at this point. I shall continue to operate between Fort Adams and Bayou Sara till I receive further orders from you.

I have the honor to remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. OSBAND.

Brigadier-General DAVIDSON,
Commanding District of Natchez.

MAY 3-21, 1865.—Expedition from Fort Laramie to Wind River, Dak. Ter.

HDQRS. NORTHERN SUB-DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Fort Laramie, Dak. Ter., June 6, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit, for the information of the general commanding, the following as my report of an expedition lately made as far west as Wind River:

I left here on the 3d of May with about seventy-five men of the Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry and Seventh Iowa Cavalry, under command of Captain Wilcox, of the latter regiment, for Platte Bridge. At the same time I sent Captain Krumme, of the First Nebraska Veteran Cavalry, with about sixty men of that regiment by way of Laramie Peak, to scout the country thoroughly and meet me at Platte Bridge, which he did, seeing no signs of Indians. Receiving what was considered reliable information that there were about 300 Cheyenne lodges over near Wind River, I concentrated about 500 cavalry—400 of the Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, under Lieutenant-Colonel Plumb, and the balance under Captain Wilcox. We marched at sundown on the 8th with seven days rations on horse and three on pack-mules, taken out of teams for that purpose, each officer and soldier having only one wool blanket, one gum blanket, and an overcoat. It snowed for two days and nights, covering up the grass so that the horses were nearly famished. The command suffered terribly with cold, as there was no wood, having to rely upon a scanty supply of sagebrush. My marches were all made during the night, as the moon was favorable, and the better to beguile the Indians. The Cheyenne trail was struck on the morning of the 12th, but had every sign of being old. This was on Lake Fork, tributary of Wind River. Scouts were immediately scattered all over the country and brought back positive information that the Indians, after making a circuit toward Sweetwater Mountains, turned due north and crossed Beaver Creek Pass road toward Powder River. One scout went as far as Wind River and reported that the Indians had merely passed by with their lodges in the direction we were then encamped, but without halting. The village had evidently come down from Powder River Mountains with the intention of finding a suitable encampment somewhere in our vicinity, but finding the grass and game scarce were compelled to go back again. I had not rations to carry me any farther away from the bridge, as I had marched four days at the rate of thirty-five miles each day. Nearly one-half of my horses were given out, for the grass was not sufficient to keep them in heart.
I have never traveled a country where there was less for the animals to subsist on, and old Mr. Bridger, of mountain fame, who accompanied me as a guide, assured me that although the country in that section was usually barren, yet in all his experience he had never seen it as it was then.

On the evening of the 12th I started Captain Wilcox back to Platte
Bridge with his command and broken-down horses of the Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, keeping close to the north side of the Sweetwater Mountains, for the purpose of picking up any straggling war party, and with the balance of the command I made for Sweetwater bridge, by the south side of the mountains, sending a large scout by the head of Popoagie River toward Three Crossings. No Indians were seen or even other than old trails. I arrived at Platte Bridge on the 17th and returned here on the 21st, having traveled a distance of 450 miles.
The Indian scouts must have kept watch of us, for no sooner had we returned to the line than their war parties were harassing the stations at all points. It is no manner of use to attempt doing anything unless an expedition is started, striking Powder River about 100 miles north of where I was; that is, north of here and west, where a large and strong fort should be built and a supply of rations kept on hand to replenish the pack-saddles from time to time. A campaign must be made with pack-mules to transport supplies. From Powder River the villages could be struck. The war parties now harassing us would draw in to defend villages, and thus a fight of some magnitude might be gotten, as they are keen for a tussle, believing they can clean us out, and there is some semblance of excuse for this belief from their recent successes. I prefer they should feel that way, at least until they concentrate for action. The Cheyennes, and Sioux who are with them, will number about 4,000 fighting men. No time is to be lost in making campaign, but horses are in a woeful condition, having had no corn for a mouth.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

Capt. GEORGE F. PRICE,
MAY 4, 1865.—Skirmish at the Star House, near Lexington, Mo.

LEXINGTON, May 4, 1865.

Captain Arnold, who left Warrensburg this morning with escort of ten men, was attacked today the other side of the Star House, two miles out, by between twenty and thirty bushwhackers. They were lying near the road and waited for the escort going from here to Warrensburg to pass out of hearing. After it met Captain Arnold they attacked him. They lost one man and brought in one severely wounded. The captain returned the fire and was pursued one mile. A messenger having arrived before the captain, I had already started Captain Ber-

B. K. DAVIS.

Major.

Colonel HARDING.

MAY 4-6, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Noble's Farm, Ark.

HDQRS. COMPANY L, THIRTEENTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY, VOLS.,

Pine Bluff, Ark., May 6, 1865.

Sir: In obedience to orders I received at post headquarters on the 4th instant, I with other officers proceeded to make a scout. Capt. Ed. Brown started from this place at 3 a.m. with fifty men, with orders to proceed to the south side of Bayou Bartholomew to guard the crossings of the same; and I with fifty men at 6 o'clock on the same day proceeded down the north side of the above-named bayou, with the expectation of capturing Captain Kidd and his lawless band of robbers; and when I reached Harris' farm, some twelve miles from here, at 10 a.m., I found that Kidd and his band had left for Monticello on the morning previous. I still continued the march down the bayou. I reached Mr. Derrisaw's at 3 p.m. I captured George Wyatt. He claimed to be a private soldier in the Second Arkansas Cavalry. I marched on and formed a junction with Captain Brown at daylight on the 5th at John Rodgers', some eighteen miles south of this place. I there fed my horses and men and rested about two hours, after which I swam my horses to the south side of the bayou and marched down the bayou to Wyatt's farm, and there captured one Clay Haynes, and he also claimed to be a member of the Second Arkansas Cavalry. Marched on and came to Noble's farm at 3 p.m., and there captured Lieutenant Noble. I then consulted the officers and turned for Pine Bluff. I had at the time 3 prisoners and 5 horses, 6 guns, and 1 army revolver. The prisoners and arms I turned over to the provost-marshal on my arrival at this place on the 6th instant. The horses I turned over to the post quartermaster on the same day. I did not hear of any force this side of the Saline River except Kidd and his band. I did not lose a man or horse.

I am, captain, your most obedient servant,

G. W. SUESBERRY,

Capt. Company L, Thirteenth Illinois Cav. Vols., Comdg. Scout,

Capt. S. MONTE CAMBERN,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

17 B R—VOL XLVIII, PT 1
LOUISIANA AND THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI.

MAY 5, 1865.—Skirmish in the Perche Hills, Mo.

STURGEON, May 5, 1865.

A scout from this post under Sergeant Tate, of Company C, had a skirmish with a band of guerrillas this morning in Perche Hills. Killed 1, wounded 2, captured several horses, arms, &c. A company of Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry had a skirmish this morning. I have heard nothing yet.

R. LEONARD,
Major, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia.

Lieutenant Tidswell,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

MAY 6-11, 1865.—Scout from Little Rock to Bayou Meto and Little Bayou, Ark.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Maj. Gursey W. Davis, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry.

No. 1.

HQRS. SEVENTY-NINTH REGT. U. S. COLORED TROOPS,
Little Rock, Ark., May 12, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report of the expedition which left Little Rock on the steamer Rose Hambleton May 6, 1865:

In accordance with orders from Major-General Solomon, I embarked at 7 p. m. with 250 men of the Seventy-ninth U. S. Colored Infantry, and seventy-five men of the Fourth Arkansas Cavalry. I arrived at Pine Bluff on the morning of the 7th, and agreeable to instructions I reported to Brigadier-General Clayton for the purpose of procuring guides, &c. The general informed me that no considerable body of the enemy was on the south bank of the river, and that he was about to send a cavalry scout down the north bank; and if not contrary with your orders or instructions, he would like for me to land my force near the mouth of Bayou Meto and act in conjunction with his forces from above. I accordingly dropped down to Doctor Price's plantation, which is on an island formed by the waters of Big and Little Bayous, and scouted the island thoroughly, but found nothing but a few Government mules, the enemy having been driven from that place by high water. As soon as I obtained perfect information as to their character I ordered no guerrillas to be taken. Ascertaining from good authority that they were above the mouth of Little Bayou, I moved to that point and made several scouts at different points where it was practicable to move infantry. I found their outposts at General Williams' plantation, and ascertained from a citizen that the enemy belonged to a Texas regiment. I moved rapidly up the river, sometimes by boat, in order to avoid the difficult swamps. On the 9th I met Major Davis, of the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, in command of the scout from Pine Bluff, and from him I ascertained that he had just arranged to receive the surrender of Vangine, Maybery, and Husband, with their men, and that the most of them were in his camp, the rest having been permitted to go to their comrades for the purpose of bringing them in. Being out of rations, and considering the main object of the expedition gained, I returned to this post, stopping at Pine Bluff long enough to notify General Clayton of the result of the expedition and to obtain rations. I landed at this place on the morning of the 11th, having been absent four days and five nights. I instructed Lieutenant Demby to move the cavalry up by land from Pine Bluff, as General Clayton wished to send a number of prisoners by boat to this post, and the boat being already badly crowded. The mules and horses captured were turned over to the proper authorities upon arrival at this place.

I have the honor, sir, to remain, your very obedient servant,

R. G. WARD,

Lieut. A. S. KENDRICK,

No. 2.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., May 11, 1865.

Sir: Pursuant to orders, I left Pine Bluff on the 7th, taking the north side of the Arkansas River. Proceeded to the Lightfoot farm. Camped for the night, capturing one prisoner. 8th, went in search of Vangine. My advanced guard discovered him on the opposite side of Plum Bayou. Fired upon him, but he escaped and fled to the cane. Dismounted a few men and crossed the bayou (this is swimming to a horse); discovered Vangine making signs for a truce; admitted him. He expressed a desire to surrender, and stated that Captain Maybery wished to do the same, and that if I would wait on him he would send for Maybery. I did so. Maybery came and expressed the same desire, and promised to meet me at Colonel East's on the evening of the 10th with all their men, for the purpose of surrender, which they failed to do. Proceeded down the river as far as Lewis' Landing. Learned there that Captain Husband and his command wished to surrender and give up the contest. Mr. Lewis proceeded to Husband's command and brought the same to me. Husband and his men seemed very anxious to give up, and only asked that they be allowed their horses and side arms for self-protection against Jayhawkers and robbers. I could accept no conditional surrender. The party accompanied me in conference with higher authority. I believe Captain Husband and his men to have been honorable Confederate soldiers, and ask for them your kind consideration.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. W. DAVIS,
Major, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, Commanding Scout.

Capt. S. MONTE CAMBERN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
MAY 8, 1865.—Skirmish near Readsville, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS,
Warrenton, Mo., May 11, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that on Monday, the 8th instant, Corporal Gentry, with five men of my company, while on a scout in the western part of Montgomery County, and hearing of a few bushwhackers taking breakfast at a house near Readsville, Callaway County, and while on his way, fell in with twelve bushwhackers, who passed themselves as Fulton Militia, being dressed in Federal uniform. The two squads rode along together near three miles, when they ordered them to halt and demanded them to surrender, and commenced firing simultaneously, killing 2 soldiers, wounding 2, and capturing 1. One man made his escape unhurt. There were two citizens, old soldiers, with my men, both supposed to be killed. The bushwhackers then took the prisoner and started a northeast course, telling the prisoner if he would pilot them to the Troy road, near Florence, they would spare his life. On the way the bushwhackers asked many questions concerning the disposal of troops in this and other counties, stating that there would be a large number of bushwhackers in Missouri this summer. On arriving at the Troy road, near Florence, six of the bushwhackers took the prisoner, Tabourn Ford, out to shoot him. He dodged the first shot, and made his escape, severely wounded. None of the bushwhackers have as yet been caught. My men are after them.

I am, general, with respect, your obedient servant,
S. W. HOPKINS,
Captain, Comdy. Warren County Volunteers, Missouri Militia.

Brig. Gen. C. B. Fisk,
Commanding District of North Missouri.

MAY 8–10, 1865.—Scout in Saline, La Fayette, and Cooper Counties, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS STATION,
Marshall, Mo., May 10, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that I have had my entire available force scouting in Saline, La Fayette, and Cooper Counties. I was in the saddle three days in command in person. On the morning of the 8th instant I struck their trail east of Brownsville, and followed them down to Napton’s Bridge. There nineteen of the rascals crossed. We followed them till about 4 p.m., when about three miles east of Jonesburg, Mo., we dispersed them, but found no picked horses or stolen goods. I divided my men after them, some of them going toward the mouth of the La Mine River, others of the guerrillas making toward Saline City. My men are still after them. I am of the opinion that the largest number of the rebels went south of Boonville and will strike the Missouri River about Jolly’s Bottom. I shall give them no rest in this county while horseflesh is able to move and men to ride. I likewise have the infantry moving to the best advantage. My cavalry have marched sixteen miles each day; that is, made an average for each man sixteen miles. There are but few bushwhackers in this county.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES D. EADS,
Capt. Company M, 1st Cav. Missouri State Militia, Comdg. Station.
Capt. C. G. LAURANT,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Dist. of Central Missouri, Warrensburg, Mo.

MAY 8-20, 1865.—Scout from Plum Creek to Midway Station, Nebr. Ter.

HQRS. COMPANY G, FIRST NEBRASKA VET. VOL. CAV.,
Plum Creek, May 22, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that, in accordance with verbal instructions from General Connor, commanding District of the Plains, I left this garrison in command of fifty-eight enlisted men, mounted, thoroughly armed and equipped, with twenty-one days' rations, in pursuit of the band of Indians who made the attack upon the train near Mullahla's Station on the 5th instant. Leaving on the 8th instant at 4 p.m., marched with my command and bivouacked at French's old ranch, ten miles west from this post. On the following morning I found it not only impracticable but impossible to ford the Platte River at that point. Left orders with my command to prepare for an early start and speedy march. I proceeded to make examination farther up the river, and meeting with the same success as first. When near Mullahla's I was informed that a party of Indians had made a descent upon the stock at that station. Believing it to be the same band ordered to pursue, I immediately dispatched a messenger with instructions for the command to hastily prepare three days' rations. I then took trail of Indians; traveled due south across Plum Creek to a point on Mud Creek; passed down that stream to within ten miles of its mouth. My advance guard pressed the Indians (ten in all) so closely they took to the canons. It now being dark we lost the trail, and were compelled in consequence to close further chase for the day. On 10th, at early dawn, I moved rapidly down Mud Creek to its mouth. Finding no trail or signs, I halted for some two hours for the purpose of grazing my animals and sending out a reconnoitering party to ascertain sign of Indians. Making no further discoveries I then returned and encamped for the night upon my old camp of the 9th. On 11th, at 7 a.m. I moved in a northwest course between the Mud and Plum Creeks, arriving at Midway Station at 5 p.m. During this day's march found the grass short and poor; no water during the day. Many of my ponies, being in weak condition, gave out and broke down from fatigue, want of water, &c., and were with much difficulty brought into camp. After a rest of two hours at Midway I moved east to Mullahla's; encamped. 12th, this morning with Pat. Mullahla and several other citizens, old residents of this valley who are conversant with the crossings of the Platte, together with my command, I made several attempts to cross, getting at one time about three-quarters of the way over; was forced back and found it a matter of utter impossibility to effect a crossing. At 4 p.m., upon receiving a telegram from colonel commanding East Sub-District, to the effect that Indians had attacked our men at Dan. Smith's, with instructions to proceed at once, I immediately started for the scene of attack. Upon arriving at Midway I was there informed by Captain Ivory that he had just returned from Dan. Smith's, and that the Indians had driven off the stock across the river. Being at a late hour, I concluded to remain and attempt another crossing at that point, in conjunction with Captain Ivory, on the following a.m. 13th, after procuring two ox wagons, placing false bottoms in the beds, loading ammunition, saddles, &c., then proceeded to the river, selecting four of my best men and horses, who proceeded in the stream about midway, when two horses floundered and unhorsed the riders; were compelled to put back to shore. After making several other ineffectual attempts were forced to give up the idea of crossing, and returned to camp and marched to Dan. Smith's, with a view of crossing on the following morning. On 14th a detail of my command was stripped of their clothing and the largest and best ponies selected for another effort to cross. One man of the party, by almost superhuman effort, arrived on the opposite bank; returning, reported it impossible to get ammunition over without damaging to such an extent as to render it useless. The smaller and weaker portion of my ponies could by no means cross. 15th, this day, with my command, I remained on the river bank, the stream not receding. 16th, remaining in camp day before; sending out, however, reconnoitering parties to ascertain signs or whereabouts of Indians. 17th, at 8 a.m., I moved with my command east to Mullahla's Station, arriving at 1 p.m.; encamped. 18th, remaining in camp with greater portion of my command, sending out parties to scout and scour the country around, though finding no signs of Indians. 19th, I took twenty-five men and moved south, then west, and again east, traversing the country thoroughly between Plum Creek and Midway, and for miles around. Finding no signs or indications of Indians, returned to camp at dark same evening. 20th, early this morning I received telegraphic dispatch from the colonel commanding East Sub-District to return to the garrison at Plum Creek, which I did, arriving about 12 m., traveling altogether about 200 miles. Not being able to take a sufficiency of forage, the grass short, my animals fared badly, and many gave out and broke down. They are, however, entirely unfit for service of this kind. I herewith inclose a diagram* of the country passed over.

I am, lieutenant, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS J. WEATHERWAX,
Captain, Commanding Detachment.

Lieut. S. A. Lewis,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter.

MAY 8–22, 1865.—Expedition from Spring Hill, Ala., to Baton Rouge, La.

HQRS. SECOND BRIG., SECOND DIV. OF CAVALRY,
MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Baton Rouge, La., May 24, 1865.

I respectfully submit the following report:

On the 8th day of May, 1865, having previously assembled my command at Spring Hill, Ala., I moved with the same for Baton Rouge, La.
My command was comprised as follows: Third Michigan Cavalry, Major Nugent commanding; Fourth Tennessee Cavalry, Lieutenant-Colonel Thornburgh commanding; Tenth Illinois Cavalry (detachment), Major Willis commanding; First Company Pontoniers (detachment), Lieut. A. M. Conrad commanding. The supply train consisted of 100 wagons, transferred to my acting assistant quartermaster a few days before in most miserable condition. The animals were old, broken down, and generally unshod. On the 6th of May most of the teamsters transferred with the train deserted, consequently a detachment of the Fourth Wisconsin Cavalry, from the camp of distribution in Mobile, was directed to report to me for the purpose of supplying, so far as practicable, their places. Strict orders were given (copies of which accompany) to prevent pillaging or annoying in any way the people in the country through which we were to pass, and it was announced as my intention to secure by conciliation and kindness the good will of the people for and toward the representatives of the Federal Government. May 8, left Spring Hill; marched thirteen miles. May 9, marched sixteen miles; laid a pontoon bridge across Dog River, and pioneers bridged Rocky Creek. May 10, at Chickasaw River, which was bridged with pontoons; corduroyed the road for nearly a mile; marched sixteen miles. May 11, crossed Leaf River on pontoons at Roberts' Ferry; river 250 feet wide; marched eleven miles. May 12, marched eighteen miles; pontooned one creek. May 13, at Enon Post-Office; marched nineteen miles. May 14, pontooned Black Creek; marched twenty-two miles. May 15, marched to Pearl River, passing through Columbia to Atkinson's Ferry, a distance of twenty-seven miles; laid a pontoon bridge 350 feet long across the Pearl. May 16, marched fifteen miles. May 17, marched seventeen miles, pontooning McGeen's Creek and the Bogue Chitto River, passing through Tyler'sville. May 18, marched twenty-one miles, pontooning the Bafia Chitto River and crossing the Tangipahoa River; passed through Osyka, Miss. May 19, marched eighteen miles; forded the Tickfaw River. May 20, marched twenty-five miles. May 21, marched twenty-five miles; pontooned the Amite River and forded the Comite River. May 22, marched nine miles; arrived in Baton Rouge. Total distance marched, 272 miles.

In passing through the portions of the States of Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana in which my route lay I saw nothing to indicate that a single Confederate soldier remained in arms. The expression among the people, and strongest with the paroled soldiers, was unanimously that of pleasure that the war is over, and that they were to be permitted to resume the occupations of peace. At Enon, Miss., I was notified by many of the residents of the presence in that vicinity of a party of bushwhackers who designed ambushing my advance. I made strenuous but ineffectual attempts to capture them. One of them shot and mortally wounded a soldier of the Third Michigan Cavalry who was stationed as a safeguard over a house on the road to Enon, which is the only casualty I have to report. I made every effort to prevent unlawful and unnecessary seizures. No grain and but few cattle were taken previous to my arrival at Pearl River. After crossing I had to depend upon the country for both, for which proper receipts were always given. The wagon-train animals were in such poor condition when I started many of them had to be left on the road. These were generally exchanged, in the proportion of two to one, for better animals whenever amicable arrangements of that kind could be made. I was much annoyed by negroes leaving their homes, taking animals with them, and attaching themselves to my command. All mules or horses found with the column improperly belonging there have invariably been returned whenever claimants appeared; but I apprehend that there are those who have lost such animals who will find them only with the crowd which I would not permit with me, but most likely followed me in. The condition of the command after the completion of the march was excellent. The cavalry horses and animals of the pontoon train were in better condition generally than when the command started. They, with all other animals, were supplied throughout with all the grain they could eat. The wagon trains, having been supplied with old and broken-down animals, lost many on the march, but those that came through are better fitted for a campaign to-day than they were three weeks ago. I have to speak very highly of the general conduct of all the troops of my command during the entire march, and to thank the officers of the different regiments, almost without exception, for their uniform assistance and for their attention to duty. The pontoon train which accompanied me with its detachment of pontoniers is one of the very best organizations I have ever met in service. I cannot commend Lieutenant Conrad, its commanding officer, too highly for his energy and very strict attention. The pontoon bridge was a most valuable auxiliary, and could not have been dispensed with. The pioneer corps, composed of detachments from each regiment, and all under the command of Lieut. Col. J. M. Thornburgh, Fourth Tennessee Cavalry, labored most assiduously, and is deserving of especial credit for the great amount of work done on the route, and for the thoroughness with which it was done.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. BAILEY,
Brig. Gen., Comdg. Second Brigade, Second Division of Cavalry,
Military Division of West Mississippi.

Maj. Gen. P. J. OSTERHAUS,
Chief of Staff, Military Division of West Mississippi.

MAY 10–19, 1865.—Scout from Fort Sumner, N. Mex.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Sumner, N. Mex., May 19, 1865.

Capt. BEN. C. CUTLER,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of New Mexico, Santa Fe, N. Mex.:

CAPTAIN: Inclosed please find the report of Captain Fritz, who returned to this post to-day. The Indians mentioned as being on the Rio Salado will be sent for on the 21st instant. I would respectfully suggest that a party of troops be ordered to bring in those said to be in the mountains east of Albuquerque.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. McCLEAVE,
Major, First California Cavalry, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

FORT SUMNER, N. Mex., May 19, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that I left this post on May 10, 1865, per Special Orders, No. 57, dated headquarters Fort Sumner, N. Mex., May 9, 1865, and proceeded in the direction of Fort Bascom to Rio de las Conchas and Chaperita, and from there down the Pecos back to Fort Sumner, where I arrived this morning. On my first day's march I met three Navajo Indians going to the Bosque, returning from hunting on the Llano Estacado. These Indians told me that all the Indians (Navajoes) out hunting now on the Llano were returning to the Bosque and would all be in in two days. They also told me they had seen Comanche signs some twenty miles from the Estacado, but only tracks of a few. On my arrival at Fort Bascom on the 12th instant I found eleven Navajoes there, who said they had been hunting and would return to Fort Sumner to-morrow. I requested Major Bergmann, commanding Fort Bascom, to confine them if they did not start for their homes next day, and all others that may come near his post without passes from the commanding officer at Fort Sumner. I then proceeded up the Canadian to the junction of the Concha and followed up the latter stream. Saw a great many herds, but no complaints were made by any one, although Navajoes had been seen daily up to four or five days before my arrival. Some twelve or thirteen were up near the Cero Corazon hunting at this time, but I could not find them. I told some of the herders to tell them from me to return at once to the Bosque, and last night they overtook me and showed me a pass they had permitting them to be absent on the Gallinas, near Hatch's Ranch. I met one William Booth, major-domo for Mr. Hayes, of Las Vegas, who told me that on May 11 he killed a Navajo Indian who was driving off three head of cattle. The Indians wounded him first with a rifle-bullet in the hand. There were four in all, but the others ran off. I then started for the Rio Pecos, and near Gallego's Ranch I found several Navajoes, three men and ten women, whom I brought home. Last night at Alamo Gordo a Navajo chief came to me and told me that on the Rio Salado, about fifty miles from here, there were a great many Navajoes who only were waiting for rain in order to go to Cañon de Chelly, and that they had asked him to go with them, and also that a woman came to his camp from mountains this side of Albuquerque (I suppose Sierra Pedernal), who said there were three rancherios in those mountains waiting for the Indians on the Salado and for rain in order to return to their own country.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EMIL FRITZ,

First Lieut. B. TAYLOR, Jr.,

Fifth U. S. Infantry, Post Adjutant.

MAY 11-14, 1865.—Expedition from Brazos Santiago, Tex., with skirmishes (12th and 13th) at Palmetto Ranch and (13th) at White's Ranch.

REPORTS.

No. 1.

HDQRS. THIRD BRIG., FIRST DIV., 25TH ARMY CORPS,

Camp near Brownsville, Tex., August 10, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report of the action at Palmetto Ranch, Tex., May 13, 1865, the last engagement of the war:

On the evening of May 11, 1865, an expedition consisting of 250 men of the Sixty-second U. S. Colored Infantry, properly officered, and fifty men and two officers of the Second Texas Cavalry (not yet mounted), the whole under Lieutenant-Colonel Branson, of the Sixty-second U. S. Colored Infantry, was sent by me, then commanding U. S. forces at Brazos Santiago, Tex., from the island onto the mainland. Crossing the Boca Chica, which owing to a severe storm was effected with difficulty, the force marched nearly all night, and after a short rest, early next morning attacked a strong outpost of the rebels at Palmetto Ranch, Tex., on the banks of the Rio Grande. The enemy was driven in confusion from his position, his camp, camp equipage, and stores falling into our hands. Some horses and cattle were also captured and a number of prisoners taken. Destroying such stores as could not be transported, Lieutenant-Colonel Branson returned to the vicinity of White's Ranch, and took up his position for the night. On the morning of the 13th about 200 men of the Thirty-fourth Indiana Veteran Volunteer Infantry, under Lieutenant-Colonel Morrison, joined Lieutenant-Colonel Branson. Assuming command in person of the forces thus united, I at once ordered an advance to be again made in the direction of Palmetto Ranch, which, upon the retirement of Lieutenant-Colonel Branson, had been reoccupied by the rebels. The enemy's cavalry were soon encountered. Driving them before us, we reached the ranch by 7 or 8 a. m., and again compelled the rebels to abandon it. Such stores as had escaped destruction the day previous were now destroyed, and the buildings which the enemy had turned into barracks were burned, in order that they might no longer furnish him convenient shelter. A detachment was here sent back to Brazos Santiago with our wounded and the prisoners and captures of the day previous. The remainder of the force was ordered to advance. Nearly the entire forenoon [May 13] was spent in skirmishing. The enemy, though taking advantage of every favorable position, was everywhere easily driven back. Early in the afternoon a sharp engagement took place, which, being in the chaparral, was attended with comparatively little loss to us.

In this engagement our forces charged the enemy, compelled him to abandon his cover, and, pursuing him, drove him across an open prairie beyond the rising ground completely out of sight. The enemy having been driven several miles since daylight, and our men needing rest, it was not deemed prudent to advance farther. Therefore, relinquishing the pursuit, we returned to a hill about a mile from Palmetto Ranch, where the Thirty-fourth Indiana had already taken its position. About 4 p. m. the rebels, now largely re-enforced, again appeared in our front, opening upon us with both artillery and small-arms. At the same time a heavy body of cavalry and a section of a battery, under cover of the thick chaparral on our right, had already succeeded in flanking us with the evident intention of gaining our rear. With the Rio Grande on our left, a superior force of the enemy in front, and his flanking force on our right, our situation was at this time extremely critical. Having no artillery to oppose the enemy's six 12-pounder field pieces, our position became untenable. We therefore fell back, fighting. This movement, always difficult, was doubly so at this time, having to be performed under a heavy fire from both front and flank. Forty-eight men of the Thirty-fourth Indiana Veteran Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Templer, put out as skirmishers to cover their regiment, were, while stubbornly resisting the enemy, cut off and captured by the enemy's cavalry. The Sixty-second U. S. Colored Infantry being ordered to cover our forces while falling back, over half of that regiment were deployed as skirmishers, the remainder acting as their support. This skirmish line was nearly three-quarters of a mile in length and, reaching from the river bank, was so extended as to protect both our front and right flank. Every attempt of the enemy's cavalry to break this line was repulsed with loss to him, and the entire regiment fell back with precision and in perfect order, under circumstances that would have tested the discipline of the best troops. Seizing upon every advantageous position, the enemy's fire was returned deliberately and with effect. The fighting continued three hours. The last volley of the war, it is believed, was fired by the Sixty-second U. S. Colored Infantry about sunset of the 13th of May, 1865, between White's Ranch and the Boca Chica, Tex. Our entire loss in killed, wounded, and captured was 4 officers and 111 men. In several instances our men were fired upon from the Mexican side of the Rio Grande. Upon our occupation of Brownsville a few days later it was reported, upon what appeared to be good authority, that during the engagement a body of Imperial cavalry crossed the Rio Grande from Matamoras to Brownsville, doubtless with a view of aiding the rebels. Reports in detail of this action were forwarded to department headquarters at New Orleans shortly after the engagement took place. As these reports may never have reached the Adjutant-General’s Office, the foregoing statement of the last actual conflict between hostile forces in the great rebellion is respectfully submitted.

I am, general, with high respect, your most obedient servant,

THEODORE H. BARRETT,
Colonel Sixty-second U. S. Colored Infantry.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. L. THOMAS,
Adjutant-General U. S. Army.

No. 2

* * *

HDQRS. SIXTY-SECOND REGT. U. S. COLORED INFANTRY,
Brazos Santiago, Tex., May 18, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to submit the following detailed report of the operations of the troops under my command on the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th of this month:

On the morning of the 11th, in pursuance of instructions from Col. T. H. Barrett, commanding post, I reported at 4 a. m. at your headquarters at the landing with 250 men, properly officered, ready to cross to Point Isabel. A storm coming, and steamer intended to be used for ferry breaking her machinery, I returned, as ordered, to camp, and prepared to cross at Boca Chica, with 100 rounds of ammunition and seven days' rations (afterward five days' only, by Colonel Barrett's verbal order). Owing to a severe storm the crossing was with great difficulty effected by 9.30 p. m., with 250 of the Sixty-second U. S. Colored Infantry, and 50 men of Second Texas Cavalry, not mounted, under First Lieutenant Hancock and Second Lieutenant James. Two six-mule teams were taken to haul surplus rations, ammunition, &c. At 2 a. m. of the 12th, after making a long circuitous march, we surrounded White's Ranch, where we expected to capture a rebel outpost of sixty-five men, horses, and cattle, but they had been gone a day or two. Owing to the exhausted condition of the men I could not reach Palmetto Ranch before daylight to surprise it, and therefore hid my command in a thicket and among weeds on the banks of the Rio Grande one mile and a half above White's Ranch, where we remained undiscovered until 8.30 a.m., when persons on the Mexican shore seeing us started to give the alarm to the rebels. At the same time soldiers of the Imperial Mexican Army were marching up that bank of the river. I immediately started for Palmetto Ranch, skirmishing most of the way with the enemy's cavalry, and drove them, at noon, from their camp, which had been occupied by about 100 men and horses, capturing 3 prisoners, 2 horses, and 4 beef-cattle, and their ten days' rations, just issued. Halted on the hill at Palmetto Ranch to rest and feed men and animals. While there at 3 p.m., a considerable force of the enemy appeared, and the position being indefensible, I fell back to White's Ranch for the night, skirmishing some on the way, and had one man of Second Texas Cavalry wounded. At the latter place sent a message to Col. T. H. Barrett, commanding post Brazos Santiago, who joined me at daybreak of the 13th with 200 men of the Thirty-fourth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. I at once started forward by Colonel Barrett's order, and skirmishing soon commenced; continued all the morning. A halt was made at Palmetto Ranch and the remaining supplies of the enemy that had escaped the flames the day before were now burned. Moving two miles forward a sharp fight took place in the thicket on the river bank; one man severely wounded therein.

Afterward, by Colonel Barrett's order, fell back one mile and a half to a bluff on the river, about twelve miles from Boca Chica, to get dinner and rest for the night. Here at 4 p.m. a large force of the enemy's cavalry was observed endeavoring to gain our rear. I was ordered with the regiment to form line obliquely to the rear, faced toward them. As soon as formed, and while awaiting expected cavalry charge, the enemy from a hill up the river (one mile and a half farther on) opened with artillery, doing no damage and creating no panic in my command, when I moved off, as ordered by Colonel Barrett, in retreat, furnishing 140 men for skirmishers, under Captains Miller and Coffin and Lieutenants Foster and Mead. They kept the enemy at a respectful distance at all times and did their duty in the best possible manner. Some temporary confusion was created by a portion of the Thirty-fourth Indiana breaking through my regiment at double-quick while I was marching in quick time, but order was immediately restored. The retreat was conducted by the right flank, for the reason that the nearest body of the enemy, 250 strong, with two pieces of artillery, were evidently trying to gain our rear and a favorable opportunity to charge, which was each time prevented by halting my command and coming to a front, thus facing him with the river at our backs. The force engaged with our skirmishers up the river was not immediately feared by the battalion, being so much farther distant and their fire, both of artillery and cavalry, very inaccurate. Owing to this same flanking force of the enemy, our skirmish line could not be relieved without exposing the men and our colors to capture while rallying. Our losses of ordnance, seven Enfield rifles and accoutrements, of camp and garrison equipage light. Casualties, two men missing, supposed to be in the hands of the enemy.* The men did their duty nobly. Lieutenant Kantrener, my acting adjutant, was especially gallant, assisting in every part of the field. Captain Dubois and Lieutenants Stewart and Franzman stuck to their places and kept their men in order under very trying circumstances. First Sergeants Shipley, Company E, and Brown, Company D, proved themselves, as far as field duty is neces-necessary, fit to command companies. We reached Boca Chica at 8 p.m. and crossed at 4 a.m. of the 14th, having at the time four men missing, two of whom afterward escaped from the enemy. The entire operation demonstrated the fact that the negro soldiers can march; also that this regiment can keep order in the ranks and be depended upon under trying circumstances. Great skill in skirmishing was exhibited by Captain Miller and Lieutenant Foster and the men under their command. The Texas cavalry, not yet mounted, officers and men, while under my command, behaved splendidly.

* Nominal list of casualties (here omitted) shows five men wounded.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DAVID BRANSON,

Lieut. J. B. Rush,

MAY 12-14, 1865.—Scout from Cottonwood, Nebr. Ter.

Report of Lieut. Martin B. Cutler, First Battalion Nebraska Cavalry.

Post Cottonwood, Nebr. Ter., May 18, 1865.

Lieutenant: I have the honor to make the following report:

I was sent with twenty-three mounted men (eighteen of my company and five of Company C, Third U. S. Volunteer Infantry) east as far as Smith's Ranch as escort to Surgeon Willey, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, to attend wounded soldiers at Smith's Ranch and to render what assistance I could to Capt. C. F. Porter. Left Cottonwood at 3 p.m. May 12, 1865, expecting to return same evening or following morning. When arriving at Gilman's Station, fifteen miles east of this post, I found that Capt. C. F. Porter was after Indians who had shot two men at Smith's Ranch, and also had driven off some of Smith's stock, and that he was crossing Platte River two miles above Smith's Ranch in pursuit of said Indians. I borrowed two pounds of bacon each for my men, going with the ambulance to within about two miles of Smith's Ranch. The surgeon thinking he would not need the escort for that short distance, and as he could have an escort on return trip to post Cottonwood, I started to join Captain Porter, who was at the time going out of the river on the north side. Finding the place he had gone into the river, I halted about ten minutes, had the men secure their arms and ammunition, and started to cross the river about 6.30 p.m. At place of crossing the river is about one mile wide and from two to six feet deep, without any islands till within a short distance of the north bank of the river. Succeeded in getting nineteen men and eighteen horses over the river by dark (including Lieutenant Sheffield, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, who went as a volunteer, and myself). Lost one horse in river and sent back three horses after finding that they could not make the crossing. Some of the horses were not able to carry their riders but a short distance, the men having to swim or wade by the side of their horses a good share of the way, thereby losing their ammunition. One of the horses that did get over had given out. Left him and rider and the man who lost his horse in the river, with orders to return to Smith's Ranch in the morning.

On examination I found nearly all the ammunition destroyed by water, having left only fifteen rounds to the man, and only eighteen men, including Lieutenant Sheffield and myself, able to go on. Captain Porter had been gone about two hours in a north direction, as I learned from one of his men left on the bank of the river to inform me of his course. I left the river just after dark, marching in a northerly direction for the distance of about four miles to the bluffs where Captain Porter was last seen, but could not follow his trail in the night. Thinking that Captain Porter would travel ten or twelve miles, being two hours in advance, and wishing to be in his vicinity in the morning, I marched my command about fifteen miles, camping about 11 o'clock. At daylight in the morning I scattered the men in all directions to find the trail. Found it at 7 a.m., May 13, about five miles west of camp. I followed the trail as fast as possible for about four hours, having marched about twenty or twenty-five miles, most of the time in a cañon running from northwest to southeast, leaving it three times, going up on the bluffs for a mile or so and then returning. Arriving on the high prairie at the head of this cañon the trail could no longer be seen, they having scattered out without leaving any sign to follow them by. I then separated the men at intervals of 100 yards and continued on for about five miles. Could not discover the trail. When about twenty miles from the Platte River one of the men of Company C, Third U. S. Volunteers, was taken sick. I was forced to send a man back with him to the river, thereby reducing our number to sixteen men. Concluding that Captain Porter had lost the trail at the same place and had returned by some other route, and knowing that I was about forty miles from Platte River, the men being without water since the night and also short of ammunition, I could not take the advance, and if Captain Porter had returned and not knowing the distance to Wood River, as we had been going in a northwest direction, I thought best to return, which I did. Arrived at Platte River in the night. Crossed next morning. Found Captain Weatherwax with fifty men on south side, near Smith's Ranch. Said he would cross that day. I arrived at Gilman's Ranch at noon and at post Cottonwood at 6 p.m. May 14, 1865. Same evening heard that Captain Porter had returned.

I am, lieutenant, yours, very respectfully,

MARTIN B. CUTLER,
Lieut. EUGENE S. SHEFFIELD,
Seventh Iowa Cavalry, Post Adjutant.

MAY 13, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians at Dan Smith's Ranch, near Julesburg, Colo. Ter.

JULESBURG, May 13, 1865—5:30 p. m.

Twenty or thirty Indians attempted to run off stock this morning at Dan Smith's. Troops fought them all morning. Also attacked Captain Porter's post wagon five miles below Gilman's, wounding two men. Three Indians killed. Major O'Brien has sent all mounted men he has to assist Captain Porter.

Respectfully,

GEO. F. PRICE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
MAY 14, 1865.—Skirmish on the Little Piney, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., May 19, 1865.

Captain Murphy, with detachment of Texas and Pulaski County militia, attacked a party of guerrillas on headwaters of Little Piney, killing 3 and wounding 1. On the 14th instant a detachment of ten men of the same company, under a sergeant, attacked a party of thirty-five guerrillas near the same place, killing 2 and wounding 4. The guerrillas fled toward Hartville. With such leaders as Captain Murphy the militia will do good service.

JOHN MORRILL,
Colonel, Commanding.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis.

MAY 14-16, 1865.—Expedition from Brashear City to Ratliff's Plantation, La.

BRASHEAR, May 16, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report a tour of duty as officer in command of flag-of-truce boat, steamer Cornie, as per order dated, viz:

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Brashear, May 14, 1865.

COMDG. OFFICER BATTN. ELEVENTH U. S. COLORED HEAVY ARTY.:

Sir: You will furnish a detail of fifteen men, under the charge of Lieut. Charles H. Potter, to report on board the steamer Cornie immediately. The men will be fully equipped and armed with forty rounds of ammunition in their cartridge-boxes, and one day's rations in their haversacks. Lieutenant Potter will receive further instructions on board the Cornie.

By command of Lieut. Col. R. F. Atkins, Ninety-eighth U. S. Colored Infantry, commanding post:

W. H. STILLMAN,
Lieutenant and Post Adjutant.

Pursuant to the above order I embarked with the above detail specified at 5.15 p.m., May 14, 1865, and proceeded to the plantation of Mr. John Bertram Blanco, situated on Sand Bayou, about three miles from Brashear City, where we found the estate submerged, about four feet of water in the shallowest places. Being obliged to cut away the rafters of the cattle shed in order to place sufficient gang planks for the cattle to come on board the steamer, we were detained some time at this plantation, where we received on board about twenty-five head of cattle, twenty hogs and shoats; also the family of Mr. Blanco, consisting of Mr. John Bertram Blanco, wife, and three children; total, five. Then we received at Mr. Valgrand Verret's two beef-cattle, which we landed at Brashear Monday night, May 15, at 2 a.m., and crossed the river to Berwick, where we landed stock belonging to Blanco; thence took him and family to Felright's place, about a mile below Berwick.
Allow me to represent that in Sand Bayou, where we took on board Bertram Blanco and Verret, that the sweep of current was so powerful as to carry the steamer among the woods on the starboard quarter, doing some damage to the boat, fortunately extricated by the superior management of Captain Conklin; also among the intricate labyrinths of Bayou Penauchant, where we had removed Madam Ratliff. I cannot omit my commendation of his superior judgment. Thence we proceeded at 3 a.m. to Bear's plantation, where we took on board four cords of wood and left immediately for Mr. Ratliff's, where we received on board steamer thirty-five head of cattle, ten head of sheep, two head of hogs; also Mrs. Lydia Ratliff, N. C. Bigler (daughter of Mrs. Ratliff), Miss Julia Ann Ratliff (daughter of Mrs. Ratliff), Mr. N. C. Bigler, and Mr. Frank Beadle. Took on board two cows belonging to Beadle from Bayou Chêne. From there we came down Bayou Chêne to Bayou Penauchant, and passed through the most intricate swamp and bayou I have ever seen, for over twenty-five miles, where we arrived at 8 o'clock May 14, 1865, at a point about forty feet above the rise of water at that time. This is the only land I have seen for a distance of nearly fifty miles below Berwick. Shew Island, about half a mile from where we landed Mrs. Ratliff, is in Penauchant Lake, but not where we could reach with the steamer, and is considerably higher than any land in that precinct. At Madam Ratliff's we were obliged to leave sixty "gums" of bees drowned, or so infuriated as to be unapproachable. Beal's plantation, on Bayou Chêne, is inundated. Forty head of cattle we could not move. Mr. F. Beadle had ten head of cattle and many others we could not receive, that must evidently suffer, if not perish. The rise of water while we lay at Madam Ratliff's yesterday was nearly four inches in about four or five hours. Be kind enough to allow me to represent that there are no quarters on board steamer for any officer commanding any expedition; also that there is no flag of truce belonging to said boat.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES H. POTTER,

Lieut. W. H. Stillman,
Post Adjutant.

MAY 15-17, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Johnson's Farm, Ark., with skirmish (16th) on the Monticello Road.

HDQRS. COMPANY M, THIRTEENTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY,
Pine Bluff, Ark., May 17, 1865.

-CAPTAIN: In obedience to orders I proceeded on Monday, 15th instant, with thirty men to the Johnson farm. Lay there until 1 a.m. 16th instant, and proceeded with Captain Mallory on by-paths and neighborhood roads around by Price's, Strong's, and Harris'. Found no enemy at either place. Harris was not at home. His wife said Captain Kidd had taken him off twelve days ago, and she had not heard from him since. We proceeded from there to the upper Monticello road, and found fresh horse tracks coming toward Pine Bluff. I soon learned it was Lieutenant Dixon, of Captain Kidd's company, with eight or ten men. I pushed forward to Busby's Bridge, and hearing from citizens whom I met that Kidd with twenty men was moving toward Pine Bluff late Monday afternoon, I resolved (at the suggestion of Captain Mallory) to wait there a few hours, hoping to meet with him or Dixon. Placed one platoon under Sergeant Day, of Company M, about 300 yards this side of the house, and proceeded with the remainder below the crossing; secreted the horses and awaited his arrival. In about one hour he came with ten or twelve men, crossed the bayou, and perceiving us moving in his rear, he started in a gallop up the road, and ran in gunshot of Sergeant Day's platoon. Perceiving them, he halted only long enough to fire one volley, and wheeled to his left into the brush, and plunging through a dense thicket and morass succeeded in reaching the bayou and crossing, although the fire was vigorously returned by my men, and the whole party headed off from passing up or down the bayou. We captured one pri-oner and several official orders and documents belonging to Captain Kidd, including his company roll, all of which were brought in yesterday by Captain Mallory. I do not know that any were wounded. The party was not so large in the afternoon as the forenoon. I came back as far as McGee's, three miles, hoping to meet with Dixon, but not meeting with him I turned through the back country down the bayou, hoping to meet with each of them. I pushed on four miles below Busby's Bridge to Rodgers' (one of Kidd's favorite haunts), but Dixon had not been there, and Kidd with a few men only had passed in a great hurry about two hours before I arrived. I moved from there on the other side of the bayou up to Busby's Bridge again, and, hoping to intercept Dixon or some straggling party, I camped there for the night. Nothing occurred. I arrived in camp at noon to-day. My opinion is that Kidd and Dixon will unite and operate somewhere in the bottom below here for a short time, or will fall back about Branchville, between here and Monticello. I am well satisfied that there is a small force at Hamburg and Lacey, and if a scout of 100 or 150 men should be sent down there and properly managed a great many would lay down their arms and the remainder would be easily captured.

I have the honor to be, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. NORRIS,
Captain Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry, Comdy. Scout.
Capt. S. MONTE CAMBERN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

MAY 18, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians near Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter.

POST COTTONWOOD, NEBR. TER., MAY 22, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I have received information by letter from Jefferson Fields, late fifth sergeant of this company, to the effect that on the 10th instant he left Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in charge of a detachment of men for Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter.; and on the 18th instant was attacked by Indians and lost 2 men killed and 6 wounded, he being one of the latter, having received an arrow through his left shoulder. Among the killed was Private William J. Mers, of... this company, and among the wounded, beside the above mentioned, was Private Rinaldo Hedges, also of this company. One of the wounded men was scalped. The wounded are at Fort Kearny. Fields further states that before leaving Fort Leavenworth he made application for arms, but none were furnished him. In my opinion, the officer who ordered him away from Fort Leavenworth, unarmed as he was, to make a march of nearly 300 miles through a country known for the most part to be infested by a savage and barbarous enemy, and unaccompanied by any armed force whatever, committed a grievous error, and should be held to account for so flagrant a breach of humanity, not to say neglect of duty; and I beg leave to call the attention of the commanding officer of the regiment to the facts in the case, and respectfully request that he take the matter in hand and adopt such measures as will tend to attach the blame where it belongs, so that the guilty as well as the innocent may share in the sufferings caused by some unworthy official dignitary's mismanagement. It is too bad to have men thus massacred and not institute an inquiry into the primary cause thereof and have the guilty ones punished.

Hoping that action will be taken in the matter, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. BARTLETT,

Lieut. J. L. CROWLEY,

[First endorsement.]

Hdqrs. Third Regiment U. S. Volunteer Infantry,
Julesburg, Colo. Ter., May 24, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to headquarters District of the Plains, for the consideration of the brigadier-general commanding.

C. H. McNALLY,
Colonel, Commanding Regiment.

[Second endorsement.]

Headquarters District of the Plains,
Julesburg, Colo. Ter., May 27, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Col. R. R. Livingston, commanding East Sub-District of the Plains, who will cause an immediate and searching investigation of within alleged circumstance and return papers to this office.

By command of Brigadier-General Connor:

GEO. F. PRICE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Third endorsement.]

Headquarters East Sub-District of the Plains,
Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., May 29, 1865.

Respectfully returned, with the information that an investigation has been had, and the report forwarded to headquarters District of the Plains on the 27th instant.

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel First Nebraska Veteran Cavalry, Comdg. Sub-District.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA,
DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Saint Paul, Minn., May 28, 1865.

Maj. : I am happy to be able to report that on the 18th instant a party of five of my Indian scouts, headed by Charles Crawford, a mixed blood, discovered and immediately attacked a war party of eight Sioux who were coming down toward the settlements, and after a long and exciting pursuit of more than twenty-five miles three of the hostile Indians were killed and the remainder only escaped by abandoning their food, clothing, and other effects. The party was headed by Black Legs, a notorious ruffian (whose brother was killed last year by our troops south of the Ridgely), whose arrival on the frontier I have been anticipating for some weeks, having received notice of his intention to revenge the death of his relative. The encounter above narrated took place at the head of the Coteau, twenty miles above Wadsworth. A few more experiences of the same kind will cool the courage of the raiders. I am much pleased with the zeal and fidelity exhibited by these Sisseton Sioux scouts.

Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, commanding Third Sub-District, writes from Fort Abercrombie, 23d instant, that information had been sent him from the Upper Cheyenne River by Mr. Wilkie, an intelligent half-breed, formerly a member of the Territorial Legislature of Minnesota, that there are more war parties leaving the grand rendezvous near Devil's Lake for our border than at any time since the commencement of the war. He says more or less pass down every day. It is to be regretted that the fountain of the evil cannot be reached by a competent force, and I hope General Sully's column will be directed thither. There was a report in the city yesterday that six families of whites had been butchered by the Chippewas on the water of the Upper Saint Croix, but I have no report from the officer stationed in command of a detachment at Chengwatona, near which it was stated the occurrence took place, and I am therefore not inclined to credit the rumor, although, as I have already reported, there would not be matter of surprise if an outbreak should take place in that quarter at any time.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,

LEBANON, May 24, 1865.

Personally appeared before me Lieut. Stephen L. Wiles, Company H, Sixteenth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, who states that he was under command of Capt. Morgan Kelly, Company I, Sixteenth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, on a scout after the rebels which passed near Lebanon.
The scout started from Lebanon, Mo., in pursuit of said rebel band on the 18th instant; marched until 9 or 10 p.m., traveling some thirty-five miles. Ascertained from citizens the rebels had passed there about one hour before sunset. Captain Kelly then camped for the night. Started on march the next morning half an hour or an hour after sunrise, traveling very hard until about 10 a.m., when Captain Kelly received information that Major Cosgrove and the rebels were fighting. Captain Henderson [sic] a charge about three miles, where we caught two men, who informed Captain Kelly that Cosgrove had not been fighting. The rebels had just passed through the prairie about three miles ahead of our scout when Captain Kelly halted and rested the horses about three-quarters of an hour, during which time fifteen or twenty citizens came to the scout. Captain Kelly then followed on about four or five miles, when he came to a little store where the rebels stopped about half an hour. Captain Kelly halted about half an hour, changing horses. Citizens stated the rebels were one hour and a quarter ahead. Captain Kelly marched about one mile and a half and fed the horses, stopping about one hour; then Captain Kelly marched to the Pomme de Terre bridge, where the captain had information that the rebels would cross. He arrived at the bridge about 12 p.m., leaving about thirty men, whose horses had given out before he reached the bridge. Guarded the bridge until daylight the next morning, when he started for Warsaw. On arriving there Captain Kelly learned the rebels had been there late the evening before. Failing to cross, they started in direction of the bridge. Captain then received information from citizens that the rebels had crossed the Pomme de Terre one mile above the bridge about one hour before daylight, marching in direction of Quincy. The rebels were then about nine miles and four hours ahead. The most of the scout were unable to keep up the pursuit farther. The captain then turned the scout and marched thence to Lebanon.

STEPHEN L. WILES,
Lieutenant, Sixteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers.

Brigadier-General SANBORN.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 24th day of May, 1865.

JOHN R. FOSTER,
Assistant Provost-Marshal.

MAY 18-27, 1865.—Expedition against Indians in Dakota Territory.

HEADQUARTERS NORTH SUB-DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Fort Laramie, Dak. Ter., May 27, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following report of the capture of Two Face and Black Foot, Sioux chiefs of the Ogalalla tribe, along with their band, and of the execution of the two chiefs:

About the 18th instant some Indians were discovered on the north side of the Platte near the Indian village, encamped ten miles east of Laramie. Mr. Elston, in charge of Indian village, took a party of Indian soldiers and captured what was found to be Two Face, having a white woman prisoner (Mrs. Eubanks) and her little daughter, whom he had purchased from the Cheyennes. During the same evening and next morning early the other Indians who were with Two Face, and who had fled on approach of Elston’s party, were also captured and all lodged in guard-house here. Mrs. Eubanks gave information of whereabouts of Black Foot and the village, and a party of Indian soldiers started to bring them in, dead or alive. The village was found about 100 miles northeast of here, on Snake Fork, and compelled to surrender without being able to make any fight. Black Foot and his companions were placed in the guard-house with the others, making six men in confinement. Both of the chiefs openly boasted that they had killed white men and that they would do it again if let loose, so I concluded to tie them up by the neck with a trace chain, suspended from a beam of wood, and leave them there without any foothold. The property captured was as follows: Six U. S. mules, 3 U. S. horses, 5 mules not branded, but I believe claimed by some party down the river; 15 ponies in miserable condition, which I left in charge of Mr. Elston for the use of the Indian soldiers in scouting. The other animals were turned in to the acting assistant quartermaster, to be taken up on his return. On the person of Two Face was found $220 in greenbacks, which I gave to Mrs. Eubanks; also $50 taken from another of the band. This lady was captured by the Cheyennes on Little Blue last fall, where her husband was killed along with several others. She was treated in a beastly manner by the Cheyennes, and purchased from them during the winter by Two Face and Black Foot, who compelled her to toil and labor as their squaw, resorting in some instances to lashes. She was in a wretched condition when she was brought in, having been dragged across the Platte with a rope. She was almost naked, and told some horrible tales of the barbarity and cruelty of the Indians.

I am, captain, respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

Capt. GEORGE F. PRICE,

MAY 19-20, 1865.—Scout from Sweetwater Bridge to Whisky Gap, Dak. Ter.

Report of Capt. JAMES E. GREER, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS STATION,
Sweetwater Bridge, Dak. Ter., May 23, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that, pursuant to order from these headquarters, a scout of fifteen men under command of Lieut. James J. Clancy, upon a report by hunters of the presence of Indians in the vicinity of Whisky Gap of the Medicine Bow Mountains, started from this station at noon on the 19th instant in pursuit. Scout passed through the gap, thence to the southeast; struck the enemy’s trail running directly southward. No Indians were seen and no other sign than their trail. The lieutenant commanding thinks these were a party out for the double purpose of hunting and stealing and estimates their number at fifteen. The hunting party above mentioned came in contact with and fired upon them, but being on foot did not seek further fight. The Indians, however, moved off without paying them a passing notice more than changing their direction of march. They were well mounted and carried shields. One of the party was taken to be a white man. Distance traveled by the scouting party, sixty-six miles. Returned on the evening of the 20th instant.
Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. E. GREER,
Captain, Commanding Station.

Lieut. I. I. TABER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

MAY 19-22, 1865.—Scout from Kingsville, Mo.

MEMORANDA.

Started from Kingsville at 9 p.m. of the 19th instant; marched in a northeasterly direction about two miles; crossed two small belts of timber, respectively one and one mile and a half from camp; reached the old distillery and turned due north; crossed another belt of timber about one-quarter of a mile wide, some thick brush with small timber running about east and west; came out on a small prairie and turned about north, and traveled two or two [miles] and a half, then struck Little Blackwater Bottoms, traveled about one and a half or two miles in it in a northwesterly course, then changed to north and went about the same distance. Bottoms [had|some large timber with very thick growth of underbrush. At 12 m. camped until daylight in the woods. No sign of the enemy yet. [May] 20, started at daylight and passed a cross-road. Before we had gone more than one-quarter of a mile turned due west; moved up a little ways and got breakfast; moved on at sunrise, still going west. In about half a mile came out on a small prairie, crossed over into Blackwater woods, again traveling a little north of west for about two miles, then followed the creek up nearly north for three miles, then moved due west one mile. Are now in the knobs; timber pretty heavy, with less underbrush. Passed by Howe's Quarry. Stopped about 9 a.m. on the road running north and south, over which a large body of cavalry had passed but a short time before, going north. Are now about seven miles from Kingsville, a little west of north. 11 a.m., moved due north half a mile to an old log school-house. Country very hilly, with good deal of timber. Stopped here at forks of the Lexington road until almost dark, then moved forward on the Lexington road one mile and a half to Mrs. Ellis' house. Learned that Jim Smith was here at dark last night with four men; think he stayed all night. Met a scouting party of the Fifty-second [Wisconsin]. They moved up the Blackwater woods on the trail of Smith and others. [May] 21, started out this morning in a westerly direction; struck the trail of three men mounted; followed them through the woods of Big Creek about ten miles, when they struck across the prairie and I could not follow any farther. Timber of the woods light, with very thick brush. Struck due south two miles and struck the Shawnee trail; moved then some east of south for about three miles into the woods again; crossed over Big Creek just before dark and secreted my men at Haunt's house; moved to camp at 3 a.m. of 22d, distant four [miles] and a half and nearly south.
HEADQUARTERS FIFTY-FIRST WISCONSIN VOLUNTEERS,
Kingsville, May 23, 1865.

The foregoing memoranda were handed to me by Lieutenant Rice, of Company C of this regiment, who commanded a scouting party from Companies C and D, consisting of twenty enlisted men and the lieutenant commanding. The lieutenant is now absent on another scout.

JOHN B. VLIET,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Regiment.

MAY 19–26, 1865.—Scout from Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter.

FORT KEARNY, NEBR. TER., May 28, 1865.

Sr: On the 19th day of May, 1865, I was [ordered] by Col. R. R. Livingston, commanding East Sub-District of the Plains, to proceed, with every available man of my company, south of Fort Kearny to the Blue River, and instructed, in case I found no trail of Indians north of that river, to cross it and proceed to the Republican River and search until I succeeded in finding a trail, and in case I did to follow it and kill and capture every Indian I could find. In obedience to these instructions I mounted every man I could and left Fort Kearny on the evening of the 19th with forty-nine men, and, striking in a due southern direction, marched all night and struck the Blue River at the headwaters at daylight the next morning. I camped there two hours, and marched to the Republican River, reaching it about 6 o'clock on the evening of the 20th; camped until 3 o'clock in the morning of the 21st, and marched in a due southern direction all day, and went into camp on a high bluffs for the night. Had no water, and none near us for some miles. Started at 4 o'clock in the morning of the 22d, and taking a southeast course, went all day without finding a single trail. I camped on the evening of the 22d on a small creek called by the Indians Sleeping Water. While in camp I sent out some of my men to look around this creek, and while out they discovered fresh signs of Indians going in a northeast direction, the signs twenty-four hours old. I started before daylight the following morning (23d) and followed the trail, and discovered the Indians ahead of us, about 3 p. m. As soon as they discovered us they prepared for battle, and as soon as I came within range I charged them with my squadron, when they fled precipitately, leaving all their camp equipage and provisions, &c., and after pursuing them four miles I got sufficiently near them to discover they were Pawnees. I stopped them and, halting my men, I ordered the Pawnees, who now were near me, to go back to their camp and carry their provisions, &c., with them and accompany me back. They did so. One of the Pawnees went aside from the rest of the party and one of my men, thinking he was trying to escape, fired at the Pawnee, but did not hit him, but struck and killed his pony. I now formed my men as guards and escorted the Pawnees as far as Buffalo Station (the next station below Pawnee Station) and there left them camped on a small creek near the road. They assured me that they were going to their agency near Columbus, Nebr. Ter., and after leaving them I proceeded immediately for Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., where I arrived at 10.30 o'clock on the 26th. There were 355 Pawnees. The Pawnees had four American horses, large, serviceable farm horses (no marks), and five mules (two large bay, tails shaved). The other three I cannot accurately describe. The Pawnees seemed anxious to sell the two bay mules, saying they had recently found them. I saw no marks on them. One party told me they had been out five days, and the others told me that they had been out nine days, all on a buffalo hunt. They had an immense amount of buffalo meat, which was still fresh, and I saw several fresh skeletons of buffalo while on the march.

All of which I respectfully submit.

I have the honor to be, lieutenant, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

EDWIN R. NASH,
Captain Company A, Omaha Scouts.

Lieut. SAMUEL A. LEWIS,
Acty. Asst. Adj. Gen., East Sub-District of the Plains,
Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter.

[Indorsement.]
HEADQUARTERS EAST SUB-DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Fort Kearny, May 26, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to headquarters District of the Plains for the information of the general commanding.

Evidence proves conclusively that the mules mentioned within were part of the team accompanying detachment Third U. S. Volunteers, attacked by Indians on the Little Blue, 18th instant. The four horses agree in number with the four reported being run off—two from Buffalo and two from Pawnee Station—while the entire absence of any trail from the west along the Republican or Little Blue, and the presence of the Pawnees on the road at the time of the attack, fixes the atrocious murder of our men on the Pawnees. Had Cheyennes or Sioux perpetrated this deed their trail would have been found by the detachment under Captain Nash, as they would have necessarily come from the west or south. Such, however, is not the case. The trail found, and the only one found, was a Pawnee trail, as stated within. I have telegraphed headquarters for instructions.

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel First Nebraska Cavalry Veteran Vols., Comdg. Sub-District.

MAY 19–JUNE 2, 1865.—Scout from Fort Kearny to the Little Blue River, Nebr. Ter.

POST FORT KEARNY, NEBR. TER., June 2, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: In obedience to instructions received from headquarters East Sub-District of the Plains, I marched from this post on the 19th of May, 1865, at 9 p. m. with an officer and fifty enlisted men of the First Nebraska Veteran Cavalry to the scene of the late Indian depredation on the Little Blue. I arrived at Elm Creek, near which station the attack was made, at daylight on the morning of the 20th, having marched thirty-four miles. From this station I sent Lieutenant Leland and ten enlisted men of my command to follow the trail made by the Indians who attacked the wagon transporting soldiers on the 18th instant, with instructions that if he found a fresh trail to notify me at once by a courier, otherwise to report to me at Pawnee Ranch, ten miles below Elm Creek, scouting both sides of the Little Blue in search of signs. At 10 a.m. I left Elm Creek and marched to Pawnee Ranch, where I went into camp. On my march I discovered a lodge-pole trail running north, which evidently had been made several days previous. Lieutenant Leland reported shortly after my arrival, and said the trail crossing the Little Blue was very small, and almost entirely disappeared on its south bank, and in his opinion would not warrant following. At 4 a.m. May 21 I left Pawnee Ranch in a southerly direction, leaving wagons and guard of ten men to go by the road to Little Blue Station. I scouted Liberty, Ox Bow, and Elk Creeks and the country adjacent without finding any Indian signs. Arrived at Little Blue Station at 4 p.m., having marched about forty-five miles during the day. The night of the 21st I received orders from headquarters East Sub-District of the Plains to station four mounted men at each stage station from Fort Kearny to Big Sandy, inclusive. Four men started for each station the morning of the 22d, which reduced my command to ten enlisted men, with which I was ordered to proceed to Big Sandy and escort Hon. Schuyler Colfax and other gentlemen of the Senate to Fort Kearny. While obeying this last order I discovered a trail crossing at Oak Grove, I arrived at Big Sandy at 3 p.m. May 23. At about 5 p.m. same day the overland coach arrived, having aboard General Connor, commanding District of the Plains, and the gentlemen above mentioned. General Connor directed that as the horses of my command had marched rapidly, and were fatigued, I remain at Big Sandy until such time as the horses were sufficiently rested, when I should proceed in search of trails made by Indians, and to ascertain, if possible, to what tribe they belong, and if necessary to go to the Pawnee Reservation. On the morning of the 24th instant I left Big Sandy for Little Blue Station, which place I reached at 6 p.m. same day. At Oak Grove, five miles east of Little Blue Station, I examined the trail heretofore mentioned. It crossed the Little Blue, leading south, where a large body of Indians had crossed and encamped for at least one night. This was afterward found to be the trail made by the Pawnees while on their way to their hunting ground. The morning of the 25th I heard that the Pawnees had recrossed the main road at or near Buffalo Stage Station, twelve miles west, and that they had in their possession a number of mules and American horses. I started in pursuit with the intention of overtaking them, but Mr. Metcalf, to whom I sent a communication to report to me at Buffalo to act as guide and interpreter, not having arrived, I pushed on to Pawnee Ranch, leaving the trail to the east about ten miles. At daylight on the 26th instant I left Mr. Metcalf's (Pawnee) Ranch in a northeast direction and struck the trail about fifteen miles north of the Atchison road. This trail I followed until 8 p.m., crossing both forks of the Big Sandy, Turkey, and Beaver Creeks, when I rested and grazed my horses for about two hours. I again started on the trail and marched to the South Fork of Big Blue, where I went into camp for the night, having marched this day about sixty miles. At daylight on the 27th instant I was again on the march, and arrived on the south bank of Platte River (the old Pawnee Village) at 13 m. Rested my horses, crossed the river, and reached the Pawnee Agency at 6 p.m. I expected to overtake the Pawnees before they crossed Platte River. If I had found them before they arrived at the reservation I could have better satisfied myself as to whether or not they had been engaged in the late depredations. I called upon Mr. B. F. Lushbaugh, agent for the Pawnees, and told him my business. He gave me assistance in the search. I found one U. S. mule, said to have been in their possession four years, and four mules branded with "S" on the jaw; also heard of one horse which the Pawnees had sent away from their village. This horse Agent Lushbaugh directed them to bring to him. Inclosed, marked A, find his letter* in regard to said horse. Inclosed you will also find the sworn statements of soldiers who were with the detachment from Fort Leavenworth when it was attacked. From the evidence adduced and my own observations I can find nothing that directly implicates the Pawnees. The evidence against them is this: At the time the depredations were committed they were at or near Oak Grove, about thirty-five miles east of Elm Creek; also, that but one trail can be found which cannot be clearly traced to their camp. This trail spoken of was bearing in a northerly direction, and was not followed up by any of my command. It is the opinion of many of the settlers on Little Blue that the Pawnees are the guilty party. The whole distance marched by my command was about 400 miles. While at Elm Creek I sent out for and had brought in the Government wagon and harness, which were in charge of the sergeant who was in command of the detachment at the time it was attacked by the Indians, and forwarded the property to the acting assistant quartermaster at Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter. The grass is good in all the country through which I passed, and timber in sufficient quantities to supply troops and others passing through the country. In Big Sandy, Turkey, and Beaver Creeks there is water in abundance. The forks of Big Sandy and Little Blue are generally dry.

I am, lieutenant, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
LEE P. GILLETTE,
Captain, First Nebraska Veteran Cavalry, Comdg. Detachment.

I, Jefferson Fields, sergeant, Company C, Third U. S. Volunteers, being duly sworn, do state that on the 18th day of May, 1865, while en route from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., that I was in charge of a detachment of fourteen unarmed men belonging to Third U. S. Volunteers and First Nebraska Veteran Volunteer Cavalry, and when about two miles east of Elm Creek Stage Station I was attacked by a body of Indians numbering about twelve or fifteen men. They were dressed in some kind of short jackets, I think they were buckskin, and they had short buckskin leggings. They wore some kind of a skullcap, and I could not say whether they had short or long hair. The arrows they had were Sioux and Cheyenne; that is, those used on us were, but I am of the opinion that they were Pawnees, as they were so anxious that we should keep some of the Sioux arrows. They followed us about one-quarter of a mile, and then motioned at us and told us to go, and then returned to the wagon and commenced plundering. They left the wagon standing in the road and cut to pieces all the harness, and drove off the mules, six in number.

JEFFERSON FIELDS,

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 31st day of May, 1865.
L. E. CAMPBELL,
First Lieutenant, Third U. S. Volunteers, and Post Adjutant.

Statement of Washington Fulton, teamster in Government employ.

I, Washington Fulton, teamster in the employment of the Government, being duly sworn, do say that I was driving a Government team of six mules en route from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., transporting unarmed soldiers sent from hospitals and guardhouse at Fort Leavenworth, and that about two miles east of Elm Creek Stage Station, Nebr. Ter., the soldiers who were with me were attacked by a body of Indians, numbering fifteen or twenty, about 2 p.m. on the 18th day of May, 1865, and 2 of the soldiers killed and 6 wounded, including myself. One soldier of the Third U. S. Volunteers, after being struck twice with a U. S. saber which they (the Indians) had in their possession, was knocked down and scalped by an Indian, they knowing him to be alive. After he was scalped the Indians kicked him twice. Two or three Indians were dressed in old Government pantaloons, others in buckskin leggings. The Indian who had charge of the party attacking us wore buckskin leggings. His hair was long and had some kind of fur attached to his back hair. He was the only Indian who had long hair; he also had a revolver. Two of the attacking party had short hair “roached” on top of their heads. These two said they were friendly Sioux, but were as outrageous as any in their attack on us. I was about ten rods from the man who was scalped. Cannot say how all the Indians were dressed, nor give any particular description of them, but can identify one of them if I see him. One of them, the Indian who scalped the soldier, had a large scar over his eye; whether right or left eye I cannot say.

WASHINGTON FULTON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 31st day of May, 1865.
L. E. CAMPBELL,
Lieutenant and Post Adjutant.

Statement of Alfred Shirley, private, Company A, First Nebraska Veteran Volunteer Cavalry.

I, Alfred Shirley, private, Company A, First Nebraska Veteran Volunteer Cavalry, having been duly sworn, do state that so far as my knowledge the statement of Washington Fulton is true.

ALFRED X. SHIRLEY.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 31st day of May, 1865.
L. E. CAMPBELL,
Lieutenant and Post Adjutant.

I, Peter J. Flynn, private, Company A, Third U. S. Volunteers, having been duly sworn, do state that on the 18th day of May, 1865, while en route from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., that I being one among a party of soldiers who were attacked by a body of Indians about two miles east of Elm Creek Station, Nebr. Ter., I was wounded in the face and back; also 2 of our men were cruelly murdered and 6 (including myself) wounded. Among the wounded was one John W. Twyman, Company H, Third U. S. Volunteers, who was scalped. The Indians captured me, and the chief, or one in charge, seemed very friendly toward me, and said that he was a Cheyenne chief. My opinion is they are Pawnees for this reason, when he released me and told me to go, and gave me an arrow, four crackers, and a canteen, and seemed very anxious to impress upon my mind that he was a Cheyenne chief. I think there was about twenty-five or thirty of the Indians. I could not say how they were dressed, except the chief, who was dressed in black velvet pants, with two rows of brass buttons down the outer seams. He also wore fancy beadwork moccasins and fancy beadwork cap, with a light-colored blanket thrown carelessly over him. His hair was cut short, so much so that I could not tell its color.

PETER J. FLYNN.

Sworn and subscribed to at Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., before me this 5th day of June, 1865.

LEE P. GILLETTE,
Captain, First Nebraska Veteran Cavalry.

I, John W. Twyman, private, Company H, Third U. S. Volunteers, having been duly sworn, do state that while en route from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., on the 18th of May, 1865, when about two miles east of Elm Creek Station, Nebr. Ter., I was, among others, attacked by a party of Indians, numbering some fifteen or twenty, and 2 of our men killed and 6 (including myself) wounded. I was attacked by one of them with a U. S. saber, who struck me three times, knocking me down. Then he returned to the party and another of them came to me and scalped me; then he hit me with his saber and left. They were dressed in buckskin clothing, so far as I could see, except the chief, or the one in charge, who was dressed in some kind of a light robe or blanket thrown over his shoulders. Two of them wore their hair short on both sides of their heads and “roached” up on top of their heads. I could not say how the rest of them wore their hair. My opinion is they were Pawnees, for the reason that they were so anxious to impress upon us they were Cheyennes. I think they did it in revenge for something, as they spoke of the whites breaking a treaty with them.

JOHN W. TWYMAN.

Sworn and subscribed to at Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., before me this 5th day of June, 1865.

LEE P. GILLETTE,
Captain, First Nebraska Veteran Cavalry.
MAY 20, 1865.—Skirmish on the Blackwater, near Longwood, Mo.

Report of Capt. H. C. Donohue, Pettis County Volunteer Missouri Militia.

HEADQUARTERS STATION,
Longwood, Mo., May 22, 1865.

Sir: I have had my headquarters at this place since I left Sedalia, Mo., May 5, 1865, and I have scouted all through the Blackwater and Hess Creek country almost daily since I have been at this place, and I found nothing until last Saturday. Second Lieut. B. L. Porter and twenty men of my company went on a scout west of this place some ten miles, and came upon the trail of some mounted men and traced them on into the woods near Blackwater. He then dismounted his command and took it upon foot and ran upon three bushwhackers, dismounted, in the brush. The bushwhackers, upon hearing his approach, broke through the brush and made their escape, leaving behind their horses and equipment, which fell into our hands. Those are the only bushwhackers I have found or heard of positively, and I would respectfully request permission of you to station my company at Dresden, Mo., at present, as it is a more convenient place for troops on account of forage, rations, &c., than this place, and I believe that my company could effect more to be stationed at Dresden, Mo., and scout this portion of country than to be stationed here, as the bushwhackers make that, or near that point, their place to cross the Pacific Railroad to and fro from the river counties to the southwest part of the State.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. C. DONOHUE,
Captain, Pettis County Volunteer Missouri Militia.

Col. JOHN G. CLARK,
Comdg. 1st Sub-Dist., Central Dist. of Mo., Jefferson City, Mo.

[First indorsement.]

HDQRS. 1ST SUB-DISTRICT, CENTRAL DIST. OF MISSOURI,
Jefferson City, Mo., May 26, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Col. Chester Harding, jr., commanding Central District of Missouri, who will judge of the propriety of granting the within request without reference to my opinion, as I have at present no positive means of information. However, permit me to state that I have been informed that Longwood was near the trails of bushwhackers from Cooper to Lafayette County.

JOHN G. CLARK,
Colonel Fifty-Fifth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry,
Comdg. First Sub-District, Central District of Missouri.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., May 30, 1865.

Respectfully returned to Col. J. G. Clark, commanding First Sub-District.

The company may move to Dresden, but Captain Donohue must not allow his men to be idle or to straggle.

By order of Col. C. Harding, jr.:

C. G. LAURANT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
MAY 20, 1865.—Affair near Pawnee Rock, Kans.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Zarah, Kans., May 20, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to state that this morning about 8 o'clock, near Pawnee Rock, a party of Indians attacked two men coming from Fort Larned to this post, killing one man of the Second Colorado Cavalry by the name of Kuhn. The other made his escape. I have sent Lieutenant Ehle with a party of men in pursuit.

I am, lieutenant, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. REISDORPH,
Captain, Second U. S. Volunteers, Commanding Post.

Lieut. Robert S. Roe,

MAY 20, 1865.—Skirmishes on Deer Creek, Dak. Ter.

Camp on Deer Creek, Dak. Ter., May 21, 1865.

SIR: In accordance with instructions, I have the honor to make the following report:

On the 20th instant myself with three men were attacked by twenty-five Indians three miles above our camp, on Deer Creek, Dak. Ter. After a brisk fight of two hours I succeeded in repulsing the Indians, killing 2 and, as near as I could ascertain, wounding 4. Simultaneous with the attack upon myself Sergeant Smythe, Company L, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, with six men, was attacked in camp by fifty Indians. After two hours and a half fighting the Indians abandoned the attack, with the loss of 3 killed and 5 wounded, 2 horses wounded and 1 killed. Our loss consisting of 5 horses, 3 of which were unserviceable, that the Indians succeeded in capturing in the camp.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. B. GODFREY,

Maj. N. A. ADAMS,
Eleventh Kansas Cavalry Volunteers.

MAY 20–22, 1865.—Operations about Three Crossings Station, Dak. Ter.

HEADQUARTERS STATION,
Sweetwater Bridge, Dak. Ter., May 23, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the 20th instant, at 11 a.m., I received a telegram from the operator at Three Crossings Station reporting that the Indians, in strong force, had invested, and that they were at that moment firing on the station, and that the garrison was very short of ammunition and could not hold out long. Ten minutes after the receipt of this report the line went down. At 12 o'clock m., with Lieut. S. Bodwell and eighty-five men, I started for the scene of action, forty miles distant. At Split Rock I found the telegraph line down, fifty feet gone. Reached Three Crossings at 8 p. m. and found that the Indians had done no injury further than stealing one horse from the station. They withdrew and crossed the Sweetwater River at 4 p. m. and immediately left the vicinity. My command rested till daylight the 21st, when with twenty men I crossed the river and followed the trail fifteen miles across an extensive plain, satisfying myself from their movements—first, by their withdrawing from the station at so early an hour and apparent hurried manner, as reported by the garrison, and their having not camped the ensuing night—that they had information of my pursuit. I saw none, but estimate them at 200. Their trail went directly toward Wind River, where I think they now are and where their families may be found. I arrived in return at this station on the 22d instant at 8 p. m. Whole distance traveled, 110 miles.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. E. GREER,
Captain, Commanding Station.

May 22–23, 1865.—Scout from Camp Plumb, Dak. Ter.

CAMP PLUMB, MUD CREEK, DAK. TER., May 22, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report of a scout made in pursuance of verbal orders from Col. P. B. Plumb:

I started with a detachment of twenty-four men from Second Battalion, Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, on the evening of the 20th of May, 1865, moving in a southeast direction to the Red Buttes, on Deer Creek, thence east to Box Elder Cañon, thence north to the North Platte River, at which place I saw a party of about 100 Indians upon the opposite bank of the river. The water being too high to ford I could avail nothing attacking the party, so I returned to these headquarters May 22, having marched a distance of over eighty miles. I saw nothing of Indians or Indian signs near Red Buttes or Box Elder Cañon.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JACOB VAN ANTWERP,
First Lieutenant Company L, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry.

Maj. N. A. ADAMS,

May 22, 1865.—Skirmish at Valley Mines, Mo.

DE SOTO, MO., May 22, 1865.

This morning at 7.30 o’clock Sam Hilderbrand and four men were attacked at Valley Mines, while robbing a store, by the U. S. troops stationed at Big River Mills, and one man killed by our troops, a large, black-haired man, said to live when at home south of Farmington; also Hilderbrand is supposed to be wounded in the leg, as he had great difficulty in getting on his horse. They are supposed to have started south.

H. BAILEY,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Maj. L. H. Utt.

MAY 23, 1865.—Scout from Thibodeaux to Lake Verret, La.

Camp Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry,
Thibodeaux, La., May 24, 1865.

Sir: In obedience to instructions from post headquarters, I was detailed to take charge of a scout to Lake Verret by way of Brulé Texas. I left Thibodeaux about 3 p.m.; passed through Labadieville and arrived at Emile's plantation, three miles beyond, at dark, and could proceed no farther on account of the plantations being overflowed with water. I returned with my command, arriving at camp at midnight.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOHN SIMMS,
First Lieut. Company E, Sixteenth Indiana Mounted Infantry.

Lieut. Fred. H. Cutler,
Post Adjutant, Thibodeaux, La.

MAY 23, 1865.—Skirmish near Waynesville, Mo.

Report of Capt. Calvin S. Moore, Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry.

Headquarters Post Waynesville,
Waynesville, Mo., May 25, 1865.

Colonel: Lieutenant Bates, just in from a scout, reports that on the evening of the 23d he came upon Dick Watson's band of bushwhackers (twelve in number) some ten miles northwest of here; that he killed 2 of the bushwhackers and captured 3 of their horses. The lieutenant had none of his men killed or wounded. I have a scout out now in that direction. I keep a scout of ten or fifteen men out all the time.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. S. MOORE,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Col. JOHN MORRILL,
Commanding District of Rolla, Rolla, Mo.

MAY 23-26, 1865.—Scout from Warrensburg, Mo., to mouth of Coal Camp Creek.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., May 26, 1865.

Captain: I have the honor to make the following report for the information of the colonel commanding:

I proceeded, in compliance with your instructions, on the 23d instant in direction of Duroc, via Belmont and Warsaw, scouting the country thoroughly along to the Osage, and down the Osage to the mouth of Coal Camp Creek, and ascertained that there were no rebels in that section of the country north of the Osage. The band that crossed the railroad near Knobnoster on the 22d instant were all that I could obtain any reliable information of. At Warsaw and other points I learned that the above-named band committed horrid outrages, murdering some ten or twelve discharged soldiers and citizens in Hickory and Benton Counties. Not hearing reliable reports of other bands of guerrillas, I returned to camp at this place this p. m. at 5 o'clock. Men and horses in good condition.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. J. GRAVELY,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Expedition.

Captain LAURANT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Central District of Missouri.

May 23-27, 1865.—Scout from Pine Bluff to Monticello, Ark., with skirmish (24th) at Monticello.

Hdqrs. Company M, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry,
Pine Bluff, Ark., May 27, 1865.

Sir: In obedience to orders, I left this post in command of sixty men of our regiment (Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry) on Tuesday morning, the 23d instant, on a scout to capture Captain Kidd and any other rebel soldiers or forces I might chance to run on. I divided my force outside the chain guard, and sent one-half, under Lieutenant Orton, on the Warren road, and the other half, under Lieutenant Drummond, on the upper Monticello road, and met together at Harper's plantation, thirty miles from this post, and camped that night. The next day I scoured the country completely and as thoroughly as possible from Harper's to Monticello, twenty-three miles, entering Monticello about sunset. Had a slight skirmish there, and after running all the rebel forces out of town I established my camp and sent word to Captain Burks, the rebel commander, that I was going to "remain there until they surrendered or until every corn dodger and pound of meat was eaten and every ear of corn was properly disposed of to U. S. cavalry horses." The next morning before sunrise the rebels began to send in flags of truce, and by 2 p.m. the whole rebel force in that country agreed to surrender upon the same terms Lee surrendered to Grant. I brought all in to-day, including 14 commissioned officers and 70 enlisted men. I seized 3 horses as the property that Captain Kidd obtained from those rebel soldiers belonging to West's battery who came in and surrendered on Sunday last. I learned then that the brigadier-general commanding had ordered me to cease hostilities toward Captain Kidd, and then, as Monticello was but a few miles out of my way, I determined to go by there. On my return from there I met with Captain Kidd, and he surrendered on the same terms. On my return from Monticello I met with several citizens who had been up to Pine Bluff with cotton and to purchase goods. They solicited an escort from my forces, and believing that a small party of Jayhawkers who infested the country around

19 R R—Vol XLVIII, PT 1
Monticello might be captured, I sent Lieutenant Drummond and fifteen men back with orders to protect them and arrest, if possible, any unauthorized bands they could find. Lieutenant Drummond has not yet returned.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. NORTIS
Captain, Commanding Scout.

Lieutenant WORTHINGTON,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

MAY 24, 1865.—Skirmish near Rocheport, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS,
Post Fayette, May 25, 1865.

I have the honor to report to you that Sergt. Robert Digges, with a detachment of my company, had a fight with eleven bushwhackers, supposed to be under Jim Anderson, yesterday morning at 7.30 o'clock. The bushwhackers were at the house of Elias Thompson, in this county, about six miles from Rocheport. We killed 4 bushwhackers and captured 4 horses and equipments, several pistols, overcoats, &c. Sergeant Digges is satisfied that there were several wounded who escaped. Our loss was Private Ben. Reeves, severely wounded in the shoulder; we also had two horses killed. The names of the bushwhackers killed, as obtained from a rebel deserter just from Price's army, are Theodore Cassell, of Jackson County;—— Kelly, of Saint Louis (right arm off); John Chapman, of Clay, and Thomas Maupin, of Callaway. The last named has the forefinger off his right hand. I inclose you two letters taken off the body of Cassell. Sergeant Digges was on the trail of Jim Jackson the evening before. He started it in Boone County, and was following it up when he heard of Anderson's gang. We heard of Jackson yesterday at 10 a.m., with six other men near Boonsborough, in this county, going west. One citizen reports that Rider was along; and another reports that he recognized a man by the name of Finley with them. Finley was bushwhacking in this county last summer. I regret very much that there could not be a scout sent up after these last-mentioned bushwhackers. All my men who had serviceable horses were out, either with Sergeant Digges, with myself, who went out as soon as the fight was reported to me by a citizen, or with Lieutenant Davis, who had started from here the night before with forty men, under orders from Colonel Denny to proceed to Brunswick. I have been informed that Captain Meredith, with his command and a detachment of the Ninth Missouri State Militia, under Lieutenant Thompson, are out in the Boon's Lick country after Jackson. Lieutenant Davis returned this evening from Brunswick. I hope that it will not be deemed necessary again to have my men ordered so far from home, especially when I have my hands full in my own county. The affair of yesterday is the third fight that my men have had with the bushwhackers. The first two came off in Boone County. Lieutenant Davis had a fight with Jim Jackson at the house of the Widow Cornelius, in Boone County, a week or ten days [ago]. Only his advance guard of seven men were engaged. The rebels fought desperately, but ran off before the main body of our men came up. No casualties on either side. Lieutenant Davis was on the trail of four or six men who had crossed the Missouri River at the mouth of the La. Nine when he came across the trail of Jackson. Jackson had five men with him. I do not think, general, that there are any bushwhackers who stay habitually in this county. Jim Jackson and his gang make their home in Blackfoot, in Boone, and make a raid occasionally into this county. I believe that Holtzclaw is with Jackson. In every instance, except the last of yesterday, where we have got after bushwhackers we have followed them into or came across them in Boone. The gang we fought yesterday had just arrived in this county the day before. I hope the warm welcome they received will admonish them to stay away.

*Omitted.

I am, general, your most obedient servant,

WARREN W. HARRIS,

Comdg. Howard County Company Volunteer Missouri Militia, Organized under General Orders, No. 3.

P. S.—I have just received information from a reliable source that another dead bushwhacker has been found near the place where the fight took place yesterday, making five killed, and also a dead horse.

Yours, &c.,

W. W. H.

Brig. Gen. I. V. PRATT,

Comdg. First District, Missouri Militia, Macon, Mo.

MAY 24, 1865.—Scout from Napoleonville to Bayou Saint Vincent, La.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Capt. Thomas W. Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.
No. 2.—Capt. Andrew T. Bushoe, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

No. 1.

HDQRS. COMPANY H, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Napoleonville, La., May 25, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: In accordance with orders received from headquarters post Napoleonville on the night of the 24th instant, I have the honor to respectfully submit the following report:

With a party of twenty-five men I proceeded to Bayou Saint Vincent and there divided my force, sending a part on one side of the bayou under a sergeant, and with the remainder I took the other side and proceeded as far as we could go with the horses, making a careful examination by the way, but not seeing or learning of any rebels being in that vicinity. Having carried out my instructions I returned to camp.

I have the honor to remain, sir, yours, respectfully,

THOS. W. SAYLES,
Captain Company H.

Lieut. E. K. THOMPSON,
Adjutant Third Rhode Island Cavalry,

HDQRS. COMPANY D, THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,

Napoleonville, La., May 25, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I respectfully report that in compliance with orders received from headquarters Third Rhode Island Cavalry, May 24, 1865, I moved with twenty-five men on the Canal road four miles and a half. The water prevented my proceeding farther. I dismounted my men, examined the country, discovered no trace of the enemy, mounted, and returned to camp.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

A. T. BUSHEE,
Captain, Commanding Company D, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

Lieut. E. K. THOMPSON, Adjutant Third Rhode Island Cavalry.

MAY 25-27, 1865.—Expedition from Bayou Bœuf to Bayou De Large, La., with affair (27th) at Bayou De Large.

BAYOU BŒUF, LA., May 29, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following as a report of an expedition under my command, in obedience to instructions from your headquarters, May 25, 1865:

On the 25th I started with three enlisted men of Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry, and reported to Colonel Fuller, at Terre Bonne, on the morning of the 26th, who furnished me transportation to Houma, where I arrived at 10 a.m., and immediately proceeded to Negro Point with ten men of Captain Rhodes' company, Third Rhode Island Cavalry. After searching Negro Point and vicinity I was informed that the men for whom I was searching had been driven away by Lieut. Omar Boudreaux, and were of C. S. Army; and learning of [his presence in] this vicinity I started in pursuit of him on the morning of the 27th. I surprised him in his camp on Bayou De Large, back of J. Terrion's plantation. I found him and eleven men, who fled as soon as they discovered me. I got all of their arms, camp and garrison equipage. They made their escape, not having time to get their clothes on. I left Lieutenant Boudreaux in a condition unable to move or be moved alive, and I do not think he will give us any more trouble, although he was breathing when I left. I also wounded Sergt. Oscar Hymel, but he escaped in the marsh. Captured one of his men. The arms captured consisted of 7 muskets, 8 shotguns, 4 revolvers; ammunition, 12 pounds powder, 40 pounds shot and lead; also 8 blankets and 6 quilts. Prisoner and arms I turned in to provost-marshal at Houma. I also received information that Captain Hare with thirty or forty men is encamped between Bayou La Carp and Bayou William, about fifteen miles from where Lieutenant Boudreaux was encamped on Bayou De Large. Being unable to discover the whereabouts of the men for whom I was sent, I abandoned the expedition and returned to this place.

I have the honor, captain, to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

NUMA A. POMPONEAU,
Second Lieutenant Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, La Fourche District.
MAY 26-27, 1865.—Scout and skirmishes in Carroll and Ray Counties, Mo.

HEADQUARTERS,
Carrollton, Mo., May 27, 1865.

Dear Sir: I have the honor to report that on the morning of the 26th instant I started with a detachment of my men after the guerrilla Capt. A. Clement and eight men. After a chase of twenty miles I came up with them and immediately offered battle. With twelve of my best men I dismounted at a distance of a quarter of a mile; came down on a double-quick till within a few hundred yards, when they broke to the brush. I mounted, gave chase, came to the brush, dismounted, took the track in the brush some three miles, came on them with eight men, gave battle, and whipped them bad. Kept up the chase some four miles through bush and briar. Had a sharp fight in Crooked River timber. Followed the trail all day and rode all night, a distance of fifty miles, without rest, from Carrollton to the west part of Ray County, all the time without a road, most of the way in the thick brush. Whipped the guerrillas three times, killed or wounded three, captured a horse and prize, the captain's hat, and many other things. Lost nothing; none of my men hurt; had no accidents to happen. My boys fight like veterans, making fun of the enemy all the time. They fight better than my expectations were. Now, general, if you want Jim Anderson captured, send me and thirty of my men and I will bring him in soon, for my men say they can track the bushmen like a dog will a deer. They are anxious to get the job of catching Jim and gang. I wish you would give me the job. I will follow him day and night till I get him.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
DAVID M. FREEMAN,
First Lieutenant, Commanding Scout.

General I. V. Pratt,
Macon City, Mo.

MAY 26-27, 1865.—Scout from Plum Creek, Nebr. Ter.

HQRS. COMPANY G, FIRST NEBRASKA VET. VOL. CAV.,
Plum Creek, Nebr. Ter., May 29, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to instructions received from headquarters post Plum Creek, dated May 26, 1865, I left this garrison at 10 p. m. with fourteen enlisted men thoroughly armed and equipped, with an amount of rations they could carry, arriving at Mullahla's Station at 2 a. m. of the 27th, there awaiting daybreak, when I returned to a point five miles east and took trail of the Indians, moving south for about six miles. At this point they appeared scattered. The tracks became so dim that I found it impossible to follow their trail. Upon diligent search I found they had retraced their steps in the direction of Platte River, which stream they had crossed at a point five miles and a half east of Mullahla's Station. As near as I could ascertain, the Indian band numbered about thirteen. As I could not discern cattle tracks either upon the march or entrance into the river, I am strongly impressed that they did not cross with the cattle. The number of cattle driven off was nine head. A party of soldiers found three head in the bluffs south of Mullahla's. Finding it impracticable to cross the river in consequence of the recent rise, I proceeded directly toward Plum Creek, arriving in garrison at 6 p.m. of the 27th, after traveling fifty miles.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. A. HANCE,

Lieut. J ohn S. SEATON,
Post Adjutant, Plum Creek, Nebr. Ter.

MAY 26-JUNE 9, 1865.—Operations against Indians on the Overland Stage Road on the Platte and Sweetwater Rivers, with skirmishes (May 27) at Saint Mary's Station, (May 26, 28, and June 1) at Sweetwater Station, (June 3) at Platte Bridge, Dak. Ter., and (June 8) at Sage Creek, Colo. Ter.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Lieut. Henry C. Bretney, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry.
No. 2.—Lieut. James A. Brown, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry.
No. 3.—First Sergt. Samuel B. White, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry.

No. 1.

PLATTE BRIDGE, DAK. TER., June —, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on May 26 three Indians made first attempt to take herd at Sweetwater Station, but were repulsed by garrison, the Indians having 1 killed and wounded, 1 pony crippled, without any loss to our side. On Sunday, May 28, they made another attempt at herd in force estimated at twenty-five or thirty, and succeeded in getting 4 horses and 2 mules. Stampede was owing to the two mules, which were very wild and led the horses off. Indians lost one wounded. On Thursday, June 1, they made an attempt on remainder of herd, but were repulsed; and on same day cut the telegraph wire about 1,000 yards from quarters, east, carrying off about 100 yards wire. On the 27th of May about 150 Indians attacked Saint Mary's Station, and in short time succeeded in setting fire to buildings. The garrison, consisting of five men, retreated to an old well outside of quarters, where they remained until the night of the 28th, when they escaped to South Pass. The operator, Private Chavil St. Clair, took precaution enough to secure a relay sounder and a coil of fine wire, and was thus enabled to communicate with Fort Bridger. Garrison lost everything but their firearms and the clothes on their backs. Their horse equipments burnt. There were but two horses at the station; one of these the Indians got, and the other was shot to prevent its falling into their hands. Indians cut out about 400 yards of wire and burned the poles. When Indians left they moved to the south, passing up the valley of Sage Creek. The garrison did as well as it could under the circumstances, and when Indians came within proper distance fired on them briskly. Several Indians are known to have been wounded. None of the garrison injured.

H. C. BRETN EY,

Col. T. MOONLIGHT,
Commanding North Sub-District of the Plains, Dak. Ter.
No. 2.

FORT HALLECK, DAK. TER., June 14, 1865.

Sir: In compliance with Special Orders, No. 7, dated headquarters Fort Halleck, Dak. Ter., June 2, 1865, I left this post with a command of thirty-one men of Company K, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, for the purpose of reopening the mail route between this place and Fort Bridger, Utah Ter. I arrived at the crossing of the North Platte River the same evening and camped for the night. Next morning we crossed and started westward, accompanied by Captain Lewis, of General Connor's staff, and Mr. R. I. Spotswood, division agent on the Overland Stage Line. I found Sage Creek Station deserted. Four miles beyond I found two dead emigrants lying near the road, one of them being scalped. The next two stations, Pine Grove and Bridger's Pass, I also found deserted. At the fourth station, Sulphur Spring, I found the stock tenders and drivers from the above-named stations concentrated with the stock belonging to Sage Creek and Pine Grove Stations. I also learned that the stock at Bridger's Pass Station had been driven off by the Indians. Having ascertained that the depredations extended no farther west, I remained at Sulphur Spring Station until 4 p.m. next day, then detaching three men I sent them to Waskie (next station west), and leaving five men for the protection of Sulphur Spring Station, I started for this post, accompanied by Messrs. Spotswood and Stewart, division agents on the Overland Stage Line, two coaches and stock for the line, camping that night at Bridger's Pass Station. Next morning I left, leaving a corporal and four men at the station; from thence to Pine Grove Station, leaving five men there; came on to the Sage Creek Station, left a corporal and four men there; from thence to the North Platte Crossing and camped for the night. Having succeeded in establishing a tri-weekly mail between the North Platte and Sulphur Spring Station, I came to this post with the balance of my command. At daylight the morning of the 8th instant the detachment at Sage Creek Station was attacked by about 100 Indians. After one hour's severe fighting they were compelled to evacuate, in consequence of a deficiency in ammunition. The men were all well mounted and accompanied by two citizens, names unknown. The moment they left the station they were completely surrounded. There ensued a desperate fight; the detachment retreated toward Pine Grove Station. The Indians followed them for eight miles, killing George Bodine and Perry Stewart, wounding and capturing Orlando Ducket, wounding Corpl. W. H. Caldwell and Private William Wilson, all of Company K, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. The two citizens were also missing. Corporal Caldwell and Private Wilson escaped to Pine Grove Station. They and the detachment then retreated to Sulphur Spring Station, taking the detachment at Bridger's Pass with them. Next morning they started back, commanded by Sergeant McFaddin, who was up the road on escort duty with ten men of Company K, Eleventh Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. They found the bodies of Perry Stewart and George Bodine lying in the road horribly mutilated, the latter scalped. They also found one citizen. The other citizen and Private Ducket, of Company K, could not be found. My opinion is they were burned in Sage Creek Station, which was found burnt by the command on their return. Ten of the men have returned to this post; the balance are doing all they can to keep open the road, but the force is inadequate to cope with the number of Indians now committing depredations on the Overland Stage Line between the North Platte Crossing and Sulphur Spring Station.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. A. BROWN,
Capt. J. L. HUMPREVILLE,

No. 3.

PLATTE BRIDGE, DAK. TER., June 13, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on June 3 six Indians appeared on bank of Platte River opposite quarters, whose object appeared to be to draw men from this post. As soon as the alarm was given I dispatched a messenger to Lieutenant-Colonel Plumb, of the Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and ordered men to fire on Indians, which resulted in two of their horses being crippled. These shots were fired from 12-pounder mountain howitzer, which drove Indians over bluffs. On Colonel Plumb's arrival I sent corporal and ten men to bluffs on north side of Platte to watch movements of Indians until the command of Colonel Plumb arrived. Also one sergeant and ten men afoot in their rear to prevent their being cut off by superior forces. The mounted men saw one Indian going toward telegraph line, with the intention of cutting it. They pursued him and crippled his horse. About 2 o’clock Colonel Plumb's detachment arrived. I then sent the mounted squad of corporal and ten men with him to pursue Indians. They returned about 8.30 o’clock and reported one man of this command killed, whose body was recovered and brought in to the post. Lieutenant Bretnay and ten mounted men were absent, having started for Saint Mary's May 31. He returned to this post June 5, 1865.

Very respectfully,

S. B. WHITE,
First Sergeant, Commanding Post.

Col. T. MOONLIGHT,
Comdg. North Sub-District of the Plains, Fort Laramie, Dak. Ter.

MAY 27, 1865.—Skirmish in Chariton County, Mo.

GLASGOW, May 28, 1865.

Captain Denny reports that the Keytesville Missouri Militia, Captain Dolman, had a skirmish with Jackson in Chariton County yesterday. Killed Jackson's horse from under him. Jackson and his men escaped. Captain Denny is on the lookout for them.

A. F. DENNY,
Colonel.
MAY 27, 1865.—Skirmish at Switzler's Mill, Chariton County, Mo.

GLASGOW, May 28, 1865.

Lieutenant Wright, of Captain Denny's company of Roanoke Missouri Militia, had a skirmish with some of Rider's guerrillas yesterday morning at 3 o'clock, at Switzler's Mill, in Chariton County. He had them surrounded and forced a part of them into the mill pond, one of whom, Notes, of Chariton County, was drowned; one other supposed to be wounded. In the darkness the rest escaped. The lieutenant captured one horse and several pistols. No loss on our side.

A. P. DENNY, Colonel.

Brigadier-General PRATT.

MAY 29, 1865—NOVEMBER 14, 1866.—Operations in Texas and on the Rio Grande.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, La., November 11, 1866.

GENERAL: In compliance with letter of instructions, dated October 4, 1866, I have the honor to make the following report of operations within the limits of my command since the 29th of May, 1865:

On 17th of May, 1865, I was relieved from command of the Middle Military Division and assigned to the command of all the territory west of the Mississippi and south of the Arkansas Rivers, with directions to report to Lieutenant-General Grant for instructions. This territory embraced at that time within its limits the only organized rebel army left in the Confederacy, which was under the command of the rebel General E. Kirby Smith, with headquarters at Shreveport, or vicinity, in the State of Louisiana. My instructions from the lieutenant-general were to operate against this command, to break it up or destroy it. For this purpose I was authorized to draw from Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds, commanding Department of Arkansas, 12,000 men, and from Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby, commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi, 25,000 men; together with the Fourth and Twenty-fifth Army Corps and a column of from 8,000 to 9,000 cavalry to be collected from Louisiana, West Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama. The aggregate strength of this force was about 80,000 men.

On the 29th of May I assumed control of this new command, designating it the Military Division of the Southwest, with headquarters at New Orleans, La.; and, at about the same time, received intelligence of the surrender of E. Kirby Smith, through commissioners sent from him to Major-General Canby. This surrender was made, but bore upon its face double dealing on the part of the rebel commander, or his agents, as the Texas troops had declined to surrender, and had disbanded to their homes, destroying magazines and carrying with them arms and ammunition from the different arsenals. General Smith proceeded to Galveston, and from thence escaped to Mexico, in violation of the agreement he had bound himself to observe. This conduct on his part may have arisen from the fact that it could not be concealed that his real object in offering to surrender was to get security for the Arkansas, Louisiana, and Missouri troops to return to their homes, knowing full well that the Texas troops did not intend to surrender, and that most of them had already gone to their homes; that while they were destroying their arsenals and carrying home with them their arms, it was their constant boast that they were not conquered and that they would renew the fight at some future day.

Previous to the surrender, and in anticipation of the successful escape of Jefferson Davis, and his probable arrival in the Trans-Mississippi Department, it had been contemplated to organize a column of 15,000 Confederates at Marshall, Tex., for the invasion of Mexico. This scheme failed, perhaps from the capture of Mr. Davis; but while the main scheme of sending the 15,000 men to Mexico failed, numerous bands, squads, and parties, numbering perhaps 3,000 or 4,000 men, crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico. In view of this and the troubles of our sister Republic, and taking into consideration the fact that all our military projects during the war against Texas had been failures, and that on this account the Union people there had come to look upon the Government as weak, it was determined to throw a large force into that State and along the Rio Grande border. The accomplishment of this purpose was accompanied with great labor from various causes, but it was successfully achieved.

Among the first difficulties were the inadequacy of the depot at this place for the requirements of the service to be accomplished, the absence of all mercantile marine, and the worthless character of most of the transportation held by the quartermaster's department here for the purpose of crossing the Gulf or entering the ports of Texas, the destruction of all the wharves at the ports in Texas with the exception of Galveston, by the Confederates, and the long line of communications to the points occupied in the interior, over which supplies had to be sent; and last, but not least, the great reluctance of the troops, officers and men, to continue for a longer period in the service, they claiming that they had fulfilled their contract with the Government, and that it was just they should be mustered out. The movement of the Thirteenth Corps had been ordered before I reached New Orleans. One division of it, under Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron, proceeded to occupy the line of the Red River in Louisiana, and Marshall and Jefferson in Northeastern Texas; one division, under Maj. Gen. F. Steele, was under orders for the Rio Grande line; the third division, under Maj. Gen. J. A. Mower, was ordered to Galveston, from thence to occupy the line of railroad from Galveston to Brenham, while Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger, who was in command of the corps, was assigned to general command in Texas.

While these movements of the Thirteenth Corps were in progress I was rapidly collecting at Alexandria, La., a column of cavalry, about 4,500 strong, to be commanded by Maj. Gen. G. A. Custer, and another column at Shreveport, La., about 5,000 strong, to be commanded by Maj. Gen. Wesley Merritt. These cavalry columns were collected from different points in the States before mentioned, and were transferred up Red River by steam-boats, under great difficulties from the low stage of the water; were organized into divisions, equipped, supplied, and prepared to march for their respective points of destination, Merritt's division to march, via Marshall, to San Antonio, and Custer's division, via Hempstead, to Austin, Tex.; the columns marching nearly parallel to each other and something like 100 miles apart. These columns took with them a small pontoon train to cross streams on the line of march, and for the additional object of being able to cross the Rio Grande, should the Government elect to send troops in that direction.
the movements of the Thirteenth Corps and cavalry were going on, the Twenty-fifth Corps was embarked at City Point, Va., for the coast of Texas, to occupy the points of Indianola, Corpus Christi, Brazos Santiago, and the line of the Rio Grande, most of the corps, however, being sent to the Rio Grande line. Great trouble was experienced in the landing of the troops of this corps, in consequence of the bad harbors in Texas, the great draft of the vessels employed as transports, and the absence of suitable lighters to convey the troops across the bars. While the foregoing operations were in progress the Fourth Army Corps, numbering about 10,000 men, with all its field transportation, arrived in New Orleans, having been ordered to report to me for service in Texas, and was transported as rapidly as possible to Indianola, from thence to Victoria, and ordered to occupy the line from that point to San Antonio.

The troops on the line from Galveston to Austin were supplied with comparative ease, as the bar at Galveston offered no very difficult obstacle; the wharves, although in bad condition, still sufficed; the railroad from Hempstead to Brenham was in condition to transfer our necessary supplies, and from Brenham to Austin there was a passable wagon road.

The landing of the troops at Indianola was difficult on account of the dangerous bar, which had to be lightered over from the transports, and in consequence of the destruction of the wharves the lightering had to be, in most cases, to the shore in small boats. Then, when the troops were landed, there was no water for a distance of eighteen miles, and they had to be hurried over this distance as soon as landed, and from thence to Victoria, where timber and water could be obtained in abundance. Victoria is distant from Indianola about thirty-five or forty miles.

After these difficulties had been overcome it was found that the country between Indianola and Victoria was not passable for wagons in the winter, and the railroad from Lavaca to Victoria had to be repaired at much labor and some expense, else the troops would have had to come back to their supplies at Lavaca and Indianola, where there was no water. I therefore ordered the railroad repaired, and after it was in running order sold it to the company, covering the cost of repairs. The wharf at Indianola had also to be built entire, and when completed sold to cover the expenses incurred. But on account of these obstacles, and especially the difficulty of crossing the outer bar, which is about twenty miles from the landing, some of the transports had to return to New Orleans or the mouth of the Mississippi River for water for the troops and coal for the transports.

At Brazos Santiago the wharf had been destroyed, and many of the same difficulties occurred here, and some of the transports had also to return to New Orleans and the mouth of the Mississippi River for supplies of coal and water. The troops on this line were extended up the Rio Grande as far as Laredo, and on this line much the larger number of troops were placed. A wharf had to be built at Brazos, and at first the troops up the Rio Grande were supplied by small steamers, which we had sent to that river, but the difficulties of entrance at the mouth of the Rio Grande made this line of supply very dangerous and precarious for the supply of the troops, as sometimes a transport could not cross the bar at the mouth of the river for nine or ten days. I therefore ordered the building of a railroad from Brazos to White's Ranch, on the Rio Grande River—a distance of eleven miles—and this gave security to the supply of the troops. This railroad was afterward sold at about $40,000 over the actual expense of construction. All these difficulties in the movement of troops were overcome, and in a short period of time.
The effect of this large movement of troops on the destiny of Imperialism in Mexico has not been fully appreciated by our people. It is, however, well known that while we were struggling for a republican existence against organized rebellion, and when nearly all the heads of the governments in Europe (except Russia) wished, and did believe, that republicanism was not a success, the Emperor of the French undertook the bold expedition to subvert the Republic of Mexico. There was no territorial question to be settled, and history will not excuse the attempted annihilation of a nation on the plea of non-payment of a million or two of debts due. There was no good excuse for this attempted violation of rights, and the history of imperialism in Mexico is only the history of the buccaneer Morgan on a more extended scale, who at one time captured and held Panama, on the isthmus, until he could hold it no longer. So that, when this movement of our troops to Texas and the Rio Grande took place, we found the line of that river and all Northern Mexico in the hands of Imperialism, a government which collected no taxes, had no system of government, and supported its partisans, soldiers, and civilians by levying contributions on the poor inhabitants. But the appearance of our troops and the knowledge that friends were on the border went like electricity to the homes and hearts of the Mexican people. The rebels who had escaped from our country received no sympathy, and in less than a year this hardy people, without money, without arms and munitions of war, and without supplies, have recaptured Matamoras, Camargo, Presidio de Rio Grande, Lampazos, Monterey, Saltillo, Monclova, Durango, Chihuahua, and in fact hold nearly all of the country, putting the invaders on the defensive, and confining them to the Valley of Mexico, with a fair prospect of their speedy extermination. I have felt much interest in this event, because I have always believed that the occupation of Mexico was a part of the rebellion; and believing that the contest in our own country was for the vindication of republicanism, I did not think that that vindication would be complete until Maximilian was compelled to leave.

The course taken by nearly every newspaper in the lately rebellious States was sympathy for Maximilian, and the sentiment of a large portion of the population was likewise; and so determined was this on the part of thousands of adventurers that the Cordova emigration scheme was gotten up, and had, I think, for its object the formation of a Maximilian-American party, composed of Confederates entertaining antipathy toward our Government. Many of these, having no means, would have drifted into the army of Maximilian. I had to take strong grounds against this emigration, and finally broke it up by refusing to permit emigrants to embark from the sea-ports within the limits of my command. The effect of the presence of our troops in Texas and on the Rio Grande, as alluded to heretofore, on the destiny of imperialism, was great. It had not a friend among the officers or men from the highest to the lowest grade, and the effect was depressing in the extreme, so much so, that I am inclined to believe that had a demand been made for the withdrawal of the Imperial troops, on the ground that the invasion of Mexico was a part of the rebellion, it would have been granted and the miseries of that country for the last year avoided. While the Imperial troops held the line of the Rio Grande the strictest neutrality was preserved. Since they were driven away the same honorable neutrality has been preserved toward the Liberal Government.
The number of troops sent to Texas was about 52,000. Shortly after they had arrived and become somewhat settled, orders came for the muster out of about 47,000 of this force, and the muster out was carried on gradually and in accordance with our ability to bring them back, so that the movement may be considered as equal to a continuous movement of over 90,000 men over the most difficult line of operations which we have in the country. I make these remarks because I was under the impression at one time that the Quartermaster-General did not fully understand the magnitude of the movement, or the natural obstacles in the way of its accomplishment, and we had to struggle for six months without funds, on the plea that the Brazos Railroad was constructed without authority, and the public service made to suffer a punishment by this denial of funds. I believe the Quartermaster-General was influenced in this act by the representations of incompetent inspectors sent out to make reports.

The condition of civil affairs in Texas was anomalous, singular, and unsatisfactory. I found the provisional governor, backed by a small portion of the population, had for his standard of loyalty, "Abhorrence for the rebellion and glory in its defeat;" while his successor, as actual governor, had for his standard of loyalty, "Pride in rebellion; that it was a righteous but lost cause, being overpowered by the Federal forces."
Both of these representatives of the civil law, entertaining opposite standards for the loyalty of their subjects, I was required to support, and did it to the best of my ability, but it has been embarrassing in the extreme. Governor Hamilton, the provisional governor, was clamorous for more troops, and in several communications to me asserted that the civil law could not be carried out; that freedmen would be killed and Union men driven from the State without military support, which I gave whenever it was possible. Governor Throckmorton, the present governor, wants all the troops moved from the settled portions of the State, asserting that the civil law was all right; that justice would be done to freedmen, Union men, and our soldiers, in the courts. But justice is not done. To give you an instance of this, two soldiers were shot at Brenham, Tex., about two months ago. They were unarmed, and offered no provocation. The grand jury could find no bill against their would-be assassins, but found a bill against Brevet Major Smith, Seventeenth Infantry, for burglary, because he broke into the house of some citizens in his attempt to arrest these men. My own opinion is that the trial of a white man for the murder of a freedman in Texas would be a farce, and in making this statement I make it because truth compels me, and for no other reason.

During the last six months Indian depredations have taken place on the remote frontier. Their extent is not defined as yet, but they are not very alarming, and I think that the governor has, to some extent, been influenced by exaggerated reports, gotten up in some instances by frontier people to get a market for their produce, and in other instances by army contractors to make money. I have ordered two regiments of cavalry to the frontier and placed a regiment of infantry at Austin, to be moved if necessary. It is strange that over a white man killed by Indians on an extensive frontier the greatest excitement will take place, but over the killing of many freedmen in the settlements nothing is done. I cannot help but see this, and I cannot help but tell it to my superiors, no matter how unpleasant it may be to the authorities of Texas. I will establish the frontier posts in Texas in the early spring.
It was not done heretofore on account of having no available regular troops, and to have attempted it with volunteer troops, desirous of returning to their homes, would have involved an expense which I did not like to put upon the Government. In Louisiana there was about as much if not more anomaly in civil affairs than in Texas.

Our depot was in New Orleans, which, from its geographical position, became the main depot of the Gulf States, and in fact the whole Southwest. This place had necessarily been the headquarters of superior commanders, and, as many of them appeared to have more ability in civil than in military affairs, they left the results of that ability to be settled by myself and the subordinate officers of my command; questions and claims, semi-military and semi-civil, of every possible phase, and so numerous and complicated that, after a fair examination, I think that it will require one officer and ten clerks for over twelve months to brief and systematize what is yet left. The settlement of such of those claims as have already come up has been a dead weight upon the legitimate military duties of my command. Then there was the accumulation at this place of material of war of every possible character, from ocean steam-ships down to pickaxes and spades, the disposition of which gave great labor, but, by keeping steadily to work, and by the good judgment of subordinate commanders and staff officers of the different bureaus, this depot is now reduced to the present wants of the service.

At the time of my arrival at New Orleans, as before alluded to, the civil affairs were much mixed up. Governor J. Madison Wells was legitimately holding the position of governor, but a new election was to occur in the summer or fall; and although, from the antecedents of the governor, who supported the Federal authority, I had reason to expect good judgment, still, either on account of the approaching election, in which he was a candidate for re-election, or because he thought it best, he was filling a number of vacancies in offices throughout the State by returned Confederates. I did not know this, as it was none of my business, until I learned it by the constant appeals made to me by men who were turned out to give place to newcomers whom they did not think deserving, and I only speak of it now because it led afterward, to bitterness and shedding of blood, in which the military were to some extent involved. The governor was re-elected and the legislature met, but it was found that the governor had one will and the legislature had another; each hated the other, and trouble was sure to come. Not only was the legislature in antagonism with the governor, but all, or nearly all, the subordinate civil authorities in the State were against him. Many of these he had himself appointed, if they still held over after the election. Then the governor commenced making appeals to the military authorities to support him; and when it was proper and legitimate, to serve the ends of justice, such support was given, but when it was to satisfy partisan or political purposes, it was refused, and the military assumed the position that politics was outside of the profession, and that it could not be called on legitimately to serve the interests of either side. This bitter political feeling finally culminated in the massacre of the 30th of July, 1866. I have thought that had I been in the city this slaughter might have been avoided, but I did not expect it to occur; and I was led to this belief by a conversation, which I had, about the 1st of June last, with Judge Durell, who was the president of the Louisiana convention of 1864, and who told me that he would decline to call it together. He asked if it could have military support. I said it could not; that I would not allow the military to be used for party purposes, but that if the parties in the State came into collision it would be my duty to maintain the peace of the country, as I had believed for some time past that the safety of life and property did not rest with the civil authorities when there was any great disturbing cause.

In Florida there were no political issues involving the military authorities, although much annoyance occasionally came from arrests of officers and soldiers for acts alleged to have been committed during the rebellion. The people of Florida appeared to realize the fact that it would not make much difference to them what party was in power, and that their best interest was to take off their coats and go to work to repair the disaster of the rebellion. On the 27th of June, 1865, the temporary Military Division of the Southwest was abolished by the creation of the Military Division of the Gulf, which included the Departments of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Florida. These departments were, respectively, commanded by Major-Generals Wright, Canby, Slocum, and Foster. On October 7, 1865, the Department of Mississippi was transferred to the Military Division of the Tennessee. On May 22, 1866, Major-General Canby, having been ordered to Washington, was succeeded by Bvt. Maj. Gen. A. Baird in the command of the Department of Louisiana.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, U. S. Army.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. JOHN A. RAWLINS,
Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.

MAY —, 1865.—Operations in Johnson County, Mo.

Report of Lieut. William E. Chester, Johnson County Missouri Militia.

CAMP GROVER, NEAR WARRENSBURG, MO.,
May 8, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to orders from the colonel commanding this district, I assumed command of an escort from this place to Lexington. At that place I was joined by Captain Arnold and five men, making my total force twenty-seven men. On my return I took the Columbus road until I reached the farm of the Widow Butler, sixteen miles north of Columbus. I then moved to the right in the direction of the head of Davis' Creek. After reaching the timber I came to the farm of Philip Varner, where I found the guerrilla band of Jesse Hamlet. They were getting dinner; some were writing letters. I immediately ordered my men to charge. They fully obeyed my orders. The result was two rebels killed, named Stephenson and Herr. Hamlet was wounded, but made his escape. Stephenson was killed by Private William H. Brown, of the Johnson County Volunteer Militia; Herr was killed by Privates Reed, Mauselund, and Adams, of Captain Arnold's company. Near the house in the woods we caught a son of Varner's and intended to bring him to this place. When near the farm of W. White he jumped from his horse and ran into the brush. The guard fired on him, but what the result was I do not know. I am confident he was a member of the band, as we found a shotgun, a musket barrel, and a French navy revolver that he said belonged to him. I ordered the citizens of the county to bury the dead bushwhackers, which was done near Maxwell's blacksmith shop, ten miles north of Columbus. When near the latter place I stopped at the farm of Mrs. Renick to rest, and while there a band of over thirty rebels rode up to the house. As soon as they discovered us they broke to run. Their commander tried to rally them, but in vain. We mounted and pursued them. Their course was down Blackwater. They kept in the brush and scattered several times. Near the farm of Mr. Harrison I came in sight of them. After a sharp run of about a mile and a half I got in reach of them. I ordered my men to use their carbines at long range and save their revolvers for close quarters. In the lane of the farm belonging to the Widow Williams, six miles north of this post and in sight of town, the rebel commander tried to form his force to give us fight. When they had got their lines half formed I ordered a charge. My men charged them with a shout, when the rebels ran and commenced cutting their plunder loose from their saddles. I pressed them on a run for about four miles. I followed on within about three miles of Kirkpatrick's Mill. My men and horses were so exhausted I did not think it worth while to pursue them farther, and returned to camp. I captured seven head of horses. I left them in the country. I will get them soon. Also a lot of dry goods, the amount I do not know. I turned them over to the provost-marshal of the district. I cannot close my report without mentioning the disloyalty of the citizens of the country through which I passed. They would not give any information in regard to bushwhackers; deny any being in the country. I am thankful to Captain Arnold for the assistance he gave me. Although not in command he gave me all the assistance in his power. Some of the men with me acted very badly on the last day. Instead of keeping their places in ranks when I was charging the rebels, in violation of my positive orders they dismounted to gather up the plunder the rebels were abandoning on the road, but their number was few. Soldiers who will do so are a disgrace to the uniform they wear.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. E. CHESTER,
First Lieut., Comdg. Johnson County Militia, Comdg. Scout.

Capt. C. G. LAURANT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Central Missouri.

JUNE 2, 1865.—Operations about Fort Rice, Dak. Ter.

HEADQUARTERS POST COMMANDANT,
Fort Rice, Dak. Ter., June 2, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that I communicated with you last on the 26th of May, 1865. I regret to announce that First Lieut. B. S. Wilson, superintendent of buildings, died this day at 12 m., from the effects of arrow wounds received on the 26th ultimo. Hostile Indians made their appearance this a. m. at 7 o'clock at five different points, encircling the fort. I advanced my infantry and occupied the bluffs in rear and right and left of fort, the Indians falling back as I advanced. I sent out all my mounted infantry with about sixty mounted warriors of Two Bear's and Bear Rib's bands, with a mountain howitzer, and pursued them nearly to what is called Crystal Palace Bluff. They made but one stand—out of musket range. A few shells thrown among them scattered them, they leaving robes and throwing clothing off in all directions. At one time a volley from an ambuscade they had formed came very near proving disastrous to our party; their aim being too high they did not do any damage. They shouted to the friendly Indians with us that they were from Young Man’s Butte, and in a few days a large party would arrive to attack the fort; that they did not want to fight them (the friendly Indians) and advised them to join them (the hostile Indians). As every ravine and knoll for two miles contained squads of hostile Indians, I am unable to judge of their exact number. Fortunately we have good grazing and feeding near the post, and I shall keep everything compact and guard against surprise. Major Wilkinson, the Indian agent, passed up on the steamer Lilly Martin with annuity goods for the Blackfeet and Assiniboines. He coincides with my opinion that the military authorities are the best judges as to whom and at what time it is best to distribute annuity goods; that all agents should be under the control of the military authorities. My stock has become very much reduced this winter and I was unable to send either wagons or ammunition to Fort Sully by land at the time it was requested, therefore I sent it on boats. The ammunition I have now started by land (eight wagons), my stock having picked up. It takes all of my cattle and mules at post. Captain Fisk’s brother has turned me over a 12-pounder mountain howitzer. By your direction Captain Pope ordered me to send him all of the ammunition for that caliber gun. I have kept some four boxes and would respectfully request that I may receive some shell and canister by next boat. I trust, general, that Two Bear and band may receive some of the annuity goods that I hear of being distributed at Fort Sully. He has been a true and faithful Indian and been of much service to me this winter. I have employed his and Bear Rib’s band as soldiers and issued them one ration per day, which I trust will meet with your approval.

Asking pardon for addressing you direct, but trusting that the explanation in my last letter will be received, I remain, yours, truly and respectfully,

C. A. R. DIMON,
Colonel First U. S. Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.
Bvt. Maj. Gen. A. SULLY,
Commanding District of Iowa.

JUNE 3, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians at Dry Creek, Dak. Ter.

HEADQUARTERS ELEVENTH KANSAS CAVALRY,
Camp Dodge, near Platte Bridge, Dak., June 4, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that on Saturday, the 3d instant, about 3 p. m., a party of ten Indians dashed down to the river-bank opposite and fired upon Platte Bridge Station. The garrison returned the fire, wounding a pony; the Indians then fell back. Learning of this by messenger from the station, I took ten men of Company B, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and leaving word for twenty more of Companies A and F to follow speedily as possible, proceeded to the station, and taking with me from there ten of Company G, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, I started in pursuit. A hard chase of five miles brought me up within shooting distance of the Indians, and a running fight ensued, which resulted in 1 Indian pony being killed and 2 Indians wounded. Over one-half of the detachment had fallen behind on account of their horses not being able to keep up, and the Indians made an effort to turn the scale by suddenly wheeling about and charging upon us, but failing to induce a corresponding movement on our part they scattered and ran off at a rate of speed that showed that their previously comparatively lagging gait had some ulterior purpose in view. This purpose was quite apparent immediately after, as a party of about sixty Indians came charging down the bottom of Dry Creek half a mile to our left, with the apparent purpose of getting between us and the station and cutting off the stragglers. But at this time the detachment of Companies A and F appeared in sight, and the Indians wheeled about, and we pursued as rapidly as possible, a small portion of the party being able to keep within shooting distance of their rear guard for a mile or two. Some six or seven of A and F companies and one of Company G, Eleventh Ohio, pursued a party to the right and considerably in advance, and were ambushed by about thirty Indians, front and rear, and being somewhat scattered and having exhausted the charges of their revolvers in the long chase were unable to hold their ground until assistance could come up, and two privates, William T. Bonwell, Company F, Eleventh Kansas, and Stahlnecker, Company G, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, were killed. The former was scalped; the latter was saved from mutilation by the bravery of Private Martin, of Company A, who threw himself into a ravine close by and drove the Indians off with his carbine. These men would probably have escaped if their horses had not been shot and fallen with them, Private Bonwell’s falling on him, binding him firmly to the earth. This advance party had shot an Indian, killing him, and part of them were catching the Indian’s horse when they dashed upon them, making a complete surprise. After this the Indians went off more rapidly than ever and I recalled the men and ceased pursuit. The men all behaved with their usual bravery. The Indians were mostly armed with firearms, some having both rifles and revolvers. They were well mounted, and had besides about twenty extra ponies. The consequences of lack of corn for our animals were painfully apparent after the first two miles of the chase. They cannot compete with the Indian horses even for that distance on rough ground. One Indian is known to have been killed and from 4 to 6 wounded severely. The bodies of our men who were killed were brought to camp and buried to-day with military honors. The affair was the first experience of the kind most of the men ever had and was of value to them. It will also serve to show the Indians that they may expect to fight often as an occasion is presented.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. B. PLUMB,

Lieutenant-Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Comdg. Regiment.

Lieut. I. I. TABER,

 Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Laramie.
Report of Capt. Luther Wilson, First Colorado Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Collins, Colo. Ter., June 10, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to make the following report regarding all scouts and movements of troops belonging to this command for the week ending June 10, 1865:

Word came last Tuesday from Willow Spring Station that a band of Indians had visited that place. After compelling the stock tender to give up what provisions he had, they left without committing any further depredations, leaving word that they would return. I immediately mounted twenty-five men of my command and proceeded up the road in the direction of the above place. A heavy storm came up soon after starting, making the roads almost impassable. After a tedious march of thirty-seven miles I reached Virginia Dale, where I learned the Indians had gone into the mountains, and were a few wandering, begging Utes. Thinking it useless to follow them, as the rain had washed out all traces of the trail, I sent word forward to Sergeant Linnell, commanding detachment at Big Laramie, to detail five men to guard Willow Spring Station, then returned to this post. On the 8th instant sent Corporal Baker with six men on scout toward Laramie, with instructions to keep a sharp lookout for marauding Indians and all trails leading in this direction. Corporal Baker will probably return in about three days. A party of horse stealing Indians came in above on this creek night before last, taking some twenty head of ponies and horses from some of the French and half-breeds. I received word too late to send in pursuit, but an Indian runner has gone over to Fort Laramie with word to look out for them on the North Platte. I am in constant communication with Captain Humphreville, commanding Fort Halleck, and Sergeant Linnell, at Big Laramie, who will let me know at once how matters are up the road. I will keep on the alert and render speedy assistance when required. I do not deem it necessary to furnish escort to the mail at present, as it will take too many from the command, and I wish to keep as many here as possible to perfect them in drill, more especially in the skirmishing. If anything transpires of a serious nature I will notify headquarters at once.

Hoping my action in the above will meet with your approval, I am, sir, with much respect, your obedient servant,

LUTHER WILSON,

Lieut. J. S. GRAHAM,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General,
South Sub-District of the Plains, Denver, Colo. Ter.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS SOUTH SUB-DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Denver, Colo. Ter.; June 14, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to the general commanding for information. Captain Wilson has been ordered not to keep his men in a body, but to distribute them so as to protect the mail route.

C. H. POTTER,
Colonel Sixth U. S. Volunteers, Commanding.
JUNE 8-14, 1865.—Attack by Indians on the Overland Stage Road in Kansas and Colorado, with skirmishes (8th and 12th) at Fort Dodge, Kans., (9th) at Chavis Creek near Cow Creek Station, Kans., (12th) near Cow Creek Station, Plum Butte, and Pawnee Rock, Kans.

REPORTS.

No. 2.—Maj. William F. Armstrong, Second U. S. Volunteer Infantry.

No. 3.—Lieut. Richard W. Jenkins, Second Colorado Cavalry.

No. 4.—Capt. Elisha Hammer, Seventh Iowa Cavalry.

No. 5.—Capt. Theodore Conkey, Third Wisconsin Cavalry.

No. 1.

Headquarters District of Upper Arkansas,
Fort Riley, Kans., June 12, 1865.

Capt. John Willans, Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of the Missouri, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

Captain: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the general commanding, copies of reports of depredations committed by the Indians on the Santa Fe road; also a copy of letter to General Carleton, reports and letters referred to in telegram of this date. The officer at Cow Creek Station has been placed in arrest and the matter will be thoroughly investigated.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD, Brevet Brigadier-General.

Headquarters District of Upper Arkansas,
Fort Riley, Kans., June 12, 1865.

On the 8th instant a party of Indians dashed in among the herd near Fort Dodge and succeeded in getting off with twenty-one head of Government stock. They had on U. S. blue overcoats, so that the herders paid but little attention to them until they commenced yelling and firing. Major Armstrong, commanding Fort Dodge, sent an officer with a small mounted party in pursuit to ascertain their number and where camped. On the 9th instant Indians attacked four trains (twelve wagons each) en route to Fort Union with Government and private goods, and captured 1 train of mules and 1 train of cattle, at a point about two miles and a half east of Chavis Creek, and succeeded in getting off with both trains. Lieutenant Jenkins with sixty men started from Cow Creek in pursuit as far as the Arkansas River, but could not cross without swimming his stock, thereby damaging his ammunition, and so abandoned the chase. The number of animals taken was 101 mules, 3 horses, and 75 head of cattle. But 1 man was killed. Mr. Morrison, of New Mexico (late major First New Mexico Cavalry), returned to Fort Bascom, N. Mex., after being absent, by permission of General Carleton, on a trading expedition to the Comanche and Kiowa Indians without accomplishing anything. He went as far as Watchingau; from thence [sent] two men to find the Indians. They found a war party of Coman-Ches, and returned in about eight days, after being robbed of everything they had. These Indians told them that they and the Kiowas and twelve other nations had made a treaty with the Texans to attack Forts Larned and Bascom, and then make a raid on the plains and so into New Mexico. Major Morrison says he met other parties of traders who had been robbed by the Indians, and to whom the same stories were told. The Texans were to leave about 1st of June. Major Morrison had in view also the release of some American women captured by the Comanches, but they had been delivered up to the Texans. My predictions are surely coming true. In ten days we will have a large party to contend with. The Fifteenth Kansas Cavalry should be pushed up; also one company with four howitzers. I have forwarded reports of Majors Morrison and Armstrong and Lieutenant Jenkins by mail to day. Colonel Leavenworth starts south to-day. He has already sent out his runners. They will meet him at the mouth of the Little Arkansas as soon as they find the Indians. Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry arrived and starts west to-morrow. Shall put the Fifteenth [Kansas] forward as soon as it arrives. Have sent two companies up to Salt Marshes. Shall move these companies to Cimarron Crossing immediately.

JAS. H. FORD,
Brevet Brigadier-General.

Major-General DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri.

FORT RILEY, June 14, 1865.
(Received 8.30 p. m. 15th.)

The coach going west from Cow Creek Station, escorted by six men and commanded by Lieutenant Jenkins, Second Colorado Cavalry, was attacked by about 100 Indians a short distance from the station. The men fought them until assistance reached them from the station. They drove the Indians to the river, killing and wounding fifteen Indians. Same day a train was attacked by about same number of Indians near Plum Butte, which was being escorted to Fort Zarah, but the escort completely routed the Indians. Our loss, two wounded. On same day near Pawnee Rock, Shrewsbury's train with corn from Leavenworth was attacked by about 110 Indians; were routed, with a loss of two of our men, who were killed, scalped, and otherwise mutilated. Two messengers for Fort Dodge were driven back to this post on the evening of the 10th, having been attacked by a party of Indians. I have forwarded reports of the above by mail.

JAS. H. FORD,
Brevet Brigadier-General.

Major-General DODGE.

FORT RILEY, June 14, 1865.
(Received 8.30 p. m. 15th.)

Since last report the post of Fort Dodge was attacked by about 400 Indians during a heavy fog. Loss small. The Fifteenth Kansas ought to hurry up; no report of them yet. I want another regiment of cavalry. The attack was simultaneous along the whole of my line of the Arkansas during the night of the 11th.

JAS. H. FORD,
Brevet Brigadier-General.

Major-General DODGE.
FORT BASCOM, May 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. James H. Carleton,
Santa Fé, N. Mex.:

GENERAL: I deem it my duty to report to you the result of an expedition in conformity with a permit obtained from you for the purpose of effecting the release of some American women and children held in captivity by the Comanche and Kiowa Indians, and therefore have the honor to inform you as follows:

I started from this post on or about the 18th of March last down the river, and after a very tedious and troublesome journey I got as far as the so-called Watchingau, judging it to be about 100 miles down the Adobe Fort. Until then I did not meet or see any Indians, nor did I know their whereabouts. I then sent two trustworthy men out for the purpose of finding out, if possible, the whereabouts of Indians, and gave them nine days to return to me to the camp. They came back to me on the eighth day, and did not find any rancheria of Indians, but came across a war party of thirty-eight Comanche Indians, who robbed them of their pistols, saddles, and other things they carried along, and the men only escaped with their lives. The Indians told these men that they and the Kiowas and twelve more nations have formed a treaty of peace with the Texans; that they received ammunition, clothing, and articles of subsistence from the Texans; that they (the Indians) must aid them in an expedition against New Mexico, to start on the next rise of the new moon, which will be about the latter part of this month or the 1st day of June next. They say further that they will attack Fort Bascom and Fort Larned for the purpose of destroying the two forts entirely, and then enter New Mexico to carry off cattle, sheep, and herders. All these Indians are together in Texas, on the other side of the mountains, called by the Mexicans De los Sierra Jumanes, and, in fact, show all signs of hostility against the Americans and the people of the Territory. Shortly after the above-mentioned two men came back to my camp another party of Mexicans who had obtained a permit also for going out to the Indians, and who had been in advance of me, returned and came to my camp, the Indians having stripped them of most everything they had, took all their effects, and only spared their lives, and told them the same thing as they told to the aforesaid two men of mine, telling them also if they would go on to reach the Indians they would not come back alive, but all be killed by them. The men are residents of Pojuaque, near Santa Fé. Their names I do not recollect, and were ten in number. I came furthermore across a Kiowa Indian and woman, and this Kiowa being with me for several days in my camp, and told me the same thing, what I already stated, corroborating altogether the statement made to me by my men, and by the others who were robbed and joined me as aforesaid. They are very much aggrieved by the attack having been made against them by Colonel Carson, and seek revenge, and being, as they say, backed by the Texans, will make a good thing out of this summer. They say that they will not leave a sign of Fort Bascom, but are determined to destroy it. I must further state that the women held in captivity were turned over to the Texans, and are now free. Seeing that I was now in danger of losing my life and the lives of my men, without having a chance to gain anything, I determined to return, which I effected, arriving here on yesterday afternoon, being on the trip from home now two months, and consider myself in good luck coming back.

*See letter of transmittal June 12, p. 308.
alive and not to lose anything I took out to trade. When I first heard the statement that they intended mischief against the Territory, and particularly against this post, I did not much credit the report; but since I cannot help believe the statement, as the reports from the Comanches and Kiowas co-operate, and all state the same thing, and, in fact, I have seen plenty of proof of their hostility and bad intentions, and must freely admit to you that, according to my judgment, Fort Bascom is in a precarious and perilous condition, owing to the small amount of troops stationed at this post. Two more expeditions of Mexicans going out also, I met about fifty or sixty miles from this post, and have returned back with me without effecting anything. They are citizens from La Cueva and Mora, and are glad of having escaped the danger in losing everything and their lives. I shall start from here to-day, and hope to arrive home in eight or ten days.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. MORRISON.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,

Fort Dodge, Kans., June 9, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report:

On the 8th day of June, 1865, at 3 p. m., a party of Indians, fifteen or twenty in number, made a dash on the herd of stock at this post while the stock was grazing, not more than half a mile from camp.
The Indians came through a ravine that runs through the hills. They were dressed in U. S. uniform, or at least they had blue overcoats, army style. They came down toward the river on a slow gallop, and rode to the river, watered their horses. Their horses were not the pony, but large horses. Then they rode down to the stock. The herdsmen said they were watching them, but did not once suspect that they were Indians in our uniform, so they did not look as sharp as they could if they had not had our uniform on. The Indians rode in among the stock and then commenced yelling and shooting at the horses, which convinced the herdsmen that they were Indians, when they immediately took after the herd and Indians. They (the herdsmen) made a dash through the herd and succeeded in turning about ten in number. These horses were brought into camp and saddled and mounted by cavalry and infantry, who continued the chase until dark, and they finally succeeded in recapturing some fifteen or twenty more horses and mules. Everything was done that could be done by me to save the stock. Our cavalry force was small, all the horses being out grazing. We might have kept eight or ten ready all the time in case of an emergency, but we have no forage whatever at this post and we are compelled to let the stock run out to graze. The Indians finally succeeded in driving off twenty-one head of stock out of fifty-five or sixty that they started with. I have sent Captain Molony with a party of cavalry on a scout to follow the trail and to ascertain, if pos-possible, the number of Indians and where they are encamped, of which I will report on his return of his success.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. F. ARMSTRONG,

Major, Commanding Post.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report:

On Monday morning, June 12, 1865, the Indians, between 300 and 400, made an attack on this post, in which they succeeded in capturing all the horses and mules at the post except eight horses. We had 3 men wounded and 2 captured or killed, whose bodies have not been found. There was a very heavy fog in the early part of the morning, under cover of which the Indians hid themselves in the ravines close to camp and waited there until the fog cleared up; and before the pickets could give the alarm the Indians were between them and camp. It is supposed that the Indians crossed the river some eight miles below camp from the south side. At the time they made the attack on the camp some 200 showed themselves on the south side of the river. They drove the herd of horses and mules some three miles up the river and crossed, then moved in the direction of Mulberry Creek. I would respectfully request that there be sent to this post two pieces of artillery. The force for duty is very small, and we are liable to be attacked by superior numbers any night. Having no mounted men or transportation at present here, and rations rather short, I think the post is in rather a dangerous situation.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. F. ARMSTRONG,
Major, Commanding Post.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Asst. Adj. Gen., District of Upper Arkansas

No. 3.

Reports of Lieut. Richard W. Jenkins, Second Colorado Cavalry.

SIR: At 11.55 o'clock yesterday I received the following:

TWO MILES AND A HALF EAST OF CHAVIS CREEK, KANS.,
June 9, 1865—11 a. m.

COMMANDING OFFICER COW CREEK, KANS.:

We have been attacked by Indians and lost one train of mules and one train of cattle. There were not more than fifty or sixty Indians in sight. We are badly in want of cavalry to pursue them. Can you not send us some this evening, and oblige,

MANY PROPRIETORS.

June 9, 12.03 p. m. I started with sixty men; arrived at the scene 1.55 p. m. I followed their trail, by the tracks and cattle that they had wounded and left, to the Arkansas River, about sixteen or eighteen miles south of west. I could not cross the river without swimming my stock about ten rods. By so doing I would have had my ammunition damaged; consequently had to abandon the chase. There was an escort of eight or ten men of Company K, Second U. S. Volunteers, with the trains. They not being well supplied with ammunition, did not fire more than two rounds each. The Indians captured 101 head of mules, 3 head of horses, 75 head of cattle. We found about forty head of the latter on the prairie, about half of them being killed or badly wounded.
There was one man killed within 100 yards of the camp. The trains were four in number, twelve wagons each, and were bound for Forts Lyon and Union, loaded with Government and citizens' stores.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. W. JENKINS,
First Lieut. Company I, Second Colorado Cav., Comdg. Station.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,

HEADQUARTERS STATION,
Cow Creek, Kans., June 12, 1865.

Sir: In compliance with Special Orders, No. 31, dated June 11, 1865, headquarters station, Cow Creek, Kans., I started in company with coach for Fort Zarah, Kans. Almost four miles from this station, while traveling in a coach furnished for the use of the escort, I was attacked by a party of Indians, numbering more than 100, rushing in all sides. I had but six available men, but they made a bold stand, and in almost ten minutes we succeeded in driving them farther from us. I then retreated back toward a train which stood almost one mile from where the attack commenced. We killed 1 Indian, 1 pony, and wounded 3 more ponies severely. I do not think that such an act of heroism has ever been displayed by six soldiers, who were surrounded by about 100 savages, charging, arrows and lances darting from every side, and only two men slightly wounded in their heads by lances.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. W. JENKINS, First Lieutenant Company I, Second Colorado Cavalry.

Capt. ELISHA HAMMER,
Seventh Iowa Cavalry, Company G, Commanding Station.

---

Reports of Capt. Elisha Hammer, Seventh Iowa Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS STATION,
Cow Creek, Kans., June 12, 1865.

I have the honor to report that Lieut. R. W. Jenkins, Company I, Second Colorado Cavalry, left this station as escort for the U. S. mail coach to Fort Zarah, Kans., at 11 a.m. with six men, three of Company I, Second Colorado Cavalry, and three of Company G, Seventh Iowa Cavalry. Three or four miles from this station they were attacked by at least 100 Indians. The lieutenant and the men stood their ground and fought the Indians nobly. The Indians charged up within ten feet. They wounded with lances two men in the head slightly (Privates Cutting and Platt, of Company G, Seventh Iowa Cavalry). They are doing well. They killed 1 Indian, 1 pony, and wounded 3 more ponies on the ground. I saw the coach returning with all the speed that the mules seemed to possess. I being satisfied that they were attacked (I went on top of the house at this place and saw that there was a large body of Indians moving in a circle) I took fifty-five men, twenty-six of Company I, Second Colorado Cavalry, and twenty-nine men of Company G, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and went to their relief immediately.
Lieutenant Jenkins took command of Company I, Second Colorado Cavalry. The Indians moved in a southwest direction; they had some two miles the advance; we pursued them to the Arkansas River, the last two miles at full speed to the bank of said river, and came close enough to empty eight saddles, a portion of the Indians floating down the river, killing and wounding at least fifteen Indians. We killed or wounded three Indians on the south bank with carbines from the north side. Drove them from the river and stationed twenty men on the bank of the river with carbines to protect my men in crossing. Lieutenant Jenkins led the way across the river, followed by thirty-five men. After they had crossed over I joined them, leaving twenty men at the crossing in charge of Sergeant Bown, of Company I, Second Colorado Cavalry, to await our return. We crossed without much difficulty by swimming a portion of the way; went south some three miles; found that we could not overtake them in any reasonable distance; returned to this station with my command. Lieutenant Jenkins and men under my command did nobly, and were ready and willing to do everything that was possible for them to do. Inclosed you will find copy of Lieutenant Jenkins' report.*

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELISHA HAMMER,

Captain Company G, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, Comdg. Station.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,

HEADQUARTERS STATION,
Cow Creek, Kans., June 12, 1865—7 p.m.

Sergt. M. P. Doud, Company G, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, with twenty men, just returned from escorting train to Fort Zarah, Kans., reports that he met Sergeant Cronk, Company I, Second Colorado Cavalry, and nineteen men escorting trains to Fort Zarah, at the Plum Buttes; he says that his train has been attacked by at least 100 Indians, and Sergeant Cronk drove them from the train. One of his men (Patrick Sullivan) was separated and supposed to have been killed. No loss of stock or men, except the above mentioned. Sergeant Doud saw some thirty Indians and drove them across the Arkansas River without loss. The above transpired about the same time that Lieutenant Jenkins was attacked.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

ELISHA HAMMER,

Captain Company G, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, Comdg. Station.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Riley, Kans.

No. 5.

Reports of Capt. Theodore Conkey, Third Wisconsin Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS POST,
Fort Larned, Kans., June 11, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that two messengers from Fort Dodge left this post last evening at 6 o'clock, and after proceeding

* See next, ante.
twelve miles on their way they discovered eleven Indians approaching them at great speed from the direction of the Arkansas River. After waiting long enough to satisfy themselves by observation that they were not only Indians, but were trying to cut off their retreat to this post, the messengers turned back, pursued by the Indians to within four or five miles of this garrison. The duties incidental to this post render it impossible to send out scouting parties, as the troops stationed here for duty are constantly employed in and around the post. A large amount of stock is concentrated here, and it takes all of our available strength to take that care of it that the exigencies surrounding us obviously demand.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THEO. CONKEY,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Lieut. J. E. TAPPAN,

HEADQUARTERS POST,
Fort Larned, Kans., June 12, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that messengers arrived at this post yesterday from Lieutenant Hennion, Second Colorado Cavalry, in command of escort of twenty men to Shrewsbury & Co.'s mule train of corn from Leavenworth, informing me that he was in corral near Pawnee Rock, sixteen miles east of this place, and engaged with upward of 100 Indians who had made an attack upon the train. In two hours and forty minutes after the messengers left Lieutenant Hennion I arrived at the train with 150 mounted men, and found that Lieutenant Hennion had dispersed the Indians without loss of any of his escort or animals, but had not sufficient force to pursue them. An ox train of eleven wagons loaded with commissary stores for Fort Union was on the lower road eight miles lower down the river than where the attack was made on Lieutenant Hennion, and without an escort. When the Indians left they went in the direction of this train. I immediately dispatched Captain Walker, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, with about seventy-five men to the relief of this train, which was reported corralled when last seen by some of Lieutenant Hennion's party. Upon Captain Walker's arrival he found the train and stock all safe, with the exception of one wagon, which was nearly half a mile in the rear when the Indians were first discovered, and not having time to close up, the driver was compelled to abandon his team and make his escape as best he could to the corral. The only casualty was one man wounded in the arm. The Indians sacked the wagon, which was loaded with desiccated potatoes, vinegar, and pepper. Killed two of the oxen before leaving the wagon and drove four across the river. The Indians showed themselves to Captain Walker upon the bluff, three-quarters of a mile distant, upon the opposite side of the river, which is unusually high and cannot be forded and only crossed by swimming.

Two messengers, Corporal Hicks and Private Huestis, Company K, Second Colorado Cavalry, arrived at this post on the evening of the 10th instant from Fort Zarah with dispatches from district headquarters, and left at 9 a.m. on the morning of the 11th (yesterday) with return dispatches. On my way out to the relief of Lieutenant Hennion, Huestis' body was found lying near the road four miles this side of Ash Creek, scalped, stripped, and otherwise mutilated. Near the crossing of Ash Creek Corporal Hicks' body was found in the road, stripped, his head, feet, and hands entirely severed, and his body mutilated in a most shocking and barbarous manner. It appears that the Indians laid in wait, concealed in the bed of the creek, and succeeded in killing Corporal Hicks immediately, and Huestis, more fortunate for the moment, made his escape and fled for the post, but was overtaken and killed after a chase of four miles. He is said to have been mounted on one of the fleetest horses in the regiment, and was an expert rider. Two messengers for Fort Dodge on the evening of the 10th were driven back by a party of eleven Indians, as will be seen by my report of yesterday, a copy of which I forward; also tri-monthly report for June 10, the originals having been lost by messengers. The number of troops reported at this post is too meager to protect the stock, do the garrison duty, and leave any for raiding purposes. The great amount of stock collected in the immediate neighborhood by the accumulation of trains outward bound awaiting escort keeps the grass short, which compels the cavalry to herd their stock a long distance from the post, making it both inconvenient and insecure, and which requires all the spare troops to protect.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THEO. CONKEY,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Lieut. J. E. Tappan,

JUNE 12-JULY 5, 1865.—Expedition to the Platte and Niobrara Rivers.

Report of Col. Robert R. Livingston, First Nebraska Cavalry, commanding East Sub-District of the Plains.

HEADQUARTERS EAST SUB-DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., July 5, 1865.

Captain: I have the honor to submit the following report of my proceedings at the Pawnee Indian Village and the expedition from that point toward the Niobrara River:
Circumstantial evidence tending to fasten suspicion upon the Pawnee Indians as the perpetrators of the attack on a party of unarmed soldiers of the Third Regiment U. S. Volunteers, en route from Fort Leavenworth to this post on the 18th of May last, the general commanding district directed me to proceed to their village, and if satisfied of their guilt demand the guilty parties, and in event of a refusal to render them up I was instructed to arrest five of the principal chiefs and bring them safely to Fort Kearny. Believing that the troops accompanying me to Pawnee Village could be used to advantage in scouting the country between the Platte and Niobrara Rivers, I applied to your headquarters for permission to conduct an expedition through that country, which was promptly acceded to, and in consequence I directed the commanding officer at Fort Kearny to send 150 mounted men due north from his post, to meet me on the north bank of the North Fork of Loup River, while with 100 more men I moved up the North Fork of Loup River from Pawnee Village to join them. In obedience to this programme I sent a force of seventy-five mounted men, under command of Lieut. John P. Murphy, First Nebraska Veteran Volunteer Cavalry, from post Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., on the 12th ultimo, to meet me at Columbus, to which place I proceeded by stage, arriving there the 17th ultimo. On my arrival there I found that Lieutenant Murphy could not cross the Platte River, owing to its swollen condition and the danger of any attempt to swim it in its then rapid and turbulent state. Determined to proceed, I directed on the 19th ultimo that the best swimmers should ride their horses, and that those who could not swim should seize the tails of their animals and, driving them in, permit the horses to tow them across the deepest channels. The ammunition was crossed in a little skiff hauled by hand from Columbus. In this manner I succeeded in crossing the command without accident. One man was drowned in the early part of the day by attempting to ride over the river at a point nearly one mile distant from that selected for the crossing. On the 20th I proceeded to Pawnee Indian Agency, distant from Columbus twenty-two miles in a northwesterly course, up the north bank of the Loup River, where I arrived on the 20th of June, and proceeded at once to investigate the alleged complicity of the Pawnee Indians in the massacre on Little Blue River, which occurred on the 18th of May last. I had brought with me the survivors of the party attacked, together with the teamster who drove their wagon, in the expectation that they would be able to identify any guilty parties or any of the mules stolen from the wagon.

Mr. B. F. Lushbaugh, U. S. agent of the Pawnee Indians, afforded me every facility in the prosecution of this duty. The chiefs and principal men of the tribe met me in council and were loud in their protestations of innocence. They offered to adopt any course I might suggest to them, and gave every assurance of most friendly feelings toward their white friends. I caused the whole tribe to be paraded, and, in company with the men who had been attacked in the affair on the Little Blue on the 18th of May last, proceeded to leisurely examine every man of the Pawnee Nation. The party I depended on to identify the guilty Indians were specially cautioned to make a patient and careful examination of every Indian, and the result was that after every one of them had been thoroughly examined no one of them was recognized, although many of the soldiers who were in the affair of the 18th of May on Little Blue River repeatedly asserted they would recognize some of the Indians who attacked them under any circumstances. The stock of the tribe having been examined, no portion of it was recognized as belonging to the wagon accompanying the detachment of troops from Fort Leavenworth who were attacked. I am satisfied from the frank, open manner in which the chiefs met me and their cheerful alacrity to carry out any suggestions of mine tending to discover the culprits I was in search of that the Pawnees are guiltless of any participation in the murder of the men on Little Blue River 18th of May last. Having convinced myself of this I ordered Capt. Z. Jackson to detail Lieutenant Noeler and thirty-six mounted men to report to Lieutenant Murphy, First Nebraska Veteran Cavalry, and proceed with me toward the Niobrara, leaving Pawnee Village at 9 a. m. the 21st of June I marched up the Loup River, intending to join Captain David, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and his command at a point due north of Fort Kearny. Following the valley of the North Fork of Loup River I joined Captain David on the evening of the 23d of June, about 7 p. m., at a point indicated on the accompanying map, a little west of a line passing through Fort Kearny. The following day I organized the combined force into two battalions of 120 men each, placing the first under command of

Not found.
Capt. Lee P. Gillette, First Nebraska Cavalry, and the second under command of Capt. James B. David, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and at once proceeded in a northerly direction, intending to strike Cedar or Calamus River that night. In this, however, I was disappointed, finding the country for twelve miles north one interminable mass of intricate hills and deep, waterworn gullies or caños, many of them being 200 feet deep, and compelling me to vary my course from due north to every point of the compass to effect a passage over them.

On arriving at the northern edge of those caños, which I named Elk Caños, from the great numbers of that animal seen in them, I was deterred from proceeding farther by seeing before me an interminable stretch of high sand-hill peaks to the north, separated from the Elk Caños by a small valley about three miles in width. Carefully examining the distant sand hills with a powerful field glass, and being satisfied from the lateness of the hour that I could not possibly reach water that day if I continued on, I countermarched the column back about eight miles to a slough we had passed, arriving there at 7 p.m., when we camped for the night. Early next morning we started forward toward Cedar River, reaching the southern line of the sand hills seen the evening before about 9 a.m., and traversing through them with great difficulty we came out upon another valley to the north of them at 12 m., reaching Cedar River at 1 p.m., which we found to be a mere creek at this point and utterly destitute of timber, save now and then a little isolated clump of willow switches. Turning up the south bank of the stream and marching westward we were repeatedly compelled to enter the sand hills to pass around elbows of Cedar River running bluff against the precipitous hills. At 3 p.m. we struck an Indian trail running south, about one month old, which is indicated on the map. Following this trail until 4.30 p.m. we came to a point where the Indians had camped on the north bank of the river, and ascertained their number to have been about sixty or less. Here we camped, our stock being much exhausted in marching through soft sand in the hills during the forepart of the day. Early next morning we moved up the north bank of the river on the trail, intending to follow it to the village from which it started. The road along this side of Cedar River was very good and level. We reached the head of the stream at 12 m., having marched twenty-eight miles that morning. There we found the trail coming in from the north, and smoke was thought to be seen to the northwest, but so indistinctly as to leave the matter doubtful. To the north and west the sand hills appeared to be less frequent, apparently jutting out of the level plain as isolated peaks, presenting no formidable obstacle to progress. Thinking it possible to reach the Niobrara River that night, I pushed to the northward at once, and reached the headwaters of one of the tributaries of the Niobrara about 7 p.m., having had a very fair road. While arranging camp smoke was observed a little north of west and distant about eighteen or twenty miles, as nearly as could be judged. Almost immediately after the appearance of this smoke other columns to the number of three were observed beyond it and to the northward. We all felt sanguine that we were now in the vicinity of hostile Indians. Sending a party out to examine the direction of the trail we had followed, they returned about dark reporting that no further trace of the trail could be found, the ground being so hard as to prevent any impression. A terrific hail and thunder storm raged during part of this night, rendering the presence of every man with his horse necessary to prevent a stampede. At 3.30 a.m. the following morning I pushed straight for the point where the smoke had been seen the previous evening, and having made all necessary preparation for encountering a large force of Indians, felt sure of an engagement. At 1 p.m. the smoke was reached and proved to be burning prairie. My scouts had already circled completely around the fire in hopes of finding some trail leading in or out of it, but in vain.

The country was thoroughly searched for several miles around, but no late traces of any Indians could be seen, although the scouts employed on this duty were Indians and half-breeds of my command, thoroughly conversant with Indian warfare and their signs. In coming to this fire we had reached Long Pine Creek of Niobrara River, and finding no evidences of Indians having been on it very lately I concluded to strike south among the waters of the Loup, being at this time fully 80 miles west and 130 miles north of Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter. Moving in a southerly direction the following day, we camped near the prongs at the head of the North Fork of Loup River, where a little to the west of us there had been a large village of about 300 fires not longer than one month ago. From this camp I sent scouts up and down the river on either side and to the southeast between the North and Middle Forks of the Loup. All of these scouts reported Indian signs one month and more old, that to the northwest reporting a village 200 or 300 lodges about one month ago, trail of villages going north; in fact all the scouts agreed as to age of trails and the general direction being north and northwest. The smaller number of lodges and signs found in different localities were evidently made by detached parties from the main village near the head of North Fork of Loup. Two days having been occupied in scouting the canions, creeks, and rivers about this neighborhood, and every sign indicating that a general exodus of Indians from the country I was in had occurred about a month since, I started south, reaching the Middle Fork of Loup on the 30th of June. There I again divided my force, sending Captain David's command across the country to the South Fork with instructions to send one squadron of his command under Lieut. John Talbot across to Wood River and direct him to scout down that stream, while he followed the South Fork from the point where he struck it to his camp, while I with Captain Gillette's command moved down the Middle Fork, scouting both sides of that stream, and following up every canyon opening into the valley of the river. All these commands found old signs and none fresher than one month since. Occasionally camping-grounds were found where Indians had ensconced themselves in small parties, in no case stronger than fifteen lodges; but all these signs were old, and throughout the entire march no fresh indications of the presence of Indians were found.

The entire command, except that portion belonging to Captain David's garrison on South Loup, reached Fort Kearny on the 4th instant, having marched 530 miles over a country traversed in all directions by deep canions. The topography of the country can be easily seen on the accompanying map. The hills and valleys run in a southeasterly course; all the hills are cut by deep canions. The minor streams are sluggish, with very high, deep banks and miry bottoms. The sand hills are very intricate, and wagon wheels bury in them up to the hub. The river valleys are generally good for road purposes, especially the Middle Fork, but swamps frequently extend clear back from the river banks to the adjacent bluffs, by which all these rivers are bounded in a lateral direction. The rivers themselves are fordable, but there are frequently portions of the bottom so intricately with quicksand as to render the crossing very precarious, causing stock to flounder and sink, throwing off men and damaging ammunition. So thoroughly has that portion of the country between the 98th and 100th meridians lying between Platte and Niobrara Rivers been examined that I am satisfied no Indians are now in it, and in fact they could not exist, for game is too scarce, only one stray buffalo bull being found on the march. The similarity of movement north on the part of the occupants of the late Indian camps, both as to time and direction, are indicative of some grand movement, ordered by authority recognized among the hostile tribes, and I give it as my opinion that the Indians who were lately on the forks of the Loup, Cedar, and Niobrara Rivers are now on that section of country between White and Big Cheyenne Rivers not very distant from the 103d meridian. One thing is certain, there is not sufficient game in the country I traversed to support any large parties of Indians, and their migration northwardly may have been compelled by this fact, but the simultaneous character of the movement points to a concerted and ordered march in a certain direction. Summer is the only season in which troops can traverse the country marched through, except on the forks of the Loup, where timber is sufficiently abundant to supply large bodies of troops. North of North Fork, and until the Niobrara is reached, there is absolutely no timber, and no water except that of the Cedar, willow switches and buffalo chips being the only fuel obtainable for cooking purposes. I have the honor to be, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel First Regiment Nebraska Vet. Cav., Comdg. Expedition.

Capt. GEORGE F. PRICE,

JUNE 13-17, 1865.—Scout from Camp Nichols, N. Mex., with action (14th) on the Santa Fé Road.

Report of Capt. Thomas A. Stombs, First California Cavalry.

CAMP NICHOLS, N. Mex., June 18, 1865.

SIR: In obedience to Special Orders, No. 3, dated headquarters Camp Nichols, N. Mex., June 12, 1865, Company I, First Cavalry California Volunteers, took up the line of march at 7.30 on the morning of the 13th, with a command of forty-nine enlisted men as escort to a train of seventy ox teams, owned by Semon Baca, and others, all of Las Vegas, N. Mex., en route for the States. The company traveled during the day to the crossing of the Cimarron, a distance of some thirty-three miles from Camp Nichols, having overtaken the train (which had left Camp Nichols the day previous) about one hour before making camp, which we did about 6 p. m. On the morning of the 14th myself and a corporal of L Company, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, searched the entire train for deserted soldiers from Company L, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, and Company H, First New Mexico Infantry, supposed to have been with the train, but could find no one with it; so, after breakfast, I caused the corporal and four enlisted men of his company, in obedience to instructions, to return to Camp Nichols, N. Mex. Broke camp at 6 o'clock on the morning of the 14th; traveled on until 11.30 o'clock and made camp for the purpose of grazing the stock and taking our dinners. So far we had not seen the least sign of Indians. Still I caused all my horses to be side lined, and posted a strong guard around them. At about 2 o’clock we heard an unusual noise, which on investigation proved to be a body of mounted Indians (Comanches and Kiowas), some forty or fifty strong, who charged into the herd of cattle belonging to the advance portion of the train. They lanced one Mexican herder, killing him instantly, and wounded another with an arrow. My men immediately fell in under arms and commenced firing on them, which prevented them from advancing on our herd. After about fifty shots had been fired they commenced making a hasty retreat off in the same direction from which they came, having succeeded in getting off with one loose mule and three ponies belonging to the train. My men saddled immediately, commenced giving chase, some thirty of whom pursued them about six miles. The remainder of the company (after having been peremptorily ordered), with the first sergeant, remained at the camp with the forces belonging to the train. Drove in all the stock in the corral formed by the wagons, preparing for a strong defense.

To the best of my judgment we killed or severely wounded some five or more of the Indians in the chase, as we compelled them to take that number up on front on their horses. They also were compelled to abandon the mule they had started with; but before they abandoned it they ran him through with a lance, after which we shot it. My company did not sustain any injury in any form. We remained at this camp until next morning without molestation. The proprietors of the train requested me to go through with them to Fort Larned, but in obedience to orders could not proceed with them more than five days, when I would have been compelled to return; so they proposed to turn back and apply at Camp Nichols for an escort to go through to Fort Larned if I would go back with them, which I promised to do. So, on the morning of the 15th, at 8 o’clock, we took up the line of march back to Camp Nichols. Camped that night at the crossing of the Cimarron, 4.30 p.m. About 6.30 some twenty-five Indians made their appearance some two miles and a half distant, but soon disappeared. Since then we saw no more Indians. On the morning of the 16th we broke camp at 7.30 o’clock, traveling all day, with flankers out in skirmish line, but saw no Indians. Saw a trail, about half way between Cold Springs and Cimarron Crossing, of some fifty pony tracks, a few cattle tracks, with some two or three moccasin tracks, apparently having been made the day before. Made camp at Cold Springs at 4 o’clock on the evening of the 16th. Broke camp on the morning of the 17th at 8 o’clock; arrived at Camp Nichols about 3.30 o’clock. It is my opinion that had it not been that we were with them they would all have been killed, stock run off, and wagons destroyed. Such is the opinion of the proprietors themselves. So far as I traveled I found grass in abundance, and especially on the Cimarron; water plenty. All along the road deep holes in the arroyos were full of water from the recent rains that have fallen in this quarter.

I most respectfully submit the above report.

Very respectfully submit the above report,

THOMAS A. STOMBS,
Captain Company F, First Cavalry California Volunteers.

Col. C. CARSON,
First New Mexico Cavalry Volunteers.

21 R R—VOL XLVIII, PT I
JUNE 14, 1865.—Action with Indians at Horse Creek, Dak. Ter.

Report of Capt. John Wilcox, Seventh Iowa Cavalry.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT SEVENTH IOWA CAVALRY,
In Field, near Julesburg, Colo. Ter., June 21, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that in compliance with special orders from Major Mackey, commanding post Fort Laramie, Capt. W. D. Fonts, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, in command of his company (D) and small detachments of Companies A and B of the same regiment, in all 4 commissioned officers and 135 enlisted men, left Fort Laramie on the 11th day of June, 1865, en route to Julesburg, in charge of 185 lodges of Sioux Indians, numbering in aggregate from 1,500 to 2,000 persons. Among them was an organized company, uniformed by Government, and under command of Charles Elston, who had for some time been intrusted with the supervision of the entire Indian encampments near Fort Laramie, and to whom was intrusted ten days' rations of subsistence for 700 of the Indians in charge of Captain Fonts on the march to Julesburg. The Indians were all well armed with bows and arrows, and most of them with firearms also. They were ostensibly friendly, and expressed themselves as being pleased with their removal. Nothing of interest transpired during the first three days of the march, except signal smokes by Indians north of the Platte by day and reputed conferences by night between them and the Indians in charge of Captain Fonts. On the afternoon of the 13th Captain Fouts and command encamped for the night on the east bank of Horse Creek, and the Indians pitched their tepees on the west. Late in the evening they had a dog feast, and 382 warriors sat in secret council. On the morning of the 14th reveille was sounded at 3 a.m. and the order of march announced to be at 5. At sunrise I was ordered by Captain Fouts to proceed with the advance guard (Companies A and B, detachments) two miles on the route of march, then halt and wait till the wagon train closed up and the Indians closed up on rear of the wagons, then to move forward in column of march. Just as the wagons were closing up I heard the rapid report of fire-arms to the rear. Believing it to be a revolt and attack by the Indians, and knowing the great disparity in numbers against us, as well as the fact that the family of Captain Fouts, the family of Lieutenant Triggs, and Mrs. Eubanks and child (late rescued Indian captives), being with us, I determined to prepare for defensive warfare, and had the wagons corralled in the best possible shape, the teams unhitched and put inside the corral and securely fastened, and the men in line outside ready for action (it would not do to leave the train unprotected). In this condition I awaited orders from Captain Fouts. A messenger coming up shortly after reported that Captain Fouts had gone across the creek to hurry up the Indians, and was shot and killed by them, and that the Indians were then fighting among themselves. I immediately dispatched a messenger on the fleetest horse to communicate with Fort Mitchell and the telegraph office, eighteen miles distant. The messenger was closely pursued by Indians.

The rear guard (Company D) coming up, I demanded of Lieutenant Haywood why he did not stand and fight the Indians instead of retreat. He replied that his men had no ammunition, and that the captain (Fonts) had refused to have cartridges issued to the men of his company; that he (Lieutenant Haywood) had urged the issuing of cartridges the night before and that the captain said they would not be needed. I ordered the filling of the cartridge-boxes immediately, and ordered Lieutenant Smith, in command of Lieutenant Triggs and sixty-five men, to keep in line outside the corral, dig rifle-pits defensible against all approaches, and to hold the corral, while I with Lieutenant Haywood and seventy men mounted on the best horses (the horses were all very poor from hard service without forage; but few were really serviceable, and many men were altogether dismounted) repaired with all possible dispatch to the scene of action. Passing the late Indian encampment we saw the body of Captain Fouts, dead, stripped, and mutilated. The Indians had fled two or three miles to the Platte. The squaws and papooses were swimming the river on ponies, while the warriors were mounted, circling and maneuvering in hostile array. Supposing that a part of them were really friendly, and would join us in subduing the rest, I charged on in pursuit of the criminal fugitives. Passing a few squaws and papooses I ordered my men not to kill or harm them; they returned. When within 600 yards of the enemy I halted my command in line and sent the interpreter (Elston) to the front to signal and tell all who were our friends to return, and they should not be harmed, but protected. But all were hostile, and with hideous yells charged upon us. I dismounted my men and deployed a line of skirmishers to the front with long-ranged arms (Gallegcr carbines, meanest arm in service) to receive them. When within 300 yards the Indians opened the fire upon us. My men answered them promptly with a volley that repulsed them temporarily in front, but more than 100 were dashing by each flank and closing in the rear, while from the hills to our left they were rapidly bearing down upon us by scores and hundreds. Seeing that we were assailed by more than 500 warriors equally armed and better mounted than my little squad, and fearing that to stand, be surrounded, and cut off from our ammunition and defenses would involve the entire command in indiscriminate slaughter and massacre as well as the burning of the train and capture of the animals, I determined to act upon the principle that "prudence is the better part of valor." Remounting my men I fell back to our defenses by desperate skirmishing to rear and flanks, the enemy's flankers being all the while in our advance endeavoring to close in front till within gunshot of our rifle-pits, when a volley sent them howling to the rear. In falling back a few only (I cannot give their names) of my command acted badly. Most of them behaved nobly, and a few with unsurpassed bravery. In the action nearly all the ammunition in the cartridge-boxes was used up; some entirely so.

After replenishing the cartridge-boxes with a new supply of ammunition and finding that the Indians were not disposed to attack the entire command behind defenses, I went out with Lieutenant Smith and fifty men (all I could mount on serviceable horses) to feel the enemy and if possible detain him till we could be re-enforced. After going three miles we saw the Indians in vastly superior numbers forming in front and coming over the hills to the left, evidently intending to entrap and overwhelm us away from the corral and rifle-pits. Not being strong enough to whip them in open field, we again retired, taking with us our killed and mutilated on the battle-field.

Captain Shuman, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, arriving promptly with re-enforcements from Fort Mitchell, at about 9 o'clock, I mounted every available horse and mule in my command and went for them again with sanguine hopes, but unfortunately the re-enforcements were a little too late. Their families having got across the Platte, we had the mortification of seeing the warriors follow and from the opposite hills tauntingly beckon us to follow—an impossibility in the face of a superior enemy at the swimming stage of the river. In their flight they dropped and abandoned all their lodges and loose plunder, which I ordered burned and destroyed. From discoveries on the timbered islands the Indians had evidently been strongly re-enforced by warriors from the opposite side of the river. Their loss in killed was not less than 20 or 30, most of whom they threw into the river, as dead bodies were seen floating in the river below where they crossed. After repairing the telegraph line, broken by the Indians during the action, and interring our dead, (except Captain Fouts, whom we afterward interred at Fort Mitchell) we took up our line of march and arrived at Fort Mitchell a little after night-fall.

Our loss in action was 4 killed and 4 wounded, viz: Capt. W. D. Fouts, Privates Edward McMahon, Richard Groger, Company D, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and Private Philip Alder, Company B, killed; Privates Samuel Kersey and Lewis Tuttle, Company B, Privates James H. May and John W. Tront, Company D, wounded.

Throughout the action all the officers under my command behaved with credit to themselves and to the service.

Receiving a dispatch from Colonel Moonlight to cross the river and join him in pursuit of the Indians, I attempted the crossing on the 15th, but the river being wide and coursed with alternate channels that swam and bars of quicksand that mired, I abandoned the crossing as impracticable, by unanimous consent of all the officers in consultation, we having lost two horses and one mule by miring and drowning, and two men hurt by the floundering of animals and dragged to shore nearly drowned, in attempting to cross. Indian ponies are trained and accustomed to cross in every stage. All Indians, great or small, can swim; one-third of white men cannot.

Receiving General Connor's dispatch on the 16th to report with my command at Julesburg immediately, I have the honor to report his order obeyed.

Very truly and respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN WILCOX,
Capt. Company B, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, Comdy. Detach.

Capt. GEORGE F. PRICE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of the Plains.

JUNE 15-22, 1865.—Scout from Fort Sumner to the Oscura Mountains, N. Mex.

FORT CRAIG, N. Mex., June 23, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that I left Fort Sumner on the 15th instant, per special order from Major McCleave, commanding Fort Sumner, with Capt. B. F. Fox and forty-five enlisted men of the First California Cavalry, in pursuit of Navajo Indians reported to have escaped from the reservation. I took the direct route to Fort Stanton; saw but one small trail leading south; some fifteen or eighteen horses, about fourteen miles from Sumner. At Fort Stanton I drew ten days' rations and started for the Oscura Mountains as per agreement with Major McCleave. I left the Ojo Milagro June 20 at 6 a.m.; crossed the Malpais, and in the afternoon at the tanks at the foot of the Oscura found an Indian trail. The Indians had used up all the water. I followed them up the mountain and found a great many more tracks coming in. About 5 p.m. I came up with the rancheria. Captured 4 horses, 1 mule, and 1 burro, and 1 child about three years old. The Indians all made their escape, their camp being in a very rough cañon. I destroyed everything in the village; broke up some twenty-five bows and a great many arrows. The only water I could find was some the Indians had in camp, gathered from rocks and a small spring. Not being able to procure water for my horses, I started for the Rio Grande at 1 a.m. and arrived at San Pedro at 11.30 a.m. June 21. I had to leave both men and horses, given out for want of water, but got them all in the afternoon by sending them water from San Pedro. Some forty or fifty mounted Indians started in the direction of San Andrés. The Indians evidently suffered from the want of water, as they dug holes in every ravine, but without success. In my opinion, it is impossible for a large number to cross lower down than the Oscura Mountains, as the whole country is dried up and no grass on the prairie. On arriving at San Pedro my horses had traveled nearly 100 miles without water. On the 22d I encamped near La Mesa and reported to Colonel Rigg, who has ordered me to proceed to La Joya and Abo Pass to-morrow morning. A Navajo boy, of the Cebolleta tribe, with me tells me that most of the Indians of the village I destroyed belong to Delgaditos Largo's tribe. There were from twenty to twenty-two camp-fires, and there must have been about eighty or ninety Indians at this camp.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EMIL FRITZ,

Major First California Cavalry.

Capt. B. C. CUTLER,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of New Mexico, Santa Fé, N. Mex.

JUNE 17, 1865.—Skirmish on Dead Man's Fork, Dak. Ter.

HQRS. NORTHERN SUB-DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Fort Laramie, Dak. Ter., June 21, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following as my report of the expedition against the Indians who rebelled against Captain Fouts while en route from this post to Julesburg on the 14th instant:

On the afternoon of the 14th instant I received a dispatch from Camp Mitchell, informing me that the Indians had mutinied against the authority of Captain Fouts, commanding; had killed the captain and some of his men, and that the command was still fighting. This news was brought into Camp Mitchell by a messenger from Captain Wilcox. On receiving this information I ordered Captain Shuman, then out with thirty men repairing telegraph line near place of mutiny, to join Captain Wilcox and hold the Indians until I came up. Every cavalryman that I could get was speedily mounted and started at a trot down the river, leaving those to follow whose horses were twelve miles out on herd. After getting nine miles out a messenger overtook me with information that the Indians had crossed to north side of Platte River and that Captain Wilcox had arrived at Camp Mitchell with command. I immediately turned round my force for Laramie and dispatched commanding officer there to have the California troops cross the river at once. These were the companies whose horses were out on herd, and were just ready to march when latest news was received. The whole night was consumed in crossing, and at 8 o'clock next morning, 15th instant, I started down the river to where the Indians had crossed, took up the trail next morning, and followed at a rapid gait, so that on the morning of the 17th, just forty-eight hours out, I was 120 miles east-northeast of Laramie. The command had marched that morning about twenty miles before breakfast, and I halted on Dead Man's Fork to graze the horses and allow the men refreshment. The camp was in the bed of the river, with steep banks on both sides, where our horses could be easiest protected and herded. But few of the California troops had any picket ropes or pins, so that their animals had to be herded. The others were either picketed or tied head and foot. About 10 o'clock the alarm of Indians was given, and every man sprang to his arms. The Indians, numbering about 200, made a bold attempt to get into camp, but were handsomely repulsed and compelled to fall back from three-quarters to a mile, and had given up the attack. In the meantime the horses had been corralled in camp, and I ordered a part of the men to get them saddled up while the others watched the movements of the Indians. The horses had become frantic with fear at the noise made by the Indians and the firing on both sides, and broke through the men in spite of every attempt to check them. Captain Huntoon and myself threw ourselves in front of them, but they rode us right down. Captain Booth, Eleventh Kansas, succeeded in cutting off a few horses in the rear by firing his pistols into them. The horses broke straight for the Indians, who fled at first, supposing we were charging them, but after discovering their mistake closed around and galloped them off over the mountains, where they were pursued by Captains Brown, Conrad, and Booth with about twenty-five mounted men. These officers were unable to accomplish anything, as the horses were surrounded with what they considered about 400 Indians, who, in the English language, dared them to fight. After losing the horses there was nothing left for me to do but to return, after destroying the saddles and other property which we had no means of transporting. The Indians made no attack on us afterward, and we arrived here on the 20th instant. The march back on foot was a tedious and severe one, as water is only found in little creeks from twenty-five to thirty miles apart. Every officer and soldier behaved throughout with great gallantry, and exhibited a fortitude under the circumstances worthy of themselves. The command marched with only five or six days' hard bread and a little meat in saddlebags and one blanket, and numbered as follows, viz:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Company</th>
<th>Number and name of regiment</th>
<th>Number of men mustered with</th>
<th>Number turned back while en route</th>
<th>Number of horses galloped out</th>
<th>Number of men present when attack was made</th>
<th>Horses lost on Dead Man's Fork</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>L</td>
<td>2d California Volunteer Cavalry</td>
<td>51</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>47</td>
<td>27</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>M</td>
<td>11th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry</td>
<td>62</td>
<td>32</td>
<td>30</td>
<td>40</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>L</td>
<td>Detachment</td>
<td>50</td>
<td>30</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>12</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do</td>
<td>11th Ohio Volunteer Cavalry</td>
<td>35</td>
<td>28</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>17</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Do</td>
<td>16th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry</td>
<td>23</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td></td>
<td>234</td>
<td>103</td>
<td>131</td>
<td>74</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
My force was thus reduced from 234 to 131 in two days' march from the fact that there has been no forage at this point for a long time, and the horses are so reduced in strength as to be unfit for marches over twenty miles per diem, nor would I have continued the pursuit after being convinced of this fact but that I knew the stock of the Indians were even in a worse condition, and I was gaining on them every step, and when attacked was not over ten miles from their camp. The Indians who made the attack were not those whom we were pursuing, but allies who had come up to their assistance, well mounted and equipped, and had it not been for the misfortune of losing our horses I am convinced we would have got a lively fight. I judge from signs around Dead Man's Fork that there must be about 2,000 Indians in the vicinity. The country is mountainous, with plenty of pine timber, and well adapted for defense or attack by the Indians. On our side two men of Company L, Second California Volunteer Cavalry, were wounded, viz, Private Hiram Ellingsen, bullet wound in head, dangerous; Private John M. Resoner, bullet wound in foot, not dangerous. Four Indians were certainly killed, as they fell over their horses, but being tied on around the knees by a thong, horses galloped off with them hanging. Several others were wounded, as we could see them plainly when hit.

In regard to loss of horses I would state that all was done that officers and men could possibly do to save them, and I am conscious that no blame is to be attached to any one for their loss. My own horse and Captain Huntoon's, who accompanied me, were tied head and foot with halter strap and were close to us, but broke the straps and went with the balance. All the horses that were picketed either broke the picket ropes or drew the pins, so that by the time the fight was over almost every horse was loose. Five private horses were lost, as follows: Surgeon Ainsworth's, Captain Huntoon's, and Captain Lindsay's, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry; Lieutenant Hanna's, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, and my own. In marching, particularly when rapidly, horses fed only on grass require quite a latitude to feed on, and there was no time during the entire trip, with all the care and vigilance that was exercised by all when grazing, but that our animals could easily have been stampeded, as they become frantic at the sight of Indians, and there is no way of preventing this but by hobbling; nor will I ever attempt again to march a command, large or small, unless provided in this way. Horses must be fettered in such a way as to prevent the possibility of their running faster than footmen can follow at an easy gait. Indians always fetter their horses, and knowing that we do not, take advantage of it, and are invariably successful. Major Adams, of the Eleventh Kansas, when attacked some time ago by Indians, had his men holding the lariats while the horses were grazing, yet almost every horse broke away; but being dark, and in very broken ground, recovered all but six. I am not in possession of any of the facts relating to the mutiny on the 14th instant, but I know one thing, that there were soldiers enough along to have killed almost every Indian, and I also know that the Indians were friendly and well disposed, and that there must have been some unwarranted provocation given on the part of Captain Fouts which led the Indians to believe that they were not to be honorably dealt by. How about 800 women and children could swim the Platte River with their ponies in the face of about 200 soldiers and citizens is more than I can tell, and from all that I can learn there was only one Indian, who was a prisoner in irons, killed; and how the command could make a march of over twenty-five miles with baggage by sundown that night (the mutiny taking place at 7 o'clock in the morning) and given their undivided attention to fighting the Indians, is a mystery to me.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas, Commanding.

Capt. GEORGE F. PRICE,

JUNE 17-19, 1865.—Expedition from Denver, Colo. Ter., to Fort Halleck, Dak. Ter.

FORT HALLECK, DAK. TER., June 19, 1865.

I have the honor to report that, in compliance with General Connor's telegraphic instructions, I started from Denver on the 17th instant; arrived at Fort Collins at 8 p. m. same date. Ordered Captain Wilson, with one company of First Colorado Cavalry, to proceed at once and establish a patrol and guard, commencing at Big Laramie and to extend along the Overland Stage line as far as his company would reach, leaving eight men and one non-commissioned officer at each station. This will guard the road to this post, which I think is absolutely necessary, as Indians have been seen in the last two days between here and Rock Creek, nineteen miles south from here, on the Denver road. Captain Humfreyville, commanding Fort Halleck, has just returned from Sulphur Springs with a part of his company, where he has been on a scout. He found the Indians near that place in large numbers and all the stage stock driven off by them between Halleck and Duck Lake, a distance of 100 miles. While he was at Sulphur Springs the Indians made a dash at the station and succeeded in driving off forty-seven animals belonging to the stage company. Captain Humfreyville followed them with his command until it was dark, when he gave up the chase. He reached this place on last evening, bringing through one coach drawn by cavalry horses. He also brought the [mail from the] west. The eastern mails are being forwarded as fast as possible from Denver. I am now awaiting Lieutenant Colonel Plumb's arrival. I will start with all the available troops at my command and open the road through as far as there seems to be any danger, leaving such guards as may be necessary to make the mail route safe. From what I have seen and can learn from Captain Humfreyville and other officers stationed in this part of the sub-district, there is not now, and will not be with the troops ordered here with Lieutenant-Colonel Plumb, a sufficient force to guard the road and make it perfectly safe for the mail and general travel. I am doing everything in my power with the force at my command to protect both public and private property and have the mail run regularly through to Salt Lake.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. H. POTTER,
Colonel Sixth U. S. Volunteers, Comdy. South Sub-District.

Capt. GEORGE F. PRICE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
JUNE 20–OCTOBER 7, 1865.—The Powder River Indian Expedition.

SUMMARY OF THE PRINCIPAL EVENTS.

July 26, 1865.—Skirmish at Platte Bridge, Dak. Ter.
Aug. 1, 1865.—Affairs at Big Laramie and Little Laramie, Dak. Ter.
13, 1865.—Skirmish near Powder River, Dak. Ter.
16, 1865.—Skirmish at Powder River, Dak. Ter.
28, 1865.—Action at Tongue River, Dak. Ter.
Sept. 1, 1865.—Skirmish at Powder River, Mont. Ter.
2, 1865.—Skirmish at Powder River, Mont. Ter.
4, 1865.—Skirmish at Powder River, Mont. Ter.
5, 1865.—Engagement at Powder River, Mont. Ter.
7, 1865.—Skirmish at Powder River, Mont. Ter.
8, 1865.—Engagement at Powder River, Mont. Ter.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Maj. Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, U. S. Army, commanding Department of the Missouri, and U. S. Forces Kansas and the Territories, including operations December 9, 1864–November 1, 1865.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, Mo., July 18, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to make report of operations in the Department of the Missouri from December 9, 1864, to the present date:

In compliance with General Orders, No. 294, War Department, series 1864, I assumed command of the Department of the Missouri December 9, 1864. The department then consisted of the State of Missouri, and had just begun to recover from the effects of Price’s raid. The cavalry was mostly dismounted and the troops generally in bad discipline and condition. The greater portion of the State was in a state of confusion approaching anarchy, continually fermented by marauders, guerrilla bands, and roving Confederates, who were murdering, robbing, plundering, and committing all the outrages known to crime or barbarous warfare. Immediately after assuming command I was requested by General Halleck, chief of staff of the Army, to send to Major General Thomas, at Nashville, all the infantry in my command whose terms of service... would not expire before they could be used to answer the exigency for which they were required. In conformity therewith, and with instructions subsequently received, I sent off fourteen regiments of infantry and four regiments of cavalry. The troops left in the department were immediately equipped, mounted, and fitted for active service throughout the State. They were taken away from the towns and placed in the field, with orders to go into the brush and hunt down and exterminate all bands of guerrillas and marauders. I also, upon consultation with His Excellency Governor Fletcher, called for thirty-one companies of Missouri Volunteer Militia, and placed over them tried and experienced officers who had served in the field, and who bore good reputations for bravery and good discipline. These companies were stationed in the counties infested by guerrilla bands, and before spring most of the guerrillas and marauders were either killed, captured, or driven beyond the State. Late in the spring the bands of guerrillas who had left the State with Price commenced returning. They were, however, so vigorously met and universally broken up that they either fled the State or surrendered.

Upon assuming command of the department I issued instructions to my district commanders directing them that all aid and encouragement possible should be given the people of the State toward reviving civil law and re-establishing civil courts throughout the State; that where there were loyal civil officers and courts the military authorities should attend to their strict military duties, leaving all civil and local police matters to civil officers and courts, and to aid the civil authorities under their direction in the maintenance of order or the enforcement of their proper authority when called upon to do so. This had an excellent effect. It awakened new energy in the people and made them realize their own power and strength for self-government and protection. I was soon enabled to withdraw the greater portion of my troops for active operations elsewhere in the department. Civil courts began to be re-established and civil officers to assert and enforce their authority, so that to-day the State is fully organized under loyal civil rule, and the troops in the State are merely guarding our depots until they can be concentrated or abandoned. The Missouri State Militia has all been mustered out and disbanded, including the thirty-one companies of volunteer militia called out by me, and who were paid by the State for their services, the United States Government having been only to the expense of furnishing them arms, ammunition, clothing, and subsistence. When I assumed command I found all the military prisons filled with soldiers, political prisoners, men and women, charged with various offenses, and many under no charges. Added to these were a large number of conscripts who had escaped from Price's army, been arrested and imprisoned. Our numerous military courts were overburdened with cases. I at once inaugurated a system of thorough prison inspection, visited the prisons myself, and made thorough personal examinations; discharged a large number of soldiers and citizens held without charges, and who were entitled to release; had all others brought speedily to trial; had all those held as conscripts rigidly and rapidly examined, and their cases properly disposed of; prohibited the arrest and imprisonment thereafter of any person except upon proper charges. I reorganized the provost-marshal's department under more perfect system and limited powers, and discharged all citizens connected with that bureau, replacing them with officers and enlisted men.

Col. J. H. Baker, the efficient chief of this department, performed his duties with signal ability, and under his able supervision his bureau became an important and indispensable auxiliary in the administration of the most difficult affairs of the department. All persons arrested were speedily and thoroughly examined and tried or released. These reforms produced an excellent effect throughout the State. General Orders, No. 11, War Department, current series, merged the Department of Kansas into the Department of the Missouri. On the receipt of this order I repaired to Fort Leavenworth. I found that the Indians after the Chivington affair had combined and moved north; had struck the Platte Valley and held the overland route from Julesburg to Junction Station; had captured trains, demolished ranches, murdered men, women, and children; destroyed fifty miles of telegraph lines, &c. I immediately ordered the troops on that line to concentrate and move against these Indians. After several severe engagements the line was retaken, the Indians moving north by way of Pole Creek and Mud Springs, where they met the troops from Fort Laramie, and two or three severe engagements ensued, the Indians still making north to the Black Hills. The telegraph line was immediately rebuilt, the overland mail stages resumed their trips, and although the line has been attacked several times since, we have succeeded in holding it open and have kept up communications. It was my desire to make a campaign against these Indians before spring, but the force on the line was entirely inadequate to the purpose. The three-months' regiments from Denver City had just gone out of service by reason of expiration of term, and their places had to be supplied by militia from Colorado Territory. All the posts were entirely out of subsistence, forage, &c. I found the Eleventh Kansas Cavalry at Fort Riley, and the Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry at Fort Leavenworth. Not being needed at these stations, I placed them en route for Fort Laramie. Large amounts of subsistence, forage, &c., were forwarded to the plains, and all arrangements were perfected for making a short campaign to the Black Hills before grass started, but from some unaccountable reason, not yet explained, the Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry was over two months reaching their destination, and arrived too late to make the campaign designed. My plan in this being disarranged, I placed the troops on our communications and commenced preparations for spring and summer campaigns. Finding every tribe of Indians of any importance from the British Possessions on the north to the Red River on the south engaged in "penhostilities," I submitted my plans for operations against them, which was to strike them all at once by moving in seven columns, as follows, to wit: One to move up the Loup Fork, thence to the east base of the Black Hills; a second to move from Fort Laramie directly north to Powder River, and strike the Indians wherever found. Both of these columns were to be placed under Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor, who, on the assignment of Utah to this department, had been placed in command of the District of the Plains, embracing the Territories of Nebraska, Colorado, and Utah.

Two columns under Brig. Gen. R. B. Mitchell, commanding the District of Kansas, were to move, one up the Republican Fork of Kansas River to its source, the other up Smoky Hill Fork, crossing to the Arkansas River, and from thence to Denver. The other three columns were under Bvt. Brig. Gen. James H. Ford, commanding District of Upper Arkansas, one to move south from Cimarron Crossing of the Arkansas River, the second from Fort Larned, and the third from the mouth of Little Arkansas River. These were to make their objective point at or near Fort Cobb. This disposition would enter the heart of the country occupied by the different tribes, and could not fail to meet most of them and strike terror in their midst, punish them for their past acts, make them sue for peace, and behave well in future. The great delay incident to getting the necessary troops from the East for these columns, their coming dismounted, and the infantry regiments to garrison posts and hold our lines having to march long distances, combined to retard operations very seriously. Many of the regiments did not arrive at Fort Leavenworth until June, and most of the animals to mount them not until July 1. The contracts for supplies for the plains were not let until May 1. They should have been let by March 1 at furthest and January 1 would have been better. The supplies went forward slowly; trains loitered on their way, waiting for grass, and in many cases requisitions for stores did not arrive until late, the staff officers not appearing to have appreciated the necessity for early action, careful estimates, and timely requisitions. Many of them had just been assigned to duty on the plains, and did not on the instant grasp the important and difficult nature of their duties, or comprehend the fact that it took months to transport supplies from Fort Leavenworth to Laramie, Denver, and Utah. However, these difficulties have all been overcome, and now supplies are going forward; troops are en route and have arrived. Four of the columns are on the march and the rest will be started during this month. New posts have been established on the northern route, and now the line from Fort Leavenworth to Kearny, from Omaha to Kearny, from Kearny to Denver and Salt Lake, via Bridger's Pass, and the line from Julingburg, via Fort Laramie and South Pass to Salt Lake, and thence west to the western line of Utah, are well-protected. Every stage station has its detachment, every train and coach goes guarded, and new life, activity, and discipline has been infused into the troops. The Indians are being put on the defensive, and are now invariably beaten and in most cases severely chastised in their attacks.

General Connor has thus far exhibited marked ability, and has assisted materially in bringing about these results, although in some of his subordinates he has not been very ably assisted, and has had many difficulties to contend with. The friendly Indians at Fort Laramie, in an attempt to move them to Fort Kearny to get them away from the scenes of Indian troubles, revolted, turned upon their guard, killed a captain and four men, and then escaped. Colonel Moonlight, who was sent after them, allowed his camp to be surprised and his stock captured. I have ordered him mustered out of the service. Everything, I think, now argues a settlement of these Indian difficulties this summer. They (the Indians) are beginning to realize and appreciate the power of the Government and to fear it. Their universal success for the year past had emboldened and encouraged them until they had become to believe that we could not subdue them. These false notions must be whipped out of them, and any peace made with them before they are thoroughly convinced that we are the masters, and not they, would prove disastrous to us, would not last six months, and would only encourage them to renewed hostilities when we, perhaps, would not be so well prepared to meet them as now. On the southern route we have had the line from Fort Leavenworth to Denver, via Fort Lyon and the Arkansas River, and the line from Cimarron River Crossing to New Mexico, via Fort Union, to protect and guard. The Kiowas, Comanches, a small band of the Arapahoes, and a few of the Cheyennes have infested the entire line. Expeditions were commenced early against these Indians, and would have been continued but for the reason that I received orders to desist until they could be reached by Indian agents and consulted with a view to peace. While these attempts at overtures were being made the Indians suddenly appeared all along the line, attacking trains, posts, and escorts. They were, however, in every case repulsed. The columns were pushed out after them, one of which overtook some of them and captured their camps, ponies, and some of their people, and chastised them very severely, so much, indeed, that they left the route entirely and have now gone to the Washita Mountains. Two of these tribes, the Comanches and Kiowas, or a portion of them, desire peace, and it is possible one may be made. However, the columns moving from the Arkansas River are well advanced in their preparations, and will soon be in the heart of their country, when peace will be made or the Indians fearfully chastised, as the case may require.

General Ford has shown great activity in his operations, and with the means at hand has accomplished as much as could be expected.
He has been delayed in the movement of his last expedition by reason of non-arrival of subsistence stores, the fault for which he lays upon his staff officers, whose duty it was to procure them. When we consider that 15,000 troops had to be equipped, and in most cases marched nearly 1,000 miles, all the provisions transported by wagons, and most of our transportation furnished from distant places, together with the fact that most of the officers connected with these operations had been on duty and employed where water or rail communications were at hand, it is, I think, no matter of surprise that some unnecessary delay has occurred. As a general rule I find that nearly all the officers have endeavored to do their whole duty in these matters. They have, however, had to labor under many difficulties. The want of bridges across the Platte and Loup Fork retarded the movement of troops very greatly. The Indians operated on both sides, and we had often to cross at times when it was almost impassable on account of high water. I applied for and obtained pontoon bridges, which are being placed over the Loup Fork at Columbus and the Platte at Fort Kearny. The cost of good substantial bridges over both these streams would be saved government every year by the reduction in expense of obtaining wood and hay on the north side alone, while they would also save 100 miles of land travel for all of our freight, for which we now pay $2.25 per 100 pounds per 100 miles. The freight could be landed at Omaha for from 25 to 50 cents per 100, thus saving from $1.75 to $2 upon every 100 pounds going over the northern route, and also take our trains over a level and settled route instead of a broken and unsettled one. Most of the small streams on this route are now crossed by military bridges to Fort Kearny. Twenty millions of pounds of freight at least will pass over that route this year, and I strongly recommend to the Government the bridging at least of the Platte. In another spring fifty miles of the Union Pacific Railroad west of Omaha will have been completed, leaving only 130 miles of land travel to Fort Kearny, whereas we now have about 300 from Fort Leavenworth and 180 from Omaha. The wooden pontoons ordered to me will not last longer than another year, and outside of purely military reasons that recommend this permanent bridging, the amount of trade and travel flowing west of Colorado, Utah, Dakota, Idaho, and Montana, and the inability of the people living near the crossings of the Platte and Loup Fork to put in these bridges, and the impossibility during a large portion of the year to keep ferries on these streams, would justify the expenditure of a sum sufficient to do this bridging in the incalculable benefits that would accrue to the Government in the development of these Territories.
I would also earnestly recommend the bridging by the Government of the South Platte at or near Julesburg. High water, treacherous fords, &c., are the cause of great delay and loss to Government every year. Especially has this been the case this year, and the amount of trade and travel flowing south from Idaho, Montana, and Western Dakota and crossing at this place is increasing and will in another year be immense. The same reasons for bridging the Platte at Fort Kearny urge the bridging of the South Platte at Julesburg. When Utah was added to my command (February 17, 1866) I approved the course pursued in that Territory by General Connor, viz., avoiding any direct collision with the Mormons, but in all ways possible inviting emigration thither by protecting the rights of the so-called Gentiles, sustaining and supporting the Government officials sent there, and by keeping a respectable force there, which could be used against the Indians and in protecting mining operations, opening military roads, &c. Thus, by opening that Territory, inviting an enlightened emigration there, and encouraging a public sentiment calculated to soon root out that curse to our land—polygamy. In other reports I have more fully detailed my views and action in these matters, which have been approved by Government. After the surrender of General Lee to Lieutenant-General Grant, and under the general directions of the latter and the special instructions of Maj. Gen. John Pope, I demanded a surrender of all Confederate forces within my reach. General M. Jeff. Thompson surrendered to me in Arkansas some 700 officers and about 7,000 enlisted men, while in Missouri I received the surrender of about 100 officers and 2,000 enlisted men. All bushwhackers, marauders, and guerrilla bands also laid down their arms and came in under the Grant-Lee agreement, except that in their cases I simply stipulated that they should not be molested by the U.S. military authorities, thus leaving the civil authorities unrestrained to deal with them for the crimes they had committed in violation of the laws of the State and of the United States and contrary to usages of war. The surrender of all these has left no armed force anywhere within the State of Missouri or along our southern borders, so that peace and quiet exists and life and property seem as secure as before the war.

In my administration of the affairs in this department I have been ably assisted by my district commanders, all of whom have performed their duties with fidelity and zeal. I am especially indebted to the staff officers in charge of the depots at Saint Louis (Col. William Myers, chief quartermaster, and Col. T. J. Haines, supervising commissary), and Surg. John F. Randolph, U. S. Army, medical director, for their valuable aid and assistance. The staff officers under them have also performed their duties ably and faithfully. From my chiefs of staff departments—Col. John V. Du Bois, inspector-general; Col. Gideon Scull, chief commissary; Col. F. D. Callender, chief ordnance officer; Col. J. H. Baker, provost-marshal-general; Col. B. L. E. Bonneville, chief commissary of musters; Lieutenant-Colonel Hoelcke, chief engineer, and Maj. Lucien Eaton and J. N. McElroy, judge-advocates—I have received that faithful support and valuable assistance that is necessary to render a commander's operations successful. I extend to them and the officers under them my sincere thanks. I take great pleasure in acknowledging the satisfactory manner in which the adjutant-general's office has been conducted under the able supervision of Maj. J. W. Barnes, assistant adjutant-general, in charge; Maj. D. G. Swaim, assistant adjutant-general; Maj. Benjamin M. Piatt, assistant adjutant-general; Capt. J. F. Bennett, assistant adjutant-general; Capt. John Willans, assistant adjutant-general; Captain Phelan and Lieut. S. E. Mackey, acting assistant adjutant-general. These officers have performed their duties well and faithfully. To my personal staff—Maj. George C. Tichenor, aide-de-camp; Capt. Edward Jonas, aide-de-camp; Capt. George E. Ford, aide-de-camp; Lieut. E. A. Trader, acting aide-de-camp, and Lieut. Joseph M. Tomlinson, acting aide-de-camp—I am under special obligations for their efficiency, fidelity, close attention to duty, and gentlemanly conduct. I am also under many obligations to Governor Fletcher of Missouri and Governor Crawford of Kansas for their hearty support and co-operation in repressing disorder in their States. Perfect harmony has existed between the military and State authorities, and this fact has contributed in no small degree toward bringing quiet to the States and in keeping up proper discipline and efficiency in the militia that has been called into the service.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Capt. JOSEPH McC. BELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Military Division of the Missouri.

HDQRS. U. S. FORCES KANSAS AND THE TERRITORIES,
Fort Leavenworth, November 1, 1865.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report of operations in this command from the date of my assignment to the present date:

I arrived here and assumed command July 26, 1865, and in a few days thereafter started on the plains to make a personal inspection and examination of all troops, posts, routes, &c., within my command; to direct and supervise on the ground such changes and dispositions as were deemed necessary, and to give my personal attention to matters generally. I proceeded from here to Omaha, from there to Fort Kearny, thence up the Platte, taking all intermediate posts and stations en route to Fort Laramie; thence to Powder River; thence to Denver, via base of the mountains; thence to the Middle Park, and returned along the Smoky Hill Fork of the Kansas River and via Forts Ellsworth and Riley, reaching here on the 18th ultimo, having traveled with escort and train over 2,000 miles. I deem it proper to embody the following subject-matter in my report: First, the operations of troops during the present year; second, the overland routes and the matter and method of protecting them; third, the character of the country, the means for and difficulty of supplying the troops in it; fourth, the policy now being pursued toward the Indians, and wherein in my opinion it should be different. I deem it proper to recur to the fact that when the Department of Kansas was merged into the Department of the Missouri in February last, I repaired to Fort Leavenworth and opened the Platte and Arkansas overland routes, which I found obstructed by the Indians. I found then, and so reported, that a general campaign against the Indians who were hostile would have to be made, and to that end troops [were] obtained and supplies sent to all posts on the plains. These facts, with my plan for operations, I submitted to the major-general commanding the Military Division of the Missouri, by whom I was instructed to make preparations accordingly. I was notified of the number of troops that would be sent me, and thereupon based my estimate for supplies and my instructions to district commanders. Supplies were ordered sent to the District of the Plains, which included Nebraska, Utah, and Colorado, for 12,000 men for one year for operations east of Rocky Mountains, and to the District of Upper Arkansas, including the southern overland route, for 7,000 men for six months. I also received instructions to place supplies in Utah for 5,000 men, but for reasons which will hereafter appear supplies for only 2,500 men were sent there. The contract for transporting the supplies was made by the Quartermaster's Department at Washington and not closed until the 1st of May. The contractors were given from that time until the 1st of December to complete their contract, no time being specified for the delivery of any supplies at designated points earlier than the limit named. This alone was almost fatal to my operations north of Fort Laramie, as after the troops arrived there they were detained from four to six weeks, for supplies that had been sent from here and been on the road from two to three months, and we had finally to haul supplies for General Connor's columns by Government trains from Fort Kearny and Cottonwood before they could move.

In forming my plans for the campaign my understanding was that the hostile Indians were to be punished at all hazards, and this I intended to do, knowing if I was allowed to press the campaign according to my plans that before another spring a satisfactory and durable peace could be obtained. My general plan of operations was marked out as follows, viz: General P. E. Connor, commanding District of the Plains, was to move against the northern Indians in three columns; General J. B. Sanborn, commanding District of Upper Arkansas, to move with three columns against the southern Indians, and two separate columns, small and light, were to move, respectively, up the Republican and Smoky Hill Forks of the Kansas River, and keep the country between the Platte and Arkansas Rivers free from Indians, and aid in keeping the great overland routes unobstructed. In addition to these dispositions troops had to be kept posted on the Platte stage and telegraph lines from Fort Kearny, via both Denver and Fort Laramie to Salt Lake City and along the Arkansas route to New Mexico. General Connor's columns were to be about 1,500 men strong each, but the non-arrival of troops reduced the number to an aggregate of 2,500, and to obtain which I had to strip the Platte route. He (Connor) moved with his force as follows, viz: One column, under Colonel Cole, Second Missouri Light Artillery, going up Loup Fork along east base of the Black Hills, crossing the Little Missouri at or near Bear Butte; thence across to near the forks of Little and Big Powder Rivers; thence to point of junction, some fifty miles from the Yellowstone, on Tongue River. One column, under Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, to move from Fort Laramie directly north along the west base of the Black Hills, crossing at head of the Little Missouri, and thence across Powder River to point of junction named. The third column, under General Connor in person, with supplies for three columns for use after effecting the junction, moved up the North Platte to its most northerly bend; thence due north to Powder River, and after establishing the post of Fort Connor, some 180 miles northwest of Laramie, moved along east base of the Big Horn Mountains to the point of junction on Tongue River. Instructions to General Connor and other district commanders are hereto appended, marked A. After a portion of these columns had moved and were all in the field I received the dispatches and instructions from Major-General Pope, which, together with my answers thereto and action thereon, are hereto appended, marked B.
The troops ordered hither to take the place of troops taken by General Connor, after having been transported from Washington and elsewhere at great distance, and then marched to Fort Kearny, Julesburg, Fort Laramie, &c., were ordered mustered out of the service without any benefit whatever being received from them, and also after we had been at the expense of equipping them fully, and also transporting supplies to the plains for their use. By this means the number of men for use on the north were reduced from the number calculated upon, say 12,000 men, to less than 6,000, and many of them were mutinous, dissatisfied, and inefficient. It must be borne in mind that I had about 2,600 miles of overland mail and telegraph line to protect in addition to carrying on the campaign. I think that under all the circumstances General Connor accomplished all that could possibly be expected, as will be seen by his report of operations. Despite all obstacles he succeeded in chastising one tribe of Indians in a manner seldom before equaled and never excelled. He also punished two other tribes quite severely, and has, I think, thoroughly exploded the idea so commonly advanced, viz, that the Plains Indians on the warpath cannot be overtaken and whipped in battle. Could General Connor have moved in June, or even by July 1, I have no doubt he would have succeeded in inflicting thorough and effectual chastisement upon all the tribes in hostility on the north, and have carried out my instructions in the matter fully and completely. Copies of telegrams in relation to his campaign received and sent by me after he had moved I append hereto, marked C. For a full report of General Connor's operations, fights, &c., I respectfully refer you to his report and to the reports of his column commanders, Colonel Cole and Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, which are forwarded herewith.* Colonel Cole is entitled to great credit for the manner in which he met and overcame the many obstacles he had to contend with. Having been misled by his guides, who seem to have been entirely ignorant of the country he was in, and by the report of his scouting party sent to find General Connor, he concluded that there was a misunderstanding as to the point of junction designated, although he was then, in fact, within sixty miles of General Connor's column, and therefore moved on down Powder River, intending to go to the Yellowstone; thence up that stream, and from thence up Tongue River until he found the place of junction or struck General Connor's trail; but the severe snow-storm that killed so many of his animals and the appearance of Indians induced him to move south, take the trail of the Indians, and pursue them as far as possible, by doing which he succeeded in getting three fights, in which he chastised the Indians very severely, killing large numbers of them. An officer attached to my headquarters, who accompanied Colonel Cole as engineer, states that he saw over 200 dead Indians that were killed in these fights.

The failure on the part of General Connor's column commanders to join him at the point designated no doubt prevented him from carrying out his plans fully and successfully. Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, it seems, made no effort whatever to communicate with General Connor or ascertain his position. General Connor returned to Fort Connor, intending to reorganize an expedition from Colonels Cole's and Walker's commands and complete his campaign; but for reasons that appear in his report this was not done, and he (Connor) proceeded to Utah, in compliance with orders from Major-General Pope. Aside from the engagements detailed in the reports of General Connor and Colonels Cole and Walker, a number of fights of more or less importance were had with the Indians by my troops during the past season, in most of which the savages were chastised, in attacks upon trains, post detachments, &c. Reports of these have from time to time been made by telegraph to department headquarters. Copies of some of these telegrams are hereto appended, marked D. During General Connor's absence on his expedition the Indians deserted the overland routes and followed him to protect their families and villages. I therefore conclude that the most effectual way to protect these routes while these Indians are hostile would be to keep a movable force in the heart of their country ready to strike them at all times. The columns arranged to move under General Sanborn were fitted out under Bvt. Brig. Gen. J. H. Ford, who was twice turned back after crossing the Arkansas River to await the result of negotiations then said to be pending between Col. J. H. Leavenworth and the tribes. He (General Ford) was turned back the second time by orders from General A. McD. McCook, at the instance of Senator Doolittle's committee, and, as was claimed, by authority of Maj. Gen. John Pope, but, as will appear from appended copy of General Pope's telegram (marked E), was, in fact, without his authority. It will be remembered that immediately after the issuance of this order by General McCook the Indians made a general attack upon the entire line from Cow Creek to Fort Dodge, which to my mind clearly shows that all their peace talk was a ruse, a dishonest scheme, and I so considered it at the time. The columns were again fitted out and General Sanborn sent to command them, with instructions, copies of which, together with telegrams of Major-General Pope and myself in relation thereto, are hereto appended, marked F. He was to have moved the day I left Fort Leavenworth for the plains, and I supposed he had done so until I learned officially that he was stopped, his troops placed in camp, and he directed to make overtures for peace with the Indians, by telegraph orders from the major-general commanding the department, a copy of which order is hereto appended, marked G. General Sanborn's columns were to have moved as follows, viz: One from Cow Creek, one from Fort Larned, and one from Cimarron Crossing of the Arkansas, and were to have concentrated at or near Fort Cobb. They were the best appointed, best equipped, and, in fact, the best troops in my command, and would have penetrated the heart of the Indian country; and being informed of the location of two of the Comanche and Kiowa villages, General Sanborn could not have failed to strike them.

*Connor's and Walker's reports not found. For Cole's report, see p. 380.

It is probable that a peace will be made by the commissioners now engaged thereat with these Indians. I am clear, however, in my opinion that any peace made with them before they are severely punished will not carry with it that assurance of perpetuity and good faith it would had we first chastised them for the outrages they have committed during the past eighteen months, and have made them seek peace from us instead of us from them. Within the past month they attacked a train on the Arkansas River, killed five men, robbed and destroyed their train; also attacked the station on the Smoky Hill route, burned stages, and carried off stock. Happening to be on my return down the Smoky Hill route during these troubles, I had personal knowledge of these acts of hostility and treachery, and I at once placed troops along the route at such places as I deemed necessary for protection. The fact should be borne in mind that these hostile depredations were committed by tribes, portions of whom were at that very time sitting in council with commissioners appointed in accordance with the written agreement made the 15th of August last between General Sanborn and headmen of these tribes, a copy of which agreement, with accompanying papers, is hereto appended, marked II. On receipt of notice of the agreement for peace above referred to between General Sanborn and the chiefs and the headmen of the Comanches, Arapahoes, Kiowas, and Apaches, I directed General Sanborn to reduce his force to the lowest possible number for protection of the route and defensive use, copy of my instructions to him on this subject is hereto appended, marked I. On the 2d day of October I sent Big Kibs and some of his best men (friendly Sioux) north to start from Fort Laramie and visit the hostile tribes of Sioux and Cheyennes who were north of that point, and had been engaged in the fights with General Connor, and who had not gone east to the Missouri River to treat with the commission sent there. I invited those Indians to come into Fort Laramie and make an agreement for the cessation of hostilities. These messengers I have not yet heard from. I also sent messengers to the band of Sioux in the Medicine Bow Mountains with an invitation for them to join the council at Fort Laramie. These Indians while being pursued by some troops, after they had attacked a station near Fort Halleck, left a message, a verbatim copy of which is hereto appended, marked J. I also append copy of instructions to Brevet Major-General Wheaton in relation to Big Ribs' mission, marked K.

I am confident that during this winter or by the first months of spring we will be able to make treaties with the Arapahoes, who were so thoroughly chastised by General Connor, and who are now entirely destitute; also with all, or nearly all, of the Sioux tribes that are banded together and engaged in hostilities against us, they having been punished quite severely; also with the tribes of Sioux on the Missouri River, who have not been engaged in the past summer's hostilities, and who are very destitute. The commissioners who have treated with the Comanches, South Cheyennes, the Arapahoes, Kiowas, and Apaches are confident they will act in good faith, but I look for trouble from the young men of the North Cheyennes, the Comanches, Apaches, and Kiowas. They have not been punished, and while the old men and some of the principal chiefs are anxious for peace, the young men (dog soldiers), by separation from them get beyond their control and continue their depredations. The Cheyennes are even now continuing their work on the North Platte, and I fear when they reach the Arkansas, in which direction they are moving, they will induce many of the young men of the southern tribes to join them. If we, after having made treaties with them, live up to them, control carefully and rigidly all intercourse between them and the whites, deliver faithfully and honestly the annuities to them, we will, I am satisfied, be able to keep these tribes peaceable; can use them against those in hostility, divide, distract, and discourage the young men, and finally bring them all to a permanent peace. Unless this is done we will have them all against us the next season; will lose the influence of those who are now friendly and well disposed, and, in fact, make the chiefs who have labored for peace a by-word in their tribes, and thereby destroy what little influence they now have. I have given instructions to all of my officers to live up to and carry out rigidly and faithfully, as far as they are concerned, any and all agreements with the different tribes made by them, by the agents of the Interior Department, or by commissioners appointed to treat with them; but for them to use all their available force in hunting down those who persist in their hostility this winter, and endeavor to bring them to terms before another spring; and in instructions to all my officers I have directed that in fighting these Indians they must do it honorably, allow no atrocities, and practice no severities not sanctioned by the usages of war.

The column sent up the Republican was under Lieutenant-Colonel Kirwan, Twelfth Tennessee Cavalry, and was about 350 strong. It kept that country clear of Indians during the entire summer, and protected the Government surveyors who were employed in completing the work they were driven from the year previous. The force sent up the Smoky Hill route under Major Pritchard was about 250 strong.
While scouting that country it at the same time opened that route to Denver, which is now traveled with a daily stage, and is about 100 miles nearer to Denver from all points south of Saint Joseph than the Platte route. In July last I sent the companies of the Fifth U. S.
Volunteers, with two howitzers, under Capt. G. W. Williford, as escort for Colonel Sawyer's party, opening the route from Sioux City along the Niobrara, via Fort Connor and Big Horn Mountains, to Virginia City, Mont. Ter. They report that they suffered considerably; encountered many difficulties; were attacked three times by a large force of Cheyennes near Powder River, but succeeded in driving them off, and took through safely a large train of some 80 wagons, emigrants, &c.
Attention is respectfully called to the report of Capt. G. W. Williford, forwarded herewith.* The wagon road expedition was a failure as far as making a road was concerned. It had a heavy train belonging to private parties, and while its ostensible object was to survey and make a road through a country comparatively unknown, its real purpose seems to have been to take the train through, and to that end its efforts were devoted, instead of making a road, building bridges, &c. Captain Williford went simply as an escort to the party, and had no control whatever over it, and exercised none until he was obliged to do so in order to save his command, in which, by his superior ability and skillful management, he succeeded. General Connor sent word to Colonel Sawyer, in charge of the wagon party, not to attempt to penetrate the country he was making for, as it was impracticable. No attention was paid, however, to General Connor's advice, or to that of all experienced guides who were consulted. The party pushed on, got into the Bad Lands on Powder River, and was there extricated and taken to Fort Connor by Captain Williford. Colonel Sawyer's guides were inexperienced and unacquainted with most of the country he had to pass over.
A fine road can, however, be found from Sioux City to Montana, via Fort Laramie, as will hereafter appear in this report.

In July last a portion of the Third California Veteran Infantry, under Lieutenant-Colonel Johns, left Salt Lake to accompany the Overland Stage Company in opening the new route from Salt Lake, via the Uintah Valley, White River, Middle Park, and Berthoud (or Boulder) Pass, to Central City and Denver. This force reports the route practicable.
They met no Indians except the Utes, who were friendly, and found no obstacles that could not be easily overcome, except the Berthoud (or Boulder) Pass, which will require considerable work before it can be used as a stage or emigrant route. This route, it is said, would save 200 miles in distance over any other route between Denver and Salt Lake. With reference to the overland routes I shall speak fully, and, I trust, clearly.
The country over which they pass is, however, so marked and peculiar that they are all in many particulars much alike. After passing a belt of country about 150 miles in width that borders on the Missouri River, we strike the plains, some 400 or 500 miles in width, extending from thence to the base of the mountains with the exception of occasional spots—small, indeed, compared with this immense extent. These plains are not susceptible of cultivation or settlement. This great belt of barren country extends from the Missouri River on the north to the Canadian on the south, being the extent of my travels upon it. The valleys as a general thing are covered with grass often luxuriant and suitable for hay. The uplands generally have a straggling growth of buffalo grass, but are often, for miles, entirely destitute of vegetation, except occasionally the prickly pear, cactus, or sage bush. No part of this great area is susceptible of raising grain or vegetables except on a few streams, and then by irrigation; nor does it, as yet discovered, possess any mineral resources. It is almost entirely destitute of wood, and running water cannot be depended upon except along the great streams that rise in the Rocky Mountains, flow east, and empty into the Missouri or Mississippi or the streams rising in the Black Hills, Big Horn, and Powder River Mountains, and which flow north, emptying in the Yellowstone. Up the great valleys and even over the higher tables are the best natural roads in the world, and nature has so constructed them that through this great belt there are four great water-courses traversing it at right angles at distances from each other of from 100 to 200 miles. Commencing, then, on the north the first overland route is known as the Niobrara, up which stream the road runs to its source, and up to this time crosses to the Platte, terminating at Fort Laramie. Colonel Sawyer's wagon party endeavored this season to find a road on this route through directly to Montana, via Powder River and north of Little Horn River, but the obstacles met with determined them to abandon it, and they struck south and took the road made and explored by General Connor from Fort Laramie to base of Big Horn Mountains; thence to Three Forks of the Missouri and thence to Virginia City. This from the Platte is a fine natural road, and, with the exception of running water for 100 miles from the Platte to Powder River, is abundantly supplied with clear running water, grass, wood, and game. This road is marked a a on map.

*See p. 388.

The road heretofore used to Montana was up North Platte via South Pass, thence up Snake River, &c. The new road, on which Fort Connor is situated, saves in distance some 350 miles, making the distance now only about 450 miles from Fort Laramie to Three Forks of the Missouri. The military operations this summer have opened this road, and as soon as our Indian troubles in that region are over it will be the great overland route from the States to Montana. All travel concentrating from the different routes east of Fort Laramie will take that road from this converging point. This road, I believe, has an appropriation from Congress which, when expended upon it, will make it equal to any route over the plains and across the mountains. The second route is known as the Platte route. Starting at different points on the Missouri River, such as Omaha, Plattsmouth, Nebraska City, Atchison, Saint Joseph, Leavenworth, Kansas City, &c., the roads all converge at or near Fort Kearny, and following the Valley of the Platte to its forks, either leads up the North Platte via Fort Laramie, South Pass, and Salt Lake, or up Lodge Pole, through Cheyenne and Bridger's Pass to Salt Lake, or continuing up South Platte go to Denver, or diverge and pass up the Cache la Poudre to Laramie Plains; thence through Bridger's Pass to Salt Lake. On this route at all times (and for the past eleven years to my knowledge) an abundance of grass, water, and wood for all practicable purposes has abounded. It has the best passes through the mountains, and it is by far the best natural road from the Missouri River to the Pacific Coast. The telegraph, mail, and express lines are on this route, and most of the emigration passes over it. From March 1 to August 10 of this year there passed Fort Kearny on this route going west 9,386 teams and 11,885 persons, which conveys some idea of the vast amount of trade, travel, and capital that is flowing to the great mineral regions of Colorado, Utah, Montana, and Idaho. In going via this route west from Denver choice can be taken of the new route through Berthoud Pass and via White River and Uintah Valley, surveyed and explored the past summer by Lieutenant-Colonel Johns and party, and which is now being opened. The Platte routes are marked B B on map. The third route, and the one just established, which possesses many advantages to the travel south of Iowa and Nebraska, is the one leading from Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, &c., up the Kansas River to Fort Riley; thence via Fort Ellsworth along the Smoky Hill to its source; thence crossing to the Big Sandy, and leading to Denver, where it connects with all the other routes diverging from that center. The distance from the Missouri River to Denver by this route is about 600 miles. It is a very good natural road, with no obstacles to overcome, except from Big Creek, on the Smoky Hill, to Beaver Creek, which flows into the Platte. There is no running water portions of the year. The road as now laid, however, obviates this trouble by striking numerous springs, and by wells being sunk so that water on the distance named can be obtained every eight or fifteen miles. The balance of the route is well supplied with water. The entire route is well supplied with grass, and innumerable herds of buffaloes, and an abundance of other game roam along it for hundredsof miles. The road as now laid, however, obviates this trouble by striking numerous springs, and by wells being sunk so that water on the distance named can be obtained every eight or fifteen miles. The balance of the route is well supplied with water. The entire route is well supplied with grass, and innumerable herds of buffaloes, and an abundance of other game roam along it for hundredsof miles. Butterfield's overland dispatch, stage, express, and freight line has lately been established on this route, which is opening it up permanently and effectually. This route is marked C C on map.

The fourth and last great route is the Arkansas River route, which either follows the Smoky Hill route to Fort Ellsworth, and strikes from thence across to the Arkansas River, or otherwise keeps farther south, striking the upper road at Fort Zarah, and leading from thence via Forts Larned, Lyon, and Union to New Mexico. This route follows a stream which, like the Platte, rises in the Rocky Mountains, and is abundantly supplied with water and grass, and for all practical purposes of travel is supplied with wood, except for a distance of perhaps 250 miles. Over this route passes all the trade of and travel to and from New Mexico, Arizona, and parts of North Mexico and Texas, marked on map D D. The great difficulty of making roads to connect these overland routes from north to south between the 100th parallel of longitude and the base of the mountains is the fact that as soon as you leave the great streams you lose running water. The secondary streams that rise in the divides instead of the mountains—for instance, the White Earth, Cheyenne, and a portion of the Republican and Smoky Hill—are from 100 to 200 miles of their length from their head desti- tute of running water during the summer and fall months. Occasional springs and water holes or lakes, to be sure, can be found, but to make roads follow these would take them from their proper direction and add greatly to their distance and often to their grades. In view of these facts, and of the peculiar advantages for travel to particular destinations attached to each of these great routes, I hold that in any and all treaties with the Indians the right of way over all of them should be permanently secured, and, if possible, the Indians should be confined to the country north of the North Platte and south of the Arkansas River. Every year makes this more feasible, from the fact that the great amount of game that abounded between these rivers along the Smoky Hill and Republican is becoming scarce, being driven rapidly north and south by the travel on these routes. To-day the buffalo and other game is very scarce on the Platte route, and abound for a length of only some 150 miles over the other routes, thereby making the region between the two rivers named valueless to the Indians as hunting ground. During the past year the routes have had to be, and have been, protected from the hostile operations of at least 15,000 Indians, warriors on the warpath, and hungry for blood and plunder. The telegraph lines had to be closely guarded, stages and trains escorted, new posts were built and garrisoned, and especially along the Platte route each stage station had to have a detachment of troops as escort. The posts on the Platte route are, as a general thing, well built, cleanly, under good discipline, and now have accommodations for all troops and stores required to be kept at them.

On the Arkansas River route Fort Riley and Fort Lyon are fine military posts. The intermediate posts are, however, poorly built, and are really unfit for troops to occupy, and lack proper protection for stores. It has been expected that most of these posts would be abandoned, hence no more expense than was actually and unavoidably necessary has been incurred in fitting them up. On the new route to Montana I recommend that posts be established at or near where the road crosses the Tongue and Big Horn Rivers. On the Smoky Hill route there are only five companies stationed, which, owing to troops being stationed along the routes north and south, is sufficient protection. Over these several routes must pass all, not only supplies for the mighty empire springing up in the mining regions of Colorado, Arizona, Utah, Montana, New Mexico, and Idaho, but also the great trade and emigrant travel to California and Oregon. As I have before stated, the country east of the Rocky Mountain range and west of the narrow fertile belt that borders the Missouri is not susceptible of cultivation or settlement—an occasional few acres only along the streams can be irrigated and made to produce crops. It therefore follows that from the States must henceforth be sent across the plains, not only bread-stuffs to feed, and articles of manufacture to supply the hundreds of thousands now there, but also a population rapidly increasing by an immense yearly emigration which is forming a mighty empire now nearly in its infancy, an empire rich in mineral resources, and destined, with its wealth of precious metals, to form the future basis of our financial system, and even now, to a great extent, is furnishing the means to sustain the credit of the country. In view of these facts I cannot but consider it the duty of Government to promptly adopt such measures as will effectually protect these overland routes and render them at all times safe and secure. To do this the Indians of the plains, who for the past eighteen months have in deadly hostility beset these routes, and who persist in their hostility, must be so severely chastised as to make them beg for peace, repent their hostility, and in future deter them from a repetition of the outrages, in the commission of which they have for so long been engaged. This must be done or the Indians entirely removed from the country. In no other way can the end sought be accomplished. The cost of doing this would, I know, be great, but if it is necessary and unavoidable Government should not shrink from it, and now that we have the matter in hand, whilst it would cost us thousands to complete it effectually, it would, if deferred to the future, cost hundreds of thousands. I believe that with the force we had at our disposal, if we had been allowed to retain and use it, have held it in the country and pushed the campaign fall, winter, and spring, before another season every hostile tribe would have been effectually and justly punished, and made to feel our power and dread our anger forever after. All supplies and emigration, machinery, &c., for the mining regions of New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, &c., have had to be transported by mule and ox trains, and since the Indian troubles not only has the extra cost of transportation incident to the dangers of travel imposed upon these people a tax of millions, but has seriously hindered and retarded all their operations, and in a great measure stopped the development of the mines. On two of the routes (the Platte and Smoky Hill) railroads are being pushed forward with much energy, and in another season each will be nearly 100 miles west of the Missouri River. I therefore recommend that after this season the supplies for the troops on the plains be delivered to contractors at the terminus of each of these railroads, and that the contracts for transportation be made accordingly. Supplies for troops on the northern routes to be delivered at the end of the Union Pacific Railroad, running west from Omaha, and those for the southern routes at end of eastern division Union Pacific Railroad, running west from Kansas City. This would be a great saving to Government, as the contract cost of transportation overland is $2.20 per 100 pounds for 100 miles.

The principal tribes of Indians that we have to deal with as hostile are the Northern Cheyennes and Sioux, occupying the country north of the North Platte; the Arapahoes, occupying the country between the North Platte and South Platte and east of the Rocky Mountains; the Southern Cheyennes, the country immediately south of the Arkansas River, but who claim the country between the Arkansas and South Platte; and the Comanches, Kiowas, and Apaches, occupying the country south of the Arkansas River and bordering on New Mexico. These Indians complain of great wrongs inflicted upon them by their agents. I found tribes (for instance, the Crows) who claim not to have received their annuities but once in the past ten years, although I have been informed they were sent yearly. Those who have got their annuities assert, and it appears to me, with good evidence of truth, that they only received a moiety of what was intended for them. It was dishonestly frittered and speculated away by agents, whose duty it was to look after their rights and stand like a wall of rock between them and those who would wrong them, but who have been in league with traders who, with the greed of cormorants, have fed upon, robbed, and grown rich off these tribes. The great difficulty I have found in our Indian matters is this, that while all departments of the Government are disposed to do justice to the Indian, and aiming to make him friendly, each has its separate and distinct aim, and while the military has been fighting them in one section of the country the representatives of other departments have been negotiating for or making peace with the same Indians in other sections of country. They would fight us in one section of country, then go to another section, make peace, get food and supplies, and return to fight us again. Under these divided and antagonistic efforts and interests very little has thus far been done toward securing a permanent peace. The Indians see and understand these things as clearly as we do. They have watched our vacillating course, first for war, then for peace, and vice versa, until they have lost all confidence in us and are ceasing to respect us. They have said to my officers:

War for the past eighteen months has been a benefit to us. We have never been so well fed, have helped ourselves from your trains, ridden your mules and horses, had white women for wives, and went with plenty of white scalps from the routes to our villages, and make peace when you come to fight us.

A great trouble has been that we have allowed them to break treaties at will. In fact, we have made treaties with them which, owing to the country they were allowed to occupy, &c., it has been impracticable for us to carry out, and we have thereby given them an excuse or opportunity to break them, make war, and retaliate for real or assumed injuries in an Indian's only way and manner. To as far as possible avoid the conflict of action to which I have referred, and to fix the jurisdiction and responsibility of these Indian matters within easy control, it seems to me, and I so recommend, that the officers assigned to command the Indian country should, under direction of the proper branch of the Government, have full and entire control over it, so far as police regulations, treatment of Indians, distribution of annuity, supplies, &c., are concerned. Let the commanding officers of posts situate in each tribe's country look to the interest of such tribe, and exercise the same rule and control over it in the enforcement of the laws and orders of Government as he does over his troops. Let the goods to be distributed be sent to these officers, and by them turned over in bulk and not in broken packages to the chiefs of each band or tribe, who will see that to each of his people is given their just and proper share. This simple and direct mode of dealing would secure both their confidence and rights; it would cause them to look to one source, one person (the officer) in all matters concerning their rights, government, &c., and he could be one whose acts and conduct would be under the direct scrutiny and control of his superior officer. He would have the strength and power to enforce his authority, and not only make the Indians behave themselves, but also make the whites—the traders, pioneers, emigrants, &c.,—respect the laws, orders, regulations, &c. Now, an Indian superintendent or agent announces his regulations governing trade, intercourse, &c., with the Indians; military officers issue their orders bearing upon the same matters, clashing with the former. The superintendent or agent gives license to trade, &c., to one person, an officer to another. Responsibility to both makes responsibility to neither, hence the authority to neither is respected, the license is abused, the regulations and orders disregarded, and the Indians are wronged and robbed. As stated in a former part of this report, great efforts should be made to have the Indians occupy the country north and south of the two great outside lines of travel, the Platte and Arkansas, and thereby keep them together and removed from too free contact with the whites, which, as shown by all past experience, invites illicit traffic, begets demoralization and leads to conflict. I am clearly of the opinion that instead of dealing with these Indian tribes as with foreign nations, or recognizing them as treaty-making powers, the Government should regard and treat them as subjects, take care of and protect their rights and interests, make laws and prescribe rules for their government, compel obedience, punish offenses, and, in fact, adopt all necessary measures for their government, protection, support, and future welfare as subjects or wards. I submit these views believing it my duty to do so, and I am convinced that if adopted in whole or in part the most beneficial results would be realized thereupon in our future dealings with the Indians. These conclusions are the result of much personal experience and careful study, and they also reflect the opinions of the most experienced residents of the plains—men who have lived upon the frontier and had dealings with these Indians all their lives. I may also add, as an important and apparently singular fact, that all the persons I met during my tour who had lived with the Indians and become acquainted with their traits, habits, &c., were decided in their opinion that perfect and durable peace with these Indians could not be expected until they were punished for the outrages they have committed, and made to feel, respect, and fear the power of the Government. Of this, as previously stated, I also am fully convinced, from the tone of the telegram from Lieutenant-General Grant of July 29, communicated to me by Major-General Pope (copy of which is hereto appended, marked L), and from dispatches received from Major-General Pope, heretofore referred to, and marked B, it would appear that an erroneous impression prevailed at Washington as to the number of troops, amount of supplies, expenses being incurred, and the condition of things generally on the plains. I therefore esteem it my duty to report fully and explicitly upon these matters. Returns received for August 10 showed an aggregate of 20,240 of all arms. Of this number 2,373 were reported absent outside of this department, leaving an aggregate of 17,867 present within my command. The number reported for duty was 11,681. This was the largest force reported at any time on the plains in my command, and included the Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, 554 strong, at that time en route to be mustered out; the Fiftieth Wisconsin Infantry, about 650 strong, under orders to Fort Rice, Dak. Ter., to report to General Sully, and 4,056 men arriving at Fort Leavenworth, to be sent on the plains, but were mustered out before reaching their destination. Much of this force, as before stated, were mutinous and inefficient. My report of October 31 showed an aggregate of 9,311 present and absent of all arms. Of this number 2,331 were reported absent outside of this department, leaving an aggregate of 6,980 present within my command.

The following statement will show the organizations, strength, &c., of troops sent from the East and South and mustered out without any benefit of account having been derived from their service:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Organization</th>
<th>Strength as mustered out</th>
<th>Remarks</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>14th, 15th, and 32d Illinois Infantry</td>
<td>1,423</td>
<td>Marched from Fort Leavenworth to within ten miles of Fort Kearny and ordered back for muster out August 12, 1865.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3d Massachusetts Cavalry</td>
<td>411</td>
<td>Reached Fort Kearny from Fort Leavenworth August 18, and ordered back for muster out August 19.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14th Pennsylvania Cavalry</td>
<td>439</td>
<td>Was ordered mustered out at Fort Leavenworth August— without use; except one company used as escort on the plains.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12th Tennessee Cavalry</td>
<td>520</td>
<td>Used on the Republican short time; ordered to Fort Leavenworth for muster out September.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11th Indiana Cavalry</td>
<td>547</td>
<td>Marched to Fort Laramie and was ordered back for muster out August.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7th Kansas Cavalry</td>
<td>501</td>
<td>Reached Fort Kearny from Fort Leavenworth August 20, and ordered back for muster out August 25.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5th Michigan Cavalry</td>
<td>899</td>
<td>Mustered out at Fort Leavenworth July without use.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>4,740</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The discrepancy in the number of troops reported August 10 and October 1, not accounted for by muster out, is made up by troops relieved and ordered in for muster out and dropped from returns and by desertions and deaths.
The following statement shows the organizations, strength, &c., of troops mustered out since August 10 from the force serving in the Department of the Missouri and west of the Missouri River prior to last spring:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Organization</th>
<th>Strength</th>
<th>Remarks</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>9th Wisconsin Battery</td>
<td>70</td>
<td>Mustered out September 30.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Independent Colorado Battery</td>
<td>98</td>
<td>Mustered out August 31.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11th Kansas Cavalry</td>
<td>554</td>
<td>Ordered to Fort Leavenworth for muster out August 1.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18th Kansas Cavalry</td>
<td>832</td>
<td>Ordered to Fort Leavenworth for muster out about September 25.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3d Wisconsin Cavalry</td>
<td>770</td>
<td>Ordered to Fort Leavenworth for muster out September 1.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14th Missouri Cavalry</td>
<td>720</td>
<td>Ordered to Fort Leavenworth for muster out October.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2d Colorado Cavalry</td>
<td>522</td>
<td>Ordered to Fort Leavenworth for muster out September 23.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The following organizations are en route for or in process of muster out, under orders issued about October 1: Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, Second Missouri Artillery (mounted as cavalry), First Colorado Cavalry, Second U. S. Infantry Volunteers, Third U. S. Infantry Volunteers; aggregate, say 3,000.

The following troops remain in this command: Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry (ordered mustered out), First Michigan Cavalry, consolidated from First, Sixth, and Seventh Michigan Cavalry, First Battalion Nevada Cavalry, battalion Twenty-first New York Cavalry, battalion Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, battalion First Nebraska Cavalry, Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, Forty-eighth Wisconsin Infantry, Third Battalion California Veteran Infantry, First Battalion, Thirteenth U. S. Infantry, Sixth U. S. Infantry Volunteers, Fifth U. S. Infantry Volunteers.

These organizations aggregate about 9,311 present and absent. The number absent as reported is about 2,321, leaving the real strength of my command 6,990. As those absent are beyond this department, and as they belong principally to regiments sent here from the East, few, indeed, will return, and it is safe to estimate the entire number as lost. I will probably be able by January 1 to relieve with regular troops en route here the following organizations: Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, and Forty-eighth Wisconsin Infantry; aggregate, about 2,000. Statement of commissary stores on the plains is hereto appended, marked M, as will appear from remarks noted on this statement and from copies of telegrams hereto appended, marked N. I cut down the supplies as far as I considered safe, and directed the strictest economy in all things. No doubt Government took the amount of supplies requisitions were made for by officers on the plains for the quantities ordered sent, whereas the difference was very great. These officers made their requisitions large from the fact that previous to the present year supplies were exhausted late in the winter or early in the spring, and while the Indian troubles continued it was uncertain what number of troops there would be to supply; hence they prudently estimated for a sufficient amount to provide for all contingencies. Quartermaster and commissary stores were forwarded in about like proportion, but a deficiency in some articles of the former now exists. The estimates for forage for the plains were forwarded, and received the approval of the Quartermaster-General before being contracted for. The excess of subsistence stores on the plains arises from the muster out of troops after they had been forwarded. I am of the opinion that these stores should be held until the final result in our Indian matters is reached, and I so recommend. Should it be found necessary to make a campaign next season it could be commenced some months earlier by having these stores on hand than if they had to be transported in the spring for that purpose. These stores are now under shelter, and all that are now in good condition can be kept so; those that are not should be disposed of immediately. I am of the opinion that during the continuance of our Indian troubles it would be well to keep from three to six months' supplies on hand on the plains in addition to the usual year's supply. I take great pleasure in calling the attention of Government to the valuable services of Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor, whose promotion I heartily and earnestly recommend. This I do after careful observation and personal inspection of his past labors in organizing his district, establishing his posts and depots, and the successful management of his expedition, all under the most embarrassing circumstances and overwhelming difficulties. He has successfully protected the routes under his charge, and has kept up regular mail and telegraph communication, often by using his troops to carry the mail and rebuild the telegraph lines when interrupted by Indians and the stage and telegraph companies refused to do so; in fact he has throughout exhibited an energy, capacity, and fidelity to duty rarely excelled. I forward herewith maps of the country over which my command extends, showing the overland routes, posts, &c., and the routes taken by the different expeditionary columns during the past season.* I have, at the risk of making this report too voluminous, endeavored fully and plainly to embody and discuss all legitimate subjects of interest, believing it my duty to present these matters in their true light.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Bvt. Lieut. Col. Jos. McC. Bell,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.

[Appendix A.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, June 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor,
Commanding District of the Plains:

GENERAL: I have been here three weeks pressing forward troops to you. One thousand go, as you requested, by Loup Fork. Two thousand march direct to Julesburg, followed by others, and they are all well equipped. I sent a week ago some 600 horses. I cannot get any more for some time, as I have to remount all the cavalry that comes to me. I have applied for two regiments of infantry and no doubt they will be furnished. I am confident supplies are going rapidly forward. In the location of a post on Powder River I have in view the holding in check of the Indians, the possibility of obtaining forage, hay, wood, &c., and its position with reference to a route of travel to Montana, either from Fort Laramie or some point east, as well as the roads coming west from Missouri River. You are aware that such a road is being surveyed up the Niobrara; also that an appropriation exists for such a road from Fort Laramie to Virginia City up Powder River and Big Horn. You of course understand that we settle the Indian troubles

* Maps not found.
this season, and at such time as you consider it proper and for the interest of the Government you can make an informal treaty for cessation of hostilities, appointing some place for meeting of Indian chiefs for having a full understanding with them, and myself or such persons as the Government sees fit to go there. You must be the judge when it is proper to do this, and the Indians must be given to fully understand that when any hostilities cease, any act of robbery, murder, &c., by their people will precipitate our whole force on them. It is my opinion before this is done they should be made to feel the full power of the Government and severely punished for past acts. You are, however, on the spot and are the judge of what is for our interest. If there are any really friendly tribes you can do all in your power to keep them so, and if necessary may order them to rendezvous at such place as you deem proper and sustain them as you deem best. All traders and unauthorized parties should be kept away from the Indians and no outrages perpetrated upon them. If any agreement is made with any or all of them see that, so far as we are concerned, it is fully and rigidly lived up to on our part, that no excuse can be had on their part for breaking it.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Fort Leavenworth, June 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. R. B. MITCHELL,
Commanding District of North Kansas:

GENERAL: The regiment that is stationed on the Republican, protecting Government surveys, will be instructed to scout that country thoroughly and to notify the commanding officer at Fort Kearny of the movements of any Indians toward Platte River route and the commanding officer at Fort Riley of any movements toward the Arkansas route. Any opportunity offering to effectively strike any of the hostile Indians, be sure to promptly do so. Friendly Indians will be encouraged to remain so, and every endeavor made to protect them. He should establish his post at the most feasible point in that country, and notify the commanding officer nearest to him of his location, reporting frequently to you any matters of importance transpiring with the Indians.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Fort Leavenworth, June 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. P. E. CONNOR,
Commanding District of the Plains:

GENERAL: That you may fully understand what movements of troops against Indians are being made south of you, I give you the information: There will leave here this week a regiment of cavalry to go out on the Republican, about due south of Plum Creek, to protect the surveyors finishing up Government surveys in that part of Kansas. They will scout that entire country thoroughly, and will be ordered to advise Fort Kearny of any movements of Indians toward the Platte. An exploring party of 200 men will leave in two days, going up the Smoky Hill route to Denver, following that stream to its head, scouting each side fully. General Ford has put a post just north of his district, near north bend of Republican, and near Fort Riley and Fort Kearny road, in vicinity of Chalk Bluffs and the Salt Marshes. He will also move in three columns south of the Arkansas against the Comanches, Kiowas, and other bands in that direction.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Fort Leavenworth, June 11, 1860.

Brevet Brigadier-General Ford,
Commanding District of Upper Arkansas:

GENERAL: I inclose a communication from General Carleton. I telegraphed you as to what Colonel Leavenworth has done, but received no answer. Unless you have assurance that you will hear from these tribes in a few days you will move against them, whip them, and close the war, so far as they are concerned. You are authorized after this is done to make an informal treaty for the cessation of hostilities, and appoint a place for me, or such person as the Government may designate, to meet them. The columns should be 500 strong, and the movement a final one. The columns should be in communication with each other as often as possible. Move in such manner that no large body of Indians can get behind you. Report by telegraph what action you may take.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

[Appendix B.]

Saint Louis, Mo., July 31, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

Following dispatch just sent me:

The Quartermaster and Commissary Generals report requisitions of such magnitude coming from Leavenworth as to alarm them. Look into them, and stop all unnecessary expenditures, and reduce necessary orders to actual requirements. Returns show a cavalry force in the Department of the Missouri which it would seem might be materially reduced. Look into this matter also.

U. S. Grant,
Lieutenant-General.

No requisitions for stores required in this department must be sent to Washington without coming through these headquarters. I cannot too strongly impress upon you the necessity of reducing both troops and supplies in your command. You don't understand the pressure from Washington on this subject. I rely upon you to reduce everything at once to the lowest possible necessity, and of relieving for muster out every man you can. Don't permit any requisitions for supplies to be made except through this office. Telegraph me at once what effective force you have in your command, both cavalry and infantry, mounted and dismounted. I don't want exact returns, but want to know as near as you can.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.
Fort Leavenworth, July 31, 1865.

Maj. Gen. John Pope,

Saint Louis, Mo.:

All returns of troops in this command are in Saint Louis; none here. I telegraphed Captain Bell to send me copy outside of Utah. I am sending supplies on plains for northern route for 12,000 men for one year from 1st of May; on southern route six months for 7,000 men. I do not see how I can reduce the force on the plains before fall. Several regiments go out of service then. With the Indians all hostile, over 3,500 miles of overland route and every stage and train to be guarded, it takes a large force. We are putting supplies into Utah for 4,500 men. General Connor calls for supplies for 5,000 men, but I have reduced it to 4,000, and I understand this meets the approval of Government. When I spoke to you about it you approved it. We have got to put more troops in Utah this winter or we will have trouble. Last spring I could do nothing for want of supplies on the plains, and I think we should now provide sufficient for every contingency. If so directed I can reduce the supplies in Utah to 2,500 men. These men, you are aware, have to come from the 12,000 I put supplies east of the mountains for. I have concluded upon settling the matter on the southern route and withdrawing most of the troops, and therefore have only provided supplies for six months for them from May 1. No requisitions go to Washington that I know of. The depot quartermaster and commissary send their requisitions to Colonels Haines and Myers. The stores for northern route have mostly gone forward. I cut down many of these requisitions one-third, and have telegraphed about it. But when officers on the plains send in requisitions the officers here fill them. Commissary supplies, except for Utah, have gone forward for northern route. If you say I shall reduce Utah to supplies for 2,500 men, telegraph me, as the stores have not yet left.

G. M. Dodge,

Major-General.

Saint Louis, Mo., August 1, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

Supplies for 2,500 men in Utah will be sufficient.

Jno. Pope,

Major-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,

Saint Louis, Mo., August 2, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

Have written to you fully to-day my views and wishes. Soon as expedition returns military arrangements must be reduced to simple protection of overland routes. I have fixed upon 4,500 infantry and 2,500 cavalry as the force necessary in your command for that purpose. All other troops are to be mustered out as soon as expeditions now in progress are over, however they may end. Regulate sending out supplies on this basis. I have sent you very full instructions on the subject. What is wanted of military posts at Lawrence, Olathe, and elsewhere in Kansas? Dispense with them if possible, reducing everything to the lowest standard possible.

Jno. Pope,

Major-General.
Major-General DODGE:

It is not the purpose to interfere with your expeditions until they are over; but there is also a determination not to keep on the plains or elsewhere in your command this winter a larger force than is designated in my instructions of August 1. Please bear this in mind and hurry on your expeditions so that they will finish this season. I have sent copy of your letter of 2d instant to General Grant, but have no idea that will change the purpose of the Government to reduce troops and supplies on the plains. I hear from several sources unpleasant news about General Connor's doings. Look into this matter carefully. I am loath to believe anything to his discredit.

JNO. POPE, Major-General.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, August 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE, Saint Louis, Mo.:

General Connor sent following in answer to your dispatch about troops, supplies, &c.:

HORSE SHOE, July 31, 1865.

I fear they do not understand in Washington what the necessities of the service are here. I require a great many more supplies than I have troops, as the nature of the service keeps troops moving from posts far distant from each other, and it is difficult to move stores in the winter. Unless I can end this war this fall the present force will have to be kept up or the white people leave the country.

P. E. CONNOR, Brigadier-General.

There has been a terrible rise in the Platte within a day or two; bridges gone, &c. Has General Sanborn been stopped? He expected to come to some understanding with the chiefs in to-morrow's meeting, and was to have his troops there that they might see and appreciate his power.

G. M. DODGE, Major-General.

CAMP MITCHELL, August 28, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE, Saint Louis, Mo.:

Under your instructions of August 1, I have ordered to Fort Leavenworth from this line four regiments of cavalry, one regiment of infantry (Second U. S. Volunteers), and there are two more to go as soon as I can relieve them. I cannot tell until I reach Fort Laramie whether this brings the force within your letter of August 1 or not. Most of these regiments are on march in. Second U. S. Volunteers marches on arrival of Fifth U. S. Volunteers, now en route from Fort Riley.

G. M. DODGE, Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI, Saint Louis, August 11, 1865.

Major-General DODGE:

The Government is so anxious about reducing expenses that we must break up every post in Southern Kansas not absolutely necessary. I cannot consider the posts in Southern Kansas among those absolutely needed. You do not seem to me to appreciate the necessity for breaking up posts and mustering out troops. I cannot apply for more horses or anything else. If you cannot accomplish results with what you have they must be left undone. No orders countermanding the mustering out of Stolbrand's brigade have been received, so it must be mustered out. You have not answered about Fort Scott. I want you to furnish Sully with one regiment of infantry, at least 600 strong, in time to be out at Rice by October 1. It matters not how or from what. I have applied for regulars for the plains. Rush everything so as to get through by middle of October.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, August 11, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Saint Louis:

I ordered all posts in Kansas broken up before I left and stores removed, except one or two on southern border of Kansas to watch Indians, border, and carry out orders in relation to cattle stealing, and left on that border the Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry. We will have to keep one post there until matters are settled. Part of the Sixth West Virginia Cavalry are out at Fort Leavenworth waiting for horses. Cannot you send some from Saint Louis? If we do not get them off soon we will lose them all by desertion. The number of troops deserting on plains very large and dissatisfaction great. I wish some steps could be taken to catch some of them in Saint Louis. The troops that remain should be regulars. You did not answer my dispatch about Stolbrand's brigade and the infantry regiment to relieve Sully's command. An infantry regiment, if started soon, can get to Fort Randall on boats. I don't suppose cavalry can be wintered up there on account of lack of forage. I was informed to-day that the Fourth U. S. Volunteers had gone up into that country. I know very little about Missouri River posts, having got no reports from them. I leave here to-morrow for Fort Kearny. Dispatches sent to Omaha will be forwarded to me.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

OMAHA, August 12, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Saint Louis:

I am astonished at what you state. You must be aware that there was no truth in it, as you had full statement of everything that had been done or that was contemplated. General Meigs must have been aware that I gave orders at Fort Leavenworth cutting down requisitions largely, and in some cases entirely. These orders I made direct on depot commissary of subsistence and quartermaster, and ordered that no more supplies be sent to the plains except by my order. The reduction of troops to 5,000 men on the plains this fall came after supplies had been forwarded in accordance with the plans presented to you and by you to General Grant, which he instructed you to carry out. I supposed that we should have to keep about 10,000 men, and would make arrangements accordingly. The number of troops on the plains thus contemplated is not so large now on account of discharges and desertions. I have written you fully from here, and I desire to hear from my letter at Kearny. I trust you will inform Government of the true state of affairs, as with any such ideas as those they will look upon all I can do with prejudice. You can rest assured of one thing, that I shall certainly carry out your orders in letter and in spirit, as I have always done. I will be in Kearny Tuesday.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., August 15, 1865.

Capt. George F. Price, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Laramie:
(For General Connor.)

General: As I stated, General Pope has sent me positive orders to reduce the troops on the plains, as soon as your expedition is over, to 4,000 men, placing them at the prominent posts on overland route. This, he says, is to be done regardless of the success or failure of your Indian expedition. The War Department ordered the brigade of infantry en route to be sent back from Kearny and mustered out. I have ordered the Fifth United States, about 800 strong, from Fort Riley to you. This, with the Sixth United States and what California infantry you have, is all the infantry we will have this winter to carry out these orders. I see no way of sending more infantry to Utah, and have stopped movement of troops there. If we should get any more allowed us we will have to send cavalry through late in the fall. Powder River I consider of great importance, and you better take the infantry you want for that post out of the Sixth U. S. Volunteers. That portion of the Fifth U. S. Volunteers with Colonel Sawyer's wagon party is ordered to report to you when he discharges them. They must be up in that country some place. You will be the best judge of how much you can take then, and supply other posts. I have represented to the Government in what condition it will place the plains to reduce the force so much if we get no peace. But our orders are positive, and we must now lay our plans for that force on the plains this winter. If you succeed with your expedition it will be all right. Government has assured me that they would not decrease the force now on the plains until expeditions were over, but expect we can begin to do it by middle of October.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, Mo., August 28, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

In designating the force to be retained in each district it is understood that infantry regiments are full to 800 men and cavalry regiments to 1,200 men. It is rather the number of men than number of regiments I want kept. Where regiments are not full, retain battalions or companies of other regiments to make up the number of men. The other companies or battalions must be at once mustered out.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.
FORT LARAMIE, August 29, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

Your dispatch about troops, commanders, &c., received. By your last dispatch you assign to General Connor's old district 3,200 infantry and 3,000 cavalry. On the 1st of November there will be only 1,500 infantry in the command. This includes Fifth U. S. Volunteers, on march from Fort Riley. Do you want me to make up the number from cavalry? I have already ordered in, in accordance with your instructions of August 1 (including those whose term of service expires between now and November 1) enough to reduce the force in Nebraska, Colorado, and Utah to the number you designate in to-day's dispatch, and in that force to be retained I do not count troops with General Connor. In Utah we have only 400 men. There are four companies with General Connor that will make it 600 when they return. To make up the balance I shall have to send cavalry. In counting the troops I take every man belonging to the regiments that are present in my command. Those left in New York, Washington, and East I don't suppose we will ever see. I learn from regimental commanders that they have unofficially learned that most of them have been mustered out. Please answer about infantry. The regiments that we will have are the Fifth and Sixth U. S. Volunteers and 280 men of Veteran Battalion Third California Infantry.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., September 2, 1865.

Major-General DODGE:

I have rearranged districts west of Leavenworth. Elliott in command of Kansas, Upton of Colorado, Wheaton of Nebraska, including that portion of Dakota west of Nebraska, headquarters at Fort Laramie, and Connor of Utah. As soon as Connor returns from his expedition send him to Utah. Whole force in Utah, one infantry and one cavalry regiment. No more force than this must be sent to Utah under any circumstances. To Wheaton I have designated two regiments of infantry and one of cavalry; to Upton one regiment of infantry and five companies of cavalry; to Elliott one regiment of infantry and seven companies of cavalry. These forces are to be selected by the district commander from the troops in his district or those with Connor and Sanborn; every other man to be sent back to Leavenworth for muster out immediately. These officers are ordered to go to their districts and report by letter to you for duty. Each of them is furnished with detailed letter of instructions from me designating posts to be occupied in each district, and its garrison. I send copies of these instructions to your headquarters at Leavenworth, and have ordered each district commander who may see you on his way out to show his copy to you. Should enforce these instructions without delay. The pressure upon me about expenses on the plains is tremendous. Whether reasonable or not, the demands of the Government must be complied with. See that corn for the winter is safely stored for two companies of cavalry at Kearny, Julesburg, Cottonwood, Laramie, and Platte Bridge. There will be two companies of cavalry, and no more, at each of these posts, and corn must be saved in store for them from supplies now on the plains. I send Connor's instructions to Laramie, to be forwarded to him in Utah in case he has left. He must positively not interfere again in contracts or disbursements with the proper staff. officers unless they violate law. Whatever the result of Connor's expedition, come down at once and energetically to the standard here laid down, and hurry back all other troops to Leavenworth for muster out. I have ordered all Sanborn's force, except 500 men, to go back to Leavenworth at once for discharge. Commissioners will meet Indians on Arkansas at time specified.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

[Appendix C]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, August 11, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

I have just received copies of instructions from General Connor to the commanders of his expedition, in which I find the following words: "You will not receive overtures of peace or submission from Indians, but will attack and kill every male Indian over twelve years of age." These instructions are atrocious, and are in direct violation of my repeated orders. You will please take immediate steps to countermand such orders. If any such orders as General Connor's are carried out it will be disgraceful to the Government, and will cost him his commission, if not worse. Have it rectified without delay.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, August 11, 1865.

Capt. George F. Price, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Laramie:

Send forward the following dispatches to General Connor, and be governed by them:

Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor, In the Field:
Be governed by the following dispatches:

"HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, August 11, 1865.

"Major-General Dodge:

"General Connor is ignoring the quartermaster and commissaries, and violating law and regulations in making contracts himself and forcing officers to pay public money on them. Stop all this business at once, and order all officers to conform to law and regulations.

"JNO. POPE,
"Major-General."

General Connor will carry out the instructions of General Pope and my orders heretofore sent him. Acknowledge receipt of this.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

FORT LARAMIE, August 29, 1865.

Major-General Pope, Saint Louis, Mo.:

Following received from General Connor:

HEADQUARTERS POWDER RIVER EXPEDITION,
Near Fort Connor, August 29, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of two telegrams of 11th instant from Maj. Gen. John Pope in reference to instructions to column commanders and con--- tracts in Utah. The general's and your own instructions will be implicitly obeyed. I hope on my return to give such explanations as will be deemed satisfactory.

*See also next, ante.

P. E. CONNOR,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

[Appendix D.]

FORT LARAMIE, July 27, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General,

One thousand Indians attacked Platte Station on Tuesday; been fighting two days. Lieutenant Collins, Eleventh Ohio Cavalry, and 25 men, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, killed; 9 wounded. Bodies scalped and horribly mutilated. Note picked up on the field to-day, evidently written by a prisoner, who stated that he was captured on the Platte; states that the Indians say that they do not want peace and expect an increase of 1,000 more to their force. They are now three miles west destroying telegraph line. The left column is now en route there; the balance will leave in two days. I start for Platte Bridge myself Saturday. I respectfully ask that something be done to hurry contractors. Ammunition transferred to contractors months since, and of which I am short, has not arrived. I start on my expedition with scant supply of stores and many barefooted horses.

P. E. CONNOR,
Brigadier-General.

FORT LARAMIE, August 7, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Leavenworth:

Two hundred Cheyenne Indians attacked station near Big Laramie on 1st instant, killing 4 men and 1 woman, and taking as prisoners 1 woman, aged fifteen years, and 1 girl baby, aged two years—a fate worse than death. Also made a break on Little Laramie, stealing 13 Government horses and losing 4 killed. All available cavalry in that section in pursuit. Indians supposed to be portion of same band that made fight at Platte Bridge few days ago. Michigan horses jaded so as to be worthless for pursuit. Have now one non-commissioned officer and thirteen men at each station from Collins to Sulphur Springs, a distance of 275 miles. Stage company refuses to put stock on road, and the mails are still carried, tri-weekly, by Government teams. Under no circumstances while any troops are left on road will mail be permitted to stop. It is a shame, when emigrants and freighters travel the road daily without escorts, that the stage company, when afforded all the protection necessary, is afraid to run their stock. No difficulty exists now to prevent a daily mail if stage company would do its share of the work. Commanding officer South Sub-District has just returned from the road and so reports. Eleventh Kansas Cavalry is relieved and on road to Kearny.

GEO. F. PRICE,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

(In absence of General Connor.)
Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:

Particulars of Platte Bridge fight sent to you at Leavenworth on 27th of July. Additional information from our scouts show their loss much greater than at first supposed. The Indians threw away all the scalps they had taken from our men, a sure sign that they had lost more than they had killed. Main body of them went north. Think 200 of them went on mail road near Big Laramie. Telegraphed you full particulars on yesterday. Four dispatches to General Connor concerning General Sully’s conference will be forwarded to him by express immediately for his information. Couldn’t something be done to hurry up the troops on the road?

GEO. F. PRICE,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
(In absence of general commanding.)

HEADQUARTERS,
Powder River, August 19, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:

A detachment of my Pawnee scouts on the 16th instant discovered and pursued a party of twenty-four Cheyennes returning from the mail road with scalps and plunder. They overtook them about sixty miles northeast of here on Powder River, and after a short engagement killed the whole party. Loss on our side, 4 horses killed. We captured 29 animals, among which are 4 Government mules, 6 Government and 1 Overland Stage Line horses, besides 2 Government saddles and a quantity of white women’s and children’s clothing and 2 of the infantry coats issued by Colonel Moonlight last spring to the Indians who subsequently killed Captain Fouts and 4 soldiers of Seventh Iowa.

P. E. CONNOR,
Brigadier-General.

POWDER RIVER, August 21, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:

There is no doubt that the families of all the hostile Indians are north of here, and that those Indians who were lately operating on the mail and telegraph lines are joining. There is a trail six miles west of here over which they pass, and not being aware of our presence, we sometimes get one. Yesterday my scouts killed one of the principal chiefs of the Cheyennes, and to-day Captain Marshall, Eleventh Ohio, killed two Indians. Twenty horses and mules were captured, most of which are Government animals, together with several packs of plunder, apparently lately come into their possession; also letters and other papers addressed to men of the Seventh Michigan, which show that the Indians are directly from the road. Loss on our side, two horses killed. I am glad they are going north. I do not apprehend that they will go south while the expedition lasts.

P. E. CONNOR,
Brigadier-General.
Major-General DODGE:

Your letter of 6th concerning Ford's expedition and General McCook's suspension of it received. I telegraphed you the other day that you must do what you thought best, and that General McCook had no authority to give any orders on the subject. Did you not receive my dispatch? I send you to-day a letter from General McCook giving his reasons for his action and against the campaign of Ford's. As I said before, you must yourself judge and act on the matter.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

Major-General DODGE,
Fort Leavenworth:

You must do as you think best about Ford. General McCook had no authority from me to interfere in any manner with your troops.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., July 1, 1865.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. JOHN B. SANBORN,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: It is the desire of the Government to settle the Indian difficulties this season. You will therefore push your troops into their country and fight them wherever and whenever they can be found. You will allow no outrages of any kind to be committed on our part. We must fight them honorably, capture their villages and property, and at the first opportunity make an informal treaty with them for a cessation of hostilities, appointing a place where I or some one else designated by the Government can meet and confer with them. My idea is that these Indians must be punished and made to ask for peace, and that treaties made must not be on the grounds of paying them for keeping the peace, but with the understanding that it is for their safety and their only means of preservation. Keep your troops on the move, and so long as these Indians insist upon hostilities give them no rest; but the moment you consider peace can be made make an effort to get the chiefs together for that purpose; and when hostilities do cease see that we, on our part, live faithfully up to the conditions to which we agree. Colonel Leavenworth, Indian agent for the Comanches, is now trying to get an interview with them, and you will learn what success he has had by the time you reach your district. Brevet Brigadier-General Ford will turn over to you my former instructions and orders in relation to trains, &c.; also instructions for putting up hay. You will carry out the arrangements made with General Carleton in regard to escorts, &c. Instruct your chiefs of staff departments to keep a full and proper amount of supplies. This must not be neglected. You will probably have about 7,000 troops to supply. Keep me informed by telegraph or otherwise of all matters of importance in your district.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Major-General Sanborn,
Fort Riley, via Lawrence:

In answer to your dispatch from Colonel Leavenworth and arrival of those Indians, I have forwarded the dispatch, and as soon as telegraph lines are up hope to get an answer, with instructions. I think you should push out your columns as directed, and let them meet you in their country, and if you think you can make an agreement with them, as I have heretofore directed, you can do so. If not, fight them. I have no faith in their continual application for peace. It has been this way for three months, and they continue to rob and steal. If they are in earnest let them deliver up the stolen Government stock and property, then we are willing to carry out our part of the agreement. They must also agree to control their entire tribes, keep off our lines of communication, and desist entirely from any and every act of hostility, and the Government will send persons to finish the matter, and I will meet them at such places and time as can be agreed upon and a final treaty can be made. The place to meet them is in their own country where they are, and let them see our power. I shall leave here in two weeks for Laramie, Denver, and then to Fort Lyon, and so back to Riley. I shall be in telegraphic communication all the time so you can advise me what is going on.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Major-General Dodge:

If possible to make reliable treaty of peace with Comanches, Kiowas, &c., do so. Sanborn had best see for himself what truth there is in Leavenworth's story. A permanent settlement of Indian difficulties is what we want. If Leavenworth's report is true, then a place to meet these Indians should be at once arranged and notification given me, that commissioners might be on hand in time.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

Maj. Gen. John Pope:

Do you think I had better recall General Sanborn? It takes ten days now to reach him. He has been gone nearly a week, and his columns must be all south of the Arkansas River. I put no faith in any treaty made with any of those Indians until they are whipped and made to give up stolen stock. It appears to me a treaty now is a bid for them to commence again as soon as we take our troops off. General Sanborn, when he gets down into their country, can do as the case dictates, as I have given him full instructions and told him to settle the matter before he returns.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Major-General Dodge,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

Your instructions to General Sanborn are all right. Of course he is not to be held back.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

[Appendix G.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, August 4, 1865.

General Mitchell:

As General Dodge is supposed to have left Leavenworth, you will please send the following confidential dispatch to General Sanborn by special messenger, with orders to make all speed and direction, and orders by him to post commanders to furnish necessary aid and escort.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General.

[Appendix H.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
In the Field, on the Big Turkey, August 17, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Commanding U. S. Forces, &c., Fort Leavenworth:

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that, in pursuance of telegraphic orders from Major-General Pope, dated August 4, 1865, and received at Fort Larned at 11 p.m. on the 7th instant, I addressed a communication (see copy inclosed, marked A) to the chiefs of the hostile tribes and forwarded the same to the mouth of the Little Arkansas, at which place the chiefs and headmen of these tribes were assembled. Placing the troops in camp as directed, I proceeded in person toward the above point. On the 13th instant I received a note from Colonel Leavenworth in reply to my communication, marked A as above, in which he stated that he saw no other way but for me to come to that point and see the Indians myself. I accordingly proceeded to that place with a small escort, arriving on the 15th instant. I was cordially received by the chiefs of the respective tribes, who manifested the strongest desire for peace. An agreement for the cessation of hostilities was entered into between them and myself, a copy of which is here-with inclosed, marked B. I have no doubt but that this terminates the difficulties between the Government and the tribes of the plains south of the Arkansas River. I think this command may now safely be reduced by 2,000 men, and by as many more as soon as the final arrangement for perpetual peace is made with these tribes, as provided in the agreement above referred to. These chiefs think that as soon as the hostile tribes on the Platte are informed of their having made peace they will also cease hostilities, and agreed to communicate with them by runners at once. Col. J. H. Leavenworth, U. S. Indian agent, is justly entitled to the credit of bringing about this personal interview with these chiefs at so early a day. I am now on my way to Fort Riley. We have been compelled to swim horses and men every five to ten miles since we left Fort Zarah coming east, and have not been able to move the train beyond this point.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brevet Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclomission A.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
In the Field, Fort Larned, Kans., August 3, 1865.

To the Chiefs and Headmen of the Apache, Arapahoe, Cheyenne, Comanche, and Kiowa Tribes:

I am here with a large military force ready to enter your country if peace is not made without this movement. Colonel Leavenworth, your agent, says that you have already ceased hostilities and are ready to meet the proper officers of the United States Government, and enter into permanent peace obligations. I desire you to communicate to me by the bearer of this dispatch whether this statement of Colonel Leavenworth is correct, and if so, to state when and where you will meet me with a view of making arrangements for a cessation of hostilities on both sides, and also to make an arrangement for a convention on the 1st day of October next, between you and such officers or persons as the President of the United States may designate for that purpose, to make and enter into treaties of perpetual peace between your tribes and the Government of the United States. Full protection will be given to any of your men who may be sent into our lines to confer on the subject of peace. You are requested to give full protection to the bearer of this dispatch and to return an answer without delay.

JOHN B. SANBORN,

[Inclomission B.]

Be it known to all that we, the chiefs and headmen of the Apache, Comanche, and Kiowa tribes of Indians of the Upper Arkansas, and the Arapahoes now south of the Arkansas River, have agreed, and do hereby agree, with our agent, Col. J. H. Leavenworth, and with Bvt. Maj. Gen. John B. Sanborn, commanding the District of Upper Arkansas, to cease all acts of violence or injury to the frontier settlements and to the traveler on the Sante Fe road and other lines of travel, and to remain at peace. We further agree to meet and council on the 4th day of October, 1865, at Bluff Creek, about forty miles south of the Little Arkansas, with such commissioners as the President of the United States may appoint for a perpetual peace between the Government of the United States and our various tribes; and we further agree to use all our influence with the Cheyenne Indians now south of the Arkansas River, and induce them to join us in this perpetual peace, and if they do not we will compel them to cease all acts of violence toward the citizens of the United States or runners from our country.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hand and affixed our marks this 15th day of August, 1865, at the mouth of the Little Arkansas, in council with the officers of the Government above named.

TO-HAN-SON x OR LITTLE MOUNTAIN, mark
Chief of Kiowas.

[AND FIVE OTHER CHIEFS OF THE KIOWAS.]

PARRY-WAH-CAN-HA-VITCHA x OR POOR BEAR, mark
Chief of Apaches.

HO-TO-YO-KOH-WAH x OR OVER THE BUTTES, mark
Chief of Comanches.

[AND SEVEN OTHER CHIEFS OF THE COMANCHEs.]

PAH-UP-PAT-TOP x OR BIG MOUTH, mark
Chief of Arapahoes.

In presence of:

JESSIE CHISHOLM.
W. T. KITTREDGE, Assistant Adjutant-General.

MOUTH OF LITTLE ARKANSAS, August 15, 1865.

In consideration of the above agreement and understanding made by the chiefs and headmen of the tribes above mentioned, I agree on the part of the Government to suspend all acts of hostility toward the various tribes above mentioned so long as they observe in good faith the stipulations and agreement on their part as hereinabove set forth.

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brevet Major-General, Commanding District of Upper Arkansas.

JESSE II. LEAVENWORTH,
U. S. Indian Agent.

[Appendix I.]

JULESBURG, August 24, 1865.

Maj. GEORGE C. TICHENO:
Aide-de-Camp, Fort Leavenworth:

Send following to Fort Riley:

Major-General SANBORN:

I have telegraphed for commissioners to be appointed to meet on October 4, and asked that you be one of them. The great object to be attained is to keep these Indians south of our lines of travel, making their northern boundary as far south of Arkansas River as possible and east of Fort Bascom. I suppose the commissioners will have full instructions from Government. I also hope that agents and traders will be put under military supervision. One band of Arapahoes are north of South Platte, and hostile. Nearly all of Cheyennes are now far north of this. The Arapahoes should be made to control their men north. After treaty is signed I want troops reduced to lowest possible number. It seems to me we need hold only three or four posts on that line, and those with a small force. What number of troops do you estimate will be needed, and at what points? Should not Fort Dodge or some of the posts be moved up on the Smoky Hill route? Answer to Fort Laramie.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Verbatim copy of a message left by a band of Indians on a wooden paddle stuck up in their trail, upon which troops were at the time following them:

Chief Kill Bear—Indian rapoo, shian and saes, crows and snakes, camanch, ciwas, blackfoot, ten ten company of Indian all gather and fights the whites. Es Indians wathing this road and going home in two or three days and come up the road again and all the road again. Chief wants piece again, get back them to Indian prisoners in Denver. We have got four company of Indians around this mountain watching the road. And the whites killed one shian at carney, and watching to days and the Indians killed twenty-six Shoulderon. four wagons burn them in the fire. The Governs in the State wathc at governor in denver and killed him and make piece and catch him quick and killed him, and they have got to shian boys in denver. want them back and make peice again.

DENVER, October 2, 1865.

Brevet Major-General Wheaton,
Fort Laramie:

I will send to you Big Ribs and some of his head Sioux. Consult with General Connor. Send them out to the Cheyennes and Sioux, inviting them into Fort Connor or Laramie, as you deem best, for a talk for cessation of hostilities and final peace. Any that have gone to Missouri River for that purpose let them go, but get in all that are left, provided they feel disposed to settle now. You can say to them that if they do not come in and settle what they have had is only a taste of what they will get this winter, for that you will give them no rest. You and General Connor can fix this. What I want is to settle with them before they discover our force on the plains. You can also say that all Indians south have made peace. Include what General Connor knows about Arapahoes. Show Big Ribs the forces you have and impress upon him your power. Will start Big Ribs for Fort Laramie in a day or two.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 29, 1865.

Maj. Gen. John Pope,
Saint Louis:

The Quartermaster and Commissary Generals report requisitions of such magnitude coming from Leavenworth as to alarm them. Look into them, and stop all unnecessary expenditures, and reduce necessary orders to actual requirements. Returns show a cavalry force in Department of Missouri which it would seem might be materially reduced. Look into this matter.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.
Approximate amount of stores on the plains.

NORTHERN ROUTE.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Station</th>
<th>Number of men</th>
<th>From</th>
<th>To</th>
<th>Remarks</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Salt Lake</td>
<td>2,500</td>
<td>1865. July 1</td>
<td>1866. July 1</td>
<td>Small rations sent 4,000 men. Requisitions and estimates called for full rations for 5,000 men, but were reduced to 2,500 August 2.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Bridger</td>
<td>500</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>Requisitions called for 2,500 men, but were reduced to 1,000.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Laramie</td>
<td>1,050</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>Stores for Powder River were shipped to Laramie. Requisitions called for supplies for 1,000 men, but were reduced to 500 in August.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Powder River</td>
<td>500</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>This includes all dependencies and is principal depot for supplies for Colorado. Requisitions were cut down here 900 men. One hundred thousand pounds of this amount was stopped at depot at Fort Leavenworth; the excess is being transferred to Laramie to fill deficiency there.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Halleck</td>
<td>250</td>
<td>June 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>Requisition were made for 2,500 men, but were reduced August 2 by Major-General Dodge to 1,000.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Camp Collins</td>
<td>250</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>Requisitions were made for 1,500 men for one year.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Denver</td>
<td>2,750</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>This post has been broken up and its stores removed or disposed of.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Junction</td>
<td>500</td>
<td>June 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>Beans for 2,040 men; coffee for 1,170. Requisitions were made for 3,000 men for six months.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Junebug</td>
<td>1,500</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>Sugar for 1,900 men; beans for 1,400. Requisitions were made for 9,000 men for six months, but cut down in August.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cottonwood</td>
<td>1,250</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>Requisitions were made for 1,500 men for one year.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Kearny</td>
<td>1,080</td>
<td>Nov. 1</td>
<td>Sept. 1</td>
<td>This post has been broken up and its stores removed or disposed of.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

SOUTHERN ROUTE.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Station</th>
<th>Number of men</th>
<th>From</th>
<th>To</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Fort Leavenworth</td>
<td>900</td>
<td>Nov. 1</td>
<td>Sept. 1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Riley</td>
<td>1,000</td>
<td>Nov. 1</td>
<td>Sept. 1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Lyon</td>
<td>670</td>
<td>Nov. 1</td>
<td>Sept. 1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Garland</td>
<td>250</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Fillmore</td>
<td>250</td>
<td>July 1</td>
<td>July 1</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* Stores at depots on this route supply the new posts at Big Creek, Pond Creek, and Monumento.

[Appendix N.]

Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor, Fort Laramie:

Major Mackey, of Fort Laramie, estimates for subsistence stores for Fort Laramie for 3,000 soldiers, 250 citizens, 400 Indians, 100 officers, &c., nearly doubling the estimates heretofore sent and reported to you in my letter of June 13. Estimates therein stated called for stores for 2,000 men for Laramie and 900 for Powder River for one year. This appears to me sufficient. My letter of June 13 shows that estimates have been received for 17,000 men; 1,500 have been added to that for Utah. Is this not stores enough, and more than we shall need for the ensuing year? If some posts are short, others must have a surplus, which can be transferred as they are needed. This winter our force will necessarily be reduced, and we do not want to pile up stores that cannot be used. The estimate up to June 13 and from Salt Lake makes 18,000,000 pounds for subsistence stores alone. This is as much as we can get transportation for, and is 8,000,000 more than is contracted for, and in addition thereto are quartermaster's and ordnance stores that are en route.
Brig. Gen. P. E. Connor,
Fort Laramie:

You will see from General Pope's dispatch that Government thinks we are making too much cost. Your estimates are very large. You ask for supplies for 17,000 men. We will not be able to keep over half that number on the plains this winter. All supplies have gone forward except for Utah. Supplies for 2,500 men are waiting to go there. Do you not think that we had better let Utah rest on supplies for 2,500 men? That is as many as you will be able to get there this winter.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

No. 2.

Saint Louis, Mo., February 10, 1867.

General U. S. Grant,
Washington, D. C.:

General: Herewith inclosed I have the honor to forward a copy of my report of the operations of the Eastern Division, Indian Expedition, for July, August, September, and October, 1865. This report was made shortly after the return of the Eastern Division, Indian Expedition, but after Brigadier-General Connor had forwarded his report, and on the supposition that it was never forwarded, I sent this copy, revised, as it is more in detail than the first report made to General Connor and upon which he made his official report, and presuming that it may contain information that may be of some value to the Government.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,

N. Cole,
Late Colonel Second Missouri Light Artillery,
Commanding Eastern Division, Indian Expedition.

[Inclosure.]

Headquarters Eastern Division, Powder River Indian Expedition.

General: I have the honor to make the following report of the Eastern Division, Powder River Indian Expedition, during its campaign of July, August, September, and part of October, A. D. 1865:

The command was organized at Omaha City, Nebr. Ter., and consisted of eight companies of my regiment, the Second Missouri Light Artillery (equipped as cavalry), and eight companies of the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, numbering about 1,400, rank and file, with a train of 140 six-mule wagons. My artillery consisted of one section of 3-inch riddled guns, manned by men of the Second Missouri Light Artillery. Much difficulty was experienced in procuring suitable transportation to accompany the command, and very considerable delay in the movement of the column was occasioned thereby. Most of the mules furnished were unbroken and from two to four years old, utterly unfit for the service required of them, but no others could be procured, whilst the teamsters were in the main worthless. The time from June 20 to July 1 was spent in getting these incongruous elements organized into a train. A considerable quantity of commissary stores and a lot of spare parts and materials for the repair of wagons and harness had not arrived when, on June 30, I received a telegram from General Connor not to delay for anything, but to purchase supplies at Omaha City. This I did to the extent of about $15,000. General Connor also directed me to leave no grain behind, but to take all I could get trains to haul. To do this I was compelled to hire citizen transportation. On the 1st of July, after some delay caused by the refusal of two companies of my regiment to move when ordered, the command, with the exception of three companies (which remained to complete their equipment, collect stragglers, and escort the rear trains), took up the line of march toward Columbus, on the Loup Fork of the Platte, following the line of the Pacific telegraph. On the 2d the balance of the command with the trains followed, overtaking the main column at Fremont, on the Platte River, on the 3d. Arriving at Columbus, our route left the Platte and followed up the north bank of the Loup, leaving the last vestige of civilization at the Pawnee Mission, 110 miles from Omaha City. From the many farms which lie along the Platte a sufficiency of forage was purchased to supply the command; here I also procured a drove of fifty beef-cattle. After passing the Pawnee Mission and until reaching the Niobrara River my only reliable source of information was a copy of Lient. G. K. Warren's map, furnished me by the chief engineer of the department, as the guides I had employed were unfamiliar with the country, having been over its surface but little; yet they were excellent judges of prairie country and were of much value in the selection of favorable ground for the movement of the trains. Whilst camped near the mouth of North Branch of the Loup, Lieutenant Murphy, First Nebraska Cavalry, with escort, arrived, bringing dispatches from General Connor containing full instructions as to my destination and route, of which up to this time I was entirely uninformed save that I was to move my command up the Loup Fork, where I would receive orders.

Deeming it advisable to cut off a considerable bend in the Loup River, I moved up the valley of the North Branch to Antelope Creek, where was found Lieut. W. D. Smith's trail of 1856. Leaving this trail to the left, the command moved in a westerly direction, but from the necessity of selecting ground passable with the trains the course gradually changed nearly south. The valley of the North Branch is bountifully supplied with timber along the margins of the stream, and all the ravines and canons putting into it are well timbered with cedars. Along the hill-sides there are some small groves of scrub oaks. The bottom timber is almost exclusively cottonwood and box elder. The stream where we crossed it was about fifty yards in width and its bed full of quicksand. The valley is from one to one mile and a half wide, and contains apparently very fertile soil; grass was very abundant. The country between this stream and the Loup is high, abrupt, ridgy prairie, the road in consequence sinuous and heavy. Moving up the Loup, wood, water, and grass in abundance were found, and with few exceptions scarcely any serious obstacles to the march were encountered. Anticipating the frequent use of tools in the construction of bridges and cutting of embankments, I had organized one of the companies of the Second Missouri Light Artillery as a pioneer company, under the command of Capt. N. Boardman, an officer whose lifetime experience as a civil engineer specially fitted him for this duty, and by keeping them some distance in the advance with the guides, prepared the road with sufficient dispatch to occasion but little delay in the movement of the column. After the first 150 miles had been accomplished but few creeks or rivulets put into the river, although the gulches were more numerous and the bluffs approached the river more frequently than before, forcing the route into the hills. Aside from sand the road was good. When near the head of the Loup wood entirely gave out, and the command was forced to resort to buffalo chips, of which a very limited quantity could be found. Bog peat was also used as a substitute for wood, of which there was considerable quantities found on this part of the route.

I had many misgivings as to the practicability of moving a command as large as mine across the country from the head of the Loup to the Niobrara River, as my information was, in effect, that the region to be traversed was a barren, sandy desert, without fresh water, wood, or grass. To be positive, I lay in camp one day for the purpose of scouting for the best route. I sent two parties, one on Lieutenant Warren's trail, who returned reporting that route impassable for trains, with but little grass and ponds of brackish water. The other party sent to the north or most direct line to the Niobrara River, reported a practicable route, with excellent grass and water in abundance. I adopted the new route, and by slowly feeling my way with scouts as I went, discovered a number of lakes and small streams, on the banks of which were excellent camping-grounds. The topography of the country consists of a series of sand ridges, sparsely covered with vegetation, and broad, intervening valleys, densely covered with grass. The latter all had lakes, streams, or marshes in them, yet forming no material obsta-acle to the movement of the command. In crossing these sand ridges, which varied from 200 to 500 feet in height, the deep, loose sand made draught heavy on the mules, more particularly in the rear of the trains, necessitating the frequent use of the men, dismounted and pulling with drag-ropes. Scarcely any wood was found in this section until reaching Snake River, where there was an abundance of cedar.
This is a rapid-flowing stream of excellent water, a tributary of the Niobrara River. The hills on the north side of Snake River are low and the face of the country grows gradually flatter until it becomes a level plain of eight to ten miles in breadth, ending at the crest of the bluffs on the Niobrara River. Where we struck the Niobrara timber was very plenty, the bottom land having the usual cottonwood and box elder, with scattering pines and cedars along the bluffs and in the canions. Grass was very scant, and with my large number of animals it was difficult to obtain sufficient for one night.

From the Niobrara our route lay over a gently rolling prairie toward the bluffs at the head of Wounded Knee Creek; from thence down the valley of that stream to White Earth River. The first night's camp was made on the head of Antelope Creek, a small marsh from which in a number of springs a considerable amount of water rises. These had to be dug out, and with a few small ponds adjacent furnished sufficient water for the entire command. Here there was no wood. On the Wounded Knee wood and water were abundant, but grass very scarce.
In this vicinage dry beds of streams had to be bridged. This plan was resorted to when timber could be had in preference to cutting through embankments. The column was delayed for hours whilst roads for the trains were cut through the bluff, hard clay banks of the frequent gulches in this locality, leaving behind us as we passed a very good road, which with but little repairs might, if desired, be again made available. Upon reaching White Earth River we struck an American Fur Company trail, used by General Harney in 1855, and followed it across the river and almost entirely through the "Les Mauvaise Terres," when, leaving it to our right, we continued direct to the South Fork of the Cheyenne River. The crossing of the White Earth River was rendered very difficult by recent rains, which having submerged the banks made them almost impassably miry, compelling the construction of corduroy roads before the trains could be gotten over. Here, not far from camp, was discovered the trail of a small party of Indians, indicating the recent passage of some roving band. In the bed of the White Earth there was but little quicksand; the water was almost too muddy for use. Cottonwood was plenty in all the bends of the stream. On the passage through the "Bad Lands" no water fit for use was found save at Ash Spring, where some old holes were cleaned out, which afforded sufficient for the time. On the South Fork of the Cheyenne there were limited quantities of grass, but wood and water in abundance. It was here necessary to pull the wagons up the high bluffs with drag-ropes to attain a high plateau over which our route now took its way. To purpose this and to give the animals rest I lay here two days, moving hence August 11.

Moving northwestwardly from here over a high rolling country we crossed quite a number of sinking creeks, tributaries to the forks of the Cheyenne, arriving at Bear Butte on the 14th instant. In all these creek beds water had to be dug for or was found standing in stagnant pools. In none save Bear Butte Creek was there living, running water. By scattering the stock over an extensive area forage was obtained in sufficient quantity for a night at each camp. The soil was apparently very good, whilst in the bottom land the timber was very dense. Around Bear Butte the soil was excellent and the grass the finest seen during the campaign. There had been, it was evident from appearances, no rain for some time, yet in the branches of Bear Butte Creek there was sufficient water for all our purposes, and from indications it would seem they were seldom or never entirely dry. From here I moved to the northwest, intending to reach the valley of the Belle Fourche River (North Fork of Cheyenne) and follow it up some distance. On arriving at White Wood Creek, one of its tributaries, I found a more practicable route to the west, and, pursuing it, reached a mountain stream called by the traders Red Water. The road was excellent, scarcely any work being required on it. The bottom lands along White Wood Creek were filled with oak, box elder, and cottonwood; grass was abundant. From here to Red Water occasional groves of scrub oak were met with and the bluffs were dotted with pines and cedars. Pine, cedar, scrub oak, cottonwood, and box elder was very abundant along the valley and on the lining bluffs of the Red Water. These bottom lands are apparently rich in soil and with the advantage of good water-power which the stream affords must some time be valuable for farming purposes. Here one of my guides found float rock which he called silver blossom, but with no experience in metallurgy I could not decide as to his correctness. The most prominent among the different strata of rock composing the bluffs were red sandstone and gyspum, the former being the principal, the latter lying mostly in heavy deposits on the foothills. The general features of the country change but little from Red Water to the North Cheyenne. Broken, rocky ridges, crowned with pines, alternating with narrow valleys, containing many small creek beds, follow each other in quick succession. While camped in one of these valleys on Pine Creek Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, with a small party, rode into my camp, having left his command at our camp of the preceding night on the Red Water. His regiment had left Fort Laramie on the 2d of August and came through the Black Hills, striking our trail whilst we were yet in sight. On the Cheyenne grass was very scarce but water plenty. In the bluffs there were some evidences of coal, yet no pure outcroppings.

From the Cheyenne I moved up one of its tributaries to its head, thence down a small stream to the Little Missouri River, over a comparatively level country, but with little water, however. Timber covered all the ridges and cedars filled the canyons. Scurvy had now began to develop itself, and one of the command died of this disease. One of my Pawnee guides also died of apoplexy or some kindred cause. At the point where I struck the Little Missouri River (a) grass was so scant that it was a matter of extreme difficulty to find enough to even scantily feed my animals, this sparseness continuing as I moved down the valley. So short were my animals fed that I kept scouting parties out all the time in search of grass, which on the third day was found in plenty. Many trails, evidently five or six days old, of parties of from five to fifteen Indians, were here seen; older and heavier trails, tending down the valley, were observed, denoting this one of their highways.

My own judgment would have prompted me to push down the river, but my orders strictly confined me to moving to Powder River and Panther Mountain. Whilst lying by one day to graze and rest the wearied animals and to make some necessary repairs, I sent a scouting party to the westward to discover some practicable route in the direction of Powder River. They proceeded as far as Box Elder Creek, a tributary of the Little Missouri River, to which point I moved on the following day, over a route made easy for trains with but little labor.

In the valley of the Box Elder there was a moderate quantity of grass, its timber consisting of box elder, cottonwood, and red willow. On the bluffs adjacent there were many pines and cedars. This stream was not running, but water in pools was standing in the bends. During this day's march great quantities of fossil bones of large size were seen lying in beds in different localities. Much of the fragmentary rock exposed among the passes was apparently volcanic in its origin. Moving from here westward up the valley of a small creek, a tributary of the Box Elder, I camped on its head, with scant grass obtained by scattering the stock over a considerable area of country. Scurvy had now become prevalent in the command, and the absence of anti-scorbutics made it desirable to discover something as a substitute for the ordinary vegetables. One of the men now fortunately discovered that the yellow, washed clay on which we were camped contained a small bulbous root, which on examination proved to be a species of onion, not so large as the common white army bean and possessed of a less pungent flavor, yet they had a good effect upon the men, who dug and ate them with avidity. At this camp there was no timber, save small willows along the stream, but the bluffs at some distance were covered with pines. From here to the westward I moved over a gently undulating country, without water save that in a couple of holes, which, with its brackish taste and thick consistency, was almost unfit for use. Nearly night the head of the column arrived at the edge of a cliff in sight of Powder River, distant about six miles across a strip of "Bad Lands," which was a part of "Les Mauvaises Terres" of the Yellowstone River Valley. This cliff was hundreds of feet in height, and no place of descent could be found. That this rough, broken region could be traversed after being attained seemed impossible; in no event could an attempt to reach the river that night be a success. This being patent I moved into the valley of O'Fallon's Creek, near its source, and fortunately discovered a small pool, containing possibly half a dozen barrels of brackish water, which the buffalo had been within a short time wallowing in. The intense heat of the day, along with the dust-laden air, had created too strong a thirst among the men to hesitate at drinking the water discovered, although it was impregnated with the excrement of these animals. Of forage there was none to be had, and the stock had to be tied up the entire night without water or grass.

---

(a) This point was a short distance below what is laid down on the map as the "Three or Little Missouri Buttes."

At 3 o'clock of the next morning I moved to the edge of the bluffs at another point than that at which I had struck it the day before. After some search my guides discovered an Indian tepee trail leading down to the lower plain. By cutting along it and across divides and through canons I was enabled to get the trains advanced about three miles by night. To accomplish this it was necessary to station men on the sides of the hills with ropes to steady the wagons, which frequently threatened to overset upon the mules or slide sideways down over the numerous precipices along the brinks of which they were compelled to pass. After getting the trains thus far along I left them with a guard and moved the men, with all the animals, to the river for the purpose of reaching water and grass, of which the stock was so much in need. The day was intensely hot, and the great labor of working through canons and over masses of rock, together with the excessive dust, intensified the weariness and exhaustion of the entire command, rendering this step imperative. I reached the valley at a point about fifty miles from the Yellowstone River, striking a bend in the river heavily covered with timber. Of grass there was plenty in the timber, but scarcely any in the open ground, with none on the hills. The valley is narrow, not exceeding two miles in width, bounded by a barren waste of rugged hills, from which numbers of veins of coal outcrop. Sage bottoms line the stream, save in the timbered bends; on them no vestige of vegetation appears beyond sage brush, greasewood, and prickly pear. The bed of the stream is here from sixty to seventy yards in width, and is quicksandy. The water was at apparently a medium stage and the river easily forded. On the following day, August 29, the mules were sent out and the train moved in. My instructions from General Connor, received July 12 on the Loup Fork of Platte River, by special messenger, directed me to proceed to Panther Mountains, at the northeast base of which, on Tongue River, I should find a depot of supplies. My rations were by this time nearly exhausted, and it was necessary to communicate with General Connor as soon as possible to procure more. To expedite this I sent Lieutenant Hoagland, Second Missouri Light Artillery, with Raymond, my most reliable guide, and a detachment of twenty men, to scout across the Tongue River to ascertain the best route by which to move the column; also to find, if possible, at what point General Connor was lying with his command. I also deemed it in order to inform him of my whereabouts as soon as possible, to relieve him from any apprehensions he might have relative to the arrival of my column, as in his telegram of July 5 he implied that my command was behind time.

The scouting party left camp on the afternoon of August 29, and returned September 1 about 3 p.m., having stopped to rest but a few hours of the time absent. They had governed themselves in their movements strictly according to my instructions, given from information derived from a map furnished by General Connor. They traveled fifty miles directly west, over a country impassable for trains, crossing thirty-five miles from my camp on Powder River the bed of a stream about the size of the latter-named river with an equally extensive valley, and fifteen miles farther west ascended the side of a mountain and passed northwardly around its west base into the valley of a smaller stream, all of these agreeing precisely with Tongue River, Panther Mountains, and Rosebud Creek as laid down on General Connor's map. They reported Tongue River, where they struck it, to contain abundance of water standing in its bed, with indications that above it was running. In the valleys and on Panther Mountains they found barely enough grass to forage their own horses. They found no depot of supplies, neither any indications of any one having been there before them. Panther Mountains were simply masses of red volcanic rock, and possessed not the slightest sign of vegetation. The Tongue River Valley was barren of grass, the banks of the stream were heavily timbered, and the bottoms were covered with prickly pear, sage brush, and grease wood. Upon the reception of this report I ordered the rations reduced to less than one-half, and decided that having seen neither Indians nor recent signs of any in this portion of the country, and having fully satisfied myself that General Connor had not gone to Panther Mountains, and without hauling corn for his stock could not pass down the valley of Tongue River, it was my best policy to move toward rations, keeping the country in direction of Tongue River as thoroughly scouted as possible for the purpose of finding him or any of his scouting parties who might be in search of my command.

Whilst in the act of communicating my intentions to Colonel Walker, Sixteenth Kansas, then at my headquarters, a report was brought in that the Indians had attacked the herders herding stock a mile distant from camp and had driven off some of the animals. I immediately started in person to satisfy myself of the correctness of the report, as hitherto there had been no sign of Indians seen in this vicinity. On arriving near the scene of the attack I discovered the Indians to be in force, numbering some 400 or 500, and immediately ordered out the entire command, save sufficient to guard camp, to re-enforce the small party already in pursuit. The advance engaged the Indians and succeeded in recapturing most of the captured stock. Captain Rowland, Second Missouri Light Artillery, with a party of seven men, reached the ground first and pressed the Indians closely, killing a number of them. Whilst pursuing one of these detached parties another band of about forty-five suddenly dashed upon them from a ravine to their right, and killed or mortally wounded all of the party, with the exception of Captain Rowland himself. The main body of the command reaching the scene of action, the Indians fell back out of sight more rapidly than with our broken-down horses we could pursue. The result was a loss of 4 men killed and 2 mortally wounded. I estimated the damage done the Indians to be twenty-five killed and a very large number wounded. We also captured some ponies and killed a great many. The greatest bodies seen were in the direction of the Little Missouri River, and the most of them retreated along our trail through the "Bad Lands," which led me to believe that they had come from that direction. During the afternoon a column of smoke was seen distinctly rising toward the mouth of Powder River. Knowing that there were hostile Indians in my neighborhood I felt satisfied there was a large body of warriors or a village on the Yellowstone. The smoke was evidently a signal made by Indians, or else General Connor, unable to get down the Tongue River Valley on account of its barrenness, had availed himself of the fertile valley of the Big Horn to reach the Yellowstone, and following it down was awaiting me at or near the mouth of Powder River, in the meanwhile endeavoring to attract my attention by signal-fires. Either case being true, it was, in my opinion, the proper course for me to pursue to move in that direction. In addition to this I deemed it possible that on reaching the Yellowstone game would be plenty, and with sufficient buffalo I could feed my command whilst searching for General Connor along Tongue River.

I therefore, on the morning of the 2d of August [September], crossed to the west bank of the river and moved down, following in the trail of Colonel Walker, Sixteenth Kansas (who had been in my immediate vicinity since first striking my trail), who had decided to try the Yellowstone before turning back, although his rations were as nearly depleted as my own. His train, however, consisted entirely of pack animals; hence its mobility much exceeded mine, which was almost entirely composed of six-mule army wagons. The strip of grass in the camp which we had left extended about four or five miles, from which time we saw no more vegetation beyond cottonwood, willow, sage brush, grease wood, and prickly pear. After marching twenty-five miles through heat and dust, camped with nothing but cottonwood bark for forage, which in its unfrosted condition had an injurious effect upon the animals.

Colonel Walker camped ahead of my command about three miles, where the bluffs almost closed together. Here the game trails all bore up and over the cliffs, which were wholly impassable for horsemen. On examination it was discovered that at the distance of about eight miles farther down the stream its waters sunk into the sand and the bed was comparatively dry. The Indian trails here scattered and entered the river among its quicksands, in which our horses could not for an instant maintain control of themselves. During the night a terrible storm set in, a kind of storm that is liable to sweep over this country in any season, during which the temperature of the atmosphere suddenly changed from intense heat to extreme cold. The want of nourishing forage, the exhaustion incident to the intense heat of the day’s march, coupled with effects of the storm, proved fatal to a large number of horses. I now very reluctantly turned back, on the 3d, and moved to the first point where sufficient grass could be obtained for my dying stock. During the march down the river and back to grass 225 horses and mules died from excessive heat, exhaustion, starvation, and extreme cold, and in consequence a number of wagons had to be destroyed, together with a considerable amount of now no longer needed quartermaster’s stores. On the day following I moved camp about a mile and a half for grass, into the edge of a strip of timber which skirted the river. During the afternoon a detachment of the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, who were sent to the camp of the previous day to more completely destroy the abandoned property, were attacked by a force of about seventy-five Indians, who were repulsed, with the loss of one killed. Upon being pursued they retreated down the river.

On the following morning, when the command was preparing and almost ready to move, Indians were discovered in large numbers in the hills to the west, moving through the gulches to the southward. It soon became evident that they were endeavoring to cut off some of my teamsters who were gathering up straggling mules. A well-directed volley from the train emptied some few saddles and caused the balance to make a retrograde movement as soon as they could secure their fallen braves. Larger detached parties showed themselves on the adjacent hills, and upon advancing the command in their direction I discovered that there were many hundreds in the ravines beyond who had until then not shown themselves. Whilst in person on the west side of camp I discovered that large bodies were moving up the valley toward the south, and also that there was a very considerable force on the east bank of the river. Captain Boardman, with his company (M, Second Missouri Artillery), had been stationed in the woods along the bank of the river and covered the rear of the camp, whilst the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry occupied the right flank, the line of the Second Missouri Artillery extending to the corral of the commissary train on the left, with parts of three companies deployed from the train to the woods. The company teams of the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry were formed in line perpendicular to the left of this regiment and extended from the section of artillery to the woods. The Indians made efforts to attract small parties of men from camp in pursuit of bands of from 10 to 100 of their numbers, repeatedly charging up within 250 yards and rapidly moving away again. Frequent attempts were also made by them to get at the horses of the men who were on foot in skirmish line, but the excellence of the Spencer arm and the promptness of the men, who gallantly met and repulsed them, though frequently outnumbered twenty to one, defeated their attempts in this quarter. In this desultory manner the engagement continued for some three hours, until a dash was made upon a detachment of the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, who without orders had crossed the river. When attacked they very improperly turned to gain shelter, but the superior condition of the Indians' horses enabled them to overtake the broken-down horses on which they were mounted.

The carbine is an unwieldy arm to handle when on horseback, and cannot at close quarters compete with a well-handled pistol, but against bows and arrows in the hands of men who can use them with the most surprising rapidity they are entirely useless. This detachment was driven into the river, with the loss of 2 men killed and 2 wounded. They only escaped annihilation by the prompt action of Captain Boardman, who moved a portion of his company to their support, and by well-directed volleys drove the Indians back with heavy loss. The number of Indians in this charge could not have been less than 1,000. All the hill-tops, divides, and margins of the nearest bluffs were literally covered with Indians, whose savage yelling was distinctly heard above the noise of the immediate conflict. On one hill a large number of them had collected; a red flag and the constant use of their signal glasses (a piece of looking-glass flashed in the sun) denoted it to be their headquarters. I opened with shell upon this particular spot, and although not doing any serious damage caused the evacuation of this and all points within the range of my guns and a cessation of attack on the part of the Indians, most of whom retired out of sight and could not be induced to remain within reach of any of the detachments sent in pursuit. Finding myself unable with my exhausted and broken-down stock to gain any adequate advantage by remaining longer in this position, I moved up the river to the first spot at which I could find grass, a distance of twelve miles. After getting into camp a signal station was established on a high bluff near camp overlooking the surrounding country, and from it I was in constant receipt of information of the movements of a small band, probably twenty-five in all, who were following in my trail. They made no attempt at approaching nearer than a mile and a half, and warily avoided attack by small detachments sent after them.
Moving at the rate of from eight to twelve miles per day, I continued up the river, having to cross it occasionally to avoid the bluffs whose bases sometimes were washed by the stream, and seeing nothing more of the Indians until September 8, when Colonel Walker, Sixteenth Kansas, who was in my advance about three or four miles, sent back a courier, informing me that he was attacked by between 3,000 and 4,000 Indians, who were driving him back. I was crossing my train over the river at the time, and ordering it moved up out of the timber and corralled I pushed on with one battalion of the Second Missouri Artillery, leaving the balance of this regiment to guard the train, and sent the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry to skirmish through the woods along the river-bank to drive out a body of Indians who were posted in the timber. I also moved the section of artillery up to the front and opened upon a large force in a ravine, who were apparently preparing to take in flank a skirmish line of the Sixteenth Kansas. My pioneer company (Captain Boardman's company, M, Second Missouri Artillery) had been marching with the Sixteenth Kansas, and in conjunction with them constructing roads. When the attack was made it had been judiciously dismounted and deployed as skirmishers upon the right flank of Colonel Walker's line, and with the Spencer carbine was making its way some hundreds of yards in advance of all others, clearing the front entirely of Indians, who turned their attention to the other and more poorly armed troops, whose rapid evolutions had damaged much of their ammunition and were now firing but little. Driving the Indians from a well-selected position for attack, I found them exerting but little of the energy they had displayed on the 5th instant, as they gave way before every attack made on them boldly by parties of even half a dozen men. On a divide across the river a number of squaws were seen, and soon almost all who had been driven from the bottom lands joined them, to the number of about 1,200 or 1,500. I sent a detachment of men to disperse them, who ascended the steep side of the divide with much difficulty, skirmishing as they went. They were successful in scattering this large force without the loss of a man. A number of Indians were seen to fall. The bodies of the fallen were almost invariably carried off by the living warriors when it was possible for them to do so. The conformation of the ground necessitated crossing the river at this point before proceeding farther, and to prevent this a large force had gathered in the timber as if to dispute our passage. I directed the fire of my rifled pieces among them and killed a number as they endeavored to escape across the river, having an enfilade fire on them whilst they were huddled together at the various gulches running through the bank to the water. Crossing to the opposite side of the river, camp was formed of both commands together.

After getting into camp a storm blew up, which grew worse as night came on and finally became terrific in its fury. From rain it turned to hail, then rained again, then in succession snowed and sleeted, yet freezing all night long. My picket officers were forced to march their men in circles at the reserve posts to prevent freezing, as fires were not admissible. Nothing could be done to protect the stock from the peltings of this terrible storm, and numbers of them died during the night. When daylight dawned it had not abated in the least, and owing to the unsheltered position of my camp was especially severe on the men as well as the stock, so much so that I determined to move to some point within a few miles where I could secure shelter in heavy timber to save the remnant of my rapidly failing animals. I moved two miles and a half, marking my trail with dead and dying horses and mules. Arriving at a suitable place I camped, and by surrounding the stock with huge log fires and feeding them on cottonwood boughs and a little grass, decreased in a measure the rate of loss. My stock at this time had been about sixty days without grain, with nothing but grass and cottonwood to live on. During the thirty-six hours the storm prevailed 414 of my animals perished at the picket ropes or along the road between the camps. This loss necessitated the destruction of wagons, cavalry equipments, harness, and all tools and implements not absolutely essential to the command, and which could be taken no farther.

On the 10th, the storm having cleared away, my first move was to cross the river, which was necessary, as the impending bluffs immediately above formed the river bank. This move I was compelled to make under cover of my artillery, owing to the fact that the Indians had, vulture-like, hovered around my exhausted and starving command, and as soon as preparations were made to move, knowing what the route must be, had made a detour around to a position on the bluffs in our rear, preparatory to dashing down and harassing the rear of the column, which they did so soon as the command began its movements, but having no taste for the shells that were generously thrown amongst them, soon retired to their of late respectful distance beyond range. I crossed above the mouth of Little Powder River and moved up the east bank, passing over the ground from which a large Indian village of from 1,500 to 2,000 lodges had recently moved. My guides pronounced them to have been Sioux, Cheyennes, and Arapahoes. So short a time had elapsed since their removal I am satisfied that had not my command been in its improvident condition of starvation and exhaustion they could have been overtaken and destroyed. But at this particular juncture my command had been en route on this campaign seventy-two days, subsisting this length of time on sixty days' rations, of which, at the very lowest estimate, 20 per cent, had been destroyed unavoidably through unloading and reloading wagons at the crossings of the numerous rivers, creeks, and gulches. Sixty days' rations being the amount started with, in accordance with General Connor's orders, deducting the percentage of loss added to the difference in number of days already in excess of the limited sixty, it is easy to sum up the condition of the men of my command, while the animals of the command were in a condition even worse than the men, literally starving in a country where grass grew and water run.

Fatigue and starvation had done its work on both men and animals, in so much they were unfit to pursue with vigor the savage foe that circled around their starving way through this desert whose oases were but inviting delusions, for however pleasing to the wearied eye were the green dresses of the prickly pear and the sage brush, they were bitter mockery to the other senses, for they contained no life-giving essence for man or beast. Certes starving soldiers might well wonder why there was no provisions made for such contingencies; why old Indian fighters had not, with their knowledge, planned a more consistent campaign; created depots here and hunted Indians there; not had a command starving here, unfit to cope with the Indians everywhere around them, and the supplies they needed so much away no one knew where, at least where neither Indians come nor they could compass.

The command by this time was reduced to less than quarter rations, and were lowered to the necessity of eating their horses and mules to sustain life. Indians were occasionally still seen in large numbers on all sides beyond the range of our guns. They but once showed a disposition to fight, when they were repulsed, with a loss of several killed and wounded. After this last repulse they disappeared from my vicinity, and were seen no more. Continuing up the river we were compelled to cross and recross it, through quicksands and muddy banks, frequently as often as fifteen times a day, camping in the timber along the banks of the stream, which afforded sufficient grass for the remainder of my animals. During the continuance of the march no signs of Indians were seen save camping places a month or more old.

On the 13th of September a courier party of two soldiers and two Pawnee Indians, sent to me with dispatches by General Connor, arrived in my camp. They had left their camp the previous morning and had traveled across to Powder River, and striking my trail near one of my old camping grounds, had followed it up, overtaking my command in the afternoon. They reported the country they had passed over to be positively impassable for trains of any kind. General Connor's dispatch directed me to cross over to Tongue River, where his command was lying, or to push up Powder River to Fort Connor (now called Reno, the existence of which I then for the first time learned) for supplies, leaving it discretionary with me which I should do. The evidence of my scouting and hunting parties, together with that of the courier party, satisfied me of the impracticability of any attempt at getting to Tongue River; and, difficult as the way was up Powder River, growing worse as we got deeper into the gorges of the mountains, I deemed following a water-course better policy than risking the loss of animals and men, now so much weakened by starvation and privation, in attempts at crossing the rugged Powder Mountains, a distance of thirty or more miles, without water or grass. At this time, from the want of proper food, sufficient clothing, and the foot-soreness and enervation consequent on the hardships and fatigues of this already lengthy and arduous campaign, the command had become so reduced that a march of fifteen miles a day was a most severe task for them.

On the morning of the 14th I sent Lieutenant Jones, Second Missouri Artillery, with a detachment of men, to accompany General Connor's party on their return to his camp, with a dispatch setting forth my whereabouts and present condition. I continued moving up the river, the road growing worse as we advanced, yet the cheering knowledge that rations were near at hand, far nearer than distant Laramie, had infused new life into the men, who now cheerfully overcame the difficulties besetting every step of our path—difficulties that but a short time before appeared impossibilities.

On the 17th I sent Lieutenant Schmitten and an escort with dispatches to the commandant of the post at Fort Connor (Reno), stating the condition and locale of my command, requesting him to send rations to meet me as soon as possible. On the 19th I ordered Colonel Wells, Twelfth Missouri Calvary, to move to Fort Connor (Reno) with all dismounted men able to march and all mounted men save 150, which I retained to guard the trains, as the retention of the entire command only delayed a majority from sooner reaching rations, which they could speedily do by following Indian trails, whilst their presence added nothing to the mobility of the trains. During the afternoon Lieutenant Schmitten, returning, met this part of the command, and after supplying their wants pushed on and reached me a few hours later. On the following day I reached Fort Connor (Reno) and camped four miles south to wait for General Connor, who had not yet arrived. Here I very naturally expected to find quartermaster's supplies for my shoeless and ragged command, but no wise nor humane foresight had placed them here. It is true the men were content to once more find themselves where gaunt starvation did not stare them in the face, but their uniforms were worn and tattered and their rags were poor barriers to keep out the cold, chilling winds that sweep this country in the fall, whilst shoes to the majority were as dreams of past luxuries with no seeming future, for no generous, provident post was this to cover their bleeding, cactus-swollen feet. Up to this period, since leaving Omaha City, I had marched my command a distance of largely over 1,000 miles, through a country almost unknown and unexplored, encountering storms as fierce in their fury as the merciless savage who is alone fit to inhabit this almost sterile waste. Yet was the sufferings of the command not at an end, for they must march to other posts ere their crying wants could be supplied.

Here also to all intents and purposes ended the campaign of the right column of the so-called Powder River Indian Expedition. In its march it had traversed nearly or quite 1,200 miles through a country almost entirely unknown to white men, in part nothing better than a desert and barren waste away from the banks of the occasional streams that course through it toward the Missouri. Eighty-two days was this column struggling and fighting its way to this point, making its own roads through valleys and over mountains; encountering furious storms deadly in effect; finding and severely punishing a wary savage foe; the greater part of the time suffering the torments of starvation. Eighty-two days had they subsisted on sixty days' rations which had naturally lost 20 per cent. of their original proportion. The country passed over in the route traveled, being mostly a waste of "Bad Lands," is destitute of wild game, hence no addition from this source could be made to husband the rations whilst they run their natural course nor substituted for them when exhausted. No intermediate depots of supplies had been established on our route, without which no command can be successful in campaigning in this country against this kind of an enemy. I had my trains been burdened with supplies of this nature at the starting they must have been destroyed at an early day in the campaign, owing to the nature of the expedition and the peculiar topography of this hitherto unknown country. On the 23d General Connor arrived with his command. On the 25th I received orders to move on the following morning to Laramie. The first day out I marched but ten miles, when I encamped to await for a train of forty wagons which General Connor had ordered to report to me to transport my foot-sore men, of which I had some 400 or more. On the 4th of October I reached Fort Laramie, and camped a little below it, on Laramie River.

Whilst camped here an occurrence took place, passing strange, yet most true, which as an integral part of the closing history of the command must have full relation. Some thirty-six hours after reaching this post a fatigue detail of 400 men was ordered from the Second Missouri Light Artillery to work on the earth-works being thrown up around the place. If the spirit that prompted the detail expected to feast its purposes through insubordination or rebellion it was egregiously disappointed. What a sight was here. Four hundred ragged, barefooted men, emaciated with fatigue and the dangers of a four months' campaign, who had met and worsted an enemy on three several occasions, marched up in the face of a garrison of 2,000 or more well-appointed idle troops to work as actors, while these idle troops played the audience. Nobly and without a murmur of discontent did these ragged, war-worn veterans respond to orders, carrying the lesson to the hearts of those who chose to view them that they had learned a soldier's first duty was to obey and could be as successful in this as they had been during their late campaign. The total absence of tools naturally caused some speculation as to the cause of the detail. As the mystery was transparent, it is well enough to add that the ragged and barefooted veterans spent the allotted time at the designated place, tools or no tools.

The loss of my command in the several engagements with the Indians was as follows: Second Missouri Light Artillery, 9 killed, 1 missing, 1 officer wounded; Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, 3 killed, 1 missing. I estimate the loss of the Indians from 200 to 500 killed and wounded, and a large number of ponies killed and captured. October 7, I received an order dissolving the Powder River Indian Expedition, so-called, and immediately issued an order relinquishing command of the Eastern Division and directing the commanding officer Twelfth Missouri Cavalry to report to Brevet Major-General Wheaton, commanding District of Nebraska, holding my own regiment subject to subsequent orders.

Before closing my report I desire to mention certain officers of my command whose gallantry entitles them to such notice: Capt. E. S. Rowland, Second Missouri Light Artillery, who with a detachment of but seven men pursued and fought a band of Indians numbering more than fifty, who, after all his men were either killed or wounded, single-handed fought and killed a number of his savage enemies. I would respectfully request that he be recommended for a brevet rank of major. Capt. N. Boardman, Second Missouri Light Artillery, to whose skill the prompt construction of crossings of gulches, creeks, and rivers is due, and whose gallant management of his company in the engagements of the 5th and 8th of September marked him as a reliable officer deserving of more than ordinary notice. I would most respectfully request that he be recommended for the rank of brevet major. Of First Lieut. A. S. Hoagland, Second Missouri Light Artillery, in whose immediate charge were the commissary and quartermaster trains, for whose energetic management and prompt protection against pilferings from them by famished, hungry men at a time when rations were in a most reduced condition, I cannot speak too highly. His indefatigable labors contributed greatly to the rapidity of our movements and caused the saving of much Government property that would otherwise have been lost or destroyed. I would respectfully request that he be brevetted captain.

Of the members of my staff all deserve the highest praise, especially Lieut. George E. Thorne, acting assistant quartermaster and acting commissary of subsistence; Lieut. Fred. Amsden, Signal Corps, U. S. Army; Capt. J. W. MacMurray, First Missouri Light Artillery, and Mr. L. G. Bennett, civil engineer, acting engineer of my brigade. Lieutenant Thorne, my quartermaster, is entitled to much credit for industry displayed in the exceedingly hurried organization of the trains for the expedition, as well as for their management during the arduous campaign of months under the most trying circumstances. Lieut. Fred. Amsden, Signal Corps, U. S. Army, I found to be a courteous young officer ever ready for the performance of any duty and possessing the intelligence and experience necessary to do it well. I would respectfully recommend him for the brevet rank of captain. To the untiring energy and devotion to his profession of Mr. L. G. Bennett, my engineer officer, is due the accurate record of the valuable information of the region passed over. Constantly moving, he by observation made himself thoroughly familiar with the topography of the country, and gleaned much in relation to the mineralogy along the route. Capt. J. W. MacMurray, First Missouri Light Artillery, was detached from duty as inspector of artillery, Department of the Missouri, at my request and accompanied me as acting aide-de-camp. He is an officer of much experience and intelligence, and his active assistance was at all times of special advantage. I would earnestly request that he be recommended for promotion to the brevet rank of major.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. COLE,

General U. S. Grant,
Washington City, D. C.

Hdqrs. Eastern Division, Indian Expedition,
Near Fort Connor, Dak. Ter., September 25, 1865.

General: I have the honor to state that in compliance with telegraphic orders received from you I moved my command from Omaha, Nebr. Ter., on the 1st of July, marching by the Fort Kearny road as far as Columbus, at which point our trail diverged from the Platte River to the valley of the Loup Fork. Following the general course of the Loup and camping generally on its banks, my command arrived at its head on the 26th. Water, wood, and grass in abundance were found until within a few days' march of the head of the stream, when they became scarce and finally gave out. Much of the road was over sandy bottoms and hills, which made the labor heavy on the rear part of my train. From the Loup the route lay across the "sand hills" to the Niobrara River, thence up Antelope Creek and down the Wounded Knee to White River. Through the sand hills the road was good in the valleys and very bad on the ridges which intervened. Large lakes and small streams of excellent water were numerous. Good grass in great abundance filled the valleys. From the Niobrara to White Earth River there was wood and water plenty, except at head of Antelope Creek, but scarcely sufficient grass anywhere to subsist our animals. At White Earth River a trail a few days old of a small party of Indians, the first seen on the march, was discovered. From this point I followed General Harney's trail of 1855 through the Bad Lands, camping at Ash Spring one night, to head of Bear Creek; thence, leaving the trail to the right, moved direct to the South Fork of the Cheyenne River, arriving on the 8th day of August. Grass was in abundance, of poor quality, and the water somewhat impregnated with alkali. In crossing the Bad Lands many of my animals were rendered foot-sore from traveling over the sharp-edged fragments of feldspar with which the region abounds. On the 9th some hours were spent in drawing my train up the high bluffs, and on the 10th I moved toward Bear Butte, arriving on the 14th near its base and camping on South Fork of Bear Butte Creek. My route lay across a number of tributaries of the Cheyenne River and partly up their valleys, and, with the exception of some very bluffy divides, was good. None of the streams crossed were running; a few had water standing in holes, but in the beds of most of them wells had to be dug and the animals scantily watered with buckets. Grass was good but very scarce, and wood in quantities. At the base of Bear Butte we found wood, water, and grass in abundance, and of excellent quality. From here I moved round by the north of the butte; thence westward to near Crow's Peak of the Black Hills, camping on White Wood Creek and the Red Water River, tributaries of the North Fork of Cheyenne River, with sufficient grass and excellent wood and water; thence to the North Cheyenne, camping one night on Pine Creek, where Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, with an escort, overtook my command. From here moved to the Little Missouri River, down which I continued for three days, finding almost no grass until the last day, when I camped, with large quantities of the best kind. On the Cheyenne and Little Missouri Rivers the water was good; at all other places where we camped it was very poor. Along the valleys of the Little Missouri River fresh trails of a number of small parties of Indians and older trails of larger ones were seen.

After spending a day in resting and feeding my animals I moved westward August 26 to Box Elder Creek; thence up and to the head of one of its branches, finding little grass but sufficient water standing in holes. From this camp I attempted to reach Powder River on the 28th, but after a march of about thirty miles over a road partly excellent, mostly very hilly and rough, I found myself confronted by an impassable strip of country some miles in width intervening between my column and the river. Under a precipice and 100 feet below lay a rugged barren, traversed in every direction by deep ravines and gulches impracticable for horsemen, with no apparent trail or passage through it. Night and a storm were close at hand, and I moved to my right in search of water, and finding a small hole containing insufficient for my men on the head of O'Fallon's Creek, camped, without water or grass for the animals. Next day, by cutting a road through ravines and along the sides of hills and stationing men with ropes to each of the wagons, I was enabled to get the train along three miles, and leaving it with a guard drove the mules down to the river for water. The troops got through and were camped on the banks of the Powder River, where the train was brought in the next day.

On the 30th I sent Lieutenant Hoagland, Second Missouri Light Artillery, with my best guide and twenty men, to Tongue River and Panther Mountains, in search of your command and the base of supplies to be established there, as you informed me in your letter of instruction of July 4, and as marked on your map sent to me by special messenger and received on the Loup. They returned September 1, after an absence of three days, and reported that they had traveled fifty miles directly west, over a country impassable with my trains, crossing thirty-five miles from my camp on Powder River the bed of a stream nearly as large as the Powder River, with an equally extensive valley, and fifteen miles farther west ascended the side of a mountain, passed it to the west side into the valley of a smaller stream, all of these agreeing precisely with Tongue River, Panther Mountains, and Rosebud Creek as laid down on your map. They reported Tongue River where they struck it to contain an abundance of water, but not running, but they thought it to be running at some distance above. In the valleys and on Panther Mountains they found barely enough grass to forage their own horses. They found no base of supplies nor indications of any one having been there before them. Immediately on their return the command was put on less than half rations. Late in the afternoon a band of about 300 Indians attacked our horse guards, who were grazing the horses about two miles from camp, and succeeded in running off twelve horses. Parties were immediately sent in pursuit, who followed them until after dark, and the Indians dispersing in every direction among the hills they returned. In the running fight my loss was 4 killed and 2 wounded (since died). The Indian loss was much greater. Having for several days observed a large column of smoke.
in the direction of the Yellowstone, and supposing it to be either your command or a large Indian village, I determined to move down Powder River to it. On the 2d instant I moved twenty-four miles and camped without grass, and on examination found the country totally impassable a few miles below. In the night a cold wind-storm came up, and I decided to move back to grass, which I did on the next day, marching seventeen miles before I found a sufficient quantity for the command. This march and storm cost my command 225 animals. The day following camp was changed for grass, moving about two miles.

In the afternoon a party of the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, who were in the camp of the previous day, were attacked by a small band of Indians, who were repulsed and pursued down the river ten miles. Next morning after daybreak the camp was attacked by a large body of Indians, estimated to be about 3,000 strong. After five hours' fighting they were repulsed and scattered among the hills, where it was impossible, in the exhausted condition of my horses, to follow them. I continued moving up Powder River, camping wherever grass could be found, recuperating and resting the animals by short marches. On the 8th, whilst crossing the river, a messenger from Colonel Walker, commanding Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, who was about three miles in advance, reported that he was attacked by between 3,000 and 4,000 Indians, who were driving him back. I immediately corralled my train and pushed forward with my command to his assistance. We drove and scattered the Indians among the hills and camped on the opposite bank of the river for the night, expecting to be again attacked. During the night a storm of sleet, snow, and rain came up, which continued without abatement for thirty-six hours. On the 9th moved camp into a heavy piece of timber, hoping by surrounding them with fires to save my stock, which in their famished condition suffered most severely. My stock at this time had been about sixty days without grain, and had nothing but grass and cottonwood to live upon for that length of time. In the thirty-six hours the storm continued 414 animals died at the picket ropes or on the road between the camps. This necessitated the destruction of wagons, cavalry equipments, a large quantity of harness, and all tools and implements not absolutely essential to the command and which could be taken no farther. On the 10th, the storm having cleared away, I crossed the river above the mouth of Little Powder River and moved up the east bank, passing over the ground from which a large Indian village of from 1,500 to 2,000 lodges had moved very recently. Our guides pronounced them to have been Sioux, Cheyennes, and Arapahoes. So short a time had elapsed since they left I am satisfied that had my command had rations they could have been overtaken and the village destroyed. The command by this time were reduced to less than one-quarter rations and were eating their horses and mules. After the 15th they lived almost entirely on horses and mules until the night of the 19th, when rations reached me from Fort Connor.

The Indians were still seen in large numbers on all sides beyond range, and but once showing a disposition to fight us, when they were repulsed, with a loss of several killed. We continued our march up the river, crossing and recrossing a number of times, passing the mouth of Clear Fork on the 14th instant and Sandy Fork on the 16th instant. On the 15th a messenger and three men arrived with a dispatch from you, and on the following morning I sent him back with Lieutenant Jones, Second Missouri Light Artillery, and fifteen men mounted on my best horses, to you, and continued my march to Fort Connor, where
I arrived with my trains on the 20th instant. My loss in the several engagements with the Indians is as follows: Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, 3 killed, 1 missing; Second Missouri Light Artillery, 5 killed, 1 officer slightly wounded, 4 men wounded (3 since died), 1 missing. I estimate the loss of the Indians at from 200 to 500 killed and wounded and a large number of ponies killed and captured. I am now encamped about two miles below Fort Connors, with three-fourths of my command dismounted. Most of my men are nearly barefooted and all are suffering for clothing, and unless supplied soon must feel most severely the approaching fall storms. My animals are rapidly losing flesh and strength, as the grass since the frosts have struck it seems worthless to do them any good. Since leaving Omaha I have marched my command about 1,050 miles, over a country mostly unknown and unexplored.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. COLE

Brig. Gen. P. E. CONNOR,

Commanding District of the Plains.

---

No. 3.

HEADQUARTERS TWELFTH MISSOURI CAVALRY,

Fort Connor, Powder River, September 20, 1865.

LIEUTENANT: In obedience to orders of Colonel Cole, commanding Eastern Division, Indian Expedition, directing me to forward this afternoon a statement of the operations of my regiment during the expedition, I have the honor to transmit the following:

From the 1st of July, the date on which the command moved out from Omaha, until the present I have marched with and under the immediate orders of the colonel commanding, having in no instance been detached from the command. My report can, therefore, simply comprehend the skirmishes in which the regiment has been engaged with the Indians, and our losses in men and property, resulting from casualties and the privations of the march. On the 1st of September, the command being on the east side of Powder River, a portion of one company met a party of Indians about four miles from camp on our back trail. But little firing was done. The Indians scattered and our men did not pursue, owing to the inferiority of our horses. The officer reports one Indian shot and having fallen from his horse. On the same day the Second Missouri Artillery encountered the Indians on the opposite side of the river. On the 4th of September the Indians attacked a lieutenant and fourteen men, who had been sent to the camp of the previous day on Powder River, and followed him to the command. My whole regiment was engaged in skirmishing this day, in front, in rear, and on our flank, yet I would not judge there were over 150 Indians at this time in the whole party, their manner of fighting and irregular movements making it very difficult to judge. On the following morning the Indians appeared on the bluffs in front and rear, and in the valley on both flanks of the camp. An irregular skirmishing was kept up for two or three hours before the command moved out, and the artillery was brought to bear upon some points occupied by the enemy. Their number at this time was variously estimated at from 500 to 2,000 men. We lost 2 men killed and had 1 man severely wounded. I have no satisfactory evidence that over 4 or 5 Indians were killed by my command. Major Landgraeber, Second Missouri Artillery, in command of the rear guard, had a brisk engagement after the troops had vacated the camp, and I believe some 7 or 8 Indians were left dead on the ground. On the 7th of September a party of our hunters met about thirty or forty Indians. One of our men was killed and two Indians left dead on the ground in the hands of our men, and another, believed to be mortally wounded, was carried off by his party. The advance encountered the Indians in considerable numbers on the 8th of September, but I was this day in the rear in charge of the train, and my men were not engaged. On the 10th the Indians nearly enveloped the camp as the command moved out, and followed on our flank and rear until about noon. But little was accomplished, however, and much useless firing was done. The Indians had this day four or five good muskets. One of our men was slightly wounded and three Indians were shot, but carried off by their comrades. Our total loss from the 1st is 3 men killed and 1 man missing. That of the enemy, as far as I know, 11 Indians killed. The loss of stock in my regiment has been severe, amounting to 150 horses and 102 mules died, or abandoned and shot. We have lost none by the Indians. I have still on hand 131 horses in poor condition and 19 six-mule teams in good condition.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

OLIVER WELLS,

Colonel, Commanding Twelfth Missouri Cavalry.

Lieut. WILLIAM BRETHOLD,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 4.

HDQRS. SECOND BATT., SECOND MISSOURI LIGHT ARTY.,

In the Field, near Fort Connor, Dak. Ter., September 20, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that, in compliance with Special Orders, No. —, headquarters Eastern Division, Indian Expedition, dated July 12, 1865, I assumed command of the Second Battalion, Second Missouri Light Artillery, acting as cavalry, and consisting of Batteries B, C, E, and M of said regiment, and have marched from the Loup Fork River, Nebr. Ter., through Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana, to this point on Powder River, Dak. Ter., a distance of nearly 1,200 miles, and have participated in the following engagements, viz: First, September 1, on Powder River, in which part of my command was engaged; second, on the evening of the 4th of September; third, on the morning of the 5th, when we were again attacked by the Indians and fought them three hours, at which time the command was ordered to march. My battalion, being detailed as rear guard, succeeded in protecting the train, and fighting the entire force of Indians for four hours, killing many and wounding many more, who succeeded in making their escape. Among the killed was one Indian chief. As soon as he was killed the fighting ceased on the part of the Indians. Lieut. H. L. Kelley, of Battery B, being wounded during the engagement was the only casualty on our side. On the afternoon of the 8th September we were again engaged five hours by a superior force, supposed to have been near 3,000 or 4,000; we were again victorious and went into camp near the battle-field. During the night the weather suddenly changed and a rain set in and turned very cold and chilled and killed more than half the stock of my command. It reduced my stock so much that I was forced to abandon and destroy a quantity of ordnance stores and quartermaster's property, such as saddles, bridles, men's clothing, officers' trunks, for want of transportation. The 20th of September arrived at the fort, having lost nearly all my stock and much of my quartermaster's property and ordnance stores. The health of my command has been generally good, except suffering for the want of proper food and clothing. I herewith inclose the official reports of commanding officers of batteries, showing the loss of property and giving an account of the operations of their respective companies.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLEM. LANDGRAEBER,
Col. N. COLE,
Commanding Eastern Division, Indian Expedition.

No. 5.

Report of Capt. Samuel Flagg, Battery B, Second Missouri Light Artillery, commanding Battery B.

HDQRS. BATTERY B, SECOND MISSOURI LIGHT ARTY.,
In the Field, near Fort Connor, September 20, 1865.

Battery B, mounted and equipped as cavalry, 135 commissioned officers and enlisted men strong, with 109 horses and 13 mules, forming part of an expedition under command of Col. Nelson Cole, left Omaha City July 1, 1865, marching in a northwest direction. Private William Dunbar deserted July 3, 1865. Private James Craig deserted July 13, stealing two horses fully equipped. On the night of July 14, while camped on the bank of Loup Fork, by some cause unknown a general stampede occurred. Recovered all our horses except eight. On the 20th of same month in another stampede lost five horses. August 8, left two horses, unfit for traveling, on the road. On the 10th of same month left one crippled mare. August 20, Private J. Clark died in hospital, of scurvy; 25th of same month Private Christian Senft died of same disease. In the evening of September 1, while camped near Powder River, the band was attacked by a band of 200 or 300 hostile Indians. Next day while marching down Powder River, the stock having suffered much from want of forage, the company lost 9 horses and 3 mules. September 3, burned all ordnance and quartermaster's stores that could be spared, being unable to carry it for want of transportation. September 4, Private H. Grote died of scurvy. In the evening of same day were attacked by some 700 or 800 Indians. In the morning of September 5 were attacked by about 900 Indians of different tribes, who, after some severe fighting, were repulsed, Second Lieut. H. L. Kelley being slightly wounded. During the night of September 8 lost 30 head of horses and 7 mules from cold. On the 9th were obliged to burn tents, men's clothing, officers' transportation, papers, desk, &c., and ordnance stores, for want of transportation. On the 8th, in a bend of Powder River.
River, were attacked by a band of from 2,000 to 3,000 Indians, who were repulsed, with heavy loss. On the 11th received twenty-four head of horses of Company K, out of which number lost ten. Some were butchered, rations being very low. On the 16th of September Private F. Hacke was accidentally shot. In the evening of September 19 the company arrived at Fort Connor. Besides burning quartermaster's stores, burned one wagon and abandoned another at Little Powder River, it being worn out and broken.

I am, respectfully,

SAML. FLAGG,

Captain, Second Missouri Light Artillery, Comdg. Battery B.

No. 6.

Office Company C, SECOND MISSOURI ARTILLERY,

In the Field, Powder River, Dak. Ter., September 30, 1865.

COLONEL: I have to report that seven U. S. horses were left on the road by exhaustion near Omaha, Nebr. Ter., on the 3d day of July, and four horses were strayed by a stampede caused on the 15th of July. Three horses strayed from camp on the 17th of July. Private Nicolas Thomason, with one horse and equipment, was missing while detailed on flanking duty and was supposed captured by Indians on the 19th day of July. One horse was left on the road by exhaustion on the 1st of August. One horse left by exhaustion on the 4th and one on the 5th day of August. Three horses exhausted and left on the 13th; one on the 17th and one on the 18th of August. Four horses exhausted on the 23d of August. Eight horses exhausted on the 28th day of August. Ten horses lost by exhaustion on the 4th of September. Twenty three horses lost by exhaustion through cold weather and starvation on the 9th day of September, 1865, and eight U. S. horses were lost during the cold weather in September through exhaustion besides the above specified, of which I cannot give a correct date for the present. In all I have lost during the expedition from the 1st day of July, 1865, to the present date the number of seventy-seven U. S. horses. The marches and other matters of importance connected with the expedition, together with the several engagements with hostile Indians and the sufferings of my men for want of clothing and provisions, I am at present not able to report, as most of my reports and papers were destroyed for want of transportation.

WM. RINNE,

Col. N. COLE,

Commanding Second Regiment Missouri Artillery Volunteers.

No. 7.

Camp, in the Field,

Near Fort Connor, September 20, 1865.

Battery E, Second Missouri Light Artillery, received orders at Little Rock, Ark., to proceed to Saint Louis, Mo., and report to headquarters Department of the Missouri June 3, 1865. Left Little Rock June 5, 1865, by railroad for Devall's Bluff, Ark.; arrived the same evening. Left Devall's Bluff June 6, 1865, on board steam-boat Albert Pearce for Saint Louis, Mo. Arrived at Saint Louis, Mo., June 11, 1865, and reported to headquarters of department, and was assigned to quarters in Benton Barracks. Left Saint Louis, Mo., June 13, 1865, under orders issued from headquarters Department of the Missouri, for Omaha, Nebr. Ter. Arrived at the latter point June 26, 1865, and reported to Col. N. Cole, commanding Eastern Division, Indian Expedition. July 2, 1865, left Omaha, Nebr. Ter., for the interior of the Territory. July 7, 1865, passed the settlement and military post of Pawnee Reserve. July 14, 1865, a stampede occurred; we did not lose any of our stock. July 19, 1865, a stampede took place, in which we lost four head of horses; time, 3 p.m. September 1, 1865, participated in an engagement with the Indians. September 4, 1865, burnt all surplus quarter-master and ordnance stores; another engagement with the Indians; lost seven horses from the effects of the march of the 27th and 28th of August. September 5, 1865, were in an engagement with the Indians. September 8, 1865, took part in another engagement with the Indians. September 9, lost thirteen horses from the effects of starvation and the severity of the weather. September 10, 1865, burnt one company wagon and all the surplus clothing of the men. September 19, 1865, arrived at Fort Connor, having lost in all 42 head of horses and 12 mules. The health of my command has been generally good, except suffering from the want of proper food and clothing.

LOUIS HOLLAND,
First Lieutenant, Commanding Battery E, Second Missouri.

No. 8.

HQRS. BATTERY K, SECOND MISSOURI LIGHT ARTY.,
In the Field, Mont. Ter., September 2, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the 1st day of September, 1865, my camp was attacked by Indians, and in compliance with orders from headquarters Eastern Division, Indian Expedition, I at once proceeded to repel the attack with all of the mounted men then in my camp, seven in number. On arriving at the point of attack found that the Indians had succeeded in driving off a number of horses. I immediately pushed on after them, and on arriving at a point seven miles from camp discovered a strong party of Indians, about fifty in number, in a ravine. I at once attacked them. In the skirmish I lost 3 men killed and 2 wounded. A much larger number of the Indians were killed and wounded. Lieutenant Ferran of my company followed with a small number of men and by a different route; came upon the Indians that were driving the horses and killed two and wounded several others.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. S. ROWLAND,

Col. N. COLE,
Commanding Eastern Division, Indian Expedition.
Below I have the honor to report the names of killed and wounded:

E. S. ROWLAND,
Captain, Second Missouri Light Arty., Comdg. Company K.

No. 9.

IN THE FIELD, September 4, 1865.

Lieutenant: I have the honor to report the result of a skirmish with a part of my company and some Indians on the 2d of the month: I lost two men killed. My men killed 2 Indians and captured 2 ponies with some other trophies. The men killed by the Indians had been out hunting and were returning to camp when attacked.

I have the honor to be, your most obedient servant,
JOHN H. KENDALL,

First Lieut. WILLIAM BREUTHOLD,
Adjutant Second Missouri Light Artillery.

No. 10.

FORT CONNOR, DAK. TER., August 29, 1865.

Sir: I have the honor to report that in compliance with orders dated headquarters Department of the Missouri, April 21, 1865, Companies C and D, Fifth U. S. Volunteers, embarked on steamer J. H. Lacy and proceeded to the mouth of Niobrara River for the purpose of escorting a party of engineers opening a wagon road from that point westward. On the 13th of June, everything being in readiness, we started, marching from ten to fifteen miles each day. On the 16th we were joined by Lieutenant Wood and twenty-four men belonging to Company B, First Dakota Cavalry Volunteers, having been ordered to report to me, and who did good service during the march, scouting on our flanks and searching for good camping ground. When within twenty miles of Powder River it was ascertained by our guide to be impossible to advance farther in the direction we now were going, the roughness of the country precluding such an idea; consequently we retraced our steps. On the second day of our retreat we were attacked by several thousand Indian warriors, who kept us corralled nearly four days and nights, fighting through the day; and at night the enemy would withdraw to commence hostilities again at early dawn, but finding every effort to capture our train and massacre its defenders only resulted in their loss of many killed and wounded braves, they abandoned the siege and left us to pursue our journey to a point sixty miles farther south, where we struck General Connor's trail on the 22d instant, and encamped. On the 23d our command was found to be only fifteen miles from Fort Connor, and received orders from General Connor to report with the detachment to that post for duty. The order relieving me ordered Colonel Kidd, of the Sixth Michigan Cavalry, to furnish a suitable escort for the engineer party. In the engagement with Indians I have to report the following-named men of my command killed: Orlando Sous* and Anthony Nelson, privates Company B, First Dakota Cavalry Volunteers; Nathaniel D. Hedges, citizen, and sutler for the expedition. Only a few were wounded, and those slightly.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. W. WILLIFORD,
Captain, Fifth U. S. Volunteers, Commanding Detachment.

Capt. George F. Price,
Actg. Asst. Adjt. Gen., Hdqrs. Dist. of the Plains,
Fort Laramie, Dak. Ter.

JUNE 24–30, 1865.—Operations about Rock Creek Station and Seven-Mile Creek, Dak. Ter.

Report of Capt. Luther Wilson, First Colorado Cavalry.

FORT COLLINS, COLO. TER., June 30, 1865.

Sir: In compliance with instructions received from the colonel commanding South Sub-District of the Plains, I would respectfully make the following report upon the scout made by myself and thirty men of my command upon the route and vicinity of the Overland Mail Line:

Upon the evening of the 24th of June I received news of Indians being in the neighborhood of Stonewall Station, some twenty miles north of this post. I immediately proceeded to that point and found the rumor to be false. Hearing of trouble above I continued up the road to Rock Creek Station, where I ascertained the Indians had attempted to run off the stock, but were driven off after a sharp fight by the men at that point, under charge of Corporal Ashley. Whilst there news came in about Indians having run off the stock belonging to a train camped on Seven-Mile Creek, seven miles above Little Laramie. I mounted at once and started in pursuit. After a severe ride of about forty miles they were overtaken with the stock, all of which was recaptured, with the exception of one head that they lost before they were overtaken. The Indians by fast riding got away. Not deeming it prudent to proceed any farther, the command returned. Indians were seen in all directions, but we were not molested by them. Upon my arrival at Rock Creek I received orders to return to Fort Collins by coach. Whilst coming down the Indians could be seen on both sides of the road. Two men in a light wagon were run into Cooper's Creek Station by nine Indians, barely escaping the clutches of the red scoundrels. On reaching Virginia Dale I found a man by the name of James Enos, who, whilst out hunting, was fired upon by a party of Indians, supposed to be Arapahoes. He was severely wounded in the back by an arrow. It is the opinion of the surgeon he cannot live. I arrived at this post on the evening of the 30th of June, where I found Maj. Henry Norton, Sixth U. S. Volunteers, who has relieved me in the command of the post.

*Appears on muster-rolls as John Rouse.
Hoping my action in the above will meet with your approval, I am, sir, with much respect, your obedient servant,

LUTHER WILSON,

Lieut. J. S. GRAHAM,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General,
South Sub-District of the Plains, Denver, Colo. Ter.

JUNE 29, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians near Fort Dodge, Kans.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT FIFTH U. S. VOLUNTEERS,
Fort Dodge, July 1, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to report to you that on the 29th day of June, while en route for this post, at the hour of 2 p.m., about forty Indians charged upon one of the cattle herds belonging to a Mexican train, killing two Mexican herdsmen and scalping another, at some 600 yards distance from the line of pickets. As soon as the cry of Indians rang through the camp I had the mule herd driven in, formed my men for the defense of the camp, and doubled the pickets around it. The Indians, satisfied with the mischief done, struck across the road within two miles of camp and made for the river. They did not succeed in driving off any stock, notwithstanding the immense amount of stock in the command. The entire train consisted of 175 wagons and 150 head of loose stock. I am really sorry for the loss of the lives referred to above. If I had had any means to pursue the devils they would not have gone away unpunished.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

F. HUBERT,
First Lieutenant, Commanding Detachment.

Commanding-Colonel KING,
Commanding Third Sub-District of Upper Arkansas.

JUNE 30, 1865.—Skirmish with Indians at Rook Creek, Dak. Ter.

HDQRS. SOUTH SUB-DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Denver, Colo. Ter., July 3, 1865.

Have just received report from Mr. Spotswood, agent Overland Mail Company, from Big Laramie, which says that on the 30th day of June the Indians ran off sixty head of cattle from Rock Creek and killed one soldier. Also at Willow Springs Station they have stolen all the stock belonging to stage company, with one Government horse. He reports the country full of Indians. I have not received a report from Lieut. C. E. Lowes, who I sent up the road. I shall use every endeavor with the troops I have on the road to open it again. If the companies of cavalry have arrived at Camp Collins they will be a great help.

C. H. POTTER,
Colonel Sixth U. S. Volunteers, Commanding.

Capt. GEORGE F. PRICE,
Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff of the Army:

Herewith I return you the papers addressed to the President of the United States petitioning to have the Territory of Arkansas and the Indian country ordered to be evacuated by General Canby still held. My understanding was that General Canby only ordered the abandonment of the territory west of Little Rock because General Steele failed to supply the garrisons in that country whilst it was possible. It seems from General Steele's statement that there is no difficulty in supplying Fort Smith. As I telegraphed on receipt of the papers, that post, at least, should be held. No one of them should be abandoned when troops can be maintained until the roads get so that fresh supplies can be thrown in. I presume the orders have gone to General Reynolds and General Canby to hold on to Fort Smith and such of the other posts ordered to be abandoned as he can. I think it advisable to give him the additional order to resume possession of such of them as he may find it necessary to abandon for the winter, at the earliest practicable moment of supplying them in the spring.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

SOUTHWEST PASS, January 1, 1865.
(Received 12 m.)

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY:

I am on board steamer Morning Star, ordered to report to you as special commissioner. Shall arrive to-night.

W. F. SMITH,
Major-General of Volunteers.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 1, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. J. HERRON, U. S. Volunteers:

Sir: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to state, for your information, that Special Orders, No. 151, paragraph 4, series of 1864, from these headquarters, is hereby so far modified as to require you, on the completion of the duty to which you are therein assigned (and after having availed yourself of the leave of absence granted by Special Orders, No. 267, paragraph 2, series of 1864, from headquarters Department of the Gulf), to report at the headquarters of the Military Division of West Mississippi, in this city, instead of at headquarters District of Baton Rouge and Port Hudson.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE, RESERVE CORPS,
MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 1, 1865.

Brigadier-General DENNIS,
Commanding Second Brigade, Reserve Corps:

GENERAL: The brigadier-general commanding directs me to inform you that steamers are waiting to take your command on board. He also directs that you move to the landing immediately with your troops and report to the quartermaster of transportation, who will designate vessels for embarkation. Also to report to these headquarters as soon as all your command, with the camp and garrison equipage and land transportation, are on board.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JUDSON J. HUNTLEY,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BRIGADE, RESERVE CORPS,
MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 1, 1865—4.30 p. m.

Capt. F. W. Fox,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to state, in reply to your communication just received, dated 3.30 this p. m., that my command is now embarking and will be ready to move soon after dark. All possible exertions are being made to get the troops off without delay. A part of the fleet will be compelled to coal after they are loaded.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ELIAS S. DENNIS,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. 2D BRIG., RESERVE CORPS,
No. 4. } MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 1, 1865.

Capt. W. E. Kuhn, assistant adjutant-general, having reported to these headquarters in compliance with orders from the Secretary of War, he is hereby announced as assistant adjutant-general of this brigade, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By order of Brigadier-General Dennis:
RICHARD A. KENT,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BRIGADE, CAVALRY DIVISION,
Little Rock, January 1, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. R. West,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The detail for 400 men to be held in readiness to march on the 3d instant, with rations to the 10th instant, inclusive, has been made—three hundred men from the First Iowa Cavalry and 100 men from the Third Missouri Cavalry, Maj. J. D. Jenks, First Iowa Cavalry, to command.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
CYRUS BUSSEY,
Major-General, Commanding.
Lewisburg, January 1, 1865.

Lieut. Col. W. D. Green,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

I have ascertained to a certainty that the enemy are now at Beatty's Mill, twenty-five miles above here, with 1,200 or 1,500 men and three pieces of artillery. I believe them to be after boats. They are building a flat-boat.

I. W. FULLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Lewisburg, January 1, 1865—8.15 p.m.

Lieut. Col. W. D. Green,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

My messenger from Fort Smith just arrived and reports that Colonel Judson with three regiments left Van Buren on Thursday; also that two colored regiments left same day on south side of river with two pieces of artillery. Alamo has arrived. I shall hold her here until it is safe for her to proceed. The enemy were at Dardanelle when my messengers passed Norristown, and the force at Beatty's Mill was seen moving toward Dardanelle. They have three brass pieces drawn by six horses.

I. W. FULLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Colonel Ryan,
Little Rock:

Shelby is said to be at Dardanelle with one piece of artillery and 600 men. I can't answer for its being reliable. Carrie Jacobs arrived last night; starts back at daylight. River fell four inches last twenty-four hours. Large boats can't make Fort Smith; light, about thirty inches on the bars. Happy New Year to you. Send up some hay if you can.

HENRY WOOD,
Captain and Acting Assistant Quartermaster.

Adjutant-General's Office,
January 1, 1865.

Commanding Officer at Cairo, Ill.:

Cairo is in the Northern Department. General Canby's command extends to the mouth of the Ohio River.

E. D. TOWNESEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
2. The detachment of the First Louisiana Cavalry now at Morganza will proceed without delay to Baton Rouge, and be reported by the commanding officer to Brigadier-General Bailey. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut: C. S. SARGENT,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

New Orleans, January 2, 1865.

Brigadier-General Bailey,

Baton Rouge:

The First Louisiana Cavalry at Morganza is ordered to report to you at Baton Rouge.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

JOS. HIBBERT, JR.,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

New Orleans, January 2, 1865.

Brigadier-General ULLMANN,

Commanding, Morganza:

You will send that portion of the First Louisiana Cavalry now at Morganza to Baton Rouge to report to Brigadier-General Bailey. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

J. C. STONE,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.]

HDQRS. THIRD BRIG., RESERVE CORPS,
MILITARY DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Morganza, La., January 2, 1865.

The Thirty-fourth Iowa and One hundred and fourteenth Ohio Infantry will immediately embark with all their camp and garrison equipage. The Thirty-fourth Iowa will embark in the Chouteau and the One hundred and fourteenth Ohio in the Thomas. Each regiment will immediately draw three days' additional marching rations. To avoid sickness and promote the health and safety of the troops, the commanding officers will observe the regulations for troops in transports, paragraphs 851 to 879, inclusive, of the Revised Army Regulations.

By order of Brig. Gen. C. C. Andrews:

GEORGE MONROE,

Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.
GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
No. 1.  Little Rock, Ark., January 2, 1865.

I. The post and defenses of Little Rock will in future constitute one command, to be known as the Post of Little Rock.

II. Brig.Gen. F. Salomon, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby appointed to the command of the Post of Little Rock.

III. The troops for the garrison of the defenses (to be hereafter assigned), the provost-marshal of the post, the military prison, the enrolled militia, and all that pertains to the police and good order of the city will be under the immediate orders of the post commander.

IV. All troops in the vicinity of the post will, when within the defenses, conform to such police regulations as may be established by the post commander.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

W. D. GREEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
No. 1.  Little Rock, Ark., January 2, 1865.

I. The Fourth Brigade of the Reserve Corps (except the Ninety-sixth Ohio and Thirty-fifth Wisconsin Infantry) will proceed without delay to New Orleans, La., and report to the headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi. The commanding officer of each transport will, on arrival at Morganza, report by telegraph to headquarters military division the probable hour of his arrival at New Orleans; also the strength of his command. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 2, 1865.

Lieut. Col. I. W. FULLER,
Lewisburg, Ark.:
Communicate if possible with the two colored regiments on south side of river and direct them to cross to the north side if practicable, and warn them of the rebel force on the south side of the river.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
January 2, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. SHALE,
Commanding, Devil's Bluff:
Brigadier-General West will communicate with you in reference to guard to be furnished steamer going up White River. You will furnish General West with the guard he desires and obey his instructions.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Brig. Gen. A. Shaler,
Commanding, Devall's Bluff:
You can visit Little Rock and confer with General West here this p. m. He will be notified of your coming.
By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

LEWISBURG, January 2, 1865.

Capt. J. H. Pratt,
Assistant Quartermaster, Little Rock:
Reliable information states a force of 350 men with one small piece of artillery. General Thayer has two colored regiments coming down on the south side of the river.

HENRY WOOD.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 2, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La..

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the major-general commanding division, a telegram* from Maj. Gen. George H. Thomas, commanding Department of the Cumberland and temporarily commanding the Military Division of the Mississippi. I presume General Thomas refers particularly to Colonel Karge's cavalry brigade, which I found under orders when I arrived at Memphis, from his chief of cavalry, to proceed to Nashville, and which I detained, together with the detachments of the Third and Fourth Iowa and Tenth Missouri Cavalry, to enable me to comply with the orders of Major-General Halleck, chief of staff, to cut the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. I request that the two infantry divisions under command of Maj. Gen. A. J. Smith, formerly the First and Second Divisions (Right Wing), Sixteenth Army Corps, now at or near Nashville, may be returned to this command, to give me a small movable force. These troops were under your orders to join me from Missouri, when they were temporarily diverted to re-enforce the Army of the Cumberland.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

[Indorsement.]

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, January 7, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded.

General Thomas' telegram, in terms, embraces all the troops on the east bank of the river above Port Hudson, except three regiments. The infantry cannot be replaced by any troops under my control. The cavalry can be replaced, and I have already ordered two regiments from the Department of the Gulf to report to General Dana, and will make up the deficiency from the Department of Arkansas. The troops of General A. J. Smith's command will be very useful, if they can be spared from General Thomas, but are not indispensable. I have been making provision for this contingency by diminishing the number of posts on the river, and reducing the works at others, so as to be held by smaller garrisons.

* See Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 341.

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Special Orders, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
No. 2. } Saint Louis, Mo., January 2, 1865.

7. Maj. C. H. Gregory, Seventh Kansas Cavalry, is hereby assigned to duty as chief of cavalry and acting ordnance officer on the staff of Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing, jr., commanding Saint Louis District, and will report forthwith accordingly.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Pilot Knob, January 2, 1865.

General Ewing:

From the information Captain Leeper brings me, and from all that I can obtain from citizens coming here from Northern Arkansas, I am satisfied the rebel leaders in that section are making an effort to get all their men into camp at this time. Captain Leeper thinks they are to meet on the 20th of this month. If possible I wish you would send me some more troops, so that I can keep scouting parties in that direction. There are so many outposts to hold that I have no men left for scouting purposes.

H. M. HILLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

Special Orders, } HDQRS. DIST. OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
No. 2. } Springfield, Mo., January 2, 1865.

I. A permanent post will be established in the vicinity of Warsaw, Mo., on the south side of the Osage River.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. B. Sanborn:

WM. T. KITTREDGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Fort Riley, Kans., January 2, 1865.

Maj. C. S. Charlot,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth:

Major: I have the honor to call the attention of the general commanding to the following extract from the Rocky Mountain News, a paper published at Denver, Colo. Ter. While in command of the District of Upper Arkansas I had the honor to report to the general commanding that in my opinion the Indians would gather in the locality mentioned in this extract, and also recommended a permanent force on the Republican, as suggested.

Respectfully forwarded through headquarters District of Upper Arkansas.

THE SECOND COMING.

It affords us especial gratification to announce that His Excellency Governor Evans has received positive assurances from the proper authorities that the Second Regiment of Colorado Volunteers shall be sent to the plains to join in the Indian campaign. They are already in Kansas, a portion of them at least as far west as Fort Riley, and the probabilities are that they will at once advance into the Indian country. They are veterans, well appointed and equipped, and will prove a powerfully effective force against the redskins. They are exactly at the right starting point and at the right time. Their recent terrible defeat on Sandy Creek has driven the savages eastward upon the Lower Smoky Hill and Republican Rivers. The Second is near where the two unite to form the Kansas, and can at once move up one or the other or both of their valleys. A prompt movement will doubtless enable them to give the red devils another sound trouncing, which will effectually close the Indian war between the Platte and Arkansas. Another step that cannot be undertaken a moment too soon is the establishment of a strong military post in that middle country. A good fort, well garrisoned, with a cavalry force, on the Smoky Hill or Republican Rivers, would at once break up the Indian rendezvous thereabouts, and drive those who are hostile beyond the two great rivers. We wonder that the War Department has so long overlooked the necessity for its establishment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. S. HENNING,

HEADQUARTERS EASTERN SUB-DISTRICT OF NEBRASKA,

Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter., January 2, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:
(Through headquarters District of Nebraska.)

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report of military operations in this sub-district for the month of December, 1864.*

The inclemency of the weather and the serious deficiency in clothing have to a great extent prevented the troops of this command from making as extended reconnaissances as I desired. It is to be regretted that a full supply of clothing for the men could not be obtained in due season. You will observe that the detachments sent out agree in discovering trails and signs of Indians as they approach the Solomon River; and although no camp of hostile Indians has been found, I am convinced that a large encampment of Cheyennes is on or near the South Branch of that river. The following is a résumé of scouts had during the month of December: 8th, 1864, Capt. Thomas J. Majors, First Nebraska Cavalry Veteran Volunteers, commanding post Plum Creek, Nebr. Ter., reports that a train of three wagons, eighteen men, was attacked at sundown by about 100 Indians six miles east of that post. Men took refuge in a deserted ranch and repulsed the Indians. Sent Capt. S. M. Curran, Company E, First Nebraska Cavalry Veteran Volunteers, with the squadron to the scene of the affair. Indians fled south and command returned. December 13, 1864, Capt. S. M. Curran, Company E, First Nebraska Cavalry Veteran Volunteers, Plum Creek,

See also Itinerary, Vol. XLI, Part I, p. 980.
Nebr. Ter., reports that scout of seven men returned last evening. Reports having seen about forty Indians forty miles south of that post. December 19, 1864, Capt. T. J. Majors, commanding post Plum Creek, Nebr. Ter., reports that in obedience to telegraphic order from headquarters Eastern Sub-District of Nebraska, he moved from that post on the morning of the 13th with thirty men and one howitzer from post Plum Creek, and fifty men, under command First Lieut. John P. Murphy, Company F, First Nebraska Cavalry Veteran Volunteers, from post Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter. Detachment from Plum Creek with the howitzer moved due south to headwaters of Spring Creek. With the detachment under Lieutenant Murphy, moved east eight miles, then southwest to headwaters Spring Creek, thence meeting the detachment from Plum Creek; thence down Spring Creek fifteen miles and camped. Marched at daylight on the 14th; crossed the Republican River; scouted up and down this stream, finding no Indian signs. Then moved south to Beaver Creek, crossing Little Beaver; followed up Beaver Creek thirty-five miles and camped. Here found an Indian trail leading due south, about two days old. On the 15th continued the march up this stream ten miles and struck the Curtis trail, which was followed north to the Republican, where the command camped. On the 16th returned to post Plum Creek without making any discoveries of any importance. Whole distance traveled 160 miles. December 21, 1864, Capt. John Wilcox, Company B, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, commanding post O'Fallon's Bluffs, Nebr. Ter., reports that scout started from that post on the 15th, moving south forty miles to Willow Creek; thence down that stream to its junction with the Republican sixty miles; thence up the Republican ten miles; saw no recent signs but of small hunting or scouting parties of Indians. Heavy snow-storm came on and scout returned to post O'Fallon's Bluffs. December 21, 1864, Capt. E. B. Murphy, Company A, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, commanding post Alkali, Nebr. Ter., reports that scout, consisting of one sergeant and seventeen men of his company, started from that post on the 16th, south to head of Spring Branch, forty-five miles, and camped. On the 17th moved down to White Man's Fork and down that stream; thence across to main branch of White Man's Fork; from thence to Stinking Water, and from its mouth to its source, and from there returned to post Alkali. Saw no Indians, but plenty fresh signs. Absent four days; two nights without fuel. January 2, 1865, Col. S. W. Summers, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, commanding post Fort Cottonwood, reports that scout sent out from that post came across fifty Indian warriors on the divide between the Beaver and Solomon Rivers, 125 miles southwest of that post. War party was traveling northeast toward Plum Creek.

In addition to the above numerous small parties acting as secret patrols have been sent out from the various posts, with a view to discovering encampments of hostile Indians, under instructions to travel at night and conceal themselves in cajons during the day. The reports from these, with the exception of the one which returned to Cottonwood on the 1st instant, are uninteresting. The severely cold weather and the promptness with which every Indian raiding party has been met by our troops seem to have discouraged the Indians in their attempts to murder and plunder travelers on this road during the past month. I have no doubt, however, that they will return as soon as the weather is propitious. No losses to us or the travelers on the road and no stoppage of the mail have occurred in the time reported for. All work on the fortifications at the posts of this sub-district has been suspended by the severity of the weather, the thermometer on one occasion indicating as low as 23° below zero, rendering it impossible to work outside. I have the honor to call your attention to the fact that credible reports have reached these headquarters to the effect that the remnants of those bands of Indians lately defeated by Col. J. M. Chivington, First Cavalry Colorado Volunteers, on the Big Sandy, have sent runners to the northern and western Indians, and these latter have entered into a coalition with them against the whites. The Blackfeet tribe, which has the reputation of being a very war-like people, has joined in this offensive treaty against us, and next spring will undoubtedly see a more vigorous warfare on the part of Indians than we experienced last summer, or is generally anticipated. On December 6, 1864, I ordered the garrison of Junction Station to abandon that post and report for duty at Fort Kearny, Nebr. Ter. This post was of no military importance, and the troops composing the garrison being militia whose terms of service expired on the 9th instant, I withdrew them as a matter of economy and convenience.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. R. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel First Regiment Nebraska Cavalry Vet. Vols.,
Comdg. Eastern Sub-District of Nebraska.

GENERAL ORDERS, \{ HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, \}
No. 1. \} New Orleans, La., January 3, 1865.

1. It has been brought to the notice of the commanding general that private boats plying on the Mississippi River and its tributaries have landed and engaged in unlawful trade with the enemy at points not under the supervision of troops or gun-boats, and without the permits and safe-conducts required by existing regulations. In all such cases military commanders are directed, and naval commanders are requested, to cause the boats to be seized, and with the master or other responsible officer turned over to the nearest military authority for trial, under paragraph G of the executive order of September 24, 1864, and paragraph 12 of General Orders, No. 80, series of 1864, from these headquarters.

2. Under the ninth section of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, no permits for the transportation of products of insurrectionary districts, or for supplies, under article 38 of the Treasury Regulations of July 29, 1864, can be given unless the points from and to which the products or supplies are to be transported are within the lines of actual occupation by the military forces of the United States, as indicated by the published orders of the commanding general of the department or district so occupied. All products or supplies found moving in violation of this law will be seized and turned over to the purchasing agents of the Treasury Department for the district in which they were found.

3. To prevent any misunderstanding or conflict of authority under the preceding paragraphs, it is announced that the enforcement of the blockade on water devolves on the navy, and of non-intercourse on land upon the army, and the seizures and arrests therein directed will be made by military commanders only when the boats are within the limits of their jurisdiction at military posts or when engaged in operations in the field. In other cases the commander of the naval district will be notified and requested to cause the boats and parties to be seized and sent in for trial.
4. In answer to applications for information and complaints of exactions and other wrongs by speculators, it is announced that persons who own or control products of insurrectionary districts are permitted to come within the lines for the purpose of disposing of their products under the eighth section of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864, and that a pass in the form prescribed in General Orders, No. 80, will insure their protection, unless forfeited by bad faith in procuring the pass or by misconduct while within our lines.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 2.
Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 3, 1865.

1. The District of Natchez will comprise the country east and west of the Mississippi River south of the thirty-second degree of latitude and north of the mouth of the Red River.

2. Brig. Gen. J. W. Davidson, U. S. Volunteers, is assigned to the command of the District of Natchez, and will report direct to the headquarters Department of Mississippi.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 3.
Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 3, 1865.

VII. Special Orders, No. 205, paragraph 6, series of 1864, from these headquarters, is hereby so far modified as to require the First Louisiana Cavalry, the First Texas Cavalry, and the Second New York [Veteran] Cavalry to report for orders to the commanding general Department of the Gulf.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 3, 1865.

Lieu. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have the honor to call the attention of the major-general commanding division to the following state of facts: During the last year the plantations on the Mississippi River have been leased to irresponsible speculators. Their crops having failed, they have run away. The mockery of State government now existing here is powerless to assist in the necessary repairs of levees. The negro resident population has been carried off. The levees must be repaired, and that at once, as a military necessity, to preserve our communications and as a measure of humanity, as well as policy, to save vast distress. The estimates before me show the necessity of constructing 200,000 cubic yards at a cost, probably, of $80,000. I have directed publication to be made inviting the doing of this work by contract, thus employing many idle people and furnishing the work in better shape from the skill and ability likely to be employed of men conversant with this work. I recommend that application be made to Congress through Secretary of War for a special appropriation for this purpose, to be paid to and disbursed by the proper quartermaster's office. I will forward copies of reports and estimates.

* See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 764.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

hdqrs. military division of west mississippi,
new orleans, la., january 3, 1865.

maj. gen. s. a. hurlbut,
commanding department of the gulf, new orleans, la.:
sir: the major-general commanding desires that brigadier-general mckean be instructed to furnish such troops as can be spared without detriment to military operations, to report to the engineer officer in charge of the defensive works at pensacola, in order that they may be completed as soon as possible.

very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

c. t. christensen,
lieutenant-colonel and assistant adjutant-general.

special orders, hdqrs. department of the gulf,
no. 3. new orleans, january 3, 1865.

9. brig. gen. e. j. davis, u. s. volunteers, will assume command of the cavalry arriving at greensville, la., and superintend its embarkation for baton rouge, la. having completed this duty he will proceed to baton rouge, la., and report to brig. gen. joseph bailey, commanding cavalry division, department of the gulf, for assignment to duty.

by command of major-general hurlbut:

c. s. sargent,
first lieut., second louisiana vols., and acty. asst. adjt. gen.

general orders, hdqrs. 3d brig., reserve corps,
mil. div. of west mississippi,
morganza, la., january 3, 1865.

in pursuance of special orders, no. 305, paragraph 6, dated headquarters military division of west mississippi, new orleans, la., december 4, 1864, the undersigned hereby assumes command of the third brigade, reserve corps. the following officers are announced on the staff of the brigadier-general commanding: capt. george mon-
CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.—UNION.

Mr. E. T. Champlin, Third Minnesota Veteran Volunteers, aide-de-camp; Lieut. H. D. Pettibone, Third Minnesota Veteran Volunteers, aide-de-camp; Lieut. John McAndrew, Thirty-fourth Iowa Volunteers, acting assistant quartermaster.

C. 0. ANDREWS, Brigradier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 3, 1865.

Brig. Gen. G. L. Andrews,
Baton Rouge, La.:

GENERAL: The battalion of the Sixth Missouri Cavalry that was retained in Missouri is now en route for this department. It will be stopped at Baton Rouge and join the Cavalry Division.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

C. S. SARGENT,

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 3, 1865—3.10 p. m. (Received 10th.)

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Little Rock, Ark., via Cairo, Ill.:

Lieutenant-General Grant directs, should Fort Smith and posts in vicinity have been abandoned before receiving his orders, they will be reoccupied as early as the garrisons can be supplied.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
January 3, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La.:

Communication of 26th ultimo received. The Fourth Brigade of Reserve Corps will be sent down immediately, excepting the Ninety-sixth Ohio Volunteers, at mouth of White River, and Thirty-fifth Wisconsin Volunteers, at Devall's Bluff. It is proposed to retain the latter regiment in this department by substituting another to take its place in the brigade, which will be determined soon as possible.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 1.

HDQRS. POST OF LITTLE ROCK,
Little Rock, Ark., January 3, 1865.

1. In obedience to General Orders, No. 1, current series, from headquarters Department of Arkansas, the undersigned hereby assumes command of the Post of Little Rock, with headquarters in U. S. Arsenal buildings.

* See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 934.
II. Maj. George W. Burchard, Fifty-fourth U. S. Colored Infantry, will act as assistant adjutant-general until further orders.

F. SALOMON,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

LEWISBURG, January 3, 1865—11.25 a. m.

Lieut. Col. W. D. GREEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Enemy still at Dardanelle. They attempted to cross a force at two or three different places yesterday, but my force prevented them. The enemy expect Coffee and Witt to come to their assistance from White River. Had I 500 or 600 cavalry with the force I have I could capture or drive them off.

I. W. FULLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS INDIAN BRIGADE,
Fort Gibson, C. N., January 3, 1865.

Brigadier-General THAYER,
Commanding District of the Frontier, Fort Smith, Ark.:

SIR: Your dispatches of the 2d received late to-night. The Fifty-fourth Colored train is ordered out in the morning. The other train started yesterday with the First Arkansas Infantry. I also sent a detachment with oxen for the battery, and what teams we had, under the instructions I first received. I received yesterday a dispatch from post commandant at Fort Scott notifying that the other trains will leave that post to-day with very small escort. I ordered 300 men and one howitzer to march to it last night, under Maj. James A. Phillips, of the First Indian Regiment. To-morrow morning I shall send an additional force, to re-enforce it, with the refugee train going up. River falling and fordable. A few secesh scouts seen on south branch of river thirty miles below.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel, Commanding.

WASHINGTON, January 3, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: I have received your application for four companies of engineers for building block-houses and stockades at railroad bridges. Application was made to Congress last year for authority to the President to raise engineer troops as well as cavalry, infantry, and artillery, but it was limited in the law to a single regiment, to be attached to General Thomas' command. Nearly all the old engineer troops are with General Grant before Richmond and cannot be spared. As the block-houses built in that department when I was in command were all constructed without engineer troops, it is supposed that they can be rebuilt in the same way. At any rate, no engineer troops can be sent to you till Congress authorizes the President to raise them.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.
SAINT LOUIS, MO., January 3, 1865.

Post Adjutant,
Post of Saint Louis, First Sub-District, Saint Louis:

Sir: In accordance with Special Orders, No. 23, issued in compliance with circular orders from department headquarters, "to aid in selecting the positions and planning the defenses of the works necessary to secure the military posts, railroad stations, and bridges where troops are stationed in this sub-district," I proceeded to visit the several stations and bridges on the Pacific Railroad from Saint Louis to Hermann, and the Southwest Branch as far west as the Meramec Bridge No. 2, near Moselle Station. Between Saint Louis and Franklin, a distance of thirty-seven miles, the bridges, station-houses, and water-tanks are all standing, as Price did not extend his raid east of that place. At all the principal bridges to that place there are good and substantial block-houses, which were built by Government for the purpose of protecting these bridges. There are no troops at any of these stations at the present time, they having been withdrawn some time since. Between Franklin and Hermann, on the main branch of the road, there are five bridges, viz: Saint John's, 180 feet span; Bœuf, 160 feet span, with approaches of 35 feet span; Big Berger, 120 feet span; Little Berger, 90 feet span; Hermann, 110 feet span. These bridges were all burned with the exception of the Saint John's bridge. The station houses, block-houses, and water-tanks were also destroyed. At Hermann the bridge has been replaced by an excellent new Howe bridge. The water-tank has been rebuilt. The other bridges have been temporarily replaced by trestle-bridges. There are no troops at any of these stations, nor are there any block-houses or stockades for the protection of these structures. On the Southwest Branch road from Franklin to Moselle Station, the last bridge within the limits of this sub-district, there are five bridges, viz, Brush Creek, 110 feet span; Meramec, No. 1, four spans of 110, 140, 165, and 110 feet, respectively; Calvy Creek, 110 feet span; trestle-work, 560 feet in length, and Meramec, No. 2, of three spans of 110, 165, and 110 feet, respectively. These were all burned with the exception of the trestle-work and the bridge at Calvy Creek. They have been replaced by trestle bridges which can be but temporarily [used]. The two bridges across the Meramec will probably be swept away by high water the coming spring. At the Meramec Bridge No. 1 there is a log stockade and several log cabins. These are occupied by a corporal and nine men of the Seventh Kansas Cavalry. The bridge is guarded by them at night, and in the daytime by a watchman employed by the railroad company. At the Meramec No. 2 there is a corporal and nine men of the Seventh Kansas Cavalry. They have a good stockade and log cabins for quarters for themselves and horses. These twenty men I find to be all that are employed in guarding the railroad property at the present time. If it is designed to protect all these bridges by troops it will be necessary to cause suitable block-houses to be erected at most of them, and as there are no troops at them at present, I respectfully ask for further instructions before incurring any further expense.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. B. WILSON,
Captain, Sixth Minnesota Infantry.
Col. J. B. Rogers,
Cape Girardeau:
It is hardly necessary to send an officer of the engineer corps to superintend the construction of the palisading suggested by General Gillmore at New Madrid. The work is very simple, and any man of ordinary ability and military experience can do it. The suggestions of General Gillmore are wise, and sufficiently explain the manner of constructing the work. If not already commenced, the work should be begun at once and prosecuted vigorously to completion.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Pilot Knob, January 3, 1865.

Captain Bostwick,
Patterson, Mo.:
General Ewing sends me word that General Dodge has information that there is a rebel brigade on Strawberry Creek, Ark., not far from Pocahontas. I think there is some mistake about it, but do not relax any effort to find out what is going on in Northeast Arkansas. Send out scouts and spies continually in that direction, and if possible send some one down there to see. If you have to employ a citizen, report him to me, so that he can be paid.

H. M. HILLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

Patterson, January 3, 1865.

Lieut. Col. H. M. Hiller,
Pilot Knob, Mo.:
I had a citizen scout get in last night that had been within twenty miles of Pocahontas, Ark., and could not learn of any force collected in that part. The country was full of guerrillas. I will have another scout from my command down on Black River, and will be in to-morrow or next day.

B. H. BOSTWICK,
Captain, Seventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding Post.

Kansas City, January 3, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:
I have no control over the cavalry stationed here, and of nothing but the post. Bushwhackers are appearing. They murdered a citizen three miles from town last night. May I press horses here and send parties out? I cannot get them any other way. I wish to mount some men and put others in the brush. Please answer immediately.

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Volunteers.
Macon, Mo., January 3, 1865.

Colonel Harding,

Commanding, Kansas City, Mo.:

I expected General Fisk on to-night's train, but he did not arrive. Will probably be here to-morrow and then give you full directions concerning the plan of securing horses for mounting a part of your men. If there is immediate necessity for the horses have your quartermaster take them for immediate use wherever found, giving memorandum receipts, and returning the stock when you are through with it. You will act upon your own judgment in the matter until orders are given by General Fisk in a more explicit manner.

By order of Brigadier-General Fisk:

G. A. Holloway,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Washington, January 3, 1865.

Major-General Curtis,

Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

General: Your communications* proposing a winter campaign against the Indians and asking for more troops were sent to General Grant immediately on their receipt. If he has acted on the matter his orders have gone directly to you, as nothing on the subject has been received here. I write this to inform you that this matter was duly attended to by me.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. W. Halleck,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

Headquarters District of Upper Arkansas,
Fort Riley, Kans., January 3, 1865.

Maj. C. S. Charlot,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Kansas:

Major: I have nothing of importance to report to the general commanding. All is quiet in the district just now, although I expect a general uprising of all the Plain Indians, and have no doubt that they will give us a great deal of trouble as soon as spring opens. I would therefore respectfully request permission to establish a post or station of about two companies at Lake Sibley (although not in my district). Lake Sibley is situated above latitude 40 degrees north and longitude 97 degrees east, on the Republican River, in Republic County. This I deem necessary for the better protection of the settlements on the Blue, and to that tract of well settled farming country lying north of my district. I received several letters from the inhabitants of that section of your department making application to me (as the nearest military commander) for protection. By to-day's mail I forward you petition of settlers in and about Clifton, a settlement northeast about sixty miles, praying for protection. Heretofore they have been unmolested, but the late operations in the western part of this district against the Indians have awakened their fears. Lake Sibley is a place where certain tribes of the Indians usually winter. Bunch Timber, on the headwaters of the Smoky Hill, is also another place that should be occupied by our troops. And I would further suggest that a station between Fort Lyon and Fort Larned would afford greater protection to the supply trains and mail, and render the duties of escorting less severe upon the troops. From the reports made by my scouts I am satisfied that there is a large encampment of Indians north of Fort Lyon upon the headwaters of the Smoky Hill. They should be attacked this winter. To do this and furnish sufficient escort to the emigration and mail, and to guard the border settlements, more troops are required in this district. At least 1,000 more will be necessary to carry out the plans and wishes of the general commanding department. There is in this district the following amount of ordnance, viz: Four mountain howitzers at Fort Lyon, one 6-pounder and one 12-pounder field guns at Fort Larned. I have sent to Fort Zarah two mountain howitzers that I found at this post on my arrival. If possible, I would recommend that either the Ninth Wisconsin Battery or the First Independent Battery of Colorado be sent into this district for duty. Colonel Chivington’s attack upon the tribe of Indians near Fort Lyon has precluded all possibility of a peace with them until conquered, or the various tribes almost entirely annihilated. I start in the morning to make the tour of my district and ascertain the wants and condition of my command. I wish to fully acquaint myself with the character of the country and the wants of my district, in order to do which I shall spend a large portion of my time in the field. All communications of importance will be forwarded to me.

*See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 970.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. FORD,
Colonel Second Colorado Cavalry, Commanding District.

By J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
(In the absence of Colonel Ford.)

CITY POINT, VA., January 4, 1865—7.30 p.m.

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

I hear nothing either through rebel papers or direct from Granger’s movement from Pascagoula. I would like to have Canby operate against Mobile this winter with such force as he can collect from his command, but I will not send any troops to him from Middle Tennessee. If Hood goes south from Corinth order A. J. Smith and two divisions besides to Baltimore, Md., to be thrown where they may be wanted on arrival.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

HQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 4, 1865.

Capt. J. P. FOSTER, U. S. Navy,
Comdg. Third and Fourth Dists. Miss. Squadron,
Off Mouth of Red River:

SIR: Your communication of December 31 has been received. I have no information with regard to the boats you mention, and I believe it is not the President’s wish that boats should be allowed to pass within the enemy's lines regardless of military operations. I request that you will not allow any others to pass up Red River unless their permits are approved by the admiral and myself.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

Special Orders,} War Dept., Adjt. General's Office,
No. 3.} Washington, January 4, 1865.

66. Lieut. Col. J. G. Chandler, chief quartermaster, Nineteenth Army Corps, is hereby relieved from duty in the Department of the Gulf, and will proceed without delay to join his proper command in the Middle Military Division.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 4, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to request that orders be given to hold the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, now at Baton Rouge, in readiness to move up the river on short notice. Sufficient transportation, not to be diverted to any other object, will also be held in readiness.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 4, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. STEELE,
New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I have the honor, by direction of the major-general commanding, to forward herewith inclosed report of troops belonging to the Reserve Corps, and their effective and aggregate strength. The main portion of the Seventy-sixth Illinois arrived this morning, numbering 370; the balance of that regiment, the Eighth Illinois, detachment of the Forty-sixth Illinois, and the Fourth Massachusetts Battery passed Morganza at 2 o'clock this morning, numbering 1,336; the Twenty-ninth Wisconsin passed Morganza at 12.40 this afternoon, numbering 369; the Twenty-ninth Illinois passed Morganza at 3.15 this afternoon, numbering 750; the Forty-seventh Indiana, the Twenty-first Iowa, detachment Twenty-eighth Illinois, and the Fifteenth Massachusetts Battery passed Morganza at 3.40 this afternoon, numbering 1,437, making a total of 4,262. A telegraph office will be established at Kennerville about noon to-morrow, and the commanding general at Morganza is instructed to send reports of troops arriving at his post on their way down the river in duplicate to you at Kennerville.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 4, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. Bailey,
Baton Rouge, La.:

Hold the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry in readiness to move up the river on short notice. Detain any Government boats for the purpose. Report the number of horses to Capt. F. W. Perkins, assistant quartermaster, immediately.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:
JOS. HIBBERT, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 4, 1865.

Brigadier-General Bailey,
Baton Rouge:

Of the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois only the effective men will move.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:
C. S. SARGENT,

SPECIAL ORDERS,
No. 2.

HDQRS. DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 4, 1865.

6. The Second Ohio Battery will proceed to Ship Island as soon as practicable with its guns and a full supply of ammunition and report to the commanding officer for duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:
FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 4, 1865.

Brig. Gen. D. Ullmann,
Morganza, La.:

Please instruct commanding officers of transports coming from above with troops belonging to the Reserve Corps to stop and land at Kennerville, ten miles above this city, instead of proceeding to New Orleans. An officer will be in readiness to receive them at Kennerville.

By order:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 4, 1865.

Brig. Gen. D. Ullmann,
Morganza, La.:

Telegraphic communication will be established with Kennerville about noon to-morrow. Reports of arrivals at Morganza of troops belonging to the Reserve Corps coming down the river will be made in duplicate to commanding officer at Kennerville.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

General Orders
No. 2
Hdqrs. Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 4, 1865.

I. Lieut. Col. W. D. Green is hereby relieved from duty as assistant adjutant-general of the Department of Arkansas and Seventh Army Corps, and will proceed to Saint Louis, Mo., and report by letter to the Adjutant-General of the Army for orders.

II. Maj. John Levering, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty as assistant adjutant-general of the Department of Arkansas.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

S. C. Farrington,
Major and Acting Aide-de-Camp.

Special Orders
No. 3
Hdqrs. Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 4, 1865.

3. Col. Thomas H. Benton, Twenty-ninth Iowa Infantry, will proceed to Pine Bluff and assume command of the Second Brigade, Second Division, Seventh Army Corps, during the absence of Colonel True.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

General Orders
No. 2
Hdqrs. Post of Little Rock,
Little Rock, Ark., January 4, 1865.

Capt. LeG. Benedict, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, having reported to these headquarters in obedience to Special Orders, No. 2, paragraph II, from headquarters Department of Arkansas, of date January 3, 1865, is hereby assigned to duty as assistant adjutant-general of the Post of Little Rock and of the First Division, Seventh Army Corps, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By order of Brig. Gen. F. Salomon:

GEO. W. Burchard,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
General Shaler,
Deval's Bluff:

Two steamers will be needed up the Little Red. Have sent an aide-de-camp, who will report to you, but the number of steamers is not mentioned in his instructions.

J. R. West,
Brigadier-General.

---

Little Rock, January 4, 1865.

General Powell Clayton,
Pine Bluff:

I wish to have the 3-inch steel guns brought here to be remounted. Can you spare them from your defenses?

J. R. West,
Brigadier-General.

---

Pine Bluff, Ark., January 4, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. R. West,
Chief of Cavalry:

The guns are at your service, and, if you wish, will be sent up on first boat.

Powell Clayton,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

---

Lewisburg, January 4, 1865.

Lieut. Col. W. D. Green,
Little Rock:

Arrived here last evening at 9.30. Left steamer at Van's Bar. Yesterday noon put off fifty bales of hay and fifty-five barrels of pork. Have sent the Alamo down to bring them here, also to assist the Lotus if necessary. River falling. I do not think the enemy intends crossing to north side of river. They are under command of Colonels Newton and Brooks. They are gathering cattle and making preparations to move families south. I shall keep the river patrolled to Norristown to prevent their crossing, and trust to Geiger keeping off any force approaching from White River. I have sent persons to remain with the rebels till they move to report what road they take, &c. If 500 men with section of artillery from Little Rock move up on the south side of the river I think they could bag the whole of them. I can amuse them on the river and send scout to Perryville to prevent messengers going to them with information of the movement from the Rock. I do not think we can cross a force up here without their knowledge. I think this a good time for a movement from the Rock, as they will be watching us here and at Norristown, also Thayer's command. Roads good.

A. H. Ryan,
Colonel.
LEWISBURG, January 4, 1865.

Major LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

Major: Scouts in report the rebels as having left Beatty's Mill and gone toward Dardanelle. Dispatch from Norristown reports the rebels as having left Dardanelle and camped last night at Boggs' Mill, on the Chickalah, six miles from Dardanelle. Steamer Lotus not arrived yet; on bar seven miles below.

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

Col. WILLIAM A. PHILLIPS, Commanding Indian Brigade:

On the 31st ultimo I sent an order for you to forward to this place subsistence stores as follows: Twenty-two thousand pounds of flour, 20,000 pounds of hard bread, 3,200 pounds of coffee and 100 pounds of tea, 6,000 pounds of sugar, and 1,000 pounds of salt. On the 2d instant I directed you to send, in addition to the above, 20,000 pounds of hard bread, 2,000 pounds of coffee, 3,000 pounds of sugar, and 1,000 pounds of salt. I wish you would send me, in addition to what has been already ordered, 22,000 pounds of flour, 40,000 pounds of hard bread, 4,800 pounds of coffee, 9,000 pounds of sugar, and 2,400 pounds of salt. These three several orders require you to send me subsistence stores, in the aggregate, as follows: Forty-four thousand pounds of flour, 80,000 pounds of hard bread, 10,000 pounds of coffee, 18,000 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of tea, and 5,000 pounds of salt. A dispatch has gone to Colonel Fair, commanding Fifty-fourth U.S. Colored Infantry, directing him, in case he has started from Gibson before this reaches you, to halt and send back to Gibson sixty teams to transport the additional subsistence stores which you have been directed in this to send down here. This order has been made for the reason that I have received information that a large force of the enemy are moving up to the Arkansas River about Dardanelle, and I do not know but that I may be detained by them in my movements to Little Rock. I shall expect you to send a sufficient force down, if one has not already started, to escort Captain Inley's train and the artillery and ammunition I am to send you back to Gibson. This duty will require a regiment. Should it be that you have not at Gibson hard bread and coffee sufficient to fill these orders you will send their equivalents.

Respectfully,

JOHN M. THAYER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 4, 1865.

Major-General DANA, Memphis, via Cairo:

Your order putting railroad employés in militia organizations is not approved. You will give them a special organization under their own officers and require them to do military duty only in cases of special danger. This rule is adopted here in regard to quartermaster and other Government employés.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.
Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing, Jr.,
Commanding Saint Louis District:

The general commanding desires to be informed what were the reasons or occasion of placing a garrison at Caruthersville, on the Mississippi River.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Endorsement.]

Respectfully returned.

The garrison was placed at Caruthersville by Major-General Pleasonton when in command of this district last fall. I see no good reason why a garrison should be placed there. I will withdraw this garrison and strengthen Bloomfield with it.

Thomas Ewing, Jr.,
Brigadier-General.

Pilot Knob, January 4, 1865.

General Ewing:

Captain Bostwick, commanding at Patterson, informs me by telegraph this morning that a citizen scout sent down to within twenty miles of Pocahontas has just returned and reports that he could not hear of any organized rebel force in that part of Arkansas.

H. M. Hiller,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Headquarters Sub-District,
Cape Girardeau, Mo., January 4, 1865.

Major-General Dodge, Commanding:

I sent an expedition last week to the Arkansas line below Hornersville.* They killed eight who belonged to White's brigade. I sent another to Poplar Bluff, in Butler County, who killed seven, some of whom had furloughs on their persons, from White's command. This strengthens my belief from other sources that they are raising a force there. I have sent a force of 150 cavalry, who crossed Indian Ford, near Poplar Bluff, to-day with orders to proceed until they find the enemy and ascertain the truth. I will send other parties.

J. B. Rogers,
Colonel.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, January 4, 1865—8 p.m.

Colonel Rogers, Cape Girardeau, Mo.:

Could not the troops at Caruthersville do better service at Bloomfield?

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

*For report see Vol. XL1, Part I, p. 997.
Col. Chester Harding,

Kansas City, Mo.

Press horses for your immediate necessities, and kill the guerrillas. The horses must be returned to the owners when you have done with them, else it will be a source of endless trouble to you.

CLINTON B. FISK,

Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,

Rolla, January 4, 1865.

Captain Monks,

Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry, Springfield:

Move with your company to vicinity of Houston, where you can obtain forage. Make Houston your headquarters. Keep scouting parties out constantly in direction of Thomasville. Captain Whybark with sixty men is now scouting in that vicinity. Make regular reports.

E. O. CATHERWOOD,

Colonel Thirteenth Missouri Veteran Volunteers, Comdg.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,

Warrensburg, January 4, 1865.

Col. W. A. Wilson, Marshall, Mo.:

DEAR SIR: The colonel commanding is desirous of organizing the citizens of your county into companies for the purpose of local defense, and wishes me to request that you, in conjunction with Dr. G. O. Hardiman, of Arrow Rock, take charge of and superintend the organizations. It is proposed to make these organizations the stepping-stone to the restoration of civil law and order, protection to lives and property, and the re-establishment of peace and quiet. In order to accomplish these ends none but truly loyal and law-abiding men will be permitted to govern and control these organizations. They must be men of known character for honesty and probity of intentions. He who will not aid in maintaining the supremacy of law and uphold the Government cannot consistently ask, neither need they expect, protection. It is not intended, however, to exclude from these organizations those who in the past have to a certain degree sympathized with the rebellion, provided they exhibit an honest disposition to henceforth become loyal and law-abiding citizens and are possessed of such a character and reputation among their fellow-citizens as will enable them to enlist the confidence and reliance of their own loyal neighbors. This class of your citizens can best give evidence of their intentions by their loyal acts. No one of this class, however, must be permitted to enter these organizations simply for his own protection. Such men will shirk duty and dangers when dependence is most needed. They will be enemies under the guise of friends. Such as these will not be tolerated or receive mercy at the hands of the authorities. These organizations will be for mutual protection. Every assistance will be offered by troops, &c., in aiding you in this work, and arms and ammunition will be furnished. Your earliest and earnest attention is directed to the matter.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. CONKLIN,

Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Fort Zarah, January 4, 1865.

Lieut. Robert S. Roe,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

SIR: I have the honor to report that no signs of Indians have been discovered about this post during the past week. Scouting parties have been sent out nearly every day since my last report without discovering any fresh evidences of the existence of an enemy. Information by a returning train from the west induces the belief that the Indians on the south side of the Arkansas River are moving north in considerable numbers. This same train reports an attack upon them by 150 Indians, in which seven were reported wounded out of a party of less than twenty. This occurred about half-way between Forts Lyon and Larned. The utmost vigilance is kept up at this post, believing that the present quiet has a deeper significance than is generally apprehended.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THEO. CONKEY,
Captain, Commanding Post.

General Orders, No. 1.

Pursuant to the orders of the major-general commanding the department, the undersigned relinquishes the command of the district to Col. Thomas Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry. In separating from troops with whom he has served so long and shared so much of privation, toil, and danger, he avails himself of this occasion to express his feelings of friendship and affection for his comrades in arms. To the officers and soldiers of this district he tenders his acknowledgments and avails himself of this opportunity to express his high appreciation of their services and his grateful remembrances of their courage and fidelity. The colonel also tenders his thanks to his staff officers for the prudence, wisdom, and fidelity they have displayed.

J. M. CHIVINGTON,
Colonel First Cavalry of Colorado.

General Orders, No. 2.

1. In obedience to General Orders, No. 63, dated headquarters Department of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., December 21, 1864, the undersigned hereby assumes command of this district, headquarters in Denver.

2. First Lieut. and Adjt. I. I. Taber, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, is hereby assigned to duty as acting assistant adjutant-general at these headquarters. All communications will be addressed to him accordingly.

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 5, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

SIR: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to say that the restrictions recently imposed upon the shipment of products of insurrectionary districts from Gaines' Landing, Miss. (under authority of General Orders, No. 80, series of 1864, from these headquarters), are now removed.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 5, 1865.

Lt. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Hdqrs. Military Div. of West Mississippi:

Sir: I have the honor to report the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry ready to embark. Transportation sufficient to move the above named will be at Baton Rouge during the night.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 5, 1865.

Commanding Officer Plaquemine:

(Through General Cameron.)

Brigadier-General Sherman directs that you report direct to these headquarters by telegraph every unusual occurrence that takes place within your command. This order has been given before, but is now repeated. As soon as these occurrences can be investigated a detailed report will be made and sent through district headquarters.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
No. 5. } Little Rock, Ark., January 5, 1865.

1. Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr, U. S. Volunteers, will proceed to Memphis, Tenn., on public business for this department, and having conferred with the commanding officer of the Department of Mississippi will return to these headquarters with as little delay as practicable.

2. The detachment of Fifteenth Illinois Cavalry on duty at these headquarters is hereby relieved and will be reported immediately to the chief of cavalry at this post.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

DEVALL'S BLUFF, January 5, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel GREEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Dept. of Arkansas, Little Rock:

I have waited here until now for transportation, and at last have one steamer, Kate Hart, at my disposal. The steamer Mepham is in port, but the assistant quartermaster, Captain Gaubert, declines to let me have her because of the private freight on board. This can all be unloaded in a few hours, and I respectfully request that Captain Gaubert be ordered at once to unload the Mepham and turn her over to me. Dennis and Lawler have gone; all but the Fourth Brigade. Please answer.

CHARLES BLACK,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 5, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. SHALER,
Devall's Bluff:

Direct Colonel Black not to embark any of his brigade until further orders from these headquarters.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

GENERAL ORDERS,

Hdqrs. 4th Brig., Reserve Corps,
Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
Devall's Bluff, Ark., January 5, 1865.

No. 1.

The troops of this command about to move are assigned as follows for transportation, viz: Headquarters of the brigade, the Thirty-seventh Illinois, and six companies of the Twentieth Iowa to the steamer Mepham; the Twenty-third Iowa and four companies of the Twentieth Iowa to the steamer Kate Hart. The troops will move on board with ten days' rations as soon as the boats are ready to receive them. The commanding officer on each boat will make the necessary arrangements for cooking, having the boat frequently cleaned, and for keeping a vigilant guard night and day to prevent accidents. Regimental commanders will be held strictly responsible that upon leaving camp the quarters are not disturbed, damaged, or interfered with in any manner whatever. The steamer Mepham will move out first, and will be followed by the Kate Hart as soon as loaded. Attention is also called to Circular No. 7 from these headquarters. Signals as arranged will be announced hereafter. The commanding officer on the steamer Kate Hart will, upon his arrival at Morganza, La., report by telegraph to headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi the probable hour of his arrival in New Orleans and the number of men on board.

By order of Col. Charles Black:

C. S. LAKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,

Hdqrs. 4th Brig., Reserve Corps,
Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
Devall's Bluff, Ark., January 5, 1865.

No. 5.

2. The One hundred and sixty-first New York Volunteer Infantry will proceed without delay to New Orleans, La., and report to the headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi. The commanding officer will on his arrival at Morganza report by telegraph to headquarters military division the probable hour of his arrival at New Orleans; also the strength of his command. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation:

By order of Col. Charles Black:

C. S. LAKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., January 5, 1865.

Capt. GUY S. ALEXANDER,
Sixty-second Illinois, Pine Bluff, Ark.:

I am assigned to the command of the brigade and will leave for Pine Bluff by first opportunity.

THOMAS H. BENTON, JR.,
Colonel Twenty-ninth Iowa Infantry.

HDQRS. CAVALRY DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 5, 1865.

Brig. Gen. CYRUS BUSSEY,
Commanding Second Brigade:

GENERAL: You will please cause the main road to Benton to be patrolled daily by a cavalry force of such strength as you may from time to time deem expedient, and to a point from ten to fifteen miles distant from Fort Steele. If a flag of truce be met no communication must be permitted to be had with it, except by the officer in command of the patrol, until the pleasure of the department commander is made known; nor must the flag, or any person connected with it, be allowed to come nearer than a point ten miles distant from Fort Steele.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General, Commanding

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Devall's Bluff, Ark., January 5, 1865—9 a.m.

Brigadier-General WEST,
Chief of Cavalry, Department of Arkansas:

We have as yet but one boat to send up. She is excellent for the purpose, and will leave here at 10 o'clock this a.m. with a guard. If another boat arrives in time to be of service at either point I will dispatch her at once, unless you send me contrary orders.

ALEXANDER SHALEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

LITTLE ROCK, January 5, 1865.

General SHALER:

Your dispatch of this morning meets the case entirely.

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General.
Major Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

Nothing later from above. This morning I sent scout to south side of the river to ascertain if the rebels had fallen back; if so, to follow and ascertain by what route, &c. Have sent orders to Captain Hamilton, at Norristown, to cross the river if it is fordable and ascertain if the rebs were going south from Dardanelle; if so, to harass them as much as possible. Raining, with prospect of a rise. This noon sent courier through to General Thayer.

Respectfully,

A. H. Ryan,
Colonel.

HQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 5, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.:

Sir: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 28th ultimo,* referring to his cipher dispatch of the 21st, and to inform you that the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, now at Baton Rouge and numbering, respectively, 671 and 668 effective men, are held in readiness to respond to your call at any time. If you will be pleased to send the notification to the commanding officer at Morganza he will telegraph it to this city and at least half a day will be saved.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 5, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.:

Sir: Your communication of the 28th ultimo,† in relation to the defenses on the Mississippi River between Cairo and Memphis, has been received. In reply, I am instructed to say that the major-general commanding determined some time since to have but one post on the river between those posts, but that he has not yet fully decided where to locate that post. Fort Pillow will probably be his choice. General Gillmore will look into the matter fully when he goes up the river, and upon his and your joint recommendation the commanding general will base his action.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 5, 1865.

Mr. George H. Ellery, U. S. Purchasing Agent:

Your letter of the 3d instant reached me through the post-office yesterday afternoon. Whilst I am desirous of facilitating and expedit-

*See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 951.
†See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 952.
ing business as much as possible, I am compelled to regard and obey the orders I am acting under and which do not admit of my opening two cotton permit offices. The duties of the cotton permit offices are of so delicate a nature that they cannot properly be delegated. The amount of work done by this officer during the few days his office has been in operation is truly astonishing, and would of itself induce the supposition that sufficient caution and deliberation is not used by him.
Between the 22d December and 31st December he issued 147 safeguards or permits, amounting to 19,381 bales, besides 30,000 pounds of seed cotton. Our main reliance is upon yourself to scrutinize claims before issuing applications, and our presumption is that the holding of your signature is of itself a guarantee that the party who holds it is justly within the bounds of existing regulations and orders.

Very respectfully,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE,
No. 4. } Memphis, Tenn., January 5, 1865.

IV. The Sixty-eighth U. S. Colored Infantry is hereby detailed exclusively for engineer duty until further orders, and the commanding officer of said regiment will report without delay to Maj. U. G. S. De Buol, Seventh U. S. Colored (Heavy), engineer in charge of fortifications of Memphis, for instructions.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. C. Veatch:

R. G. CURTIS,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF VICKSBURG,
No. 5. } Vicksburg, Miss., January 5, 1865.

V. Capt. W. F. Kerns, assistant quartermaster, will furnish transportation to Memphis for the cavalry command of Brigadier-General Grierson, composed as follows: First Brigade, Colonel Karge commanding—Second New Jersey Cavalry, Seventh Indiana, Fourth Missouri,
First Mississippi Mounted Rifles. Second Brigade, Colonel Winslow
commanding—Fourth Iowa Cavalry, Third Iowa Cavalry, Tenth Missouri Cavalry. Third Brigade, Colonel Osband commanding—Third U. S. Colored Cavalry, Second Wisconsin Cavalry, Eleventh Illinois Cavalry, Fourth Illinois Cavalry. Also prisoners brought in by the command and pack train.

By command of Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn:

W. H. MORGAN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
No. 3. } Saint Louis, Mo., January 5, 1865.

3. Maj. H. Hannahs, Fiftieth Missouri Volunteers, is assigned to duty on the staff of the general commanding as acting assistant adjutant-general, in charge of office.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

A. VEZIN,
Major-General Dodge:

I would not think it best to withdraw the troops from Caruthersville and send them to Bloomfield, as they are all cavalry and it would be difficult to obtain forage for them and they can do good service where they are. If you desire it I can suggest what troops might be sent to Bloomfield with benefit to the service. One company of infantry stationed there to do garrison duty would enable the cavalry now there to do all the scouting necessary at present.

J. B. Rogers,
Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 5, 1865.

Colonel Rogers, Cape Girardeau:

What were the circumstances calling for troops at Caruthersville, on the Mississippi River; and do you consider it necessary that troops should remain there? The major-general commanding the department desires this information.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., January 5, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

Major: I have the honor to report my arrival at this place and that I have assumed the command of this district.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

GENERAL ORDERS, \ HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA, No. 1. \ Rolla, Mo., January 5, 1865.

In pursuance of General Orders, No. 246, of December 31, 1864, from headquarters Department of the Missouri, I hereby assume command of the District of Rolla.

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 5, 1865.

Colonel Phillips, Warrensburg:

Order a company of cavalry to report to Colonel Harding at Kansas City immediately, to remain there until further orders. Their regular tri-monthly reports can be sent through you as usual, but for scouting purposes, &c., they will be subject to Colonel Harding's order.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
CHAf.LX.) 423CORRESPONDENCE, ETC. DNION.
Headquarters District of Central Missouri,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 5, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-Genera|, Department of the Missouri:

MAJOR: May I be permitted to inquire how long Colonel Harding's command is to remain at Kansas City? I desire to place an officer in command of that sub-district, headquarters at Kansas City. Lieut. Col. B. F. Lazear, First Cavalry Missouri State Militia, was intended for that command, but Colonel Harding being stationed at Kansas City, commanding post and reporting to General Fisk, makes the situation a little awkward and embarrassing. If it is designed to continue Colonel Harding there I will arrange the sub-district headquarters and command so as to avoid conflict as far as possible. As it stands now I am often embarrassed in the matter of reference of necessary papers there and obtaining required information. I trust this inquiry may be properly appreciated, assuring you that it is made in no spirit of complaint, but simply for information to enable me to give directions to affairs pertaining to that portion of the district.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. Dist.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 5, 1865.

Colonel Harding, Kansas City:

Have you any mounted force? What about the murder of Johnson?

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

KANSAS CITY, January 5, 1865—12.30 p. m.

General Dodge,
Commanding Department:

Johnson was killed three miles from here by bushwhackers or Kansas soldiers, I have not been able to learn which. He was threatened by both. Yesterday I procured horses to mount one company and sent them to Hickman Mills; also sent an infantry company to the Blue, the new mail being threatened. I am in this dilemma: Cavalry at several posts near me and cannot move them out of camp. I do not report to the district commander, and he can give me no orders. I can with my men, if I go on pressing horses and disregard the fact that I am in the Central District, clean out Jackson County, and will do it if you will give me such orders as will not bring me in conflict with other officers. The quartermaster here has no serviceable stock, according to his official report. Will write by mail.

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Volunteers, Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 5, 1865—2.20 p. m.

Colonel Harding, Kansas City:

I want those guerrillas and robbers exterminated, and when you hear of them anywhere in the country use them up. I will try to have a company of cavalry report to you. Avoid any difficulty with Kansas. If you know of any one harboring guerrillas report them to me by telegraph.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., January 5, 1865.

General Fisk:
Yesterday I sent two companies out, one to the Blue and one (mounted) to Hickman’s. Will press horses and give receipts. They will be returned. Bushwhackers were gathering to rob the Saint Louis mail, which now comes via Independence.

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Volunteers.

MACON, January 5, 1865.

Major-General DODGE, Saint Louis:
Hines, of Boone, and “Forty” Campbell, of Howard, both noted guerrillas of North Missouri, have been killed. The latter was found in an artificial cave about two miles from Fayette. It was decidedly the hole of a copperhead. Jim Jackson has been severely, I trust mortally, wounded. Our troops are on the alert and weeding out the villains daily and nightly.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 5, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk, Macon:
What do you hear about the troubles in Howard and Boone? Who is to work down there? Had not a mounted force better be sent to look after them?

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

MACON, Mo., January 5, 1865—5 p.m.

Major-General DODGE:
We have in Boone and Howard all the mounted force we can possibly spare from other points. The best mounted troops we have are stationed at Rocheport, Fayette, and Glasgow, and are doing very good service. We suffer for the want of horses.

C. B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

MACON, Mo., January 5, 1865—8 p.m.

Major-General DODGE:
I see by this morning's Democrat what I suppose called out your dispatch of to-day. “Lincoln,” the correspondent, misrepresents the case most wickedly. Five companies of the Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia are in Howard and Boone doing good service.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.
Macon, January 5, 1865.

Messrs. McKee and Fishback,
Missouri Democrat, Saint Louis, Mo.:

Will you please give me the name of your correspondent at Columbia who signed "Lincoln" in this morning's Democrat, and please say, to-morrow morning, you are officially advised that the statements by him made were incorrect? The best troops of my command are in the counties of Howard and Boone, and are doing first-rate service. Half of the Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia are down there, and part of the Forty-ninth. I will give you the secret—don't let it out. Certain gentlemen at Columbia want an entire company of cavalry to escort them to and from the railroad. We don't propose to furnish it. Please put us right and tell us who Lincoln is.

CLINTON B. FISK.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., January 5, 1865.

Stephen Blanchard,
Chairman Committee, Oregon, Mo.:

Dear Sir: Your letter of the 23d ultimo was received during my absence from Macon. I am pained to learn of the continued troubles in Holt County. I was fearful that your community were educating the lawless spirits to deeds of violence and shame when last September they denounced the military authorities for arresting and punishing common thieves. It is a dangerous and destructive doctrine to inculcate that because a man is for the Union he cannot therefore do any wrong. I have directed the commanding officer at Saint Joseph to give you all the assistance in his power to relieve and preserve the peace and quiet of Holt County. I am clearly of the opinion that all rebels should leave the State of Missouri and not return during the war. I shall go as far in that direction as any other officer, or as far as my superiors will permit me to go. I will sustain your committee in making the invitation to all rebels to quietly withdraw from among us until the strife is over. You will, however, consult with Colonel Pinger, commanding officer at Saint Joseph, and Captain Walser, provost-marshal, touching the matter. I hope soon to hear of a better state of things in Holt County.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
No. 3. } Macon, Mo., January 5, 1865.

1. The Fifty-ninth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, Col. F. Mor-sey commanding, is hereby relieved from active duty. Ordnance and quartermaster's stores will be turned over to the proper staff officers of Enrolled Missouri Militia of the Eighth Military District.

2. The detachment of Fiftieth Enrolled Missouri Militia, under command of Lieut. Russell Smith, stationed at Edina, Knox County, Mo., is hereby relieved from active duty. The arms of the command will be kept at Edina under proper custody.
3. Capt. G. A. Holloway, assistant adjutant-general, having received notice from the War Department of the acceptance of his resignation, is hereby relieved from duty at these headquarters.

5. Captain Teague, Company C, Thirty-seventh Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, on duty at Troy, Lincoln County, Mo., is hereby relieved from active service. Captain Teague will transfer all State property in his possession to the proper staff officers of the Eighth Military District, Enrolled Missouri Militia.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

G. A. HOLLOWAY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., January 5, 1865.

General J. B. Douglass,
Columbia, Mo.:

General: Your favor of the 22d ultimo awaited my return from Saint Louis, whither I have been in attendance of court-martial for the last two weeks. The chief of cavalry of the department has been consummating consolidation arrangements for the cavalry of my command, and I have therefore been waiting his action, and I had been led to conclude that Boone County would take care of itself. What has become of the Columbia organization? I have this day ordered Captain Cook's company to Rocheport, and hope they will kill every rebel in Boone and Howard Counties. I wish you would give me the names of twenty-five families for immediate deportation to the land of their love. I desire to send them out at once, and quietly pick out first-class families. I also want the names of the parties who should pay forfeited bonds. I will proceed to collect forthwith without waiting trial by commission. Give me good and sure cases and I will collect the money in double-quick.

Very respectfully,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Macon, January 5, 1865.

Colonel Pinger,
Saint Joseph:

Can you not stop the outrages in Holt County? Letters from that region indicate a very bad state of affairs.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Saint Joseph, January 5, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:

There is a secret in the outrages that are committed in Holt County, which after discovered will let you know, in which some of the most prominent citizens of this county are concerned.

JOHN PINGER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Sub-District.

* See Vol. XL, Part IV, p. 918.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Whittemore's Ranch, N. Mex., January 5, 1865.

Brig. Gen. MARCELLUS M. CROCKER, U. S. Volunteers,
Commanding at Fort Sumner, N. Mex.:

GENERAL: The general commanding the department directs me to write to you as follows: Send all men belonging to Company A, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, to Fort Stanton. It is supposed that some are at your post unless they left with Lieutenant Hubbell for Fort Stanton. The general saw a Navajo woman having with her a Navajo girl, aged about twelve years, about three miles from this place. They had evidently followed an ox train which had brought flour to Fort Sumner from Mr. Moore a few days since, and this evening another Navajo woman, aged about eighteen, came into this ranch from the direction of Fort Sumner. This last one he has asked Mr. Whittemore to return to Fort Sumner by the first opportunity. The general is under the impression that a great many Navajo women are inveigled away from Fort Sumner by Mexicans who come there with supplies, and that others are perhaps wandering away toward the settlements. This must be effectually stopped at once, and he leaves it with you to adopt the means. It is understood here that Doctor Steck told Mr. Taylor that the Navajoes are going off by fives and sixes every day; that the Indians told him so. One or two movable pickets commanded by a determined officer could soon ascertain whether this is true and put a stop to it. An officer and a half dozen men stationed at this point to search trains might also do a great deal of good. In conclusion, the general suggests whether it would not be better to not permit any Indians to leave the post without a written passport, these to be delivered up on their return.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ERASTUS W. WOOD,
Aide-de-Camp.

SPECIAL ORDERS,
HDQRS. DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
No. 4. New Orleans, January 6, 1865.

2. The Second Illinois Battery will proceed to Greenville and report for duty to Col. J. H. Sypher, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, commanding Artillery Camp of Instruction.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:
FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,
HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
No. 6. New Orleans, La., January 6, 1865.

3. Capt. F. W. Emery, assistant adjutant-general, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty with the Third Brigade of the Reserve Corps of the Military Division of West Mississippi, and will report accordingly, without delay, to Brig. Gen. C. C. Andrews, commanding the brigade, at Morganza, La.
5. Maj. Gen. F. Steele, U. S. Volunteers, is assigned to the command of the camp to be established at Kennerville, La., and charged with the duty of preparing the troops to be assembled there for the field. He will report directly to the headquarters of the division and will make his requisitions for supplies upon the chiefs of the staff departments at these headquarters.

6. Capt. Henry M. Lazelle, Eighth U. S. Infantry, having reported at these headquarters in accordance with War Department Special Orders, No. 425, paragraph 54, series of 1864, is hereby temporarily assigned to duty as acting assistant inspector-general of the troops now being collected at Kennerville, La. He will report to Maj. Gen. F. Steele without delay.

7. Lieut. Col. J. G. Chandler, chief quartermaster Nineteenth Army Corps, will report in person to the chief quartermaster Department of the Gulf for duty as inspector in the quartermaster's department.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 6, 1865.

Brigadier-General ULLMANN,
Morganza, La.:

The commanding general directs that Brigadier-General Andrews proceed with the regiments of the Third Brigade, Reserve Corps, now at Morganza, as soon as transportation can be furnished, to Kennerville, reporting on arrival there to Major-General Steele.

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., January 6, 1865—4 p. m.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Your telegram of the 30th ultimo received.* It is impracticable to supply a competent garrison at Fort Smith by the Arkansas River. That river cannot be relied upon. Orders for the evacuation of Fort Smith left here on the 13th ultimo. The last report from General Thayer was dated at Fort Smith, 22d ultimo. Five regiments were en route for this point, and the remainder of the garrison was to follow on the arrival of a small train expected from Fort Scott. Two batteries have arrived here per steamer, without horses. I found here on my arrival, 22d ultimo, a rise of ten feet, and ventured to send several steamers to transport public property from Fort Smith. Stage of water would not admit of a second trip. Have sent supplies to Lewisburg to meet the troops from Fort Smith. It is proposed to maintain Lewisburg as the western post of the department, and we will, according to the experience of the past two years, find no little difficulty in maintaining animals there by the river.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

* See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 964.
Special Orders, No. 6.
Hdqrs. Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 6, 1865.

1. The commanding officer of the Second Connecticut Battery will proceed without delay with his battery to New Orleans, La., and report on arrival to the chief of artillery, Military Division of West Mississippi, for duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

2. The commanding officer of the Seventh Massachusetts Battery will proceed without delay with his battery to New Orleans, La., and report on arrival to the chief of artillery, Military Division of West Mississippi, for duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

3. The commanding officer of Battery D, Second Missouri Artillery, will proceed with two sections of his battery to Saint Charles, Ark., and report for duty to the commanding officer at that place. Before leaving Devall's Bluff he will turn over to the quartermaster's department the horses attached to the two sections herein designated, retaining all harness and other equipment of the battery. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

LITTLE ROCK, January 6, 1865.
(Received 10 a.m.)

General Shaler,
Devall's Bluff:

Let the movement of the Fourth Brigade, Reserve Corps, proceed. No emergency exists, but no unnecessary delay should occur. Direct Colonel Black to refer no more questions to this office. You will please give such orders for this movement as the public good demands. The simplest way is to use transportation as it can be had to mouth of White River, and thence opportunities occur daily to New Orleans.

By order of Major-General Reynolds:

W. D. GREEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Second Division, Seventh Army Corps,
Devall's Bluff, Ark., January 6, 1865.

Colonel BLACK,
Commanding Reserve Brigade:

Sir: Major-General Reynolds directs that you proceed in execution of the movement of your brigade previously ordered from headquarters Department of Arkansas. The Kate Hart can start at once. The Mepham will be ready for you about 10 a.m. to-morrow. Inclosed is a copy of telegram from Lieutenant-Colonel Green to Brigadier-General Shaler.*

Very respectfully, yours,

CHAS. E. HOWE,

* See next, ante.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 6, 1865.

Col. A. H. Ryan,
Lewisburg:
The general desires to know the latest information you have from the Fort Smith forces, and that you answer immediately. He also says it is not practicable to send you any more cavalry at the present time.
Respectfully,

W. D. Green,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

I leave for the North to-day. Shall join Carr and party at Devall's Bluff.

____________________________

LEWISBURG, January 6, 1865.

Major Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:
Courier in last night from Norristown reports the rebels with artillery camped back of Dardanelle. River rose one inch last night. Heavy snow-storm this a.m. Is there any force out from Brownsville in direction of Little Red River? With my present force I cannot keep a good lookout in that direction. Soon as storm admits I will send steamer Alamo to assist the Lotus to this place.
Respectfully,

A. H. Ryan,
Colonel.

____________________________

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 6, 1865.

Col. A. H. Ryan,
Commanding, Lewisburg:
Your dispatch received. Action approved. No force out from Brownsville in direction of Little Red River.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

____________________________

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 6, 1865.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn,
Commanding District of Vicksburg, Vicksburg, Miss.:

General: The major-general commanding department directs that if the cavalry now out on expedition under Brigadier-General Grierson should strike the river within your command the entire force shall be immediately sent by river to Memphis, and a report sent by first steamer of any information received of their arrival at any given point or of any information brought in concerning them.
I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. H. Harris,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
General Orders,} \hspace{1cm} \text{Hdqrs. District of Natchez,} \hspace{1cm} \\
\text{Department of Mississippi,} \hspace{1cm} \\
\text{Natchez, Miss., January 6, 1865.} \\

1. The following order is published for the information of all concerned.*

2. In obedience thereto I assume command of the district. The following staff officers are announced: Capt. B. F. Morey, assistant adjutant-general; First Lieut. A. S. Montgomery, Seventh Missouri Cavalry, and First Lieut. E. D. Meier, First Louisiana Cavalry, aide-de-camp; Capt. C. H. Thompson, subsistence department; Capt. W. R. McComas, Eighty-third Ohio Infantry, ordnance officer and engineer; First Lieut. T. D. Johnson, Third Iowa Cavalry, acting assistant quartermaster; First Lieut. E. A. Denicke, Signal Corps, U. S. Army. Chiefs of other staff departments will be announced when selected.

3. Office hours will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Business of importance stated to the staff officer on duty daily at headquarters at any other hours will receive attention.

J. W. DAVIDSON, \\
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Special Orders,} \hspace{1cm} \text{Headquarters District of Natchez,} \\
\text{Natchez, Miss., January 6, 1865.} \\

Brig. Gen. Mason Brayman, U. S. Volunteers, is assigned to the command of that portion of the District of Natchez lying west of the Mississippi River, to be designated as the Sub-District of Vidalia, with headquarters at Vidalia, La.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. W. Davidson:

B. F. MOREY, \\
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri, \\
Saint Louis, January 6, 1865. \\

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen, \\
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to report, for the information of the general commanding, that everything in this department is quiet, except the depredations of a few guerrilla bands. These are being hunted down, about thirty of them having been killed during the two weeks past, among the number three notorious leaders. The troops in the department are going out of service very rapidly. They are generally posted now, having in view the obtaining of forage and shelter for stock as well as for local defense. I am endeavoring, so far as possible, to concentrate them at the vital points and on our lines of communication. Price in his raid destroyed most of the bridges, blockhouses, &c. The bridges are being rebuilt by Government. The blockhouses at the important bridges should be replaced, but I have no troops to do it with. I would like to obtain a few companies of engineers for that purpose, as I consider it important that the block-houses be built. All the troops throughout the department have been ordered to protect themselves at their stations by forts, stockades, &c. The lines of communication are not molested now, and have only small guards at the important bridges. There is reported to be a force gathering around Pocahontas, Batesville, &c. Shelby ordered them to concentrate in Strawberry Bottoms on January 20 instant. I doubt whether he gets many of the men. The going out of service of the Missouri State Militia, and sending away to General Thomas of the U. S. Volunteers, will strip the department of troops. General Halleck when he called upon me for the latter stated that they would be returned when the crisis requiring them had passed.

* See General Orders, No. 2, Headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, p. 401.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

[Indorsement.]
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, January 29, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded,* with the recommendation that provision be made for the contingency herein referred to. I see no present prospect of supplying this deficiency from other departments of the division. With this I transmit a list of the regiments with the dates at which their terms of service expire.

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General.

[Inclosure.]

Missouri State Militia.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Missouri State Militia.</td>
<td>Cavalry</td>
<td>February 3 to April 8, 1862.</td>
<td>Three years.</td>
<td>February 3 to April 8, 1865.</td>
<td>867</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>December 4, 1861, to October 31, 1862.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>December 4, 1864, to October 31, 1865.</td>
<td>655</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>January, 1862, to December, 1863.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>January, 1865, to December, 1866.</td>
<td>736</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>January 16 to April 1, 1863.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>January 16 to April 1, 1865.</td>
<td>843</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>May 19, 1862.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>May 19, 1865.</td>
<td>712</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>January 12, 1862, to March 15, 1863.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>January 12, 1865, to March 15, 1866.</td>
<td>661</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>April 4 to April 21, 1862.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>April 4 to April 21, 1865.</td>
<td>831</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>December 8, 1861, to April 14, 1862.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>December 8, 1864, to April 14, 1865.</td>
<td>1,005</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>April, 1862.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>April, 1865.</td>
<td>834</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>December 21, 1861, to May 10, 1863.</td>
<td>do</td>
<td>December 21, 1864, to May 10, 1865.</td>
<td>588</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The above is taken from the regimental records.

J. F. BENNETT,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
No. 6. } Saint Louis, Mo., January 6, 1865.

12. The Second Missouri Cavalry, Lieut. Col. C. B. Hunt commanding, now stationed at Benton Barracks, will report for duty to Col. B. L. E. Bonneville, commanding post at Benton Barracks.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

* To Major-General Halleck.
General Orders, Headquarters Saint Louis District, No. 2.
Saint Louis, Mo., January 6, 1865.

The following-named officers constitute the district staff; they will be addressed and obeyed accordingly, viz: Lieut. Col. David Murphy, Fiftieth Missouri Volunteers, inspector; Maj. S. D. Carpenter, U. S. Volunteers, surgeon in charge; Maj. H. H. Williams, Tenth Kansas Veteran Volunteers, provost-marshal; Maj. W. Fischer, Fifth Missouri State Militia [Cavalry], topographical engineer; Maj. C. H. Gregory, Seventh Kansas Veteran Cavalry, chief of cavalry and acting ordnance officer; Maj. H. Hannahs, Fiftieth Missouri Volunteers, acting assistant adjutant-general, in charge of office; Capt. H. Garvens, U. S. Volunteers, district quartermaster; Capt. G. W. Gilson, Fortieth Missouri Volunteers, assistant inspector; Capt. C. L. Porter, Eighteenth U. S. Colored Infantry, in charge of permit office; Chaplain J. G. Forman, First Infantry Missouri State Militia, superintendent refugees and contrabands; First Lieut. William Ewing, U. S. Army, assistant commissary of musters; First Lieut. A. Vezin, Fourth Missouri Cavalry, aide-de-camp and acting assistant adjutant-general; Second Lieut. G. E. Hodgdon, Veteran Reserve Corps, judge-advocate; Second Lieut. T. F. Oakes, Eighteenth U. S. Colored Infantry, aide-de-camp.

By order of Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing, jr.:

H. HANNAHS, Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Saint Louis District, Saint Louis, January 6, 1865.

Colonel Bonneville, Benton Barracks:

The Thirty-ninth Missouri Volunteers will arrive at your post tomorrow morning. Please furnish quarters for 575 men on application.

H. HANNAHS, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Cape Girardeau, January 6, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS, Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Troops were stationed at Caruthersville before I took command, by the advice of Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller, then commanding, at the request of citizens there. I approved it because I did not think it safe or necessary, but after strong stockade had been built, rendering it perfectly safe, and after the citizens had been led to commit themselves, so as to endanger their lives and property if the force was withdrawn, I thought it to be a breach of faith and hardly just to withdraw the force and expose them to the revenge of guerrillas. It prevents smuggling, protects navigation on the river, and renders it unnecessary to keep as large a force at New Madrid as would otherwise be necessary. The same force now at both would be necessary at New Madrid to keep the river clear of guerrillas. Besides, the time of the troops at Caruthersville expires on the 24th instant, and they could hardly be got on duty at another post before their time would be out. However, I think the reasons for keeping a post there are not strong ones. My views on the whole situation there are fully explained in an informal letter to General Ewing, dated December 17, and several telegrams between that time and January 1, which perhaps it would be well to show Major-General Dodge. The post was established by Major-General Pleasonton.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, January 6, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER AT PLEASANT HILL:

It is reported by telegraph from Kansas City that eighty of Shelby's men are in Jackson County, moving toward Pleasant Hill. Act accordingly and advise me.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

KANSAS CITY, January 6, 1865—10 a. m.

General DODGE,
Saint Louis:

Dispatches of 5th just received. Will telegraph answer as soon as I can get the information. Have heard from my men in the country; they are doing good work. Would like to have my whole regiment here.

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri, Commanding Post.

KANSAS CITY, January 6, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER AT WARRENSBURG:

Said to be eighty of Shelby's men in this county moving toward Pleasant Hill. Don't know that the report is true.

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,
Colonel, Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 6, 1865—4 p. m.

Brig. Gen. C. B. FISK,
Macon, Mo.:

It is reported that Charles Paul, a loyal man, was taken prisoner by Captain Benecke's company with intention of delivering him at Macon. He was not delivered, and it is thought the company killed him out of some personal spite. Look into this. Have the captain account for the man, and if statements are true we will hold the captain responsible.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
V. Company F, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, will march without delay to Rocheport, Boone County. The commanding officer will report in person for further orders and instructions to the commanding general of the district.

VII. Col. John F. Williams, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, is hereby assigned to command of Sub-District and Post of Macon, relieving Lieut. Col. D. M. Draper, of the same regiment, absent at Jefferson City.

VIII. In compliance with orders from the major-general commanding the Department of the Missouri, Capt. F. W. Fuchs, Battery C, Second Missouri Artillery, will immediately transfer the four mountain howitzers now in his possession to the proper officer in Saint Louis Arsenal.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

G. A. HOLLOWAY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

PAOLA, January 6, 1865.

Col. C. W. BLAIR:
The general directs me to inquire whether you have removed the troops from Mound City. He wishes to make some other changes when you have disposed of the troops.

GEO. S. HAMPTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

FORT SCOTT, January 6, 1865.

Capt. GEORGE S. HAMPTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Paola:

Orders went up to Mound City yesterday for one company and this morning another, leaving but one company at Mound City. They will not get started down, I suppose, till the first of next week. Have written the general on the subject. He will get my letter to-morrow night.

CHAS. W. BLAIR,
Colonel.
HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Lyon, Colo. Ter., January 6, 1865.

ACTING ASSISTANT ADJUTANT GENERAL,
District of Upper Arkansas, Fort Riley, Kans.:

SIR: I have the honor to report that since my report of the 13th of December last no Indians have appeared in this immediate vicinity, yet two bands have crossed the Arkansas River near the Cimarron Crossing, traveling northward. One party attacked a small party of whites returning from New Mexico, wounding six. The particulars I have not learned. Ed. Gurrier, who was in the Cheyenne camp at the time it was attacked by Colonel Chivington, on the 29th of November, has returned. He reports the Indians to have moved from their camp on the Smoky Hill and to have made camp again on Beaver Creek, more to the north and about 170 miles from this post. They are about the same in number as previous reports have stated, viz, 1,080 lodges of Sioux, 400 lodges of Cheyenne, and 40 of Arapaho. This would give them about 2,500 fighting men. The trails that have since crossed to the north were leading toward their camp, and must have been made by Little Raven's Arapahoes, or by the Kiowas and Comanches. In either case their forces are increased. The Indians are evidently preparing for war on a larger scale than before their battle at Sand Creek. Black Kettle, Little Robe, and Knock Knee, who were reported killed, are at the main camp alive and well, and are the loudest for war of any of the chiefs. I think it very unsafe now for any small parties to attempt to pass over either the Platte or Arkansas routes without a large escort, except there be a large force sent against the Indians to call them to their camp for its protection. The winter I consider the best time to fight the Indians, as their stock is reduced and they cannot move as rapidly. I believe a large force of cavalry, with forage, could overtake their main camp now, as they are preparing their supply of buffalo meat. Only small war parties are now out, and these we cannot follow with any horses we have in this country with success. Captain Soule has just returned from a scout about fifty miles to the north and east. He visited the camp on Sand Creek where Colonel Chivington attacked them. No Indians had been there since Colonel C. left. Captain Soule could only find the bodies of sixty-nine Indians, and a large majority of these were women and children. I am satisfied that the first reports were wrong as to the numbers. There could not have been 150 killed in all. The Indians will soon commence depredations. They are evidently only waiting now to learn whether or not we are preparing to penetrate into their country. My force here is large enough to protect the post, but not to take the field, and my stock is so much reduced that I can only send escorts for the mail once in two or three weeks.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SCOTT J. ANTHONY,
Major, First Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, January 6, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Kansas:

MAJOR: I have the honor to submit, for the early consideration of the general commanding, that owing to the scarcity of work in the mountains at present and the little taste that the 100-days' men had of soldiering, combined with the urgent necessity for troops, particularly in this district, permission should be obtained to raise all the cavalry possible in this district, not to exceed one maximum regiment. I could in one month or less raise five full companies, which might be assigned to one of the regiments now in the field, to complete the organization or remain a battalion. If this is not done in two months it will be too late. The matter of raising the regiment could be given to the governor or whoever it was seen most fit. Were it left to me none but officers of the highest tone would get positions; but I prefer to have nothing special to do with it. I have not made this statement or suggestion without consulting some of the best men in town, and seeing with my own eyes the opening for enlistments, as well as the urgent necessity for the same to insure protection to honest, hard-working men.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Hatch's Ranch, N. Mex., January 6, 1865.

Capt. EDWARD H. BERGMANN,
First Cav. N. Mex. Vols., Comdg. at Fort Bascom, N. Mex.:

Sir: The general commanding the department received at this place, this evening, your letter of the 1st instant. He directs me to write to you as follows: That you must not relax your vigilance with reference to Kiowas and Comanches. He neither expects they will surprise your post nor run off your stock. Whether it is judicious to herd your stock as far away as the Conchas is a point about which he has much doubt. You will have that stock guarded wherever it may be by at least a full company complete, officers and all. The companies will take turns every ten days on this duty, and the greatest watchfulness will be observed that the animals neither stray, are stolen, nor are run off by the Indians. The commanding general here alludes to the commissary and quartermaster's animals and Captain Baca's horses. In this connection he desires that you will send him a list of all these animals, made from actual count. Have a party of men under a careful officer drilled in the use of the howitzers. You will not have much ammunition to expend in practice with these guns. Make a requisition for what you need and showing the exact amount on hand. You will keep your troops busily employed in drilling, carefully tending their stock, and completing your fort. Report every week your progress, the condition of your stock, all intelligence received in relation to hostile Indians, and if any of the Indians send in a flag of truce treat the bearers well and tell them to wait at the post until you hear from department headquarters. Send an intelligent officer to visit the different herds of sheep and cattle which may be grazing between Hatch's Ranch and Fort Bascom, and warn the men in charge of those herds that until all danger of a visit from the Kiowas and Comanches shall have passed by they had better move their flocks and herds on the west side of the Pecos, between Anton Chico and Giddings' Ranch. Report the result of this warning. There is good pasturage between the Agua Negra and Gallinas, on the east side of the Pecos, to which they might be driven. In case you are menaced by an attack of a large force of Kiowas and Comanches you will send to Fort Sumner and ask help of General Crocker, in the event that you have not troops enough at your own post to whip that force. Report at once the amount of all kinds of supplies which you have on hand. The general desires me to say in conclusion that he places the utmost confidence in your vigilance and ability, and he believes that you will exert both to the utmost in guarding against surprise and in furthering the best interests of the Government at your post and in its vicinity.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ERASTUS W. WOOD,
Aide-de-Camp.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF IOWA,
Dubuque, Iowa, January 6, 1865.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
Department of the Northwest:

Sir: This evening's mail brought several communications from the Upper Missouri country in regard to Indians and Indian affairs, the substance of which letters I hereby transcribe for the information of the general commanding the department: Capt. J. H. Pell, assistant adjutant-general, writing from the post near Fort Pierre on the 25th of December, 1864, states that all reports from the Indians show that they are in a very destitute condition, some of them almost starving; that in addition to the utter destruction of their property by my troops last summer, the presence of troops in their section of country west of the Missouri has driven away all the buffalo; and it appears also a great many more were killed and wounded in my light with them than I reported in my official report, for I only reported the killed seen on the field. They are very anxious to come in and make peace, but are unable to do so, and on that account he would suggest Fort Rice as a suitable point to meet them and talk with them. These Indians are the Minneconjou and Sans-Arc Sioux. Colonel Dimon, First U. S. Volunteers, commanding officer at Fort Rice, in a letter dated November 26, states that Two Bears and about eighty-five lodges, which is equivalent to near 300 warriors, is living near the fort. This is the chief I mentioned to the general as coming in after the campaign and giving himself up—a brave and I believe him to be a true Indian. Two Bears brought into the fort on the 24th Black Catfish and three of his warriors. This is a Yanktonnais chief, and heretofore has been one of our most bitter enemies. Catfish says he and most of his people are anxious for peace, but that Medicine Bear, another Yanktonnais chief, is using his influence among the Yanktonnais against peace, but that he will do all he can to bring his people in. He also states that the Santees, or Minnesota Indians, and the half-breeds of the north are trying to keep the rest of the Indians from making peace. The colonel also reports on the 1st of December that a small party of his garrison were returning from the Cannon Ball River when they were approached by a small body of Indians, who treated them as friends, but fired on a party of three soldiers who were following them, consisting of Lieutenant Noyes, Sergeant Thompson, and Private Townsend. The two first were slightly wounded with arrows, but Private Townsend is missing. The party were thought to be Santees. Two Bears and a party of Indians had gone in pursuit of them. Captain Moreland, commanding officer at Fort Berthold, writes on the 15th of November that Red Moccasin, a Minneconjou chief, with forty of his warriors, came to his post anxious to make peace. He stated that his party was encamped near the head waters of the Cannon Ball River, and also that Medicine Bear, the Yanktonai chief, with 100 warriors, had also been in, anxious for peace, stating that there was no use of Indians trying to fight the whites, &c. These Indians were camped near the butte of the Maison du Chien. I place very little confidence in this Indian, for I believe he is one of the biggest scoundrels in the Sioux Nation. I also inclose you a copy of a letter from Captain Moreland in regard to the actions of the half-breeds of the north. They are a great nuisance, and I don’t see how we are to manage them without our troops are allowed to follow them into the British Possessions. I fear they will always be a great obstacle to any permanent settlement of difficulties in this section of country. I have always been of the opinion that Indians could be used to subjugate Indians, and the letters I have lately received confirm me in that opinion.

With much respect, your obedient servant,

ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.

[Inclosure.]

FORT BERTHOLD, DAK. TER., November 16, 1864.

Brig. Gen. ALFRED SULLY:

Sir: I have the honor to call your attention to the fact that the half-breeds and whites (English and Scotch) from the Red River country northeast of this place are constantly traversing the country adjacent to this post (coming within forty to sixty miles of here), visiting and trading with the various bands of Sioux Indians inhabiting this region, supplying them with arms and munitions of war and inciting them to hostilities; counseling them to drive the whites from the country or exterminate them. There was a small party of these Red River traders visited this place not long since, who had been upon one of these trading excursions with the Sioux. I am not advised whether they reside on this side of the line or in the British Possessions. They are undoubtedly prompted in these proceedings by mercenary motives, but their operations and their counsels are evidently detrimental to the interests of the whites and the Government, and unless they are restricted in some manner will result in much mischief. By being deprived of the means of obtaining necessary supplies through the ordinary channels, the Indians are driven by necessity to sue for peace, and many of the hostile bands already exhibit a desire for peace. But so long as they are allowed to be tampered with by these itinerant vagabonds, so long will all the efforts of the Government to subdue them be futile.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. B. MORELAND,
Captain, Sixth Iowa Cavalry, Commanding Post.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, January 7, 1865.

The SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington, D. C.:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 10th ultimo.* I have not been unmindful of the interests

* See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 816.
referred to in that letter, and have given them and will continue to give them all the protection that can be given without endangering more important objects. The subject has been one of anxious consideration, not only on account of the private interests involved, but more prominently on account of the welfare of the laborers employed on the plantations. I have heretofore invited the attention of the authorities to the embarrassments connected with these interests, and I think it proper to add some facts showing the changes in the military relations that have occurred since this system was commenced: (1) Memphis, Vicksburg, and other important points on the Mississippi River were then not only strongly garrisoned, but there were heavy reserves at each point that were available for the protection of the plantations. (2) The reduction of the force in the Valley by transfers and by ordinary casualties (not less than 100,000 men) has reduced these garrisons to their minimum for safety, and has involved the necessity of abandoning some points that were of value in protecting the plantations, and of reducing the garrisons of others. (3) Many of these changes were made before I came into the command. In those made by me I have followed the rule of breaking up or reducing the posts that were of least value as military positions, and the same rule will be observed in any changes that may hereafter be made. (4) The plantation interests extend over a frontier line, on both banks of the Mississippi and some of its tributaries, of nearly 3,000 miles.

The protection that might reasonably have been given eighteen months ago cannot reasonably be expected now, and a full compliance with the wishes of the planters would involve a ruinous subdivision of the force in this command. It would not secure the desired end, but would expose the detachments to be captured or destroyed in detail, involve the loss of the property on the plantations, and subject the negroes to the danger of being carried off into slavery. The most effectual means of protecting these interests are military operations that will drive the organized force of the rebels from the vicinity of the river and the organization of the planters into home guards for protecting themselves against raiding parties and jayhawkers. Arrangements that were being made some time since to effect the first of these objects have been suspended, by the necessity of employing the available cavalry force of the division in operations upon Hood's communications. They will be resumed as soon as possible, and I will at all times give the planters any aid that they may require in organizing and arming any force that they can raise for local purposes. The points referred to in your communication are covered by existing orders, but I will renew them. I do not think, however, that it is wise to undertake more with regard to these interests than we have the ability to carry out, and I have carefully abstained from giving any encouragement to enterprises involving the investment of capital unless I felt assured that I could give them permanent protection. For convenience of reference I transmit with this copies of several papers bearing upon the subject, marked from A to E.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General.

* For inclosures here omitted, see General Orders, No. 4, Division of West Mississippi, May 25, 1864, Vol. XXXIV, Part IV, p. 4; Canby to Halleck, May 28, 1864, Vol. XXXIV, Part IV, p. 74, and General Orders, No. 82, Military Division of West Mississippi, December 12, 1864, Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 828.
The subjoined extracts from instructions from the Secretary of War are published for the information and government of commanders of departments and district commanders on the Mississippi River, and the following rules will be observed in carrying out these instructions:

First. The troops employed in the protection of leased plantations will be concentrated in strong positions for the protection of districts, and no detachment will be retained for the protection of isolated plantations exposed to attack and beyond the reach of immediate support.

Second. Each point occupied will be strengthened by defensive works so as to be secure against assaults, and to be able to hold out until re-enforced. When the isolated detachments are brought in the negroes dependent upon them for protection will be brought within our lines.

Third. The protection of the leased plantations will be held subordinate to the necessity of employing the troops for offensive military operations, and the troops so employed will be regarded as in the field, and will be kept in the state of preparation directed by division general orders.

Fourth. The wood yards to be established under the authority of War Department General Orders, No. 124, of March 28, 1864, will be established on islands not accessible by the enemy, or at points where the men employed can have the protection of the troops. No trade stores will be established at any points except those to be permanently occupied and garrisoned by at least a regiment.

Fifth. In giving protection to the establishments of freedmen the same rules will be observed. As far as practicable they will be established at or so near the permanent military posts as to be under the protection of the garrisons of those posts, and in making any change that may be necessary Colonel Eaton, the general superintendent, will be consulted.

The Secretary of War directs that when the troops protecting leased plantations are required for offensive operations they be used for that purpose, care being taken to give protection to the negroes on such plantations by bringing them within our lines.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. K. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Secretary of War,
Washington, D. C.:
thought proper to give, a large number of persons engaged in the cultivation of cotton and sugar. Protection leases and registers were extravagantly issued, and in many instances to cover plantations that were not and have not, since the commencement of the rebellion, been within the limits of our permanent occupation. Three classes of persons were engaged in these operations: (1) Loyal and respectable men from the North, who embarked their capital and labor as a permanent investment, and a part of the original planters who submitted themselves cheerfully to the change of circumstances. (2) Dishonest and unprincipled men who engaged in it for the opportunities it afforded for illegal trade with the enemy, or with the hope of securing large gains easily and rapidly. (3) A large part of the original planters who accepted the conditions imposed by the Government with the expectation that our occupation of the country would be temporary, and that they would be able in the end to secure not only their plantations but their slaves. The withdrawal of a large part of the force in the Valley consequent upon the operations of Generals Grant and Sherman has prevented the protection that was proper, and appears to have been promised, and exposed the first class, except those in the immediate vicinity of military posts, to raids of the enemy, who find in these plantations a convenient source of supply for many of their wants. The restrictions upon trade and the general failure of the crops throughout the Valley has disappointed the expectations of the second class, and a majority of them have abandoned the plantations they had leased, leaving the negroes to run at large or throwing them back upon the Army or Treasury Department for care and support. The third class, disappointed in their expectations of seeing the Valley reoccupied by the rebels, have left or are preparing [to] leave for points within the rebel lines, taking the negroes with them for the purpose of reducing them again into a state of slavery. The subject is one of grave difficulties. As at present managed it has not realized the results that were anticipated either for the Government or for the planters, and has greatly embarrassed military operations. Complicated as it is with the future of the negroes, I regard it as one of the most difficult problems we have yet to solve. It is idle to expect that until the strength of the great rebel armies is effectually broken troops can be spared for the purpose of giving protection to these interests to the extent that it is asked for by the planters and demanded by a proper regard for the welfare of the colored laborers on the plantations.

As a question of the private interests of the planters it is of subordinate importance, but, as a question involving the future welfare of an entire race, it should be second only to the measures that are necessary for the suppression of the rebellion. Regarding an increase of the force in this command as out of the question until the more important results are attained, it is important to determine what other measures can be adopted that will best meet the desired end. The policy to be adopted should be adopted by higher authority than that of the military commander, in order that it may be secured from the danger of change with every change of command. The course that seems best calculated to work good results is that of subdividing the plantations and thus multiplying the interests connected with them for the purpose of attracting an active, enterprising, and arms-bearing population, and the establishment of a system of military colonies capable of protecting themselves against anything except an organized invasion. The colonists should be put into military organizations, armed and equipped at the expense of the United States, and mustered into its service for the special duty of preserving order and protecting the plantations from raids, and protecting the approaches from the districts under the control of the rebels. It is necessary that they should be mustered into the service in order to subject them to military control and to secure proper treatment for them if they should fall into the hands of the enemy. When employed in the protection of private interests they should receive no pay, but if called upon to resist an invasion they should be placed on the same footing with other troops. To guard against the plantations becoming the center of unlawful trade with the enemy, and to secure the negroes employed on them from the danger of falling into the hands of the enemy and being reduced to a state of slavery, no leases should be given for any plantation that is beyond the reach of military supervision and protection, except in the cases where the lessees are able to maintain a force to protect themselves from raids, and hold them until they can be relieved. No plantations should be leased or registered without the knowledge and approval of the commander of the district in which they are located.

I have authorized local organizations to be formed and directed the issue of arms and ammunition for the purposes above indicated, and I propose to extend it wherever it can be done without danger that the means put into the hands of individuals will not be used against us, but the whole system should be so defined and fixed as not to expose the interests involved to embarrassment and loss by the changes and uncertainty to which they are now subjected.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General.

[January 7, 1865.—For Thomas to Canby, in regard to co-operation, see Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 540.]

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
No. 7. } New Orleans, La., January 7, 1865.

6. Capt. G. S. Atkinson, assistant quartermaster of volunteers, having reported at these headquarters in compliance with Special Orders, No. 348, Adjutant-General's Office, October 15, 1864, is assigned to duty with the troops now being collected at Kennerville, La., and will report accordingly, without delay, to Maj. Gen. F. Steele and to Bvt. Maj. C. S. McEntee, assistant quartermaster, at Kennerville.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
he directed me to organize some time about the end of September last. In obedience to the general's instructions, I submitted for his consideration a requisition for ordnance and ordnance stores deemed necessary for contemplated siege operations in the Department of the Gulf and elsewhere, on the 30th day of September, and on that day said requisition received the approval of the division commander. The requisitions were forwarded on the same day through Captain Shunk, chief of ordnance, Department of the Gulf, accompanied by a letter of instructions (a copy of which is herewith inclosed) requiring him to forward them to the Chief of Ordnance, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C., after he had complied with instructions. On several occasions since the requisitions for the above stores were forwarded I have had communication with Captain Shunk asking to be informed if he had received any notice of their being ordered. In answer to my inquiries Captain Shunk has informed me that he has received no notice of the stores being forwarded or ordered, and that he has several times written calling attention to the necessity of their being sent without delay. He has also informed me that he had sent a duplicate of the requisition to the Ordnance Department, but received no reply upon the subject. I call the attention of the major-general commanding to the above facts at this time, as I deem it advisable to let him know that the siege train cannot be got in readiness for siege operations unless the ordnance and ordnance stores called for in the requisition are sent forward, and to request that the attention of the Chief of Ordnance, U. S. Army, may be asked in connection with the matter.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. TOTTEN,
Brigadier-General, Chief of Artillery and Ordnance.

[Inolosnre.]

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ARTILLER Y AND ORDNANCE,
New Orleans, La., September 30, 1864.

Capt. F. J. SHUNK,
Chief of Ordnance, Department of the Gulf:

CAPTAIN: I am directed by the major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi to transmit the inclosed requisition for ordnance and ordnance stores for a siege train, &c., through you to the Chief of Ordnance, Army of the United States, at Washington, D. C. The object of transmitting this requisition through your office is that you may inform the Chief of Ordnance at Washington what part of the stores called for are on hand in depot at New Orleans and available for shipment to Barrancas and Pensacola when demanded. The stores reported in the requisitions as on hand are those now actually in the possession of troops manning siege batteries already or partially organized. The stores which you may have in depot at New Orleans, or which may be available elsewhere in the Department of the Gulf for the contemplated siege train, should, as a matter of course, be deducted from those to be supplied. The major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi directs that you forward without delay the requisition, with the information as to what proportion of the stores you can supply, and which in consequence it will be unnecessary to send from the North. The utmost dispatch in the accumulation of the stores is required by the major-general commanding.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. TOTTEN,
Brigadier-General, Chief of Artillery and Ordnance.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 7, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Daniel Ullmann,
Commanding U. S. Forces, Morganza, La.:

General: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 22d ultimo, which should have been replied to sooner but that he had intended to have stopped at your post to converse with you fully on various matters of importance while on his way to visit Admiral Lee. As the admiral has signified his intention of coming to New Orleans soon, the general will not go up the river for the present. He directs me to say that he has carefully read and considered the contents of your interesting letter, and that he appreciates the disadvantages under which you assumed command at Morganza, and your earnest efforts to prevent improper communication beyond your lines and illegal traffic in every shape and manner. He desires, however, that the policy adopted by the Government in relation to the trade in products of insurrectionary districts shall be carried out in good faith, and that all passes and safe-conducts granted under the authority of General Orders, No. 80, series of 1864, from these headquarters, be respected, unless pending or prospective military operations absolutely forbid it. Without discussing the expediency and policy of this trade, the military authorities have no alternative but to obey the executive order in spirit and letter, and your attention is called to paragraph 5 of General Orders, No. 80, which (and especially the portion which I have underscored) must be complied with in good faith. As a matter of course, all persons holding permits and safe-conducts are required to act with a reciprocal good faith in their dealings under the authority given them.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 7, 1865.

Please order the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry to embark and proceed to Vicksburg, Miss., the senior officer to report from there by letter to General Dana, at Memphis, and to keep the troops on board until his instructions have been received. Acknowledge receipt.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

O. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, No. 7.

Hdqrs. Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 7, 1865.

9. The Fifteenth Massachusetts Battery, now at Memphis, Tenn., will proceed without delay to Little Rock, Ark., reporting to the chief of artillery on arrival for orders.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 7, 1865—2 p. m.

Brigadier General Shaler:

Please answer whether General Carr has left Devall's Bluff for Memphis. If he has not you will detain the boat until an order can be telegraphed for him to carry.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JNO. LEVERING,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

—

DEVALL'S BLUFF, ARK., January 7, 1865.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

General Carr is still here on the Mepham, and will await orders.

ALEXANDER SHALER.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 7, 1865.

Brigadier-General Carr:

(Care of Brigadier-General Shaler, commanding, Devall's Bluff.)

Special order* for the movement of the Fifteenth Massachusetts Battery is telegraphed herewith. Major General Reynolds directs that you will furnish same to Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, and through him to the commanding officer of the battery.

Respectfully,

JOHN LEVERING,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

—

GENERAL ORDERS, } Hdqrs. First Brig., Second Div.,
No. 1. } Seventh Army Corps,
Devall's Bluff, Ark., January 7, 1865.

By virtue of seniority the undersigned hereby assumes command of the First Brigade, Second Division, Seventh Army Corps. Existing orders will remain in force as heretofore.

W. H. GRAVES,
Colonel Twelfth Michigan Veteran Volunteer Infantry.

—

LEWISBURG, January 7, 1865.

Major Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

Dispatches from Captain Hamilton, near Norristown, received last night. Portion of General Thayer's command is at Clarksville; expect to be at Norristown to-day or to-morrow. River not fordable at Dardanelle. Have ordered Captain Hamilton to destroy all ferry-boats and skiffs on river and return here to-morrow. His horses have all given out, and I have none in camp to relieve them. Portion of rebel force is still at Boggs’ Mill; part had gone on north side of river toward Fort Smith. Unless troubled by rebs from White River will not need re-enforcements. River at a stand.

*See p. 445.

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

LEWISBURG, January 7, 1865—8.30 p.m.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

Lieutenant Wylie has returned from scout on south side of river. Went to all the fords on the Petit Jean; could not cross on account of high water. He reports Brooks’ regiment still at Beatty’s Mill with one piece of artillery. Newton’s and Stirman’s regiments have headquarters at Boggs’ Mill. Rebel families busy moving south. Private scout in; reports Price, Shelby, and Fagan in Texas recruiting. Three brigades at Camden; Parsons’ one of them. No other troops north of Red River.

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.:

Sir: Referring to my communication of the 5th instant, I have the honor to inclose herewith copy of telegram* directing the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry to proceed to Vicksburg and to report to you from there for orders. Should these regiments not be required for the special purpose for which they are transferred you are authorized to make any other disposition of them that you may deem expedient to replace in part the cavalry belonging to General George H. Thomas, and which will have to be sent to him on the completion of the expedition upon which it is now engaged. Your request for the return of A. J. Smith’s divisions to your command has been forwarded with the commanding general’s recommendation.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,} HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NATCHEZ,
No. 2} Natchez, Miss., January 7, 1865.

3. The following-named troops are designated for field service, and will report through their commanding officers direct to these headquarters: Twenty-sixth Ohio Battery, Fifth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, Eighty-third [Ohio] Volunteer Infantry, Fifty-eighth U. S. Colored Infantry, Seventieth U. S. Colored Infantry. Col. F. W. Moore, Eighty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, is assigned to the command.

* See, p. 445.
4. Col. B. G. Farrar, Sixth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, is hereby assigned to the command of Fort McPherson.

5. The battalion of the Sixth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, now at Vidalia, La., will report to Col. B. G. Farrar, at Fort McPherson, for duty.

6. The Eighth New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, now at Natchez, Miss., will move to Vidalia, La., and report to Brig. Gen. M. Brayman, commanding Sub-District of Vidalia.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. W. Davidson:

S. S. L'HOMMEDIEU, JR.,

Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, \{ HQRS. DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE, \}
No. 6. \} Memphis, Tenn., January 7, 1865.

II. The following extract from an order received from headquarters Department of Mississippi is published for the information and guidance of the commanding general of the Post and Defenses of Memphis, and the organization of the troops composing his command will be as therein designated until further orders:

The One hundred and eighth and One hundred and thirteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry will constitute the First Brigade, Col. George B. Hoge commanding, and the Forty-sixth, Fifty-fifth, Fifty-ninth, and Sixty-first U. S. Colored Infantry will constitute the Second Brigade, Col. Frank A. Kendrick commanding, of the Post and Defenses of Memphis. The light batteries are under the direct orders of the chief of artillery District of West Tennessee, who will receive instructions from the district commander.

The Third and Seventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery and the Sixty-eighth U. S. Colored Infantry will constitute the garrison of Fort Pickering, Col. I. G. Kappner commanding. The Eighth Iowa Volunteer Infantry will remain on duty as provost-guard regiment of the city of Memphis, and will exclusively perform the police and provost-guard duty of the city. The commanding officer of the regiment will report to the commanding general Post and Defenses of Memphis, in compliance with Special Orders, No. 12, paragraph 4, current series, headquarters Department of Mississippi. A suitable site for the erection of barracks will be selected by the chief engineer in the central portion of the city for this regiment. Three principal guardhouses will be erected—one in the center east of the bayou, one on the right, one on the left on the west side of the Gayoso Bayou—from the lumber now in the several barracks occupied by that regiment. The One hundred and twentieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry will furnish all guards for depots, hospitals, &c. The commanding officer will report to the general commanding the Post and Defenses of Memphis for orders. A suitable ground will be selected by the chief engineer for the erection of barracks for this regiment. Both regiments, as soon as their quarters are erected, will relieve all guards daily. Permanent guards will be altogether discontinued. All guards for depots, &c., which cannot be furnished by those two regiments will be furnished by the dismounted cavalry. All guards of other regiments but the two above named will be relieved as soon as practicable.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. C. Veatch:

R. G. CURTIS,

Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, January 7, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Colonel: I have the honor to report that I have ordered the post of Caruthersville abandoned, and have stationed the two companies garrisoning it at Bloomfield and Patterson. I consider these as more important points.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 7, 1865.

His Excellency Thomas C. Fletcher,
Governor of Missouri:

Governor: I think we should, as early as possible, get an organization in all the disloyal counties, especially in those bordering on the Missouri River. If the legislature passes a bill with no exemption clause and classifies the enrollment, say we call out, arm, and equip the first class, and put 100 men on duty in each of the above-mentioned counties under experienced, tried, and undoubtedly loyal men; get the start of all guerrillas, &c. By this means the running from one county to another by these bands will be prevented. The Government can, I understand, feed these men. Let the counties pay them. It is no more than right that the disloyal counties should pay for their own protection, and this would do away with all complaint as to pay. The district commander could have these men under his command, and if necessary we could place sub-district commanders over them from some of our old regiments. As soon as you adopt the plan for a militia bill I will put the district commanders to work to organize these companies and hold all loyal men in these counties. Above all things, get if possible, in the counties referred to, old soldiers for commanders—men who have been tried, and in regard to whose standing there can be no doubts. It seems to me we ought to have 100 men on duty in each of the counties on the Missouri River within the next sixty days. There are a large number of officers returning from Sherman's army who could be used to good advantage in this work. Let me hear from you.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Special Orders,
Hdqrs. Department of the Missouri,
No. 7.
Saint Louis, Mo., January 7, 1865.

VI. The post of Caruthersville will be immediately abandoned. The company of infantry now at that post will report to the commanding officer at Bloomfield, Mo.; the company of cavalry to the commanding officer at Patterson. All Government property that cannot be taken with the troops will be turned over to the proper officers at New Madrid. A report will be forwarded to these headquarters of the arrival of the troops at their different stations. The district commander will forward this order by telegraph.

IX. The trial of citizens by civil courts for complying with General Orders, No. 12, headquarters District of the Border, series 1863, is in direct violation of orders and subjects the parties to punishment for obstructing and opposing the military authorities, and all action in such cases must be immediately stopped. The disloyal parties engaged in such suits in any way will be assessed by the post commander at Kansas City $1,000, to be used in providing for loyal destitute refugees. Loyal destitute refugees will be given permits to cut wood upon the land designated in the above-mentioned order for their own individual use; such permits when given stating the amount each will be allowed to take.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, January 7, 1865.

Colonel ROGERS,
Cape Girardeau:

The major-general commanding Department of the Missouri directs that the garrison at Caruthersville be withdrawn and stationed at Bloomfield and make that a strong outpost for scouting purposes. There will be also a strong post at Patterson for the same object.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., January 7, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

MAJOR: I respectfully invite the attention of the major-general commanding to the last tri-monthly return and the reports of the inspectors, that show that from an aggregate of 2,760 enlisted men in cavalry regiments in the district there are but 650 serviceable horses and 342 unserviceable. The demand for escorts for the trains to Springfield, and the probability that in a short time there will be a demand for troops in the field in the direction of Arkansas, makes a case so urgent that I request that special efforts be made to fill the requisitions for horses for the Thirteenth Missouri and Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, forwarded to-day.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, January 7, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis, Mo.:

MAJOR: I have the honor to report, for the information of the major-general commanding, that there appears to be a state of quiet and peace in this district. There is at present no report of any guerrillas or enemies in the country, nor many lawless acts committed by the citizens. The troops are healthy. There is a great need of mounts, and I have directed requisitions to be made for horses. Cantonments have been built, and except the Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, stabling for the horses, and this regiment has begun the work. There is but one field officer with this regiment, and the necessity for its being drilled and disciplined requires the presence of the lieutenant-colonel and Major Hilliard, and I respectfully ask that if consistent with the public service that they be ordered to join this command. Captain Grimes, assistant quartermaster, has an efficient and ample organization. The inspection for December has been completed, but has not been thorough. The officers did not enter on the duty until late in the month, and there was not sufficient time to make them very rigid. I shall recommend a change in that department. The hospitals are in fair condition, but the buildings are in bad repair. They are the same that were erected by the major-general commanding in 1861 and 1862, and have not been changed. In fact, about all the improvements at this post were made by him and have not been added to or changed, except the quartermaster’s shops and warehouses, since that time. The report of the chaplain shows that there are about 600 refugees and other indigent families living on the bounty of the Government. A rigid examination will be made and so far as practicable the number will be reduced; but until the spring comes I suppose but a small reduction can be made. The prisons are not as clean as they should be. This matter has received attention. Full separate reports will be made as soon as practicable. Measures have been taken to carry out the confidential letter of instructions of the major-general commanding, dated December 26, 1864.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

E. B. BROWN,

Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

KANSAS CITY, January 7, 1865—3.20 p.m.

General Dodge:

Captain Jackson and thirty mounted men of the First Missouri State Militia reported to me last night. Can make good use of them.

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.,

Colonel, Commanding District.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,

Macon, January 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,

Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis:

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that a comparative quiet prevails throughout the District of North Missouri. The elements of trouble yet remain in many localities. In nearly all the river counties from Buchanan to Montgomery there are more or less of guerrillas. We hear of them in squads of five and three and single ones moving about. All the mounted troops we have are on the move constantly day and night, and many of the villains are found and killed. The notorious Jim Jackson, of Chariton County, was doubtless mortally wounded near Bynumville, Chariton County, last week. Every effort is being made to discover his place of concealment. Hines, a lieutenant in Holtzclaw's guerrillas, was captured and killed near Rocheport a few days since, and one Campbell, a desperado of much notoriety, was found in a cave, two miles from Fayette, in Howard County, and killed on the spot, by a detachment of the Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia. Others of the bushwhacking rank and file are being gathered up and mustered out. I have five companies of the Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, at Glasgow, Fayette, and Rocheport, and one company Forty-ninth Infantry at Columbia. They are well located for the winter duty. It would be pleasant for certain politicians at Columbia to have a company of cavalry stationed at that point to act as escort to said politicians to and from the railroad. With the limited number of troops at my command I am unable to furnish body guards for the distinguished gentlemen, hence their cry out in the Democrat of the 5th instant. The rebel register is being rapidly completed, and I will soon be able to furnish you a list of the parties who ought not to remain among us. I trust our legislature will not lose any time in giving us the right kind of militia law, for we need to hasten the organization of every man who can load and fire a gun and be ready before the leaves come. I go to Hannibal to-day to give personal attention to some irregularities in the northeast.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

WESTON, January 7, 1865.

Brigadier-General FISK,
Commanding District of North Missouri, Macon, Mo.:

Night before last Lieutenant Blain with five men succeeded in mustering out two guerrillas in the northeast portion of this county. I hear many stragglers are scattered through the country, and shall endeavor to gather in all I can. I send out a party to-night, and hope I will be able to report success. I need horses; have but five or six. Can I be allowed to press some twenty-five or thirty?

H. M. MATTHEWS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

PATTERTON, Mo., January 7, 1865—13.30 p. m.

Major-General DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis:

I have the honor to report Major Berryman with 300 men in winter quarters in Oil-Trough Bottom, near White River, and five companies of jayhawkers or outlaws between here and Pocahontas. General Price and command is reported near Red River, and all is safe in this quarter.

W. J. MORRIS.

FORT SCOTT, January 7, 1865.

Maj. H. H. HEATH,
Provost-Marshal-General:

The noted Sam. Vaughn is in the neighborhood of Hickman Mills, Mo., with five others of his gang, and I just learn has threatened to visit Aubrey. There is but one company in this county, and it is two miles from Aubrey. I would not be surprised to hear of the place being burned and the inhabitants murdered at any time. The people there are very much alarmed. The place needs a small body of troops very much.

W. F. GOBLE,
Lieutenant and Assistant Provost-Marshal.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, January 7, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Kansas:

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Kansas:

Major: On looking over the district as it now stands, and inquiring into the number of troops stationed at different points, more like picket-posts than anything else, but without any army to fall back on for support, I cannot refrain from suggesting to the general commanding the propriety and imperative necessity of making some change in boundary lines so that it will embrace and permit the possibility of making changes in the stations of troops now huddled together, in many instances without any view to the general good. My entire force does not exceed 200 men, if, indeed, that many; and they are stationed at points as follows: Fort Garland, about 150 miles south and a little west of here; Camp Fillmore, about 110 miles south and a little east of here; Camp Living Springs, about 40 miles from here on stage line, east, and Valley Station, about 140 miles from here on stage route, east, with no troops in or around Denver, except what is picked up by provost guard as stragglers. Although Valley Station is not in this district, Colonel Chivington informs me that he has been instructed to guard this point. You will readily see from this that I have no force to even protect the settlers, let alone fight the Indians. Ranchmen are leaving because they can see no safety for their families or property. All around my district there seems to be plenty of troops, and seemingly with nothing to do, yet they are beyond my control, although several stations draw supplies from this point. Camp Collins, Camp Latham, and some other points on the north are just outside of my lines. Fort Lyon, on the east, is precisely in the same condition, with twice the number of troops stationed there that I have in my entire district. There should, in my judgment, be a chain of stations from Julesburg to Denver, on the stage route; also from Denver to Lyon. These stations should afford protection to settlers and freighters, and give renewed confidence to a people struggling for an existence, aside from being the only way to prevent the Indians from obtaining complete control over the routes of transportation, until a campaign can be made against them which will either kill or drive the tribes off the plains. I respectfully submit for the special consideration of the commanding general that the district lines be so changed as to make Colorado Territory the District of Colorado. This is but simple justice, and, in my judgment, would give security to lives and property, as troops could be changed in many instances to better advantage if under my command. Communication can be kept open between here and Fort Lyon, while that post is in a manner shut out from district headquarters, Fort Riley.

Believing this will receive the careful consideration of the commanding general, I have the honor, major, to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., January 7, 1865.

Lieut. J. J. Kennedy,
Comdg. Company C, First Colorado Cav., Denver, Colo. Ter.:

Lieutenant: The colonel commanding directs that you, without fail, start early in the morning of the 9th instant with your command and proceed by forced marches to Valley Station, Colo. Ter., and carry out the provisions of paragraph 2, of Special Orders, No. 163, from these headquarters, dated December 22, 1864, and in addition thereto keep parties scouting continually in every direction. These scouting parties must be active and vigilant, keeping a sharp lookout for Indians and signs. Your command must at all times be kept well in hand, under proper discipline and drill, prepared to operate actively against any enemy. You will also advise these headquarters promptly of the movements of the Indians and strike them without fail, not waiting for any instructions. You will be held responsible for the protection of lives and property along your route.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
IRA I. TABER,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, January 7, 1865.

Lieut. James Olney,
Commanding Company H, First Colorado Cavalry:

Sir: You will keep continual scouting parties in every direction. These scouts must be active and vigilant, keeping a sharp lookout for Indians or signs. Your command must at all times be kept well in hand, under proper discipline and drill, prepared to operate actively against any enemy. Advise these headquarters promptly of the movements of the Indians and strike them without waiting for any instructions. I hold you responsible for the protection of lives and property on your route.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
No. 6. } City Point, Va., January 8, 1865.

II. Lieut. Col. T. H. Harris, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, is relieved from duty with Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, and will proceed to his place of residence in Indiana and report by letter to the Adjutant-General of the Army for orders.

By command of Lieutenant-General Grant:
T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
5. Upon the completion of the consolidation of the battalions of the Forty-eighth and Eighty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, "to be designated as the Eighty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry" (see Special Orders, No. 224, paragraphs 6 and 7, series of 1864, from these headquarters), the regiment will be ordered from duty at Natchez, Miss., and ordered to proceed to Kennerville, La., and report to Brig. Gen. C. C. Andrews, commanding Third Brigade, Reserve Corps, Military Division of West Mississippi. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

GENERAL ORDERS, \{ HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, No. 4. \} New Orleans, La., January 8, 1865.

1. A draft of one in seven, based upon the enrollment directed in General Orders, No. 31, of 1864,* will be made in the Departments of Arkansas, Mississippi, and the Gulf on the 15th day of February, proximo, unless the quotas to be assigned to the several departments named shall previously have been filled by voluntary enlistments.

2. The commanders of the departments named will fix the quotas for the several districts within the limits of their commands and take the necessary measures for the prompt execution of this order.

3. The draft and enlistment of volunteers will be conducted in strict accordance with the regulations established by the War Department.

4. Volunteers that may be raised under this order will be assigned to organizations already in the service of the United States, and no new organizations will be commenced until after these have been filled, unless specially authorized by the Secretary of War.

5. The troops to be raised under this order will not be credited to the quota of any State included in the President's proclamation of December 13, 1864.

6. All persons who have or may hereafter come into the departments above named from the States or districts included in the President's proclamation will be added to the enrollment and included in the draft, unless they furnish satisfactory evidence that they have fulfilled their obligations in relation to the draft in the district of their permanent residence.

7. Deserters from the enemy will not be drafted, and if enlisted will not be assigned to local organizations, but will be sent in detachments of suitable strength to Milwaukee, Wis., to be assigned to regiments serving on the Indian frontier.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Maj. John Levering, Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

Just received dispatch from Captain Hamilton, at Norristown. He states that the rebels were re-enforced yesterday. Saw them riding through town. Private scout in from Scott County; came down south side of Petit Jean. Reports the rebs stationed at Beatty's and Boggs' Mills, Chickalah, and Dardanelle. Rebels have large lot of cattle corralled on the Fourche, three miles below Bluffton. Reports them building boat near Dardanelle. I will keep a small force at Norristown and Galla Rock till General Thayer's command reaches there. River nearly fordable at Dardanelle.

A. H. Ryan, Colonel.

Headquarters Indian Brigade, Fort Gibson, C. N., January 8, 1865.

Hon. Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

Sir: I deem it proper to advise you of the following facts: First. The three Indian regiments now in the Federal service as home guards have only a short time longer to serve. Their terms of enlistment expire during the months of May, June, and July next. If it be the design of the Government not to make any reorganization of these troops I would respectfully recommend that the "muster out" be anticipated a few months, say the first or not later than the middle of March, so that they can raise a crop, otherwise they will be dependent on the Government for a whole year more. Second. I briefly state the present condition of the Indian country: The rebels have still a military organization numerically much greater than ours. We have about two-thirds of the people and fighting men of the Cherokee Nation. The Second and Third Indian Home Guards are Cherokees (full and half breed). We have about half of the Creeks. The First Indian is Creek, except one company of Seminoles and one of Uchees. The rebels have two Cherokee regiments. They still have an organization of two Creek regiments, a battalion of Chickasaws, one of Seminoles, a company of Caddos, and the whole Choctaw Nation, except about 100 persons, men, women, and children. They have had, and are still reported to have, the organization of three Choctaw regiments. The rebel refugees, or women and children and non-combatants, are clustered in camps, or colonies they have been making on Kiamichi, Boggy, Blue, and Washita Rivers. Their soldiers are mostly mounted, and the country between is overrun with hostile forces, and desert, so far as crops are concerned, but there is still plenty of stock there. With the rebel Indian soldiers, in the rebel Indian department, there is a brigade of Texas and Arkansas troops, under General Gano. Generals Cooper and Stand Watie are also in command. Their artillery is at present rather better than ours. Around Fort Gibson are from 8,000 to 10,000 refugees, the larger portion of whom are Creeks, or people whose homes are south of the Arkansas River. Some 7,000 or 8,000 of these latter were brought down here by the superintendent last June, too late to raise a crop.

Scattered through the Cherokee Nation, at their homes, are as many more loyal non-combatants. In all, upward of 20,000 persons depend for protection on the military force here. The refugees here were brought in hired transportation and left here, and cannot move as they are. An order to move my force elsewhere would leave them at the mercy of the rebels, if, indeed, it would be possible at all to move these soldiers away, to leave their women, children, old and sick people.
Under the orders received it was necessary, since my return, for the Fifty-fourth U. S. Colored and the First Arkansas Infantry to march below. This leaves me simply the Indian command. My tri-monthly of the 31st ultimo shows that to be an aggregate of 2,112; 1,403 are present for duty; 382 escorting train. The evacuation of Fort Smith will leave this place rather weak, but I think I can hold my own until you determine what is to be the future of this command. The orders
I have received so instruct me. For the future I make no recommendation, being ignorant of the policy determined about the Indian Nation.
With the present Indian force, a good infantry regiment and good battery, and-mounting half of the Indians, I think the country north of the Arkansas River, in the Indian Nation, could be held by making a vigorous use of the force. Unless the country north of the river be held it is doubtful about our holding any foothold in the Indian Nation, and the probabilities are that it would be organized against us. Efforts have been made, and are made by the enemy, to get these civilized and half-civilized Indians into a sort of neutrality league, which would, of course, eventually operate to their benefit. Of the present condition of affairs and the approaching period of "muster out," I thus advise you.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
WM. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel, Commanding.

HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NATCHEZ, DEPT. OF MISSISSIPPI,
Natchez, January 8, 1865.

Lieut. Col. T. H. HARRIS,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report my arrival here and assumption of the command of this district, as per accompanying order from the headquarters of the Military Division of West Mississippi. I inclose also copies of all general and special orders issued by me up to date. General Canby directed me to designate a permanent garrison for Fort McPhersom, and to organize and refit those troops in excess of this garrison of 1,000 men for the field. I designated the Sixth U. S. Heavy Artillery as the garrison, and placed its colonel, B. G. Farrar, in command of Fort McPherson. Special Orders, No. 2, paragraphs III and IV, are issued in conformity with those instructions. I was also directed to leave the troops on the Vidalia side of the river the same numerically.
I found a Mr. C. D. Townsend, appointed by General Brayman, acting as mayor of the city, without any responsibility, by commission, to the Government, and collecting large revenues for this place. In conformity with General Canby's views expressed to me in a conversation with him that the city should be governed as under martial law, I relieved Mr. Townsend and appointed a provost-marshal. Paragraph VII, of Special Orders, No. 2, was therefore issued. Mr. Townsend has turned over $7,000 of funds collected, and I ask of the commanding general what disposition shall be made of them. I have placed General Brayman in command of that portion of the district west of the Mississippi, with his headquarters at Vidalia. General Canby informed me that about 6,000 troops would be stationed in the district, which will then increase the number of troops in General Brayman's command. It is very necessary that a good regiment of cavalry be sent here. If the commanding general has none to spare me, I respectfully ask that the Third Michigan, from the Department of Arkansas, or the First Louisiana, from the Department of the Gulf, may be applied for. I name these regiments because I know the officers to be gentlemen. I have established wharf regulations here, which I found much needed, and have had the levee flagged off for public and private freight and public and private vehicles. From the great number of cotton permits granted in New Orleans for Fort Adams I would suggest the propriety of a garrison, say one regiment of infantry, being stationed there. I am convinced it will require a good officer to look into and control matters there. I ask of the general what authority I have as regards passes and permits for lessees. I shall follow rigidly his circular of December 16, as for the post of Natchez, until I hear from him. I find much to amend here, particularly with the troops. I shall spare no effort to make them effective, requiring all officers to make their homes and sphere of duties with their regiments.

I am, colonel, your most obedient servant,
J. W. DAVIDSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. FIFTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY VET. VOLS.,
Vicksburg, January 8, 1865.

Col. E. D. Osband,
Commanding Cavalry Brigade:

Colonel: I have just returned from Big Black, where I was sent as a bearer of a flag of truce. The lieutenant who came from Jackson to meet me informed me that Grierson's raid had desolated a large part of Mississippi, and that he went wherever he wanted to. He also said that General Wirt Adams had been whipped somewhere in the vicinity of Goodman Station and driven from the field in confusion, leaving fifty men killed outright. Trusting the item may be of interest, I send it to you.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES NISBET,
First Lieutenant Company K, Fifth Illinois Cavalry.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE MISSOURI,
No. 7. } Saint Louis, Mo., January 8, 1865.

It being the intention of the general commanding to employ every means in his power for the purpose of ridding the department of bushwhackers, guerrilla bands, and rebel emissaries, and of restoring and maintaining law and order, he deems it proper to make known, in orders, to the citizens of Missouri their duty in the premises and the requirements that will be exacted from them. The experience of the past three years has clearly demonstrated the fact that the bushwhackers and guerrilla bands operating in this State congregate, dwell, and obtain their support in disloyal counties and neighborhoods, where they are encouraged and protected, and the efforts of the military forces to hunt them down are often rendered unsuccessful by reason of the deceptive and non-committal course of the resident disloyal citizens. The general commanding desires all such citizens to distinctly understand that he intends, to the extent of his ability and power, to hold them to a strict accountability for their every act of direct or indirect hostility to the Government, or that tends in any manner to aid these outlaws. Henceforth, in order to merit and receive its aid and protection, citizens must by their actions show to the Government that they not only have no sympathy whatever with bushwhackers and guerrilla bands, but that they are most earnestly opposed to them; and they must at the same time give these outlaws to know that they cannot dwell in their midst and roam over entire counties and abide in their neighborhood unmolested and not reported. Hereafter it will be required of citizens, in all cases, to report the passing by, the congregating or camping near or upon them, the feeding, whether through fear, or force, or otherwise, of bushwhackers, guerrillas, and any other knowledge they may have relative to the whereabouts, doings, &c., of these outlaws. This report must be promptly made to the nearest military authorities. All citizens failing to report as above required will have their property seized and themselves and families sent beyond the limits of this department; and those who are found to have given direct and voluntary aid to bushwhackers and guerrillas, or rebels, will be arrested and banished, or tried by military courts for violation of the laws of war. Any person making any agreement with bushwhackers and guerrillas or pretended rebel bands, for his own personal security or that of his family or property, and who does not immediately report to the Federal authorities the fact of such agreement, showing that it was made through force, need not expect any mercy at the hands of the Government. The disloyal residents of each county will be held to a strict accountability for any injury inflicted upon loyal people thereof by bushwhackers and rebel marauders. It is time that people who have been allowed to live peaceably, enjoy protection, and grow rich under our Government, while they have given aid and comfort to the enemy, either directly or indirectly, or by a non-committal course of conduct, should be made to show their hands and once for all to place themselves either in earnest, practical support of the Government or with its avowed enemies, so that we can deal with them understandably. From this time henceforth district and sub-district commanders and provost-marshal will report to these headquarters the names of all individuals and families who are found to be guilty of aiding the rebellion, or of aiding or encouraging bushwhackers and partisan marauders by such acts of commission or omission as herein mentioned, in order that immediate action may be taken in their cases. Those citizens who consider themselves so bound to their guerrilla and rebel friends that they cannot comply with the requirements of this order, and who therefore prefer to join their friends within the rebel lines, will, upon application in writing to these headquarters for that purpose, be given permission to pass beyond our lines, with the privilege of taking with them sufficient of their personal property, such as clothing, &c., to render them comfortable. The military forces throughout the department are commanded to respect the civil law, and when necessary to aid its officers; to refrain from all unauthorized depredations, especially to commit no act through personal enmity, and to protect, aid, and encourage all those who by their acts uniformly show an honest and earnest desire to support the Government in putting down the rebellion and ridding the country of bushwhackers and guerrilla bands.
Chap. LX.] CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.—UNION. 459

By command of Major-General Dodge:
J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Brigadier-General Ewing,

Leavenworth:

The Thirty-ninth Missouri Volunteers has been ordered to report for duty. Would it not be well to send all the Seventh Kansas Cavalry to the Third Sub-District, as they are all now mounted, and put infantry on the bridges and at Hermann and Franklin instead? This would enable Colonel Hiller to station a strong scouting force at Patterson and Centerville. The garrison at Caruthersville has been withdrawn by orders from department headquarters and put at Bloomfield.

II. HANNAHS,

Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, Headquarters Saint Louis District,

No. 6. Saint Louis, Mo., January 8, 1865.

2. Pursuant to instructions from department headquarters of the 7th instant, First Lieut. C. G. Anderson, Company E, Second Missouri Cavalry, is detailed to take charge of a detachment consisting of two commissioned officers and sixty mechanics, the names of whom are herewith attached, and proceed on Monday, the 9th instant, on the morning train by railroad to the bridges on the Southwest Branch, Pacific Railroad, and construct block-houses for the defense of said bridges. Plans for block-houses will be, on application, furnished at department headquarters. Teams, tools, and subsistence will be furnished by the quartermaster and commissary at Franklin. In selecting sites for the block-houses great care will be exercised to obtain points that command the bridges, and if possible points that are not commanded from other points around. The transportation will be furnished by the Pacific Railroad Company free of charge to the Government.

3. The Thirty-ninth Missouri Volunteers, Lieut. Col. E. A. Kutzner commanding, having reported in compliance with orders from department headquarters, will report to Colonel Bonneville, commanding Benton Barracks.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

II. HANNAHS,

---

Pilot Knob, January 8, 1865.

Col. H. M. HILLER:

(Care of headquarters Saint Louis District.)

Captain Lonergan has pretty reliable information that Parson Pratt and Lieutenant Chitwood with about forty rebels are rendezvousing and conscripting at the forks of Logan's Creek, in Reynolds County. We have not hardly men enough here to look after these brigands.

G. D. O. KELI-MAN,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Potosi, Mo., January 8, 1865.

Maj. H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

The scout that I sent out under Lieutenant Weddle to Black River came up with a party of bushwhackers and killed 2 of them, capturing 1 horse. The names of the men killed were the notorious Samuel Torringer and James Barton.

WM. MORAN,
First Lieut., Comdg. Company E, Fiftieth Missouri Volunteers.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 8, 1865—5.40 p.m.

Brigadier-General Brown,
Rolla, Mo.:

Order the Seventeenth Illinois into Southeast Missouri. The mounted part will march to Centerville and report by messenger for orders to commanding officer at Pilot Knob; the dismounted men will go by rail to Pilot Knob. Regiment will take camp and garrison equipage. Report when they move to me.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DIST. OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
No. 8. } Springfield, Mo., January 8, 1865.

II. Maj. Milton Burch, Eighth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, is hereby relieved from duty as commanding officer of the regiment and assigned to duty as commanding officer of the post of Neosho. He will proceed to Neosho and assume command of that post without delay.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. B. Sanborn:

WM. T. KITTREDGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WARRENSBURG, January 8, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding, Jr.,
Kansas City:

Have you any further information of guerrillas in Jackson? Nothing is known of them at Pleasant Hill. I sent you a company of cavalry. Has it arrived?

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
In the Field, Fort Larned, Kans., January 8, 1865.

Maj. C. S. Charlot,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Kansas:

Major: I have the honor to report, for the information of the general commanding, my arrival at this post. I left Fort Riley on Tuesday, the 3d instant; have visited the following stations on my route: Salina, Ellsworth, and Zarah. Found one company at Salina under Captain Hammer, one at Ellsworth under Lieutenant Garfield. I consider Fort Ellsworth a very important station to scout from, and as the company there had only nine horses, I have ordered Company L, Second Colorado Cavalry, there as re-enforcement. At Fort Zarah there is a force of 250 recruits of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry without artillery. I left two mountain howitzers there. I have ordered Company H, Twelfth Kansas Infantry, Lieutenant Burton commanding, now on duty at this post, to Fort Riley for garrison duty; also the left section Ninth Wisconsin Battery, Lieutenant Crocker commanding, to same place. I relieved them with battalion under Captain Moses, consisting of Companies M, I, D, F, and that portion of A and B not yet mustered out, of the Second Colorado Cavalry. Indians are troublesome west of this. On the 26th of December a train was attacked ninety miles west of here. The men, twenty in number, with eleven rifles, fought bravely. The Indians wounded seven (one mortally), but they succeeded in reaching this post. (See report of Lieutenant Crocker, commanding post.) I have sent scouts out from Ellsworth and Salina, who will report here to me probably next Wednesday night. From all reports all the Indians are making north and congregating on headwaters of Smoky Hill. One large band with their women and children crossed 100 miles west of this about Christmas, the same band probably that attacked the train already mentioned. I have talked with the wounded men, and they estimate the party that attacked them at 150. The people here and, in fact, all the citizens of the border, are very much enraged at the course taken by Colonel Chivington aud his troops. By the accounts of some of his own regiment stationed at Fort Lyon who were present it was a horrible affair; but whether he was right or wrong, it has precluded all probabilities of peace, and it is now war to the knife. All the tribes will have to be conquered. That cannot be done in one campaign, and we will have a lively time this summer. My plan would be to give me troops enough at these stations on the route to keep communication open, and then give me Lieutenant-Colonel Walker and Major Ketner, with the Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry and the Second Colorado Cavalry, entirely foot loose from post duty, and let them live on the plains all the time, same as Indians, coming into the post only for rations. I will guarantee to make it so hot for the Indians before fall that they will hunt a cooler district or throw up their hands and retire from the game. I find here that I have got work enough on my hands to keep me here for at least a week, and shall not go farther west at present. I would respectfully recommend that efforts be made to reach Little Raven's band of Arapahoes, a large portion of which escaped from the massacre on Sand Creek, and have them separated from the hostile bands. They are, or were, anxious for peace, and Little Raven offered all his warriors to Major Wynkoop to help chastise the Kiowas and Sioux. They never wanted war, but were always friendly. Escorting the coach from here to Fort Lyon, a distance of 240 miles, is very hard work on our cavalry horses. I have to send at least forty men. Would recommend one or two stations between here and Fort Lyon during the summer. In the meantime I shall only send the coach through twice a month.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel, Commanding District.
Chap. LX.] CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.— UNION. 463

Special Orders, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH KANSAS,
No. 6. } Fort Leavenworth, January 8, 1865.

1. Maj. Clarkson Reynolds, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, will proceed to Wyandotte, Kans., and assume command of the troops at that station, and make his regular monthly and tri-monthly reports to these headquarters.

2. Maj. James Ketner, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, will assume command of his regiment and quarter with his troops at new barracks, approving all passes and furloughs for his command, making his regular reports to Col. W. R. Davis, commanding post.

By order of Brig. Gen. T. A. Davies:

D. J. CRAIGIE,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

OMAHA, NEBR. TER., January 8, 1865.

Major-General CURTIS,
Fort Leavenworth:

The following dispatches are just received:

JULESBURG, [January] 8, 1865.
Had a desperate fight (Indians went south) and will report in a few moments.

N. J. O'BRIEN,
Captain, &c.

KEARNY, 8th.

The present state of things on the road will not answer. The posts must be concentrated or made more numerous. There are some, as per returns, too weak to make a defense against the heavy odds now threatening. Either give me power to act as I deem best, or direct what I shall do while we are corresponding. The Indians are masters of the Overland road, and immediate action is imperative.

R. R. LIVINGSTON, &c.

I will leave for the field by stage to-night.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

OMAHA, January 8, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER, Columbus, Nebr. Ter.:

You will move immediately with fifty men of Company E, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and report to Colonel Livingston at Fort Kearny. Make no delay in starting and move as rapidly as possible, not to injure your animals.

ROBT. B. MITCHELL,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 9, 1865.

COMMANDING GENERAL DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, La.:

SIR: Under authority of Executive order of December 10, and of the order of the Secretary of War of December 12, 1864, Maj. Gen.
W. F. Smith and Hon. Henry Stanbery have been appointed special commissioners to inspect and report upon the condition of affairs in the Military Division of West Mississippi. Capt. George W. Dresser, acting aide-de-camp, Capt. J. J. Van Horn, aide-de-camp, and Lieut. E. A. Duer, aide-de-camp, have been authorized by these commissioners to perform such military inspections as may from time to time be considered necessary, and the major-general commanding directs that these officers be furnished all necessary facilities and information to enable them to execute their duties fully and promptly.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Same to commanding general U. S. forces, Kennerville, La.; commanding general Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.; commanding general Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.; commanding general Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.)

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 9, 1865.

Capt. P. C. HAINS,
U. S. Engineers, Chief Engineer Department of the Gulf:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 5th instant, and in reply thereto to inform you that, as nearly as may be described, the boundaries of the Defenses of New Orleans are as follows: Commencing at North Pass Manchac; thence west along the southern shore of Lake Maurepas to the Amite River; thence through Bayou Manchac to the Mississippi River; thence through the Bayou Plaquemine to Grand River; thence to Berwick Bay; thence to the Gulf of Mexico; thence east to Ship Island; thence through Mississippi Sound, the Rigolets, and Lake Pontchartrain, returning to the place of beginning at North Pass Manchac. The following are the regularly garrisoned posts: New Orleans, Algiers, Camp Parapet, Carrollton, Greensville, Kenner, Laporte, Proctorville, Ship Island, Fort Jackson, Plaquemine, Fort Saint Philip, Fort Pike, Fort Macomb, Fort Livingston, Donaldsonville, Napoleonville, Thibodeaux, Brashears City, Bonnet Carré, Terre Bonne.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 9, 1865.

Col. HARAI ROBINSON,
Provost-Marshal-General, Dept. of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

COLONEL: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to inform you that from reports received it would appear that there is danger of the new levee at Kennerville giving way, and to request that you will send a competent person to examine into it, so that in case the apprehensions are well grounded immediate measures may be taken to prevent the disaster consequent upon the breaking of the levee.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 9, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding desires that a cavalry force of about 1,000 be detached from your department and sent with the least possible delay to Memphis, Tenn., to report to General Dana. He also wishes to know what cavalry force is absolutely necessary for the defense of Arkansas, and directs that the balance be held in readiness to move whenever and wherever required. No report has as yet been received in relation to the troops of the Reserve Corps within the limits of your command. It is very desirable that they should join the main portion of the corps now collecting at Kennerville, La., as soon as possible, and I am directed to request that the necessary orders issue from your headquarters accordingly.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 9, 1865—4 p.m.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

GENERAL: I had the honor to address you this morning in relation to the transfer of certain cavalry from your department to the Department of Mississippi, and other matters. Since then your cipher dispatch of the 3d has been received. I am directed to say that the Thirty-fifth Wisconsin can only be retained if replaced at once by another regiment equal in strength and efficiency, and that the Ninety-sixth Ohio should be relieved as soon as possible and sent with the rest of the forces of the Reserve Corps to Kennerville. I am further directed to request that as soon as the troops from the District of the Frontier have come in and the necessary permanent forces assigned to the respective posts, the surplus force may be put in condition and held in readiness for service elsewhere whenever they may be called for. The commanding general will be pleased to receive from you, as early as possible, an estimate of the force that you will thus be able to spare.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 8.

1. Col. E. Bridgman, late Ninety-first Regiment U. S. Colored Infantry, is hereby appointed superintendent of the U. S. military railroad from Little Rock to Devall's Bluff, Ark., and will be obeyed and respected as such, under the official direction of the chief quartermaster of the department.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieut. Col. W. D. Green,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

Sir: On the 2d instant I received from Colonel Harrison, commanding First Arkansas Cavalry at Fayetteville, a copy of a dispatch to him, as follows:

WASHINGTON CITY, December 31, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER AT FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.:
I am told to-day by the highest authority that Fort Smith is not to be evacuated. What are your advices from that point? Answer at once.

A. W. BISHOP.

And on the 8th instant I received the following from the same sources:

WASHINGTON, January 6, 1865.

Col. M. LAIR HARRISON,
Fayetteville, Ark.:
The order is countermanded by order of the President.

A. W. BISHOP.

I have not permitted these dispatches to cause any delay in my movements. A portion of my train from Fort Scott, with one regiment, has arrived, and the balance of the train and troops are expected here to-morrow. I have sent the cavalry brigade to Clarksville, also two infantry regiments and 100 loaded wagons. I have ordered that train to unload at Clarksville and return here. I shall start another train of 100 wagons on the 13th, directing it to go through to Lewistown, and return to Clarksville for the stores taken from the 100 wagons unloaded there. This will give me additional transportation to the amount of 100 wagons from here to Lewistown, and still I shall have to destroy considerable valuable property, all of which could be saved if boats could be sent up here. The river is again very high. If possible, I wish to have 120 tons of forage sent to Lewistown, and 80 tons to Clarksville. I shall have subsistence sufficient to last my command until the 25th instant, no longer, as I have taken most of the supplies from Fort Gibson, and I cannot get away from here before the 18th instant, if I have to wait for my train to return from Clarksville or wait for boats from Little Rock. Should I receive an order countermanding the evacuation of this district, the troops will be on short rations and much in need of everything before supplies can possibly reach them, unless the major-general commanding the department thinks best to send up subsistence and forage on this high water on the strength of the unofficial telegrams hereinbefore mentioned, and if he should not do so I shall probably be compelled to leave here for the want of supplies. I therefore urgently request that all the boats (five) be sent up at once, and then the evacuation of this place will not result in much loss to the Government, and the people to whom the Government owes protection will be enabled to get away. The river has risen five feet in the last twenty-four hours, and still rising at the rate of ten inches per hour. It will probably rise as high as it did on the 20th ultimo. It is now but two feet and a half lower than then, and rain continues. I sent a dispatch to-day by land, in which I stated that I could get away without having to destroy much of anything, but in the statement I overlooked the fact that the quartermaster has 150 wagons for which he has no mules, and will consequently have to be destroyed, unless they can be transported by the river. If the boats come up and remove the balance of the public stores, forty tons of forage sent to Lewisburg and sixty tons to Clarksville will be sufficient, and if it can be done forty tons should be sent here. If this place is not to be evacuated, I respectfully request that boats be sent up with a supply of subsistence, forage, quartermaster's stores, and medical supplies. In either event, evacuation or no evacuation, I beg that boats will be sent.

Very respectfully, &c.,

JOHN M. THAYER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 9, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

GENERAL: I am in receipt of your letter to headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi of December 11, 1864, in relation to sending through our lines certain people from Missouri, with indorsement to the effect that they will be passed through at this point. It will be very inconvenient to pass them through the lines at this place. I propose to pass them through at Gaines' Landing, on the Mississippi River. Any orders or permits from your headquarters will be approved, without delaying the parties, by the commanding officer at the mouth of the White River, and the landing can be made at Gaines' Landing. Please direct parties whom you send South in future to report at mouth of White River.

Very respectfully, &c.,

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 9, 1865.

Major HANNAHS,
Actg. Asst. Adjt. Gen., District of Saint Louis:

I desire you to keep concentrated as much as possible the Thirty-ninth Missouri Infantry, that they can drill, as I desire to send them into South Missouri as soon as possible. The Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry has been ordered into your district.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, January 9, 1865.

Colonel ROGERS,
Cape Girardeau:

You will put both the infantry companies and the cavalry company now at Caruthersville at Bloomfield, and not send the cavalry to Patterson, as directed in the department order.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

*See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 829.
SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 8.

1. The commanding officer Thirteenth Missouri Veteran Cavalry will detail one company from his regiment to proceed immediately to Big Piney and relieve the company of the Seventeenth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry on duty at that station. The company of the Seventeenth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry on being relieved will rejoin its regiment without delay.

By order of Col. E. C. Catherwood:

C. G. LAURANT,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 9, 1865.

Colonel HARDING,
Kansas City:

Had not a company ought to be posted on railroad at crossing of Little Blue?

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

KANSAS CITY, January 9, 1865—3:40 p.m.

General DODGE,
Saint Louis:

The crossing of the Little Blue is six miles south of Independence. There ought to be troops there to range from a fixed camp. I have scarcely men enough to send another company out, but probably will have in two days. I have to keep out a pretty strong force from Hickman Mills to Independence, and to furnish a large guard here, besides doing the necessary fatigue duty. Little Santa Fé, the Mission, and other posts on the border have been abandoned by the Kansas troops previously stationed there. I have had to garrison Westport. If I had control of the company at Independence and those at Pleasant Hill I believe that I could make a successful drive.

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel, Commanding Forty-third Missouri Volunteers.

KANSAS CITY, January 9, 1865.

Col. JOHN F. PHILIPS:

Your company of cavalry arrived. I sent them to Westport for headquarters. Will operate in conjunction with my men, and can do much good. No further information concerning Shelby's men, and believe the report false.

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel, Commanding.
Macon, January 9, 1865.
(Received 12 m. 10th.)

Major-General Dodge,
Saint Louis:

We have captured and killed the guerrilla Captain Childs, who has been a long time operating in Audrain County. Three of his men share his fate. The troops in Platte County killed two guerrillas on Saturday last.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, January 9, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:

Colonel Kutzner's regiment is here. I propose to give it a chance to recruit. Would it not be well to send Kutzner himself into the disloyal counties on the river? Give him a sub-district and see if he cannot put life into the troops and put down the bands now there.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Macon, January 9, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,
Saint Louis:

I can use Colonel Kutzner's regiment to great advantage, and the colonel himself had better be returned to his old sub-district, headquarters at Glasgow. All the mounted troops we have are going day and night, and none but mounted troops are of service against bushwhackers.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Jefferson City, January 9, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:

Cannot you come to Jefferson City during the week? I think it important for your military district that you should.

D. P. Dyer,
Colonel.

Macon, January 9, 1865.

Lieut. Col. H. M. Matthews,
Weston, Mo.:

Press horses when necessary. Kill every bushwhacker in Platte County.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Hdqrs. Third Regiment Indian Home Guard,
Fort Gibson, Ind. Ter., January 9, 1865.

Major-General Curtis:

Sir: I have the honor of making you the following report: In pursuance to orders from brigade headquarters, I proceeded with a detachment of the Indian brigade some eighty miles up the Arkansas River on the north side, until opposite the mouth of Pole Cat Creek, at which place I came upon a good road much worn with travel, evidently a road much used. The ford of the Arkansas River is good. The bearing of the road is south-southwest by the north-northeast. The Caney and Bird Creeks are also easily forded, all of which affords an easy and safe communication for the rebels between Missouri and Texas. Hence the reason of so much danger and damage to our messengers and small parties between Cabin Creek and Baxter Springs. The trails come together at the Verdigris, and from thence form a grand trunk road, by which General Gano retreated with the supply train which he captured at Cabin Creek, Cherokee Nation. I give you these facts to show how much the southern border of Kansas is exposed to the Texas rangers. Fort Gibson affords but little protection to this road. In February of 1864 I marched my command south of the Arkansas River in the direction of Fort Washita and came upon the same line of road 100 miles south of the Arkansas. I returned on this road to the Arkansas River. The road and fords of the stream are good, and it is the most practicable route from Kansas to Red River.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN A. FOREMAN,
Major, Commanding Third Indian Regiment.

---

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF COLORADO, No. 3. } Denver, Colo. Ter., January 9, 1865.

First Lieut. J. S. Maynard, Company H, First Regiment Colorado Cavalry, is, in addition to his duties as judge-advocate, hereby appointed district inspector, vice Major Downing, mustered out of service by virtue of expiration of term of service.

By order of Col. T. Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry:

IRA I. TABER,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

DENVER, January 9, 1865.

Lieut. W. R. NEWKIRK,
Valley Station:

Troops are en route to you. Remain, and have people do so.

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI, No. 10. } New Orleans, La., January 10, 1865.

3. Capt. Oliver P. Gooding, Tenth U. S. Infantry (late colonel Thirty-first Massachusetts Volunteers), is hereby assigned to duty as an inspecting officer with the forces now being concentrated at Kenner ville, La., and will report accordingly to Maj. Gen. F. Steele, command ing, without delay.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 10, 1865.

Maj. Gen. W. F. Smith, U. S. Volunteers,
Special Commissioner, &c., New Orleans, La.:

Agreeably to your request I have the honor, by direction of the major-general commanding, to transmit, herewith inclosed, letters* of instructions to the commanding generals of the Departments of the Gulf, Arkansas, Mississippi, and the Missouri, and of the Reserve Corps of the division, directing them to furnish every facility required to the officers selected by you for the performance of certain military inspections. I have also the honor to transmit statements of posts, post commanders, and troops within the limits of the Departments of the Gulf and Arkansas, and of those composing the Reserve Corps. The statements of posts, &c., of the other two departments will be furnished in course of the day. Any other facilities or information desired shall at all times be furnished cheerfully and promptly.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 10, 1865.

Maj. Gen. W. F. Smith,
Special Commissioner, &c., New Orleans, La.:

Sir: Referring to my communication of this morning, I have the honor to transmit, herewith inclosed, statements† of posts, post commanders, and troops within the limits of the Departments of Mississippi and the Missouri. These, together with the statements submitted this morning, comprise a complete record of this military division.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., [January 10,] 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration a statement of the information received at this office this 10th day of January, 1865: A report from Lieut. G. G. Curtiss, Baton Rouge, La., January 6, 1865; a report from Capt. Fred. H. Man, Morganza, La., January 6, 1865; a report from Lieut. W. P. Knowles, commanding Special Scouts, Natchez, Miss., January 6, 1865; a report from C. A. Hennigs, Baton Rouge, La., December 28, 1864. Louisiana: The First Louisiana Cavalry are now permanently stationed on the Atchafalaya River, near Morganza. Reconnaissances show that the enemy are quiet. Brigadier-General Hodge,

* See Canby to Huribbut and others, January 9, p. 463.
† Not found as inclosures, but see abstract from returns and organization of troops, December 31, 1864, Vol. XLII, Part IV, pp. 972-995.
commanding District of Southwest Mississippi and East Louisiana, is ordered before a court of inquiry at Centerville, Miss., on charges of incompetency and cowardice. Colonel Griffith, Eighteenth Texas [Seventeenth Arkansas], supersedes him. Colonel Scott's and Colonel Ogden's regiments have gone to Mobile. Third Louisiana Cavalry, Lieutenant-Colonel Amacker commanding; Fourth Louisiana Cavalry, Col. Frank P. Powers commanding; Fifth Louisiana Cavalry, Lieut. Col. H. M. Carter commanding, under Col. D. Gober, are at Jackson, Miss. Three regiments of General Wirt Adams' command are to take the place of the above, but have not yet arrived. A few companies of scouts only were left behind to collect absentees, and they are ordered to report at Mount Nebo Church, La., January 12, 1865; thence to rejoin their regiments.

Lieut. John Reynolds, a notorious jayhawker, professing to be of Colonel Gober's command, has just been brought into Baton Rouge and placed in jail. Was found in a house five miles distant, insensible from blows inflicted by an ax in the hands of a negro. Mississippi:
The chief transit route of the rebels across the Mississippi River is at Saint Joseph, La. Lieut. W. P. Knowles reports the enemy in such strength along the river at that point that he was unable to make any important advance into the country. By signal stations at Oakland College, five miles above Rodney, at Mrs. Ellis', six miles above Oakland College, and one one mile and a half above Grand Gulf, the river is overlooked and watched for some distance below Rodney to a point above Grand Gulf. Four hundred cavalry troops are distributed between these points on the east side of the river. On the opposite side is a larger force.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
FRANK W. MARSTON,
Major and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

By S. M. EATON,
Captain Signal Corps, U. S. A., Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.
(In Major Marston's illness.)

MORGANZA, January 10, 1865.
(Received 5.15 p.m.)

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans:
Will reach the city about 10 a.m. to-morrow. I have with me the Thirty-seventh Illinois and Twentieth Iowa. Total present, 797.
CHAS. BLACK,
Colonel Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, Commanding Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 10, 1865—4 p.m.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:
This army generally has not been paid since last June. The bounties are all unpaid except first installment. Much dissatisfaction and suffering exist.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.
Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,

Chief of Staff:

Yours of the 3d instant relating to the reoccupation of Fort Smith received, and will be carried out at the earliest moment practicable.

J. J. REYNOLDS,

Major-General.

4. Maj. James F. Dwight, Eleventh Missouri Cavalry, is hereby appointed acting assistant inspector-general of the Cavalry Division of Seventh Army Corps, and will report without delay to Brig. Gen. J. R. West, commanding.

By order of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 10, 1865—2:40 p.m.

(Via Saint Louis.)

COMMANDING OFFICER AT FAYETTEVILLE:

Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant has directed that Fort Smith and adjacent posts be not evacuated if they can be supplied, and if already abandoned that they be reoccupied as early as supplies can be forwarded to them. These orders have been sent to Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds.

H. W. HALLECK,

Major-General and Chief of Staff.

Send these forward by the very quickest possible route.

(Same to commanding officers at Fort Smith and Little Rock, Ark., via Saint Louis.)
Headquarters District of West Tennessee,
Memphis, Tenn., January 10, 1865.

Col. J. N. McArthur,
Fourth U. S. Colored Heavy Arty, Comdg. Post, Columbus, Ky.:

COLONEL: Your letter of January 5, inclosing telegrams from Brevet Major-General Burbridge and Brig. Gen. S. Meredith, is received. You are not in General Meredith's command, and will not obey his orders. I have only to repeat my instructions contained in letter of 28th December, 1864, and to reiterate that you will not obey the orders of any officer unless he derives his authority from Major-General Canby, commanding Military Division of West Mississippi, Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, or from these headquarters. You will not permit any interference with your command in any manner whatever by any one deriving his authority from any other source than those above mentioned; nor will you allow public property or material of any kind to be taken from under your control without order through these headquarters. I am not advised that Brigadier-General Meredith has been required to obey any orders of Major-General Dana, and therefore the telegram of Brevet Major-General Burbridge can in no wise affect the case. I inclose for your information a copy of telegram from E. D. Townsend, assistant adjutant-general, at Washington, D. C., of date January 1, 1865, declaring that General Canby's command extended to the mouth of the Ohio River.* You are relieved from any and all responsibility of reporting to General Meredith by my direct and positive order and command.

Very respectfully,

JAMES C. YEATCH,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Special Orders,
HQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
No. 10.
Saint Louis, Mo., January 10, 1865.

7. Col. E. A. Kutzner, Thirty-ninth Regiment Missouri Infantry Volunteers, is hereby detached from his command and will report to Brig. Gen. C. B. Fisk, commanding District of North Missouri, at Macon City, Mo., for assignment to the command of the sub-district, headquarters at Glasgow, or such place as the district commander may deem best. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation for private horses, baggage, and servants.

9. Col. Chester Harding, Forty-third Missouri Infantry, will report to Col. J. F. Philips, commanding Central District of Missouri, for assignment to the command of the sub-district. Colonel Philips will furnish Colonel Harding with troops sufficient to enable him to keep one company at the crossing of the Little Blue, and Colonel Harding will be subject to the orders of Colonel Philips in all matters pertaining to his district. The returns of the Forty-third Missouri will be forwarded to headquarters District of North Missouri, as heretofore.

10. Lieut. Col. William Hoelcke, chief engineer Department of the Missouri, will proceed along the line of the railroad as far as Jefferson

* See p. 393.
City, for the purpose of examining the bridges, &c., and superintending the location of sites for block-houses, returning to these headquarters upon the completion of these duties.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, No. 9.

1. In accordance with instructions from department headquarters the Seventeenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry is hereby relieved from duty in this district. The mounted portion of the regiment will proceed by land to-morrow morning, with camp and garrison equipage, to Centerville, Reynolds County, Mo., where the officer in command of the detachment will report by messenger to the commanding officer at Pilot Knob for orders. The dismounted men will proceed this afternoon by rail to Pilot Knob, Mo. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By order of Col. E. C. Catherwood:

C. G. LAURANT,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Cape Girardeau, January 10, 1865—10 p.m.

Maj. H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

The major-general commanding having directed me to collect what information I could concerning rebel forces in Northern Arkansas, I have the honor to report that Colonel Phelps, Second Arkansas Cavalry, arrived with his command at this post to-day. He came through Powhatan, Pocahontas, and Poplar Bluff. He found no enemy in force. He ascertained Bowles had 60 men, Bolin 200; that there were parts of three brigades scattered through Northern Arkansas—Freeman's, Dobbin's, and McCray's—the whole under the command of Fagan, with headquarters at Colona, thirty miles from Jacksonport. He learned that they were ordered to concentrate on Crowley's Ridge the 1st of this month. But 300 reported. He thinks that their commanders will not be able to get them together again. He killed in skirmishes 10 men and captured 22. He found forage plenty. He met my expedition going to Cherokee Bay. He came near capturing Reves. He killed one captain that was with him; captured his quartermaster. Reves escaped, half dressed, by getting into the swamp and swimming Black River.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel.

Headquarters District of Central Missouri,
Warrensburg, January 10, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

Major: I have the honor to submit the following report of the condition of affairs in this district: Saline County has been remarkably quiet since the return from there of the large scout sent the latter part of December. No troubles of any sort have been heard of. I shall send two squadrons to that county, to take station on the river, to break up, if possible, the connection between the south and north side of the river, and destroy the haunts of thieves and marauders in the bend of the river below Miami. I am also making effort to organize in that county provisional companies, and to this end have intrusted the matter to Col. W. A. Wilson and Dr. G. O. Hardiman, two of the best and truest Union men in the county. But the difficulty in the way of accomplishing much good in this way in Saline is that there are so few really reliable Union men in those parts of the county most needing protection, and the further fact of the Union men being so scattered over the country. I have offered them all possible protection and aid while their efforts for organization are being made. In Jackson County there has recently been some trouble. A small party of bushwhackers, it seems, have been loitering in the vicinity of Hickman Mills and recently killed a Mr. Johnson, an old esteemed citizen and loyalist. This occurrence was the first intimation given these headquarters of the existence of these outlaws, notwithstanding two companies of cavalry were at Pleasant Hill and one at Independence, both bearing on this point. I have relieved the officer in command at Pleasant Hill and sent a live man there, and have ordered a squadron to the seat of this trouble. The Pacific Railroad Company have resumed work on the road at the crossing of the Little Blue, and ask for a guard to give security and protection to the laborers and property. The demand on my limited cavalry is too great. I would respectfully suggest that as I have sent one squadron to Colonel Harding, Kansas City, that he might send an infantry guard to the Little Blue for the benefit of the railroad. They would be as efficient for that purpose as cavalry, and give me the latter to scout with, &c. Besides, to answer to this demand would take my horses out of their stables and put them out doors. But the road must be protected, and if the infantry can't go I will send the cavalry. I have given special attention to having comfortable quarters for troops and stables for public horses erected. At this place we have a splendid camp, some 100 huts, well built and arranged, and good stables for 1,000 horses. Such huts have been built at all the posts and stations in the district and with very little cost to the Government. In obedience to orders from your headquarters I issued the necessary orders and instructions for the construction of block-houses and stockades. This work is under the superintendence of Maj. Douglas Dale, Fourth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, and is being prosecuted with commendable zeal under all the circumstances. At the Osage bridge two block-houses, one on either side of the river, are being built. At Jefferson City nothing is to be done. That town was so thoroughly fortified, &c., when threatened last fall as to render any other defensive works unnecessary. At La Mine bridge, Pacific Railroad, a block-house is being built; at Sedalia, a block-house and stockade; at Marshall, a stockade. Lexington already has a fort. Kansas City is left to Colonel Harding. The situation of this town is so peculiar as not to render it susceptible of defense by a stockade. One or two block-houses will be built, at least, to protect public square and principal business houses. Touching the organization of local companies, I would inquire whether or not the major-general commanding has any special plan for the organization of this force? Under General Orders, Nos. 12 and 19, from these headquarters, series of 1864, the citizens of this district were organized, and many of these citizen guard companies are yet in existence.
and have done well. General Orders, No. 192, from department headquarters, series of 1864, would seem to direct that these citizen guard and all local organizations conform, in their organization, to the provisions of General Orders, No. 107, of same series. I am, therefore, maturing a plan of organization for local forces in conformity to these orders from department headquarters. Any suggestion or direction from the major-general commanding to aid me in this matter will be appreciated. In compliance with letter of instructions from the major-general commanding, I issued the necessary instructions to commanding officers and provost-marshal for taking lists and making rolls of the various classes of disloyal citizens. Under orders and instructions of a prior date, issued by Major-General Rosecrans, the provost-marshall's department had been quite busy in collecting names, &c., of all those captured and paroled by the enemy during the late raid, and all the facts and circumstances of the case, and in getting the names, &c., of those who had recently joined the army, or had returned, &c. These rolls were about being completed when the roll required by the major-general commanding was ordered. All effort is now directed to this classification and is being pressed as energetically as possible. It will require much labor and time to prepare the rolls, and I trust much patience will be exercised toward us, as we shall hasten them all we can. The returned conscripts from Price's army are being arrested and sent to district provost-marshal for thorough examination and disposal. This number is not as large as I had supposed, and very few of these but what would adhere to the rebels if in the ascend. The great destitution prevailing among the families of soldiers and loyal refugees has been a matter of much concern to me of late. The great indifference of municipal authorities and neighborhoods to the wants of the poor in their midst, and the swiftness with which they referred the cases of the needy to these headquarters for the charity of the Government, induced me to address a circular to the people, urging them to organize in every town, city, and neighborhood relief associations for the poor. It is receiving a gratifying response. Since the issue of the circular I have received General Orders, No. 238, series 1864, from your headquarters, which I assure you is as well timed as it is fitly spoken. The general aspect of affairs in the district is bright and cheering. A growing disposition among the people is discernible to second radical measures for the suppression of our troubles, and an entire yielding up of sympathizers and an acquiescence in such terms as the authorities may impose are among the things that give promise of better days.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdy. District.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 10, 1865.

Colonel PHILIPS,
Warrensburg, Mo.:

I want troops to keep on the move through La Fayette, Saline, and Cooper Counties. Now is our time to catch the stragglers from the guerrillas bands and break up their haunts. Unless this is done, as soon as leaves come they will give us great trouble. By giving them no rest many will leave the State.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Lee, Major-General of the Army, Dec. 10, 1863.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, January 10, 1865—12.20 p. m.

Colonel Philip, Warrensburg, Mo.: Colonel Harding has been ordered to report to you hereafter, except tri-monthly report of his regiment will be sent to General Fisk, part of the regiment being in that district. You will place him in command of that sub-district and give him control of the troops in it; also furnish him troops enough so that he can keep a company at crossing of Little Blue.

G. M. Dodge, Major-General.

Warrenburg, January 10, 1865.

Major-General Dodge, Comdg. Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

Dispatch directing movement of troops through La Fayette, Saline, and Cooper received and will be complied with. Have one now organized for Saline.

Jno. F. Philips, Colonel, Commanding.

General Orders, Headquarters District of Central Missouri, No. 1, Warrensburg, Mo., January 10, 1865.

I. The sub-districts of Central Missouri as heretofore existing are hereby discontinued and the district is resub-districted as follows:

II. First. The First Sub-District will be composed of that portion of the district of Central Missouri east of the counties of Saline, Pettis, and Benton, headquarters at Jefferson City, Mo., Lieut. Col. T. A. Switzler, Sixth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, commanding.

Second. The Second Sub-District will comprise the counties of Saline, Pettis, and all that portion of Benton County north of the Osage River, headquarters at Sedalia, Mo., Maj. George W. Kelly, Fourth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, commanding.

Third. The Third Sub-District will comprise the counties of La Fayette, Johnson, Henry, and that portion of Saint Clair north of the Osage River, headquarters at Warrensburg, Mo., commanding.

Fourth. The Fourth Sub-District will comprise the counties of Jackson, Cass, Bates, and that portion of Vernon County north of the Osage River, headquarters at Kansas City, Mo., Col. Chester Harding, Forty-third Missouri Volunteer Infantry, commanding.

III. Commanding officers of sub-districts will not change the stations of troops in their commands without permission from these headquarters. The troops must be kept concentrated as far as possible, and no matter at how secure a place stationed, they must at all times keep out pickets. Thorough discipline and regular drills among both officers and men are enjoined, and sub-district commanders will be held responsible for the enforcement of these requirements.

IV. All communications, reports, and returns made by subordinate officers to these headquarters will be transmitted through their respective sub-district headquarters.

V. The following-named officers are hereby announced as composing the district staff, and in order to facilitate the transaction of business at these headquarters all communications relating to subjects that would properly come under the direction of the chief of a department will be addressed accordingly, to wit: Capt. A. R. Conklin, acting assistant adjutant-general and district judge-advocate; Lieut. Edward F.
Ward, aide-de-camp; Capt. Theodore S. Case, chief quartermaster;
Maj. J. R. Moore, chief commissary of subsistence; Capt. Benjamin
H. Wilson, chief of ordnance; Maj. Henry Neill, chief of cavalry; Capt.
Charles H. Thurber, district inspector; Capt. R. L. Ferguson, district provost-marshal; Lieut. E. P. Bigelow, assistant commissary of musters; Lieut. Harlan P. Dow, acting depot ordnance officer; Maj. R. P.
Richardson, medical director; Chaplain Robert A. Foster, superintendet of refugees.

By order of Col. John F. Philips, commanding:

A. R. CONKLIN,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 10, 1865.

Lieut. Col. T. A. SWITZLER, Commanding First Sub-District, Jefferson City, Mo.:

Sir: The following instructions are submitted for your guidance and observance in the administration of affairs in your jurisdiction. It is of the utmost importance that during the winter and spring guerrillas, robbers, and murderers should be destroyed or driven off. You will be active in your operations against them, and keep the district commander fully advised. Local organizations can be rendered useful in this work. You will therefore encourage, to the utmost of your power and influence, the formation of local provisional companies composed of men of undoubted loyalty, who, if they will, can protect their counties and give the use of our regular troops to guard lines of communication and to be used against the enemy proper. A general and authorized plan for the organization of these local companies will be prepared and promulgated at an early day. When these companies are organized impress upon them the importance of erecting block-houses or stockades at their stations and rallying points. Whenever former known rebels and rebel sympathizers show an honest disposition to become loyal and law-abiding citizens, and are of such character and reputation that they can be relied upon, every encouragement should be given them. Accept not, however, mere lip service for loyalty; judge them by their acts. Willingness to organize themselves under officers of approved and undoubted loyalty for the defense of life, property, State and county, against the common enemy—bushwhackers, guerrillas, and thieves—is the best evidence of loyalty. Guard vigilantly against those who may offer to join these organizations for mere protection and show, and who will falter if not betray when the hour of danger and trial comes.
To all such show no mercy. An enemy in disguise is more dangerous than one open and avowed. The great tendency of troops stationed near towns to loaf and lounge about the streets, hotels and saloons, depots and stores, must be stopped. Equally pernicious is the evil of permitting escorts, scouts, and foraging parties to go out without their rations and blankets and to enter private houses for subsistence or quarters.
This will at once be corrected. Pillaging and unauthorized foraging will not be tolerated, and all stock, forage, and subsistence taken from loyal people must be fully accounted for according to existing regulations. Troops must also be continually instructed that any depredations committed, foraging, &c., no matter on whom committed, except by command of a competent officer, are illegal, and officers will be held strictly responsible for the acts of their men. It is a high duty of officers and men to pay proper respect to civil law, not to interfere in its execution, and when necessary to aid in upholding and enforcing it. You will make tri-monthly reports to these headquarters of the operations of the troops in your command and all matters of military importance. This letter of instructions must be regarded as strictly private.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

Kansas City, January 10, 1865—2 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:

The persons who killed Johnson were bushwhackers. My men are hunting them up. You will hear complaints against me in this and other cases for undue severity. I shall try to rid Jackson County of rebels, and in doing so shall burn their nests whenever necessary.

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Volunteers.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, January 10, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding,
Kansas City:

I have heard no complaints. I desire to have troops kept active during the winter to hunt out those bushwhackers; now is our time; but the posts that it is necessary to hold should be kept, the fewer the better. A force at Little Blue, to scout in that country, would, in my judgment, be a good point. It would at the same time give protection to railroad men. I suppose you can direct all these movements as well at your headquarters as to take the field yourself; probably better, as you could keep all at work in your sub-district. As you will now have several mounted companies as well as your infantry, I desire to be kept posted direct of all important scouts, &c. The main thing is not to allow these outlaws any rest during the winter. We have got the advantage now. When leaves come they will have it.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Kansas City, January 10, 1865—2.20 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:

Do you wish me to take the field with what men I have, or garrison posts near here?

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Volunteers.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 10, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding,

Kansas City:

Report hereafter to Colonel Philips, commanding District of Central Missouri. Part of your regiment being in General Fisk’s district, tri-monthly reports will be sent to him, but all other papers through Colonel Philips. Colonel Philips will be instructed to give you command of the sub-district you are in, in order that you can control the troops.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Kansas City, January 10, 1865—3.20 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:

Your instructions settle all points of doubt. Will endeavor to use my force to best advantage.

Chester Harding, Jr.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Volunteers.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, January 10, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding,

Kansas City:

Your dispatch received. Orders, &c., will be sent in a few days. Your district embraces Jackson, Cass, Bates, and northern part of Vernon. I have one company of cavalry at Independence, two at Pleasant Hill, one of which I had ordered to Hickman Mills. One company already with you.

Jno. F. Philips,
Colonel, Commanding District.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 10, 1865—12 m.

Brigadier-General Fisk,
Macon, Mo.:

In order to give Colonel Harding the sub-district at Kansas City, he has been ordered to report to the commanding officer of District of Central Missouri. His tri-monthly report of his own regiment will be sent to you, as part of his regiment is in your district.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

Macon, Mo., January 10, 1865—12.10 p.m.

Major-General Dodge:

I have a telegram from Jefferson City requesting my presence at the capital a day or two to confer with military committee. With your approval I will go for one day, leaving here to-morrow.

Clinton B. Fisk,
Brigadier-General.
Major-General DODGE,
Saint Louis:

Captain Denny's Roanoke militia attacked Bill Jackson's guerrillas six miles north of Glasgow this morning at 4 o'clock, and killed one of the villains and one horse. Our troops are in pursuit of the band, with orders not to stop day or night until they kill the entire party of bushwhackers.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
No. 6. } Macon, Mo., January 10, 1865.

II. Company D, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, will proceed at once under command of the first sergeant to Columbia, Mo., reporting upon arrival to Captain Colbert, commanding post, for duty.

III. Company E, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, will proceed without delay to Hannibal, Mo., reporting for duty to Col. J. T. K. Hayward, commanding Sub-District of Hannibal, Mo.

IV. Maj. Samuel A. Garth, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, is hereby assigned to the command of the Sub-District of Howard, headquarters Glasgow, relieving Maj. Reeves Leonard, of the same regiment.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., January 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. B. DOUGLASS,
Columbia, Mo.:

GENERAL: Yours of the 6th is received. I have ordered that Dr. H. R. C. Cowden, of Rocheport, and his family remove out of the State of Missouri and beyond the State of Indiana on or before the 1st day of February next; and I think I will banish every man and woman who comes by letter, petition, or person pleading in behalf of bushwhack feeder and drinker Cowden. Captain Cook, now at Rocheport, will be charged with the execution of the order. Cowden shall go unless my star is eclipsed. I am surprised at the great delay in the completion of your home organization. Certainly you are not going to let the enterprise fall through, are you? Arms will be furnished whenever you want them. You very well know that I have not the force sufficient to station troops at every county town. I have less than 2,500 in the entire district, less than 500 mounted, and most of them poorly mounted at that. Missouri will have to provide for herself. Counties must raise, mount, and pay their own troops. I am going to Jefferson City to urge some such plan, and will thank you for any suggestion you may have to make. It comes with an ill grace from Boone County citizens to complain of want of protection, when I can give you many petition from my files praying for the removal of all troops from Boone County. Quiet would prevail if the Ninth Cavalry could only be removed from the county entirely. You have but to make the recommendation, and permits for arms and ammunition will be granted every individual you commend. I believe that all men should be armed who remain in the county, and any man not worthy of such confidence ought to be killed. He is not fit to live anywhere. I am aware that Russell should not be troubled. I will block his wheels at department and provost-marshal headquarters. I have no confidence in such shysters. Post me about your local organizations.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Macon, January 10, 1865

Capt. T. B. REED,
Glasgow:

Four o'clock in the morning looks like business. Put the villains through. Tell Lieutenant Gannon not to stop day or night until he musters out Bill [Jim!] Jackson's band. Command your troops to the greatest activity.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., January 10, 1865.

Capt. THOMAS B. REED,
Glasgow, Mo.:

CAPTAIN: I have perused with much interest the remarkable statement made by Fanny Duff. I suppose she would as soon lie as tell the truth. Her story reads like the truth. You will push your men to the greatest activity in cleaning out these villains. Scout at night, and return to the same places which you may have passed before morning. Dig out and kill the murdering vagabonds. Give every citizen, man or woman, to understand that their whole duty will be required of them. Burn out completely every man that harbors, feeds, or conceals bushwhackers. Make your presence felt through the sub-district. I am told there is a great laxity of discipline among the troops at Fayette; correct it at once. Shut every grogshop in the three counties. Let no dram selling be permitted by anybody without permission from me. Report progress.

Very respectfully, &c.,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

Brigadier-General FISK:

SAINT JOSEPH, January 10, 1865.

Brigadier-General FISK:

Have forty men in Holt County, including secret spies and scouts. Affairs in very bad condition. Expect to go through that section some time next week myself. Am starting to build a stockade here this week. Material very scarce. Rumors of bushwhackers in lower part of this county.

JOHN PINGER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding Sub-District.
Colonel PINGER,
Saint Joseph:
You must take hold of the Holt County troubles without delay. The civil authorities must co-operate.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS SUB-DISTRICT OF CHILlicoTHE,
Chillicothe, Mo., January 10, 1865.

General CLINTON B. FISK,
Macon, Mo.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to return herewith the report of Major Deagle of the surrender of Carrollton, with the testimony of the finding and identification of the bodies of the six men killed, as referred to in the report. In connection with the return of this report I respectfully ask that the following action be taken in respect to the Enrolled Missouri Militia of Carroll, who are encumbered by the parole of the enemy: First, that an order be made either that the parole is illegal and void or that they have been exchanged, as the facts of the case warrant; and, second, that Major Deagle be relieved from active service. I would also ask that the company of Carroll County Provisional Militia, under the command of Capt. Daniel Hoover, except the captain and fifty of his men, be relieved from active service. Many of this company are aged men who went into the service in the emergency at my solicitation, and were promised to be relieved in sixty days, which have expired.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. SHANKLIN,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., January 10, 1865.

Col. W. M. ALBIN,
Saint Joseph, Mo.:

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your valued favor of the 5th instant and perused it with interest. Military law, I fear, will have to be supreme in Missouri for a long time to come. We cannot yet permit its removal and feel safe. As to the removal of my headquarters to Saint Joseph, I assure you it would personally be pleasant. It is quite to one side, however, for so large a district. I shall at once make it a subject of correspondence with my department commander. Changes may be made that will make Saint Joseph central to a district. Your city being the second in importance in the State should have a first-class military headquarters there located during the war. I will place the fact before General Dodge at once.

Thanking you for many kind words, I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., January 10, 1865.

Maj. SAMUEL A. GARTH,
Commanding Sub-District of Howard, Glasgow, Mo.:

MAJOR: You have this day been assigned to the command of the Sub-District of Howard, constituted of the counties of Chariton, Randolph, and Howard, headquarters at Glasgow. The command is the most important subordinate command in the Department of Missouri, and will require on the part of yourself and troops great activity and determination. Jackson and his desperadoes travel over the entire sub-district. Murders are frequent, and a general feeling of insecurity pervades the people. We must during the winter and spring kill these disturbers of the peace, and in your sub-district I trust the work will begin at once and continue until the last imp expires. Uphold loyalty, discourage treason in all possible ways; make it safe for a Union man to abide anywhere within the limits of your command; maintain the best of discipline in all your command. Permit no loafing and lounging around hotels, stores, depots, and saloons; prohibit the sale of liquors in your sub-district, and punish every offender by the total destruction of his liquors and a fine of $25. Unauthorized depredations and pillaging will not be tolerated, and all stock, forage, and subsistence taken from loyal people must be fully accounted for, as prescribed in existing orders and regulations. Your troops must be advised that any depredations committed foraging—and no matter upon whom committed, except by command of a competent officer—are illegal, and officers will be held strictly responsible for the acts of their men. And it is the duty of all officers and soldiers to pay proper respect to civil law, not to interfere with its executives and, when necessary, to aid in upholding it. You will make a tri-monthly report to these headquarters of the operations of the troops in your sub-district, embracing fights, scouts, &c., giving the localities where your troops have operated and the number of miles traveled. Move your forces through suspected localities quietly at night and back again over the same ground before daylight. Hesitate not to burn down every house where it can be demonstrated that the occupants harbor and conceal the murdering fiends. Do it by an order and destroy everything on the premises. Deal summarily with the parties who harbor and conceal. They are equally guilty with the bushwhacker and must share his fate. I shall hope to receive a good report from the Sub-District of Howard.

I am, major, very respectfully, &c.,

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

LEXINGTON, Mo., January 10, 1865.

Col. JAMES McFERRAN,
Commanding First Missouri State Militia Cavalry:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that on yesterday a small detachment of my company, under command of Corporal Lauchner, ran onto two bushwhackers on the Sni, about seven miles southwest of Lexington. One of them was the notorious Mart Rider. They captured both of their horses, and supposed wounded rider, as his overcoat, which he threw in running through the brush, had a bullet hole in it. The horses are both badly wounded.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. MEREDITH,
Captain, First Missouri State Militia Cavalry, Comdg. Station.
Col. J. H. Ford,

Commanding District of Upper Arkansas:

Colonel: You will see by the newspapers the Indians have moved against the posts on the Platte and been repulsed. I am informed that the Indians moved south. No doubt they are between the Platte and Arkansas in large numbers. I have sent the Eleventh Kansas forward to Riley, and hope you will get everything ready for field operations at an early period. Meantime have all the posts notified to keep themselves in readiness to resist an Indian assault, as the hordes driven from the Platte may return toward the Arkansas. I note what you say in your letter of the 3d as to a post near Lake Sibley. This cannot be done at present, as I want the troops held at the present posts ready for the field when fully equipped. I hope, too, you will not be long absent from your headquarters, when I want you to give directions to preparing matters for every probable necessity. Have troops inspected and see that everything is ready. Horses must be shod, and extra shoes in pockets; also men must be in good trim, guns in good order, and plenty of ammunition. Artillery for field service must also be examined, and especially as to horses, harness, and ammunition. Keep scouts in the field, but do not send out needless expeditions to break down our stock, which I hope to have ready for a larger and more thorough operation against the foe. Let me know everything that is going on.

Truly, yours,

S. R. CURTIS, Major-General.

Brigadier-General Mitchell, Fort Kearny:

I would not take troops far from Overland route. Weather too bad, and Indians probably gone too far. Am trying to get more troops for stronger movements.

S. R. CURTIS, Major-General.

Governor John Evans, Chicago:

No response from War Department. Our troops repulsed Indians from Julesburg and drove them south. We lost 15; Indians lost 35 killed. Am apprehensive of more trouble, but will urge forward force and do the best I can.

S. R. CURTIS, Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 11, 1865—3.07 p.m.

Lieutenant-General Grant, City Point, Va.:

Senator Pomeroy and the agent of the Overland Mail Route have just requested me to call your attention to the inadequate protection given by General Curtis against Indians, and also to the project submitted by General Connor. General Canby telegraphs that a steamship was sent to Mobile on the 16th ultimo for the cotton, and that the delay has resulted from the neglect of the rebel authorities to furnish the cotton. The expense of demurrage is very heavy, and General Granger proposes to send the steamship back without the cotton unless it is delivered very soon. Perhaps Mr. Ould should be notified of this.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

Special Orders, War Dept., Adjutant General’s Office,
No. 17. Washington, January 11, 1865.

22. The telegraphic order of the 7th instant from this office directing Brig. Gen. A. L. Lee, U. S. Volunteers, to at once repair to his city and report in person to the Adjutant-General of the Army is hereby confirmed.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
No. 11. New Orleans, La., January 11, 1865.

1. Maj. Frank W. Marston, Signal Corps, U. S. Army, is hereby relieved from duty as chief signal officer of this division and will turn over all the books, papers, and records pertaining to the office to Capt. S. M. Eaton, who is hereby appointed in his place.

7. Upon the recommendation of the chief mustering officer of the division, and subject to the approval of the War Department, First Lieut. J. L. Baker, Twenty-third Wisconsin Volunteers, is hereby appointed assistant commissary of musters of the troops comprising the Reserve Corps of the division. He will report accordingly, without delay, to Maj. Gen. F. Steele, U. S. Volunteers, at Kennerville, La.

9. Capt. A. Mason, assistant quartermaster of volunteers, having reported at these headquarters in accordance with War Department Special Orders, No. 469, series of 1864, is hereby ordered to report to the chief quartermaster, Department of the Gulf, for assignment to duty.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of the Gulf,
New Orleans, January 11, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. BAILEY, Baton Rouge, La.:
The Second New York must report to the Cavalry Division. It is only on special service at Morganza.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

JOS. HIBBERT, Jr.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
President LINCOLN:
Free Missouri greets her elder sister.

T. C. FLETCHER,
Governor of Missouri.

SPECIAL ORDERS, Headquarters Saint Louis District,

2. Col. John L. Beveridge, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, will relieve Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller, Second Missouri State Militia, in the command of the Third Sub-District. Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller, on being relieved, will report to Colonel Beveridge for orders.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,

WARRENSBURG, January 11, 1865.

Capt. A. WALTERS,
Comdg. Fourth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Sedalia:
Detail Lieutenant Kerr and his entire company, with five days' rations, for a thorough and complete scout of Cooper County. Let him make a clean sweep of it. Also instruct him to arrest and forward to these headquarters all returned conscripts from Price's army, together with facts and circumstances. Lieutenant Kerr will be instructed to be thorough and energetic.

By order, &c.:

A. R. CONKLIN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

GLASGOW, Mo., January 11, 1865.

Brigadier-General FISK:
Lieutenant Gannon killed John Robinson at 2 p. m. yesterday at Westley Hieronymus', ten miles from Glasgow. Was one-quarter of a mile behind Jim Jackson.

THOS. B. REED,
Captain, Commanding Post.

MACON, January 11, 1865.

Capt. T. B. REED,
Glasgow:
Cannot you devise scheme for the capture of Bill [Jim!] Jackson?
Rest not until you kill him. Put men in disguise after him. Employ some rebel to dig him out.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier General.
Glasgow, January 11, 1865.

Brigadier-General Fisk:

Lieutenant Gannon has returned. Pun Jim Jackson out of his boots. Followed him eleven miles south of Fayette. Stopped at dark and went to Fayette. Lieutenant Williams with thirteen men started on his trail this morning. Jackson has been wounded in both thighs. Left his boots at the house where Gannon first came up with him. Lieutenant thinks he cannot ride all night, and wherever he stops he will be compelled to remain. Robinson had six revolvers. Had emptied two when he was shot through the head.

THOS. B. REED,
Captain, Commanding Post.

Headquarters District of North Missouri,
Macon, Mo., January 11, 1865.

Captain Colbert,
Commanding at Columbia, Mo.:

Captain: I am directed by the general commanding to say that information received by him warrants the belief that much of the disturbance in Boone County is caused by the unrestricted sale of liquors. It is the direction of the general commanding that you cause every dram and whisky shop in the county to be closed and the sale of liquors entirely prohibited, except for medicinal purposes, and that under such regulations and restrictions as may be by you thought best.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. Waite,
Lieutenant and Acting Aide-de-Camp.

Lexington, January 11, 1865.

Col. James McFerran:

We have just had a fight with bushwhackers near town. There seems to be a consolidated force said to be commanded by Jackson. Send me some ammunition, as we are nearly out.

WM. Meredith,
Captain, Commanding.

Washington, D.C., January 11, 1865.

Major-General Curtis,
Fort Leavenworth:

Statements from respectable sources have been received here that the conduct of Colonel Chivington's command toward the friendly Indians has been a series of outrages calculated to make them all hostile. You will inquire into and report on this matter, and will take measures to have preserved and accounted for all plunder taken from the Indians at Fort Lyon and other places.

R. W. Halleck,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.
Maj. Gen. S. R. CURTIS,
Fort Leavenworth:

Lieutenant-General Grant has ordered that Fort Smith and adjacent posts be held, and not evacuated.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

Governor CRAWFORD,
Topeka:

Major Ellis telegraphs from Saint Louis: "Slavery abolished; Missouri is free."

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

Commanding officer at Lawrence forward the above immediately by express.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

Colonel MOONLIGHT,
Denver:

I am directed by General Halleck to investigate the conduct of Colonel Chivington in recent campaign against Indians. Also preserve the plunder taken. If out of service, a commission should be ordered. If still in the service, a court of inquiry could be ordered at his request, or a court-martial could be ordered.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

BEN. HOLLIDAY,
New York:

Will hold Julesburg and whole line, if possible. Expect to do so.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Major: Since my communications to you of the 6th and 7th instant matters have become very serious. The Indians have attacked Julesburg, Valley Station, and several other points on the Overland route; murdered men, women, and children just as they came; burned trains and houses; driven off stage stock, so that the Overland line is now in their hands, and all mail communication by that route is shut off, and here I am without a man to throw on either track, or even to defend the ranches with. Kit Carson has been whipped in the south by the Indians and news reached me last evening that an organization of Texans and Indians is being perfected to strike New Mexico or Colorado. A few days ago the trains were attacked between Forts Larned and Lyon by Indians, and farther on the trail was so large going north that the force is estimated at not less than 6,000 men. All this I have to contend with, and submit to the howl and sneer of parties who cannot believe but that I ought to start after the savages with nothing more than my head-quarters outfit. I am raising an irregular force, who volunteer for the occasion and until troops can be sent for our relief; and in this I am embarrassed by the ordnance department, Captain McNutt having some time previous instructed the ordnance officer here not to issue any arms or accoutrements except on a proper requisition, and that the order of the district commander would not do in the premises. I have to-day telegraphed to the general on the subject. These irregular troops will not serve under any other officer but their own, and they are not mustered. Arms and accoutrements I must have, all orders to the contrary notwithstanding, or I must yield the command to some one else, for I cannot stand by and see my fellow-men murdered before my eyes by red savages and not make an effort for humanity's sake, and from what I consider my duty, and at the same time be held responsible, so far as public feeling is concerned, for the security of this country. As you are aware, all supplies for this country must come from the Missouri River, and unless troops are sent to protect the trains there is only one way to save the people from starvation, viz, to abandon the country, which is the mine of wealth of the United States. Eminent and responsible men have invested large sums in this section of the country. By my suggestion Governor Evans, now in Washington, has been telegraphed to for the purpose of obtaining authority to raise another regiment of cavalry for one year. This could be done in two months, and one half in thirty days; but we have no horses to mount them on. Of the 1,000 horses purchased for the 100-days' regiment, only about 400 have been turned in to the quartermaster, and they are all unserviceable for the present. Out of the 600 ponies reported captured at Sand Creek by Colonel Chivington, only about 100 have been turned in to Government, and not one of them is fit, or will be, to ride. Such is the condition of affairs and such are the difficulties I have to contend against. I labor in this office from morning till all hours of the night endeavoring to straighten matters up, and in addition I am harassed from the outside by these Indian difficulties which, although occurring outside of my district, yet are in the Territory of Colorado, and fall on my shoulders. These things are not right, and I make this statement that the general commanding may have a thorough knowledge of affairs and my position. If I can get sufficient force of cavalry to guard the line of communication until spring opens, and in the meantime you rush out carbines, pistols, ammunition, and horses to fit out a new regiment, I trust matters will still go all right. I dislike very much troubling the general with these things, but I am afraid the department does not thoroughly understand my position; isolated from all support, yet bound down by rules and regulations governing commanders with everything at their call. I sincerely trust something will be done immediately for the protection of this country and relief of suffering humanity. I have sent the medical director up to Valley Station with escort to examine into the condition of wounded men, women, and children, and administer to their wants.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La., January 12, 1865.

SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Under the second section of the law of July 2 and the Treasury Regulations in relation to freedmen of July 29, 1864, I have endeavored to relieve the army of the embarrassment of providing for the freedmen who are not enlisted or employed in the military service. This I designed to do gradually, so as not to embarrass the Treasury Department by a sudden transfer or work any injury to the freedmen. Accordingly, after being advised (see Document A) that the Treasury Department was prepared to receive them, the freedmen in this department were transferred by the department commander to the supervising special agent for this district. I learn now by a letter (Document B) from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury that not only the transfer, but apparently also the law of July 2 and the regulations of July 29, are repudiated by the Treasury Department. The care and support of these people is a serious embarrassment to the army and a heavy charge upon its appropriations. Its efficiency is greatly emasculated by its complications with this and other questions of civil administration, and in this instance the only funds legitimately available are those indicated by the act of Congress. I have no disposition to thrust any responsibility upon other departments, but I do desire to rid the army of everything that impairs its efficiency. The care and welfare of these people has been a source of constant anxiety, and I was greatly relieved by the belief that the responsibility for it had been fixed by law. If the Treasury Department assumes this responsibility I think that I may give the assurance that the officers of the army in this command will give its agents every possible assistance. If it is to devolve upon War Department, some means should be provided for defraying the necessary expenses. In the meantime the condition of these people is deplorable, and whatever is done should be done quickly.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

A.

Office Supervising Special Agent, Treasury Department, Third Agency, New Orleans, October 26, 1864.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY,
Commanding Division West-Mississippi, New Orleans, La.:

GENERAL: I am now prepared to take charge of the freedmen in this department under the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury of July 29. I beg leave, therefore, respectfully to request you to direct by an appropriate order those now having charge of the freedmen and heretofore acting under military authority to report to me. That the property of all kinds under their charge be inventoried and turned over to me, and all unexpended funds derived from the labor of freedmen be paid into my hands. It is understood that all unexpired contracts or arrangements made by the military agents will be recognized and completed in good faith by me on the part of the Government.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BENJ. F. FLANDERS,
Supervising Special Agent, Treasury Department.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

B.

OFFICE SUPERVISING SPECIAL AGENT,
TREASURY DEPARTMENT, THIRD AGENCY,
New Orleans, January 6, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby, Commanding Division of West Mississippi:

General: In compliance with your request I inclose copy of Assistant Secretary Harrington's letter relating to freedmen. I beg leave to state that I am expecting by the next steamer from New York the return of two gentlemen who went to Washington at my request to represent the condition of matters here in relation to the freedmen, and to obtain from the Secretary of the Treasury definite instructions to me on the subject of their management as prescribed in the regulations.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BENJ. F. FLANDERS,
Supervising Special Agent, Treasury Department.

[Sub-inclosure.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
November 26, 1864.

B. F. FLANDERS,
Supervising Special Agent, Treasury Department:

Sir: I am directed by the Secretary to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of October 28. You state that you believe the rate of wages of the freedmen to be improperly fixed, and suggest that the supervising special agent, with the advice and approval of the department commander, be authorized to fix the rate of wages and also the classification of freedmen in the respective military departments. The Treasury Department has not yet assumed charge of the freedmen. When it does so your suggestions will receive consideration.

Respectfully,

GEO. HARRINGTON,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 12, 1865. (Received 9 p.m. 17th.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Sir: I have the honor to request that Maj. Gen. Q. A. Gillmore, U. S. Volunteers, may be ordered to report to me for duty in this department. If not inconsistent with the interests of the service, I beg that he may be relieved from the board of which he is a member and directed to repair to this city as soon as practicable.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 12, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. HURLBUT,
Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to say that the restrictions recently imposed upon the shipment of products of insurrectionary districts (under authority of General Orders, No. 80, from these headquarters) from Rodney and Grand Gulf, Miss., and West Baton Rouge, La., are now removed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Same to Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.)

Headquarters Third Brigade, Reserve Corps,
Military Division of West Mississippi,
[January 12 or 13, 1865.]

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans:

Colonel: In the event of some of the troops of the Seventh Corps now in Arkansas being attached to the Reserve Corps for active service, I beg leave to request the selection may include the Third Minnesota Veteran Volunteers and Twelfth Michigan Infantry now at Devall's Bluff, Twenty-ninth Iowa Infantry now at Little Rock, and One hundred and twenty-sixth Illinois Infantry now at Pine Bluff. These regiments were in the division (Second) which I had the honor to command. I have long been acquainted with their discipline, valor, and efficiency. It would be a peculiar satisfaction to have these troops in my command.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

C. C. ANDREWS,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Headquarters U. S. Forces,
Brazos Santiago, Tex., January 12, 1865.

Lieut. Col. GEORGE B. DRAKE,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Gulf:

Colonel: On assuming command at this place I immediately made such arrangements as greatly assisted deserters and refugees to reach my lines from Mexico. This had the effect to increase the number of deserters very materially, and threatened to destroy the organization and efficiency of the rebel troops on this border. Rumors have been reaching me for a month that the authorities of the Maximilian government were arranging to return deserters to the rebel authorities. During the last two days there has been a stampede among the very large number of these persons now on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande. As near as I can learn some forty to sixty have been arrested by the Mexican authorities at Matamoras and delivered to General Slaughter. I have not been able to hear from the U. S. consul at Matamoras for some days. If I had horses to draw the light artillery on the island I could easily drive Slaughter out of Brownsville. I have been over and felt of him sufficiently to satisfy me that he does not intend to fight in case we should advance. But it could not be held with the means of this command, and no material damage could be inflicted on him without a cavalry force. No permanent relief can be given these destitute people without occupying and controlling the valley of the Rio Grande, which, of course, can best be done by going in from Matagorda Bay and occupying San Antonio, which is the key to this whole valley and frontier. These facts are stated for the information and consideration of the major-general commanding Department of the Gulf. I have no doubt of the fact that deserters are being delivered on the claim of the rebel authorities. I shall learn more in a day or two in relation to the matter, and will report further. I shall be glad to receive any instructions or orders deemed necessary, if any, in the case.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. A. PILE,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
   No. 11. } Little Rock, Ark., January 12, 1865.

1. In pursuance of special order from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, the office of chief of cavalry of this department is hereby discontinued.

2. Brig. Gen. J. R. West is hereby reassigned to the command of the Cavalry Division of the Seventh Army Corps.

9. Col. J. K. Mizner, Third Michigan Cavalry, will proceed to New Orleans, La., to confer with the commander of the military division in reference to certain matters pertaining to the cavalry arm. Having transacted this business, Colonel Mizner will return to his command at Brownsville, Ark., unless otherwise ordered from headquarters military division.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
AND U. S. FORCES AT DEVAUL'S BLUFF, ARK.,
January 12, 1865.

Capt. A. J. Fitch,
57th U. S. Colored Infty., Comdg. Detach. on board Steamer Ella:

You are sent on board for a double purpose, that for guarding and fatigue duty. You will immediately on going on board divide your command into two equal platoons, each under a subaltern, and quarter them on opposite sides of the boat, with instructions that they will not leave the quarters assigned them without your permission. You will establish a suitable guard, having a sentinel on each side as well as the bow and stern of the boat, and keep the men at all times ready for duty. If fired upon from the river-bank you will use every precaution and effort to avoid confusion, and promptly return the fire without landing, unless the fire is from artillery. In that case, if the river-banks favor the movement, run the boat direct for the bank, and, landing under cover, assault, capture, and bring off the guns. The captain has written instructions to proceed to Augusta and report to Colonel Geiger. After landing his stores he will return to this place. On the return trip he will stop at Des Arc and take on a mill, under the direction of yourself and Mr. J. B. Coffee, who represents Captain Wendell, assistant quartermaster, for whom the mill is taken on Government account. On landing at Des Arc you will at once deploy about half your men as skirmishers, encircling the property to be removed at such a distance as to make it safe for the working party. The rest of your men will be employed in removing the mill and such lumber as Mr. Coffee may direct. You will allow none of your men to pass outside of the skirmish line, and no citizen to pass inside of it. You must not allow your men to forget that they are soldiers and liable for offenses, whether in camp or absent on duty; that under no circumstance will marauding and pillaging be allowed. You are ordered to take four days' rations, and unless you are detained beyond the time no provisions of whatever kind will be allowed to be brought on board of your boat. You will not allow your men to land except it be imperatively necessary, and then only under your orders. For their conduct under such circumstances you will be held responsible. On arriving back you will report to these headquarters before marching your men to camp.

By order of Brig. Gen. Alexander Shaler:

CHAS. E. HOWE,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
January 12, 1865—11.25 a.m.

Col. A. H. Ryan,
Lewisburg:

Get word through to General Thayer as soon as possible that he will reoccupy Fort Smith. Steamers leave to-day with supplies for him. The colored troops will come to Little Rock.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
January 12, 1865—2 p.m.

Col. A. H. Ryan,
Lewisburg, Ark.

A section of artillery will leave here to-morrow for Lewisburg.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.
LEWISBURG, January 12, 1865—1 p.m.

Major-General REYNOLDS, Little Rock:

GENERAL: I have sent express through to General Thayer with your instructions for him to reoccupy Fort Smith. To-night I will send 100 dismounted men on steamer Alamo to land above the mouth of the Petit Jean. If a landing can be effected safely will ferry from south bank of river twenty-five cavalry for the purpose of getting foothold to operate against the rebels in vicinity of Dardanelle and open way for boats to Fort Smith. I sent down yesterday, on steamer Chippewa, dispatches for you from General Thayer; also the messenger. Last heard from Newton and Brooks they were south of Petit Jean, near Rocky Crossing Bridge.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

LEWISBURG, January 12, 1865—8.30 p.m.

Capt. H. T. NOBLE,
Assistant Quartermaster, Little Rock:

River on a stand. Rebs above are quite lively. To-night I send expedition to south side of river toward Dardanelle. This, with the troops on the boats, will be able to clean them out, I think.

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF THE FRONTIER,
Fort Smith, Ark., January 12, 1865.

Lieut. Col. W. D. GREEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

The following dispatch has just been received.*

I respectfully request that boats be sent up as soon as possible, if not already sent, with commissaries, forage, medical stores, and clothing, especially pants and shoes. The river is very high. I have sent troops to Clarksville. I sent you two dispatches on the 9th instant. My subsistence will be expended by the 25th instant.

Very respectfully,

JOHN M. THAYER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, January 12, 1865. (Received 12.05 p.m. 14th.

Major-General HALLECK:

Your telegram relating to putting railroad employés in militia organizations was received on 7th instant. The whole subject has received investigation, and Brig. Gen. J. C. Veatch reports that all railroad employés have been organized in a separate battalion and required to do duty only in case of special danger. Your orders have been fully complied with.

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

* See Halleck to commanding officer Fort Smith, January 19, p. 473.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 12, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. B. Forrest, C. S. Army,
Commanding Forrest's Cavalry Corps, in the Field:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of 6th instant under flag by Maj. J. P. Strange, assistant adjutant-general, with copies of your correspondence with Maj. Gen. L. H. Rousseau; also the arrival of Lieutenant-Colonel Grass, of the Sixty-first Illinois Volunteers, on parole. As regards the exchange of prisoners, I cannot see under existing orders and regulations that I am authorized to negotiate, but will immediately forward the document received from you to my chief, for his orders in the premises, and will communicate with you on receipt of instructions. Much as I regret it, I cannot continue the agreement stated as existing between yourself and Major-General Washburn until I have the authority. Such exchanges are forbidden, and I have not been advised that Major-General Washburn applied for or received any orders on the subject. I reciprocate your expression of a desire to mitigate the sufferings and lessen the privations of the prisoners of war, and no effort shall be spared on my part to effect some arrangement for exchanges on this part of the field. Lieutenant-Colonel Grass will be sent forward on his parole to effect his own exchange, at the earliest date possible, for Col. E. W. Rucker, of your command.

Thanking you for the kindness shown to Lieutenant-Colonel Grass and, as he assures me, to other prisoners in your hands, I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., January 12, 1865

Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant,
City Point, Va.:

GENERAL: I transmit to you herewith a copy of a letter that I have this day addressed to the honorable the Secretary of War, which contains the views of this Department upon the subject to which it relates. A copy of my last annual report is also transmitted, to pages 7 and 8 of which your attention is respectfully invited.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER,
Secretary.

[Inclosure.]

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., January 12, 1865.

Hon. E. M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to call your attention to the necessity that exists for the removal of the Indians who inhabit the country along the valleys of the Platte and Republican Rivers, along one of which the route of the Union Pacific Railroad will pass, in order that the engineers upon that road may prosecute their labors in security, and that the work may progress without danger of interruption as heretofore from the attacks upon the parties engaged, to which they are now and have been exposed in consequence of the disaffection of various tribes along the route. I was so solicitous in relation to this subject that I did not hesitate to recommend in my last annual report that the Indian agency at the Upper Platte be abolished, and the Indians be admonished that they would no longer be permitted to remain in that portion of the country. In this connection, representations have been made to the Department that General Connor, commanding the military department, headquarters at Salt Lake City, proposes, if it meet the approbation of the War Department, to extend his lines eastwardly to the Little Blue, and along the proposed route of the Union Pacific Railroad, and gives assurance that he can and will protect it against any hostile Indian force that may attempt to interfere with parties engaged in the work upon the road, or with emigrants or citizens crossing the plains, and I respectfully suggest, if it meet the approval of the War Department, that such orders may be issued to the proper officers as will effect the object contemplated by extending adequate military protection over the entire line.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. USHER,
Secretary.

POTOSI, Mo., January 12, 1865.

Major HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: I have had no complaints from the citizens of Caledonia yet, but I think the troops had better be sent to Webster, as Lieutenant Weddle is scouting in that county every day.

W. MORAN,
First Lieutenant Company E, Fiftieth Missouri.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 12, 1865—1.35 p.m. Brigadier-General BROWN,
Rolla, Mo.:

I think it would be well to send a strong scouting party into Dent, Texas, Shannon, and the counties where Freeman's men are and give them no peace. While they are idle we should be after them.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
January 12, 1865—3 p.m.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

There are two scouting parties now in Texas County, and Captain Whybark is still scouting Dent and Shannon.

E. C. CATHERWOOD,
Colonel Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, Commanding.
Capt. A. Walters,
Commanding, Sedalia, Mo.:

Considerable force of bushwhackers appeared yesterday near Lexington and fought the company stationed there. They may drop down into Saline. Notify commanding officer at Marshall. I start a force this morning toward Waverly and Grand Pass. Co-operate with them.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

Headquarters District of Central Missouri, Warrensburg, January 12, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding,
Commanding Sub-District, Kansas City, Mo.:

Considerable force of bushwhackers appeared near Lexington yesterday and fought Captain Meredith, First Missouri State Militia, commanding that post. I have sent 150 men toward the river. Look out for them. They will probably go into Sni Hills and may work in about some of your stations.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

Kansas City, January 12, 1865.

Colonel Philips,
Commanding:

I have sent three companies in barge to Independence. One is at the Big Blue. The cavalry at Independence is ordered to crossing of Little Blue. Where is the company ordered to Hickman Mills?

CHESTER HARDING, Jr.
Colonel, Commanding.

Headquarters District of Central Missouri, Warrensburg, January 12, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding,
Commanding, Kansas City:

Bushwhackers driven west from Lexington and are being pursued. Captain Goodbrake is commanding at Pleasant Hill, and was ordered to send company to Hickman Mills. He telegraphed that you had sent Captain Jackson there. I answered him to send the company up anyhow and see whether Jackson was there. Not heard from him since. Telegraph Captain Goodbrake at Pleasant Hill and have him report to you.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding, &c.

General Orders, } Hdqrs. Dist. of Central Missouri, No. 2. }
Warrensburg, Mo., January 12, 1865.

I. For the purpose of enabling the people to protect their lives and property against the bands of rebel outlaws, bushwhackers, and marauders that infest the district, and to enable the regular troops to be kept concentrated for the protection of lines of communication and to operate against the enemy proper, sub-district commanders will, with as little delay as possible, organize the loyal citizens of their respective counties into companies, in accordance with the provisions of the following general orders:

General Orders, No. 192.

Saint Louis, Mo., October 9, 1864.

I. General Orders, No. 107, current series, from these headquarters, having been promulgated to provide for local defense against bands of bushwhackers and other disturbers of the public peace, and for the maintenance of law and order more effectually than could be done by calling out the Enrolled Militia, as well as to engage all good citizens in the work, it is therefore ordered that all citizen organizations for local defense in this State conform to the provisions of that order.

II. These organizations will be legalized both for State and U. S. service by being denominated Provisional Enrolled Militia, and the company and regimental rolls will state in the heading the object of the organization.

III. All company or regimental rolls must in future be indorsed as follows, viz: "It is hereby certified on honor that all the within-named persons are loyal men who have been intrusted with arms and relied on to use them in obedience to law and the orders of the U. S. or State officers placed over them, and that the officers herein named are the choice of a majority of the men of the company (or regiment) and worthy of command." This certificate must be signed by the commissioned officers of the State or the U. S. service, highest in rank, on duty in the locality in which the company or regiment is raised, or by the county committee of public safety, and when practicable should be sent through the U. S. district commander, who will indorse thereon his opinion and such recommendations respecting the organization, arming, or calling into service of the company as he may deem best for the public good. When the rolls cannot be sent to the district commander by reason of distance, or other serious obstacles, they will be sent to these headquarters direct, with a letter of explanation.

IV. Each commissioned officer must forward to these headquarters with the rolls of his company (or regiment) a copy of the oath required by the State laws from officers of the Enrolled Militia, duly taken and subscribed by him.

V. When arms, ammunition, and equipments are to be drawn, to save time proper requisitions for them should be made, signed, and sent with the rolls.

VI. When these organizations are thus formed, and the rolls approved by the general commanding, the companies will be accepted and their officers commissioned as Provisional Enrolled Militia, for the special purpose of local defense and the preservation of law and order.

VII. Except in cases of extreme public danger, no organization thus called out will be ordered to go beyond the limits of its own county, nor will it be permitted to go into neighboring counties, unless to pursue or meet marauders or other public enemies, or to arrest fugitive criminals from its own county.

* * * * * *

By command of Major-General Rosecrans:

FRANK ENO,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

II. Sub-district commanders will take special care to see that the command of the companies hereby authorized is intrusted to men of unquestioned loyalty, character, and fitness, and that the instructions contained in a letter from these headquarters, of date January 10, 1865,* are strictly complied with in permitting membership in these companies.

III. The organization in this district known as Citizen Guards is hereby discontinued, and the members thereof will be organized in conformity to the foregoing orders. Commanding officers of the Citizen Guard organizations will turn over the public arms in their possession to the nearest post commander, who will transfer them to the district ordnance depot at Jefferson City, Mo.

IV. Well assured that the importance and necessity of local organizations cannot be too highly valued, it is expected that all officers serv-

---

* See Philips to Switzler, p. 479.
ing in this command will give them every encouragement and facility, and that the citizens will respond to this order with that alacrity and willingness betokening a spirit of true loyalty and evincive of a determination to do their duty to themselves and the country.

By order of Col. John F. Philips, commanding:

A. R. CONKLIN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, January 12, 1865.

Captain Meridith,
Commanding, Lexington, Mo.:

Telegram me in full of movements of enemy; give their force. Where have they gone? Did you whip or kill any of them? Lose any men? Captain Burris left last night with 100 men to assist you.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DIST. OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
No. 12. } Springfield, Mo., January 12, 1865.

III. Capt. D. H. Connaway, commanding Company M, Fifteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, will, upon the receipt of this order, proceed with his command to the vicinity of Osceola, Mo., and establish a post in the vicinity of forage, where he will remain until further orders. He will take with him his camp and garrison equipage, forty days' rations, and a good supply of ammunition. He will make all the prescribed returns from said post required by existing orders.

By order of Brigadier-General Sanborn:

WM. T. KITTRIDGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 12, 1865.

Major-General HALLECK, U. S. Army,
Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: Your dispatch of yesterday directing me to investigate Colonel Chivington's conduct toward the Indians is received and will be obeyed. Colonel Chivington has been relieved by Colonel Moonlight, and is probably out of the service, under provisions of Circular No. 36, War Department. Although the colonel may have transgressed my field orders concerning Indian warfare (a copy of which is here inclosed)* and otherwise acted very much against my views of propriety in his assault at Sand Creek, still it is not true, as Indian agents and Indian traders are representing, that such extraneous severity is increasing Indian war. On the contrary, it tends to reduce their numbers and bring them to terms. Their bands are more united, perhaps, at this time than during the summer; but this results from their necessities and surroundings. They are in a destitute condition, and must at this season of the year resort to desperate measures to procure horses and provisions. Hence, we see a continual effort to overpower our little posts or our trains and stages. Their lodges are now between the Arkansas and the Platte, and they shift their assaults so as to attack to the best advantage. I am collecting and arranging troops near Fort Riley, but need more force to make another effort to destroy them. I will be glad to save the few honest and kindly disposed, and protest against the slaughter of women and children; although since General Harney's attack of the Sioux, many years ago at Ash Hollow, the popular cry of settlers and soldiers on the frontier favors an indiscriminate slaughter, which is very difficult to restrain. I abhor the style, but so it goes from Minnesota to Texas. I fear that Colonel Chivington's assault at Sand Creek was upon Indians who had received some encouragement to camp in that vicinity under some erroneous supposition of the commanding officer at Lyon, that he could make a sort of "city of refuge" at such a point. However wrong that may have been, it should have been respected, and any violation of known arrangements of that sort should be severely rebuked. But there is no doubt a portion of the tribes assembled were occupied in making assaults on our stages and trains, and the tribes well know that we have to hold the whole community responsible for acts that they could restrain if they would properly exert their efforts in that way. It is almost impossible to try officers in my command if they have a high rank, my troops all being widely scattered and much employed.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 12, 1865.

Col. J. H. Ford,
Commanding District of Upper Arkansas, Fort Riley, Kans.:

COLONEL: An order has been issued for the detachment of Third Wisconsin Cavalry Volunteers at Fort Zarah to report here. This must be attended to at once, and you will see that transportation is furnished, and if Captain Conkey shall be relieved here some proper officer put in charge of them.

Yours, truly,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 12, 1865.

Governor John Evans,
Washington, D. C.:

GOVERNOR: Your dispatch saying you return immediately to Washington was duly received. The Indian demonstrations continue much as they have done. The fight at Julesburg displayed a larger war party than usual, and seems to be a daring thing at this season of winter, since Julesburg is far out on a vacant prairie. But no doubt this is a swarm from the hive of lodges on the headwaters of streams between the Platte and the Arkansas, which hive ought to be attacked with a strong force as soon as possible. I have no news of additional forces to aid me, but have sent the Second Colorado and Eleventh Kansas out to Riley and beyond, with a view of movements against the Indians; but I need more troops on the Overland route, and hope you will urge the bringing down of troops from General Sully’s command, where there is no mail route and no settlements to defend. You better see General Halleck, who informs me that he has referred my papers concerning an Indian campaign to Lieutenant-General Grant. I have also just received a letter from him directing me to investigate Colonel Chivington’s conduct, which he says is reported as being calculated to bring down all the Indians on us. This presumes that harsh treatment may exasperate new tribes. However much Chivington may have erred, his severity would make no new foes, but rather reduce numbers and frighten what we have. I have written General Halleck to this effect. There can be nothing gained by excusing Indian atrocities in any way, for all these prairie tribes are about as bad as they dare to be. Terrible and shocking blows are necessary to quell the rascals, and we may always expect our troops to be guilty of indiscretions. I abominate the extermination of women and children; but these latter years such conduct has received so much applause that in Minnesota a premium has been given for scalps, and in General Sully’s recent campaign one officer reports his success in this line of extermination by throwing out crackers by the way impregnated with strychnine for poisoning his pursuing enemy. What I fear, however, is that the attack of Blunt, and more recently that of Colonel Chivington, may have been a kind of betrayal, accidental or otherwise, of a confidence which had improperly been given to the Indians by the officer commanding at Fort Lyon in his efforts to negotiate matters for the Indians with you. You know how anxious traders must be to have the Indians in some sort of convenient access, and no doubt they are down on Chivington and all others who frustrate their schemes. I suppose, too, that district attorney who seems anxious to keep up a fuss with the military of Colorado is also sending forward his appeals for his sort of adjustment of the wrongs of rebels and savages. I hope that you will explain that Chivington is out of the service, and a clamor about his military conduct has considerable to do with his political operations, which are no doubt likely to interfere with other men’s hopes in this regard. However this may be, you see the danger of circulating excuses for Indian atrocities. It will cripple our efforts to get troops to fight and delay the payment of militia, who may have to turn out to defend their wives and little ones. You must also explain that, although my returns show a considerable force in my department, most of my troops are going out of service or being decomposed by reason of expiration of time. Such is the case with all your Colorado regiments, and also the Ohio, Nebraska, and Iowa regiments in this department. The Third Wisconsin is ordered away, so my forces are really being reduced and rendered peculiarly inefficient.

I am, very truly, yours,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 12, 1865.

Hon. Edwin M. Stanton,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

Sir: Herewith please find the annual message of the governor of this Territory, in which he discusses at length the policy of keeping the Navajoes upon the reservation at the Bosque Redondo. A factious opposition to this measure, intended to operate upon the legislature with the purpose of having that body memorialize Congress to have the Navajoes removed to some other point than the one selected for them, induced me to give my views to the people on this point so vital to the interests of this Territory and Arizona. As these views should be known to yourself, I inclose a copy of the paper containing them for your information. I hope you will have time to look them over.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 1

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 12, 1865.

IV. Capt. Reuben A. Hill's company (K), of the First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers, now on duty at Fort Lyon, Colo. Ter., if it can be spared from that post, will return without delay to Fort Union, N. Mex., where its services are greatly needed.

V. Company B, Fifth U. S. Infantry, now at Fort Stanton, N. Mex., will without delay proceed to take post at Albuquerque, N. Mex., preparatory to moving with a train of supplies to Fort Whipple, Ariz. Ter., which post is at present commanded by the captain of that company.

VI. Company H, First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers, will proceed without delay to where the road from Fort Union, N. Mex., to Fort Sumner, N. Mex., descends the Mesa, near Hatch's Ranch, where it will encamp, and the company will be steadily employed for twenty-two days in repairing the road at that point, so as to make it more passable for wagons. The chief quartermaster will give directions with reference to the tools and necessary articles which the company may need to do this work. The company will take 100 rounds of ammunition per man.

XI. Capt. Charles Deus' company (M), First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, now at Fort Bascom, will proceed without delay and take post at Fort Sumner, where it will relieve Captain McCabe's company (L), of the same regiment, if General Crocker can dispense with its services, when this company will proceed to and take post at Fort Bascom.

By command of Brigadier-General Carleton:

ERASTUS W. WOOD,
Aide-de-Camp.
Brig. Gen. A. Sully,
Commanding, d.c., Dubuque, Iowa:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 10th instant, concerning apprehended difficulties about the draft in Iowa, and suggesting that certain companies of cavalry be brought down from Sioux City in that view, has been received. The whole arrangements concerning the draft are under the exclusive jurisdiction of the provost-marshal's department, the military only being auxiliary, and to be used when the necessity arises, on requisitions of the acting assistant provost-marshal-general or the governor of the State. No trouble has occurred in Iowa about drafts heretofore made, nor is there, in my opinion, any sufficient ground for apprehension now. However that may be, your proper course is to communicate with the acting assistant provost-marshal-general, Major Duncan, and the governor of the State, and, if reasonable grounds are found to exist for alarm, to ascertain from them precisely the means at their command to enforce the draft; and, if these means be not sufficient, to designate precisely the force needed and the point where it will be required. It will then be time enough to act, bearing in mind always that you are only furnishing military aid on requisition of proper officials, and by no means originating measures of security yourself for the protection of these officers in their duties. My belief is, from my own knowledge of the governor of Iowa, that you will find him prepared for any such emergency as you suggest, and that his militia is so well organized as to [be] efficient and sufficient. At all events, before moving in the matter, I desire written statements of the necessity for calling troops from the frontier at this time for such a purpose, and a requisition therefor from Major Duncan, acting assistant provost-marshal-general for Iowa.

I am, general, respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Brig. Gen. A. Sully,
Commanding, d.c., Dubuque, Iowa:

GENERAL: Your dispatch and letter to Col. F. Myers, chief quartermaster of this department, in relation to seizing trains of the Illinois Central Railroad, and asking that locomotives be seized on the roads in this State and sent down to be used on the Illinois Central road, have been laid before me. No railroads, even within the limits of your own command and for troops within your jurisdiction, should ever be seized except under the gravest necessity. Still less is it justifiable for you to seize cars and railroads lying within the limits of another department and for transporting forage for troops far removed from your jurisdiction. If the necessity really exists, proper representations to that effect should be made by the proper officer sending or ordering forward this forage to these headquarters for any railroad property lying within the department limits. Railroads in Illinois are neither within your jurisdiction nor mine, and I would never think of seizing them or any of their stock without orders from the War Department or some superior authority. I know nothing of the necessities of the quartermaster in Saint Louis nor of the troops to whom he is sending forage. If an absolute necessity exists for seizing railroad trains in Illinois it can be done through proper application of the quartermaster in Saint Louis to Major-General Hooker, commanding Northern Department, or the district commander in Illinois. I do not quite understand what connection there can be between yourself and the quartermaster in Saint Louis in relation to sending forage to Cairo, nor does it seem to me that seizing trains is either the quickest or easiest method of transporting supplies. There is no doubt that a railroad company can, under its proper officers, get forward supplies more safely and faster than can be done by military officers seizing cars and roads and undertaking to do it themselves. You will please, therefore, seize neither railroads nor cars beyond the limits of your command nor for the supply of troops outside of this department without authority from these headquarters. Any requisitions made upon you for such purposes by quartermasters or other officers not under your own immediate command you will please refer to these headquarters for action. If orders are sent you to seize trains, &c., by authority superior to that of this department, you will notify these headquarters by telegraph.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Circular Letter.]

Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 13, 1865.

Maj. Gen. W. F. Smith,
Special Commissioner, &c., New Orleans:

Maj. Gen. W. F. Smith, U. S. Volunteers, having been appointed by Executive order, dated December 10, 1864, and by War Department order, dated December 12, 1864, a special commissioner to inspect and report upon the condition of affairs in the Military Division of West Mississippi, all officers within the limits of this command are hereby directed to furnish to General Smith or any of the following-named officers of his staff, whenever ordered by him to perform special inspections, every facility required for that purpose, and all pickets, guards, and patrols will pass these officers within or without the lines at any and all times until further orders: Lieut. Col. N. Bowen, assistant adjutant-general; Capt. J. J. Van Horn, aide-de-camp; Bvt. Capt. G. W. Dresser, acting aide-de-camp; Lieut. E. A. Duer, aide-de-camp.

By order of Major-General Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., January 13, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration a statement of the information received at this office this 13th day of January, 1865: A report from Lieut. Milton J. Roberts, headquarters District of West Florida, Barrancas, December 30, 1864, and January 6, 1865—Miss Conway left Blakely, Ala., December 25, 1864. Four miles east of Perdido Mills at that time were three regiments of infantry and two battalions of cavalry, with one piece of artillery. They had three pontoon bridges. General Idell [Liddell] was in command. They were expecting three battalions of cavalry that afternoon. It was rumored in the rebel camp that it was intended to attack Barrancas and capture the deserters (First Florida Cavalry), obtain provisions, and destroy the negro troops. A colored man who came within our lines on the 4th instant from Blakely, Ala., reports 2,000 infantry and 100 cavalry at that place, commanded by General Idell [Liddell].

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,

Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

SPECIAL ORDERS,

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

New Orleans, January 13, 1865.

1. To carry out the provisions of extract 7 of Special Orders, No. 12, current series, from the headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, Company E, First Texas Cavalry (late General Hamilton’s body guard), is relieved from duty in the Defenses of New Orleans and will without delay proceed to Baton Rouge, La., and will be reported to Brig. Gen. Joseph Bailey, commanding the Cavalry Division, Department of the Gulf. The quartermaster’s department will furnish the necessary transportation.

2. The First Company Pontoniers, having completed the service to which it was assigned by extract 4 of Special Orders, No. 314, series of 1864, from these headquarters, will be reported to the acting chief engineer of the department.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut: C. S. SARGENT,

SPECIAL ORDERS,

HDQRS. DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,

New Orleans, January 13, 1865.

1. The detachments of Seventy-seventh U. S. Colored Infantry and Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Street, having reported at these headquarters, pursuant to Special Orders, No. 5, current series, from headquarters District of West Florida and South Alabama, will take post as follows: Companies F and K, Seventy-seventh U. S. Colored Infantry, at Chalmette; Company H, Seventy-seventh U. S. Colored Infantry; and the companies of the Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery will resume their former stations.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman: FREDERIC SPEED,

Assistant Adjutant-General.
LEWISBURG, January 13, 1865—10.30 a.m.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,

Little Rock:

GENERAL: The expedition for south side of river left here at 10 o'clock last night and would land above the Petit Jean between 3 and 4 this a.m. Last night received dispatches from Captain Hamilton, at Norristown. He reports the enemy in force at Boggs' Mill and Rocky Crossing, on the Petit Jean, with patrols to Dardanelle. With the exception of two companies of guerrillas between Dover and mouth of Piney, there is no force of the enemy on north side of river. This a.m. sent Lieutenant Winslow with ten men to meet two independent companies near Russellville to go through to the Piney to break up three flats reported secreted there to be used crossing the river, and clear the guerrillas from river at that point. With Lieutenant Winslow sent duplicate of your dispatch to General Thayer to deliver to Colonel Judson. I sent request to the latter to cross to south side of river two regiments of infantry and section of artillery and meet me at Dardanelle. Will try and get steamer through for him to cross. River at a stand. Train of 100 wagons was to leave Fort Smith on the 10th instant.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,

Little Rock, Ark., January 13, 1865.

Col. A. H. Ryan,
Lewisburg:

Telegram received. Dispositions approved. Continue to communicate freely.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,

Memphis, Tenn., January 13, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

I have good information that Hood's headquarters are at Columbus, Miss. He has furloughed most of his men till the 25th or 30th of this month. Forrest is at Tupelo, and has furloughed his West Tennesseans and Mississippians, to enable them to trade in cotton and procure supplies. These commanders were forced to these measures in order to feed their troops, owing to the destruction of their communications.

Respectfully,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

[January 13, 1865.—For Dana to George H. Thomas, in regard to operations of Hood's army, see Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 585.]
Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn,
Commanding District of Vicksburg:

GENERAL: Your communication of 9th instant was received this a.m. announcing the arrival of the advance of 900 cavalry sent from Baton Rouge. You will detain the cavalry at Vicksburg to await orders, and provide and hold in readiness transports sufficient to move them at an hour's notice. You will also send forward immediately a report of force, showing the number and kind of arms, amount of ammunition on hand, &c.

By order of Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana:

F. W. Fox,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Patterson, Mo., January 13, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel Hiller:

The scout has got in from Logan Creek, and report nothing out there. Captain Pratt was there New Year's, and staid until the 6th of this month and then left south. Got one or two horses that I need for my scouts to ride.

B. H. Bostwick,
Captain, Seventh Kansas Cavalry Volunteers, Commanding Post.

Kansas City, Mo., January 13, 1865.

Col. John F. Philips,
Warrensburg:

A small scouting party of my men came across 90 or 100 guerrillas near Lexington. They went into the Sni Hills. The lieutenant's force was too small to attack them.

Chester Harding, Jr.,
Colonel Forty-third Missouri Vols., Commanding.

Special Orders,
Hdqrs. District of Upper Arkansas,
No. 6.
Fort Riley, Kans., January 13, 1865.

1. Company L, Second Colorado Cavalry, will proceed without delay to Fort Ellsworth, Kans., on the crossing of the Smoky Hill River, reporting upon arrival to the commanding officer of that post for duty. They will take with them all their camp and garrison equipage and five days' rations.

By order of Col. James H. Ford:

J. E. Tappan,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of Kansas,
Fort Leavenworth, January 13, 1865.

Colonel Moonlight,
Denver:

Fort Lyon and vicinity is attached to your district command.

S. R. Curtis,
Major-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 13, 1865.

Col. Thomas Moonlight,
Commanding District of Colorado:

COLONEL: I clip a scrap from the Intelligencer of the 7th, which is probably a part of the occasion of General Halleck's order concerning an investigation of the conduct of Colonel Chivington. I suppose a commission of officers better be ordered, and have so telegraphed you. I have also attached Fort Lyon to your command, so as to accommodate the matter. If the colonel did attack that camp, knowing it to be under the instructions of the commander at Lyon, or the Indian agent, he committed a grave error, and may have very much embarrassed our Indian affairs. But I have written General Halleck that such reports must be taken with great allowance. I desire that a fair and full exposure of the facts be made. Major McNutt is absent, and I cannot therefore get his order concerning arms; but if a great necessity arises, I trust you will order the ordnance officer to issue, and he must act upon your order, in view of the necessity, and he will be justified. I suppose the destitution of the Indians more than anything else makes them desperate. I am trying to procure more troops to send out on the plains, but make but poor headway so far. You must do the best you can with your force to keep the lines open and protection of the settlements, and I will be busy trying to support you.

Very truly, yours,

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

[Inclosure.]

The massacre of Indians in Colorado.

A letter from Major Colley, U. S. Indian agent, is as follows:

DECEMBER 20, 1864.

I was in hopes our Indian troubles were over. I had 250 lodges near this place under my protection and that of Fort Lyon. All the chiefs and their families were in camp and doing all they could to protect the whites and keep the peace, when Colonel Chivington marched from Denver, surprised the village, killed one-half of them, all the women and children, and then returned to Denver. Few if any white men can now live if an Indian can kill them. Fort Lyon is on the direct road from the States to Santa Fé, and the commerce of the plains is millions each year. Chivington took 600 ponies, which were loaded down with plunder, on his return.

Kearny, January 13, 1865.

Colonel Moonlight,
Denver:

Troops are concentrating at Fort Cottonwood; but fifteen dismounted remain at Julesburg. General Mitchell is, or will be, at Cottonwood.

F. A. McDonald,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieut. Gen. U S. Grant,

*City Point, Va.:

Dear General: I had a visit yesterday from a Mr. S. S. Brown, formerly a schoolmate of mine in Indiana, now a Texas refugee residing near Monterey, Mexico. Feeling assured of his reliability, but without giving him any idea of what was in contemplation, I drew from him a great deal of information about transactions in Matamoras, which at my suggestion he summed up in the inclosed note. You will not fail, I know, to appreciate his first sentence, wherein he describes the use the rebels are making of that city. There was one point in his conversation to which he reverted several times, and which was suggestive of a new idea. It was that if overtures were now made to them he believed the rebel soldiery in Western Texas, particularly those at Brownsville, would gladly unite with us and cross the river under the Juarez flag. This belief he based upon the great disheartenment that prevailed all through the regions west of the Mississippi. Altogether, his remarks upon this point made a strong impression upon me. Recurring to my past letters, the greater conveniency of the route by the way of Brazos is self-apparent. Before deciding anything I submit to you, therefore, if it is not best to let me go and take a look at it and see exactly what obstacles are in the way and how they may be removed, if at all. The adoption of the Juarez flag on the bank of the Rio Grande as the basis of a compromise would stagger the rebellion next to the giving in of the State of Georgia. It is worth a trial, anyhow. While Blair and Singleton are in Richmond, let me, from Brazos, upon my own authority, invite the commandant of Brownsville to an interview on the old battle-field of Palo Alto. If the man's a soldier I'll wager you a month's pay that I win and that Blair and company lose. You know how to get me there—an order to make an inspection of affairs on the Rio Grande will do so. Such information as Brown's will, I think, fully justify examination. If it be found true, you may be in position, on report of the facts, to send me troops to smother the Brownsville-Matamoras trade. Then it will be my own fault if I don't get the arms through. Such an inspection ought not to consume more than a month. If you say so, McCook, who is now here, can take care of my department until results are had. If you send me I will at least put you in possession of the situation in that region and test fully the virtue of the rebel commandant at Brownsville. If I win him to my views all the bad luck will be to Maximilian. The handwriting of my friend Brown is so execrable that to save you trouble I have illustrated it with pencil interlineations. Finally, general, if you think me persistent in the Mexican idea, please ascribe it to yourself. "Hold on" is the lesson you are constantly teaching us. Had Butler served under you as some of the rest of us have he wouldn't have left Fort Fisher.

Very truly, your friend,

LEW. WALLACE,

Major-General.

[Inclousure.]

Coleman's Eutaw House,

Baltimore, January 13, 1865.

Major-General WALLACE:

Dear Sir: In reply to your favor of this date I would say that Matamoras is to the rebellion west of the Mississippi what New York is to the United States—its great commercial and financial center, feeding and clothing the rebellion, arming and equipping, furnishing it materials of war and a specie basis of circulation in Texas that has almost entirely displaced Confederate paper. But it is not alone the trans-Mississippi. The entire Confederate Government is greatly sustained by resources from this post. In regard to feeling of Mexican citizens and soldiers, they are, for the time being, simulated toward and in favor of the French. But they are, to a man, at heart bitterly opposed to the French, and I am under the impression that by judicious manipulation, and could they be properly approached, they would, in opposition to foreign intervention, rally under the Stars and Stripes. I shall any time be glad to give you collected facts in regard to it further.

Yours, in haste,

S. S. BROWN.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., January 14, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 14th day of January, 1865: A report from Maj. George Webster, Pass Manchac, La., January 12, 1865—Refugees give information that Rob Hunter with fifty or sixty men is on the Amite River. At Mandeville, on Lake Pontchartrain, Captain Robinson, of Colonel Scott's command, is stationed. Lieutenant Brinsmaid is there as conscription agent. An agent of the Confederate States visits that place or Madisonville occasionally to purchase clothing, &c., for that Government.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Capt. and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 22. } Washington, January 14, 1865.

43. Surg. Henry Buckmaster, U. S. Volunteers, is relieved from duty as medical director, Department of Kansas, and will report in person without delay to Major-General Dodge, commanding Department of the Missouri, for assignment to duty.

44. Surg. S. B. Davis, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty as medical director, Department of Kansas, and will report in person without delay to Major-General Curtis, commanding Department of Kansas.

53. Brig. Gen. A. L. Lee, U. S. Volunteers, having complied with telegraphic orders of the 7th instant, confirmed in Special Orders, No. 17, January 11, 1865, from this office, will proceed without delay to join his proper command in the Department of the Gulf.
58. Capt. Elisha W. Tarlton, Third U. S. Cavalry, will report in person without delay to the commanding general Department of Arkansas for duty, to relieve Capt. James E. Harrison, Fifth U. S. Cavalry, in his duties as special inspector of cavalry for that department.

Captain Harrison on being relieved will report in person without delay to Major-General Canby, U. S. Volunteers, for assignment to duty as special inspector of cavalry for the Military Division of West Mississippi.

By order of the Secretary of War:

W. A. NICHOLS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi,
No. 14. } New Orleans, La., January 14, 1865.

3. Capt. F. W. Emery, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, is hereby relieved from the operations of Special Orders, No. 6, paragraph 3, current series, from these headquarters, and is assigned to duty with the commanding general District of West Florida and South Alabama.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } Hdqrs. Department of the Gulf,
No. 14. } New Orleans, January 14, 1865.

8. The four companies at Plaquemine, La., and the six companies at Morganza, La., of the Ninety-ninth U. S. Colored Infantry, will, on the arrival of transportation, proceed to Tortugas, Fla., and will be reported to Brig. Gen. John Newton, commanding the District of Key West and Tortugas, for orders. The commanding officers at Morganza and of the Defenses of New Orleans will relieve all officers and enlisted men of the Ninety-ninth U. S. Colored Infantry detailed within the limits of their commands. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

C. S. SARGENT,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 14, 1865.

Brig. Gen. T. W. SHERMAN,
Commanding Defenses of New Orleans:

GENERAL: I desire, for the reasons expressed in Captain Walker's report of special inspection, that the Eighteenth New York Cavalry be removed from the La Fourche District and concentrated either at the Cavalry Camp of Instruction or elsewhere under your control for organization and discipline. I am also satisfied that the post at Plaquemine should be broken up. If necessary to keep a garrison in that neighborhood I think it should be at Bayou Goula. It is General Canby's desire to cut the posts down in number and garrison and add all possible to the movable force. Let me know what points you consider most important to be held by garrison with works for cover; what regiments can in this way best be concentrated and prepared for field duty.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

JOS. HIBBEKT, JR.,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, \ No. 12. \ HDQRS. DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 14, 1865.

2. Lieut. Col. Henry Street, Seventy-seventh U. S. Colored Infantry, will relieve Captain Robinson in the command of the U. S. forces on Lake Pontchartrain.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

LITTLE ROCK, January 14, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, U. S. Armies, Washington, D. C.:

Dispatches from General Thayer received on 12th up to 9th instant. Part of his force was still at Fort Smith, which had not been evacuated. The troops at Clarksville will return, except three regiments of colored troops, which are ordered to Little Rock, where it is proposed to concentrate all the colored troops of the department, except those at Helena. Orders to reoccupy Fort Smith left here on the 11th instant by telegraph to Lewisburg, and thence by carrier. Three steamers have been sent to Fort Smith with supplies. They passed Dardanelle to-day. There is a force of rebels on south side of the river in the vicinity of Dardanelle. Dispositions have been made that it is believed will protect the boats in going up. The Arkansas River is in good boating order at present, and if it continues so supplies will be pushed to Fort Smith. The garrisons of Fort Smith and dependencies cannot and have not afforded protection to citizens outside the picket-lines, and will not be able to do any more hereafter. In future operations expected of this department it is respectfully suggested that the War Department will not count upon these garrisons for anything. They are a dead weight upon this department. The Arkansas River now promises to afford more facilities than it has during the war, and if it continues navigable we will endeavor to throw a year's supply of provisions into Fort Smith. Five thousand animals have died there for want of forage. These posts cannot afford the least protection to Kansas or Missouri. They have been sustained at enormous cost, but will be reoccupied and held.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

(Copy furnished General Canby January 19.)
HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, January 30, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded. I apprehend great difficulty in supplying Fort Smith from Little Rock during the winter. Besides the official reports I have a personal knowledge of the character of the roads on both banks of the river, both in summer and in winter. Ten years ago I made, under the orders of the Secretary of War, an examination into the value of the Arkansas and Red Rivers as a means of supplying the posts on the southwestern and Texas frontiers. Neither of them can be relied on. I have known the Arkansas for two consecutive seasons to be of no value except as a draining ditch. The land route from Fort Leavenworth is still more difficult than that from Little Rock. The garrison of Fort Smith will be reduced as far as it can be with safety.

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 6. HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 14, 1865.

Satisfactory evidence has been received at these headquarters that there are persons living within our lines and enjoying the protection of the national forces who have declined to declare their adherence to the Government. The public safety and simple justice to loyal people demand that this state of things should not exist, and it is hereby announced for the guidance of all concerned that such persons will not be permitted to remain within the lines of national military occupation in this department. It is therefore ordered that books shall be kept in the offices of all provost-marshal of posts in this department, where shall be registered the names of all persons who avail themselves of the privilege hereby offered of taking the oath of allegiance. All who decline will be sent beyond our lines. Persons whose declarations are now on record are excepted. The commanding officers of posts are charged with the execution of this order.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

LEWISBURG, January 14, 1865—5.50 p. m

Majorg-General REYNOLDS, Little Rock:

The fleet passed Dardanelle safely at 10 a. m. Major Jenks is at Dardanelle. The rebels remained near Rocky Crossing. At 3 p. m. cannonading was heard in direction left of Dardanelle.

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 4. HEADQUARTERS INDIAN BRIGADE,
Fort Gibson, C. N., January 14, 1865.

The colonel commanding having been directed to take such steps and make such regulations as will protect the just rights of the Indian people, it is hereby ordered:

1. That all parties having any lawful right to be in or purchase stock in the Indian Nation shall report to headquarters at Fort Gibson as a

*On Canby's copy.
preliminary step. And whether the purchaser be a contractor or other person all sales or transfers must be examined and approved at Fort Gibson, first by the Indian authorities; second by the provost-marshal. All persons found driving or in possession of stock that has not been properly obtained shall be arrested and punished as thieves. (Nothing herein shall be construed to prevent legitimate transactions among the Indians themselves, legal residents of the nation, but in the absence of other authority all complaints of such sales, as of any other police case, may be adjudicated by the provost-marshal.)

II. Lieut. Houston Benge, provost-marshal, is directed to see that no disloyal person is permitted to buy or sell anything at Fort Gibson; and he is further charged with making a perfect record of all cattle butchered, transferred, driven, or sold, with a description of age, size, and color (range and owners), in addition to marks and brands. This record shall be open to inspection. The Indian authorities will be furnished every facility for making a similar record by all officers, soldiers, or attachés of this command. The provost-marshal is charged to see that cattle shall be sold only by owners or legal representatives. No bill of sale, voucher, or account shall be paid until a record of the transaction is made. All persons here under cover of the army are warned that the legitimate rights of the Indians are to be interfered with just as little as possible.

III. Attention is called to orders of the War Department in reference to contraband stock. All stock the property of persons now rebels or in arms or aiding or abetting the enemies of the Government is only known as contraband of war until its ownership be determined by competent authority, and no contractor is permitted to obtain possession of it. When necessary to use it or expedient to drive it from the enemy it can only be butchered for the troops by the troops and in every instance as carefully and fully accounted for as other property. In case of necessity it may be furnished to agents to feed refugees, on triplicate receipts, showing that it is contraband property and the exact amount, a copy being furnished to the head of the department to which it is thus transferred.

IV. Officers, soldiers, and attachés of this command are ordered to furnish all facilities within their power, compatible with the interests of the service, to the agents or representatives of the Indian Department (now with this command) in the exercise of their legitimate functions.

V. Detachments in the field, escort for trains, and commands in transitu cannot be permitted to kill stock as they have been doing. There is a legitimate mode of supplying all troops. When it is necessary to take and kill beef, hogs, or take forage, the commanding officer (or proper disbursing officer, if there is one with the party) is charged with seeing that such supplies are economically used and properly expended. Any officer so taking, or permitting his men to take, shall be held as a disbursing officer for the time, and must make his returns of the property to the disbursing officer from whom he receives such supplies, so that they can be correctly accounted for and paid or borne as property contraband; and in addition to his reports he is hereby directed to furnish an exact list of cattle killed or property taken (whether he find an owner or not) to the provost-marshal at Fort Gibson, describing the same so that they can be identified, and shall report where they were taken. All officers who fail to do this, on the proper evidence, the provost-marshal shall refer the matter to the commanding officer, who placed him in the field, for adjudication, and on neglect to do so, after proper time for its prompt settlement, shall forward certified accounts of the property taken to the chief quartermaster or commissary of his department.

VI. No person can be permitted to drive herds of stock through the Indian Nation until an exact description of every head is furnished, including marks, brands, and ages, and evidence that the property is honestly obtained, together with security given in sufficient bond that no cattle shall be taken on the way. Nor can any such herd travel save under the cognizance of a responsible military commander, with train or other escort and with proper passes. Actual citizens of the Indian Nation only can be permitted to drive their own stock out to market after having made record of the herd at Fort Gibson and obtained permission from the Indian authorities, when he shall receive a pass from the provost-marshal, which must accurately describe each head of stock; and no military commander with this command shall assume to give privileges to buy and sell.

VII. As the commanding officer has been notified not to permit white men to obtain foothold in the country or be in it but when necessarily with the army, all idlers or unauthorized persons are notified to leave at the earliest possible moment, as they can neither be tolerated nor subsisted. Sutlers or legitimate traders can be permitted to introduce one clerk only, for whom they shall be held responsible.

VIII. As the increase of private traders' teams and merchandise has become a serious evil, encumbering and exposing the Government transportation, no dealer, sutler, or trader, no matter what his status, can be permitted to have more than two teams with train and escort for this command. And the attention of provost-marshal and commanders at other posts is respectfully invited to this rule. At such times as it may appear to the commander here in the front that there is no danger, an addition of supplies or necessary articles for soldiers and their families may be allowed upon proper application, but never to exceed at any time five wagons, and that only by special order, which shall be on record. No teams for traders or sutlers not in the nation, which have the privilege of transit under orders from a proper commander, shall be allowed to dispose of any portion of their goods in the nation. No merchandise or supplies of any kind shall be furnished under cover of this command for the families of men in the rebel service or rebel sympathizers. Traders will be held accountable for this, and if there is any violation proven against any trader he shall be forthwith expelled. In addition to the above, traders must advise themselves of, and conform to, general army orders.

IX. Officers, soldiers, and attaches of the army in the Indian Nation are reminded of the fact that their presence with the army is for their army duties, and gives them no other status in the Indian Nation.

X. The acts of Congress forbidding the introduction of liquors will be rigidly enforced. Any person who leaves a Government train en route, except by proper orders, as messengers, shall be arrested and punished. Any teamster with private team found away from the escort shall have his team confiscated. All persons are warned from buying cattle from the Indian Territory of Osages, Delawares, or other Kansas Indians who are employed to go in and steal it, and they, and all other white men found within the limits of the Indian Nation, will be arrested, under the acts of Congress, as intruders. All officers, soldiers, or citizens with the army at Fort Gibson who witness any infraction of the above orders, or trespass on the rights of Indians, and fail promptly to report the same to the provost-marshal, will be considered and treated as accomplices when it shall be proven that they have seen or known of the offense. The hearty co-operation of adjoining commanders is respectfully solicited to aid in putting a stop to evils so nefarious and gigantic.

By order of Col. William A. Phillips:

WILLIAM GALLAHER,
First Lieut. and Adjt. 3d Indian Regt. and Actg. Asst. Adjt. Gen.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE,
January 14, 1865—9.30 p. m.

Lieut. Col. T. H. HARRIS,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The party ordered by the major-general commanding in pursuit of rebels who captured two of our advanced picket-posts this morning has just returned. The officer in command went to White's Station, on the Charleston and Mobile Railroad. Found fifteen rebels there, who escaped owing to the fleetness of their horses. Was told by citizens that from forty to fifty were seen there to-day. They belong to an independent company. The name of the leader he could not ascertain. In all probability they are citizens residing between here and Collierville, and if our pickets will not exercise due precaution they will be captured by detail.

JOSEPH KARGÉ,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 14, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I have the honor to forward herewith a letter from Maj. Gen. N. B. Forrest, of the rebel army, with copies of his correspondence with Maj. Gen. L. H. Rousseau, U. S. Volunteers, relative to the exchange of prisoners, received under flag by Maj. J. P. Strange, assistant adjutant-general on General Forrest's staff, with copy of my reply,* to which I request the attention of the major-general commanding division, and ask instructions. The report of Lieutenant-Colonel Grass, Sixty-first Illinois Volunteers, brought in by Major Strange, on parole to exchange himself for Colonel Rucker, of General Forrest's command, as to the treatment received by himself and other Federal prisoners from General Forrest is very gratifying, and I recommend that authority be given me to negotiate for the release of as many of our officers and men held by the rebel authorities in this part of the field as can be arranged for on the terms proposed by General Forrest, as I am satisfied our men will experience much suffering from the total inability of the enemy to provide for their bare necessities, however well disposed any of their leaders may be.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

* See p. 498.
Jefferson City, January 14, 1865.

(Received 1:25 a.m. 15th.)

Hon. E. M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:

I regret that I did not pay my compliments to you again in person before I left Washington. I preferred sending them by the voice of my people. My proclamation embodying that voice you will please receive as the compliments of free Missouri to a true friend, but prove that by deeds, not words, we signalize our deliverance. I state that which all Missouri is this day celebrating. The legislature is in session and a militia law is perfected which will make us able with but little assistance to conquer and maintain peace in the State.

THOS. C. FLETCHER,
Governor of Free Missouri.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 14, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing, Jr.,
Commanding Saint Louis District:

General: I herewith inclose the report of Lieut. Col. David Murphy, inspector-general Saint Louis District, of the Third Sub-District. Many of the facts stated in this report need prompt attention, and officers who neglect their duty in this way must be arrested and charges preferred or brought before the examining board. The troops will be concentrated. I think the posts of Farmington, Caledonia, and Webster should be abandoned and the forces held on the railroad should be sufficient to protect the important bridges, while all others should be concentrated at Pilot Knob, Bloomfield, Patterson, and Centerville. We cannot, with our present force, protect every town and village. Report what action you take in this matter to these headquarters.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Inspector-General's Office,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 14, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

Major: For the information of the major-general commanding the department the following extracts from the letter of advice accompanying the monthly inspection report of Lieut. Col. David Murphy, inspector, District of Saint Louis, for December, 1864, are submitted:

The Third Sub-District requires a regular overhauling and remodeling. Troops are scattered all over the country in squads of ten, twenty, and thirty men, in every little town and village in the district. All these posts have to be supplied with forage and subsistence from Pilot Knob. The consequence is that the troops are utterly worn down and rendered ineffective, in case their services were required to take the field against an enemy. No obvious reasons exist for this policy. There are no armed bands of guerrillas within the district; no invading army threatening. The only excuse offered by the commanding officer (Colonel Hiller) is, that if these troops are not kept out, or if an attempt were made to withdraw them, that delegations of citizens would besiege the commander at Saint Louis begging him to instantly replace them. Public clamor rather than military sagacity, or economy of strength, dictates the present course. Guard mountings, dress parades, and other military requirements are entirely ignored and remembered only as part of the history of the past. Roll calls, stable calls, drill calls, and such other regulations are considered as relics of old fogyism, and entirely neglected. One officer (Captain McLamaham, Second Missouri State Militia) was commanding his company in citizen's dress; sentinels found sitting down by a fire, their muskets lay on the ground ten or twelve feet from them. When asked by me if they were acting in accordance with instructions, replied by saying, "They had been told to watch that house yonder; that was all." Of course the sentinels were not to blame. The officer of the guard on duty is not responsible to the department commander; it is the commanding officer of the post or district. I remember the good old days when such men as the late General Sumner, then colonel commanding a department, would attend nearly every roll and other call, visit every sentinel post, and bring every delinquent up for correction and punishment. Those were days of comparative peace. Now, during a state of war and danger, commanders of posts and districts seem to think that their only duty is to take quarters in some town, establish a headquarters, which they visit in the morning at 9 or 10 o'clock and approve requisitions and sign returns and reports of number of troops, &c., eat their meals, smoke cigars, then go to bed without a thought or a care whether those under them perform their duties or not. Since the invasion by Price in October the post of Pilot Knob presents rather a dilapidated appearance. The quartermaster's department, in charge of Captain Dyer, is not characterized by a high state of efficiency for which it has been mentioned in previous reports. Captain Dyer has since been relieved (by reason of sickness); his place is filled by Lieutenant White, regimental quartermaster, Fiftieth Infantry Missouri Volunteers. It is to be hoped that the public buildings necessary to shelter the public animals will be brought to a state of completion before the return of spring. The subsistence department, in charge of Captain May, commissary of subsistence, performs its functions in the usual creditable manner. Supplies are on hand sufficient for two months. The hospital, in charge of Dr. T. W. Johnson, acting assistant surgeon, is in an excellent condition. There are eighty-two patients, twenty-four of whom are Confederate (wounded) soldiers. Doctor Johnson preserves the utmost order and compliance on the part of occupants, attendants, &c., with usual regulations governing military hospitals. The refugee department, in charge of Rev. L. T. McNeely, chaplain Third Cavalry Missouri State Militia, exhibits a marked improvement in the management of affairs. The chaplain was reported by my predecessor as having given orders for 4,500 rations in four days. This report, I believe, did the chaplain injustice, as it implied that to be the average number of rations issued. The chaplain explains by saying that whilst the road was severed, and communication destroyed with Saint Louis, that great difficulty occurred in procuring rations. Captain Hulskamp visited the post just as the first supply was received, consequently a great rush was made by the starving refugees on the commissary department; hence the basis for the report. The number of rations issued from December 1 to December 24, 1864, was 6,584. This includes issues to sick in refugee hospital and contrabands.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN V. DU BOIS,
Colonel and Inspector-General, Department of the Missouri.

Saint Louis, January 14, 1865.

Lieut. W. T. Clarke,
Aide-de-Camp:

Order the Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry to Brookfield, and tell Major Hilliard we shall expect to kill every bushwhacker in Linn and Chariton Counties. Direct him to suspend the liquor traffic in Linn. Direct Colonel Smart to guard all bridges with his own men, and relieve Colonel Krekel's Enrolled Missouri Militia as soon as Colonel Smart can keep the bridges.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.
CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., January 14, 1865.

Maj. H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis District:

I have just heard from expedition sent to Cherokee Bay, Ark. They killed 17 rebels, captured a few prisoners and 50 horses. We had 1 man killed and 1 wounded. Expedition will reach Bloomfield this evening, having to swim the Saint Francis River.

J. B. Rogers,
Colonel, Commanding.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, January 14, 1865.

Maj. H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have a later report from Lieutenant Rinne, who commanded the expedition from Cherokee Bay. He reports the killing of 19 instead of 17 guerrillas.

J. B. Rogers,
Colonel, Commanding.

SALT LAKE CITY, January 14, 1865.

(Received 12.20 a. m. 16th.)

Hon. Edwin M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:

It is the universal wish of loyal men in Utah that a department of the plains, including Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, and Montana, be created, under General Connor. Without it we feel it to be hopeless to maintain our communication with the East.

H. S. Rumfield,
General Agent Overland Mail.

J. D. Doty,
Governor of Utah Territory.

Amos Reed,
Secretary of Utah Territory.

William Reynolds,
General Superintendent of Overland Stage Line.

G. W. Carleton,
Manager Western Union Telegraph.

John Titus,
Chief Justice of Utah.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 14, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Lorenzo Thomas,
Adjutant-General U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.:

General: Please find inclosed herewith a census of captive Navajo Indians now on the reservation at the Bosque Redondo. Also a paper setting forth some of the characteristics of those Indians, and a copy of a letter from Brigadier-General Crocker, who commands the troops at that place. The two former papers are originals, and no copies have been kept at these headquarters for want of time to make them. They were prepared by Capt. Francis McCabe, First Cavalry New Mexico
Volunteers, and are the result of much labor. The Apaches who are also held at the Bosque Redondo swell the number to 8,991, as you will see by the return for December.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Sumner, N. Mex., January 7, 1865.

Capt. BEN. O. CUTLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of New Mexico:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to transmit to the general commanding the department a complete and I think a very accurate census of the Navajo Indians on the reservation Bosque Redondo at the end of the year 1864. This census was taken by Capt. Francis McCabe, First New Mexico Volunteer Cavalry, who, for the industry, fidelity, and ability exhibited in the discharge of this difficult duty, deserves great commendation. This report contains all the statistical information that can be obtained from these Indians. I also forward the report of Captain McCabe, containing much valuable history of this tribe of Indians and many observations touching their habits and their aptitude for the pursuits of civilized life. This report I regard as a very able document indeed.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. M. CROCKER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Sub-inclosure No. 1.]

RECAPITULATION.

The foregoing tables* exhibit the following as the totals of the census of the Navajo Indians located upon the reservation at Bosque Redondo, N. Mex., their stock, &c.:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Category</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lodges</td>
<td>1,276</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Families</td>
<td>1,782</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Males from 50 to 80 years of age</td>
<td>300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Males from 18 to 50 years of age</td>
<td>2,129</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Males from 5 to 18 years of age</td>
<td>1,525</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Male infants</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Females from 50 to 80 years of age</td>
<td>373</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Females from 18 to 50 years of age</td>
<td>2,187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Females from 5 to 18 years of age</td>
<td>1,418</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Female infants</td>
<td>288</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total population</td>
<td>8,354</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Horses</td>
<td>3,038</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mules</td>
<td>143</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Burros</td>
<td>6,962</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sheep</td>
<td>2,737</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Goats</td>
<td>630</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Aggregate.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Category</th>
<th>Value</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Average persons to each family is near</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Average horses to each family is near</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Average sheep to each family is near</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

*Detailed tables omitted.
Report of the census, condition, &c., of the Navajo Indians.

ORIGIN AND HISTORY.

The tribe has no written records, and the knowledge to be gained in reference to their origin is entirely dependent upon oral tradition, purely legendary, and so vague and improbable that it is impossible to separate the truth from the fables with which it is interwoven. Whether they formerly built and lived in the large villages, the ruins of which are to be seen by the traveler in the Navajo country, or whether they came from the North and drove the original proprietors from the soil, must rest for the present in doubt; but they were found during the seventeenth century occupying the region from which they have been removed, and since that period a state of almost continuous warfare has existed between the citizens and themselves. On the acquisition of New Mexico by the United States Government, under the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, in 1848, this tribe was the first to claim our attention, and various unsuccessful attempts were made to induce them to keep at peace, the failure of which made it necessary for the Government to send expeditions against them. Those under Colonel Sumner in 1851, Colonel Miles in 1858, and Colonel Canby in 1859 were but partially successful. As the result of each campaign the Indians agreed to a peace which was shortly afterward broken on some frivolous pretense. During the Texan invasion in 1862, the troops being all in the field against the rebels, the warriors of this tribe overran the country, sweeping off flocks of sheep, in some instances from the neighborhood of the military forts, and during the months of June, July, and August they carried their incursions to the very suburbs of the capital. Their repeated atrocities called for a terrible punishment, and in the spring of 1863 the department commander, Brig. Gen. James H. Carleton, organized an expedition against them, placing the well-known Col. Christopher Carson in command, with instructions to make no terms of amity or peace with these Indians, unless they agreed to leave the Navajo country forever and remove with their families and herds to the Bosque Redondo. The results of this expedition are of too recent date and too well known to need mentioning in this connection. The colonel, after a series of successful attacks, dispersed the warriors, burned their villages, and destroyed their fields of corn. He prosecuted the war with such vigor that before the autumn many of the tribe had given themselves up and were removed to the reservation. In the month of December, when many of the most desperate warriors were gathered at the celebrated Cañon de Chelle, he marched suddenly on that famous stronghold, entered it, and killed several of the Indians, and so affected them thereby as to cause the voluntary surrender of the entire band located in that neighborhood and their removal to this place. Since that time the Navajo war has been considered virtually ended, and the entire tribe, with but few exceptions, are now living at peace and endeavoring to make their new location as comfortable as possible.

PRESENT LOCATION.

The reservation set apart for the residence of the Navajoes is situated in the immediate vicinity of Fort Sumner, N. Mex., about 150 miles south-southeast from Fort Union, N. Mex., and 165 miles east-southeast from Santa Fé, N. Mex., in a valley of the Pecos River. This stream rises in the mountains near Santa Fé, having its source in a region of almost perpetual snows, and flowing downward toward the outspreading plains, has its volume increased by several small tributaries, until at this point the depth and width of the stream is very considerable, furnishing an inexhaustible supply of water for irrigation and all necessary purposes. The country to the east and south of this place is a low mesa, extending backward to the Staked Plain (Llano Estacado), and southerly as far as the Limpias Mountains. To the north and west the country is open for many miles, and the nearest approach to a settlement is fifty miles distant. The arable land about to be prepared for the reception of grain is all on the east side of the stream (although a considerable number of acres could be planted on the opposite side of the stream should it be deemed necessary), and will compose about 6,000 acres. This is already laid out in a systematic manner, the overseer, Mr. Calloway, directing the progress of the work under the superintendence or orders of the commanding officer. The houses or lodges of the Navajoes are built on the outside of the farms and as convenient as practicable thereto, and the inhabitants are employed daily in removing the roots of trees, repairing and opening acequias, or at anything that may advance the improvements on the reservation. The flocks and herds are tended some distance from the cultivated fields, and graze over a wide range of nutritious gama grass. No flocks belonging to citizens of the Territory are grazed near this reservation at present, nor could they ever have taken advantage of the grass before the establishment of this settlement if disposed to do so, as the Comanches of the plains paid frequent visits to and often encamped near this locality. Game is found in abundance some miles from the river and killed by the Indians. Large herds of wild horses run on the Staked Plain, about fifty miles from this, and several warriors who left the reservation with permission to hunt captured a great many of these animals last summer. The cottonwood, hackberry, and trees of a smaller growth line the banks of the Pecos at this place and at various points along the course of the stream. The ground mesquite, whose thick and ligneous roots enter the ground to the distance of six or eight feet, forms a very pleasant article of fuel, burning with a bright flame, with but little smoke. There is an almost unlimited supply of this species of fuel extending over many miles in each direction from the post.

CHARACTER.

As these people are now entering on a new mode of life their former habits are gradually changing; and they seem to accommodate themselves cheerfully to their present existence. In all their relations with the authorities and others on this reservation they appear to be cheerful, contented, and obliging, and when employed, as many of them are, on the public works, they labor faithfully and quite intelligently, and have the reputation of good workmen. As their character is now forming it will doubtless take impressions from example, and I doubt not, if these Indians are fairly treated and honestly dealt with in their intercourse with our people, they will emulate their example and become eventually an honest and moral community. They formerly had a great reputation for bravery and reckless daring, and the troops stationed at Fort Defiance several years ago have borne testimony to many acts of kindness exhibited by members of the tribe to soldiers and others who had wandered off their road and lost their way amid the snows on the Navajo Mountains. Should it ever be deemed necessary to enroll one or more companies of this tribe I am convinced they would render great service as guides, spies, vedettes, &c., and could be used advantageously for the protection of our commerce on the plains against the Comanches, Kiowas, and other wild and hostile tribes. As an evidence of their reliability for such duty, I would respectfully state that in the month of August, 1864, I took the field with fifty mounted volunteer cavalry and a small party of Navajoes on foot. During a rapid pursuit which lasted twenty-two days (sometimes day and night) these Indians kept continually ahead of my column as trailers, and bore up cheerfully against the extraordinary fatigues of the march. I afterward dispatched three of them to Fort Sumner by themselves as expressers, and they arrived there safely, although every facility offered for their escape had they been inclined to act treacherously. No troops that I have ever seen could have sustained the hardship and privations borne by these men, and few could have more faithfully discharged the duties required of them.

INDUSTRY.

They fabricate a strong and durable cloth and elegant blankets of a variety of patterns and brilliant colors, for which purposes the Navajoes value the wool they obtain from their sheep. These fabrics are made in hand looms of simple construction by the women of the tribe. One industrious female can finish a blanket in three weeks, which will wear for ten years, is perfectly waterproof, and will command a price as high as $50 to $200. The garments of the men and women are principally formed from the strong woolen cloth above mentioned, those of the women being often tastefully bordered by a combination of colors representing all the hues of the rainbow. The art of pottery has been known and practiced among them, but at which they have done but little since their arrival upon this reservation, as they have been supplied to a certain extent with cooking utensils by the Government. I understand, however, that the proper kind of earth for this purpose can be found in this vicinity, and doubt not but they will soon turn their attention to that branch of industry. There are several men in the tribe who are skilled to a certain extent in blacksmithing, making bridle bits and other articles of horse equipage in a creditable manner. As soon as one or two forges are established on the reservation the ingenuity of these self-taught sons of Vulcan will have ample room for development. Unlike many of the nomadic tribes on this continent, these Indians cheerfully engage in agricultural pursuits, and seem to take pleasure in the cultivation of the soil. Last year they all labored hard on the reservation, and for a time the crops promised to repay them well for their perseverance; but the visitation of the cutting or army worm damaged most of the corn before it came to maturity. The present year steps have been taken to plant a large quantity of wheat in addition to the usual amount of corn, so that in the event of a failure of the latter crop a sufficient quantity of grain may be raised for their support. Should the corn crop prove successful, as I have every reason to believe it will do, a large surplus can be accumulated, the good results of which will not only be experienced here, but will be felt throughout the Territory. Further steps have been taken to have them well supplied with pumpkin, musk and water melon, and squash seeds, all of the productions of which are peculiarly suited to the Indian taste and to the cultivation of which even the women and children pay great attention. They are also supplied with a species of gourd seed, which when grown attains extraordinary dimensions, and will supply the want of buckets, pitchers, &c. A considerable number of acres will be devoted to the cultivation of beans and peas, which in this region are very productive, and are regarded as one of the prime articles of subsistence. The Cevolletano Navajoes, who are partially civilized, and who formerly lived near the Mexican village of Cevolletta, are at present engaged in the erection of houses built after the Mexican style. They are assisted in their construction by a few mechanics and workmen detailed from the troops of the garrison, and in a short time these Indians can all be enjoying the comforts of village life. While the Navajoes possess the industrial habits, and are engaged in the pursuits enumerated, their more particular attention has in the past been turned to the propagation and raising of

STOCK.

They have for a long time bestowed great care in the breeding of sheep, and were formerly owners of large flocks of this valuable animal, and the tables herewith show them as still owners of no inconsiderable numbers. Some of their sheep are of a large size and would be prized in an Eastern market for their flesh. The wool is usually coarse in texture, but of a quality best suited to native manufacture. A cross with the Movine would be productive of good results to sheep raisers in the States. The horses belonging to the tribe are of a small but well-formed breed, very hardy, and sometimes possessing great speed and power of endurance. In their forays upon the settlements the marauders were enabled to defy their pursuers owing to the good quality of their horses. They will average twelve hands in height, and require little or no grain, but obtain their support from the nutritious gama grass that abounds in the neighborhood of the reservation. As there is a great proportion of mares among them, a few years will develop a large increase of this species of stock; and it is not going too far to predict that at no distant day our cavalry in this department may be entirely remounted on horses of the Navajo breed. This, when practicable, would greatly diminish the expense now incurred in transporting horses from the States, and their peculiar qualities and adaptation to the climate, locality, &c., would render them far more effective than the horses now in use.

MARRIAGE.

In this, as in most other things connected with their relations in life, these free sons of nature stand but little upon ceremony in solemnizing the marriage rite. A brave finding his fancy filled with the attractions of a dusky belle signifies his preference, when, both parties agreeing, he seeks the consent of her father, or rather opens negotiations to determine the price set by the parents upon the hand of their daughter. The bargain is usually closed by the payment, on the part of the would-be bridegroom, of a certain number of horses, if he be rich, or a lesser value if he be poor, and the bride proceeds to and takes up her abode in the lodge of her future lord. For some of uncommon attractions and connections in the tribe, as many as twenty horses are demanded. Separation of man and wife is almost unknown with this people, arguing well for their happiness in that relation. They engage mutually in the labors of the household for their support and the accumulation of property.
Transported as these Indians are from their native land a distance of over 400 miles, they will necessarily cherish old recollections for a few years; but under a firm and just government they will soon become reconciled, and even attached, to their present location. Their true interests will naturally bind them to the soil, and as their crops flourish and their flocks and herds increase they will be a self-sustaining colony. It is presumed that over 6,000 acres of land will be planted this present year with wheat, corn, beans, pumpkins, melons, &c., and this, if successful, will afford a large surplus beyond the immediate wants of the tribe. No country in the world is better fitted by nature for the residence of a nation of savage marauders than the region inhabited by the Navajoes previous to their removal to this reservation. Separated from the settled portions of New Mexico by lofty mountains or sterile plains, they planned and executed their forays upon the unprotected inhabitants with a degree of skill, caution, and cunning rarely exampled even among savage tribes, often murdering whole families and sweeping off flocks and herds, and generally succeeding in reaching their fastnesses in the canons and mountains, where they could defy their pursuers.

In Cañon de Chelle and its vicinity, and in the valleys of Tunicha and Chusca, and on the Pueblo Colorado, the Navajoes have formerly cultivated fields of grain, insufficient, however, for their pressing wants, as their repeated forays have demonstrated; but from Moqui, Oraibi, and the adjacent Pueblo villages to the Little Colorado, and even on its banks, no cultivation can be attempted with the least prospect of success. The region is bleak and dismal, full of deep and yawning canons, and utterly impassable in the rainy season, at which period the banks of the Little Colorado below the falls are subject to inundation. Were these Indians permitted to settle at any of these places they would be a continual burden to the Government, and would doubtless embrace the first opportunity to return to the protection of their mountain strongholds, again to commence a series of murderous and destructive forays on the Territory. One of the principal chiefs, Delgadito, has assured me that such would be the certain result of their removal to the region above named. This man is reliable, intelligent, and can write his signature legibly.

On the present reservation (Bosque Redondo) they have an unlimited supply of arable land to cultivate, plenty of water at all times for irrigation, and a prospect of being successful cultivators. The open country, extending for hundreds of miles to the south and east and for a long distance to the north and west, affords them excellent pasture for their flocks and herds, and isolates them completely from the settled portion of the Territory, while in the event of an attempt on the part of any to escape or to return to their native country, the open country would effectually enable the troops at Fort Sumner to frustrate their object. Should the improvements indicated by the department commander on the reservation keep pace with the expectations of many, the condition of the tribe will be shortly superior to that of the old Pueblo Indians of New Mexico. The willingness displayed by these people to carry out all the improvements set on foot for their welfare, their aptitude for the performance of manual labor, and the great advantages as to soil and climate they possess in their present location, encourages the hope that their condition will rapidly improve, and that they will at no distant day take rank among the civilized portion of the Indian race upon this continent.
Names of the principal chiefs: Herra Grande, Gauado Blanco, Barbocito, Delgadito Grande, Delgadito Chiquito, Barbon, El Chino, El Iujador, El Largo, Gauado Mucho.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

FRANCIS McCABE,

Captain, First New Mexico Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF IOWA,

Dubuque, January 14, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. POPE,

Milwaukee:

GENERAL: From your letter of the 12th in regard to my seizing cars and railroads I judge you are under the impression I have been disposed to meddle in what is not my business. Such, I can assure you, has not been my intention. I beg leave to make a few statements of facts to justify my conduct. Large amounts of oats were being purchased here and west, shipped by the Sioux City Railroad to this point, crossed over the river by teams, and shipped at Dunleith, opposite here, to Cairo. Colonel Myers, quartermaster at Saint Louis, communicated here and requested that Lieutenant Williams, acting quartermaster, would give his attention to it and see that this grain was hurried on, as it was needed immediately. This Lieutenant Williams did by seeing that the grain was rapidly crossed over the river, and by visiting the depot and agent of the road to urge him to hurry up the supplies. Still Colonel Myers complained repeatedly that the grain was not coming forward. This he did by telegraph, and sent one of his agents here with a letter requesting we would give him every assistance. Matters went on in this way for two or three weeks. The railroad, full of promises, but doing little, until all the warehouses here and on the other side were crowded with grain and large piles of it out doors, the agents here complaining they had not cars enough or locomotives enough.

Mr. Forsyth, the general superintendent of freight in Chicago, telegraphed to Lieutenant Williams that they wanted locomotives and they could soon clear out the grain. This is the reason why I communicated with Col. Fred. Myers, chief quartermaster. A few days ago I was informed that in spite of all the promises made, and the report that they had no cars or locomotives, large trains were going out every day loaded with hogs and other private freight. I therefore sent orders over to stop running any more private freight till the surplus grain on hand was cleared out. The consequence is that to-morrow would have seen all the grain on hand shipped and the road in condition to ship Government freight and private freight as wanted. You were mis-taken in the idea that I seized the road, or attempted to control the road. I merely gave them an order to ship Government freight first, as it was wanted. Had they refused to obey the order I would have reported the matter officially. I knew that the road, being in a State not in my district, did not properly come under my care; but being on the spot and knowing the facts, I thought I would be justified in giving the order I did. I have informed Col. William Myers, quartermaster, that you disapprove of my interference in the matter, and I have also informed the road that my order stopping the shipment of private freight until further orders is revoked.

With much respect, your obedient servant, ALF. SULLY,

Brigadier-General.

34 R R—VOL XLVIII, PT I
Headquarters Department of the Cumberland,
Eastport, Miss., January 15, 1865—12 m.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby,

New Orleans:

I have just arrived at this place and have as yet no definite information as to what orders I shall have nor what I am expected to do. As soon as I do receive orders, and the roads will permit of any movements being made, I will at once inform you, giving you timely notice, so as to enable you to co-operate with me.

GEO. H. THOMAS,

Major-General, U. S. Army, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,

Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to request that you will give orders to prohibit the issuing of permits and safeconducts for the shipments of products of insurrectionary districts from Waterproof and Saint Joseph, La.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Same to Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.; General Davidson, and the commanding officer Sixth Naval District, between Natchez and Vicksburg.)

General Orders, Hdqrs. 4th Brig., Reserve Corps,

MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,

Camp, Kennerville, La., January 15, 1865.

I. C. S. Lake, first lieutenant and adjutant Twentieth Iowa Volunteers, and acting assistant adjutant-general, Fourth Brigade, Reserve Corps, Military Division of West Mississippi, is relieved from duty at these headquarters and will report for duty to his regiment.

II. Samuel A. Walling, captain Company I, One hundred and sixty-first New York Volunteers, is relieved from duty with his company and regiment and is assigned to duty at these headquarters as acting assistant adjutant-general.

CHARLES BLACK,

Colonel Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, Commanding Brigade.

Little Rock, January 15, 1865.

General A. Shafer,

Devall's Bluff:

My dispatches for Colonel Geiger will reach you in half an hour. Please send them as soon as you receive them.

J. R. West,

Brigadier-General.
Little Rock, January 15, 1865.

(Received 3.50 p.m.)

Colonel Geiger,

Auguta:

(Care General Shaler, Devall’s Bluff.)

A force of the enemy under Shelby is engaged with our troops at Dardanelle, endeavoring to cross the Arkansas. If Shelby succeeds we may want to swing you around upon him. You will therefore remain where you are until you receive further orders. The accounts we hear of the condition of the roads in the country through which you propose to travel under your present orders have created a doubt as to the propriety of having you continue toward Helena. The major-general commanding desires to learn what your views are. If you cannot go through the Cache River country without severely harassing your command and losing horses, the communication of your views will influence your subsequent orders. What do you think? Do you advise abandoning the project or the reverse?

J. R. West,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Second Division, Seventh Army Corps,

Devall’s Bluff, Ark., January 15, 1865.

Commanding Officer of Detachment on Board Dispatch Steamer Resolute:

The brigadier-general commanding directs that you proceed without delay and deliver the accompanying dispatch to Colonel Geiger, commanding the cavalry force now at Augusta. Immediately on getting his reply you will return with same boat to this place and report in person (without disembarking your men) for further orders. You will post proper guards on different parts of the boat, and keep your men well in hand to return any fire that may be given you from the shore. Your men will not be allowed to land except it is imperatively necessary, and then under your orders. You will in such a case see that no marauding or pillaging is perpetrated.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Chas. E. Howe,

Lewisburg, January 15, 1865—1 a.m.

Maj Gen. J. J. Reynolds,

Little Rock:

General: The rebels, 1,500 strong and two pieces of artillery, attacked our troops at Dardanelle at 2 p.m. yesterday. The fight lasted till dark, when the rebels were repulsed, having lost very heavily. Our loss about twenty-five killed and wounded. Major Jenks has sent for more men and plenty of ammunition.

A. H. Ryan,

Colonel.

*See next, ante.
Lewisburg, January 15, 1865—7.30 a.m.

Major-General Reynolds,

Little Rock:

Sixty cavalry (all that I could mount) and 100 of the Eleventh U.S. Colored, Lieutenant-Colonel Steele commanding, started for Norristown at 5 o'clock this a.m. The cavalry will arrive there about 11 a.m.; the infantry this evening, they traveling in wagons. Second dispatch from Major Jenks states that the fighting was close and severe; that the men stood up to the work nobly, and the section of artillery did fine execution; fired 130 rounds. The major expected the fight would be renewed to-day, and ammunition getting low I have sent supply forward in an ambulance. With your approval, general, I will strain every point to hold Dardanelle; otherwise it will be impossible to get supplies to Fort Smith by river. I would suggest the sending from the Rock a regiment of infantry with good supply of ammunition, especially of Sharps and Enfield. I have none of either. Start soon and on a fast boat. They will reach them to-morrow noon. I would like the horses and harness belonging to the artillery sent along. I will place everything in good shape here and leave for Dardanelle in about an hour.

Respectfully,

A. H. Ryan,

Colonel.

Headquarters Department of Arkansas,

January 15, 1865.

Col. A. H. Ryan,

Commanding, Lewisburg:

Colonel: A regiment of infantry, section of artillery, with horses, will leave this p.m. on boat for Lewisburg with supply of ammunition. Your action is approved. Hold Dardanelle if possible.

By order of Major-General Reynolds:

S. C. Farrington,

Major and Acting Aide-de-Camp.

Lewisburg, January 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,

Little Rock:

Major Hackett, Second Arkansas Cavalry, in from Fort Smith, states that when he left Clarksville it was reported that Shelby was en route with heavy force and large train to occupy Fort Smith. River fell nine inches last twenty-four hours.

A. H. Ryan,

Colonel.

Headquarters Department of Mississippi,

Memphis, Tenn., January 15, 1865.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn,

Commanding District of Vicksburg, Vicksburg, Miss.:

General: I am instructed by the major-general commanding department to inform you that the present necessity requires the immediate assembling at Memphis of the Fifth Illinois Cavalry Volunteers, and that he sends you the Fourth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers to replace the portion of the Fifth Illinois at Vicksburg. The major-general directs that upon the receipt of this you will relieve every officer and man in any manner detached from the Fifth Illinois within your command, and have the command in complete readiness to embark, with all equipage, horses, mules, transportation, property, and ten days' rations and forage, as soon as the Fourth Missouri is disembarked, whether by night or day, causing their immediate departure, to the end that not an hour may be lost by delay, and also that you furnish the steamers with sufficient coal and dry wood for the trip up, that delay may not occur from poor or insufficient fuel, and that you furnish the captains of the steamers with written orders to make no unnecessary landings, and complete the passage in the fewest hours, also impressing upon the senior officer on each steamer the necessity of promptness. The major-general also directs that the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry Volunteers be immediately re-embarked on the transports on which they arrived at Vicksburg and sent to Memphis, making same orders as to rations, forage, fuel, promptness, &c., as in the case of the Fifth Illinois. As the commanding general has heard nothing from you as to your action under paragraph 3 of Special Orders, No. 23, dated December 28, 1864, from these headquarters, he directs that you furnish information if the original copy reached you, and that you forthwith send to Memphis all model barges at Vicksburg. The completion of any repairs on them will be made at Memphis, and that if these barges are not required for the transportation of the cavalry ordered to Memphis, that they be sent by other steamers than those carrying cavalry, that no delay may occur from towing. A copy of paragraph 3, Special Orders, No. 23, series of 1864, from these headquarters, is inclosed herewith.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. H. HARRIS,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 15, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. W. DAVIDSON,
Commanding District of Natchez, Natchez, Miss.:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the major-general commanding department to inform you that in response to your request for additional cavalry he this day issues the order sending you his strongest regiment, the Second New Jersey Cavalry, commanded by Colonel Karge, who distinguished himself during the raid, and to inform you that he desires you, on the receipt of this, to at once revoke all details of officers and men detached in any way within your command from the portion of the Fifth Illinois Cavalry at Natchez, and hold them in readiness to embark on the transports arriving with the Second New Jersey, as soon as that regiment has disembarked, provided with ten days' forage and rations, to the end that not an hour may be lost in the disembarking of the one or the embarkation and departure of the other, whether by day or night; also please furnish the steamers with all the coal and dry wood they can use on the up trip, and give the captain written

* Omitted.
orders to make return in the fewest hours practicable, impressing on the senior officer on each steamer the necessity of promptness, to the end that no delays may occur. The Second New Jersey is the only regiment in the department armed with the Spencer carbine, and is parted with by the major-general with some reluctance on that account.
Requisition was made by telegraph on the Cavalry Bureau at Washington for sufficient additional arms and accouterments to fully equip the regiment some time since. Orders were sent some time since to Major-General Washburn, commanding District of Vicksburg, to send all public transportation and model barges at Vicksburg and Natchez to Memphis, excepting one transport and one barge of sufficient capacity to move one 4-gun battery and 200 cavalry at each place. The major-general directs me to state that the orders are so modified as to leave all barges belonging to Natchez at that post.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. H. HARRIS,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS,

No. 28. HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,

Memphis, Tenn., January 15, 1865.

II. The Second New Jersey and Fourth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry will be held in readiness to embark at an hour’s notice with five days’ forage and rations, all baggage, camp and garrison equipage, and property. All officers and enlisted men detached in any way from these regiments will be at once ordered to them. All details are hereby revoke. Immediate action will be expected from every officer in any manner interested.

By order of Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana:

T. H. HARRIS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,

Memphis, Tenn., January 15, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER FOURTH MISSOURI CAVALRY VOLS.,

Memphis, Tenn.:

SIR: You are hereby ordered to immediately and without delay prepare for embarking your entire command, with all officers and men, horses, camp and garrison equipage, transportation and other property, for change of station. All details of officers and men are revoked, and you will order every one detached to at once report to you. You will also, on receipt of this, forthwith furnish to Capt. L. S. Van Vliet, chief quartermaster, an exact statement of number of officers and men, horses, mules, wagons, equipage, and other property, including five days’ rations and forage, which is to be transported.

By order of Major-General Dana:

T. H. HARRIS,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
Executive Mansion,
Washington, January 15, 1865.

Major-General Dodge,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

It is represented to me that there is so much irregular violence in Northern Missouri as to be driving away the people and almost depopulating it. Please gather information, and consider whether an appeal to the people there to go to their homes and let one another alone, recognizing as a full right of protection for each that he lets others alone, and barring only him who refuses to let others alone, may not enable you to withdraw the troops, their presence itself a cause of irritation and constant apprehension, and thus restore peace and quiet and returning prosperity. Please consider this, and telegraph or write me.

A. Lincoln.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, January 15, 1865.

Governor Fletcher,
Jefferson City:

President Lincoln telegraphs me that it is represented to him that there is much irregular violence in Northern Missouri. That on account of this it is being almost depopulated, and suggests the propriety of withdrawing the troops and calling upon the citizens to return, and recognizing as a full right to each that he let the other alone. Do you believe any such policy would have the desired effect? I have not heard of many cases that he speaks of. Consider this private and answer by telegraph.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

War Department,
January 15, 1865.

His Excellency Governor Fletcher,
Jefferson City, Mo.:

The Secretary of War being absent it is my duty to answer your telegram of yesterday. This Department receives with joy the assurance it contains. The abolition of slavery in Missouri is an historical event of vast significance and moment. As in the border struggle of Kansas, the slave-holders of Missouri were the first to begin the war against freedom and democracy, so the triumph of emancipation in your great central State is the sure precursor and pledge of the speedy and immovable establishment of liberty and unity for the entire nation.

C. A. Dana,
Assistant Secretary of War.

Saint Louis, January 15, 1865.

Colonel Beveridge,
Pilot Knob:

You will at once relieve all the Seventh Kansas now at the bridges on Iron Mountain Railroad with dismounted men of the Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, the mounted men to be collected at Pilot Knob and its outposts, Centerville, and Patterson. There are some of the Seventh Kansas at the bridges this side of your district. You will relieve them also. The officer in command at De Soto can give you information as to the location of the troops of that regiment this side of your district. The mounted men will march to Pilot Knob on being relieved. Report by telegraph when you shall have executed this order.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 15, 1865.

Col. J. F. PHILIPS,
Commanding Central District of Missouri, Warrensburg, Mo.:

COLONEL: I am in receipt of your report of January 10, which gives me a good insight into matters. You ask for advice and instructions relative to organizing local companies, &c. I expect that during this week or the next the new militia bill will become a law, when I propose that we shall organize in each of the Missouri River counties, and in others when necessary, at least one company of 100 men each, placed under good, undoubtedly loyal, and, if possible, experienced officers. The Government will furnish forage and clothing, the State probably arm and equip, and the counties be taxed to pay them. I hope the law will so pass as to warrant this, and have them raised under the superintendence of district commanders. If you raise any companies no doubt they can be turned into this organization. We must have in such companies good officers, who will command implicit obedience from and enforce discipline among their men, and who will not cause or allow their troops to unlawfully depredate, pillage, or plunder, or to commit any acts through personal enmity. General Orders, No. 7, I propose to carry out strictly, and the people may as well understand that they must comply with it. Colonel Harding is now under you, which does away with all conflict of orders, and I believe placed troops at Little Blue. It is to our interest to give all protection and aid and encouragement to the finishing of the Pacific Railroad. I have sent working parties to Osage and Meramec to put up block-houses, so as to relieve you from drawing too heavily from your force for such details. I send you plan of a good block-house. The lower part is all we build, the top or second story being useless. Make those you build in future upon this plan. Give no rest to the guerrillas. Keep them moving until we can have perfect organization. Keep me thoroughly advised of all that is transpiring.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Lyon, Colo. Ter., January 15, 1865.

Lieut. ROBERT S. ROE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Riley, Kans.:

SIR: I have the honor to report that since my last report on the 6th instant no signs of Indians have been seen in this immediate vicinity. The Indians have evidently all gone to the northward, and now have their main camp between the Smoky Hill and Republican. They are very strong and are well armed and prepared to make more trouble on the plains than they have ever made before. I sent word to the citizens on the Platte that the road between Julesburg and Marysville would be unsafe; that the Indians would commit depredations there and then strike the settlements south of Denver and between there and Colorado City. This word I sent three weeks ago, and what I then stated has occurred. I am now as well convinced that they intend to make an attack on the settlements above here on the Arkansas River or to cut off our communication with the States. Our force here is small. Unofficial rumor states that Texans are advancing from Western Texas upon New Mexico and Colorado, but should this be a mistake we have not a force sufficient here to protect the settlements above and hold this post. The company (K, First New Mexico Volunteers) belonging to the Department of New Mexico will soon be called to Fort Union. This will leave the post in a worse condition still, and will only leave troops sufficient to hold the post without furnishing escorts for mail, trains, &c.

I have the honor to be, with much respect, your obedient servant,

SCOTT J. ANTHONY,
Major First Colorado Cavalry, Commanding Post.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 4.

Pursuant to telegraphic instructions from department headquarters bearing date of the 13th instant, the post of Fort Lyon and vicinity is attached to this district. All reports and returns required by existing orders and regulations will be promptly made to these headquarters.

By order of Col. T. Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry:

IRA I. TABER,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 16.
Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La., January 16, 1865.

3. Capt. Thomas F. Purnell, assistant quartermaster of volunteers, having reported in writing to these headquarters in accordance with Special Orders, No. 466, War Department, series of 1864, is hereby assigned to duty with the First Division, U. S. Colored Troops, District of Vicksburg.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

O. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Fort at Morganza—Memorandum of proposed modifications.

OFFICE OF CHIEF ENGINEER,
MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, January 16, 1865.

The MAJOR-GENERAL COMMANDING:

First. The main levee to be made continuous and secure at and in vicinity of the fort. Those portions of the existing line situated between the main levee and the river to be demolished (carefully filling and ramming all excavations on this space) and replaced by lines of heavy stockade extending in nearly straight lines from the points where the faces of the existing half bastions intercept the main levee to the water's edge. Each of these two lines of stockade to be pierced with the usual loop-holes and two embrasures for field guns, and provided with the necessary banquets and platforms. The embrasures and loop-holes to be at least six feet above the surface of the ground, dispensing with ditches in front of the stockade. All excavations necessary in the erection of the stockade to be carefully filled and rammed. The armament to be (now in the fort) thirteen 24-pounder siege guns, one 12-pounder siege gun, three 30-pounder Parrots, one 12-pounder howitzer, four light 12-pounders (field). To be provided six field howitzers (heavy). Garrison, 1,000 strong. Second. An efficient obstacle (either abatis or inclined palisading) to be placed in front of the whole line as above modified, under close musketry fire, the obstacle being made doubly secure on the slopes of the levee where it crosses. Third. The gateways to be arranged so as to receive bulkheads when during freshets the water threatens to enter. No ammunition to be stored between the levee and the river. Fourth. Details of officers and men to be furnished by the officer commanding the post, and necessary facilities in the control of the quartermaster's department on requisitions by the officer in charge of the engineering operations.

Respectfully submitted.

M. D. McALESTER,
Captain of Engineers and Chief Engineer.

Fort Williams, Baton Rouge—Memorandum of proposed modifications.

OFFICE OF CHIEF ENGINEER,
MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, January 16, 1865.

The Major-General Commanding:

First. The fort to be put into a thorough condition of repair (including its magazines) and strengthened by stockades extending from the extremities of the line down to the water's edge, by ample traverses for the protection of its armament, by strong barriers at the gateways, and by an inclined palisading along the whole extent of the ditch, placed beyond the ditch under efficient musketry fire. The armament to remain as at present, viz, two 32-pounder pintle guns, eleven 24-pounder siege guns, four 8-inch siege howitzers, three field batteries. Garrison, 800 or 1,000 strong, designed to hold the fort against surprise and till the arrival of re-enforcements. Second. The epaulement in front of gateway (south face) to be demolished. Third. Details of officers and men to be furnished by the commander of the post, and facilities in the hands of the quartermaster's department upon requisitions of the officer in charge of the engineering operations.

Respectfully submitted.

M. D. McALESTER,
Captain of Engineers and Chief Engineer.
Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following statement of the information received at this office this 16th day of January, 1865: A report from Lieut. John M. Reeds, Alexandria, Mo., December 24, 1864, indicates that section of the country very quiet. A report from the same source of December 30, 1864, states that several bands of robbers and thieves are committing depredations. These bands are supposed to belong to the Enrolled Militia of the State, and it is thought the parties will soon be brought to justice. A report from Capt. Frederick H. Man, Morganza, La., January 12, 1865, states that the Second, Fourth, Seventh, and Eighth Louisiana Cavalry (rebel), forming a brigade about 1,500 to 2,000 strong, armed with Enfield rifles, commanded by Brig. Gen. Joseph Brent, are stationed near Opelousas picketing the Atchafalya from Red River down, together with two batteries (about twelve guns) at Cheneyville, on Bayou Bœuf.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

---

Special Orders, No. 16.
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 16, 1865.

7. The Twenty-fourth Indiana Volunteers is relieved from duty in the Defenses of New Orleans, and will without delay proceed to Kenner, La., and will be reported to Maj. Gen. F. Steele, commanding U.S. forces at that place. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:
C. S. SARGENT,

---

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 16, 1865.

Col. W. SAYLES,
Commanding Post, Napoleonville, La.:

SIR: You will send one company, under command of a competent officer, at such time on the morning of the 18th instant as will enable them to reach the plantation of Pierre Herbert, on Bayou Pierre Pass, some time in the evening, not before 8 o'clock. You will instruct the commanding officer to capture one Victorine Trahan and one other Confederate soldier supposed to be harbored there while on furlough, and if these men are found on his premises he will arrest Pierre Herbert. Returning he will come this side of Grand Bayou before going into camp for the night, returning to camp next day. He will be careful not to permit his men to straggle or pillage from any plantation or premises. Privates Oscar Cland and Simon Trahan, First Louisiana Cavalry, Company K, will report to you to-morrow to act as guides for the expedition.

By command of Brig. Gen. R. A. Cameron:

J. MORRIS HAFF,
First Lieutenant, Sixtieth Indiana Volunteers, and Aide-de-Camp.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 16, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas:

I inclose for your information a copy of a communication I have to-day sent to the headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi.* I shall rely on you to push as large a force, with great ostentation as you can, from Pine Bluff toward Camden as far as the Saline. I would like to have the enemy convinced, if possible, that you have a bona fide intention of attacking Camden so as to draw force from Monticello. I hope you will demonstrate strongly for five days after the 25th, and then return home as fast as you please. By that time I hope to have my force out of the way and after Harrison. I would be glad to get your views.

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Deval's Bluff, Ark., January 16, 1865—6 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. R. WEST, Little Rock:

I send herewith Colonel Geiger's dispatch, just received.† Colonel Geiger's aide came down on the boat, and will wait here for any orders you desire to send to Colonel Geiger. I will hold the boat in readiness to return unless you send contrary instructions.

ALEXANDER SHALER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

LITTLE ROCK, January 16, 1865—7 p. m.

General A. SHALER:

Please ask Colonel Geiger's aide whether my dispatch of yesterday had reached Augusta before he left there. It will be well to keep one boat ready, but I shall have nothing more to send until Colonel Geiger replies to my dispatch of yesterday.

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Deval's Bluff, Ark., January 16, 1865—8 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. R. WEST,
Little Rock, Ark.:

Colonel Geiger's aide is not present at the moment. Colonel Geiger's dispatch was handed me by the officer who carried your dispatch to

* See Dana to Christensen, January 16, p. 544.
† Not found.
him. Your dispatch was handed to Colonel Geiger about 7 o'clock this morning. His dispatch to you left Augusta at 11 o'clock this morning.

ALEX. SHALER,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

---

DARDANELLE, January 16, 1865—12 m.

Brig. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Little Rock:

Our loss not so heavy as first reported; 1 killed of the Third Wisconsin Regiment, 15 wounded, and 2 missing. Bodies of fifteen rebels were discovered this a.m.; eighteen wounded are in one house four miles from here. Their loss is supposed to be from sixty to eighty. Everything is working well. By night we will be ready to receive as many rebels as are desirous of visiting us. Rebels were reported camped last night nine miles from here. Have scout to ascertain their movements. They say they are expecting re-enforcements, when they will renew the attack. Will send down the wounded on first steamer. I will retain the steamer Alamo here to bring supplies from Lewisburg; also for ferrying purposes. Last heard from fleet they were at the mouth of the Mulberry, safe.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,

January 16, 1865—3 p. m.

Col. A. H. Ryan,
Lewisburg:

Have you any news from Dardanelle?

By order of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

LEWISBURG, January 16, 1865.

Maj. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Little Rock:

All is quiet at Dardanelle. I have just received a report that the rebels are re-enforced by Gordon's and Morgan's regiments, and are to renew the attack. I have notified Colonel Ryan, at Dardanelle.

I. W. FULLER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

---

PINE BLUFF, ARK., January 16, 1865.

Maj. John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

A scout sent down the river forty miles captured six prisoners with their horses and equipments. Among them was a rebel major and two other commissioned officers. The officer commanding the scout reports a force of about 200 rebels on the Arkansas River at Red Fork.

POWELL CLAYTON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
Major-General Herron:

General: I cannot suppose that you are still engaged in the mission on which I had recently occasion to meet you, and it would be hardly fair to tax you with its cares and disagreeables. It occurred to me, however, that you still might have some interest in the development of affairs in this section, and to-night, having a brief breathing space, I take the liberty of giving you a sketch of them. The order to proceed to Washington I did not receive, but late one night I was summoned to General Thayer's headquarters and received orders to resume command of the Indian Brigade. They were reticent, and I sought to know no more than they thought proper to communicate. I could scarcely get an escort here, but assumed command on the 29th ultimo. I would have preferred to meet and expose the powerful organization that I fear is not dead yet. I was willing to stake my reputation on the struggle, but God knows best. The orders to evacuate Fort Smith were issued and countermanded. I think the latter an error that time will prove. The orders to close the stores in Smith caused a remarkable sale. Goods were sold off in immense quantities to all persons from the 20th to the 31st of December, 1864. It has been stated to me by one of the parties that $2,000 on each merchant was levied by some one for that twelve days' grace. Orders were sent here in advance of me stating that the order to expel does not apply to Fort Gibson at the present. I am issuing regulations for the line between this and Kansas, prohibiting any save a small number, two teams to each legitimate trader here, with each train. I also issue regulations to keep it in its proper limits, which I find it has greatly transcended. General Orders, No. 7, was revoked, and I was directed to make needful rules to protect the rights of the Indians. This I shall do, but with the organizations above and below me it will be extremely difficult, and my limited authority and means will place me to a large extent at the mercy of those who are in league with the plunderers. Captain Vit tum was named by General Blunt provost-marshal of Southern Kansas. Only think of one of the most noted cattle thieves being police officer on the border. Blair is still at Fort Scott, and says he is not going from it. I have plenty in my hands, but think I ought to prefer charges and push the matter against both of them and others. Here I found matters in a frightful state. I had no idea that demoralization could have reached such a pitch in such a short time. I have the report and affidavit of an acting detective here, which is full of frightful revelations implicating Colonel Wattles, the provost-marshal, quartermaster, and commissary. It seems they were regularly in the habit of throwing persons in a wretched prison and blackmailing them, the money being divided between Wattles, the provost-marshal, and the detective. Other articles were taken and divided. I placed the provost-marshal in arrest. He is a young man, and refuses to admit, but does the same thing. He begs that I will not proceed against him, and promises to refund his share of the money to the persons mulcted. Wattles I have not yet placed under arrest. I scarcely know what to do with him. I understand that my command will be defined as a separate command in orders, and I hope so, but I have no colonel and he might raise the question of rank. I hardly feel like permitting him to resign. What should I do? My commissary carried on a frightful system. I find a wholesale forging of vouchers. I have sent for Captain Peck to inspect and examine. Captain Gaylord left for Fort Smith before I began the inspection of his establishment. When he returns I will have to place him in arrest. The quartermaster's affairs I have not inspected sufficiently yet to speak fully, but he must be removed. Some of the officers here have been leading a life of idleness, and go to work with a very bad grace, and the worthless soreheads caucus in McDonald's and McKee's store for my removal. During the pendency of the contract nearly all the cattle killed, or a large proportion of them, were contraband. I have reported the data through Captain Peck to General Eaton. I find that the corn bought at Fort Scott by Insley has been (part of it) shipped down here and put in the warehouse of McDonald here to be issued on another contract, part of it hauled in Government transportation. I got the affidavits of the wagon-master and teamsters. I find that there has been a gigantic swindle by Coffin and McDonald in corn in the nation. I furnished seed corn to the Cherokees last spring, taken on South Canadian and Boggy. They raised nearly enough to do them. As the Creek refugees around Gibson were suffering, the President authorized the expenditure of $200,000. What do you think the rascals did! Coffin telegraphed that McDonald & Co. could furnish corn at $7 and beef at 6 cents, or 3, gross. He was allowed to take a temporary supply. He sends agents all through the Cherokee country buying at $2 and $2.50. If a man had 100 bushels they buy it all and issue half of it to him, and give one of his neighbors an order for fifty of it to go and get it. It is paid for in McDonald's and McKee's checks, thirty days after date; 9,000 bushels were thus bought. Sometimes when there was no corn they give checks for the corn and checks for what they pretend to buy. The contractor was killing contraband beef, forbidding them to kill their own cattle, and buying a few of these, about a tenth of what the contractors killed, at 2 cents. I have stopped all these irregular beef practices. It has been a perfect pandemonium broke loose. God knows when they would have stopped. I shall straighten it all up as far as I have the power. My task is a thankless one, except the conviction of doing my duty. I am exposed to the hatred of a powerful money corporation, and I doubt whether the Government will stand by me, but the thing of all others that I cannot afford is that any one should think I was unable to meet or afraid of any responsibilities. I should be pleased to hear from you. Accept my profound esteem and regard.

Very respectfully, yours,

WM. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel Third Indian Home Guard (Kansas Infantry).

FORT GIBSON, C. N., January 16, 1865.

Lieut. WILLIAM GALLAHER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Indian Brigade:

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to make the following statement in regard to the number of cattle slaughtered for the use of the troops under my command, ordered to meet and escort supply train en route from Fort Scott, Kans., to Fort Gibson, C. N.: January 3, slaughtered at Flat Rock Creek two beeves, weighing perhaps 300 pounds each net, no brands; January 4, at Pryor's Creek, slaughtered one beef weighing 400 pounds net, no brand; January 11, at Cabin Creek, slaughtered four beeses weighing 300 pounds net each, no brands; January 13, slaughtered at Flat Rock Creek two beeves weighing 300 pounds each net, no brands. A number of small hogs were killed, perhaps fifteen or twenty in number. It will, I suppose, be proper to state the number of enlisted men in my command. I left Gibson on the 2d instant with 256 enlisted men of the First Indian Home Guard; eight enlisted men of the Third Indian Home Guard. January 8, met detachment Second Indian [Home Guard], commanded by Lieutenant Waterhouse, numbering ninety-seven enlisted men. January 9, was re-enforced by Lieutenant Hanway with twelve men, Third Indian Home Guard. January 12, re-enforced by Captain Price with twenty men, Second Indian Home Guard. I think I can safely say that there was not near the amount of meat killed and consumed that the command would have been entitled to if drawn on requisition.

I have the honor to be, lieutenant, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. PHILLIPS,
Major First Indian Home Guard, Comdg. Train and Escort.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 16, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Hdqrs. Mil. Div. of West Miss.,
New Orleans, La.:

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report touching the organization of a cavalry expedition for the purpose of fulfilling the object ordered by your cipher dispatch of 21st, ultimo. The cavalry which composed the expedition against the Mobile and Ohio Railroad has not yet all returned. Transports in sufficient quantity cannot be procured, owing to the number furnished to carry the two brigades and batteries of the Reserve Corps from Memphis to New Orleans, and Generals Grierson's and Winslow's cavalry to Louisville, with the detention of others ordered from above the mouth of the Ohio by ice. Some of my regiments suffered greatly in loss of horses in the attack on the stockade at Egypt, particularly the Second New Jersey Cavalry. General Davidson asks for a large regiment, and the Second New Jersey is the largest I have, and will have an opportunity to recruit and replenish its horses at Natchez. The Fifth Illinois Cavalry is divided, six companies at Vicksburg and six companies at Natchez. Their horses have been resting since my expedition against the Mississippi Central Railroad. These considerations have caused me to send the Second New Jersey to Natchez, and to order the Fifth Illinois, the Eleventh New York, and the Twelfth Illinois all to rendezvous at Memphis immediately. This will enable me to select a body of about 3,000 effectives. The enemy has about that number near Monroe and Oak Ridge, under Harrison. The streams in the district in which I shall operate are full and overflowing, and I conclude not to allow a wheel to accompany the expedition, and we must cross our arms and ammunition over bad places by temporary rafts, whilst we swim the horses. The expedition, after starting, will last three weeks, and from the scarcity of supplies and bad condition of the country I anticipate a considerable expenditure of horse flesh. We can readily drive Harrison beyond the Washita, but to prevent him from returning it is necessary to destroy all forage and supplies in the district on which he can subsist this season. I propose to do this, and, if possible, head him off, bring him to action, and punish him so badly as to disperse his regiments. There is a pile of Confederate Government cotton at Gum Ridge, said to amount to 3,000 bales. I believe this should be burned, and shall so order; but, being in doubt, I should like, if possible, to be prohibited in time if it is not desirable. My plan of action, so far as I can now decide upon it, is as follows, the details will of course be varied by circumstances arising at the time: I shall prepare the cavalry here to move against Forrest in concert with General Wilson. I will ask General Reynolds to send against Camden, from Pine Bluff, as large a force of infantry, cavalry, and artillery as he can spare, with necessary means to cross the Saline River; this force to leave the Bluff on the 25th, and proceed by slow marches, continuing the feint on Camden for five days, after which it may return. I will embark 3,000 cavalry from Fort Pickering on the night of the 25th and land them at Gaines' Landing on the morning of the 27th. One brigade proceeding down the river would cross the Macon and Bœuf and burn the 3,000 bales of Confederate cotton which are reported to be guarded by Armstrong's men at Gum Ridge; thence to Hamburg, where the main column, having crossed the Bartholomew and driven out or captured the force at Monticello, would join. After this the march must be decided by the course Harrison will take. I will send a copy of this letter to Major-General Reynolds in order that he may be fully advised of my intentions.

* See Vol. LXI, Part IV, p. 901.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ST. J. T. DANA, Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE,
Memphis, Tenn., January 16, 1865.

Col. JAMES N. McARTHUR,
Commanding Post of Columbus, Ky.:

COLONEL: The copy of official letter* from E. D. Townsend, assistant adjutant-general, War Department, of January 3, 1865, to Brigadier-General Meredith, commanding at Paducah, &c., forwarded by you, is received; also copy of a letter of January 13, and telegram of January 14, from General Meredith to you. I have only to repeat my previous instructions and to say that you cannot obey the order of General Meredith. The last sentence in the official letter of the assistant adjutant-general, War Department, above referred to, declares all the troops east of the Mississippi River up to the mouth of the Ohio are subject to the orders of Major-General Canby, commanding Military Division of West Mississippi. These papers have been all forwarded to Major-General Canby, through superior headquarters, and definite action will doubtless be taken in a few days, of which you will be promptly notified, and which will probably result in attaching other posts besides Columbus to General Dana's command. In the meantime, to avoid any embarrassing questions, I shall not give you any further special instructions, but require you to obey and carry out those already given.

Very respectfully,

JAMES C. VEATCH,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

*See Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 503.
Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 16, 1865.

Honorabla Abraham Lincoln,
President of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of the 15th instant. Since I assumed command here the troubles in North Missouri have increased, from the fact that the troops that were in those counties infested by guerrilla bands were nearly all withdrawn by me to send to General Thomas, but there is no doubt that this country is now more quiet than it has been before for three years. Where these troubles exist the people are to a great extent disloyal, and it is the protection, aid, and sympathy that they give to the enemy and to outlaws that causes these troubles. One class (the disloyal) desires all troops withdrawn, while the other (the loyal men) petition to have more sent. The fact is that unless troops are kept in the Missouri River counties no loyal people can live there. I have consulted with Governor Fletcher in relation to this matter, and so far as possible we have endeavored to quiet these troubles. Three thousand men left these counties and joined Price last fall. Many of them are now sneaking back and going into the bush to operate. The people who are leaving are mostly those whose friends are in the rebel army, or whose sympathies are with the rebels, and those who expect to be disfranchised, and who have but very little, if any, sympathy with our Government. They do not leave on account of depredations committed upon them by the troops, but through fear of action of the State convention. I believe most of the loyal men, and those who have determined to become loyal, are determined to stay. Those of them that do go flee from guerrillas, which no order or proclamation would reach. The bushwhackers can only be put down and kept down by holding the citizens who aid, feed, and harbor them responsible. Loyal local organizations I consider the best troops to keep these outlaws under, and I had settled in my own mind upon the policy to pursue, viz: As soon as the State legislature passes the new militia bill, to raise under it 100 men from each of these disloyal counties, place them under competent and reliable officers, citizens of the State who have seen service. Let the Government arm, equip, and feed them, and the counties pay them. Place one of these companies on duty in each of the disloyal counties where these troubles exist; withdraw therefrom the U. S. volunteers, and call upon the citizens to support and aid these organizations. To a great extent they will cheerfully do it. Those who will not, and who persist in giving aid to bushwhackers, to be sent out of the department. I have issued stringent orders to all the troops in regard to committing depredations and acts through personal enmity, and good effects are hereby being produced. I hear of but very few depredations by troops recently, but bushwhackers are robbing and murdering in many places. During the winter it is to the interest of these outlaws and their friends to keep our troops away. As soon as spring comes they expect to obtain reinforcements from the South, and even from the loyal States, where many have gone to winter, and who, when the leaves come, will all return. What troops I have are kept very active, and they are doing good work in the way of breaking up guerrillas and marauding bands. The troops in North Missouri are nearly all Missouri State Militia, whose term of service is fast expiring. Their discipline has been very lax, and on account of the defective nature of that organization, they have not been efficient. I have taken measures to hold the officers responsible for the discipline and acts of these troops. I do believe that the system of local organization that I intend to inaugurate will prove effective for the special reason that we will have the selection of the officers, and most of them will be old, tried, and experienced soldiers, fully imbued with the right sentiment, and feeling a personal interest in restoring law and order. Allow me to assure you that the course you propose would be protested against by the State authorities, the legislature, the convention, and by nearly every loyal man in North Missouri, while it would receive the sanction of nearly every disloyal, semi-loyal, and non-committal person there. All such could, under that course, live, and would want to stay, in that country, while every loyal man would have to leave those counties where the disloyal sentiment is in the ascendency. I take it that the only sure road to peace in this State is through the aid and support of its undoubtedly loyal population, and with the organization I speak of I am satisfied I can restore and maintain quiet in North Missouri. It is my wish and earnest endeavor to have every person in the State and elsewhere to come up firmly to the support of the Government, no matter what their antecedents are, and I have in my orders and instructions to my troops commanded them to give all encouragement, aid, and protection in their power to any and every person who shows an honest and earnest desire and intention to support the Government and assist in putting down guerrilla warfare. I herewith inclose my Order, No. 7,* which embodies some of the views in your dispatch, and which will receive the cordial indorsement and cheerful support of every person in the State who is not aiding and abetting bushwhackers, or who are so disloyal that they would not agree to or approve of anything issued by a Federal officer.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,

Major-General.

JEFFERSON CITY, January 16, 1865—6.40 p.m.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:

I have heard of some Union men being killed in North Missouri and of some rebels moving away. No Union man wants the troops withdrawn from here. The Union men will return and be organized under new military law and can then defend themselves. I will consent to no bargains with rebels. All we want is discipline in the troops we have and those to be organized. I do not believe the policy mentioned by you would have any good effect, and think it has been suggested by the same men who have been compromising with the enemy since the war began. I had hoped the President would not listen to their counsels again.

THOS. C. FLETCHER,
Governor of Missouri.

OLIVE STREET HOTEL, Saint Louis, January 16, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:

Sir: Upon consulting with various friends of the Government from different parts of the State, whom we met at the capital and elsewhere, we beg leave to present to you our views in reference to ridding

* See January 8, p 458.
the State of bushwhackers and rebels. They live and do their work of blood and plunder mostly in the river counties, where they must get encouragement from the people. The condition of such of the Union men in Platte, Clay, Ray, Carroll, Chariton, Howard, Boone, Randolph, Callaway, La Fayette, Jackson, Saline, and other counties as supported Mr. Lincoln for President, and who have been active, outspoken friends of the Government, is such that they and their property are in constant danger of assassination and pillage, and as a consequence nearly all such have either left for places of security or design leaving without greater security is afforded them at their homes. Many of them have gone to the military posts in their several counties and must suffer greatly in their pecuniary affairs. Believing in the justice of the remarks of Governor Fletcher that “if there be but one loyal man in any county in this State he shall stand up at his county seat and defy Jeff. Davis and all his followers,” we invoke your authority and consent to the following plan:

Let the committee of safety in such counties as are referred to, and others if necessary, in connection with the military commander in each county, select, say, ten or fifteen prominent and wealthy sympathizers in each township and notify them by general order that they and their property will be held responsible for the safety of the persons and property of all the loyal men of their townships. Such men heretofore have been able to keep the bushwhackers from killing and robbing them, and if they are able to do that much they are able to preserve loyal men, and they should do it or take the consequences. Such an order will have the effect either to give security to loyal men or else disloyal men, so held responsible, will leave the State, and in either case good will be accomplished. The State will be far the gainer by the removal of such men from it. One of the troubles in our State has been that orders good enough have been issued, but not executed. Issue such an order as we ask for, and execute it promptly when necessary, and our opinions are that peace will come of it. We might elaborate this subject, but refrain from doing so.

Giving you assurances of our hearty co-operation in any measures you may take looking to the peace of the State, the security of the loyal people, and the putting down of this rebellion, we subscribe ourselves, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

EDWARD M. SAMUEL, of Clay County.
W. A. WILSON, of Saline County.
DAVID WAGNER, of Lewis County.
[AND TWENTY-EIGHT OTHERS.]

Pilot Knob, January 16, 1865.

Major HANNAHs,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Troops have gone on 2 p. m. train to relieve Seventh Kansas Cavalry at De Soto and bridges. Sixty dismounted men have been sent to Centerville, and Company F, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, over eighty strong, to Patterson to strengthen those outposts.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,

Colonel, Commanding.
Chap. LX.] CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.—UNION. 549

SPECIAL ORDERS,} HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
No. 12.} Rolla, Mo., January 16, 1865.

First Lieut. W. D. Hubbard, adjutant Thirteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, is hereby detailed as acting assistant adjutant-general at these headquarters and will report for duty forthwith.

By order of Brig. Gen. E. B. Brown:

[J. H. STEGER,]
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., January 16, 1865—120 p.m.

Col. D. P. Dyer, Warrenton, Mo., or Mexico, Mo.:
I go up to Jefferson City to-day.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,} HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
No. 11.} Macon, Mo., January 16, 1865.

I. Col. E. Smart, commanding Sub-District of Boone, will immediately relieve the two companies of Twenty-seventh Enrolled Missouri Militia from guard duty on the line of the North Missouri Railroad by a detail from the Forty-ninth Infantry Missouri Volunteers.

II. Upon being relieved from guard duty by the Forty-ninth Infantry the two companies of Twenty-seventh Enrolled Missouri Militia, Col. A. Krekel, guarding bridges on North Missouri Railroad, will be released from active service.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,

LEAVENWORTH, January 16, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT, Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Kansas:

Sir: I desire to call your attention to the necessity of further protection to the mail service on the Santa Fé mail route. From Fort Larned to Fort Lyon there is a distance of 200 miles running along the Arkansas River in one of the most dangerous districts for attack of hostile Indians, and over which the mail cannot be transported without military escort. The mails are now transported once in two weeks. The contract calls for service once each week, and the department is anxious to increase the service to twice each week. The proprietors of the mail service say that if a small fort was built at what is called the Cimarron crossing of the Arkansas, the entire route would be comparatively safe from Indian depredations. This crossing is equidistant from Fort Larned and Fort Lyon, on the Arkansas River, and the proprietors of the route say that fifty men would be ample for all purposes of safety to the service. Mr. Sanderson, one of the proprietors, tells me that the War Department say they will approve of the holding of this fort if General Curtis orders it, and that the orders come properly within the general's province as commander of the department. This company carries the mail to all the forts of the plains, and the importance of a safe transit will be readily appreciated by you. The order establishing this fort or post fills the only gap of that distance on the entire route.

Respectfully, &c.,

GEO. A. REYNOLDS.
(In behalf of the proprietors Santa Fe Mail Company.)

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., January 16, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Assist. Adj. Gen., Department of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth:

Sir: I have the honor to report my return from an official tour of my district as far west as Fort Larned. I would respectfully request permission to visit Leavenworth to explain to the general commanding the wants of the district, which can be done better and more thoroughly in this manner than by letter.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD, Colonel, Commanding District.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., January 16, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of communications from the major-general commanding, dated, respectively, January 10 and 12, and in reply would state that I have just returned from an official tour of my district as far as Fort Larned. The instructions contained in the letter of the 10th instant have already been anticipated by my instructions to the various post commanders throughout my district. In reply to your communication of the 12th instant I would state that troops are under orders to march to relieve those at Fort Zarah. They leave on the 17th instant. Some delay may be occasioned in the movements of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry after they are relieved for the want of sufficient transportation to move them out of the district, as there is not sufficient transportation in the district to keep the posts properly supplied, although repeated estimates and requests have been forwarded to the chief quartermaster at Fort Leavenworth, both by the commander of the district and the chief quartermaster. I would respectfully state that there are many matters of importance to be attended to and to communicate to the general commanding that can be better explained by a personal interview than by letter. I would therefore respectfully ask for permission to visit department headquarters for this purpose.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. FORD, Colonel. Commanding District.

6. Capt. William H. Greene, Second Colorado Cavalry, will immediately proceed with his battalion of Second Colorado Cavalry to Fort Zarah, Kans., relieving the detachment of unassigned recruits Third Wisconsin Cavalry now at that post. The battalion under the command of Capt. W. H. Greene will take all their camp and garrison equipage and ten days' rations.

By order of Col. James H. Ford:

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

VALLEY STATION, January 16, 1865.

Colonel MOONLIGHT:

A large body of Indians are plainly to be seen on the north side of river moving south or down river; 300 or 400 camped some twelve miles south of us last night. Their object is cleaning out of the ranches below. Some five white men were with them Sunday. Half of my command are out after wood and I have not force to pursue.

J. J. KENNEDY,
Lieutenant, First Colorado Cavalry.

TUBAC, ARIZ. TER., January 16, 1865.

Capt. B. C. CUTLER,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of New Mexico, Santa Fé, N. Mex.:

Sir: I have the honor to inform you that I have reason to believe that a large body of hostile Apache Indians are living somewhere between old Fort Buchanan and the San Pedro River near the Sonora line. Colonel Davidson, Indian agent, offers me the assistance of 80 or 100 Papago Indians if I will endeavor to find and attack them (I enclose copy of Colonel Davidson's letter to me on that subject), but it will be necessary for the Government to furnish subsistence and ammunition. I have the honor to request permission from the general commanding to issue subsistence and ammunition to these Indians for the time it may be necessary to employ them. I have also to inform you that the express from this post to Fort Bowie (two men of my company) was attacked on the 4th instant, five miles north of Whetstone Springs, by about thirty Apaches. They succeeded in capturing the two horses and the mail (one of the horses was afterward shot by the soldiers). The two men, by showing a brave front, kept the savages off and escaped to San Pedro Crossing unhurt, but with a number of shots through hats and clothing. Also, that on the 12th instant a party of Apaches attacked a wagon belonging to the Santa Rita mine about one mile from this post, killing 1 man and wounding 1 slightly. They captured nothing. I immediately sent a party in pursuit, but they failed to overtake them. The general commanding will see that it is necessary to give these Indians a prompt and severe punishment. I will, with his approval, take all the men that can be spared from the post and with the assistance of the Papago Indians try to find their rancherias, and will endeavor to make the result satisfactory to the general commanding.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN L. MERRIAM,
Captain, First California Cavalry, Commanding Post.

P. S.—I have also to request permission to have two good Indian guides, if I may find it necessary at any time, for this post.

JOHN L. MERRIAM,
Captain, First California Cavalry, Commanding Post.
Capt. John L. Merriam,
First California Cav., Comdg., Tubac, Ariz. Ter.:

Sir: I beg to inform you that at a council held yesterday with the chief and headman of the Papagos at San Xavier del Bac, it was agreed that the Papagos will, within six weeks' time, have ready from 80 to 100 warriors for a campaign against the hostile Apaches, to last from six to eight weeks. To carry out the determination of the council, couriers will be sent to their pueblos, requiring each to furnish its quota, the whole to be under the command of Jose, who has been nominated chief captain of all the Papagos. They are to act in concert with and under the direction of the military authorities. For their services they will be compensated from the goods of the Indian Department, but it will be expected that while actually employed rations of corn will be furnished from the quartermaster's stores. If possible they should be furnished with twenty-five fire-arms and suitable ammunition. They have some thirty serviceable guns of their own and will be provided by me with powder, caps, and lead for them. They will also be armed with bows and arrows and lances. If this movement of the Papagos is made in concert with U. S. troops, they will rendezvous at Tubac at any appointed day after the middle of February, and Captain Jose will report to you. I have in my employ some twenty-six tame Apaches, desperate enemies of the wild ones. This band volunteers to furnish ten good warriors to act and strike with the Papagos.

Hoping that the proposed movement will meet with your approval and co-operation, and that an efficient blow may be struck against the savages whose rancherias are not far distant, I remain, yours, respectfully,

M. Q. Davidson, Special Indian Agent.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 17, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck,
Chief of Staff of the Army, Washington, D. C.:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of copy of your telegram dated the 3d instant, directing Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds, commanding Department of Arkansas, to reoccupy Fort Smith, and other posts in its vicinity. I inclose herewith copy of my letter to General Reynolds relating to this subject.*

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

Ed. R. S. Canby,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 17, 1865.

Adjutant-General of the Army,
Washington, D. C.:

Sir: I have received from the commanding general Department of Mississippi a copy of your telegram to him of the 1st instant, stating that Cairo is in the Northern Department, and that General Canby's command extends to the mouth of Ohio River. General Orders, No. 49, War Department, series of 1864, place Cairo, Ill., in the Department of the Tennessee. No order has yet been received attaching it to the Northern Department, hence it was understood to be transferred to this division when the posts east of the Mississippi were so transferred. Cairo is the point of concentration for troops coming into this command and of distribution for those going out, and it seems necessary that I should exercise some supervision over it.

* See p. 559.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 17, 1865.

Admiral Lee,
Commanding Mississippi Squadron, Mound City, Ill.:

ADMIRAL: The concentration of rebel troops on Red River appears not to be for the purpose I anticipated, and I see no present objection to vessels going up that river for the purpose of procuring cotton. I propose to approve safe-conducts for that purpose, and advise their approval by you. I will immediately notify you of any change.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

P. S.—In order to save time and expenses to parties holding permits, I think it will not be improper to delegate to the commander of the naval district at the mouth of Red River to approve the safe-conducts that have been approved by me. In the case of my own absence I will delegate this authority to the commander of this department, who will be advised of any reasons for withholding the approval.

E. R. S. C.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 17, 1865.

Capt. J. J. CORNWELL, U. S. Navy,
Commanding District, Mississippi Squadron,
U. S. steamer Choctaw, off Donaldsonville, La.:

CAPTAIN: There are a number of plantations on or in the immediate neighborhood of the Mississippi River which are cultivated by freed labor, under the orders of the commander of the Department of the Gulf, who have heretofore been permitted to ship their products and receive their supplies under article 38 of the Treasury Regulations of July 29, 1864. Their cases are covered by military orders, and I supposed by Admiral Lee's Order, No. 9, of November 10, 1864. I learn to-day that there is difficulty about landing supplies or shipping products at points on the river above Donaldsonville. Will you do me the favor to examine into this matter and permit products to be shipped and plantation supplies to be landed when the permits are given or approved by the provost-marshal-general of the Department of the Gulf?

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.
Mississippi River, Arkansas, and Gulf coast—Estimate of garrisons of existing fortifications.

Office of Chief Engineer, Military Division of West Mississippi, New Orleans, January 17, 1865.

Major-General Commanding:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Garrison</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Columbus, two small forts; total garrison about</td>
<td>1,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>New Madrid, Fort Thompson, garrison</td>
<td>2,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>rifle-trench surrounding landing</td>
<td>1,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Memphis, Fort Pickering, as now being reduced</td>
<td>7,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Pickering, old line</td>
<td>6,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Helena</td>
<td>16,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vicksburg, Fort Grant</td>
<td>6,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Natchez, Fort McPherson, interior work</td>
<td>1,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morganza, Fort</td>
<td>1,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Port Hudson</td>
<td>5,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baton Rouge, Fort Williams</td>
<td>3,000</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

La Fourche District:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Garrison</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Plaquemine</td>
<td>500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reserve posted on La Fourche Bayou, say</td>
<td>5,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Donaldsonville</td>
<td>300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brashear City (2,000 yards)</td>
<td>400</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Banks</td>
<td>8,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Camp Parapet</td>
<td>3,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brazos Santiago (1,500 yards)</td>
<td>7,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Little Rock (3,500 yards)</td>
<td>1,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>north side of river (750 yards)</td>
<td>8,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pine Bluff (4,400 yards)</td>
<td>8,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Devall's Bluff</td>
<td>5,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Smith (5,280 yards)</td>
<td>10,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort No. 4</td>
<td>400</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort No. 2</td>
<td>300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Gaines</td>
<td>1,200</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

District of Key West:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Garrison</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Fort Taylor (150 guns)</td>
<td>4,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lower batteries and reserve force on island of Key West</td>
<td>1,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Jefferson (about 250 guns)</td>
<td>7,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Morgan</td>
<td>2,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barrancas line</td>
<td>6,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Pickens</td>
<td>3,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort at Ship Island</td>
<td>700</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Livingston, Barataria Bay (18 guns)</td>
<td>540</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Jackson</td>
<td>2,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tower Dupré, Lake Borgue (8 guns)</td>
<td>180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Saint Philip</td>
<td>1,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Battery Bienvenue, Lake Borgue, no garrison (8 guns)</td>
<td>240</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Pike</td>
<td>1,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fort Macomb</td>
<td>900</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Note.—For permanent works the estimate is based upon the existing armaments, at the rate of three relief of cannoniers per gun, except Ship Island, for which case the proposed armament is taken.

Respectfully submitted.

M. D. McALESTER,
Captain of Engineers and Chief Engineer.
Fortification at Port Hudson—Memorandum of proposed modifications.

OFFICE OF CHIEF ENGINEER,
MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, January 17, 1865.

MAJOR-GENERAL COMMANDING:

First. A continuous line of strong profile (parapet ten to twelve feet thick) having a development of about 600 yards, to be constructed within the existing line, and be so located that its two extremities shall be at the crest of the bluff and include between them the head of a good ramp or roadway leading down to a good landing. If the nature of the problem will admit of it, a portion of the existing line to be utilized as part of the new line. A line of stockade to connect each of the extremities of the new line of parapet with the water's edge over such portions of the slope of the bluff and bank as are not too steep to be accessible. The upper extremities of the stockade lines to be thrown a few feet to the rear of the parapet in order to admit of their being flanked from the crest of the bluff and within the parapet. Such flanks as are necessary in the new line not to exceed twelve yards in length. The armament of the new line to be (now on the spot) one 8-inch columbiad, two 8-inch sea-coast howitzers, five 42-pounder guns, one 32-pounder gun, eight 24-pounder guns, one 20-pounder Parrott rifle, four 24-pounder howitzers (iron), six 12-pounder howitzers (field), two light 12-pounders. To be provided: One 8-inch siege mortar, three Coehorn mortars; to be well protected by embrasures, merlons, and traverses; garrison to be about 1,000 strong. Second. As soon as the new line attains a defensible condition that portion of the existing line exterior to it to be thoroughly demolished. Third. The entire new line to be surrounded by an efficient obstacle placed beyond the ditch under close musketry fire from the parapet in rear. Fourth. Details of officers and men to be furnished by the officer commanding the post, and the necessary facilities under control of the quartermaster's department upon requisitions by the officer in charge of construction.

Respectfully submitted.

M. D. McALESTER,
Captain of Engineers and Chief Engineer.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., January 17, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit for your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 17th day of January, 1865: A report from Lieut. G. G. Curtiss, Baton Rouge, January 12, 1865, states that since his last report he has examined six prisoners of war, four deserters and refugees. Among the deserters is E. A. Peyton, late lieutenant-colonel Third Mississippi Cavalry (rebel) who reports that a deserter from a U. S. gun-boat (Chadwick by name) is at liberty, and commands a section of artillery. Among the prisoners of war is Philip Stephens, doubtless a Jayhawker, who represents himself a private, but whose papers show him to be a first lieutenant in Barrow's (rebel) regiment. He also states that his last report in relation to forces in rear of Baton Rouge is confirmed. A telegram from the same source received at 4.30 this p. m. states that a deserter from Brandon, Miss., gives information of the supersedeure of Hood by General Joe Johnston in command of the Army of Tennessee, and also states that the bulk of the army was at Corinth, Miss.; also that the Georgia Central Railroad has been repaired and is in running order to Richmond, Va.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,

Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

New Orleans, January 17, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel CHRISTENSEN:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that a party sent by me to Mandeville under command of Captain Powell, Eleventh Wisconsin Infantry, on schooner Cazador, returned this morning with three prisoners of war, officers, and two citizens, and a very large mail for New Orleans, and all the records of provost-marshal and conscription officers. I have directed the prisoners turned over to Lieut. Col. W. H. Wood, and as soon as the captured papers can be examined I will report further. Credit is due Captain Powell for the neat and quiet capture made by him.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,

Major-General, Commanding.

List of prisoners: W. E. Ligon, captain on General Maury's staff; Winslow Robinson, first lieutenant, commanding Lake Shore District, provost-marshal; George W. White, brevet second lieutenant, Second Louisiana Cavalry; John G. Bethune, judge, State of Georgia.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

New Orleans, January 17, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have the honor to forward for the consideration and remarks of the major-general commanding a letter to the Secretary of War in relation to levees in this State. I consider it of such prime necessity that I request it may be forwarded (if approved) with the least delay.

Your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,

Major-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,

New Orleans, January 17, 1865.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to ask that a special appropriation may be made to this department, in the sum of $100,000, for the erection and maintenance of levees in the State of Louisiana. The facts upon which this appropriation is asked are these: The State of Louisiana, to whom this duty belongs, is both unwilling and unable to discharge it. The sum of $400,000, gross figures, turned over by General Shepley to Governor Hahn, together with all revenues accruing since his coming into office, was disbursed, much of it in very questionable expenditures, by the constitutional convention, and the State is and has been for four months past bankrupt in treasury and without credit. The plantations along the river have been in many instances abandoned by their former owners and held by speculators, who have failed and left the country. The levees have thus been neglected by the proper authorities, and neglect insures destruction. Crevasses and breaks have already occurred. The next high water, if the levees remain as they are, will sweep over the entire country, destroy our fortifications at Morganza, ruin the La Fourche region, cut off our railroad communication with Brashear City, and do an incalculable amount of damage. As a mere matter of military necessity the construction of the levees in Point Coupé and West Baton Rouge is an inevitable duty. The governor, Mr. Hahn, although applied to officially, is powerless even to furnish competent engineers at State's expense. I have, therefore, caused the line of levees to be surveyed by the best engineers I could obtain, and have advertised for and received proposals for construction. The necessary work to be done is about, by estimate, 325,000 cubic yards. The best bid I have and the one accepted is at 40 cents per yard, $130,000. I have of reserve funds in provost-marshal-general's office $50,000, collected under the assessment order of Major-General Butler. The work is contracted to be done by the 15th of March, 1865. It is of great importance that the money to meet it should be on hand as the work progresses. There is no colored labor to be used without breaking up the entire system of plantations, and then it would be at greater eventual cost than by contract. By law all the plantations on the river fronting on the levee are bound for expenses of construction and repair, and the amount thus expended by the United States can, in the course of the year, be collected. I very earnestly press upon your attention the immediate necessity of being put in funds for this work, as the work itself cannot be delayed and must proceed rapidly, and I know of nothing more imperatively necessary to the safety of this command and the welfare of this people.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 17, 1865.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL OF THE ARMY,
Washington, D. C.:

Sir: When Maj. Gen. B. F. Butler turned over the command of this department to Major-General Banks in December, 1862, he took away with him a portion of the records of the headquarters of this department—book of Letters-Sent, the Special Order Book, and the Special Permit Memorandum Book. If possible I would request that these books may be returned, as the want of them is frequently felt in making reference to cases acted on by General Butler.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.
4. The Eighteenth New York Cavalry are hereby relieved from duty in the District of La Fourche, and will at once proceed to Kennerville, La., where its commanding officer will report for duty to the commander of the Cavalry Camp of Instruction. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation. The general commanding the District of La Fourche is charged with seeing that the requirements of General Orders, No. 37, series of 1864, from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, are strictly conformed to.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 17, 1865

Col. W. Sayles,
Commanding, Napoleonville:

Information having been given to these headquarters that Whitaker, with probably sixty-five men, is on Bayou Pierre, you will send two companies instead of one on the expedition ordered in instructions sent you to-day, dated the 16th. You will inform the commanding officer of the probability of his meeting Whitaker's gang, and instruct him to fight them if found.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD RHODE ISLAND CAVALRY,
Post Napoleonville, La., January 17, 1865.

Capt. O. A. AVERY,
Captain Company B:

CAPTAIN: 1. You are hereby ordered to proceed to-morrow morning, the 18th instant, with your company (B) and Companies I and K, of this regiment, at 2 a. m. to the plantation of Pierre Herbert, on Bayou Pierre Pass, taking special care not to arrive there before 8 o'clock in the evening. 2. You will (if there) capture one Victorine Trahan and one other Confederate soldier supposed to be there, and if you find either of them on the place you will also arrest Pierre Herbert. 3. Returning you will on no account whatever (should it be necessary) camp until you reach this side of Grand Bayou. 4. Should you meet any gang of Confederates you will fight them. 5. You will take two days' cooked rations with you for your command. 6. Privates Oscar Claud and Simon Trahan, Company K, First Louisiana Cavalry, will go with you as guides for the expedition. 7. You will be very careful not to allow any of your men to straggle or pillage from any plantations or premises.

By order of W. Sayles, colonel commanding regiment and post:

E. K. THOMPSON,
First Lieutenant and Post Adjutant.
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 17, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

GENERAL: In view of the instructions to reoccupy Fort Smith and posts in the vicinity, the major-general commanding directs that they be held simply as military positions to be defended at all hazards. The works to be reduced in conformity with this policy to be so strengthened, armed, and supplied as to be capable of resisting a siege; the troops not required for garrisons to be field in reserve for service in the field. Any dependencies not essential as outposts or picket-posts to be broken up and the garrisons concentrated as much as possible. As far as it can be done without serious embarrassment to the service, the commanding general desires that you change the garrisons of these posts, and break up, if possible, the system of corruptions that have neutralized the efficiency of the troops in the Northern District of your department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

General Canby desires that this letter be substituted for the one relating to the same matter sent this morning.
Respectfully,

C. T. C.

Hdqrs. Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 17, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to request that the Thirty-fifth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, now at Devall's Bluff, and also two regiments of U. S. Colored Infantry (the Fifty-third and Sixty-sixth), now at Saint Charles, be assigned permanently to this department. The first-named regiment belonged to this department, but was temporarily detained while on their return from veteran furlough; during this detention was assigned to Fourth Brigade of Reserve Corps. This request is rendered imperative by the order for the reoccupancy of Fort Smith, and I trust the major general commanding will consent.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

Hdqrs. Second Division, Seventh Army Corps,
and U. S. Forces at Devall's Bluff, Ark.,
January 17, 1865.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

SIR: I have the honor to report the arrival at this post of Col. G. M. Mitchell, commanding Fifty-fourth Illinois Infantry, with 10 officers and 227 enlisted men of his regiment and a few men of other regiments, recently exchanged prisoners of war. His orders require him to report to the commanding officer Department of Arkansas, and he has concluded to take the 2 p.m. train to Little Rock, to report in person. The balance of his regiment are encamped at Hickory Station, on the railroad. Of course it will be of great advantage to have his regiment united in one camp. But supposing the force now at Hickory Station to be sufficient, I have placed his detachment in camp here until your orders in the case are received. If thought sufficient by the major-general commanding, the detachment of the Sixty-first Illinois at this post might relieve the detachment of the Fifty-fourth Illinois at Hickory Station. The detachment of Fifty-fourth Illinois at Hickory Station report an aggregate of 239 present for duty. The Sixty-first Illinois report an aggregate of 151 present for duty. We need men for work on defenses very much this pleasant weather.

Very respectfully, yours,

ALEXANDER SHALER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
January 21, 1865.

Respectfully returned.

Orders have been issued in relation to disposition of these troops, which will explain. Orders from Lieutenant-General Grant require the Sixty-first Illinois Volunteers to rejoin their regiment at Nashville.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 17, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. SHALER,
Devall's Bluff:

The Fifty-fourth Illinois will concentrate at Hickory Station and will guard that point and Fort Minor. Order will be sent to-morrow p.m. Colonel Mitchell will be over in the morning train.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
AND U. S. FORCES AT DEVALL'S BLUFF, ARK.,
January 17, 1865.

First Lieut. JOHN SMAIL,
Company E, 35th Wis., Comdg. Guard on board steamer Ella:

You are directed to proceed on board of the Ella to Augusta and report to Colonel Geiger, commanding cavalry force at that place, handing him the accompanying dispatch. He will probably give you a quantity of beef-cattle to bring back. It is desired that you stay as short a time as possible at Augusta. On the trip you will have proper guards and lookout constantly on duty, and take every precaution to avoid confusion if fired upon from the shore. A detachment of our cavalry has been landed above Des Arc, and you are directed to be on the lookout as you pass both ways and communicate with them if possible. The captain of the Ella knows the point at which they were landed. Should you find them going up and they have a considerable number of cattle to deliver, you will take them on board and return without going to Augusta; and if the cavalry detachment desires transportation to Augusta you may promise to return for them immediately. The captain of the boat has written instructions from these headquarters to obey your orders. On arriving back you will report to these headquarters for further orders before disembarking your men. Your men will not be allowed to land except under your orders, and in that case you will be held responsible that no marauding or pillaging takes place. You will show Colonel Geiger these instructions, which are otherwise confidential.

By order of Brig. Gen. Alex. Shaler:

CHAS. E. HOWE,

[Inclosure.]

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
AND U. S. FORCES AT DEVALL'S BLUFF, ARK.,

January 17, 1865.

Col. W. F. GEIGER,

Commanding Cavalry Forces at Augusta, Ark.:

COLONEL: This dispatch will be handed you by the officer commanding the guard on board of the steamer Ella, which is sent to you at the request of General West for a load of beef-cattle. He will show you his instructions from these headquarters, and give you all the information gathered on the route. Brigadier-General Shaler, commanding at this post, desires that the boat be delayed as short a time as possible, and will be glad to answer any demands you wish to make with a view of advancing the object of the expedition, or to forward any communication you wish to send to General West.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHAS. E. HOWE,

HEADQUARTERS SECOND DIVISION, &c.,
Devall's Bluff, Ark., January 17, 1865—8 p.m.

Brig. Gen. J. R. WEST,

Little Rock:

I have seen nothing of Colonel Geiger's aide since my last dispatch. I understand he has gone to Brownsville. The Ella brought down from Augusta and landed on the east bank, a few miles above Des Arc, a scouting party of twenty or thirty cavalry. I do not know what their orders are. I am informed by a citizen (reliable) that they will not be able to get away from that region, on account of the bayous, without a boat. Under these circumstances would it not be well to start the Ella off to-morrow morning for Augusta, with instructions to look out for this detachment?

ALEXANDER SHALER,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.
DARDANELLE, January 17, 1865—8.30 a.m.

General J. J. Reynolds:

The Davenport has arrived with troops. Returns immediately. All well. Can hold the post. Position of the enemy not known. My scouts are out.

Respectfully,

A. H. Ryan,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 17, 1865—12.35 p.m.
(Via Devall's Bluff.)

Brigadier-General McGinnis,
Commanding at Mouth of White River:

Dispatch from General Clayton, commanding at Pine Bluff, dated yesterday, says, viz: * * * "The officer commanding the scout reports a force of about 200 rebels on the Arkansas River at Red Fork."

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. District of Natchez, Dept. of Mississippi,
Natchez, Miss., January 17, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Colonel: I made application to my department commander for a regiment of cavalry to be stationed here, asking, if he had none to give me, that he would forward my request. I received from General Dana a verbal reply by one of my aides that he had none to spare for this point, but he would forward my application approved. I consider the necessity sufficient to warrant my direct application for it. It is very important to have officers at the picket-lines of sufficient intelligence to understand the orders issued by the general commanding the military division, upon the application of parties claiming to own or control the products beyond our lines, and upon permission to take out supplies, even after having been duly issued at my headquarters. I am doing the duty of post commander myself until I can get this business arranged and understood, but it cannot be expected for me to visit my outer line or chain of vedettes every time an application is made to enter, and they are now becoming legion. The officers of outposts should certainly have intelligence enough to conduct the preliminary examination, and satisfy himself of the good faith of the parties before being brought within the lines to receive final review preparatory to obtaining a permit to go [to] New Orleans or Memphis. If it can be done, I would like the Third Michigan from Arkansas, or the First Louisiana from the Department of the Gulf, as most of the officers of these two regiments are known to me to be intelligent and honorable gentlemen. I have no doubt General Dana's request will go down soon, and this is done to facilitate the matter.

With high respect, I am, your obedient servant,

J. W. Davidson,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Colonel: On an inspection report of Lieut. Col. J. M. Wilson, assistant inspector-general Military Division of West Mississippi, of the date of December 31, 1864, of the post of Natchez, occurs the following indorsement:

Headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, January 11, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Brigadier-General Davidson, commanding District of Natchez, and his attention specially invited to the militia system, to city matters, to the commission for the trial of civil cases, and to the condition of troops and the care and management of contrabands within the limits of his command.

By order of Major-General Canby:
C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

I have the honor to state that the day after my arrival here, upon the resignation of Col. C. B. Smith, I appointed First Lieut. E. A. Denicke, Signal Corps, U. S. Army, colonel of the Third Regiment Enrolled Mississippi Militia; that under his management a more just and equitable system has been already introduced and exorbitant fines forbidden, and that the late Colonel Smith left the city of Natchez against my injunctions, without satisfactorily accounting for the militia fund. His case will be attended to if he ever comes within my jurisdiction. In regard to city matters, the mayor, Mr. C. D. Townsend, being properly an elective officer, was removed, and the municipal fund turned over temporarily to my acting assistant inspector-general, and a board appointed to audit his accounts. He turned over $7,766.35, and I asked General Dana what disposition should be made of it. He replies to turn it over to my provost-marshal for disbursement under his General Orders, No. 1, current series of 1865. The board has not yet finished the auditing of the mayor's accounts. All municipal affairs necessary under the military occupancy of the city are now administered by the provost-marshal. Arrangements desired by the inhabitants are being made for a public school, for lighting the city with gas, and a city police, heretofore neglected, is in full operation, thus dispensing in a great measure with the large provost guard taken from the troops. The military prison has been examined, cleaned, and all citizens held there not under charges released. I dissolved the commission for the trial of civil cases on the 8th instant, and on yesterday a copy of a letter to General Dana from the Secretary of War, of the date of December 19, 1864, reached me, directing its dissolution, as the Judge-Advocate-General had pronounced its constitution "irregular," thus sustaining my action. The garrison proper of Fort McPherson has been designated, and Col. B. G. Farrar, a fixture of the post, as he commands the regiment of heavy artillery, assigned to the command. The troops designated for field service have been placed out in camp, and their refitting is actively progressing under Colonel Moore, of the Eighty-third Ohio Infantry. All soldiers except what are absolutely necessary for a small patrol and the usual orderlies of headquarters have been sent out to their regiments, nor is an officer permitted to reside in the city unless specially ordered on duty there, nor a soldier allowed in it after dark but as above named. The details called for by the engineer are furnished with more regularity and fullness for the works at Fort McPherson. The affairs of the Freedmen's Camp are undergoing careful scrutiny by a board of officers of rank, and their report will be submitted direct when completed. All colored persons are required to show evidence of self-support or of actual employment, and if not are sent to the Home Farm. I beg here to ask special consideration of my request to retain the Eighty-third Ohio Infantry, unbrigaded or otherwise, at this post, and to state again that a greater necessity exists, in my belief, for its retention at this post than I am at present prepared to put in writing in an official shape.

I am, colonel, with high respect, your obedient servant,

J. W. DAVIDSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 17, 1865—11 a. m.
(Received 1.05 p. m.)

His Excellency A. LINCOLN,
President of the United States:

Dispatch of 15th received. Very few cases of violence have occurred in North Missouri. It is more quiet now than it has been for three years. Bushwhackers are doing the mischief. I have written you fully.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

MEMPHIS, TENN., January 17, 1865.

Col. J. H. BAKER,
Provost-Marshal-General:

COLONEL: I have been in Crittenden County, Ark., to-day and learn that Dick Berryman with a small part of his old command has started for Missouri. In a recent election a young man from Farmington, Mo., by name of Claridy, has been elected to Berryman's position, and Berryman really has no command at present. I think he is going to recruit if he finds it possible to do so. I learn from the rebels that Colonel Geiger, Eighth Missouri Cavalry, has occupied Augusta, on White River, and preparations are being made to drive him out. The rebels claim they have 10,000 men scattered through this part of Arkansas, which they will endeavor to concentrate. I do not think they really have half that number effective.

Truly,

S. H. MELCHER.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., January 17, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE:

SIR: The undersigned members of the senate, house of representatives, and other loyal men at the capitol beg leave to indorse unqualifiedly and cordially a request to you, which we understand is being signed by members of the State convention and other loyal persons in attendance there, asking your concurrence in and direction of an order to the following effect:

Let the committee of safety, as are referred to (and others if necessary) in connection with the military commander in each county, select, say, ten or fifteen prominent and wealthy rebel sympathizers in each township, and notify them by general order that they and their property will be held responsible for the safety of the persons and property of all the loyal men of their township.
The issuing and prompt execution (when necessary) of such an order will alone, in our judgment, give such security to loyal men as they are entitled to, and which the Government is in duty bound to render them. Such an order we beg shall be immediately issued, and the undersigned, your petitioners, will ever pray, &c.:

B. H. Wilson, representative of Saline County; D. P. Dyer, of Pike County; F. W. Hickox, senator, twenty-eighth district; Isaac V. Pratt, eighth district; A. F. Denny, thirteenth senatorial district; E. V. Wilson, seventh senatorial district; Geo. W. Anderson, second senatorial district; Madison Miller, twenty-ninth senatorial district; Samuel Bonner, twenty-ninth senatorial district; H. J. Deal, twenty-fifth senatorial district; G. R. Smith, sixteenth senatorial district; P. A. Thompson, eleventh senatorial district; J. H. Cox, fifth senatorial district; Jos. E. Baldwin, twenty-third senatorial district; Fred. Kayser, twenty-ninth senatorial district; C. C. Simmons, twenty-ninth senatorial district; Frederick Münch, first senatorial district; Gert Goebel, twenty-first senatorial district; W. N. Harrison, twenty-seventh senatorial district; J. N. Young, twelfth senatorial district; C. H. Frost, twenty-second senatorial district; W. L. Lovelace, speaker house of representatives; E. H. E. Jameson, speaker pro tempore, Saint Louis County; A. Mathews, Cooper County; G. W. Smiley, Pettis County; Henry Elliott, Cooper County; Rich'd H. Melton, Benton County; G. W. Houts, Johnson County; Alfred Montgomery, Stoddard County; Thos. A. Reed, Greene County; James Means, Scotland County; Clark H. Green, Howard County; Charlton H. Howe, Lewis County; E. T. Nelson; Thomas Jeffries; Joseph Whitaker, Hickory County; W. P. Jackson; Dan. M. Draper, chief clerk house of representatives; N. T. Doane, assistant clerk, house of representatives; W. T. Porter; Alfred Ginsel; Rich'd M. Roberts, journal clerk, house of representatives; James McFarland, Jasper and Barton; Mell Foster, Johnson County; J. B. Cooper, Osage County, Mo.; James B. Harper, Putnam County, Mo.; Geo. W. Rinker, Lawrence County, Mo.; A. J. Lloyd, Jackson County, Mo.; S. C. Hammer, Camden County, Mo.; Reuben Smith, Bollinger County, Mo.; Josiah Coleman, Nodaway County, Mo.; Lewis Myers, Grundy County, Mo.; E. S. King, Cole County; Thos. J. Babeoke, Miller County; Wm. M. Bial, Knox County; J. W. Lee, Adair County; A. J. Harlan, Andrew County; J. Comstock, Sullivan County; W. H. H. Cundiff, Cass County; Richard Buckham, Atchison County; Jno. McGoldrick, Schuyler County; James Brierly, Buchanan County; Robert W. Logan, De Kalb County; Samuel W. Headlee, Greene County; Thos. W. Allred, Christian County; Swain W. Gideon, Taney County; W. F. Bodenhamer, Webster County; Joseph Thompson, Buchanan County; W. A. Curry, editor Missouri State Times; J. W. Sutherland, Saint Louis County; Francis Rodman; B. Chase, Saline County; G. W. Hood, paymaster, Enrolled Missouri Militia, Platte County, Mo.; David Cranor, member house of representatives; J. Winston Sitton, house of representatives, Lincoln County: Nathl. McDonald, Saint Louis County; C. B. Walker, McDonald County; Enos Clarke, representative Saint Louis County; T. W. McMillen, Livingston County; James C. McGinnis, sergeant-at-arms; C. A. Newcomb, Jefferson County; Daniel Proctor, Caldwell County; D. M. King, Mercer County; Jeremiah White, Texas County; John Corby, Buchanan County; S. E. Hoge, clerk of circuit court of Moniteau County, Mo.; A. Masters, probate judge Morgan County; George Preston, member house of representatives, Saint Clair County; Proudis G. Roberts, sheriff Saint Clair County; D. P. Shield, county attorney, Saint Clair County; Geo. U. Short, Saint Clair County; Jonathan Hill, Carroll County; Samuel Turner, Carroll County.
5G6 LOUISIANA AND THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI. [Chap. LX.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 17, 1865.

Messrs. Jacob Lender, John O. Buchanan,
A. L. Beatty, and others:

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication, in form of a memorial, of date 10th instant, and in reply beg to assure you that I am much gratified at the spirit of this move, and that your desire and effort for the rebuilding and tranquilizing of your desolate and disturbed county have my sympathy. This matter had already engaged my attention, and I am free to confess that it is full of embarrassment and difficulty. Two things are essential to your prosperity and happiness. One is, you must have population to revive agriculture, commerce, and trade; the other is, you must have repose and security to procure [pursue] these vocations and enjoy their fruits. To secure the former it is proposed to invite back to their abandoned farms, workshops, and country homes the refugees from your county. This would be magnanimous and feasible, but is it prudent and expedient? So far as the loyal class of these fugitives is concerned there can be no question but that they should be induced to return, and to us there is equally as little doubt that that class of rabid secessionists, sneaking sympathizers, families of bushwhackers, theiraiders and informers, should not be allowed to return. The third class, those who at an early period sympathized openly with the rebellion, but who soon reversed their allegiance to the Government, and have remained passive or active in its support, demeaning themselves as good citizens, obedient to the governmental authority, these people have claims to our consideration, and, in my judgment, you are right in proposing to admit them. One difficulty in this privilege would be its abuse by mean men and disguised traitors, slipping in under the order and hatching out in your midst a nest of vipers. And I am not unmindful, either, of how easy it would be for some snarling, censorious spirit to attribute to the district commander improper motives in adopting a policy so liable to misuse. But these personalities have never influenced my actions in any relation of life. The question is, is it right? It is a bad philosophy to exclude 100 good men from your county for fear one mean one may creep in. Another objection to extending an invitation to these men to return home is that they may vote and act with political parties opposed to the now dominant party in your county. My own opinion is that you need have no such fears. There are none so unwise as to longer entertain the most glimmering hope of Missouri's return to the powers of rebellion. There is not a rebel of any intelligence who does not know and feel that Missouri is forever established in and wedded to the Federal Union. Slavery, the handmaid of treason, is dead, and freedom is ineffaceably written in our organic law, and the sweeping tide of popular sentiment will bear these men along with you. The result of the late election in Missouri gives irrefragable evidence of this. It is natural for men to give in their adhesion to the ruling idea of the age, and to adopt their actions to the existing order of things. It is a wise philosophy in our Government to accept the voice of overwhelming majorities as the best interpretation of the interest of individuals and the correct policy of the nation. This is true when reason and not force controls the expression of the sentiments of the majority. So we have a right to presume that these men will act and vote with us if we can keep down violence and armed power imimical to the loyal Government. The immovable relation of the State to the Union and the abolition of slavery will of itself harmonize the vote of Missouri with Republican principles. The remaining question is, how is the peace of the country to be secured? For unless we are able to rid your country of bushwhackers and robbers all the other aspects of the case are nothing, practically. The military force at my command is so small that I cannot cover your county with soldiers, if this were desirable. I must, therefore, rely in some measure on the active and hearty co-operation of your people. I have already issued a general order for the organization of the loyal citizens of the district into local companies, the basis and details of which I think you will approve. Colonel Harding, now commanding that sub-district, will superintend the organization in your county. It is to be controlled by loyal, honest, capable men. If possible, I want you to give me at least three companies in your county. Men who desire protection must help protect themselves, and the man who refuses to do so need expect nothing from the Government. I will give you all the regular force at my disposal. Men and families who do not co-operate with you, or who feed, harbor, or encourage bushwhacking and invasions must quit the country. Their very position will subject them to a strict responsibility for the outrages, &c., of their friends. We will never get rid of these outlawed bands while their families and friends are permitted to remain among us. Equally obnoxious and hurtful to the public good are that class of men claiming to be Unionists who compose self-constituted organizations and go out, under the semblance of warring with bushwhackers, to pilfer, rob, and steal, that gain may come to themselves. These things are a disgrace to a good cause and base slander on loyalty. They will not be tolerated, and I shall pursue the same policy toward them as those who do these things under the colors of the Stars and Bars. If I continue in this command you may rely upon my support in the good work proposed, and I hope to hear of active preparations for farming, trade, and all the busy work of the husbandman and mechanic in your county, encouraging good men to stay with you and not leave the country in despair, as many are preparing to do. Let us go to work in earnest, and let not our enemies say that we have reclaimed Missouri to the Union, but have for our possession a desolation and a waste.

I am, gentlemen, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,

Colonel, Commanding District.
Colonel Harding:

I have just got in. My men are all well, but one of Company D had a congestive chill. I found no considerable force of bushwhackers, not above a half dozen. Could not overtake those I did see. Will make a full report in writing or in person soon. Will be up Thursday, and will be able to make some suggestions that will be worthy of consideration. Captain Ogle and the adjutant have arrived.

Yours, truly,

B. K. Davis,
Major, Commanding.

P. S.—Please signify if you wish to see me sooner than Thursday.

Special Orders, 1

Macon, Mo., January 17, 1865.

IV. Company D, Sixty-ninth Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, commanded by Capt. H. J. Lewis, is hereby relieved from active service. Captain Lewis will not transfer the ordnance and ordnance stores of his company until otherwise ordered by competent authority.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk: W. T. Clarke,

Olathe, January 17, 1865.

Captain Hampton,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Paola:

Eight bushwhackers were in Little Santa Fé and Oxford yesterday, according to information.

W. F. Goble,
Lieutenant and Assistant Provost-Marshal.

Executive Office, Omaha, January 17, 1865. (Received 2.50 a.m. 18th.)

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

I send herewith a copy of joint resolution passed this day by unanimous vote of legislative assembly. The case is urgent.

Alvin Saunders,
Governor of Nebraska.

Joint resolution and memorial for the creation of the Department of the Plains.

Resolved by the Council and House of Representatives of the Territory of Nebraska, That the honorable Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, respectfully requested to create at once a special department, to be designated the Department of the Plains, embracing this together with Colorado, Montana, and Utah Territories, all to be under the control of one competent officer, who shall be charged with the responsibility of protecting the overland commerce, telegraph line, and mail transportation.
Resolved, That it is the firm conviction of this body, founded on facts constantly within our observation, that without the adoption of this measure everything must be given up to the control of hostile Indians.

S. M. KIRKPATRICK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

O. P. MASON,
President of the Council.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 17, 1865.

Adjutant-General of the Army,
Washington, D. C.:

Sir: I have been informed that an influential Mexican wrote to his brother in Valencia County, on the Rio Grande, that unless the people there opposed the colonization of the Navajoes at the Bosque Redondo, and unless they succeeded in having the Navajoes get back to their own country all of the Government business which has hitherto been so beneficial to that country, by passing trains of supplies to the old Navajo country and the employment of means of transportation for army purposes in that country, would cease. There can hardly be a doubt but that here are a set of demagogues who foresee that when the Indians are all colonized there will be no further need of the immense expenditures which have hitherto been incurred in keeping troops in New Mexico, and make that one of the points to oppose so important a measure. It is well to remember the machinations of parties to keep up the Florida war. In my opinion, this idea of losing the Government patronage for New Mexico when the Indian difficulties should come to an end with a certain set who care nothing for the poor or for the future of the country is one great element of opposition to the measure. I can prove by figures, if necessary, that to place and keep the Indians on any reservation in their own country—for example, on the San Juan, the only place which even those who wish them moved say they could occupy—would cost more than three times as much as to keep them where they are. If those who wish them moved will name the place west of the Rio Grande where they would put them I will measure the distances, survey the ground, get bids for freight, calculate the cost of the forts, the number and cost of the various garrisons, the cost of food, and prove by positive data what, without going into minute details, I here state. You had better by far move them to Kansas or Missouri, for then you take them where provisions are cheap.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Sumner, N. Mex., January 17, 1865.

Brig. Gen. JAMES H. CARLETON,
Commanding Department of New Mexico:

GENERAL: Inclosed you will find a copy of private letter written by me to Hon. James Harlan, U. S. Senator from Iowa and a leading member of Senate Committee on Indian Affairs. I did not write the letter because I supposed I could make these matters clearer than you have made them in your statement, but because Mr. Harlan and myself are from the same State, are personally acquainted, and a private letter from me will probably engage and direct his attention as soon as anything. Inclosed you will also find my answers to certain questions, in writing, propounded by Judge Woolson, special commissioner, &c. I found some difficulty in answering that portion of the second question touching the sum necessary to be appropriated for the year ending July 1, 1860, as I had never heard your views upon the subject. I hope, however, that my answer, as far as it goes, will be satisfactory to you.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. M. CROCKER,
Brigadier-General.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Sumner, N. Mex., January 16, 1865.

Hon. James Harlan:

Dear Sir: This will be handed to you by the Hon. T. W. Woolson. Inclosed please find an address* to the people of New Mexico, written by Brig. Gen. James H. Carleton, commanding the department. Judge Woolson will have it in his power to explain to you sufficient of the facts to enable you to form a just opinion of the matters in controversy. The judge will also explain to you the nature of my duties at this post. Of course I have not been sufficiently acquainted with the history of the Indian difficulties in this country to entitle my opinion to any very great consideration. I only desire to say that in this Territory for more than 100 years life and property have been unsafe on account of the depredations of hostile Indians, and that of all the hostile tribes the Navajoes have been considered the most formidable. That since the commencement of the present war persons have been killed by these Indians within a few miles of Santa Fe. And that prior to the administration of General Carleton as commander of the department, no person could travel through the country in any direction without a military escort. A continual war was waged against the Indians, particularly against the Navajoes. Expedition after expedition was sent against them at an immense expense, all of them ending in producing no good results, for treaty after treaty was broken by the Indians as soon as made. The character of their country is such that they could after their forays withdraw to their mountain fastnesses and defy successful pursuit. From their strongholds they preyed with impunity upon the citizens, so that life and property were alike unsafe. General Carleton had served in this country before he was assigned to the command of the department, and was well acquainted with the history of this warfare against these Indians, and with their entire faithlessness in observing treaties, so that when he commenced his campaign against them he gave them notice that he would make no treaty with them, and conceived the, in my opinion, wise plan of removing these Indians from their strongholds and placing them upon a reservation so situated that he could effectually control them with the military force at his command. Accordingly, he gave the Navajoes to understand that those of them who desired peace might come in and be sent by him to this reservation, and that the war that he intended to wage against those who did not come in would be a war of extermination. None of them came in, for they expected, as had been customary when hard pressed, they would be permitted to make a treaty of peace; but General Carleton conducted his campaign in a manner that soon convinced them that he meant what he said, and the result was that about 9,000—over two-thirds certainly of the entire tribe—surrendered themselves to the forces under his command as prisoners, and were sent by him to this reservation for safe-keeping, where they now are. When they surrendered something had to be done with them. The general could not kill them. No humane Christian man would approve of that method of disposing of these savages. After all the fruitless campaigns and the immense expense of the Government in conquering this people he could not send them back to their country and thereby permit a renewal of the old horrors and difficulties.

*Not found as an inclosure.

The Indian Department was not prepared to take charge of them, for they had neither the supplies to feed them nor the force to guard them. The general then wisely, I think, sent them to this reservation, where ample ground, fit for cultivation, could be procured to make them as nearly self-sustaining as possible. The judge will tell you what a magnificent valley this is. He will explain to you fully the progress made in opening a farm for these Indians, and what reasonable prospects there are that the Indians will be able to raise sufficient to maintain themselves. He will tell you of all the efforts made by General Carleton to reclaim these Indians from their savage course of life and bring them to the ways of civilization, of the hospital, of the school, &c.; of the contentment of these people, and of their entire harmlessness under the military supervision now exercised over them. The judge will also explain the manner in which rations are issued, and will show you that there never has been the same number of people subsisted with the same economy. He has no more doubt than I have that with the aid of the military at this post these Indians will produce on the farm now being prepared for them sufficient for their subsistence. Every intelligent man in the Territory with whom I have conversed admits that it is better and cheaper for the Government to keep these people on the reservation, and feed them even delicacies, than to allow the former state of affairs to exist; but if they can be made to produce sufficient to subsist themselves so much the better. And the whole question resolves itself into this, would it be better to send them back to their own country and allow the old condition of perpetual warfare to be resumed, or would it be wiser, now that we have them where we can keep a military supervision over them, and where we have every prospect of making them support themselves, to continue the present state of peace and security and give these savages the benefit of the energetic efforts now being made for their civilization? That there is opposition to this settlement of the Navajoes on this or on any other reservation, where they will be under military supervision, is not surprising. Indian agents, whose duty it has been to pay the Indians their annuities, and to deliver to them the presents appropriated by Congress, and who have never visited the Indians at all, but have appropriated to themselves the bounty of the Government to these people, of course are not favorable to any arrangement that will take from them that which by custom they have come to consider their rightful perquisites. I send you by the judge the report of a board of officers to show you how faithfully the $100,000 appropriated by the last session of Congress was expended for the benefit of the Indians, and I really have no doubt but that they received more in this instance than they usually do from such appropriations. Contractors who furnish supplies for the Indian campaigns and Indian traders also oppose any settlement of Indian difficulties, but no right-minded man in New Mexico desires that the present experiment be abandoned without a fair trial.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. M. CROCKER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding at Fort Sumner.

HEADQUARTERS,
Fort Sumner, N. Mex., January 15, 1865.

Hon. T. W. WOOLSON,
Special Commissioner, &c.:

DEAR SIR: In response to your written inquiries handed me this day, I have the honor to submit the following: First. "For what length of time have you on hand supplies sufficient for the Navajo Indians in your charge?" Attached hereto you will find a very careful estimate made by the commissary of subsistence of this post, which answers that question. Second. "What sum will be necessary to be appropriated by Congress for the support of these Indians in addition to the products of the lands worked for their benefit for the year ending July 1, 1866?" In my opinion no appropriation will be necessary for their food. We will succeed this season in planting and cultivating at least 6,000 acres of land; 1,500 pounds of grain per acre is less than an ordinary yield, and should the season be favorable we may count upon a yield of 2,000 pounds per acre. Supposing the yield to be 1,500 pounds per acre, the products of the 6,000 acres would be 9,000,000 pounds of grain, which would furnish the Navajoes on the reservation a fraction less than three pounds for each Indian per day for 365 days. Should the yield be 2,000 pounds per acre, then the amount of grain produced will be 12,000,000 pounds, which would furnish two and three-quarters pounds each for 12,000 Indians for 365 days. Experience has taught that these Indians can be subsisted with a reasonable degree of comfort on two pounds of solid food per day. To the yield of the farm may be added the product of the gardens, which will be considerable, so that it is safe to conclude that there will be ample sufficiency produced on the farm to subsist the Indians now here in the most bountiful manner, and which by economy may be made sufficient to subsist not only those now here, but any others that may come into the reservation.

It, remains, then to consider what appropriation will be necessary for clothing and farming utensils. It is difficult to estimate what will be necessary for clothing. They exhibit wonderful ingenuity in converting every conceivable thing that falls into their hands into some description of garment useful to shield them from the cold. The hides of all animals that come into their possession are at once converted into useful wearing apparel, and all the wool that they can procure is woven by their women into blankets of a very fine quality, and of which they make garments for the women and children. As to the farming utensils, it is hoped that by care those now in use on the farm, and which have already been estimated for by the commissary of subsistence of this post, will be sufficient or nearly so for the next season. I would say, however, that an appropriation of $100,000, to be expended by the commissary for such articles as may be estimated for by the commander of this department, would be sufficient, and in this connection I would recommend that instead of spending money in purchasing blankets in New York or other Eastern cities for the Indians, the portion of money intended for that purpose be expended in this Territory for wool to be distributed among them, out of which they may manufacture their own clothing. This will furnish the women and children with useful occupation, and the clothing manufactured by them will be of much better quality and will please them much better than anything that can be distributed. In my opinion $10,000 expended in wool and distributed to the different families would be of more utility than $30,000 expended in blankets. Third. “What number of acres will the Navajoes under your superintendence be able to put in crops the coming season?” We calculate confidently that we will succeed in cultivating at least 6,000 acres. Fourth. “Please give me any further suggestions which you may esteem important to a correct understanding of the subject, i.e., the support of the Navajoes.” All the suggestions that I have to make on this subject are contained in my answer to your second question. Fifth. “What was the value of the goods, &c., distributed to the Navajoes, and that were bought by Leavenworth and Baker, commissioners, with the $100,000 appropriated by the last session of Congress, and what was the character of the goods, &c., and how and by whom distributed?” Attached hereto you will find the report of board of officers appointed by me for the purpose of making an examination of these goods and observing the manner of their distribution. This report contains all the information in my possession.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. M. CROCKER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding at Fort Sumner.

City Point, Va., January 18, 1865—9.30 p. m. (Received 11 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK, Chief of Staff:

It will not do for Canby to rely on either Granger or Hurlbut as first in command of any important campaign.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

Mississippi Squadron, U. S. Flag-Ship Fairy,
Eastport, Miss., January 18, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY,
Commanding Military Division of West Mississippi:

GENERAL: Lieut. Commander J. P. Foster, commanding Third District of this squadron, reports to me, under date of January 8, that on the 7th instant he was informed by a man named Carr, who keeps a wood yard just above the mouth of Red River, that in a recent conversation with a man from Alexandria he had learned that the rebels had brought down most of their heavy boats from Shreveport for the purpose of protecting the workmen now employed on the fortifications at Pineville, opposite Alexandria; also that there is now more water on the shoals at Alexandria than there has been for years.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, yours,

S. P. LEE,
Acting Rear-Admiral, Commanding Mississippi Squadron.
Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 18th day of January, 1865:

Lars Larsen, a deserter from Jones' (rebels) battery, Brownsville, Tex., makes the following statement—He left Brownsville January 5, 1865. States that there are about 1,100 soldiers at or near Brownsville and 700 at or near Ringgold Barracks. All are mounted. At Galveston (which place he visited in September, 1864) there were about 1,400 infantry acting as heavy artillery, and two batteries containing eight guns and about 170 men. There were four forts, viz., Jackson, Fort Point, Magruder, and South Battery, each mounting five guns, and a small redoubt mounting two guns. Two forts (Bankhead and Moore) had no guns at that time. There were breast-works around the city. He states also that the crops in Texas during the past year have been heavy. W. C. Nations, a refugee from Texas, states that he crossed the Rio Grande September 5, 1864. At Eagle Pass, on the Rio Grande, are about sixty men; at Fort Clark about 150 men; at Brownsville are about 850 mounted men and one company of artillery (six guns). No new fortifications at Brownsville. Thomas H. Murray, a deserter from Hobby’s (rebels) regiment, states that Maj. Gen. J. G. Walker commands the Department of Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona (First District of Trans-Mississippi Department), and that Brigadier-General Hawes commands Defenses of Galveston. States that blockade running was very brisk at Galveston, steamers running in shore and under the protection of Fort Magruder. Much discontent exists among the troops, who have not been paid for eighteen months. Rations are scant and soldiers are obliged to furnish their own clothing.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. Eaton,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

---

Col. C. L. Harris, Brashear City:

You will at once send a gun-boat and seventy-five men, with three days’ rations, up Lake Palourde as far as the water will permit toward Grass Lake, for the purpose of securing the rebel conscripting party, if possible. A party of cavalry will be sent out from Napoleonville, Lake Palourde, as far as possible toward Grass Lake.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. Campbell,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

5. The Fifty-fourth Illinois Infantry Volunteers will concentrate at Hickory Station, on the Memphis and Little Rock Railroad, and guard that point and Fort Minor. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation for equipage and stores if necessary.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 18, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. SHALE,
Commanding, Devil's Bluff:

GENERAL: In carrying out the inclosed Order, No. 6, the major-general commanding desires that you will do it with firmness, but not harshly nor hastily. Able-bodied male persons will in no case be exempted. Attention is invited to the President's supplementary proclamation, dated March 26, 1864, in General Orders, No. 242, of 1864, and to General Orders, No. 31, paragraph 5, headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, of 1864. In cases of females and aged or infirm men who own or control property that may be used for public purposes, the same general remarks will apply, but in deciding where they shall go, North or South, you will use your discretion after careful inquiry in each case, having always in view the public good rather than the wishes of the parties concerned. Where the head of a family (male) is permitted to take the oath of allegiance, it is not necessary, except in extreme cases, to extend the privilege to the females of the household.

Very respectfully,

JOHN LEVERING,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Same to Generals Buford, Clayton, Thayer, McGinnis, Salomon, and Colonel Ryan.)

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
AND U. S. FORCES AT DEVALL'S BLUFF, ARK.,
January 18, 1865.

Lieut. G. W. KNIGHT,
Comdg. Officer of Detachment on duty with the Telegraph Party:

You will move out along the line of telegraph poles now erected until you reach the working party. You will then notify Mr. Thomas Cunniffe, who has charge of the party, of your presence and your instructions. You will make such disposition of your men as will insure the best protection to the workmen and the telegraph properties, keeping your party always in such close proximity to each as to make it easy to unite on any one point. After reaching Saint Charles you may take river transportation back, if it is to be had, without delay, or otherwise you will march into camp as soon as the line is completed to Saint Charles. Beyond that point guards will be furnished the telegraph party. You are particularly enjoined not to allow your men to straggle during the trip, but keep them constantly on the lookout for small parties that might annoy the telegraph party. No marauding or pillaging will

* See January 14, p. 516.
† See Vol. XLI, Part II, p. 916.
‡ See Vol. XLI, Part IV, p. 465.
be tolerated under any circumstances. You are supplied with all the rations you are likely to require, but should you fall short they may be obtained at Saint Charles.

By order of Brig. Gen. Alexander Shaler:

CHAS. E. HOWE,

DARDANELLE, January 18, 1865—8 p. m.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,

Little Rock:

Last night camp-fires of the enemy were seen by our scouts in five directions. From other sources I learn that the enemy is concentrating for an attack on this place. They say they will compel the evacuation of Fort Smith, and will hold this place for that purpose. Last night they were within eighteen miles of us. I think it probable that they will attack to-morrow a. m. From pieces of charred wreck and a report received by a woman, I believe they have succeeded in destroying one of the boats last evening at or near Morrison's Bluff, seven miles above Clarksville. I do not think it advisable to send up another fleet; river falling too rapidly for them to go through.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel, Commanding.

Special Orders, §

HDQRS. DISTRICT OF VICKSBURG,

No. 17. §

Vicksburg, Miss., January 18, 1865.

I. The Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry will at once embark on the transports they came on to this place and proceed without delay to Memphis, Tenn. On arriving at that city the commanding officer will report to Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi. The command will take on board ten days' rations and ten days' forage. The quartermaster's department will furnish the steamers with coal and dry wood, if possible, sufficient to make the trip without any stoppage between here and Memphis. The commanding officer will give instructions to the officers in command of the detachments on the several boats that no stoppage be made between this place and Memphis but what is absolutely necessary.

II. The six companies of the Fifth Illinois Cavalry will at once get ready to embark and take with them all their camp and garrison equipage, horses, mules, transportation, and property. They will take on board the boats ten days' rations and ten days' forage, and proceed to Memphis, Tenn. On arrival there the commanding officer will report to General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi. The quartermaster's department will furnish, if possible, fuel sufficient for the boats to make the trip without stoppage from here to Memphis. The commanding officer will issue orders that the boats do not stop at any point between here and Memphis except absolutely necessary. Every officer or man in any manner detached from the Fifth Illinois Cavalry within this district will be at once relieved and sent to their command.

By command of Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn:

W. H. MORGAN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Special Orders, Headquarters Saint Louis District,
No. 15.

Saint Louis, Mo., January 18, 1865.

2. Company G, First Infantry Missouri State Militia, is relieved from duty in the Third Sub-District, and will proceed to Saint Louis and report for duty to Colonel Weydemeyer, commanding First Sub-District. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,

HEADQUARTERS POST SALEM,
Salem, Mo., January 18, 1865.

Capt. C. G. LAURANT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Rolla District:

Sir: A scout of some citizens, which I sent out a few days since, came across one notorious bushwhacker, Dock Lawson. He endeavored to make his escape. They fired on him and killed him; captured his horse and arms. This Lawson has been one of the leading bushwhackers in this vicinity. They also brought in two prisoners belonging to Colonel Freeman's command, and brought in two Government wagons found hid in a cave on Piney Creek near Clark's. One of the wagons has been burned; the other is serviceable yet. Bushwhackers seem to be scarce in this vicinity for the present. To prevent them from coming into the county it would be a great benefit to the people to put some twenty-five men at Stephens' Mill, on Current River, as this is the only mill on Current River or [in] this county, and the only dependence for a great many loyal people and soldiers' families to get their grinding, and if there are no troops kept there it will be burned. The owner is a loyal man and would be safe, and the troops would be in no danger. It is sixteen miles from Salem and is on their pass way into the vicinity of Rolla, and there is plenty of forage there for that number of men. I can send that amount from here, if it is approved by the district commander, and would assist this place in routing them more than scouting all the time.

Captain, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. E. WHYBARK,
Captain, Commanding Post, &c.

WARRENSBURG, January 18, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis, Mo.:

Scouts all in from La Fayette and Saline. Five or six scattering bushmen found in former county. Report of bushwhackers in Saline false. A party claiming to be loyal men were detected stealing and marauding at night under the guise of rebels in vicinity of Miami. Proof seems clear. Will arrest them. Shall send scouts immediately back to these counties and keep them moving.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.
WARRENSBURG, January 18, 1865.

Captain Meredith,
Commanding, Lexington, Mo.:

Scout left here this morning for Sni Hills, and will pass down through Greentown Valley. You will co-operate with it.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 18, 1865.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

Sir: In compliance with instructions contained in circular from department headquarters, I have the honor to make the following semi-monthly report of operations in this command for the information of the general commanding: On the 2d day of January, instant, a copy of General Orders, 234, from headquarters Department of the Missouri, was received, extending the district northward to the Osage River. Posts were at once established at Linn Creek and in the vicinity of Osceola, and detachments were sent to each of these places for the purpose principally of recuperating their unserviceable horses. Company K, Sixteenth Missouri Cavalry, having been transferred to the District of Rolla by Special Orders, 358, department headquarters, was ordered to proceed to Licking, in Texas County. With these exceptions the troops at the several posts in this district remain as before. A scouting party from Forsyth under the command of Captain Fenex, Company M, Seventy-third Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, returned to Forsyth on the 5th instant, having scouted through Carroll, Marion, and Newton Counties, Ark. Captain Fenex found no organized bands of rebels, but that some 200 or 300 were scattered about the country in various directions, disorganized, and without any concert of action. Col. John E. Phelps, Second Arkansas Cavalry, arrived at Cape Girardeau on the 11th instant. He reports that the brigades of Freeman, McKae, and Dobbin were in the vicinity of Batesville, Ark., scattered about the country and unwilling to concentrate for offensive purposes, and expresses his belief that they cannot be again concentrated. Captain Fenex has this day brought in eleven prisoners of Alfred Cook's band. He reports having caught Alfred Cook and fifteen of his men in a cave east of Sugar Loaf Prairie. Eleven of these surrendered, but Cook, Brown, and two others refused to surrender and were killed. Major Moore, Fifteenth Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, has been absent on a scout in Arkansas for the last ten days with about sixty men. He moved from Cassville and has not yet returned or reported. Col. Buck Brown with about 200 men is in the vicinity of Cane Hill, Ark., and Colonel Snavels [Schnable] has about 150 men with him in the vicinity of North Fork of White River. These are the only organized forces of the enemy at this time near the district. There are no guerrillas in the district, unless a few prowling in Newton and McDonald Counties.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
Special Orders, No. 15.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 18, 1865.

By command of Major-General Curtis:

C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DIST. OF MINNESOTA, DEPT. OF THE NORTHWEST,
Saint Paul, January 18, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JOHN POPE,
Comdg. Department of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose copy of an extract from a dispatch of Lieutenant-Colonel Pfaender, commanding Second Sub-District, dated [January] 12, 1865, detailing his operations in carrying out my instructions for the removal of straggling Indians to the west side of James River, &c. An application has been made by Maj. J. R. Brown, special military agent, for permission for the friendly Sisseton Indians to be located at some point not very distant from Fort Wadsworth and under the protection of the military force at that post, that they may be enabled to plant corn, &c., in the spring. I can perceive no objection to this proposition if intended only as a temporary measure pending the decision of the Government on the policy to be adopted in locating the Indians permanently. It would certainly be unjust to drive these people to a distance from our military forces before a general pacification takes place on the border, for they would be subjected to abuse and ill-treatment by the hostile savages for having made peace with the Government. In my judgment their present location near Fort Wadsworth would place them where they could be made serviceable as scouts in checking raiding parties bound for the settlements. For these reasons I respectfully recommend that Major Brown be authorized to select a proper locality within a specified distance of Fort Wadsworth, not more remote than the James River (between thirty and forty miles) from the post, whereon to concentrate these friendly Indians, and that authority be further given to me to furnish them with such seed corn, potatoes, and other vegetables as will aid them in subsisting themselves without other expense to the Government.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., January 23, 1865.

Respectfully returned to Brig. Gen. H. H. Sibley, commanding District of Minnesota, who will use his own judgment as to allowing the friendly Sissetons in question to be permitted to locate near Fort Wadsworth. General Sibley is authorized to furnish them seed corn, potatoes, and vegetables for planting in limited quantities.

By command of Major-General Pope:

J. F. MELINE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
(Extract from dispatch of Lieut. Col. William Pfaender, commanding Second Sub-District, to Capt. R. C. Olin, assistant adjutant-general, District of Minnesota, dated Fort Ridgely, Minn., January 12, 1865.)

Patrolling over the entire line of outposts is kept up three times a week, and the troops are supplied with rations to the 1st of March. The health of the command is excellent, the number of the sick in hospital at this post from all the troops in the sub-district ranging from eight to twelve. There are at present seven lodges of Indians (mostly women and children) at and near Yellow Medicine, who have come across from Fort Thompson and beg to be allowed to stay until the severe weather is over. A party of Indians who have been trapping on the Big Sioux have left, and there are now only two small parties reported to be this side of the James River, the whereabouts of whom I hope to find out within a short time, and shall act according to circumstances.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM PFAENDER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 19, 1865.
(Via Cairo and New York.)

Major-General Canby,

New Orleans:

It is reported by General Sherman that Beauregard has gone to Mississippi to bring against Sherman the remains of Hood's army. If so, you and Thomas can easily operate in Alabama to destroy the railroads and supplies of the enemy. If not, a demonstration on your part may prevent Hood from re-enforcing Charleston. General Grant, therefore, directs that you will prepare all your available forces for a campaign against Selma or Montgomery, moving from Pascagoula, Mobile Bay, Pensacola, or such other point on the Gulf as you may select. Mobile would seem the best, if it can be captured without too much delay. Should you select that point the Navy Department would probably be able to send you such additional vessels and monitors as you might desire. When once started the troops should move light and very rapidly, living as far as possible on the country. It is believed that there are abundant supplies at Selma, Montgomery, Columbus, and in all the adjacent country. If General Thomas cannot move in time to co-operate with you, it is General Grant's intention to send you a part of Thomas' troops and leave him on the defensive. I have directed that you be furnished immediately with cavalry remounts. You will send your requisitions to the depot at Saint Louis and also to the bureau in Washington. You will communicate with General Thomas in regard to his co-operation, but General Grant directs that your expedition be organized whether General Thomas gets ready to move or not. The lieutenant-general directs me to say that he does not regard General Granger or General Hurlbut as proper for the chief command of the expedition.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.
Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 19th day of January, 1865: A letter from Capt. L. B. Nash, Little Rock, Ark., December 31, 1864, transmitting his monthly report of forces of the enemy serving in the Trans-Mississippi Department for December, states that the decrease in the forces since the November report is based on reliable information. He states that the command of General Price is still scattered through the country and that Shelby alone has an organization. Most of their cavalry and artillery horses have been sent into Southern Texas to be recruited. A report from Maj. George Webster, Pass Manchac, La., January 18, 1865, states that a detachment of Forrest's men (about fifty in number) is reported in the neighborhood of Madisonville. I have the honor to transmit herewith summaries of Captain Nash's reports for November and December, 1864.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. Eaton,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

[Inclosure No. 1.]
Summary of the forces of the enemy serving in the Trans-Mississippi Department.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Arm of service</th>
<th>Command</th>
<th>November</th>
<th>December</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Infantry</td>
<td>Forney's</td>
<td>4,700</td>
<td>4,300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Parsons'</td>
<td>4,300</td>
<td>3,350</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Churchill's</td>
<td>3,200</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Polignac's</td>
<td>3,350</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>15,550</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cavalry</td>
<td>Wharton's, including Logan's</td>
<td>7,800</td>
<td>4,950</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Maxey's</td>
<td>4,050</td>
<td>3,500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Marmaduke's</td>
<td>3,500</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Fagan's</td>
<td>3,825</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Shelby's</td>
<td>2,720</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>22,795</td>
<td>38,345</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Artillery</td>
<td>Magruder</td>
<td>66</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Maxey</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Price</td>
<td>4</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Total</td>
<td>80</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

[Inclosure No. 2.]
Summary of the forces of the enemy serving in the Trans-Mississippi Department.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Arm of service</th>
<th>Division</th>
<th>Strength</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Cavalry</td>
<td>Wharton's</td>
<td>5,125</td>
<td>520</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Logan's</td>
<td>500</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Cooper's</td>
<td>4,060</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Marmaduke's</td>
<td>3,450</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Fagan's</td>
<td>3,025</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Shelby's</td>
<td>2,720</td>
<td>30,220</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

a Command very much scattered. b This force badly disorganized.
---|---|---|---
Infantry | Forney's | 3,232 |
| Parsons' | 3,300 |
| Polignac's | 2,922 |
| Churchill's | 3,710 |
| Total | 12,766 |

Artillery | Magruder | 54 |
| Wharton | do. | do. | 12 |
| Logan | do. | do. | 2 |
| Shelby | do. | do. | 4 |
| Maxey | do. | do. | 10 |
| Total | do. | do. | 82

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
No. 16. } New Orleans, January 19, 1865.

1. Company G, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, will proceed to Brashear, La., and report for duty to the commanding officer. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

2. Company H, Tenth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, will proceed to Fort Saint Philip, La., and report for duty to the commanding officer. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 19, 1865—9 a. m.

Maj. Gen. H. W. Halleck, Chief of Staff:

Three steamers left here on the 12th instant for Fort Smith with supplies for that command for about sixty days. A force was sent to occupy Dardanelle and protect the passage of the boats. They passed Dardanelle safely on the 14th instant, and have since been heard from in safety at Mulberry Creek, about twenty-five miles this side of Fort Smith. It is believed they arrived at Fort Smith safely. Our force at Dardanelle under Major Jenks, First Iowa Cavalry, was attacked on the 14th after boats had passed up. Enemy was handsomely repulsed. Our loss, 1 killed, 15 wounded. Fifteen dead rebels were left on the field; also 15 wounded. Another regiment and section of battery sent from this place are at Dardanelle, Colonel Ryan, Third Arkansas Cavalry, in command. Colonel Ryan reports yesterday 9 p. m. that enemy is assembling to renew the attack on Dardanelle, and from floating pieces of charred [wood] he supposes that one of the boats had been destroyed in returning from Fort Smith. River has fallen too much to warrant sending more boats up at present.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

Nothing new up to this hour from Dardanelle, 12 noon.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 19, 1865—4.40 p.m.

Lieutenant-Colonel Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans:

Order to send about 1,000 cavalry to Memphis received. The First Iowa Cavalry and Second Missouri Cavalry are ordered and will be put en route at once. Full report by mail.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

DARDANELLE, January 19, 1865—10 p.m.
(Via Lewisburg.)

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Little Rock:

Courier in from Colonel Judson, commanding at Clarksville, states that a force of the enemy on south bank of the river near Roseville fired upon the boats coming from Fort Smith, capturing and burning the Chippewa. The other three ran to north side of river near Ivey's Ford, more or less injured by the enemy's fire. Judson sent them assistance. Scouts report firing in that direction last evening and this a.m. Scouts report the enemy to have moved camp to within eight miles on Rocky Crossing road, having been re-enforced by Parsons, of Texas, and waiting for the co-operation of the force now engaged on the boats before attacking him. Do you wish the force here to remain longer than to insure the safe passage of the boats down river; that is, if the rebels leave any of them in a condition to run down? The river will soon be fordable above this point.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 18.

5. The Sixty-sixth Regiment U. S. Colored Infantry now at Saint Charles will proceed to Devall's Bluff, Ark., and report for temporary duty to Brigadier-General Shaler, commanding. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

12. The First Iowa Cavalry Volunteers will proceed without delay to Memphis, Tenn., and report to Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, for temporary duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

13. The detachment of Second Missouri Cavalry serving in this department will proceed without delay to Memphis, Tenn., and report to Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, for temporary duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
Major-General Reynolds,

Little Rock:

My information (which I believe to be correct) is that Brooks' command was re-enforced by Colonel Gordon with 600 men and no artillery, being detached from a command under Shelby, who was on his way to occupy Fort Smith, but turned back at Waldron. The force operating on the river is 2,000 men and two pieces of artillery.

Respectfully,

I. W. Fuller,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,

Memphis, Tenn., January 19, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,

Sir: I herewith inclose a petition presented by a number of the citizens of Memphis last night, remonstrating against the closing of the lines, and a copy of my reply. Some of the points are well taken, and doubtless there is some reason why a somewhat different policy should be adopted here, from the more rigid one found necessary in Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas; still, I would have no hope of, by any liberality or laxity of rule, coming up to the desires of hopeful traders. So long as Hood's army lies at Corinth, or is in this district, I could not counsel any relaxation, but should Major-General Thomas force him out of Corinth, south, and cover this country by his operations, I would advise that the lines be partially opened. I also inclose a letter just received from Thomas M. Redd, esq., surveyor of customs at Paducah, bearing on this same subject. There is an evident necessity for a uniformity of action at Paducah, and the District of West Tennessee. General Meredith, commanding District of Western Kentucky, headquarters at Paducah, has again sent orders, under instructions from Brevet Major-General Burbridge, to Col. J. N. McArthur, commanding at Columbus, Ky., not to obey my orders, and threatening him. To prevent collision Generals Burbridge and Meredith should be restrained by orders from the War Department.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. J. T. Dana,

Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

Memphis, Tenn., January 2, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,

Commanding Department of Mississippi:

GENERAL: Your petitioners, loyal citizens of Memphis, desirous to mitigate the sufferings of our people and to rekindle in their hearts their former "love of country," and thus add a moral victory to the brilliant successes that have recently crowned the efforts of our armies, deem it not only our privilege but duty to remonstrate against any unnecessary hardships being imposed upon them, and respectfully but urgently pray that the present orders closing the lines against the loyal residents of West Tennessee be revoked. We offer the following reasons: First. In West Tennessee there are many loyal men and women and helpless children (among them the wives, children, and parents of some of our bravest soldiers), who are thus deprived of the protection of their Government, to which they are in honor and justice entitled. Second. In the counties surrounding Memphis there are numbers of men liable to military duty in the Confederate Army who have avoided it by coming to Memphis as an asylum when Confederate conscript officers were in their neighborhood, but being destitute of means enabling them to remain here, return home as soon as it is safe to do so; hence, closing the lines to such is virtually recruiting for the Confederate Army. Third. It forces very many to come within the lines as "refugees," to remain at the expense of the Government, who could live at their homes if allowed to bring in their products and exchange them for necessary supplies. Fourth. It ignores the traditional justice and magnanimity of our Government, by adopting the too common and pernicious practice of treating all citizens of rebellious States as rebels, though they may have sacrificed their all on the altar of their country. Fifth. It indirectly annuls the instructions of the President relative to the Treasury regulations, by introducing restrictions evidently not intended by His Excellency, thus preventing large amounts of cotton from coming in that would pay a handsome revenue to the Government, and causes most that does come to do so under "special permits," the encouragement of which stops the business of legitimate merchants who only want such privileges as others equally deserving are entitled to, and encourages an odious monopoly, the promoter of extortion, fraud, and corruption. Sixth. Since the recent signal successes of our armies there can now exist no military necessity for the continuance of these orders. This petition is respectfully and hopefully presented to you, the immediate representative of our Government, in no dictatorial or fault-finding spirit, but from an earnest conviction of duty, based on a long and familiar acquaintance with the necessities and deserts of the people we represent, and an abiding faith in our national justice and liberality, as so forcibly and beautifully expressed in articles 4 and 5 of "Instructions for the government of armies of the United States in the field."

Very respectfully,

P. MILLER & CO.
WM. R. MOORE.
F. S. DAVIS,
President.
WM. H. FITCH, Jr.
L. S. KNOWLTON.
M. S. BROOKS.
I. M. HILL.
JNO. W. LEFTWICH.
R. HOUGH,
U. S. Collector.
H. F. COOPER,
U. S. Assessor.

ARTHUR W. YOUNG,
Assistant Assessor.
J. E. MERRIMAN.
F. H. CLARK.
NIXON WOOD & CO.
WM. M. FARRINGTON.
A. P. BURDETT.
LACY & McGHEE.
YEATMAN & THOMPSON.
CHAS. KORTRECHT.
GEO. W. TROTLER.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 19, 1865.

Messrs. I. M. HILL, JOHN W. LEFTWICH, and others,
Memphis, Tenn.:"
would have been more appropriate your communication should have been addressed. I shall forward it to him, with such remarks as the case appears to render necessary. I can assure you, gentlemen, that so far from wishing to impose unnecessary hardships on loyal citizens, it will always be his desire to afford them all facilities, liberties, and protection compatible with a just regard for his high duties in protecting and furthering the interests of the Government, and bringing this war to a successful close. A soldier by instinct and education, his restrictions are only such as in his judgment will be required for the public safety, and it is not to be presumed, with his superior information in that regard, he will not, in some respects, differ in opinion with those whose profession is not war, but mercantile business and trade, and whose views would necessarily be more or less molded by their habits of thought and training. I proceed to remark, briefly, on the six points you present. First. This hardship is one of the consequences of war, not of unnecessary military orders, and grieves all just men, whether civilians or soldiers. Second. The class of men alluded to will always find asylum and protection within the Union lines, and would be welcomed and applauded should they express a desire to take up arms to assist in punishing and destroying their wicked persecutors. Third. This complaint also is against the hardships of war and the acts of rebels. Fourth and fifth. I think you have fallen into error in the latter of these two. The following figures will give you better information and enable you to correct the impression that orders are issued for the purpose of annulling the President’s instructions: Up to noon of to-day the cotton-permit office had been fairly open fourteen and one-half working days, and in that time had issued 370 safeguards and permits, amounting to 38,335 bales, besides 30,150 pounds of seed cotton. I very much deprecate the tone of the assertions and argument in these clauses. Whilst I decline to enter into any expressions of opinion or discussion of the propriety of any action my superiors may think proper, or of the orders the highest officials in the land see fit to give—my duty and inclinations being only to obey—I feel bound to differ entirely with you in your conclusions. Sixth. I wish I could congratulate you on the ground that your assertion is undeniable and an axiom, and I hope very soon to be able to do so. In conclusion, I invite your special attention to Paragraphs II and VII of General Orders, No. 33,* and to latter part of Paragraph 6 to Paragraph 12 of General Orders, No. 80,† both from the headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, series of 1864.

With sentiments of respect, I remain, gentlemen, faithfully, your servant,

N. J. T. DANA,
Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

CUSTOM-HOUSE, Paducah, Ky., January 6, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.:

GENERAL: I have been thinking for some time that I would write you in reference to trade at this post, but have deferred the matter in the hope that military changes would transpire that would obviate such a thing. The trade from here to your district is very heavy at this time, all passing the picket-line at this place under permit from board of trade instituted here by the military authorities. These parties represent themselves as living in Kentucky. In this way the border counties of Tennessee, and as low down as Madison, have become vast storehouses. There is no revenue collected on the goods now going into your district under present regulations. I would respectfully ask your co-operation with me to protect the interest of the Government. It would be better far if you would open West Tennessee to trade, then we could collect some of the revenue any way. Large amount of cotton is being brought in from Tennessee without a regular permit, which the military here ought to seize, still they will not do it. Under regulations of July 29, 1864, I can only permit goods to such districts and places where the military declare actual occupation. Now, the people of your district pay no respect to any of the orders prohibiting trade in insurrectionary districts. Would it not be better, in view of all the facts, to open trade and let the Government collect the revenue she is justly entitled to?

Believing you fully comprehend my object without saying any more, I respectfully subscribe myself, yours, &c.,

THOMAS M. REDD,
Surveyor of Customs.

GENERAL ORDERS, } MISS. SQUADRON, U. S. FLAG-SHIP FAIRY,
No. 29. } Eastport, Miss., January 19, 1865.
I. So far as the provisions of the annexed General Orders, No. 1,* issued by Major-General Canby, concerns the navy, divisional and other commanding officers are hereby required to observe and enforce them.

II. Boats crossing the river at a military post are not subject to interruption by the navy.

S. P. LEE,
Acting Rear-Admiral, Commanding Mississippi Squadron.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NATCHEZ,
No. 14. } Natchez, Miss., January 19, 1865.
1. The Fifth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry will at once embark for Memphis, Tenn. Ten days' rations and forage will be issued to the regiment. All officers and enlisted men of that regiment now serving on detached service within the District of Natchez are hereby relieved, and will proceed with the regiment.

2. The Second New Jersey Cavalry, having reported for duty in this district, is hereby assigned to the command of Col. F. W. Moore, Eighty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, commanding Provisional Brigade.

3. Inclusive of his present duties Col. B. G. Farrar, Sixth U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, is assigned to the command of the post of Natchez. General Orders, No. 80, series of 1864, of Military Division of West Mississippi; circular of the Department of Mississippi of December 16, 1864; General Orders, No. 34, of 1864, of the District of Vicksburg, and the letter of Major-General Dana, of January 13, 1865, on the subject of passes and permits, are specially presented to his attention.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. W. Davidson:

B. F. MOREY,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

* See p. 400.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., January 19, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

I have the honor to report that Lieutenant Bates, Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry, in command of a scouting party from Waynesville, reports that he killed three noted guerrillas, named McCourtney, Anthony, and Stephens, and captured three horses on the Big Piney, near McCourtney's Mill.

E. B. Brown,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 19, 1865—11.45 a.m.

Brigadier-General Brown, Rolla, Mo.:

Send a few mounted men up into Maries County to look after that gang of robbers. They will have to go quietly and stay a few days so as to catch them.

G. M. Dodge,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., January 19, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge, Saint Louis:

I have no information of any robbers in Maries County. Will you please inform me what part of the county they have been operating, and how the officers in command of the scout can get a clew to their movements?

E. B. Brown,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

KANSAS CITY, January 19, 1865.

Colonel Philips, Commanding:

Scouting parties just returned report bushwhackers cleared out as far south on the line of Cass and as far east as the line of La Fayette, in the neighborhood of Pink Hills, and thence to the Missouri. I intend to send Wyckoff to the country near Pink Hills, the runway of the bushwhackers of Clay County, and on this side. Three bushmen reported to have been seen near Mr. Santafee's with four men. All the tri-monthlies ready to-morrow.

Chester Harding,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., January 19, 1865.

General J. B. Sanborn, Springfield:

Please inform me by telegraph the names of the guerrillas captured in a cave. There is important testimony said to be on file in the provost-marshal's office in this district against some of them.

E. B. Brown,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.
Hon. E. M. Stanton,
Secretary of War:
The renewal of hostilities by the Indians on our frontier and on the telegraph and mail line west calls for more troops. Can you send at least one regiment of cavalry to our aid at once?

A. SAUNDERS,
Governor.
A. S. PADDOCK,
Secretary.
O. P. MASON,
President of Council.
S. M. KIRKPATRICK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Nebraska.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., January 19, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER AT FORT LYON, COLO. TER.:
Sir: The colonel commanding desires me to inform you that Brigadier-General Mitchell, commanding District of Nebraska, is now organizing a command at Cottonwood Station, on the Overland line, to strike the Indians congregated in that section of country. It is very probable that they may be driven down your way, so that you will by a careful scouting party inform yourself of their movements and be ready to strike them on their approach. They are making serious trouble on the Overland line, and it is possible that they may come this way, in which case you will be notified. The colonel commanding also directs that you keep constant communication with Camp Fillmore and these headquarters, and that you also keep your command compactly together, so as to be able to move to any point at a moment's warning.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
IRA I. TABER,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fe, N. Mex., January 19, 1865.

1. In order to have all the troops which can be spared from other necessary duties in a position in time to assist during the approaching spring and summer in making the routes safe leading from New Mexico to the Arkansas River, the following is ordered, viz: The company of the Fifth U. S. Infantry now at Fort Wingate, Company L, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, now at Fort Sumner, and Company C of that regiment, now at Fort Bascom, will without delay take post at Fort Union. Company M, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, will for the present remain at Fort Bascom. The commanding officer of Franklin, Tex., will send a portion of Company C, First Cavalry California Volunteers, under an energetic officer to San Elizario, Tex., to relieve at that outpost Company F, First Cavalry California Volunteers, which will then march to Las Cruces, N. Mex. Here this company will be joined by Captain Ffrench's company, First Veteran Infantry California Volunteers, when the two, under the command of Captain Ffrench, will proceed to Fort McRae. Here Captain Ffrench's company will receive the horses, horse equipments, and revolvers now in the possession of Captain Ayres' company, First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers, and Captain Ffrench will relieve Major Willis, First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers, in the command of Fort McRae. Major Willis, with Ayres' and Stombs' companies, will then march without delay to Fort Craig. Here Captain Stombs' company will take post. Company H, First Cavalry California Volunteers, and Company E, First Infantry New Mexico Volunteers, will there join Major Willis' command and proceed with it to Fort Union, N. Mex. Captain Burkett's company, First Veteran Infantry, will proceed to Fort Cummings, N. Mex., where it will relieve Captain Cooke's company [First] New Mexico Volunteers. Major Shaw, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, will with this latter company march to Los Pinos, N. Mex. He himself will then proceed to Fort Wingate and relieve Major Eaton in the command of that post. Major Eaton on being relieved will proceed to Los Pinos, and then march with Cooke's company to Fort Union. Ffrench and Burkett will each leave one of his officers at Las Cruces on recruiting service. The officers of the First Veteran Infantry California Volunteers and the First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers will use every endeavor to fill up the ranks of those regiments as rapidly as possible, as many of the companies will be required for active service upon the plains. The chief quartermaster will give directions with reference to the necessary transportation for these movements.

* * * * *

By command of Brigadier-General Carleton:

ERASTUS W. WOOD,
Aide-de-Camp.

U. S. S. Choctaw, Bayou Sara, January 20, 1865.

Major-General Canby,
Commanding Military Division of West Mississippi:

Sir: In your communication of the 17th instant you state that there are a number of plantations along the river cultivated by "freed labor" under the orders of the commander of the Department of the Gulf. That there are "plantations worked by freed labor" I know, but that they are under the orders of or in any way controlled by the commander of the department is new to me. They cannot be visited without an armed force, and I am sure that any supplies landed for such plantations are immediately sold, or the greater part of them, to the highest bidder. If there are deserving people outside the lines of military occupation, which I doubt, it would be much better that supplies should go through the military posts, for if landings can be made at any point there is no telling what will be landed; for instance, the goods lately seized at Brulé Landing. There are not gun-boats enough to cover the landings, there being but four to patrol a distance of 130 miles. Article 38 of the Treasury Regulations, of July 29, 1864, seems to refer to plantations within our lines. Those in this district cannot be considered as such, although, as you say, they have heretofore been permitted to ship their products and receive their supplies. It was upon my understanding of the new trade regulations, and a conversation I had with you about a month ago on this subject, that I gave orders to prevent the landing of plantation supplies and the shipping of products except on regular permits from O. N. Cutler. I wrote Admiral Lee a letter on this subject two weeks since, and hope to get an answer by next mail.

Very respectfully,

JNO. J. CORNWELL,

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., January 20, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 20th day of January, 1865: A report from Lieut. J. M. Haff, Thibodeaux, January 18, 1865, states that four deserters came within the Federal lines on the 15th instant and made the following statements: Brig. Gen. Joseph Brent commands the rebel forces on the Lower Teche, headquarters at Bayou Bourbeau, six miles from Opelousas. His command consists of a regiment of cavalry (ten companies) and two independent companies, stationed, respectively, at Franklin and Fausse Pointe. These troops have not been paid in two years, and very much discontent exists among them. They talk freely of deserting. They state that there is no artillery this side of Opelousas, and they think none this side of Alexandria. Eighteen deserters came into Donaldsonville on the 17th instant. Captain Frederick H. Man, Morganza, La., in a communication, dated January 18, states that the Third Arkansas Cavalry (rebel) are on this side the Atchafalaya near Morganza, and that there are indications of an increase of the rebel force in that vicinity. His former reports of the position of rebel troops have been confirmed by deserters and prisoners. A further examination of the deserter Lars Larsendiscloses the fact that there are four gun-boats in and around Galveston Bay, viz., the Colonel Still, mounting two guns; the Diana, well armed; the Bayou City, mounting two guns, and the John F. Carr. There is a small supply boat (the Island City) in the bay. There is at the mouth of the Brazos River a stern-wheel steamer, the Lucy Gwin, and at Sabine the Josiah H. Bell, mounting one 32-pounder and two mountain howitzers (6-pounders).

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

GENERAL ORDERS, War Dept., Adjt. General’s Office,

The Territory of Arizona is reannexed to the Department of the Pacific, under the command of Major-General McDowell, headquarters at San Francisco, Cal.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 20, 1865.

Commanding Officer at Plaquemine:

General Ullmann telegraphs from Morganza that a large force is approaching your position. Throw out your scouts to watch their movements, and keep all the rest of your force in hand to meet any event in the defense of your position. Telegraph direct and immediately to these headquarters all the information you gain of the enemy's movement, if there be any enemy.

T. W. Sherman,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

V. Commanding officer First Brigade, First Division, Seventh Army Corps, will report with his brigade without delay to Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr for temporary duty.

VII. Commanding officer First Iowa Cavalry Volunteers will report with his regiment without delay to Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr for temporary duty.

VIII. Commanding officer First Missouri Cavalry Volunteers will report with his regiment without delay to Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr for temporary duty.

IX. Commanding officer Twenty-fifth Ohio Battery will report with his battery without delay to Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr for temporary duty.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

John Levering,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

The early completion of the works laid out for the defenses of the post makes it necessary that every officer and soldier when detailed should use his best endeavors to hasten the progress. There is just so much to do, and all will have to contribute their services until completed, whether it occupies a week or a year. In this work, as in all of the soldier's duties, a cheerful and willing obedience to the orders of superior authority is essential and should be given unasked. Reports given in to these headquarters justify the belief that some of the officers in charge of the details have so far forgotten themselves and their duties as to allow the men under them to idle away their time and even refuse to require a proper application on the part of the men to their work. Such conduct is not only delaying the work, but damaging to the officer's reputation as a soldier and destructive to discipline and good order among the troops. Of course such conduct will not be tolerated. Hereafter the details at each fort and on the road will be under the charge of the senior officer present. Those on the forts will receive their instructions through Lieutenant Daly, and that on the road through Lieutenant Moran. These senior officers of the parties will be held responsible for the conduct of the officers and men in their [charge], and will promptly report in writing to these headquarters any neglect or incompetency on the part of the officers under them, in order that the cases may be investigated. In making the details at regimental headquarters a captain will be selected for each party with reference to his efficiency. The other officers will be lieutenants. These captains will remain on duty for the whole day, and designate the moment at which the details may leave off work, observing the provisions of General Orders, No. 9, from these headquarters, 18th instant.

By order of Brig. Gen. Alex. Shaler:

CHAS. E. HOWE,

HDQRS. CAVALRY DEPOT, DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Decatur's Bluff, Ark., January 20, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. R. WEST,

GENERAL: Your orders concerning the Second Missouri Cavalry have been received through General Shaler. Details have been ordered to report to their command, and the commanding officer ordered to have the regiment with arms, accouterments, &c., ready for the move immediately.

L. GREGG,
Colonel, Commanding Depot.

MEMPHIS, TENN., January 20, 1865.

Col. E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Information was received here on the 16th instant by General M. L. Smith, commanding, which he deemed reliable, that on the 13th part of the troops of the rebel Generals Lee and Howard [Hardee or Hood?] were at Oxford, Tenn., where re-enforcements were constantly arriving by rail from Grenada. Troops were moving out of Oxford toward Holly Springs, where the informant saw three regiments of rebel cavalry. Troops were also leaving Holly Springs on two roads leading toward this place. Twenty-one pieces of artillery were at Holly Springs with the rebel troops. A part of Forrest's force had moved from Corinth to Moscow. On the 13th Forrest was at Jacinto, and was said to have had an interview with Dick Taylor at Grenada on the 14th. Information goes to show that the rebel Generals Archer, Dick Taylor, Chalmers, and Lowry were absent with the troops mentioned. General Smith had probably received a dispatch from General Washburn dated on the 13th, twenty miles below Eastport, on the Tennessee River, directing him to look for an attack in force, from Forrest, and at one time, on the 14th and 15th, everything indicated a large concentration of rebel forces at this point. General Smith had made the best disposition of his forces to meet the attack, and with the re-enforcements he received from the mouth of White River he had no fears of the result. With the exception of an attack upon one of the scouting parties this morning no demonstrations have as yet been made upon this place, and from all the information that General Smith can get he is of the opinion that the rebel forces alluded to are moving by way of Tusculum toward General Sherman's communications, and that they number, when united with Forrest's troops, about 20,000. As the forces garrisoning Columbus and Paducah are very small, General Smith sends to-day 1,300 men to those points. They will arrive to-morrow night.

R. B. MARCY,
Inspector-General U. S. Army.

Special Orders, Headquarters Saint Louis District, Saint Louis, Mo., January 30, 1865.

2. Company D, Second Missouri State Militia Cavalry, will be at once relieved at Farmington and ordered to Cape Girardeau, to report to Col. J. B. Rogers, commanding Second Sub-District.

3. Commanding officer Second Sub-District will at once relieve Company A, Fiftieth Missouri Volunteers, at Charleston, with a company of cavalry, under the command of an efficient officer.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,

Pilot Knob, January 30, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sixty mounted men left Patterson and fifty Centerville this morning to unite near Van Buren, and will go into Oregon County, returning if the officers in command think best. The Patterson party will go into Ripley and Butler Counties and the Centerville party through Shannon County.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,
Colonel, Commanding.

St. Louis, January 30, 1865—11.30 a. m.

Colonel ROGERS,
Cape Girardeau:

Allow no military force to go into Illinois for any purpose except upon my order, and under no circumstances allow any military force to go over there to interfere in case of Ruby or Roby.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

(Same to commanding officers at Pilot Knob and Sainte Genevieve.)

Headquarters District of Rolla, Rolla, January 20, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis:

GENERAL: Permit me to ask your attention to the necessity of mounting, as soon as practicable, the Thirteenth Missouri Volunteer Cav-
There are about 500 serviceable horses in this district, a number entirely insufficient for the service required in it. The daily guards for the mails, escorts for trains, and other immediate special duties employs all the mounted men in the northern part of the district, leaving the entire southern counties open to the enemy's prowling bands. There is sufficient corn in the southern counties to forage as many troops as it would be necessary to send there, so that but little or any additional forage would be required at this post. I hear there are small bands of guerrillas prowling about, and the number will probably increase and thus endanger our trains unless active scouting can be done.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

Headquarters District of Rolla,
Rolla, January 20, 1865.

Sergt. HENRY GIINTER,
Fifth Missouri State Militia Cavalry:

SERGEANT: You will proceed quietly with your detachment of ten men to the bend of the Gasconade River, near Vienna, Maries County, Mo., and remain in that vicinity as much as possible unobserved by the people, except when necessary to ask for information, and, if possible, destroy or capture a gang of robbers or guerrillas infesting that county, and stopping in the bend above mentioned. You will return with your detachment within six days from this date, and report your success to these headquarters.

By order of the general commanding:

Very respectfully,

W. D. HUBBARD,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters District of Central Missouri,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 20, 1865.

WILLIAM MULLINS, Esq.,
Henry County, Mo.:

SIR: It having been represented to these headquarters that your neighborhood is being subjected to raids by an organized band of thieves and marauders, who make their descent in the night from Kansas on your neighbors, and rob, pillage, and murder them, and that you are peaceable, quiet, and well-behaved citizens, and being far removed from any military post, thus leaving you completely at the hands of these brigands and outlaws, you are therefore and hereby authorized to organize the following-named citizens of that locality into a provisional company to protect your lives and property against these bands and all similar ones under whatever name, profession, or color they may come, viz: R. P. Blivins, Jacob Armstrong, N. J. Dunn, George Hungerford, M. J. Elder, John B. Elber, Michael Shatley, William Childress, Jonah Fitzgerald, John Fitzgerald, Moses Gallif, and Ab. Colson. You will have command of this organization and can establish your rendezvous, signals, rallying points, and such rules for your government as may be expedient and necessary. You and your company are authorized to bear arms for the purpose above set forth, and I will approve permits for you to purchase arms and ammunition. Impress upon your organization the object of this permission, and that it must not be abused or carried beyond its authorized powers. You will make frequent reports to these headquarters of your operations and keep the authorities fully advised.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

Headquarters District of Central Missouri,
Warrensburg, January 20, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding,
Commanding Fourth Sub-District, Kansas City, Mo.:

Colonel: Complaint has frequently been made to me by good Union men of Jackson County that self-constituted parties of men, claiming to be loyal, are greatly abusing and imposing on many quiet citizens of that county. Among these the following names have been reported: William Webster, Jim Reed, Daniel Quarles. These men probably once belonged to the Enrolled Militia and continue to wear their uniform, bear arms, and go out of their own motion, under the guise of hunting bushwhackers, and interfere with and pillage unarmed, well-behaved citizens. Such men are brigands, and not to be tolerated. I prefer to have no outsiders in our employ. We can do best with men organized. If these men wish to play soldier, let them join the army and they shall have ample scope and range to show their patriotism. You will stop their operations at once, and if necessary arrest them. You will doubtless find your district much annoyed by organized bands of horse-thieves hovering about the border. Deal with them with vigor and firmness. Such outrages must be stopped to encourage immigration and agriculture. I intrust to your good judgment and policy this means of correcting these wrongs.

I am, colonel, very truly, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.

Cassville, Mo., January 20, 1865.

Brigadier-General Sanborn:

Major Moore has returned. Had good luck, and his scout killed eleven rebels and captured some property without any loss on his part. The train to Cassville will be sufficiently guarded, but the escort from that place will be sent on to Fayetteville.

JOHN H. MOORE,
Captain and Post Adjutant.

Headquarters District of North Missouri,
January 20, 1865—4.25 p.m.

 Lieutenant Clarke,
Aide-de-Camp, Macon, Mo.:

I shall arrange for Colonel Beveridge to command the district in my absence. Inter nos.

CLINTON B. FISK,
Brigadier-General.
SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
No. 15. } Macon, Mo., January 20, 1865.

Companies F, G, K, and L, of Third Cavalry Missouri State Militia, will be concentrated at Macon, Mo., on or before the 25th day of January, 1865, for the purpose of being mustered out of service. Quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,

FORT LEAVENWORTH, January 20, 1865.

Major REYNOLDS,
Wyandotte:
Two pieces of artillery and one company of cavalry will be in Wyandotte at 5 o'clock. Have your troops in line and fire a Federal salute on the arrival of the train, and one to-morrow on its departure, and report by telegram.

THOS. A. DAVIES,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, Kans., January 20, 1865.

Sergt. D. C. NETTLETON,
Commanding Indian Scouts:
I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 14th instant. I inclose for your information and guidance the following extracts from report of commanding officer of Fort Lyon, Colo. Ter.:

No Indians have appeared in this immediate vicinity, yet two bands have crossed the Arkansas River near the Cimarron Crossing, traveling northward. One party attacked a small party of whites returning from New Mexico, wounding six. The particulars I have not learned. Ed. Currier, who was in the Cheyenne camp at the time it was attacked by Colonel Chivington on the 29th of November, has returned, and reports the Indians have moved from their camp on the Smoky Hill, and to have made camp again on Beaver Creek, more to the north, and about 170 miles from this post. They are about the same in number as previous reports have stated, viz, 1,080 lodges of Sioux, 400 lodges of Cheyennes, and 40 Arapahoes. This would give them about 2,500 fighting men. The trails that have crossed to the north were leading toward their camp, and must have been made by Little Raven's band of Arapahoes or by the Kiowas and Comanches. Black Kettle, Little Koke, and Knock Knoe, who were reported killed, are at the main camp alive and well. Captain Sonle has just returned from a scout about fifty miles to the north and east. He visited the camp on Sand Creek, where Colonel Chivington attacked them. No Indians had been there since Colonel Chivington left.

The colonel commanding directs me to state that it is his wish that you should remain in and around Fort Larned, scouting thoroughly in all directions, reporting often to these headquarters.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

NATIONAL HOTEL, Washington, D. C., January 20, 1865.

Major-General CURTIS,
Commanding Department of Kansas:

Sir: As I telegraphed you, I came to this place a week ago. When I arrived I found yours of the 17th lying here. I found the Secretary of War gone to Savannah. He has just returned. Our delegate, Judge Bennett, and Mr. Otis, of the Overland Stage Line, returned a few days ago from a visit to General Grant in reference to our matters on the plains. He made some recommendations, but it is not known what, upon which the Secretary of War has concluded to wait until he comes up, which, it is said, will be in a few days. In this state of affairs and delay it is difficult to move. The excitement in reference to Colonel Chivington's attack upon the Indians near Fort Lyon is much in the way of doing anything. General Connor has made some recommendations to the Department in regard to the defense of our line of communication, which it is rumored will be acted upon soon. In the meantime I trust our people will have been relieved of their terrible isolation by the troops you have sent forward, and that the line of communication will soon be open for their relief. Please inform me by telegram the situation and prospects upon receipt of this, and very greatly oblige me.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. EVANS,
Governor of Colorado Territory.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 6.

HDQRS. DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., January 20, 1865.

As there seems to be a collision between the civil and military authorities regarding the rights of citizens and soldiers, and as the civil officers throughout the Territory seem efficient and capable of enforcing the laws thereof and city ordinances, the general order issued by the former district commander establishing martial law is hereby amended and modified as follows:

1. All officers and soldiers in this district are amenable to the civil laws of the land and the regulations and ordinances by which an incorporated city is governed. The fact of being in the military service is no warrant or authority to trespass on the rights and privileges of loyal citizens of the Government; but, on the contrary, military men should be models of subordination and obedience to recognized laws and orders, and should they by mistake or through ignorance violate the rules laid down for our guidance in the daily walks of life, they ought to be the first to make and show due penitence. All true soldiers will.

2. When an officer or soldier is arrested by the civil authority for violation of law and order he is clearly entitled to a fair and impartial trial before the proper tribunal, and the trial should be [immediate], that the country may not be deprived of his services. It is to be hoped that the civil officers will be as lenient and obliging as circumstances will permit, yet firm and equitable in their decisions. Military law at best is arbitrary, and the colonel commanding has been induced to make these modifications through a desire to harmonize and blend together the civil and military powers; yet he does not yield his right to act when in his judgment the civil officers are defied by lawless marauders, or when the interests of the Government are at stake.

By order of Col. T. Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry:

IRA I. TABER,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Brig. Gen. J. A. Rawlins,
*Chief of Staff, City Point, Va.:

Send to General Halleck the reports of General Curtis and General Connor on the subject of requirements for protection of Overland Mail Route.

U. S. Grant,
Lieutenant-General.

---

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Assistant Inspector-General,
New Orleans, La., January 21, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
*Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sir: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the information of the major-general commanding the following report of the Enrolled Militia at Memphis: On the 9th of December, 1864, this militia force numbered in the aggregate 2,445 men, of whom 1,319 were armed. On the 15th of December, 1864, a board of examiners was ordered, and all former exemptions and excuses revoked. This board has already added three new regiments to the previous forces and filled the old ones nearly to the maximum. The organization now is composed of seven regiments and two battalions of infantry and two squadrons of cavalry, numbering in the aggregate 6,941. Arrangements have been made to have them all armed by the 20th instant. The arms are in good condition, as in most regiments they employ hired armormen for the sole purpose of keeping the muskets in order. There is a good prospect of bringing this militia force up to 7,000 men. General Dana has been earnest and active, and in this as in all else connected with affairs of his department he has displayed great energy and ability.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOHN M. WILSON,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General.

---

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Assistant Inspector-General,
New Orleans, La., January 21, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
*Assistant Adjutant-General:

Sir: I have the honor to report for the information of the major-general commanding the condition of the Department of Arkansas as reported by the assistant inspector-general. In the vicinity of Little Rock Major Nelson states the camps to be in an excellent state of police and the men looking well, the troops nearly all huted, and the building of the huts of a superior character. The prisons are reported as under good management, clean, and convenient. The hospitals are in tolerable condition. At Devall's Bluff affairs are generally in good order, the infantry regiments doing well, drilling, studying, &c. The batteries are also improving, except Battery D, Second Missouri, a special report in reference to which I have made. The duties of the quartermaster, commissary, and provost-marshal are reported as well done. The Second Division, Seventh Army Corps, are garrisoning this post and Pine Bluff, and have been working hard repairing roads, building fortifications, &c. The average sick in the division is 9\% per cent. The Cavalry Division is divided into four brigades. Of the First Brigade the inspector writes as follows: This brigade is under a cloud, and requires the immediate attention of a firm, vigorous, and vigilant commander to bring it out of the difficulties which envelop it, and save the available portion from becoming a positive injury to the service. The affairs of the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry are in the utmost confusion. Serious charges have been made against every field officer in the regiment whose official conduct has been under investigation. The quartermaster has been found guilty of selling Government property and appropriating the proceeds; the company kitchens of several squadrons were filthy, the rations squandered; the men complained of the smallness of the ration, while officers were found messing with them; arms and equipments were in a dirty and disorderly condition; discipline bad; personal cleanliness, dirty. The following-named officers mess with enlisted men, in defiance of orders from brigade headquarters to the contrary: Capt. E. Brown, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry; Lieut. N. E. Orton, Lieut. W. E. Sparrow, Lieut. W. B. Barton, Lieut. T. L. Bailey. The Seventh Missouri Cavalry is in bad condition on account of lack of officers; with 296 enlisted men there were but three officers for duty. The detachments of the Fifth Kansas are in a neglected, inefficient state. The detachment of the First Indiana Cavalry was in very poor condition. The commanding officer, Capt. James A. Pine, reports that the men receive only one-quarter rations of rice, beans, or hominy, and that the hard bread is wormy. Captain Pine is reported as inefficient and incompetent, and the irregularities in the command are mainly to be charged to his neglect of duty. This brigade numbers 1,000 men present for duty, 173 of whom are on extra duty. There are only 396 serviceable horses. The Second Cavalry Brigade, commanded by General Bussey, is composed of consolidated and broken regiments. The First Missouri is without a field officer. It needs a thorough efficient officer in command; its affairs run too loosely entirely. The Fourth Arkansas Cavalry is steadily improving. The First Iowa Cavalry is without its complement of officers. One company has been commanded by a private, there not being even a non-commissioned officer present. The duties of Captain Jenks, commanding, are very laborious. The stables are poorly policed. The arms of the Third Missouri are not in as good condition as they should be, and the men are dirty. The Third U. S. Cavalry is in good condition.

The Third Cavalry Brigade is under the command of Colonel Geiger, at Brownsville. The Eighth Missouri and Tenth Illinois are reported in fine condition. The Ninth Iowa is reported in tolerable condition, but the men look dirty, and the officers allow too much familiarity with the enlisted men. In enforcing discipline the smaller offenses are tried by a field officers' court, but heavier crimes have gone unpunished from the difficulty in getting the offenders before a court-martial. In this regiment offenders have escaped punishment who were charged with desertion, sleeping on post, theft, and mutinous conduct. Courts are now being organized. The Eleventh Missouri Cavalry is reported in tolerable condition. They complain bitterly of their arms (the Merrill carbine), and state Merrill's cartridge-box to be a nuisance that the service should be rid of. They are now being armed with the Sharps carbines. The Fourth Brigade is much scattered. The Third Michigan, at Brownsville Station, stands very well in everything pertaining to its general police, but its discipline and steadiness in the field hardly stand as high as it does in other respects. The Ninth Kansas, from the want of thorough discipline, is in the field more like a band of independent rangers than a compact body of soldiers. In regard to military bearing, instruction, drill, care of horses, police, and personal cleanliness it is far below the standard of good soldiers. The Third Wisconsin Cavalry is reported generally in good condition. The Third Arkansas Cavalry is on outpost duty at Lewisburg. Since it has been there, in different skirmishes, the regiment has killed about 500 of the enemy. They have suffered much from the want of forage. The records of my office will afford particulars in reference to any regiment or supply department, works of defense, &c., in the Department of Arkansas except the District of the Frontier, which is now being evacuated.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. WILSON,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., January 31, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 21st day of January, 1865: J. D. Howell, a refugee, left Mobile December 27, 1864. States that a part of Forrest's cavalry (about 2,200 men), under Actg. Brig. Gen. Robert McCulloch, with three small pieces of artillery (6-pounders), and Col. John Scott's command, from Clinton, Miss. (composed of from 1,200 to 1,500 cavalry), armed with Sharps rifles and navy revolvers, and Colonel Maury's regiment of cavalry (numbering 1,200 men), composed of citizens of Mobile and vicinity, armed with miscellaneous weapons and very inefficient, are on the Pascagoula road facing and watching General Granger. McCulloch's command, 2,200; Scott's command, 1,350; Maury's command, 1,200; total, 4,750. The horses of these commands are in extremely bad condition, and the men are supplied with only about one-quarter rations. Colonel Fuller commands the artillery defending Mobile. The most important battery is a naval battery called the Missouri Battery, situated on the point just below the site of the old light-house. This battery mounts nine guns (7-inch) and is commanded by Captain Bennett, late of the U.S. Navy. The rebel gun-boats are the Nashville, Huntsville, Tuscaloosa, and Morgan. The Nashville is a powerful side-wheel boat, at least equal to the ram Tennessee (captured last August); is 268 feet long, 75 feet beam, carries the best engines (two in number) in the Confederacy, and runs twelve or fifteen miles an hour. She mounts ten guns—two bow guns, throwing 210-pound shot, and eight 7-inch rifles. The missile used is called the "punch-headed shot." The iron plating of the boat is about six inches thick from the bow back to the wheel-house, formed of transverse bars six inches wide by three inches thick. Her crew numbers 250. The Tuscaloosa and Huntsville, which are floating batteries rather than gun-boats, run only about four miles an hour. They mount four guns each. Torpedoes, containing each 100 pounds of powder, are planted across the mouth of Dog River, and thence at an angle of 90 degrees to the middle channel of the bay, a distance of one miles and a half. They are also planted up the Dog River to within fifty yards of the ferry. Mr. Howell (the informant) assisted in planting 200 of these torpedoes, and is willing to point out their locality. There are three blockade-runners (the Red Gauntlet, Virgin, and Mary), armed with 12 and 18 pounder howitzers, in Mobile Bay used as picket-boats. The water on the western side of the bay is becoming more shallow on account of the obstructions, and there is a greater depth of water on the eastern side from the same cause. About the 6th instant Mr. Howell saw thirty luggers, of between three and five tons burden, in Louisiana Marsh, bound out. They are loaded with flannel, coffee, spirits, medicines, &c. They visit Ocean Springs, Biloxi, Shieldstone, Pass Christian, and Bay, &c.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, January 21, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that I left Lakeport on the 16th instant on U. S. steamer Planter. Arrived at Fort Morgan on the evening of the 17th, and successfully repaired the telegraph cable on the 18th instant, putting in 200 feet of new cable. I returned on the U. S. tug Blossom, inspecting the line in process of construction to Ship Island. The land portion is completed to Bayou Biloxi. The marsh is much softer than I supposed. Many of the poles require cross-pieces spiked on at the ground to prevent them from sinking out of sight. On account of the bad weather, two days' lost time by the Mexican Gulf Railroad failing to furnish a train for poles as agreed, &c., the progress of the line has not been as great as I had hoped.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. G. FULLER,
Captain and Assistant Quartermaster, Assistant Superintendent.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 21, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER DONALDSONVILLE:

General Ullmann telegraphs from Morganza that a large rebel force is approaching Plaquemine and the La Fourche country from the Atchafalaya fords. You will at once send a party of cavalry toward Bayou Goula to watch the approaches from that direction. Keep a bright lookout; have your fort in good order, and hold your men well in hand in case of an attack. Report anything you may be able to learn in reference to their numbers, destination, or probable route, to these headquarters without delay.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
PLAQUEMINE, January 21, 1865.
(Received 5 p.m.)

Brigadier-General SHERMAN,
Commanding Defenses:

Sir: Your dispatch of the 20th is received. Nothing has occurred, and I have the scouts out, &c.

RICH'D G. SHAW,
Major, Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 21, 1865.

Commanding Officer PLAQUEMINE:

General Ullmann telegraphs from Morganza that a large rebel force is approaching Plaquemine from the Atchafalaya fords. You will at once send out a force of cavalry to watch these fords. Send out some good, trusty men in different directions as scouts to find out something of their numbers, destination, and by what route they are coming. Report anything you may be able to learn in reference to them to these headquarters without delay. Hold your men well in hand and give them a warm reception should they attack you.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 21, 1865.

Colonel SAYLES,
Commanding, Napoleonville:

A large rebel force is reported as approaching the La Fourche country from the Atchafalaya fords above Plaquemine. Should they pass Donaldsonville and attempt an attack upon Napoleonville you will be ready to receive them. This report comes through General Ullmann, at Morganza.

By command of Brigadier-General Cameron:

B. B. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 21, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

Sir: The major-general commanding directs that an infantry force of 3,000 men be detached from the Department of Arkansas for service in the field. The necessary orders will accordingly be given with the least possible delay, and the force sent to this place to report to the major-general commanding the division. This force is not intended to include the Twenty-third Wisconsin and the Ninety-sixth Ohio Regiments, both of which (or their equivalents) should also be sent to this place as early as possible.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 20.

Little Rock, Ark., January 21, 1865.

II. Capt. J. B. Wheeler, chief engineer, will furnish to Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr a sufficient pontoon train for the expedition now organizing, to report as early as possible.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Little Rock, January 21, 1865—9.45 a.m.

General A. Shaler, Devall's Bluff:

Please make arrangements for boats to recall Colonel Geiger. Two will be preferable to cross him, both at Augusta and West Point. Let me know what you can do and I will send the orders to you.

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General.

Little Rock, January 21, 1865—12.45 p.m.

General Shaler, Devall's Bluff:

Please send the Ella to Colonel Geiger to carry out the movement indicated in the accompanying dispatch to him. The boat will need a guard. Be good enough to let me know when she has started for Augusta.

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General.

[Inclosure.]

Little Rock, January 21, 1865—12.45 p.m.

Colonel Geiger, Augusta:

(Care General A. Shaler, Devall's Bluff.)

You will return with your command to Brownsville by easy marches. The steamer that carries this dispatch to you will be at your service for crossing the White and Little Red Rivers, meeting you at such point on the latter as you may direct.

J. R. WEST,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Hdqrs. Second Division, Seventh Army Corps, Devall's Bluff, Ark., January 21, 1865—10.45 a.m.

Brigadier-General West, Little Rock:

The Ella has this moment returned from Colonel Geiger and brings the accompanying dispatch* to Lieutenant Martin. I can send the Ella to recross the cavalry. She is the only boat available.

ALEX. SHALER,
Brigadier-General.

*Not found.
HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 21, 1865—3.45 p. m.

Brigadier-General CLAYTON,
Pine Bluff, Ark.:

You will hold in readiness to move all the force that can be spared to move in your front from Pine Bluff, and cause it to be reported to Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr on his arrival at Pine Bluff, which will be on the 24th instant. The Seventh Missouri Cavalry will turn over all its serviceable horses to the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry. The Seventh will be held in readiness to move to Little Rock for remount.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General, Commanding.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., January 21, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds: Am I to infer from your dispatch that I am to turn over to General Carr any infantry force? If so, two regiments can be spared. My effective cavalry force is but 222, but if required can spare them.

Respectfully,

POWELL CLAYTON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

DARDANELLE, January 21, 1865—12 m.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds, Little Rock:

The enemy declines attacking and I think has retraced his steps southward. At 4 o'clock this a.m. sent Captain Hamilton with sixty mounted men of the Third Arkansas Cavalry to Ivey's Ford to ascertain condition of transports and cover any one of them down if in condition to run. Sent fifty infantry twelve miles on same road as support. Also 150 infantry and one piece of artillery, under Lieutenant-Colonel Cooper to Chickalah to draw attention from Hamilton. The infantry and artillery to return to-night. Hamilton to return on north side of river, if he finds the enemy in force on south side. River falling, with three feet of water on bar. Troops getting along well.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

HDQRS. FRONTIER DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
Fort Smith, Ark., January 21, 1865.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Arkansas:

Sir: Upon receiving intelligence that the enemy had attacked the boats at Ivey's Ford, forty-seven miles below here, I immediately sent two regiments of colored troops (they not having left) with one piece of artillery, under command of Col. J. M. Williams, down on the south side of the river, with instructions to keep the river clear of the enemy. I sent one regiment down on the north side with a train. The three regiments comprise all the colored troops there were here.

Very respectfully,

JOHN M. THAYER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.
Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby,
Comdg. Mil. Div. of West Mississippi, New Orleans, La.:

GENERAL: I request that the Indian Territory be made a separate geographical command, district, or department, for the following reasons: The three Indian regiments in the Federal service as home guards, for the protection of the loyal element in the Indian Nation, when the white troops retreated from the Indian Nation in July, 1862, were left at Baxter's Springs, on its northern border, except the First Regiment, which retreated to Le Roy, Kans. Under orders from General Blunt, commanding Department of Kansas, I marched the Second and Third Regiments and section of the First Kansas Battery with it to Carthage, Mo., in September, 1862; and, with the Kansas division, these regiments did efficient service in that fall campaign. After the battle of Prairie Grove Major-General Schofield, commanding the army, detached the three Indian regiments (the First Regiment also having rejoined) and added to them part of the Sixth Kansas and Hopkins' battery, and made it once more a separate command in the field, directing that it be employed for its original and legitimate purpose. Leaving their homes exposed, the men of these regiments had cheerfully partaken in the campaign, although out of their own country. January 13, 1863, I received from Major-General Curtis, commanding Department of the Missouri, the command of the two districts of Western Arkansas and of the Indian Nation (Eighth and Ninth), which I held until June of said year, when the districts of General Schofield and General Blunt were extended to the Arkansas River, throwing my command in the Indian Nation into the District of Kansas. These district orders, I submit, merely affected me personally and did not change the separate character of the Indian command, which never has been changed. I was directed by Major-General Curtis, when department commander, to carry out the instructions of the Secretary of the Interior and Indian Commissioner which were sent to me from time to time. When the Indian Nation was attached to the Department of Arkansas there seemed to be some misunderstanding as to the purposes and character of the command. When I left Fort Smith recently I understood that my command would be again defined as a separate command in orders. I have just received a notification to forward all court-martial cases to Fort Smith. I make the recommendation believing that it is for the interests of the Government, the benefit of the loyal Indians, and essential to carry out the purposes for which this command was created. I do not deem it necessary to multiply the other numerous reasons which might be alleged for the request which I desire to bring to your attention.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel Third Indian Regiment, Comdg. Indian Brigade.

[January 21, 1865.—For George H. Thomas to Dana, in regard to operations of Hood's army, see Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 626.]
Headquarters District of Natchez,
Natchez, Miss., January 21, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Mil. Div. of West Miss., New Orleans, La.:

SIR: Consequent to my communication of date the 7th instant, asking that a regiment of cavalry might be sent to this district, I have the honor to report the arrival from Memphis of the Second New Jersey Cavalry, and the departure for Memphis of the Fifth Illinois Cavalry, each in compliance with orders from the major-general commanding the Department of Mississippi.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. W. DAVIDSON,
Brigadier-General.

Special Orders,
Headquarters Dept. of the Missouri,
No. 21,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 21, 1865.

5. Companies D and E, Thirty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteers, will forthwith report for duty to Col. E. A. Kutzner, commanding at Glasgow, in the District of North Missouri. Colonel Kutzner is hereby authorized to mount these companies from the contraband stock in his possession, in order that they may be used as cavalry in scouting and hunting down guerrillas in that neighborhood. The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation to Glasgow.

By command of Major-General Dodge:
J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Saint Louis District,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 21, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

MAJOR: I have the honor to state that the instructions of the major-general commanding of the 14th instant have been complied with. The detachments at Caledonia and at Potosi (except twenty men at the latter place which are needed for escorts for supplies to Webster) have been removed to Webster, that point, in my judgment, affording a better cover to Potosi and the country north than troops at Potosi. The garrison at Patterson has been strengthened and the post at Centerville recoupmoped and temporary shelters for public animals ordered to be built. Company D, Second Missouri State Militia Cavalry, has been ordered to Cape Girardeau from Farmington. Bloomfield has been strengthened by two companies from Caruthersville, a post now abandoned. The Seventh Kansas Cavalry having been recently remounted, those of that regiment lately guarding the bridges on the Iron Mountain Railroad have been relieved by dismounted men from the Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry and ordered to rendezvous at Pilot Knob. I would also state that the evils complained of in Lieutenant-Colonel Murphy's inspection report would have been promptly corrected at the time had the report from which extracts referred to me from department headquarters were taken been submitted to me before being sent. to department headquarters. Inclosed you will find an official copy of a letter* from Col. J. L. Beveridge, commanding Third Sub-District, in relation to the matter, and your attention is respectfully invited to his statements.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS EWING, JR.,
Brigadier-General.

By H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Cape Girardeau, January 21, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have the honor to report that two of the companies that were stationed at Caruthersville have arrived at Bloomfield to garrison that post.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel, Commanding.

Headquarters Saint Louis District,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 21, 1865.

Colonel Rogers,
Cape Girardeau:

Company D, Second Missouri State Militia Cavalry, has been ordered from Farmington to report to you. With the two companies from Caruthersville, what will be the strength at Bloomfield? How many infantry and how many cavalry?

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters District of Central Missouri,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 21, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

MAJOR: I beg leave to state that I observe among the proceedings of the State legislature that the representative from this county (Houts) has moved that the legislature request the major-general commanding the department to order the commanding officer of the District of Central Missouri in future to permit loyal men of Johnson County to hold demonstrations whenever they think proper, and further requesting him to dismiss from the service any officer who may hereafter prevent the loyal men from holding meetings to celebrate the late ordinance of emancipation. To prevent misapprehension, and to advise the major-general commanding of the cause of this proceeding, I submit the following facts: On the evening of the 13th instant the town of Warrensburg was illuminated and quite a gathering was had on the streets. The colored people were brought out, and one McGinnis, keeper of a restaurant, drugs, &c., had begun to address them. The crowd grew quite noisy, and a number of soldiers who had left camp began to discharge revolvers near by. Myself and the commanding officer of the post (Lieutenant-Colonel Crittenden) were both absent from the post that night, and unapprised, as were other commanding officers, of any intention on the part of citizens to celebrate the emancipation ordinance. The provost-marshal, unaware that any one was speaking, on hearing the unusual uproar on the street and the discharging of arms, sent word to the commanding officer of the provost guard to suppress the disorder. This officer, attracted by the noise, was perhaps already repairing to the spot, and quickly dispersed the soldiers and crowd. There was no disposition whatever to interfere with the right of peaceable assembly or the right of speech, the measure sought to be celebrated having the full sympathy of the officers who dispersed this mixed crowd, the sole object being to preserve the peace and good order of the town. On hearing of the disturbance on my return to headquarters next day I made inquiry into the cause, and found nothing to condemn in their conduct under the circumstances. Had the officer known that a speech of the character alluded to was being delivered it was his duty to have suppressed the disturbance and enabled the speaker to proceed. No order is required on me to secure loyal citizens in the right of lawful assembly and free speech. I pledge them the force of arms at my command for their protection when required whenever they may desire to celebrate the ordinance of emancipation, or any other cause in the interest of loyalty, and if complaint is made against any soldier or officer in this command for interference with such meetings the matter shall be promptly investigated and the offender duly punished.

*Not found.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,

Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. District.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 21, 1865.

LEWIS WILLS, Esq.,
Secretary of Homestead Agricultural Guards, Neosho:

SIR: Your communication of the 11th instant came duly to hand and the contents are noted. The plan proposed by the patriotic citizens in your vicinity to protect their persons and property more fully from guerrillas and robbers meets my hearty approval. United and determined effort on the part of the people now residing in Newton County to protect themselves and maintain law and order cannot fail to secure protection to all, and will soon induce that feeling of security which is essential to prosperity and progress. All citizens able to bear arms in that section should organize into one or more military companies, under General Orders, No. 107, series 1864, department headquarters. I will cheerfully lend every assistance in my power to procure arms and ammunition for the men, and will have the company so organized called into active service for a short time before warm weather, that all marauding bands may be driven out by that time. Any man in that section able to do military duty who refuses to attach himself to such an organization should be sent beyond the limits of the district without delay. There will probably be far less trouble from guerrillas this ensuing year than there has been the past, and what is required to keep the country quiet now and have every citizen fully protected is to have all work in concert and harmony to the same end, viz, the suppression of all disorder and speedy punishment of every evil doer and evil deed. It is encouraging to know that as the great work in which we have all been engaged is about to be accomplished there is no weariness or faint-heartedness on the part of those who have suffered and endured the most. Troops will be kept in that section while I retain command of the district.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SAINT LOUIS, January 21, 1865.

His Excellency Thomas C. Fletcher,
Governor of Missouri:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to recommend that in the event of the passage of the militia bill now before the house the First Division be divided into districts, as follows: First District to include the counties of Atchison, Nodaway, Worth, Harrison, Daviess, Gentry, Andrew, Holt, Buchanan, De Kalb, Caldwell, Platte, Clay, and Ray. Second District to include the counties of Carroll, Livingston, Grundy, Mercer, Putnam, Sullivan, Linn, Chariton, Howard, Randolph, Macon, and Adair. Third District to include the counties of Schuyler, Scotland, Clark, Knox, Lewis, Shelby, Marion, Monroe, and Ralls. Fourth District to include the counties of Pike, Audrain, Boone, Callaway, Montgomery, Lincoln, Warren, and Saint Charles. I have the honor to recommend that you appoint Col. A. F. Denny as brigadier-general of Missouri Militia for the Second District; Hayward for the Third District, and Col. D. P. Dyer for the Fourth District. The unfortunate difference existing among the loyalists of the First District will render it difficult for you to select any one for the position of brigadier-general who will at first give general satisfaction. Of all who have been named in connection with the appointment I believe Col. W. R. Penick to be the best man. Your Excellency is fully aware that his appointment would be very unsatisfactory to some most excellent Unionists in Saint Joseph. If Col. R. C. Bradshaw, of the Forty-fourth Missouri Volunteers, should recover from the serious wounds with which he is now suffering, and his services could be obtained, his appointment would doubtless be acceptable to all parties. I have no doubt of my ability to produce harmony among our friends with the appointment of either of the valued officers named for the First District.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., January 21, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

MAJOR: I have the honor to request that Companies D and E, Thirty-ninth Missouri Volunteers, be ordered to Glasgow, District of North Missouri, where they can now be mounted on contraband stock and be used to great advantage in hunting down the guerrillas. I also recommend that Adjutant Tripler, of the same regiment, be ordered to report to Colonel Kutzner, at Glasgow.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CLINTON B. FISK,

Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. EIGHTH MIL. DIST., ENROLLED MISSOURI MIL.,

Columbia, Mo., January 21, 1865.

Brig. Gen. C. B. Fisk:

GENERAL: You will in a few days receive petitions by the bushel asking you to relieve citizens of Boone County from going to that blessed country where Jeff. Davis reigns supreme. They will claim to be the best Union men in the whole country. Be firm, and do not permit your sympathies to do away with your judgment. These men, or at least many of them, are men of means and influence, hence the necessity of making examples of them. Every one of them are, and have been, rebels of the worst sort; have done us great harm. I would like to have an order banishing John W. Corliss, jr. He lives in Columbia. Left here last summer during our troubles and went to Canada. I littered him a gun to defend his house, and he refused and told me plainly he would not help defend the town.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. B. DOUGLASS,

Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS,

Fort Bascom, N. Mex., January 21, 1865.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,

Headquarters Department of New Mexico, Santa Fé, N. Mex.:

SIR: I have the honor to state for the information of the general commanding that the Comanche chief Sheer-kee-na-kwaugh made his appearance here under a flag of truce for the purpose of making overtures for peace. This Indian is the same who the general commanding saw at this place in May last, and who, by the death of some other chief, has now become the principal chief of the whole of the Comanche Nation. He is actually desirous to live in good faith with us, and from what I have seen of him during my stay here I am inclined to believe his desire sincere. According to instructions he was kindly treated, and taught that the general commanding the Territory could only decide the question of peace; that his desire would be laid before the general, and that he had to wait here until the conditions under which peace would be granted could be learned. He however objected to remaining here, stating that he had to see all of his subordinates (who lived at present scattered and were with their people a great distance from here) before he could do anything conclusive, but that he would return and bring them here in the last quarter of the moon, next month, and that he would compel them to submit to whatever conditions there should be stipulated by the general commanding. He furthermore promised to me (voluntarily) that he would not allow, as far as in his power, any traveler on the roads to the States to be molested, and that he would give me information without delay should the Kiowas and Apaches, whom he mistrusts, contemplate a rapacious excursion toward this quarter; and although I am confident that he will do so, for he has proved himself to be true on another occasion, I will this time not place too much confidence in his assurance. In regard to other affairs at the post, I am sorry to say that during the past week we have made little or no progress in the erection of buildings. It is impossible to do anything as long as the weather remains in its present state. The animals here were gradually improving, but another severe snow-storm set in last night and the ground is covered with snow to the depth of several inches. This does not only prevent my cutting grass in the prairie, but it will be the ruin of a great many animals.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. H. BERGMANN,
Captain, First Cavalry New Mexico Volunteers, Commanding.

[January 22, 1865.—For Special Orders, No. 16, paragraph 2, headquarters Armies of the United States, directing Maj. Gen. Lew. Wallace to visit the Rio Grande and Western Texas on a tour of inspection, see Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 201.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 22, 1865.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. CANBY,
New Orleans, La.:

The force of infantry, artillery, and cavalry to threaten Camden and co-operate with General Dana left here at 10 a.m. to-day. Will be joined at Pine Bluff by two regiments of infantry and some cavalry, and will carry out our part of the programme as laid down in orders from division headquarters. Dana's force is to disembark at Gaines' Landing on 27th. The whole co-operating force, under command of Brig. Gen. E. A. Carr, will number about 4,000. It is hoped this movement will also have the effect of causing the rebels to withdraw from Dardanelle, and in case of another rise in the river enable us to throw more supplies into Fort Smith. One boat of the three that arrived safely at Fort Smith was destroyed by the enemy while returning. Fate of the other two still uncertain. The river is not navigable above Lewisburg. Advices from Dardanelle are to noon of the 21st. Attack from enemy had not been renewed. Garrison was ready for them, but too weak to advance against them.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS POST OF LITTLE ROCK,
Little Rock, Ark., January 22, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. R. WEST,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: I have been informed that a portion of the cavalry picket on the Benton road, some five miles out, has been captured. The Thirty-sixth Iowa Infantry is camped some four miles out on that road, and is in readiness to do what it can. I have communicated these facts to Major-General Reynolds, and at his suggestion I have the honor to request that you will send a squadron of cavalry to report to Major Hamilton, commanding the Thirty-sixth Iowa Infantry, to enable him to advise us if anything occurs through the night. Please advise us of your action in the premises.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. SALOMON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

---

LITTLE ROCK, January 22, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Powell CLAYTON,
Commanding:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you turn over to General Carr both infantry and cavalry named in your dispatch of yesterday.

S. C. FARRINGTON,
Major and Acting Aide-de-Camp.

---

DARDANELLE, January 22, 1865—3 p.m.

Maj: Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Little Rock:

GENERAL: Captain Hamilton has returned from scout to Ivey's Ford. Reports the steamer Chippewa's upper works destroyed; hull and machinery in pretty good condition. Steamers Ad. Hines and Lotus expected here to-night; Annie Jacobs aground on Ivey's Ford. Colonel Williams' brigade of colored troops will reach here to-morrow. The enemy have all gone south. Will send the section of Fifth Ohio Battery down with Colonel Williams' brigade. Do you wish this place held after Colonel Williams' troops have passed?

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Clarksville, Ark., January 22, 1865—11.30 a.m.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Little Rock, Ark.:

SIR: The steamers Ad. Hines and Lotus will leave here to-day for Little Rock. The Chippewa was captured and burned, and the Annie Jacobs is eighteen miles above here on this shore with machinery damaged, but being repaired. She is guarded with part of my force. The rebels attacked the boats with artillery and a force said to be 1,500 strong. The Jacobs received eighteen shell and solid shot through her, but was saved by the coolness and daring of Col. T. M. Bowen, Thirteenth Kansas Volunteers, who was on the hurricane deck during the whole engagement, directing the pilot. He was on leave of absence, but assumed command when the enemy approached.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. R. JUDSON,
Col. Sixth Kansas Cav., Comdg. 3d Brig., 1st Div., 7th Army Corps.
Maj. H. Hannaehs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-Generah:

There are two companies of cavalry at New Madrid and one of infantry. I need one of the cavalry companies. I think one would be sufficient there. Can I order one up here?

J. B. Rogers,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 22, 1865.

Brig. Gen. Marcellus M. Crocker, U. S. Volunteers,
Commanding at Fort Sumner, N. Mex.:

General: I desire that you send to me five or six good reliable Navajoes, and with them Jesus, the interpreter. I wish to send them into the Navajo country to tell the remainder of the tribe to come in. The Mexicans and Utes wish to make a campaign against those who have not come in, in order to get captives and stock. Tell the chiefs this, and that I wish to get them in not only to avoid such a calamity, but so that they can help plant at the Bosque.

I am, general, respectfully,

James H. Carleton,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF IOWA,
Dubuque, January 22, 1865.

Assistant Adjutant-General,
Department of the Northwest:

Sir: An official communication has been received from Colonel Dimon, First U. S. Volunteers, commanding at Fort Rice, dated December 19. About 300 lodges of the North Yanktonnais heretofore hostile, but now friendly, under Two Bears, Black Catfish, and Black Eye, are still encamped near the fort at the mouth of Beaver Creek. The colonel ordered them across the river from his post that he might distinguish the friendly from the unfriendly Indians. This was done after the killing and wounding of three of his men, which I reported. The soldier I reported missing has been found dead. A party of Uncpapas were guilty of the attack, and not Santeees, as I reported. They are encamped on the headwaters of the Heart River and refuse to give up the murderers. A party of miners from Idaho reached Sioux City a few days ago. They came by the way of Fort Berthold, where Big Head's brother, a Yanktonnaia, escorted them to Fort Rice. Near the Painted Woods they came on a camp of Santeees who treated them well for Minnesota Indians. They stole their rations and one gun, but did not kill them, which is a remarkable instance of forbearance on their part. I hope the authorities at Washington will take some action in regard to these Indians, for I think there will be no trouble in making a permanent peace with them. But do what they will, there will always be some little trouble in that country so long as there is an Indian and a white man in it and the line of the British Possessions is so near to it. However, a few military posts judiciously situated will put an end to that.

With much respect, your obedient servant,

Alf. Sully,
Brigadier-General.
HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodaux, La., January 23, 1865.

Capt. Frederic Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans:

The couriers (eleven in number) coming down from Plaquemine were attacked to-day. Colonel Fiske reports that three of them have come in. Their horses were so poor that the remainder were probably captured. I have ordered the system of couriers suspended by telegraph. Meanwhile the tri-monthly report from Plaquemine for the ten days ending January 20 has not yet been received. If you require it, I will make my report from the last previous tri-monthly. If so, shall I drop the Ninety-ninth U. S. Colored Infantry? I have had no official notice of their departure.

R. A. Cameron,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.

Memorandum of additional guns required in accordance with proposed modifications for the places named.

Office of Chief Engineer,
Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, January 23, 1865.

Major-General Commanding:
Fort Grant, Vicksburg, as modified, four rifled siege guns, twenty 8-inch siege howitzers, three siege mortars. Fort McPherson, Natchez, four 8-inch siege howitzers, one 10-inch siege mortar, three Coehorn mortars. Morganza, six heavy field howitzers. Port Hudson, one 8-inch siege mortar, three Coehorn mortars. Baton Rouge, none required.

Respectfully submitted.

M. D. McAlester,
Captain of Engineers and Chief Engineer.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Comdg. Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to request that you will cause a salute of 100 guns to be fired from the levee at noon to-morrow, the 24th instant, in honor of the fall of Fort Fisher, N. C., and the sublime heroism displayed by the army and navy in the capture of that key to the city of Wilmington, N. C., heretofore notorious as a blockade-running port of inestimable value to the rebels.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 23.
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 23, 1865.

1. Capt. Daniel Webster, First Wisconsin Battery Light Artillery, is announced as acting chief of artillery at these headquarters, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

C. S. Sargent,
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. STEELE,
Commanding U. S. Forces, Kennerville, La.:

SIR: The major-general commanding directs that the Eighty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteers, when it arrives from Natchez, will be instructed not to disembark at Kenner, but to proceed to New Orleans and land at some point near the depot of the Lake Pontchartrain Railroad. This office to be notified by telegraph of its arrival at Kenner.
Transportation by rail from New Orleans to Lakeport, and thence by steamer to East Pascagoula, will be held in readiness. On the arrival at the latter place the commanding officer will without disembarking his troops report for further orders to Brig. Gen. C. C. Andrews, commanding Third Brigade, Reserve Corps, or to Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger, commanding District of West Florida and South Alabama.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. F. STEELE,
Kennerville, La.:

The commanding general desires that the troops of the Third Brigade be at once held in readiness to embark as soon as transportation can be furnished. One thousand will go by the sound to Pensacola, the balance, including the Eighty-third Ohio, to arrive from Natchez, will be sent, via Lakeport, to East Pascagoula, where they will receive orders from General Granger. Please instruct General Andrews to report to these headquarters as early as possible.

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 23, 1865.

Brig. Gen. C. C. ANDREWS,
Comdg. Third Brigade, Reserve Corps, Kennerville, La.:

SIR: The major-general commanding directs that you proceed with the Thirty-fourth Iowa and One hundred and fourteenth Ohio Volunteers to Lakeport (selecting such route as will not necessitate their passing through the city) and embark at that place on the transportation which is now held in readiness. You will then proceed to East Pascagoula, and without disembarking the troops report for orders to Major-General Granger, commanding District of West Florida and South Alabama. The Sixty-ninth Indiana and Ninety-seventh Illinois, now in that district, will join you as soon as practicable. The Eighty-third Ohio has been ordered down from Natchez and will be sent to you without delay. The Twenty-fourth Indiana has been ordered to Pensacola, Fla.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Copy to Generals Hurlbut, Granger, and Steele.)
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
Office of the Chief Signal Officer,
New Orleans, La., January 23, 1865.

Lt. Col. C. T. Christensen, Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to make the following report of information received at this office this 23d day of January, 1865: William Ross, a deserter from the Second Alabama Battalion, left Mobile January 14, 1865; states that there was at that time much talk of evacuating the city. Scott's command left on the 12th instant for Tupelo and it was expected that McCulloch's cavalry would shortly follow it. McCulloch's command is from Forrest's cavalry, and is composed of the Second Missouri, numbering about 260; the Second Mississippi, numbering about 200; the Eighteenth Mississippi, numbering about 200; total, 660. The troops left in Mobile were the First Louisiana Heavy Artillery, numbering about 250; Twenty-second Louisiana Heavy Artillery, numbering about 150; Winston's battery (five 12-pounders), 60; Buchanan battery, or Missouri Battery (a naval battery manned by sailors from the gun-boat Gaines, which was beached last summer), 100; total 560. All other troops are home guards and militia, numbering about 2,500 men, armed with Enfield rifles and muskets. About twelve miles from Mobile, at Hall's Mills, on the Pascagoula road, is Colonel Maury's regiment (Fifteenth Regiment Confederate troops), numbering 1,200. General Thomas' command is on the Pascagoula road, facing General Granger. General Thomas' command consists of Colonel Rice's brigade (three regiments) State Reserves, 1,200; brigade (two regiments) State Reserves, 1,500; total State Reserves, 2,700. These troops are pretty well armed, well clothed with a late importation of gray suits from England. The gun-boat Nashville is plated only on the side fronting the bay, and is pierced for six guns (two bow, two stern, and two side guns). The Morgan has seven guns (7-inch). Battery Buchanan is nearest the city, and mounts nine guns, including the "great gun." Opposite Battery Buchanan, 700 yards distant, in the bay is Battery Gladden, numbering 100 men and mounting seven 7-inch guns. Nearly opposite this, and 1,200 yards distant, is Battery McIntosh, numbering 150 men and mounting eight guns—four 10-inch and four 7-inch smooth-bore. The Nashville is in the channel, about one mile below Battery Gladden. H. G. Montague, a deserter from the Fifteenth Confederate Cavalry, states that he has been on duty at headquarters post of Mobile as permanent courier for the general commanding. He left Mobile December 12 with dispatches to Biloxi, &c. He states that with Colonel Maury's regiment, which is 1,200 strong, is Tobin's battery of flying artillery, numbering 150 men and twelve guns (six howitzers and six 12-pounder rifles). This is supposed to be the most efficient light battery in the vicinity of Mobile. There are about 150 Pelham cadets and 200 Tuscaloosa cadets (all boys about sixteen years of age) in Mobile. The commanding officers and others had sent their families away from Mobile. Military men proposed to burn the city in case it was evacuated. The large gun in Battery Buchanan is supposed to be the largest gun in the Confederacy. Below Battery Buchanan, on the Shell road, are three or four 1-gun (10-inch) batteries, extending three miles from the city. About 15 men are required to man each gun. At the time informant left they were not manned. Two light guns are taken down the Shell road on picket duty six miles on tours of three days each. The bay shore is picketed by a few cavalrymen.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

(Copies furnished General Granger and Commander Palmer for information.)

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 23, 1865.

Maj. Gen. GORDON GRANGER,
Comdg. Dist. of West Florida and South Alabama,
East Pascagoula:

SIR: Information from various sources induces the belief that a considerable portion of Hood's army has been sent down in the direction of Mobile, either for the defense of that place or for an attack upon Pensacola, or upon your position at East Pascagoula. Both intentions are alleged. I do not place any faith in the statement, but it is natural that Hood should attempt to do something to restore the morale of his troops and of the people of Mississippi, and as he can reach the vicinity of Mobile more readily than he can any other point where he could damage us, I send over 1,000 of General Andrews' brigade direct to Pensacola. The remainder will go through the sound and will report to you as they pass. General Andrews will report to you at East Pascagoula for any service you may have for his command. As Pensacola will be of the utmost importance, not only on account of the military and naval depots, but as a probable base or auxiliary base for further operations, its security must be placed beyond danger. As a part of General Andrews' brigade is already in your command, I desire to concentrate the whole of it at Pensacola, with a view to the organization of the division he is to command, and I desire that the regiments now detached should be assembled there as soon as possible in order that their equipment may be made as perfect as possible. One of the brigades will be made up from the troops now under your command, and with this object I wish you to designate as soon as possible the permanent garrisons for the posts in Pensacola Harbor and Mobile Bay, and report the remainder in order that the assignments may be made. General Thomas is now at Eastport with his army, and for this and other reasons, which I have already explained to you, it is desirable that the troops should be withdrawn from Pascagoula, the permanent garrisons designated, and the troops for the field collected and prepared as soon as possible.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 12
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 23, 1865.

I. A military court, to be known as the provost court of the Department of Arkansas, is hereby established, for the purpose of investigating and passing judgment in cases of violation of orders and breaches of the peace, and, in the absence of civil tribunals, of rendering decision in cases of that class in which jurisdiction is exercised by police and municipal courts. Punishments awarded soldiers will conform to those awarded under existing laws by field-officers’ courts except stoppage of pay. The court will hold its sessions in this city or at such other points as may be hereafter designated in orders. The quartermaster’s department will furnish the necessary rooms, furniture, and stationery.

II. Col. William D. Wood, Eleventh Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, is hereby appointed judge of the court herein constituted, and will enter upon his duties immediately.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,

HDQRS. U. S. FORCES AT PINE BLUFF,
No. 23.

I. The commanding officer of the Second Brigade, Second Division, will relieve from duty the One hundred and sixth and One hundred and twenty-sixth Illinois Infantry, and have them in readiness to join the expedition starting from this post on the 25th instant. Companies on detached duty will not be relieved.

By order of Brig. Gen. Powell Clayton:

S. MONTE CAMBERN,
First Lieutenan and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

CAMP MAAUMELLE ROAD, NEAR LITTLE ROCK, ARK.,
January 23, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. R. West:

Sir: I have the honor to report to you that I was ordered to report to Major Hamilton with one squadron on the Benton road, three miles from Little Rock, yesterday at 7 p. m., which order I complied with immediately, and on reporting was ordered to remain there until this morning. Was then ordered to proceed on the Benton road fifteen miles and see if I could discover any enemy or rebel force in that vicinity; if not, to return and report. I proceeded out and discovering no enemy, returned and reported to Major Hamilton, and was then relieved by him and ordered to report to my regiment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM WAGNER,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, January 23, 1865—11.30 a. m.

Colonel Ryan,
Lewisburg:

You will not occupy Dardanelle after the colored troops and boats pass down. You can withdraw your troops to Lewisburg.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.
Brig. Gen. J. W. Davidson,

Commanding District of Natchez, Natchez, Miss.:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your interesting reports of the 17th instant, and to say that he regrets that he cannot allow the Eighty-third Ohio to remain with you in consequence of its being needed in its proper organization for important pending operations. When some of the troops from Arkansas have been received he may possibly be able to spare you a regiment from there, but the decision thereon will greatly depend on the extent of prospective operations, and the direction from which they will be undertaken. Be pleased to give orders for the immediate embarkation of this regiment, and instruct the commanding officer to telegraph me from Morganza the probable hour of his arrival at Kennerville.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 23, 1865.

THOMAS C. FLETCHER, Governor of Missouri:

GOVERNOR: I respectfully request that companies of militia be raised by volunteers from such classes as you deem best for service in each of the following counties:

Mounted.—One company for Warren and Montgomery; one company for Callaway and Audrain; one company for Boone; one company for Ralls, Monroe, and Marion; one company to be raised at Hannibal; one company for Howard; one company for Randolph; one company for Chariton; one company for Carroll and Livingston, to be stationed in Carroll; one company for Ray and Caldwell, to be stationed in Ray; one company for Clay and Clinton, to be stationed in Clay; one company for Platte; one company for Jackson; one company for La Fayette; one company for Saline; one company for Cooper and Moniteau; one company for Osage and Maries; one company for Stoddard; one company for Johnson; one company for Pettis; one company for Morgan; one company for Mississippi; one company for Perry; one company for New Madrid; one company for Cape Girardeau; one company for Sainte Genevieve.

Infantry.—One company for bridge on Pacific Railroad; one company for bridge on Southwest Branch [Pacific] Railroad; one company for bridge on Iron Mountain Railroad; one company for bridge on North Missouri Railroad.

As soon as raised to be turned over to the sub-district commanders for the respective counties. I will order them subsisted as soon as they rendezvous. I most earnestly request that none but experienced officers and also old soldiers be placed at the head of these organizations—men who will enforce orders and maintain strict discipline. The Government will issue clothing, forage, arms, and equipments (when the State has not sufficient arms and equipments to supply them, already issued to the Enrolled Missouri Militia) upon proper requisitions. I deem it important that this force be put in the field within the next thirty days.

I am, governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.
Cape Girardeau, January 23, 1865.

Maj. H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

The aggregate force at Bloomfield is: Infantry—Aggregate, 89; present for duty, 53. Cavalry—Aggregate, 218; present for duty, 182. The time of one company is already out, another company is out on the 28th, and the time of the three companies of cavalry is part out now.

J. B. Rogers,
Colonel, Commanding.

Saint Louis, January 23, 1865.

Colonel Rogers,
Cape Girardeau:

The expedition you desire to make can be made. State how many mounted men you can raise, and how many you want from the Third Sub-District, and where you want them to meet you, and when.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Saint Louis District,
Saint Louis, January 23, 1865.

Colonel Beveridge,
Pilot Knob:

You can withdraw one cavalry company from New Madrid temporarily, if advisable.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. Hannahs,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Saint Louis, January 23, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis:

Major: I have the honor to inclose a copy of General Orders, No. 3, from these headquarters which, if approved by the major-general commanding, please send to the printers, with an order to print and forward 100 copies to me. The main features of the order are the same as one I issued in the Central District last spring, and it worked admirably. This embodies the experience of last year, and I think that it will work well in connection with No. 7, which is a most excellent order.

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 3. [Incloure.]
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
Rolla, Mo., January 23, 1865.

In order that the citizens of this district may be enabled to co-operate in carrying out the policy of the major-general commanding the Department of the Missouri, as has been indicated in General Orders, No. 7, current series, from his headquarters, and thus defend themselves and their property from thieves, robbers, marauding bands, guerrillas, and rebels, and to more effectually assist the civil officers and courts in the discharge of their duties, and by these means restore peace and quiet to the country, it is hereby ordered that all persons capable of handling a gun, and who can be trusted with one, do form themselves into companies of citizen guards, composed of such numbers as may be most convenient for the protection of their immediate neighborhoods. The basis of the organization of the companies as above directed must be unconditional loyalty to the Government of the United States and to that of the State of Missouri; a willingness to give an active co-operation to the civil and military authorities in their efforts for the restoration of the civil law in the land and safety to the person and property of its inhabitants, and to assist in a war of extermination, by lawful means, of all guerrillas, bushwhackers, robbers, thieves, and rebels, or other disturbers of the peace and quiet of the country. Without further action from these headquarters, the people will immediately form themselves into companies in the manner prescribed for the organization of the militia under the laws of the State, nominate their officers, who will make out muster-rolls and forward them for the approval of the general commanding the district, through the commanding officer of the nearest military post or station, who will certify to the loyalty and integrity of the officers, and, as far as practicable, of the members of such companies. If the organizations are approved special orders will be made confirming them. Company commanders will forward in the same manner an application for permits for each member to keep or purchase arms and ammunition. No resident citizen in this district will be allowed these privileges unless he is a member of a company of citizen guards organized under this order by the 1st day of March next. All commanding officers of posts or stations in this district will assist the people, as far as practicable, in this enrollment and organization, and report all failures after reasonable time to comply with this order. While the citizen guards organized under this order will not be considered a regular military force, entitled to pay or other remuneration for their services, yet they are so far hereby legalized as to make them subject to the same laws, rules, and regulations, and are entitled to the same immunities as are applicable for the police of the troops in the United States, and officers are expected to enforce obedience to their orders. Any person who fails to enroll after receiving proper notice to do so, or, after enrolling, fails to assist in the common defense when ordered, will be reported to these headquarters, and after an examination and proof of his neglect of duty he will be sent out of the district. It is not expected that the citizen guards will be on active constant duty, yet as many as may be deemed necessary are expected to patrol the country, and thus be able to learn of the movements of bad men, and give the alarm if there is danger. As a general rule, one-tenth of the company should be constantly scouting, and give three continuous days each month to this duty, so that, either in person or by substitute, each person will give one-tenth of his time for the common good, and have nine-tenths for himself, being in turn guarded by his neighbor, but all to turn out in case of an emergency. The citizen guards will thus become an organized armed posse comitatus, and can be made a powerful auxiliary to the civil courts in the country, and at the same time relieve the army of a large amount of labor that legitimately belongs to the people to perform in guarding their own firesides. Regular rations of subsistence will be issued to each citizen guard while on active duty, to be drawn monthly by the company commanders on the usual provision return. Ammunition in small quantities will be issued by the ordnance officer, on the proper requisitions. The being a member of a citizen guard company will not exempt any person liable to do military duty in the militia or volunteer service, nor will exemption from duty in the regular military service by reason of age, physical disability, alienage, or other causes exempt any person from duty as a citizen guard. All authority heretofore granted from these headquarters to any citizen of this district to keep arms or ammunition for their own use, who is not now or does not become a member of a citizen guard company by the 1st day of March next, will be revoked, and the arms taken for the use of the guards. All arms, horses, or other property captured from guerrillas or other law breakers by the citizen guards will be reported to district headquarters, and an order will be made giving the company making the capture the right to use the property until it is required by the Government. Great care must be observed in the organization of the citizen guard companies and the selection of the officers, else they may become, in the hands of bad men, engines of oppression and a terror rather than a blessing to the people. Persons guilty of any irregularities will be severely punished. While it may be necessary in some cases to subsist on the country, it should not be done without providing compensation to the parties from whom it has been taken.

By order of Brig. Gen. E. B. Brown:

W. D. HUBBARD,

First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 23, 1865.

Major-General CURTIS,

Fort Leavenworth:

The Overland stage agents represent that the station at Julesburg has been attacked by Indians and requires assistance. If this has not already received your attention, please see to it.

H. W. HALLECK,

Major-General and Chief of Staff.

Lieut. J. E. Tappan,

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 13th instant. In reply I have to say that the Kaw Indians are in the buffalo country by special permit of General Blunt, given when he was the commander of this district. The permit and letter of advice were taken by Indians, and I made two copies of the same, so that there might be one of them in each of the bands. I enjoined on the Indians to avoid all hostile Indians and the usual routes of travel. I was in all their camps on Smoky Hill, Sharp's Creek, Little Arkansas, and Big Turkey about eighteen days since, and then charged them not to go west, but south. Before receiving your letter I had written to the commander of Fort Zarah requesting him to send the Kaws east of the Little Arkansas. I also sent a letter to the keeper of the ranch on Little Arkansas requesting him to send the Kaws word that it was my order that they should not go west of the Little Arkansas. If you are in possession of later information which in your judgment makes it desirable that I should go out and order them in, I will do so if you will send me word by return mail. I am pretty well satisfied that it is a mistake that Kiowas have been seen among them. When I was at Little Arkansas ranch hunters there told me that Kiowas were among the Kaws, and pointed out one to me who was a Kaw with whom I have been acquainted several years. I hope the Kaws will be permitted by the troops to remain in the buffalo country, but that they will be sent southeast. The Government will have to feed this tribe if they are not permitted to hunt buffalo. I therefore hope while the Kaws behave well they will be protected by the troops.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. W. Farnsworth,
U. S. Indian Agent.

General Orders, 7
Hdqs. District of Colorado,
No. 7.

Denver, Colo. Ter., January 23, 1865.

1. The object of existing orders prohibiting citizens from carrying arms having been accomplished, the same is hereby revoked. Surrounded as this Territory now is by hostile Indians, it is but right that every man should be prepared to defend his home, and this can only be done by force of arms.

2. Reports are daily being made to these headquarters that parties wearing the uniform of U. S. soldiers visit ranches, take stock, and arrest citizens on the plea of being provost guards and in the name of the Government, while in fact they are not in the service. All such persons are thieves and marauders, violators of the peace, and will henceforth be treated accordingly. The punishment for this species of offense will be summary and severe, and all law-abiding citizens are invited to furnish these headquarters with such information as will insure justice and fix the guilt.

3. Hereafter all citizens and soldiers employed to make arrests or take possession of property of any description in the name of the Government must be clothed with written authority direct from these headquarters or the provost-marshal; none other will be recognized.

By order of Col. T. Moonlight, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry:

Ira I. Taber,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
SPECIAL ORDERS, \} HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
No. 24. \} New Orleans, La., January 24, 1865.

1. Asst. Surg. S. M. Horton, U. S. Army, is hereby relieved from duty in the Department of the Gulf and will proceed without delay to Saint Louis, Mo., and report for duty to the medical director, Department of the Missouri.

3. Brig. Gen. B. S. Roberts, U. S. Volunteers, is hereby relieved from duty in the Department of the Gulf and will proceed without delay to Memphis, Tenn., and report to Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, for assignment to duty. Capt. B. K. Roberts, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, is permitted to accompany General Roberts.

from duty in the Department of Mississippi and will proceed without delay to Little Rock, Ark., and report to Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds, commanding Department of Arkansas, for assignment to duty.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., January 24, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 24th day of January, 1865: Reports of Horace Bell and J. M. Smylie, scouts, just returned from an unsuccessful attempt to visit Alexandria, La., via Morganza. Citizens and refugees concur in stating that great discontent and insubordination exist among the rebel forces, mainly on account of lack of pay, scantiness of rations, and the destitution of the soldiers' families. Desertions occur daily. If captured the deserter is treated with rigor. Military executions take place weekly—on Fridays.
Fifteen men have been shot at one time recently for desertion. One brigade at Alexandria is said to have mutinied not long since. Thirty-five of the ring-leaders were shot. Harrison's brigade has been left at Alexandria. Two brigades (names unknown) are along the Washita River, Ark. All other troops in Louisiana and in Arkansas south of the Washita River are reported to be moving toward and through Shreveport into Texas. Citizens also, to some extent, accompany this movement, caused by the difficulty of obtaining subsistence. This report is from parties who asserted that they met the troops in motion.
S. B. Buckner is lieutenant-general, and General Magruder reports to him. On east side of Atchafalaya River are Captain Ratliff's company of scouts, 30 men; Captain Collins' company of scouts, 30 men; Captain Pruyn's company of scouts, 30 men; total, 90 men.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. EATON,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

40 R E—VOL XLVIII, PT I
HDQRS. DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 24, 1865.

3. The One hundred and thirtieth Illinois Volunteers are temporarily relieved from duty at Lakeport and will at once proceed to Wood's Press, in this city, and report to Col. D. P. Grier, Seventy-seventh Illinois Volunteers.

5. The Thirteenth Massachusetts Battery is withdrawn from the District of Carrollton, and will report to Col. J. H. Sypher, Eleventh U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, commanding Artillery Camp of Instruction, for duty.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:
FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 24, 1865.

Brigadier-General Cameron:

The following troops will take post at Bayou Goula, or its vicinity, on the 27th instant and there remain until further orders: Five companies of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry, with two field officers; five companies of the Eightieth U. S. Colored Infantry from Bonnet Carré, under Major Hatch. Colonel Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry, will command, and to him Major Hatch will report on the day above named with his battalion. Special instructions will be given Colonel Sayles. The men will be supplied with ten days' rations and eighty rounds of ammunition each.

By command of Brigadier-General Sherman:
FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Copies to commanding officer at Bonnet Carré, and Col. W. Sayles, Third Rhode Island Cavalry.)

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 24, 1865.

Col. WILLARD SAYLES,
Third Rhode Island Cavalry:
(Through General Cameron.)

Brigadier-General Sherman directs me to communicate the following instructions: The object of the expedition with which you are charged is threefold—First, to clear the country between Donaldsonville and Plaquemine of the enemy, and to break up their haunts; second, to insure a more thorough police hereafter of that region, by putting a stop to the illicit keeping and use of fire-arms and the other violations of military orders; third, to obtain and report the complete topography of the strip of practicable country lying between the Mississippi River and the swamp back of Bayou Goula, with the view of ascertaining the easiest and most practicable mode of thoroughly observing this general avenue of approach to the La Fourche country, and checking the passage by the enemy. A topographical officer will be sent to assist in this reconnaissance, if practicable. You will take up a position which, in your judgment, will present the best opportunities of carrying out these instructions, and which will at the same time be convenient to a good steam-boat landing. The commanding officers at Plaquemine and Donaldsonville will be instructed to throw out all their available cavalry upon the roads leading north into the Grossetete country and south into the avenues to the lower Grand River, to intercept the guerrillas, &c., who may have escaped you, and will maintain this watch over the roads for several days after your occupation of Bayou Goula. All arms found in the hands of citizens without the proper permit will be seized and turned over to the chief ordnance officer, Department of the Gulf, and any persons who can be convicted of having made an unlawful use of their arms will be arrested and sent with their charges to the city for trial, but care must be taken that no plunder or license be permitted by the troops (see orders and instructions on this subject heretofore issued), and all examinations and seizures must be made under the orders and under the superintendence of a commissioned officer. A temporary line of communication will be established between Bayou Goula and Donaldsonville, and all important information will be telegraphed direct to these headquarters, and a duplicate to those of the district. You will also report your location as soon as you get well into it, and make short daily reports to these headquarters by telegraph of your action. A full supply of ammunition and ten days' rations will be taken.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 21, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER DONALDSONVILLE:

(Through General Cameron.)

I am instructed to inform you that Colonel Sayles will occupy Bayou Goula on the 27th instant. Brigadier-General Sherman directs that you send out all your available mounted force upon the roads leading south into the avenues to the lower Grand River, to intercept the guerrilla fugitives who might escape and evade the force of Colonel Sayles at Bayou Goula, and leave the Bayou Goula region upon these roads. This will continue for several days after the occupation by Colonel Sayles.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Similar to Commanding Officer Plaquemine.)
Lt. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans:

Colonel: I got here this morning at 7 o'clock in the Kate Dale. Sent her after the Adriatic and Cowles. She afterward had to haul the Corinthian from aground. The Thirty-fourth Iowa is now embarking after wood and will not return till night. This may delay me, for it is doubtful if the Kate Dale and Adriatic can take both regiments. The Twenty-fourth Indiana is ready to embark in the Corinthian, but has as yet no orders to do so.

Very respectfully,

C. C. Andrews,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Headquarters Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 24, 1865.

Lt. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Colonel: The expedition ordered to Helena, via Augusta, has been ordered to return to Brownsville, the recent rains having made the country almost impassable. While this force, about 1,000, under General Geiger, has been at Augusta it has collected nearly 400 beef-cattle, over 100 animals, and found part forage in the country.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

J. J. Reynolds,
Major-General.

Headquarters Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 24, 1865.

Lt. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The following telegram is just received from General Clayton, Pine Bluff:

Captain Davis, sent upon a scout five days ago down the Arkansas River, has just returned. He went ten miles below the mouth of Red Fork; captured 1 major, 1 captain, 3 lieutenants, 8 men, and 150 head of beef-cattle.

Powell Clayton,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

J. J. Reynolds,
Major-General.
CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.—UNION.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 24, 1865.

Exhibit of the cavalry force, Department of Arkansas (exclusive of the cavalry regiments appertaining to the command at Fort Smith, which are nearly all dismounted, and it is not proposed to remount them).

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Regiments</th>
<th>Number of men in the department.</th>
<th>Number of horses in the regiment.</th>
<th>Number of horses required.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1st Missouri Cavalry</td>
<td>649</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>596</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2d Missouri Cavalry</td>
<td>265</td>
<td>353</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3d Missouri Cavalry</td>
<td>265</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7th Missouri Cavalry</td>
<td>1,015</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>1,026</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8th Missouri Cavalry</td>
<td>800</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>800</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11th Missouri Cavalry</td>
<td>700</td>
<td>700</td>
<td>700</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1st Iowa Cavalry b.</td>
<td>1,015</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>1,026</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9th Iowa Cavalry</td>
<td>1,015</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>1,026</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10th Illinois Cavalry</td>
<td>1,015</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>1,026</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12th Illinois Cavalry</td>
<td>1,015</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>1,026</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15th Illinois Cavalry e.</td>
<td>1,015</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>1,026</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3d Michigan Cavalry</td>
<td>265</td>
<td>253</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3d Arkansas Cavalry</td>
<td>500</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4th Arkansas Cavalry</td>
<td>500</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10th Kansas Cavalry</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13th Wisconsin Cavalry</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3d United States Cavalry</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1st Indiana Cavalry</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5th Kansas Cavalry</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>87th Illinois Mounted Infantry</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>11,339</td>
<td>4,922</td>
<td>11,149</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Deduct 1st Iowa and 2d Missouri (to Memphis).</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>6,283</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>1,192</td>
<td>639</td>
<td>1,147</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| Disposition of the foregoing:                  |                                  |                                  |                           |
| Little Rock                                    | 1,000                            |                                  | 1,000                     |
| Lewisburg and Dardanelle                      | 500                              |                                  | 500                       |
| Pine Bluff                                     | 500                              |                                  | 500                       |
| Devall's Bluff                                 | 500                              |                                  | 500                       |
| Brownsville Station                           | 100                              |                                  | 100                       |
| Helena                                        | 150                              |                                  | 150                       |
| Saint Charles                                 | 750                              |                                  | 750                       |
| Mt. White River                               | 1,000                            |                                  | 1,000                     |
| Total                                     | 1,470                            |                                  | 1,470                     |
| Remaining for a field division:               |                                  |                                  |                           |
| Total                                     | 10,147                           |                                  | 10,147                    |

From this exhibit and the accompanying order, Special Orders, No. 22, it appears that the minimum cavalry force required for the defense of this department absorbs all the cavalry horses now in the department. If horses can be furnished a field division of about 5,000 cavalry will be held ready for orders. The Second Missouri (Merrill’s) has been reorganized and ordered to Tennessee. Presuming this department will lose that regiment the detachment has been sent to Memphis. The First Iowa is understood to be temporarily detached, and will proceed to Memphis, Tenn., in obedience to orders from headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi, on the return to Pine Bluff of the expedition now progressing toward Camden.

Very respectfully,

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major General, Commanding.
7. The present organization of the Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps, will be discontinued after the 31st instant. The following assignments of cavalry to posts are hereby made to take effect on the 1st proximo: Post of Little Rock, Third U. S. Cavalry and Third Wisconsin Cavalry Volunteers, to constitute a brigade; Post of Devall's Bluff, Ninth Kansas Cavalry Volunteers; cavalry depot, Fourth Arkansas Cavalry; Post of Pine Bluff, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry; Post of Lewisburg, Third Arkansas Cavalry; Post of Brownsville Station, Ninth Iowa Cavalry; Post of Saint Charles, Fifth Kansas Cavalry; Post of Pine Bluff, Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry; Post of Lewisburg, Third Arkansas Cavalry; Post of Brownsville Station, Ninth Iowa Cavalry; Post of Saint Charles, Fifth Kansas Cavalry; detachment; Post of White River, First Indiana Cavalry, detachment; Post of Helena, Eighty-seventh Illinois Mounted Infantry. These regiments will constitute the cavalry force of the respective posts and will be borne on the post returns. Enough serviceable horses will be transferred from other commands to the above named to completely mount them. All unserviceable horses will be sent to the cavalry depot. The division commander is charged with the execution of this order.

8. The Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps, will be reorganized for the field on the 1st day of February next, as follows, viz: First Brigade—First Iowa Cavalry, Third Michigan Cavalry, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, Fifteenth Illinois Cavalry. Second Brigade—First Missouri Cavalry, Third Missouri Cavalry, Seventh Missouri Cavalry, Eighth Missouri Cavalry, Eleventh Missouri Cavalry. The headquarters of the Cavalry Division, Brig. Gen. J. R. West commanding, will be established at Little Rock.

9. Brig. Gen. C. Bussey is hereby assigned to command of the cavalry brigade at Post of Little Rock.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

DARDANELLE, January 24, 1865—5 p. m.,
(Via Lewisburg, 6.50 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Little Rock:

Scout in at 10 p. m. last night brought information of Newton's regiment arriving at Boggs' Mill, on the Chickalah, after dark, for the purpose of grinding flour during the night, to leave at sunrise. At 12 p. m. started Lieutenant-Colonel Steele with 150 of the Eleventh U. S. Colored Infantry and detachment of Third Arkansas Cavalry, Lieutenant Wishard commanding, who arrived at the mill at 5 this a.m. Charging, captured their camp, papers, flour, 18 horses, and 20 stand of arms. The enemy fled in every direction. Colonel Williams' brigade train will not complete crossing till to-morrow. Will get away from here to-morrow noon.

Respectfully,

A. H. RYAN,
Colonel.
Capt. LE G. BENEDICT,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

SIR: I am informed by Mr. S. Downs, a reliable man who lives twenty miles out, that Webb's guerrillas have to-day run in on the remaining mill and burned it (Pine Bluff road). He says he will volunteer to guide a scout after them if one goes out. He had just started out himself, and learning these facts came in for safety.

Very respectfully,

C. C. WHITE,
Major and Provost-Marshal.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., January 24, 1865—1 p.m.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,

I have just arrived with my cavalry. The infantry and trains will not reach here till to-morrow. I will telegraph fully when my reports and plans are prepared. I have sent 150 cavalry to Jenkins' Ferry to scout down the Saline.

Respectfully,

E. A. CARR,
Brigadier-General.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., January 24, 1865—2.45 p.m.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,

General Clayton can furnish me with only 300 infantry, 150 cavalry, and one section of artillery (colored). He shows a disposition to furnish all he can. General Clayton recommends that the cavalry be sent as far as the bank of the Washita, opposite Camden, which is about thirty miles from Mount Elba. He thinks the enemy's pickets can be driven into Camden and they can be induced to take up or destroy their bridge. I have not yet consulted Colonel Thompson, who commands the cavalry. Would the general approve of that move provided I find upon arrival at Mount Elba that it appears to be feasible? It would be a dashing thing to do, but it involves some risk, and a certainty of marching the horses sixty miles in two days. I suppose I should send about 1,000 cavalry, leaving back the poorest horses. I understand that the bottom on the south side of the Saline is very bad for several miles, and I do not propose to march my artillery and trains over it, but will make a show of crossing. A citizen told one of my guides to-day that they had news in Camden a week ago that there was an expedition fitting out at Little Rock, destined for that place.

I am, very respectfully,

E. A. CARR,
Brigadier-General, Commanding Expedition.
Brigadier-General Carr,

Pine Bluff, Ark.:

Your dispatch received. Suggestions for operations appear feasible and are approved.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,

New Orleans, La., January 24, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,

Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.:

SIR: I am directed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 16th instant, referring to the organization of a cavalry expedition in accordance with his orders of the 21st ultimo, and to say that the plan proposed by you meets with his full approval. The commanding general's views in relation to the property of the rebels (either Government or private), whenever met with on expeditions of this character, accords with your own views. Whenever it is impracticable to capture and transport it it will invariably be destroyed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

General Orders, No. 4.

Hdqrs. District of Natchez,

Natchez, Miss., January 24, 1865.

The lines of actual occupation by the military forces of the United States in this district are hereby defined to be within the picket-lines of the posts of Natchez, Vidalia, and Bullit's Bayou, the public wood-yards, freedmen's camps, and plantations which have been leased by the Government and are worked by freedmen employed under the regulations of the Treasury Department, by agreement heretofore entered into and now on record in said Department. Beyond these lines no supplies whatever can go, except as is indicated in paragraph 7, General Orders, No. 80, series of 1864, headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. W. Davidson:

B. F. MOREY,

Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, No. 11.

Headquarters Cavalry Division,

Memphis, January 24, 1865.

I. The Eleventh New York Cavalry and Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, having reported to these headquarters for duty, are hereby designated as the Second Brigade, Cavalry Division, Department of Mississippi, and the senior officer, Lieut. Col. H. B. Dox, Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, will assume command of the same.
II. The Fifth Illinois Veteran Volunteer Cavalry having reported to these headquarters for duty, are hereby assigned to the First Brigade, Cavalry Division, Col. J. P. C. Shanks, commanding.

By order of Col. E. D. Osband:

JAMES H. S. LOWES,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 24, 1865—10.22 a. m.

Governor Fletcher,
Jefferson City:
What is decision of War Department on application to recruit new regiments or fill up old cavalry regiments?

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 37. WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 24, 1865.

14. Col. E. B. Marcy, Inspector-General U. S. Army, will at once return to Saint Louis, Mo., and continue his inspection duties in the West.

By order of the Secretary of War:
E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, January 24, 1865.

Colonel Beveridge,
Pilot Knob:
You will hold 200 mounted men ready to march to such places and at such times as Colonel Rogers commanding Second Sub-District may direct. The horses better be shod if not already well shod. Detail a good, energetic field officer to take command of the detachment and send his name by telegraph to Colonel Rogers, who will give the necessary instructions and arrange the details of the expedition, which will be kept as quiet as possible. Communicate with Colonel Rogers on the subject.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, January 24, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:
I can raise 250 mounted men; about 150 reliable and 100 raw troops. I would like to have 250 good troops from Third Sub-District under a strict officer, and as many of the Second Missouri State Militia as possible. I find that we can do a good thing. I have found where those arms are that were supposed to be on Horse Island. We can also break up a formidable organization. I cannot tell when I march until I find when the company from Farmington will reach me. The company from New Madrid and Charleston are marching here. Please order the detachment at Pilot Knob to shoe their horses and be ready to move at a moment’s notice. If you will order the officer who will command them to report to me by telegraph, I will give him full instructions as to rations, ammunition, transportation, &c., also time and place. I think likely he will require a day or two to shoe horses.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, January 24, 1865.

Colonel Rogers,
Cape Girardeau:

Colonel Beveridge has been ordered to hold 200 mounted men ready to march when you order. Let your movements be as quiet and secret as possible, and when you move telegraph the number of men you have and what time you start. It is reported that Dick Berryman is fitting out an expedition to start for Missouri from Northeastern Arkansas. Keep a little watch of him. It is not credited here, but it is well to be prepared for him. Communicate with Colonel Beveridge at Pilot Knob.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SUB-DISTRICT,
Cape Girardeau, January 24, 1865.

General Ewing,
Commanding:

I would like to leave Company A, Fiftieth [Missouri] Infantry Volunteers, at Charleston, or send another infantry company to relieve them until after this expedition, so I can use the cavalry company intended for there on the expedition. Lieut. Robert Davis, Company F, Second Cavalry Missouri State Militia, is in the city under charges. I understood that the charges were withdrawn. If so, I would like to have him ordered here, as I am short of good officers.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 19.
HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
Macon, Mo., January 24, 1865.

H. Maj. H. Hilliard, commanding detachment of Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry Volunteers, is hereby relieved from duty with said detachment and will report at once to the commanding officer of his regiment, at Pilot Knob, for duty.
IV. Col. E. A. Kutzner, Thirty-ninth Regiment Infantry Missouri Volunteers, having reported at these headquarters, in accordance with provisions of paragraph VII, Special Orders, No. 10, current series, from headquarters Department of the Missouri, for assignment to command of Sub-District of Glasgow, Mo., will at once relieve Maj. S. A. Garth, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, in said command.

V. Captain McNutt's company of Provisional (107) Enrolled Missouri Militia, Monroe County, Mo., is hereby called into active service, to date from December 20, 1864, since which time the company have been on duty.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,

PATTERSON, Mo., January 24, 1865—10.50 a.m.

Major-General DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

I have been thirty miles south of this post and heard of no force only the bands of guerrillas reported by my last scout. Captain Bostwick, commanding at this post, has a scout from his command on the Arkansas line and a number of reliable citizen scouts in North Arkansas, and expects reports from them soon. I start from here again this morning.

W. J. MORRIS.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 24, 1865.

Brigadier-General MITCHELL,
Omaha or Cottonwood:

How are matters at Julesburg and elsewhere on Overland route?

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 24, 1865.

Maj. Gen. SAMUEL R. CURTIS,
Comdy. Department of Kansas, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of Colonel Carson's report* of his fight with the Kiowas and Comanches on his expedition, as ordered by General Orders, No. 32, of last year, from these headquarters. Had General Blunt gone on to the Palo Duro, near the scene of this fight, those two tribes would doubtless have received a severe punishment. I find that it is impossible for me to guard the lines of communication hence to the States with the limited force at my command and at the same time guard the 9,000 Indian prisoners I have, and whip other hostile Indians within New Mexico and Arizona. It is simply impossible for me to do it; therefore, I must depend on your help to this end. Permit me to suggest that if you will send six companies of cavalry and two of infantry and a section of artillery via the bend of the Arkansas, near Walnut Creek, to the Palo Duro (there is a fine road leading to New Mexico by that route), and there to encamp for the summer, the cavalry to scout, the infantry and artillery to hold an intrenched camp with the hospital and supplies, the efforts of the Comanches and Kiowas would be paralyzed, for that point is in the very heart of their country, is easy of access, and has an abundance of fine wood, water, and grass. If, then, you would have two companies of infantry and four of cavalry at old Fort Atkinson, twenty-six miles below the Cimarron Crossing of the Arkansas, and two companies of infantry, one section of artillery, and four companies of cavalry at Fort Larned, which in all would amount to one regiment of cavalry, six companies of infantry, and two sections of artillery, I think that with what I could do from Fort Union to the crossing of the Arkansas, the route would be rendered safe during the summer. I suggest what is here written from having some knowledge of the country and of the summer haunts of the Indians. I am getting troops prepared to occupy the Lower Cimarron Springs, Cold Spring, Rabbit Bar, and Whetstone Creek. These will furnish escorts from point to point to the crossing of the Arkansas, a distance of 350 miles from Fort Union. Unless what is here suggested be done, and done by the 1st of May next, there will be many lives sacrificed and much property destroyed. I beg that you will furnish at least what is here suggested. If you know of better points than those named where troops should be placed, having these objects in view, of course you will place them there. I only offer the result of my observation and experience on the road to be guarded, and would not be understood as desiring to influence your own judgment in the matter. General Sumner, when in command here, employed myself upon this road for two seasons, which gave me some knowledge of the country. I inclose herewith a newspaper having paragraph I of Special Orders, No. 2, current series, from these headquarters, by which you will see that troops are moving toward Fort Union preparatory to taking up the positions upon the road here indicated. The Government should at once make the continuation of the telegraph from Denver to Santa Fé, then we could act in concert and produce lasting results. If I had influence it should be exerted to this end. The proposition is self-evident. Once you bring the whole matter of the good results to be attained by having telegraphic communication with Santa Fé, movements can be combined and timed by the commanders of these two military departments which must result, in the total subjection of the Indians of the plains. The economy of such an enterprise, when considered in connection with the cross purposes with which, for want of rapid communication we now have necessarily to work, is its principal recommendation.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS POST COMMANDANT,
Fort Rice, Dak. Ter., January 24, 1865.

Lieut. Col. Edward P. Ten Broeck,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, District of Iowa:

COLONEL: I have the honor to state that I arrived at this post from Fort Sully on the 21st instant, and found everything quiet. Received same date a communication from Captain Moreland, commanding at Fort Berthold, a copy* of which I inclose. Of the fact of the concentrating of hostile Indians in the vicinity of Fort Berthold, under Medicine Bear and the Man Who Strikes the Bee, rejecting all overtures of peace and being incited to unlawful acts and encouraged by presents and munitions of war by certain parties, said to be from the Red River of the North, I have already informed your headquarters some three weeks since. Captain Moreland does not ask for assistance; in fact, I do not know the number or strength of his garrison. I shall send to-morrow by two trusty Indians and open communication with him, and if he needs assistance shall send it. I held a conference to-day with Two Bear and The Shield and some representatives sent from the Gros Ventres on the Little Missouri River. They came in to hear what the whites had to say. They had heard much before, but would not believe it. I told them what was contained in the general’s letter of instruction to me. On the evening of the 19th instant some thirty warriors from the hostile camp below Berthold came down opposite the fort and stole sixty horses from Two Bear’s camp. Sixteen of Two Bear’s young men came down from the camp above, intercepted them, and recovered most of their horses. These young men report the following, the truth of which is vouched for by Two Bear: Half-breed traders from the British lines came into the hostile camp below Berthold with ten sleigh loads of goods. They rode into camp with the English flag at their head and said: “This flag will not be put down for anybody, only for God Almighty. Those who join us will not get hurt. Those who join the Americans will get hurt. We will return the last of the month with more powder, ball, and arms, and some Santees, and will take Fort Berthold and then Fort Rice.” They then gave a feast and presented the Indians with five kegs of powder and some sacks of bullets and traded more. At the feast the Man That Strikes the Bee said: “As long as I live I never shall shake hands with the whites.” Medicine Bear said: “I am the man to make war with the Americans; kill all you can, I shall say nothing against you.” There are over 1,500 lodges of Santees at Devil’s Lake and Mouse River. Of the hostile camp seventy lodges have quarreled and are starting down here for peace. Five hundred lodges of half-breeds have started for Fort Abercrombie to join the whites.

Mr. F. T. Pease, trader, whom, after I had seized his powder and ball, I perhaps unwisely allowed to proceed to Fort Berthold, was stopped by the Indians at the hostile camps above mentioned. All his horses, some oxen, and about $4,000 worth of goods were stolen. His life was only saved by the intervention of some of his relations. I still believe that the war spirit among the Indians is broken, and that the peace party is yet predominant, but would again urgently request of the general commanding permission to break up these trading parties from the British possessions and execute summary justice on the principals engaged this winter. I have no doubt but what there is a Confederate element at work. And again I repeat I fear the consequence in the spring if their influence is allowed to have full sway with the Indians this winter. I would very respectfully urge upon the general commanding the evident necessity of some more stringent rules and regulations governing traders at different posts on this river. There are now at Fort Sully and the camps immediately adjoining some ten unauthorized petty traders who are governed by no law whatever; also here at Fort Berthold there are four that are allowed to visit Indian camps and trade promiscuously. Feeling the necessity of the case at my own post, I published General Orders, No. 10, series of 1864, which I trust will meet with the general's approval. The health of this command is poor—disease principally scurvy. My supply of anti-scorbutics is limited, but I trust will be sufficient to soon check its progress.

*Not found.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

C. A. R. DIMON,
Colonel First U. S. Volunteer Infantry, Commanding Post.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF IOWA,
Davenport, February 22, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded.
I concur in everything said in regard to the evil effect of these half-breeds of the North. I have already reported this matter. I also agree in the matter concerning traders. Orders have been sent regulating this, which I suppose Colonel Dimon did not receive when he wrote this.

ALF. SULLY,
Brigadier-General.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Milwaukee, Wis., March 1, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Major-General Pope, commanding division, for his information.
As soon as the river opens I design going up to Saint Paul to make personal observations.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

[Third indorsement.]

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., March 1, 1865.

It seems impossible to restore quiet among the Northwestern Indians until some steps are taken to prevent interference of English subjects.

JNO. POPE,
Major-General, Commanding.

CITY POINT, VA., January 25, 1865—9.30 p. m.

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington:

General Reynolds' dispatch of the 14th instant is received. It corresponds with what were my own views, but is very far at variance from those expressed by General Steele and others whose statements were submitted some time since. It will be well to get from General Reynolds his views of the line that should be taken up and held next spring. His views will be given entirely independent of what may be said by speculators and others interested in having this and that place occupied by troops.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.
Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

Colonel: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 25th day of January, 1865: A report from Lieut. George G. Curtiss, Baton Rouge, January 18, 1865, states that he has since last report examined seven deserters and eighteen refugees, from whom he gleans the following information: The rebel General Hodge has been exonerated by a court of inquiry and reinstated in command of his former district. General Joe Johnston was reported in command of Hood's army, headquarters at Corinth. This report is confirmed by later ones. Colonel Scott's command has returned from the vicinity of Mobile and was last Saturday (January 14) at Woodville, Miss. A colored refugee from Jackson, La., reports that the rebels have stored in the cellar of the insane asylum at that place four boxes of arms and thirty-three kegs of powder; also an iron safe containing a large amount of specie. This negro was the body servant of the surgeon in charge, and assisted in placing these articles in the place indicated. Col. Frank Hatch, rebel collector of customs for the port of New Orleans, lives with one Captain Gilman, about three miles from Camp Moore. At the time of the capture of this city the valuable books and papers were removed by him, in part to a house in New Orleans and in part to his present residence, where is a kind of headquarters for smugglers from New Orleans. If the books and papers are of sufficient importance Lieutenant Curtiss, knowing parties who will assist him, thinks he can discover them if ordered to New Orleans for one or two days.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. Eaton,
Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

[Indorsement.]
Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 26, 1865.

Official copy respectfully furnished the commanding general Department of the Gulf for his information and with the recommendation that Lieutenant Curtiss be ordered to this city as herein suggested.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

Alfred Fredberg,

Hdqrs. Military Division of West Mississippi,
New Orleans, La., January 25, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,
Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to say that safe-conducts for transportation to pass up Red River may be granted subject to the approval of the commanders of the squadron and division, or the officers to whom this authority may hereafter be delegated by either. I am also directed to say that salt in limited quantities for family use may be permitted.

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Same to General Dana.)
Brigadier-General Cameron, Thibodeaux:

Your telegram of this a. m. is received.* The general hopes that Colonel Sayles will be able to catch some of the men who captured our party near Bayou Goula. The horses of the Third Rhode Island Cavalry were issued as serviceable horses. The general has never heard any material objection to them until recently. Have you received the dispatch marked confidential, sent up to-day.

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis:

Our expedition under Brigadier-General Carr left Pine Bluff to-day toward Camden.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

2. The garrison now at Hermann (except the post quartermaster) will march to Pilot Knob without delay and report to Colonel Beveridge, commanding Third Sub-District.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO., January 25, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

Please answer regarding troops at Charleston immediately.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel.

Colonel Rogers, Cape Girardeau:

The company at Charleston may remain until the expedition returns, when the changes proposed will be made. Lieutenant Davis started for his command yesterday.

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

* See p. 62.
Major-General Dodge:

The Second Arkansas Cavalry left this post for Memphis on the 13th instant.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel.

ROLLA, January 25, 1865.

Major-General Dodge:

I have the honor to report that scout from Maries County has returned and reports that there had not been any robberies near Vienna or elsewhere in the county, except that four men stole a yoke of cattle and two horses near the line of Miller County about a week since. The scout followed their tracks until the snow fell and covered them. There is another scout from Waynesville looking for the thieves, who went in the direction of Houston.

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 25, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Asst. Adj. Gen., Department of the Missouri, St. Louis, Mo.:

MAJOR: In compliance with requirement from your headquarters to make semi-monthly reports of military operations and state of affairs in district, I have the honor to submit the following: The only organized force of the enemy seen in the district since the 10th instant was in La Fayette County. This was a small squad of about fifteen, which appeared in the vicinity of Lexington. The squadron stationed at Lexington promptly attacked and scattered them. I sent heavy scouts to that county and thoroughly scattered it. A few straggling guerrillas were found, one or two killed, and some horses and equipments captured. I found it necessary to station an additional company at Lexington, which enables the commanding officer there to hold the post and keep a scout continually moving. I have for twelve days past kept scouts moving through La Fayette, Saline, and Cooper Counties. They have found no bands, only occasionally a straggling bushman, which indicates that there are bands in the community. I am satisfied in my own mind that there are rebels concealed in the river counties, awaiting the coming of spring, but they are most difficult to find. I will have La Fayette thoroughly searched in the coming week, and will spare no efforts to find the haunts of the villains. I have given special instructions to officers scouting that county to arrest all families against whom evidence can be found of their harboring or feeding guerrillas. General Orders, No. 7, current series, from your headquarters, is received. My purpose is to furnish copies of these orders to the sub-district commanders, with instructions to have every commanding officer of a scout take a number with him and leave them at the houses of families resident in locality frequented by guerrillas. The thorough circulation of these orders through the country will have, in my opinion, a wonderful effect. Either guerrillas or their aiders and abettors will soon have to quit the country. But how am I to get copies of these orders to circulate! I respectfully suggest that you have a large number forwarded to me for this purpose. Facilities for printing are very poor in this district. It is my design to have this order executed with energy and earnestness. The disposition made of the forces in the Fourth Sub-District, Colonel Harding's, has quite effectually routed the small bands of brushmen annoying certain localities there. The railroad company have the protection asked for, and I presume are progressing with their work. I have received a communication in form of a memorial from the representative Union men of that county, representing the wasted, depopulated condition of that county, the finest agricultural in the State, and anxious to have foreshadowed the policy of the military for peopling the county, and for the encouragement of agriculture, husbandry, &c.; to which I replied at length, prescribing for the care of the ills complained of, in accordance with the views and policy of the department commander, as far as known and as far as I was permitted to develop it. My answer was satisfactory to them, and if we are able to organize one good company of militia, properly officered, there, I hope to be able to make good my promises.

Since the receipt of a communication from the major-general commanding, expressing a desire to organize companies under the militia bill in process of completion by the legislature, I have deferred organizing local companies until the development of the plan so suggested by the major-general commanding. I herewith send for your consideration an order I had drawn on this subject, but shall not act on it until so advised by the major-general. Delay in organizing these home forces is dangerous. They should be ready for action when the woods begin to grow green. There is a source of trouble existing in some parts of the district which I am pained to mention, but a sense of duty and justice compels me to notice it. Self-constituted organizations of men, claiming to be Union men, many of them discharged soldiers or disbanded Enrolled Missouri Militia, are committing most diabolical outrages on peaceable and unarmed citizens. Often they assume the guise and deportment of bushwhackers and go around at night robbing and pillaging, and again, assuming the character of soldiers, they exercise the right of search, seizure, and arrest. Such things produce great terror and uneasiness among the people, and if endured will lead to all sorts of excess in vice, outlawry, and murder. A few nights ago a party of these brigands, having their rendezvous near Stanton, Miami County, Kans., made a descent on the western border of Henry County, pillaged the neighborhood, and hung one man till dead to extort from him the knowledge of the hiding place of his money. The radical Union men of that county, headed by Weaver, present member of the legislature, visited these headquarters and appealed to me to put an end to these things and to authorize the citizens of the troubled neighborhood to organize provisionally for the purpose of defending their firesides and property against these men. I have done so. The dealing with men claiming to be loyal for depredating and pillaging done under the specious pretext of hunting down bushwhackers, &c., is full of delicate responsibility, but I shall meet it and doubt not I shall be sustained by the major-general commanding. The officer of Enrolled, Missouri Militia commanding at Boouville seems wanting in ability to administer the affairs of so large a town. His soldiers are under miserable discipline. I will send a company there of regular troops, under an officer that will control matters for the interest of loyalty, order, and peace. The plan for block-houses sent me has been submitted to the engineer, and he is having the workmen conform thereto. The Gasconade is the boundary line between this and the Saint Louis District. Who shall have block-houses built there? I shall be unable to do it until I complete the work begun at other points. A large portion of cavalry, being all Missouri State Militia, are now dismounted in consequence of the quartermaster's department rejecting many horses for not coming up to the required standard, and others were not purchased because their value exceeded the ultimatum which the inspectors were authorized to pay. Requisitions have been ordered to be made to remount the men, and they should be filled. The want of a full and competent corps of staff officers has thrown on me a great amount of work, the effects of which are telling on me. I hope I may soon have an assistant adjutant-general and an assistant quartermaster.
Caip. LX.] CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.—UNION. 643

I am major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. District.

HEADQUARTERS FOURTH SUB-DISTRICT,
DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Kansas City, January 25, 1865.

Col. J. F. PHILIPS,
Commanding District of Central Missouri:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that during the month this county has been pretty thoroughly scouted both by cavalry and infantry. Between Westport and Hickman Mills a few guerrillas were ranging prior to my occupation of those points. Since then Dan Vaughn, with five or six men, has been seen near New Santa Fe. The road from this place to Independence is now safe. Soldiers in uniform travel it singly without interruption. Guerrillas have been driven from along the Little Blue all the way from near High Grove to its mouth. Still, they may return again. I sent two companies of infantry down onto the Sni, and thence upward to the Missouri River, having the cavalry out in other directions at the same time. The result of this was to discover about twenty bushwhackers, sometimes together and sometimes divided. Only one was killed, a Bill Watson, residing in the Pink Hill region. In fact, I do not think it possible to catch the rascals, except by stationing infantry near their "runways" to bushwhack them and let the cavalry make the drive. What is to be done to replace the First Missouri State Militia Battalion, which I now have and which will be mustered out early next month? Are detailed instructions to carry out General Dodge's General Orders, No. 7, current series, to be sent to sub-district commanders? Can you not procure the requisite order to have my four companies now stationed at Saint Joseph sent to me? If I am to protect the railroad line I shall need them.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHESTER HARDING, JR.,
Colonel, Commanding Sub-District.

HDQRS. CO. H, SEVENTH CAV. MISSOURI STATE MILITIA,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 25, 1865.

Col. JOHN F. PHILIPS,
Commanding District of Central Missouri:

COLONEL: I beg leave to submit the following statement connected with the killing of Allen McReynolds: I ordered Lieutenant Crain with a portion of the command to proceed to Grand Pass Church, some six miles east of Waverly, and to remain there until joined by me. While there he sent two men of his command to the house of Allen McReynolds to get something to eat and to palm themselves off as bushwhackers, which they did successfully. While there McReynolds told them he was willing to feed them and aid them in any way he could, but declined to carry provisions to the brush for fear of being caught and killed by the Federals. He also informed them that they were unsafe where they were, as squadrons of Federal troops had left Warrensburg, Sedalia, and Marshall the day before to thoroughly scout the country thereabouts, and to then concentrate at Miami. He also advised them to proceed to one Tracy's for safety and security, it being an out-of-the-way place and where Federal scouts seldom traveled; that he (Tracy) had plenty of forage and would take pleasure in entertaining them. When the command were through feeding, Lieutenant Crain arrested McReynolds and brought him out to the command. Soon after I joined them; heard the evidence above given, which he (McReynolds) acknowledged, as also to the fact that Quantrill and band had stopped with him several times, and other bands of bushwhackers which he had never reported to the Federal authorities. On consultation with the squadron commanders (Captain Hamblin and Lieutenant Crain) it was decided to execute McReynolds, which was carried out under my orders.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. M. BOX,
Captain Company H, Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, February 4, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Col. John F. Philips, commanding District of Central Missouri, for a full statement of this case.

By order of Major-General Dodge:

D. G. SWAIM,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, February 8, 1865.

Respectfully returned to headquarters Department of the Missouri and attention invited to inclosed reports.

There is no doubt but McReynolds was an intense rebel, and that he wore the cloak of loyalty as a disguise under which he was secretly engaged in the meanest acts of treason, giving succor, information, food, and encouragement to bushwhackers. The entire community where he lived were confirmed secessionists, and whether from the effects of early associations or existing sympathy, the fact is notorious that bushwhackers frequented, or habitually traversed that neighborhood, and its citizens made no effort to destroy or get rid of these pestilential outlaws, and when so prominent a member of that community as Allen McReynolds confessed his support of and adhesion to these bands in the face of his sworn allegiance, and in view of the terrible outrages so recently committed by guerrillas, it was beyond all endurance and it was deemed a necessity to teach this community and its like a warning lesson by executing summarily the chief among its citizens.

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel Seventh Cavalry Missouri State Militia, Comdg. District.
Respectfully forwarded to the Adjutant-General of the Army.
I gave this matter a thorough investigation at the time, and as it was clearly proven that McReynolds defiantly and openly assisted bushwhackers under a guise that deceived us, I took no action, though I do not approve of unlawful acts. This was done by an officer, and such things sometimes tend to bad results. I have given such orders as will prohibit any such action recurring. Hereafter men caught in arms will have no mercy shown them.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding.

Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War.
W. A. NICHOLS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS,}

HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI,
No. 20.}

Macon, Mo., January 25, 1865.

II. Companies F, G, K, and L, Third Cavalry Missouri State Militia, having been ordered to this post for the purpose of being mustered out of service, the commanding officer of each company will immediately turn over all Government property in his possession to proper staff officers. Ordnance and ordnance stores to Capt. J. A. Adams, acting district ordnance officer, and quartermaster property to Lieut. C. G. Holme, post quartermaster, Macon, Mo.

IV. Commanding officer Company I, Third Cavalry Missouri State Militia, will proceed at once with his command to Weston, Mo., reporting on his arrival at that place to Lieut. Col. H. M. Matthews, commanding Sub-District of Platte, for duty. Quartermaster's department will furnish transportation for dismounted men and company property.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:
W. T. CLARKE,

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans., January 25, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Dispatch received. Our troops repulsed attack on Julesburg two weeks ago, and an expedition is seven days out from Cottonwood hunting down Indians. They stole 300 head of cattle near Alkali Station recently. Otherwise, nothing important on either route since I wrote you. Station will be strengthened again when troops return from pursuit.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General, Commanding.

OMAHA, January 25, 1865.

Maj. C. S. CHARLOT,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Fort Leavenworth:

General Mitchell left the road at Morrow's Ranch on the 16th instant, going southeast with expedition. Have had no communication with him since that date. On the 19th Indians drove off 300 head of cattle near Alkali. Indians, estimated from 70 to 100 lodges, crossed the Platte, going north.

Respectfully,

JNO. PRATT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DIST. OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
 No. 1. } Fort Riley, Kans., January 25, 1865.
1. First Lieut. Robert S. Roe, Second Colorado Cavalry, is hereby relieved from duty as acting assistant adjutant-general at these headquarters.
2. Second Lieut. J. E. Tappan, Second Colorado Cavalry, is hereby announced as acting assistant adjutant-general, District of Upper Arkansas. All communications will be addressed to him accordingly.

By command of Col. James H. Ford:

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA,
DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST,
Saint Paul, January 25, 1865.

Maj. J. F. MELINE,
A. A. A. G., Hdqrs. Dept. of the Northwest, Milwaukee, Wis.:

MAJOR: I respectfully inclose herewith copy of a communication from Special Agent Brown, dated Fort Wadsworth, 9th instant, stating the condition of affairs among the upper bands of Sioux Indians within this district. There are now nearly seventy lodges of the Sissetons in the friendly camp on the James River, and they are kept under military surveillance, keep out regular guards of their own people, and make regular reports through Scout Gabriel Renville, who has general direction of the camp, to the commanding officer of Fort Wadsworth. The number of lodges will be increased, as you will perceive, to nearly 200 by the opening of spring, unless, indeed, the British traders and half-breeds shall succeed in deterring those now on their way down from surrendering themselves, by the reiteration of the falsehoods that they will be punished if they do so. This augmenting force of friendly Indians can be made available to intercept raiding parties from the hostile camps on their way to the settlements, as the feeling of enmity between the Indians disposed to resume their friendly relations with the Government and those determined upon a continuance of the war is becoming more and more bitter, and, indeed, relentless.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. SIBLEY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

SPECIAL MILITARY AGENCY,
Fort Wadsworth, Dak. Ter., January 9, 1865.

Maj. R. H. Rose,
Commanding:

Sir: On the evening of the 7th instant the son of the Standing Soldier with another young man came in from Buffalo Fish Lake, at which place four lodges of friendly Sissetons have arrived from Devil's Lake. These messengers inform me that they left Devil's Lake about a month ago and came down the Cheyenne leisurely, as they were compelled to hunt for subsistence. There were no buffalo at Devil's Lake, and they killed but four on their way down. They think the buffalo are west of the James River. These messengers confirm the report that there are about 100 lodges of friendly Sissetons at Devil's Lake that will be down early in the spring to surrender themselves and join their chiefs who have already come in and are now at the scouts' camp on the James River. As these Sissetons are without buffalo it is probable they will start down early (say in February), and will probably be down as low as the Bear's Lodge early in March, if not the latter part of February. I propose to send Paul and the Scarlet Plume to the Bear's Lodge the last of February to await the arrival of the camp from above, to quiet the fears of the Indians and take them direct to the scouts' camp. I am confirmed in the necessity of this course from the apprehensions of the messengers just arrived. They were by no means satisfied that they would not be taken and lodged with Curritonka on their arrival. That fate was predicted before they left Devil's Lake, and they were strongly urged to remain where they were. As soon as the Indians have provided meat to leave with their families, I propose sending three or four good men from the James River camp (say about the 1st of February) to visit the camp at Devil's Lake and disabuse the Indians in regard to the punishment which the Red River half-breeds assure them will be inflicted upon them when they are once within the power of the authorities here. I fear that unless this is done the Indians may be so far imposed upon as to prevent their coming down, which is a matter of importance to the Red River traders, of whom there are quite a number now trading at Devil's Lake. These messengers report that the Standing Buffalo braced up his courage to a pitch that enabled him to reach the end of the woods on the James some time since on his way to this post. Upon his arrival there, he began to reflect upon the dangers upon which he was advancing, and he expressed some doubts as to the propriety of pursuing the journey he had undertaken until he could obtain the latest news from this part of the country, and for that purpose he visited Devil's Lake, which visit resulted in his returning in great haste to his camp on the Mouse River. The latest intelligence these messengers have from Turtle Mountain is that there are a few more than 100 lodges of Medawakantons and Wahpetons encamped there. The remainder of the hostile Indians are on the Mouse, Assinaboine, and Missouri Rivers. The camp on the Turtle Mountain is said to be in an absolute state of destitution, the rabbits furnishing their food and clothing. When these messe-genrs return to their camp I will direct their moving to the James River instead of coming in here.
Respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. BROWN,
Major and Special Military Agent.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT INSPECTOR-GENERAL,
New Orleans, La., January 26, 1865.

Lient. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report, for the information of the major-general commanding, the following extracts from the report of the assistant inspector-general, U. S. forces at Kennerville, La.:

On the 20th instant the force consisted of four brigades of infantry, numbering nineteen regiments and four batteries of artillery. The command is encamped on the left bank of the river at Kenner, La., in consecutive order, by brigades, the first occupying the farthest position up the river. The ground is naturally exceedingly flat, low, and damp, and the violent and continued rain-storms that have prevailed since the arrival of the troops have so softened it that with the little drainage the whole surface is transferred to yielding mud, greatly increasing the difficulties of transportation, and almost annuling the usual requirements of troops in military drills and exercises. The sick report has greatly increased since the arrival of the troops at this point, though the prevailing complaints are not of a serious nature. The men are generally well provided with tents and camp equipage, though a large proportion of these supplies have been greatly damaged by field service. The worthless articles are being rapidly condemned and replaced. The hospital department is well supplied and cared for, the sick requiring extra attention being forwarded to the hospitals in New Orleans. The ambulances are in good condition and number about forty, and an efficient ambulance corps is being organized.
The quartermaster's and commissary departments are well and promptly supplied.

There are no depots at the post, for want of proper accommodations, and everything is brought up from New Orleans. If the camp continues here I think it advisable to erect depots, however temporary, to avoid delay in important cases, as stores cannot be kept on hand here within exposure to the weather. The transportation in the command amounts to 147 wagons and 938 mules, which is now being distributed in accordance with general orders from these headquarters, and will allow about seven wagons to a regiment and two to a battery. The discipline is generally good.
The men are respectful, tractable, and obedient, and the morale, already favorable, would, with a compact organization of the command and the routine of drills and military instruction, become excellent. The arms are generally in good, serviceable condition, except in the regiments armed with Enfield rifles, a larger proportion of which rifles are found unserviceable than in the same number of Springfield muskets. Accouterments are generally in good order. There are deficiencies in some regiments arising from the wear and tear of service and not being timely replaced.
These are being rapidly filled by requisitions. Ammunition is of good quality and well supplied. The horses of the artillery are in good condition, well fed, groomed, and cared for. In general, it may be said that the condition of the command is ordinarily good and efficient. It is rapidly being supplied and refitted with what is necessary, although such deficiencies are unusually great. Its general health is good, and although the troops are not now in a fit condition for a long campaign, they are rapidly approaching such condition, though the unusually wet weather and bad condition of the camps and roads have much interfered and delayed the results sought.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN M. WILSON,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General.
Brigadier-General ANDREWS,
Commanding:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding the Military Division of West Mississippi desires to concentrate the whole of your brigade at Pensacola with a view to the organization of the division you are to command. You will therefore proceed at once to Barrancas, Fla., and disembark your command, immediately thereupon ordering all your transports that can come into the sound to report to me at this place. The detached regiments of your brigade, Sixty-ninth Indiana and Ninety-seventh Illinois, will be ordered to you as soon as transportation is furnished.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. GRANGER,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS LA FOURCHE DISTRICT,
Thibodeaux, La., January 26, 1865.

Col. W. SAYLES,
Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Donaldsonville:
(Through General Cameron.)

It is very important that the cavalry and infantry arrive at Bayou Goula about the same time on the appointed day. General Sherman directs that you telegraph to Bonnet Carré the time you will be there, so that the infantry will regulate themselves accordingly. Acknowledge receipt.

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 26, 1865.

Major-General REYNOLDS,
Little Rock, Ark.:

General Grant wishes you to report your views in regard to the line which should be held and occupied next spring by the troops in your department, and also the number and character of the troops required for such occupation. The abandonment of Helena has been recommended by inspecting officers, both on account of its unimportance and its unhealthiness.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 24.
HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 26, 1865.

5. The commanding officer in charge of detachment of First Iowa Cavalry Volunteers, now at this post, will proceed with the detachment and horses, stores, and equipage of the regiment to Memphis, Tenn., reporting on arrival to Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi. All officers and men of this regiment in this department will accompany this detachment. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

PINE BLUFF, ARK., January 26, 1865—8.30 a. m.

Maj. JOHN LEVERING,

My command is all on the road, except the Pine Bluff brigade, which is to form the rear guard. It consists of 582 infantry, 157 cavalry, and 2 pieces of artillery (James rifles). General Clayton turned out more than he at first thought he could spare. My whole command consists of 2,459 infantry, 1,060 cavalry, and 6 pieces. Total infantry and cav alry 3,519. Number of men with artillery not reported, but a full complement for the guns.

Respectfully,

E. A. CARR,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 26, 1865.

Major-General DANA,
Memphis, Tenn.:

About ten days since McCray ordered two captains of his command, then at home about Batesville, to report to Colonel Lyles, in the Mississippi Bottom, near Memphis, on the 22d of this month. The order stated that he wanted none but young, able-bodied men, and 400 was the number required. It is reported in his command that 2,000 stand of arms are in waiting to be taken across the Mississippi River at or near Buck Island. The arms crossed in July last were crossed at that place. He has told his men that he has sufficient cotton to clothe his whole command, and that he has arrangements made to get the clothing. The cotton is supposed to be in the Mississippi Bottom, most probable in the vicinity of Island No. 40. Island No. 40 is a point for smuggling. My informant states that he has seen in the last few months fifty or sixty barrels of salt which were procured at that place, and is satisfied that several hundred barrels have been procured by rebels from that place during the period above named. James Henderson, now living at Cottonwood Point, some twenty miles above Memphis, is a smuggler and partner of John Gridler, who recently escaped custody at Saint Louis, and may be concerned in some way with the cotton and arms.
Gridler is now in this State; was not long since at Hopefield (opposite Memphis), and procured a pair of boots which were brought across the river for him. There is a man by the name of Thompson at Hopefield who is engaged in getting salt from Memphis and selling it to rebels.
Reves, with about 400 men, is now in the neighborhood of New Madrid, Mo. D. C. Cross, of this State, spends much of his time in Memphis and assists in smuggling. He lives on Crowley's Ridge, and guerrilla chiefs not infrequently make his house their headquarters. William Ciakin, who formerly lived at Batesville, in this State, has recently moved into the Mississippi Bottom, near Memphis. He is frequently in that place, and there are good reasons for believing that he is in partnership with those who are smuggling from that place.

J. J. REYNOLDS,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 24.
HDQRS. DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE,
Memphis, Tenn., January 26, 1865.

I. Brig. Gen. A. L. Chetlain, U. S. Volunteers, having reported to these headquarters for duty in accordance with Special Field Orders, No. 5, from the Secretary of War (L. Thomas, Adjutant-General), dated Louisville, Ky., January 18, 1865, is hereby assigned to the command of the Post and Defenses of Memphis. He will receive instructions from these headquarters.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. C. Veatch:
R. G. CURTIS,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 1.
HDQRS. POST AND DEFENSES OF MEMPHIS,
Memphis, Tenn., January 26, 1865.

In pursuance of paragraph I, Special Orders, No. 24, dated headquarters District of West Tennessee, January 26, 1865, I hereby assume command of the Post and Defenses of Memphis. All previous orders from these headquarters will remain in force, and the present staff will continue on duty as heretofore. All communications for these headquarters will be addressed to Lieut. John S. Lord, acting assistant adjutant-general.

A. L. CHETLAIN,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 12.
HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 26, 1865.

I. The Fourth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry is hereby temporarily detached from the Third Brigade, and will report to the commanding officer Cavalry Division for duty, as provost guard and pioneer corps for the present expedition. The commanding officer Fourth Illinois Cavalry will cause his quartermaster to receipt to Lieutenant Whiting, acting assistant quartermaster, Cavalry Division, for all pioneer implements in his possession.

By order of Col. E. D. Osband:
JAMES H. S. LOWES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., January 26, 1865.

Major-General DODGE,
Saint Louis:

The Forty-fifth Missouri Infantry has been ordered to Saint Louis for reorganization. Any forces you can spare from your department should be immediately sent to New Orleans for a winter campaign. There can be no danger of rebel raids in Missouri during the winter, and by spring we can give you other troops if required.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

PILOT KNOB, MO., January 26, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

It is not, in my opinion, really necessary to keep a company at Farmington. Captain Lonergan thinks it is the loyal citizens of Farmington and vicinity lately petitioned to have a company remain there, saying it is necessary for their protection. The company has quarters and stables there which are wanting here.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,
Colonel, Commanding.

PILOT KNOB, January 26, 1865.

Colonel ROGERS,
Cape Girardeau:

My forces will concentrate at Patterson, and if there is no necessity for going to Greenville they will move to the right of Greenville to Ash Hill, being a nearer and better route.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,
Colonel, Commanding.

PILOT KNOB, January 26, 1865.

Maj. H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Saint Louis, Mo.:

The scout from Patterson into Oregon County has returned. Killed seven bushwhackers. Could learn nothing definite about any force concentrating below.

JOHN L. BEVERIDGE,
Colonel, Commanding.

PATTERSON, January 26, 1865.

Colonel BEVERIDGE,
Pilot Knob:

The scouts that went to Alton, in Oregon County, have just returned. All well. Killed seven bushwhackers. Left Captain Austin at Eleven Points Creek. Learned nothing definite about any force concentrating below.

R. BAKER,
Captain, Commanding.
Special Orders, } Headquarters District of Rolla,
No. 22. } Rolla, Mo., January 26, 1865.

2. Capt. William Monks, commanding Company K, Sixteenth Cavalry Missouri Volunteers, will immediately on receipt of this order move with his command, camp and garrison equipage, to Houston, Texas County, Mo. On arriving at Houston, Captain Monks will at once proceed to construct, under the direction of Maj. O. P. Newberry, Fifth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, a stockade fort for the protection of the troops against surprise.

By order of Brigadier-General Brown:

J. H. STEGER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Leavenworth, Kans., January 26, 1865.
(Received 6 p.m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

The troops have returned to Overland route without finding Indians. Colonel Livingston, who commanded, says the route is all clear and mails should run through, as we are again ready to furnish escort.

S. R. CURTIS,
Major-General.

Special Orders, } Headquarters District of Upper Arkansas,
No. 18. } Fort Riley, Kans., January 26, 1865.

1. The commanding officer Company D, Second Colorado Cavalry, will report with his company for duty to the commanding officer Fort Riley, Kans.

By order of Col. James H. Ford:

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders, } Headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi,
No. 27. } New Orleans, La., January 27, 1865.

3. The following batteries of light artillery, now under the command of the chief of artillery and ordnance, Military Division of West Mississippi, will report to Maj. Gen. F. Steele for assignment to duty with the troops under his command at Kenner, La., viz: The Second Connecticut, the Second, Fourth, Seventh, and Fifteenth Massachusetts, the Twenty-first and Twenty-sixth New York, the First Indiana and Seventeenth Ohio Batteries. The major-general commanding at Kenner will cause these batteries to be carefully inspected, their deficiencies ascertained, and the whole put in thorough condition for immediate and active field service.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.
9. The detachment of the First Texas Cavalry now at Brazos Santiago, Tex., will without delay proceed to Baton Rouge, La., and rejoin the remainder of the regiment at that post. All Government horses with this detachment will be turned in to the post quartermaster at Brazos Santiago. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

C. S. SARGENT,

FORT PIKE, January 27, 1865.
(Received 5.10 p.m.)

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General, New Orleans:

There is one armed launch in Jordan River. They came down as far as Bay Saint Louis on Saturday evening. I send the reports I have of the matter by first conveyance.

Your obedient servant,

ALFRED G. HALL,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

BAYOU GOULA, January 27, 1865.
(Received 2 p.m. 28th.)

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report my arrival at this place at 3 p.m. to-day with five companies of my own regiment. I have encamped my command in the village, and shall to-morrow proceed to complete your instructions. I found on my arrival here Major Hatch, Eightieth U. S. Colored Infantry, with five companies of his regiment on board the steamer Iberville. The strength of the command is: Third Rhode Island Cavalry, 2 field officers, 1 adjutant, 6 line officers, 162 enlisted men; Eightieth U. S. Colored Infantry, 1 field officer, 2 staff officers, 8 line officers, 339 enlisted men. Please state whether the couriers between this post and Donaldsonville are to be furnished from my command exclusively. Lieutenant Miles, of the engineers, joined me at Donaldsonville.

Respectfully,

WILLARD SAYLES,
Colonel Third Rhode Island Cavalry, Commanding.

[Indorsement]

Colonel Sayles should furnish his own couriers. It was expected that his cavalry force would be much larger than he reports it.

T. W. SHERMAN.
HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 27, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER, BONNET CARRE:

Brigadier-General Sherman directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your report of the 23d instant, and to say to you that this report shows, if anything, that the picket post was attacked from below, and it is understood that there were no pickets or sentinels below the station to guard its approach. This lesson, it is hoped, will be advantageous. These picket stations will hereafter be visited daily by an officer, and a daily report made to the commanding officer. A further reconnaissance will be made of the topography of this country, and pickets be placed wherever they are found requisite to prevent smuggling or the invasion of guerrillas. There should be a picket above Gaines' (say two miles) to watch approaches by the river roads and the whole width of the belt of fast land. The picket at Grand Point is not sufficient for this purpose. There should be one near the high road, and an intermediate one between that and Grand Point, and besides the whole width and occasionally the country above should be constantly patrolled by detachments under the lead of an officer. A close watch must be kept upon the persons residing in the country who you report to be in connection with the guerrillas and the guerrillas themselves arrested if possible.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

LEWISBURG, January 27, 1865—5.30 p. m.

Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds,
Little Rock:

Last of the troops left Dardanelle at 10.30 this a.m. Steamer Alamo and flat with dismounted cavalry arrived here safe and will leave in the morning for Little Rock. Fortieth Iowa Infantry will camp to-night near Galla Rock. Colonel Williams' colored brigade is encamped here. This morning the ice was running quite heavily at Dardanelle, causing great difficulty in crossing the infantry. Will push everything forward to Little Rock rapidly as possible, retaining the section of Second Kansas Battery here till further orders. When the rebels were last heard from they were in vicinity of Caddo Gap, moving south. Troops all well and in good spirits.

Respectfully,

A. H.RYAN,
Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS INDIAN BRIGADE,
Fort Gibson, C. N., January 27, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. J. REYNOLDS,
Commanding Department of Arkansas, Little Rock, Ark.:

GENERAL: A copy of the inclosed order is forwarded.* When I started from Fort Smith, a former order of General Blunt which had been complained of was revoked, and I was directed to make needful regulations. For your information it is further added that the Indian

* For order (here omitted) see General Orders, No. 4, p. 516.
Nation occupies a peculiar position. No Treasury agent is sent to it, on the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury that it is not a "State in rebellion." The Indians have been connected with us by treaties. The purpose of the order is merely to check existing abuses, and conform as closely as possible to orders elsewhere and all the rules that are known. Copies of two communications already forwarded through district headquarters are also inclosed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. A. PHILLIPS,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF NATCHEZ,
Natchez, Miss., January 27, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjut. Gen., Mil. Div. of West Miss., New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of date the 23d instant in reply to my request that the Eighty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry might be retained in my command, and to report that I have this day ordered this regiment to embark for Kennerville, La. I have to request that I may be authorized to retain Maj. S. S. L'Hommedieu, of that regiment, as acting assistant inspector-general of this district. He has been acting in that capacity since I assumed this command, and has performed his duties as such to my entire satisfaction. In this connection I inclose a letter in his behalf from Major-General Sherman to Major-General Canby, which letter please return after perusal. Colonel Moore is at present on duty as member of a general court-martial for the trial of a case of outrages committed by negro troops. So soon as this case is concluded he will rejoin his regiment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. W. DAVIDSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 27, 1865.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Shall I send cavalry? If so, shall it go dismounted?

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 27, 1865.

Major-General DODGE,
Saint Louis:

Any cavalry that you can spare for General Canby will be mounted at cavalry depot at Saint Louis.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.
Headquarters Department of the Cumberland,
Eastport, Miss., January 27, 1865.

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge,
Commanding Department of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to respectfully request that you give the necessary orders directing that portion of the Merrill Horse now serving in your department to proceed to this point and join the detachment sent to my command for duty. The detachment now in this department is serving at my headquarters as couriers, and I am desirous to have the entire organization together and thoroughly fitted out for active service at as early a date as possible. The orders, I understand, have been issued from your headquarters for the remainder of the regiment to report to me, but as yet they have failed to do so. I would respectfully request your early action in this matter.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
GEO. H. THOMAS, Major-General, U. S. Army, Commanding.

Special Orders,
No. 27.

The Sixth Regiment Minnesota Infantry Volunteers will move to-morrow, proceeding by cars to Cairo, Ill., thence by steamer to New Orleans, La., reporting to Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby, commanding Miltary Division of West Mississippi, on arrival at that point. Quartermstaff's department will furnish transportation and telegraph the quartermaster at Cairo to have boats ready there for the regiment to leave immediately on its arrival. No teams or surplus baggage will be taken with the regiment.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES, Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of the Missouri,
Saint Louis, January 27, 1865.

Commanding Officer District of Saint Louis,
Saint Louis, Mo.:

SIR: The general commanding directs me to inform you that hereafter no persons will be banished from this department except by sentence of a military commission or by orders or instructions from these
headquarters.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. W. BARNES, Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Saint Louis District,
Saint Louis, January 27, 1865.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

MAJOR: I have just received a dispatch from Colonel Beveridge, commanding Third Sub-District, as follows:

The scout from Patterson into Oregon County has returned. Killed seven bushwhackers.

42 R R—VOL XLVIII, PT I
Captain Bostwick, Seventh Kansas Cavalry, commanding at Patterson, reports information obtained from scouts and spies in relation to the concentration of Confederate troops in Northeast Arkansas, as follows:

* * * * * * * * *

General McRae, commanding in Northeast Arkansas, issued an order about the 15th instant, ordering his command into camp at Jacksonport on the 25th of January, with the promise that they should be clothed and furloughed to go home and make a crop. General McRae has from 200 to 400 men in Lost Bottom, North White. They are not in camp, but scattered through the country at their homes. Col. Tom Freeman, of McRae's command, by virtue of General McRae's order of the 15th of January, ordered his men together about fifteen miles below Batesville, and got only nine officers and no men, the men declaring that they would not go; they would die at home first. Colonel Reeves, of General McRae's command, is not trying to get his men together. Lieut. Col. B. Austin Johnson, of Reeves' regiment, has from forty to eighty men on the border. Major Berryman is in Oil Trough Bottom, below the White River, with from 80 to 100 men, camping wherever he can find forage for his horses and provisions for his men. Captain Pratt, Captain Boso, Captain Denis, Captain Philips, Captain Weaver, and Lieutenant Williams have independent companies, and roam through the southeastern counties of Missouri and the northern counties of Arkansas, having with them from ten to thirty men each. There are numerous squads of outlaws straying in the hills and plundering from all parties. From the best information that I can obtain, I do not think that they have any intention of making a raid into Missouri, only by those bands.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
THOMAS EWING, JR.,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 27, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:

MAJOR: I have the honor to inform you that to-morrow morning 200 men march from Patterson, 170 from Cape Girardeau, 50 from Dallas, and 75 from Bloomfield, in all 495 men; all to be concentrated at Ash Hill under command of Col. J. B. Rogers, who is to move thence or beyond Jacksonport to break up any Confederate forces he may find in that region.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
THOMAS EWING, JR.,
Brigadier-General.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, January 27, 1865.

General Ewing,
Commanding:

Two hundred men march from Patterson to-morrow and 170 from here, 50 from Dallas, 75 from Bloomfield at 7 o'clock; all to be concentrated at Ash Hill, from which place I intend to move to Pocahontas, scouring the country from there. Intend to move rapidly to Jacksonport and endeavor to cut up McRae, who is said to be near there with parts of three regiments. I intend to go as far as circumstances will admit, and advance and retreat as I can. Do you approve?

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel, Commanding.
Saint Louis, January 27, 1865.

Col. J. B. Rogers, Cape Girardeau:

Dispatch received. I approve of the plan for the expedition.

THOMAS EWING, JR.,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS SAINT LOUIS DISTRICT,
Saint Louis, Mo., January 27, 1865.

Colonel Rogers, Cape Girardeau:

When will your expedition get off!
By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Cape Girardeau, Mo., January 27, 1865.

Captain Gilson, Assistant Inspector, Saint Louis District:

The expedition under Major Robbins had three skirmishes with the enemy. In the first he killed 1 captain, 2 lieutenants, and 6 men, and captured 24 horses. In the second engagement Captain Cochran's detachment killed seven men and captured a few stand of arms. In the third engagement, under Lieutenant Rinne, Second Missouri Artillery, killed 19 men, captured 50 horses and a few stand of arms. I will forward a full report to General Ewing in a few days. In making out the report of the 23d instant it was unintentionally omitted.

J. B. ROGERS,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 27, 1865.

Brig. Gen. E. B. Brown,
Commanding District of Rolla, Mo.:

GENERAL: Select from the accompanying list* twenty of the worst families of bushwhackers and order them to leave the department within twenty days from date of issue of the order, directing them to go by the way of the south line of the State, and to proceed 100 miles beyond the limits of the State and department. If found within that distance they will be promptly arrested, their property seized, and themselves imprisoned. In the issuing of the orders state that they are banished by my orders, and for being the families of notorious bushwhackers and for openly persisting in aiding, feeding, harboring, and giving all encouragement in their power to guerrillas, bushwhackers, and outlaws. These families will be allowed the privilege of taking with them sufficient of their personal property, such as clothing, &c., to render them comfortable. The inclosed papers will be returned with a complete list of families banished in accordance with these instructions.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

*Not found.
GENERAL ORDERS, } HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF ROLLA,
No. 5. } Rolla, Mo., January 27, 1865.

The following-named officers having reported at these headquarters in accordance with orders from headquarters Department of the Missouri, are hereby assigned to duty as members of the district staff, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly: Capt. J. H. Steger, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, assistant adjutant-general, to date from January 14, 1865; First Lieut. Rufus Campion, aide-de-camp, to date from January 4, 1865; Capt. T. S. Slaughter, district provost-marshal.

E. B. BROWN,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 27, 1865—10.10 a.m.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
Macon, Mo.:

Concentrate the Forty-ninth Missouri Infantry at some point on North Missouri Railroad immediately. Where it is necessary replace them with militia or dismounted cavalry. Will send Thirty-ninth to take their place in a few weeks.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

MACON, January 27, 1865.

Maj. J. W. Barnes,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Missouri:
The Forty-ninth will be concentrated at Mexico.

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 27, 1865—5 p.m.

Lieutenant Clarke,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Macon, Mo.:

As soon as Forty-ninth is concentrated send them to Benton Barracks. How long will it take to get them together? Hurry them up.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

MACON, January 27, 1865.

Colonel Kutzner,
Commanding Sub-District, Glasgow:

General Dodge has ordered the concentration of the Forty-ninth Infantry at some point on the North Missouri Railroad. You will at once relieve Captain Benecke's company by some other troops, and send him to report to Colonel Smart, at Mexico, Mo. Let there be as little delay as possible in this movement.

By order of Brigadier-General Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.
Lieutenant-Colonel Smart,

Commanding, Mexico, Mo.:

General Dodge directs the immediate concentration of the Forty-ninth at some point on the North Missouri Railroad. You will execute the order at once and report by telegraph to these headquarters.

By order of Brigadier-General Fisk:

W. T. Clarke,

Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Liberty, Mo., January 27, 1865.

(Received 2.45 p. m. 28th.)

Maj. Gen. G. M. Dodge:

John Reton was killed by a squad of men belonging to Captain De Smith's company (L), Third Missouri State Militia Cavalry, stationed at Plattsburg, Clinton County, Mo. That company has been ordered to Macon City to be mustered out of service. John Reton, sr., is not dead. Madison Morris was wounded, not killed, while in the streets of Liberty. The firing party was concealed, but it is believed that a man from Kansas is the person, as he has not been seen since that time. Morris is getting well.

Angus Bartlett,

Major, Commanding.

Special Orders, } HDQRS. DISTRICT OF UPPER ARKANSAS,
No. 19. } Fort Riley, Kans., January 27, 1865.

5. Company L, Second Colorado Cavalry, is hereby relieved from duty at Fort Ellsworth, Kans., and will proceed without delay to Fort Larned, Kans., reporting upon their arrival to the commanding officer of that post for duty.

6. Company H, Second Colorado Cavalry, is hereby relieved from duty at Fort Riley, Kans., and will proceed without delay to Fort Ellsworth, Kans.

By order of Col. James H. Ford:

J. E. Tappan,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters District of Colorado,

Denver, Colo. Ter., January 27, 1865.

Messrs. Baum & Co.,

Kansas City and Santa Fe Stage Co., Boonerville, Colo. Ter.:

Gentlemen: Your communication relative to the danger anticipated from the Indians, and your designs to withdraw the stage stock and discontinue the carrying of the U. S. mail, is before me. I regret very much that the existence of such a state of affairs renders it, in your judgment, unsafe for the coaches to travel. You are well aware that the Overland route is entirely shut up except for very large trains, so that with your withdrawal we would be entirely cut off from all communication from the eastern world. You also know that my hands are being and have been tied ever since my arrival here; that not 200 available men were at my command in the entire district, and although Fort Lyon is now in my command, yet the regiment is just being consolidated, and therefore hardly in a fit condition to be moved until the transfer going on is completed. I will instruct the commanding officer at Fort Lyon to give you all the protection he possibly can and the commanding officer at Camp Fillmore will do the same thing with the limited means at his command. I sincerely trust, gentlemen, that you will continue with the coach on the line, at least until the Indians really make open demonstrations of hostility against you.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,
Denver, Colo. Ter., January 27, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER AT FORT LYON, Colo. Ter.:

Sir: I have just received a communication from the Kansas City and Santa Fe Stage Company, in which they threaten to stop running the coaches owing to the hostility of the Indians. This must be avoided if possible, as it is the only route now open to the eastward. You will afford the stage company all the protection you possibly can, and use your efforts to prevent so great a calamity as is likely to befall us should the company adhere to their expression. I have communicated with them on the subject, and they are aware that you are receiving these instructions. Push on the work of the fortifications, as it is very likely your command will soon be reduced. I have ordered that Assistant Surgeon Smith be sent you for duty at Fort Lyon. Should Captain Jacobs not have left for this place in compliance with original instructions, have him do so at once.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 28, 1865.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL OF THE ARMY,
Washington, D. C.:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 5th instant, transmitting a copy of General Sherman's letter of the 25th ultimo,* in relation to supplying the want of forage for armies in advanced positions by a system of foraging in the enemy's country. This important matter has heretofore and shall continue to receive my earnest attention, and your views agree perfectly with my own on the subject. Copies of General Sherman's and your own letters have been furnished to the commanders of departments and armies in this command, with instructions to carry out these views whenever applicable and practicable.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. R. S. CANBY,
Major-General, Commanding.

* See Vol. XLIV, p. 807.
Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby,
Commanding Department of West Mississippi:

General: An old acquaintance, reliable and intelligent, has just arrived from Texas who has had peculiar facilities for mixing with the people of the State generally. He informs me the people generally are sick unto death of the rebellion and only await an invasion in sufficient force to gain confidence of ability to protect them to inaugurate an extensive and formidable rebellion against the existing rebellion. He represents the disaffection wide-spread and general. At Brownsville he states there are 800 rebel troops under command of Slaughter, and he says fully one-half of these troops will cross into Mexico if a movement is made upon them, and the balance will scatter and go home. He represents them completely demoralized, and says when any reported movement on Brownsville has been reported the rebels have had their arrangements made to evacuate. At a called session of the legislature of the State recently held one of the best intellects in the State boldly announced a return to their allegiance as their only salvation. He estimates the rebel force in the Trans-Mississippi Department as follows: Price's army at Lanesport, above the Red River, 8,000 men; Magruder's army at Monroe, Fulton, and vicinity, 9,000; Buckner's army, 4,000; Cooper and Stand Watie, Indian Nation, 3,000; at Houston, Tex., and vicinity, 1,000; at Brownsville, Tex., and vicinity, 800; at Galveston, Tex., 1,500; Colonel Beard, Falls and adjoining counties, 400; total, 27,700. County militia organizations might be added which would probably swell the number 5,000 men. They are generally most reliable to do no fighting. Mr. W. thinks that a very large per cent. of those now in the army would avail themselves of the first opportunity to abandon the service.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

W. C. PHILIPS.

Baton Rouge, La., January 28, 1865.

Assistant Adjutant-General,
Department of the Gulf:

The following telegram just received from Port Hudson and furnished for information:

It is rumored that Colonel Scott is concentrating a considerable force at some point between Jackson and Woodville. A party has been seen in the vicinity of Jackson wearing the Federal uniform. Five hundred men and two pieces of artillery left Jackson a week ago Friday, it is supposed for the above point.

GEO. L. ANDREWS,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

Little Rock, January 28, 1865—10.45 a.m.

Col. A. H. Ryan,
Commanding Post, Lewisburg:

A scout came in last night who reports that Newton has crossed to the north side of the river above Dardanelle with about 1,600 men and one piece of artillery. Is there any truth in the report?

R. F. PATTERSON,
Lieut. Col. and Provost-Marshal-General, Department of Arkansas.
LEWISBURG, January 28, 1865.

Lieut. Col. R. F. Patterson,
Provost-Marshal-General, Little Rock:

I left Dardanelle Thursday morning last. At that time what was left of Newton's regiment was going for Caddo Gap as fast as horse-flesh could carry them. After his stampede at Boggs' Mill I do not think he had 150 men left. He has had no artillery with him. Brooks had one piece. Send for Major Jenks, First Iowa Cavalry, who arrived in Little Rock last evening. He can post you fully as to affairs above.

Respectfully,

A. H. Ryan,
Colonel.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 28, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana,
Commanding, &c., Memphis, Tenn.:

Prepare 2,500 infantry from the District of Memphis for service in the field and send them with as little delay as practicable to report at this place. Direct General Washburn to detach in like manner 2,000 infantry from the District of Vicksburg. Both detachments will bring with them not only the field transportation required by existing orders, but also a supply train for a march of twenty days. Fuller instructions will be sent to-morrow.

E. R. S. Canby, Major-General, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, February 16, 1865.

Official copy respectfully transmitted to the commanding general Department of Mississippi, with the remark that up to the present writing only the Sixty-eighth U. S. Colored Infantry has arrived from Memphis. The detachment from Vicksburg arrived here nearly a week ago.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. Christensen,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 28, 1865.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn,
Commanding District of Vicksburg:

GENERAL: By direction of the major-general commanding department I have the honor to inform you that Colonel Osband has landed at Gaines' Landing, La., with 3,000 men (cavalry), with the purpose of engaging and punishing the rebel forces under Harrison, and of driving them beyond the Washita. The transports, after lying about a week at Skipwith's Landing, will proceed to Vicksburg and coal, and from there will probably proceed to Natchez. He also directs me to say that you will please render any assistance called for and give immediate notice of any information you may obtain in regard to the expedition.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. W. FOX,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF MISSISSIPPI,
Memphis, Tenn., January 28, 1865.

Brig. Gen. J. W. DAVIDSON,
Commanding District of Natchez:

GENERAL: By direction of the major-general commanding department I have the honor to inform you that Col. E. D. Osband, commanding Cavalry Division, Department of Mississippi, has landed at Gaines' Landing with 3,000 men, with the purpose of engaging and punishing the rebel force under Harrison, and of driving them beyond the Washita. The transports, after lying about a week at Skipwith's Landing, will proceed to Vicksburg and coal, and from there will probably proceed to Natchez. He also directs me to say that Colonel Osband expected to come out on the Mississippi River in the vicinity of Vidalia about the 10th of February. You will please furnish the transports with what fuel they may require, and upon the arrival of Colonel Osband facilitate his immediate return to Memphis. You will please furnish such information as you may obtain regarding the expedition.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. W. FOX,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS EXPEDITION,
Steamer John Raine, Eunice, Ark., January 28, 1865.

Maj. Gen. N. J. T. DANA,
Commanding:

GENERAL: Without any accident worth the mention we landed here at 2 a.m. and will be ready to leave here in about one hour and a half, or the moment it is daylight. The fleet lay at Island 63 yesterday about six hours and took on 300 cords wood, thus having fuel enough to run them back to Memphis. I send nine small steamers back and retain the five large. My orders are that these boats remain at Gaines' Landing forty-eight hours and at Skipwith's six days and then report to Brigadier-General Brayman, at Vidalia. All I learn of the country is against the probability of successful movements at this time, but I shall not fail, except to succeed be impossible. I have landed here at Eunice, the terminus of the railroad, because it has a better landing than Gaines'; has no one on the lookout to watch our landing, and the road to the interior is a little better through the first swamp. The roads join six miles from here.

I have the honor, general, to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. OSBAND,
Colonel Third U. S. Colored Cavalry, Commanding Expedition.
Major-General Dana,

Commanding Department of Mississippi:

General: The command will have crossed by 12 m. to-night. I move at daylight toward Harrison's camp, but have made a diversion toward Monticello. Have taken two prisoners; learn from them that Price is alive and gone to Texas, where a part of his command are; that the bushwhackers, &c., brought out of Missouri by him are devastating all Western Arkansas. All Confederate troops are concentrated at Alexandria; only one brigade at Camden. Could co-operate with troops from Little Rock and take the city if I had the orders. I believe Shreveport can be taken by the cavalry from Little Rock. Troops in excellent condition and roads very good. Shall be at Gaines' Landing again in nine or ten days. Have ordered the boats to remain there and have sent to the mouth of White River for a barge of coal for their use. This I decided upon because I found the swamp from Tensas River to Black River an impassable swamp.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. Osband,

Colonel Third U. S. Colored Cavalry, Commanding Expedition.

Special Orders, } Hdqrs. District of West Tennessee,
No. 25. } Memphis, Tenn., January 28, 1865.

III. Lieut. Col. W. R. Lackland, One hundred and eighth Illinois Infantry, is assigned to duty as provost-marshal of the Post and Defenses of Memphis. The following assistants are assigned him: Capt. John L. Wilson, One hundred and fourteenth Illinois Infantry, in charge of Irving Block Prison and records pertaining to prisoners; Capt. J. E. McDermot, One hundred and eighth Illinois Infantry, in charge of the pass department; Capt. John W. Plummer, One hundred and eighth Illinois Infantry, inspector of permits for goods; Capt. D. R. McCutchen, One hundred and eighth Illinois Infantry, acting quartermaster of provost-marshal's department, in charge of property; Capt. S. E. Rankin, Eighth Iowa Infantry, evidence department. Maj. J. M. Raum, One hundred and twentieth Illinois Infantry, is relieved from the charge of the Irving Block Prison and will report for duty to these headquarters. The above assignments to duty are temporary until approved at department headquarters.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. C. Veatch:

R. G. Curtis,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters District of West Tennessee,
Memphis, Tenn., January 28, 1865.

Capt. F. W. Fox,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Mississippi:

Captain: I have just received from Colonel McArthur, Fourth U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), commanding Post of Columbus, Ky., a dispatch stating that Brigadier-General Meredith, commanding District of Western Kentucky, had issued an order relieving him from command of said post, and upon his declining to obey the order of General Meredith he was placed in arrest under guard and carried to Paducah, Ky. I beg leave to call the attention of the major-general commanding department to the case, and ask that prompt measures be taken to effect the release of Colonel McArthur from this arrest. I do not wish to involve officers in difficulty by pursuing a course which would lead to conflict of authority and violence, if persisted in, and therefore most respectfully request that the proper authority, vested with the power, will settle all questions of dispute by definite orders. A statement of the authority upon which Colonel McArthur was acting will show how unjust and improper it is that he should be placed in arrest for obeying the direct and positive orders of his superior and commanding officer. General Orders, No. 277, from the War Department, dated November 7, 1864, directs that all troops on the east bank of the Mississippi River be detached from the several department and corps commanders and be required to report to Major-General Canby, commanding Military Division of West Mississippi. The official letter of Major-General Canby, of November 27, 1864, attaches the Post of Columbus to Major-General Dana's command, and Special Orders, No. 21, from headquarters Department of Mississippi, dated December 26, 1864, requires the Post of Columbus, Ky., to report to the headquarters District of West Tennessee. Being placed in command of the District of West Tennessee, in obedience to the orders referred to above, I required Colonel McArthur, Fourth U. S. Colored Artillery (Heavy), commanding Post of Columbus, Ky., to report to me and obey my orders. On the 28th of December, 1864, I prepared and delivered to Colonel McArthur two letters of instructions relative to his duties as post commander, and directing and commanding him not to obey the orders of any officer who did not derive his authority from major-general commanding Military Division of West Mississippi, Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, or from headquarters District of West Tennessee. These instructions were again repeated in official letters from me to Colonel McArthur on the 10th and 16th days of January instant. During this time Brigadier-General Meredith, commanding District of Western Kentucky, was claiming the Post of Columbus, Ky., as a part of his command, and issuing orders to the post commander in direct conflict with my orders. To remove all cause for any misunderstanding between General Meredith and myself, and to prevent any difficulty which might arise from conflicting orders, I addressed to him an official communication on the 28th December, 1864, calling his attention to the orders above referred to, and asking him for the orders upon which he was claiming command of the Post of Columbus. No answer has been received to that letter. General Meredith has finally asserted his claim by force and has placed Colonel McArthur in arrest and carried him under guard to Paducah, Ky. The Post of Columbus is on the east bank of the Mississippi River, about twenty miles below the mouth of the Ohio River, and it has been repeatedly declared in orders and dispatches from the War Department to be within Major-General Canby's command. Colonel McArthur could not obey the opposite orders of two commanders. In obeying my orders he was compelled to refuse to obey the orders of Brigadier-General Meredith. For this he is made a close prisoner, deprived of his command, and carried under menace of force to Paducah, Ky. I beg leave to call attention to the correspondence and orders referred to in this communication, copies of which are herewith forwarded. The most important of these have been heretofore forwarded, as will be seen by note attached.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES C. VEATCH,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 28, 1865—9 p. m.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.:

I sent one regiment of infantry yesterday; will send another to-morrow or next day.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
January 28, 1865—10.20 a. m.

Brig. Gen. ROY STONE, Alton, Ill.:

Send down four companies. I have troops on way here. As soon as they arrive will return them.

G. M. DODGE,
Major-General.

ALTON, ILL., January 28, 1865—4.30 p. m.

Major-General DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

Four companies One hundred and forty-fourth Illinois Volunteers will leave for Saint Louis this evening by special train.

ROY STONE,
Brigadier-General.

SAINT LOUIS, January 28, 1865.

Colonel BONNEVILLE, Benton Barracks:

Order Merrill's Horse, with camp and garrison equipage, to march to the city early to-morrow morning and report to Colonel Weydemeyer, commanding Post Saint Louis, for duty,

By order of Brigadier-General Ewing:

H. HANNAHS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HERMANN, MO., January 28, 1865.

Brig. Gen. THOMAS EWING,
Commanding District of Saint Louis:

The river blocked by ice. Government stores and boat here exposed to attack of bushwhackers from counties opposite Hermann. Cannot the order for removal of Company I, Seventh Kansas Cavalry, be countermanded? The citizens claim protection. Please answer.

JOHN B. MICHE,
Postmaster.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 28, 1865.

Col. JOHN F. PHILIPS,
Commanding Central District of Missouri:

Your favor of the 24th instant came duly to hand. There is no objection on my part to Captain Morton continuing to report to you and drawing his supplies from your district. I will have the general orders of the district sent to him, and he will be governed in his general conduct and management by them. I will write to him to-day to continue to report to you. There seems to be considerable party bitterness and ill feeling in that section yet. Captain Morton should avoid as much as possible a connection with either party, and devoting himself to the duty of arresting and punishing all promoters of strife and violation of law without regard to fear or favor. I have some troops of the old Seventh Provisional in the vicinity of Osceola, but do not expect for him to keep them there a great while. The people and families in Arkansas are talking loudly of a general guerrilla crusade into this State again in the spring, so my scouts from Arkansas say. If the people will meet them with spirit and determination when they first come in, my opinion is that they will not remain all summer, as was the case last year. I expect to be fully advised as to the plans of the enemy for the spring campaign in about two weeks, and will communicate my information to you. The telegraph wire should be put up from here to Sedalia, I think, that you may be earlier advised of the movements of the bands north. The only force wintering north of the Arkansas is Dobbin's brigade, which is camped on Crowley's Ridge, between the Saint Francis and Blue Water Rivers. Men from this command say that bushwhacking will open vigorously as ever as soon as the leaves come out. Write when convenient.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, January 28, 1865.

Capt. WILLIAM MEREDITH,
Commanding, Lexington, Mo.:

CAPTAIN: The colonel commanding directs that on Wednesday morning, February 1, you will start from your command a scout of all your available cavalry to act upon the following basis: The move to begin on Wednesday morning next, February 1, 1865, and continue five days; a force of fifty men to move from Warrensburg to Tabo, La Fayette County, to patrol the creek. A column will at the same time move from Warrensburg and pass east of Columbus and to the vicinity of Wagon and Buck Knobs, throwing out a flanking party to Renick Mills. All the available cavalry will move from Pleasant Hill to the left and a little south of Buck Knob. The balance of Colonel Harding's cavalry in the Fourth Sub-District will be thrown toward Lisbon, on the Missouri River, with instructions to patrol toward Wellington. Colonel Harding will also press in as much infantry as he can into the Snibar Hills and vicinity of Chapel Hill, to scour the brush and hills. Your force will move from Lexington to Greentown Valley. All officers connected with the move will be advised of the plan, to prevent any mishaps. To insure recognition, let the party who hails ask, "Who comes there!" Answer, "America." The party hailed then asks, "Who are you?" Answer, "Dodge." You will report fully the result of your co-operation immediately on return of the scout. You will also instruct the officers in charge to ascertain the names of all families belonging to bushwhackers, their aids and abettors, and report their names, age, and number of each sex.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. CONKLIN,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 28, 1865.

COMDG. OFFICER FIRST CAV. MISSOURI STATE MILITIA:

The colonel commanding directs that you detail Captain Burris and fifty men to move on the morning of Wednesday, February 1, 1865 (scout to continue five days), east of Columbus and to the vicinity of Wagon and Buck Knobs. Captain Burris will throw out a flanking party to Renick Mills. A column will move at the same time from Pleasant Hill to the left and a little south of Buck Knob. The balance of Colonel Harding's cavalry in the Fourth Sub-District will be thrown toward Lisbon, on the Missouri River, to patrol toward Wellington. Colonel Harding will also press [as large] a number of his infantry as possible into the Snibar Hills and vicinity of Chapel Hill. A force will also move from Lexington to Greenton Valley. All officers connected with this move will be advised of the plan, to prevent any mishaps. To insure recognition, let the party who hails ask, "Who comes there?" Answer, "America." The party hailed then asks, "Who are you?" Answer, "Dodge." You will report fully the result of your co-operation immediately on return of this scout. You will also instruct the officer in charge to ascertain the names of all families belonging to bushwhackers, their aids and abettors, and report their names, age, and number of each sex.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. CONKLIN,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 28, 1865.

COMDG. OFFICER SEVENTH CAV. MISSOURI STATE MILITIA:

The colonel commanding directs that you detail fifty men of your command, under a competent officer, for a scout of five days, who will move from this post on the morning of Wednesday, February 1, 1865, to Tabo, La Fayette County, patrolling and scouring the creek. At the same time another column will move from this post east of Columbus, and to the vicinity of Wagon and Buck Knobs, throwing out a flanking party to Renick Mills. Colonel Harding will move from Pleasant Hill with his available cavalry to the left and a little south of Buck Knob. The remainder of Colonel Harding's cavalry will be thrown toward Lisbon, on the Missouri River, and patrol the river toward Wellington. Colonel Harding will also send infantry into the Snibar Hills and vicinity of Chapel Hill. The entire command all to co-operate. A column will also move at the same time from Lexington to Greentont Valley. The officers connected with this move will be advised of the plan, to prevent mishaps. To insure recognition, let the party who hails ask, "Who comes there?" Answer, "America." The party hailed then asks, "Who are you?" Answer, "Dodge." You will report fully the result of your co-operation immediately on return of the scout. You will also instruct the officer in charge to ascertain the names of all families belonging to bushwhackers, their aiders and abettors, and report their names, age, and the number of each sex.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. CONKLIN,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF CENTRAL MISSOURI,
Warrensburg, Mo., January 28, 1865.

Col. Chester Harding,
Commanding Fourth Sub-District, Kansas City, Mo.:

COLONEL: Yours of the 25th instant is received. I am gratified at the favorable aspect of affairs in your district, and most sincerely hope we shall, through your energy and wisdom, be able to compose that troubled country and see it once more prosperous. I am unable to say how the place of the outgoing Missouri State Militia is to be supplied. I have some time ago laid the whole matter before the department commander. My own impression is that the main reliance for Missouri for military protection in the coming season is on the militia to be organized under the bill in process of completion. The horses (public) of the Missouri State Militia being mustered out will be reissued to the remaining companies, so as to keep them mounted. I am having large number of copies of General Orders, No. 7, prepared and will send you your proportion with detailed instructions. I leave in the morning for Saint Louis to advise with General Dodge, and will urge the transfer to your district of the residue of your regiment. I propose the following scout, the movement to begin on Wednesday morning next and continue for four or five days: I will send from here a force to Tabo, La Fayette County, to patrol the creek; a column from here to pass east of Columbus and to the vicinity of Wagon and Buck Knobs, throwing out a flanking party to Renick Mills. You send your available cavalry from Pleasant Hill to the left and a little south of Buck Knob. Throw the balance of your cavalry toward Lisbon, on the Missouri River, with instructions to patrol toward Wellington, and then press in as much infantry as you can into Snibar Hills and vicinity of Chapel Hill, to scour the bush and caves. I will also move at the same time a scout from Lexington to Greentont Valley. Keep the infantry on the center and cavalry on the circumference, and I think if there is a den of the rebel beasts in that locality we will stir it up. Look well to the rear of your infantry; advise your officers of the plan, to prevent mishaps. To insure recognition, let the party who hails ask, "Who comes there?" Answer, "America." The party hailed then asks, "Who are you?" Answer, "Dodge." Report fully the result of your co-operation immediately on return of the scout.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. F. PHILIPS,
Colonel, Commanding District.
Lieut. Col. J. F. McMahan, Sixteenth Regiment Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty as commanding officer of the Post of Lebanon, Mo. He will assume command of the post without delay, and relieve Maj. E. K. Hart.

Maj. R. K. Hart, Sixteenth Regiment Missouri Cavalry Volunteers, upon being relieved from duty as commanding officer of the Post of Lebanon, Mo., will without delay assume command of the regiment.

By order of Brig. Gen. John B. Sanborn:

WM. T. KITTREDGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 28, 1865.

Capt. Anderson Morton,
Commanding at Osceola, Mo.:

Captain: Your communication of the 23d instant is received and contents noted. No application on the part of the citizens has been received here for any change at Osceola. If any is received it will not be acted upon until after a report from officers in that immediate vicinity. In answer to a letter from Colonel Phillips, I have informed him that you would continue to report to him; but in your conduct and management of affairs be governed by the general orders of this district. You will therefore report and be governed accordingly. If there are two or more parties in your section, avoid connection and favors to each, but arrest all guilty of crime and disorder without fear or favor. Inform me of the condition in your locality from time to time as circumstances may require.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 28, 1865.

Commanding Officer Lebanon, Mo.:

The general commanding directs me to say that the numerous complaints which reach these headquarters as to the conduct of the troops at your post reveal a state of demoralization and insubordination that calls for his severest censure. That this condition of affairs, so subversive of all discipline and good order, must be the result of neglect of his duties on the part of the commanding officer at that post, or of ignorance as to the nature and extent of those duties, only less culpable than willful neglect. The duties of a commanding officer are clearly defined in Army Regulations and existing orders. Prominent among these is the duty of enforcing and preserving discipline and good order, and a punctual and faithful compliance with existing orders on the part of the troops of his command. Within the limits of his authority in respect to this paramount duty of a commander is absolute and unquestioned. The fruitful source of all the disorders complained of is to be found in the fact that this rightful authority of the commanding officer is not exercised to enforce existing orders, which, when properly enforced, will be found amply sufficient to maintain that quiet and subordination which are the distinguishing characteristics of a good soldier. These orders require, among other things, first, that soldiers be prohibited from leaving their camps without written permission, unless on duty, and from lounging about the town in bar-rooms, saloons, or the streets; second, that drunkenness must not be tolerated in any command. You are directed and required to see that these rules are strictly enforced for the future at your post. Especially is it your duty to see that the provisions of the inclosed order (General Orders, No. 9, district headquarters, of 1864, regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors) are strictly complied with to the fullest extent. While this order makes it the special duty of the local provost-marshal to confiscate the stock of merchants and others violating its provisions, it also requires you, its commanding officer, to see that this is done, and if necessary, in the absence of the provost-marshal or otherwise, to cause it to be done yourself. You will establish and maintain a sufficient provost guard to enforce these rules. You will place this guard in charge of an efficient and discreet officer, and, hold him and them responsible for a prompt and faithful discharge of their duties. Direct them to arrest all soldiers absent from camp without a pass, unless on duty, and all found drunk, and see to it that men thus offending are summarily punished by confinement, extra duty, or otherwise, as the nature of the case may demand. Appoint an officer of the day each day and hold him to a rigid discharge of his duties. By these and other means, which will readily suggest themselves, it is hoped that the evils complained of will shortly cease. Quiet and good order must be re-established and maintained at your post for the future, and you will be held strictly responsible that this is done, and will if necessary use the entire force at your disposal to accomplish this end.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. T. KITTEDGE,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 28, 1865.

M. H. RITCHEY,
Jefferson City, Mo.:

SIR: Your communication of the 24th instant came duly to hand and the contents are noted. I am and for a long time have been fully aware of the irregularities and crimes committed by some of our troops, and know more fully than anybody else can the difficulty in suppressing them entirely. The whole difficulty in this matter is with the people and those against whom these wrongs and crimes are committed. How are these evils to be remedied unless the parties inflicting them are punished? How are the parties to be punished unless they are reported and known? And how are they to be known unless reported by the persons who suffer by them? I have made every effort since I have been in command here to induce the people to report every wrong and irregularity committed upon their persons and property at once to me or to the district provost-marshal. In those sections of the district where this is done quiet and good order prevails. Where the people cannot be induced to do it irregularities and lawlessness to some extent do and will abound. Since my return I have issued an order on this subject, which I inclose, and the people must act in conformity with the order or suffer from constant depredations. If they continue to act the part of cravens and cowards, when fully assured that they have to support and aid them the strong arm of the law and the military power of the Federal Government, I can see no way to correct existing evils. Every soldier and man complained against for crime in that section has been at once arrested and speedily tried and punished. Complaint has been made of two soldiers killing the Bell boy, and both are arrested and will soon be tried. In a command so large, temporarily, it is utterly impossible for me to get at the individual cases of crime unless the people promptly report them. When the time comes that every citizen feels it his duty to and does report every case of crime that comes to his knowledge, then law and order can be speedily restored, together with public confidence and a universal feeling of security.

Respectfully, yours,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

MACON, January 28, 1865—11.40 a. m.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The Forty-ninth Infantry Missouri Volunteers will be concentrated at Mexico by Monday evening, with the exception of Company I, now stationed at Brunswick. Shall I order the nine companies to Benton Barracks at once, or await the arrival of the one company?

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 28, 1865.

Lieut. W. T. CLARKE:
Send forward at once the nine companies of Forty-ninth Missouri. Forward the other company as soon as possible.

By order:

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,
Saint Louis, January 28, 1865.

Lieut. W. T. CLARKE:
Are the points vacated by the removal of the Forty-ninth being filled by other troops?

J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

MACON, January 28, 1865—9.30 p. m.

Maj. J. W. BARNES,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have not the troops to fill all points vacated by the removal of the Forty-ninth. Shall send company of Ninth Missouri State Militia dismounted to Mexico and Warrenton, and one of Kutzner's companies to Fulton, Callaway County. It will answer until the reorganization of the militia, or until other troops can be sent to the district.

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, HDQRS. DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSOURI, No. 22, Macon, Mo., January 28, 1865.

IV. Company M, Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia, will proceed without delay by rail to Mexico, Mo. The commanding officer will detail a sufficient guard to report for duty, guarding commissary stores at Warrenton and the bridge over the Perruque. Quartermaster's department will furnish transportation.

By order of Brig. Gen. Clinton B. Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,

Col. E. A. Kutzner,
Glasgow, Mo.:

One company from your command will be ordered by you to march to-morrow to Fulton, Callaway County, with as little delay as possible. Send one company of the Ninth, if practicable.

By order of Brigadier-General Fisk:

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Macon, January 28, 1865.

Capt. C. C. Byrne,
Warrenton:

A detachment of Ninth Cavalry Missouri State Militia will be sent you on Monday, sufficient for guard duty.

W. T. CLARKE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Macon, January 28, 1865.

Major-General Curtis,
Fort Leavenworth, Kans.:

Three hundred Indians attacked Valley Station to-day; burned 100 tons Government hay, drove off 650 head of cattle of Moore & Co. Lieutenant Kennedy, commanding, with sixty men fought them and are pursuing. Twelve Indians killed. Only 100 soldiers on the entire route, 190 miles.

T. MOONLIGHT,
Colonel.
Maj. C. S. Charlot,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Kansas:

MAJOR: I have the honor to report for the information of the general commanding all quiet this side of Fort Larned. Small guerrilla bands and war parties of Indians between Lyon and Larned. Streeter & Stricker's train was attacked, and train and escort returned to Fort Larned, with a loss of 1 killed and 2 wounded. The sergeant in command of escort has been arrested, and the affair will have a thorough investigation. I forward by this mail the report of the sergeant in command. I would also respectfully invite the attention of the general commanding to the reports of Major Anthony, commanding officer at Fort Lyon, as giving a brief outline of affairs upon the western edge of my district. The report of Captain Booth, district inspector, made in pursuance to Circular No. 80, Adjutant-General's Office, and Special Orders, No. 239, paragraph 5, from department headquarters, shows the condition of that portion of the First Colorado Cavalry in this district. I would respectfully ask for instructions in their case, and suggest that the whole regiment be ordered to Fort Lyon (where the majority of it is now on duty) or consolidated and reorganized, and that a special mustering officer be sent out for this purpose. Two companies of the Eleventh Kansas, B and C, with the four mountain howitzers have been sent to Fort Larned, which, with Companies E, F, M, and L, of the Second Colorado Cavalry (although these latter companies are much reduced in numbers), will render the travel between Larned to Lyon safe against any ordinary war parties of Indians. Fort Zarah is garrisoned by Companies C, G, K, and I, Second Colorado Cavalry, with two mountain howitzers. The Third Wisconsin Cavalry will arrive at this post on Monday, and shall be sent forward at once. A thorough system of scouting is kept up at all the posts so that moving parties of Indians are well watched. An intelligent half-breed Cheyenne Indian—the son of a late sutler at Fort Laramie—who was within the Indian camp at Sand Creek at the time of the Colonel Chivington affair, and who was obliged to run with them, has just come into my headquarters and confirms the report of Major Anthony, and states that there are from 2,500 to 3,000 warriors encamped 140 miles north of Fort Lyon, waiting but the opportunity to strike a blow upon the frontier settlements. The name of this half-breed is Edward Gurrier; address, Paola, Kans. Before a campaign can be made against the Indians more horses will have to be sent to the troops, as about one-half are dismounted. The district is also but poorly supplied with ammunition, owing to the neglect or want of forethought on the part of the acting ordnance officer. Owing to the slowness with which the quartermaster and commissary supplies are forwarded from Leavenworth that department of my district is not in as good condition as it should be. For this reason I have sent Capt. D. W. Scott, chief quartermaster of the district, to Fort Leavenworth, together with Lieutenant Manville, regimental quartermaster Second Colorado Cavalry, to make arrangements for the forwarding of supplies and horses and other important business connected with that department.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. H. FORD,
Colonel, Commanding District.
Special Orders, \} HDQRS. DISTRICT OF THE UPPER ARKANSAS,
No. 20. \} Fort Riley, Kans., January 28, 1865.

1. Companies E and O, Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, are hereby relieved from duty with their regiment and will proceed to Fort Larned, Kans., reporting upon their arrival to the commanding officer Fort Larned for duty. The chief quartermaster District of Upper Arkansas will furnish the necessary transportation to Fort Larned, Kans.

By order of Col. James H. Ford:

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF THE UPPER ARKANSAS,
Fort Riley, January 28, 1865.

Capt. Thomas Moses, Jr.,
Commanding Fort Larned:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 24th instant in regard to the size of garrison at Fort Larned. I have this day ordered Company L, Second Colorado Cavalry, from Fort Ellsworth to Fort Larned for duty, and two companies of the Eleventh Kansas will leave here in a day or two, viz, Company E, with four mountain howitzers, and C squadron, to report to you for duty, which I think will give you sufficient garrison for all your work. The colonel commanding wishes you to put up a sufficient quantity of ice for the use of the garrison during the coming summer months; at any rate sufficient for the use of the hospital. Mr. Shrewsbury, corn contractor, starts his train with corn sufficient to fill his contract immediately for your post, so that you need not purchase of other parties. The paymaster arrived here on the 24th instant, but will not be with you for about two weeks. Have that affair thoroughly investigated—the attack upon the sutler's train. The colonel commanding is of the impression that the affair was mismanaged, and that the escort did indiscriminate plundering and were drunk at the time of the attack.

Very respectfully, &c.,

J. E. TAPPAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, January 29, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. Christensen,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have the honor to state for the information of the major-general commanding that the good of the service requires that Brigadier-General Ullmann, commanding at Morganza, be relieved from that post. I have reason to believe, though without evidence to prove it, that Mr. Dumas, the so-called post sutler, is an agent or partner of the general. He has repeatedly violated orders and military etiquette in communicating direct with headquarters military division, and is not, in my judgment, fit for the important place he holds. I have no officer to replace him with, and think that this post and district should be separated from Districts of Baton Rouge and Port Hudson and commanded by a good officer of old date. The District of Pensacola (West Florida) is now of sufficient importance to require the services of a more active officer than General McKean. There is no positive fault to be found with him except the deficiency of life and energy.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. SECOND DIVISION, SEVENTH ARMY CORPS,
AND U.S. FORCES AT DEVALL'S BLUFF, ARK.,
January 29, 1865.

Capt. J. L. PRICE,
Ninth Kansas Cavalry, Commanding Cavalry Detachment:

You will march your men on board the Ella and proceed up the river, landing two miles above on the east side at an old ferry. After landing move your men eastwardly a mile or two, and then take a road running northward until you strike the bayou connecting White River with the Cache River. Along this bayou you will establish a picket-line, and then scout the country between the two rivers. If you find armed men skulking about shoot them on the spot. Unarmed men, women, and children you will treat with kindness and consideration, respecting private property. You are furnished with three days' rations, and will be held responsible that during that time no pillaging or taking of private property is allowed. Keep up the picket-line and establish your camp at supporting distance without molesting private citizens. Within three days you will receive further orders.

By order of Brig. Gen. Alexander Shaler:

CHAS. E. HOWE,

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Jefferson City, Mo., January 29, 1865.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War, U. S.:

Sir: I have the honor to submit that the condition of Missouri justifies me in making and the United States in accepting the following proposition: That I will call out and organize for twelve months' service in the State of Missouri the number of men embraced in the quota of the State under the recent call of the President in such proportions of infantry and cavalry as the commanding general of this department may direct, they to be accepted in satisfaction of the quota of the State.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. C. FLETCHER,
Governor of Missouri.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI,
Springfield, Mo., January 29, 1865.

Major-General DODGE,
Commanding Department of the Missouri:

GENERAL: I have the honor to communicate that the following forces of the enemy are north of the Arkansas River, viz: Col. Buck Brown's command, 150 men, is in the vicinity of Cane Hill; Colonel Dobbin's dobbin's brigade, composed of Colonel Adams', Colonel Lyles', Colonel Freeman's, and Colonel Nichols' regiments is at Crowley's Ridge, between the Black and Saint Francis Rivers. This force is reported to be 2,000 strong and well armed. Schnable has disbanded his command and reported to Colonel Dobbin for orders. The men that composed his command are still scattered about the country, armed, and one band of them, in the vicinity of Mount Olive, on White River, numbers about seventy-five men. All Northern Arkansas is clear of any force of the enemy at present. About the 20th instant Colonel Brooks was appar-etly making an effort to cross the Arkansas, coming north near ClarksvILLE with a section of artillery and a regiment of cavalry. He had not succeeded at last accounts, as the river was high, but had fired his artillery into transports from Fort Smith, and compelled two or three boats to return to Fort Smith and Van Buren. The general talk and understanding among guerrillas, Confederatesoldiers, and citizens in that country is that there will be a grand general crusade into this State as soon as grass grows in the spring. Confederate officers state that they don't know anything about what they are going to do in the spring. I will have full information from Price's headquarters in two or three weeks. Everything is quiet in the district.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN B. SANBORN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND,
Eastport, Miss., January 30, 1865—10 a. m.

Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby,
New Orleans:

I am directed by Lieutenant-General Grant* to send you the corps of Maj. Gen. A. J. Smith and five divisions of the cavalry command under General Wilson as soon as possible, with orders to report to you at New Orleans. The necessary orders have already been given to get them off as rapidly as possible, and it will expedite matters very much,
I think, if you will send to this point all the steamers you can secure to transport this force with as little delay as possible. The whole force will number about 30,000 men, and there will also be from 20,000 to 25,000 animals. They will need to be supplied with forage and subsistence stores to take them from this point to New Orleans, and it is advisable that you send a sufficient supply by steamers here to carry them to New Orleans. They will embark here as rapidly as transportation can be furnished them.

GEO. H. THOMAS,
Major-General, U. S. Army, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 30.
HDQRS. MIL. DIV. OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
New Orleans, La., January 30, 1865.

1. Maj. Gen. F. J. Herron, U. S. Volunteers, having completed the duties to which he was assigned by Special Orders, No. 151, paragraph

* See Halleck to Thomas, January 26 and 29, Vol. XLIX, Part I.
4, series of 1864, from these headquarters, is hereby ordered to report to the commanding general Department of the Gulf for assignment to duty.

3. The commanding officer of the Eighty-third Ohio Volunteers will proceed with his regiment, via Lake Pontchartrain Railroad, to Lakeport, where a steamer is in readiness to carry the command to the District of West Florida and Southern Alabama. Arriving off East Pasagoula, the commanding officer will report for orders to Major-General Granger without disembarking his troops, and if that place is no longer held by our forces he will proceed to Fort Gaines and report in like manner.

5. Maj. James E. Montgomery, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, is hereby relieved from duty in this command and ordered to proceed to Washington, D. C., and report in person to the Adjutant-General of the Army. This action is based upon a surgeon's certificate, showing that a change of climate is absolutely necessary to save life or prevent permanent disability.

By order of Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby:

C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DIVISION OF WEST MISSISSIPPI,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER,
New Orleans, La., January 30, 1865.

Lieut. Col. C. T. CHRISTENSEN,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Military Division of West Mississippi:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following report of information received at this office this 30th day of January, 1865: A communication from Maj. O. P. Newberry, Salem, Mo., January 18, 1865, states that it is rumored that General Freeman (reported from this office as commanding a brigade in Marmaduke's division of cavalry) has disbanded his force until spring, when it is to be reorganized. His force is now scattered over the country in squads of eight or ten men. A communication from Capt. Andrew G. Fitz, Fort Hudson, January 25, states that a Confederate force of 400, under Colonel Powers, is reported at Beaver Creek Bridge, between Centerville and Liberty, Miss. Francis Reilly (a deserter from the City Battalion, Mobile), left Mobile January 22, 1865. Has been engaged a long time on the obstructions; states that there are the following water batteries: Battery Gladden, mounting four 32-pounders and two 64-pounders, six guns; Battery McIntosh, mounting four 32-pounders and two 64-pounders; Battery Tracy, small battery, inefficient; Battery Huger has 200 men working on it now, one gun; Spanish Fort, in which is a portion of the Fortieth Alabama. Thomas Vaughn, a deserter from the Buchanan Battery, formerly belonged to the gun-boat Gaines, left Mobile January 22, 1865; states that Buchanan Battery is commanded by Capt. P. U. Murphy. Captain Bennett, who lately commanded it, is now in command of the gun-boat Nashville; states there are four batteries at Choctaw Point, viz, Light-House
Battery (on site of light-house) mounts six guns, rifled; Missouri Battery mounts four guns, rifled; Buchanan Battery mounts four guns, rifled; Battery K (32-pounder rifles) farthest from the city. Eighteen or twenty deserters from the Federal Army are in the Light-House Battery. States that McCulloch's command started for Tupelo January 19 to join Dick Taylor. McCulloch's force numbers only 300. A part of Maury's cavalry has gone to Point Clear, east side of the bay. Maury's command numbers 800; Captain Brooks' company home-guard cavalry, 92; Butts' battalion home guards, 300; Casey's battalion home guards, 300; First and Second Alabama Reserves, home-guards, 1,000; cadets, 200; Charpentier's light artillery, 70; total in and about Mobile, 2,762. States that General Beauregard was in Mobile January 20, 1865, since which little has been said in regard to the evacuation of the city. The fortification on Choctaw Bluff has been condemned and dismantled.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. M. Eaton,

Captain and Chief Signal Officer, Mil. Div. of West Mississippi.

Headquarters Military Division of West Mississippi,

New Orleans, La., January 30, 1865.

Maj. Gen. S. A. Hurlbut,

Commanding Department of the Gulf, New Orleans, La.:

Sir: I am directed by the major-general commanding to inform you that permits and safe-conducts for the bringing out by the way of Yazoo River of products of insurrectionary districts, in accordance with General Orders, No. 80, series of 1864, from these headquarters, may now be granted, subject to the usual restrictions and conditions.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. T. Christensen,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Same to Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, Memphis, Tenn.)

Headquarters La Fourche District,

Thibodeaux, La., January 30, 1865. (Received 8.55 p.m.)

Capt. Frederic Speed,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses of New Orleans:

I have just received the following dispatch from Colonel Harris, at Brashear City:

I have just learned that the rebels are repairing the road from Franklin to this place. They have been taking negroes from the plantations to do the work, and that Captain King remarked in the hearing of some of them that he guessed that it would do for General Buckner and his artillery to go over. The rebels have been very troublesome lately, stealing horses and conscripting on my front.

Major Davis is pursuing one party with a force from Napoleonville, and I have a detachment out from Thibodeaux after another party.

R. A. Cameron,

Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding District.
Brig. Gen. R. A. Cameron,

Thibodeaux:

General Sherman directs that you keep up as thorough reconnaissances as possible, and also catch those parties if possible. He would like to hear something more definite about the Franklin road, and asks if a trustworthy scout cannot be sent over there.

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

DONALDSONVILLE, January 30, 1865.

(Via Bayou Goula. Received 1 p. m.)

Captain Speed,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Your dispatch of yesterday is received. I took five of the largest companies of the regiment for this expedition, and left at Napoleonville the five companies that had been at Donaldsonville. An expedition was sent out from here yesterday consisting of forty-five cavalry and one company of infantry, which has not yet returned. My last reports are that they are close upon Williams' band.

W. SAYLES,
Colonel, Commanding.

COMMANOING OFFICER PLAQUEMINE:

Brigadier-General Sherman directs me to call your attention to a closer watch of the communications between the Grossetete country and Bayou Goula. It is known that numbers of the enemy, even full companies, are in the habit of passing down that way to Bayou Goula and returning by the same route. Is it possible that the enemy can thus pass and repass the Plaquemine Bayou at the distance of only six or seven miles from the post of Plaquemine without it being known in some way by the commanding officer there? If it be impracticable to maintain pickets at that point, are not reconnaissances made sufficiently often to know what is going on up there? Are there not loyal people enough about there from whom information can be obtained either directly or through scouts? Your most serious and immediate attention is called to this matter, and if you consider it impossible to put a stop to this state of things, you will so report it.

I am, sir, respectfully,

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 30, 1865.

Major Shaw,
Commanding, Plaquemine:

Colonel Sayles reports that some of his force is pursuing Williams' band in the direction of Grand River, via Bayou La Butte. General Sherman directs that you see that this band is not allowed to escape either across Grand River or into the Grossetete country. Acknowledge receipt.

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

PLAQUEMINE, January 30, 1865.
(Received 5.25 p.m.)

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Defenses:

Your dispatch received. My cavalry were sent to the vicinity of The Park on the 26th instant, and have been unsuccessful in making any captures as yet. I keep up a daily communication with them, and have sent General Cameron a full report of their operations since leaving this post.

RICHARD G. SHAW,
Major, Commanding Post.

Special Orders, No. 27.
Hdqrs. Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, Ark., January 30, 1865.

3. The following regiments of the Fourth Brigade, Reserve Corps, Military Division of West Mississippi, are hereby relieved from duty in this department and will be reported without delay to the commanding officer of that brigade at New Orleans, La.: Thirty-fifth Regiment [Wisconsin] Infantry Volunteers, battalion Ninety-sixth Ohio Infantry Volunteers. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Maj. Gen. J. J. Reynolds:
JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Capt. J. L. PRICE,
Commanding Detachment of Ninth Kansas Cavalry:

It was the intention and perfectly practicable to picket along the bayou running between the upper and lower surrounding hill from White River to Cache River. The brigadier-general commanding desires you to establish the line as directed, the left resting on or near the White River and the right on or near the Cache River. The neighborhood is easily approached by land from this place, but it was thought best to land you a short distance up the river and save a march. Perhaps you have landed too far up. If so, you should try and work your way down so as to get into the district desired to guard. Try again to-morrow morning and report in the afternoon what success.

Respectfully, yours,

CHAS. E. HOWE,
Hdqrs. Second Division, Seventh Army Corps, and U. S. Forces at Devall's Bluff, Ark.,
January 30, 1865.

First Lieut. A. C. Kuhn,
Thirty-fifth Wisconsin Infantry, Commanding Detachment:

Sir: You are directed to go by steamer Ella to Des Arc, and there take down and load on said steamer the frame of a large warehouse standing near the bank of the river; after which you will take down any other building which you find deserted, and which on inquiring you can satisfy yourself belongs to rebels. You will load the boat even if you are obliged to take down a house belonging to a loyal man, and in that case you will refer the owner to these headquarters and see that the material is all measured before loading. You will not touch the property of a loyal man except the frame of the warehouse referred to, if possible to load the boat without it, and in no case will you touch a building that is occupied, a church, or a schoolhouse. You will procure all the bricks and other suitable material for building chimneys possible. Some men of the quartermaster's department will accompany you, and you will advise with them as to the best manner of taking down a building. You will deploy a sufficient number of your men on landing to prevent citizens from mixing up with your men, and keep the arms of the fatigue party stacked on board with a guard. You will allow none of your men to pass outside of your skirmish line or mix up with the citizens. You will be held responsible that no pillaging or marauding is perpetrated. On your arrival back report to these headquarters before disembarking your men. On the return trip you may take on board any of the citizens that desire to visit this post, and also any goods and chattels they wish to bring, requiring them to report to the provost-marshal on arriving here. The captain will collect their fare and freight bills. Refugees and contrabands will be brought free of charge.

By order of Brig. Gen. Alexander Shaler:

CHAS. E. HOWE,

Special Orders,

Hdqrs. Cav. Div., 7th Army Corps,
No. 22.

Little Rock, Ark., January 30, 1865.

II. The First Missouri Cavalry upon reaching Pine Bluff will dismount and turn over their horses to the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry at that post.

By order of Brig. Gen. J. R. West:

W. A. MARTIN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Headquarters Department of Arkansas,
Little Rock, January 30, 1865.

Brigadier-General CLAYTON,
Pine Bluff, Ark.:

All destitute refugees should be sent to Cairo, Ill. There is no other provision that can be made for them than transportation and subsistence to that place.

By command of Major-General Reynolds:

JOHN LEVERING,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF WEST TENNESSEE,
Memphis, Tenn., January 30, 1865.

Capt. F. W. Fox,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Mississippi:

CAPTAIN: On the 24th instant my attention was called to certain seditious articles in the Memphis Daily Evening Democrat of the 23d instant, commenting unfavorably upon the orders and policy of Major-General Dana, commanding Department of Mississippi, and Major-General Canby, commanding Military Division of West Mississippi, and upon the officers and orders of the enrolled militia of the district. Also an article charging corruption on persons in high places. These articles, taken in connection, were evidently meant and intended to bring into disrespect the military authority, and to obstruct, hinder, and defeat military orders by exciting the citizens and soldiers within the command to disobey said orders. The publications above referred to have been cut from the Memphis Daily Evening Democrat of the 23d instant and are attached to this communication.1 directed the provost-marshal to arrest the editor of said paper and bring him before me. When he appeared I admonished him that publications reflecting unfavorably upon the character of officers in the military service or any discussion of military orders would not be allowed, and that in future he must abstain from such publications. I required him to give me any information that he might possess of corrupt or improper conduct of any officer or person connected with the military service within the District of West Tennessee, alluded to by him in said articles. He declared that he had no such information. I then required him to give me the name of any person who he had reason to believe possesses knowledge of such conduct or practices. He assured me that he had no knowledge of any such person. These questions were written down and read to him and ample time given to reflect upon and answer them. Copies of the questions and answers are hereto attached. When he denied all knowledge and information of the charges made and insinuated by him, I proposed to release him upon the condition that he would retract the statements made and publish the same in his paper of the 25th. He accepted his release from arrest upon the conditions imposed and promised that the proper explanations and retractions should be made in his paper of the 25th. No explanation or retraction was published in his paper of the 25th, but another offensive article, headed “Liberty of the press,” appeared, in which he declared himself ready to prove all he had heretofore charged. The article alluded to is attached. For this violation of orders and breach of his parole I ordered him under arrest a second time and placed him in confinement in the military prison. To-day he addressed me a petition, a copy of which is attached,* in which he retracts the offensive statements and pledges himself to abstain from giving offense in like manner again. Mr. J. M. Tomney, of the Treasury Department, pledged himself for his future good conduct and I immediately released him. I submit these facts and trust my conduct will meet the approbation of the major-general commanding.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES C. VEATCH,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

* Not found as inclosures.
Headquarters District of West Tennessee,
Memphis, Tenn., January 30, 1865.

Questions propounded to W. H. McClay, editor of the Memphis Evening Democrat, when examined on the 24th January, 1865:

Question. Have you any knowledge of the corrupt or improper conduct of any officer or person in or connected with the military service of the District of West Tennessee?

Answer. I have no such knowledge or information.

Question. Have you any information which leads you to believe that any other person, whose name you can give, does possess the knowledge of such corrupt conduct or practice?

Answer. I have no information of the name of any such person.

Question. What high places do you refer to in your article headed "Corruption," published in your paper of the 23d instant?

Answer. I did not mean any particular places. I had heard vague rumors, but I cannot give the name of any person who uttered such rumors, nor can I state what persons or places they referred to.

General Orders,
War Dept., Adj. General’s Office,
No. 11.
Washington, January 30, 1865.

I. By direction of the President the Department of Kansas is merged into the Department of the Missouri, and Major-General Curtis is transferred to the Department of the Northwest. Headquarters of the Department of the Missouri is transferred to Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

II. Major-General Pope is appointed to the command of the Military Division of the Missouri, including the Departments of the Missouri and the Northwest, headquarters at Saint Louis.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. Townsend,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Special Orders,
War Dept., Adj. General’s Office,
No. 47.
Washington, January 30, 1865.

25. Leave of absence for twenty days, with permission to visit Washington City, D. C., is hereby granted Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing, jr., U. S. Volunteers.

41. In addition to his present duties, Maj. T. I. McKenny, additional aide-de-camp, will report in person without delay to the commanding general Department of Kansas to relieve Maj. B. S. Hennig, Third Wisconsin Cavalry, in his duties as special inspector of cavalry for that department.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. Townsend,
Assistant Adjutant-General.
SPECIAL ORDERS,} HQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI,} No. 30.} Saint Louis, January 30, 1865.

By command of Major-General Dodge:

J. W. BARNES, Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
Richmond, Mo., January 30, 1865.

General Fisk:

Sir: I sent a scout of men out under the command of Lieutenants Baker, McKown, and Elliott. I ordered them to cross the Missouri River and try and kill a band of guerrillas commanded by one Captain Hurleston. They killed Hurleston and two men by the name of Fiske and Wright, all noted guerrillas. We captured 4 horses and equipments and 4 pistols. It being out of my district I felt it my duty to cross and kill them. I will start after the remainder of the band this evening and wipe them out if possible.

I am, general, your most obedient servant,

CLAYTON TIFFIN, Captain, Commanding Ray County Militia.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 30, 1865.

Brigadier-General Mitchell,
Fort Kearny:

Leaving Julesburg was a great mistake and caused a general howl. The stations and travel must be guarded. I suppose the Julesburg Station is again guarded. Answer.

S. R. CURTIS, Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF KANSAS,
Fort Leavenworth, January 30, 1865.

Governor John Evans,
Washington:

Yours received. The troops under General Mitchell have returned to Overland line after scouring country on tributaries of Republican southwest of Julesburg. The Indians retreated north of Platte toward Powder River. Trains and stages are moving, and I think we will keep the line open. Need more troops to continue movements against Indians and strengthen Overland route. Will write you.

S. R. CURTIS, Major-General.
HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF COLORADO,

Denver, January 30, 1865.

Capt. George L. Sanborn,

Late of the First Colorado Cavalry, Cherry Creek, Colo. Ter.:

Sir: In view of the scarcity of troops in this district and the exposed condition of your section of the country, with the hostile Indians all around you, you are hereby authorized and empowered to raise a company to protect that section of the country. You have power to compel every man able to bear arms, between the ages of eighteen and fifty, to enroll himself under your orders, and these men will by details be kept scouting the country for miles around, day and night. I trust this work of guarding your section of country to your vigilance, activity, and recognized fidelity and ability. I do not restrict you to any number of men, as I desire you to get every man as described for, say, ten miles around, reporting your action to these headquarters. The company will be a militia company, and I will consult with the governor in regard to the matter and get his adoption of the same, that you may be on a proper and equal footing with all others. I issue this order to you that the work may go on rapidly, and because I am informed from Fort Lyon that an attack is meditated on Denver through your section of country. Should the men not act promptly and cheerfully under these instructions, I will be compelled to call out every man under arms and hold them in the field until help arrives from the States, but I prefer this mode, voluntary service always being better than compulsory.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MOONLIGHT,

Colonel Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, Commanding.

(Copy to governor of Colorado Territory and S. H. Elbert, acting governor of Colorado Territory.)

Joint resolution of the Legislative Assembly of New Mexico

Whereas the Territory of New Mexico has for many years been exposed to the ruinous incursions of the Navajo Indians; and

Whereas the people of this Territory in seeking relief from the many losses and grievous injuries they have suffered at the hands of these Indians, have frequently petitioned Congress to place them upon a reservation and subject them to a discipline which would prevent them from the commission of more depredations in the future; and

Whereas Congress and the War and Interior Departments of the Government have approved the policy of placing these Indians upon a provisional reservation when they shall be changed from the condition of captivity in which they now are: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the council and house of representatives of the Territory of New Mexico, That these bodies tender their thanks to the Government of the United States for the manner in which it has complied with our petitions for relief from the wrongs which the Territory has suffered at the hands of its savage enemies, in reducing them to a state of captivity at the Bosque, as the place of security for the Navajoes and Apaches, and thereby placing it out of their power to commit further depredations in the future.
Be it further resolved, That to the brave soldiers and officers of our Territory, who pursued the Indians and conquered them in their rugged mountains and deep canons, we owe a lasting debt of gratitude for the valor exhibited by them, and for the hardships and sufferings they endured in the war which resulted in securing peace to the Territory and in reducing the savages to a state of captivity.

Be it further resolved, That to Brig. Gen. James H. Carleton, commandant of this military department, we give our most grateful thanks for the energy he has manifested in prosecuting successful war against our savage enemies, and for introducing amongst us that Indian policy which has relieved the Territory from the depredations of the Navajoes, and which, if it should be continued, [will secure] protection against them for all time to come.

DIEGO ARCHULETA,
President of Council.

PEDRO VALDEZ,
President of House of Representatives.

Approved January 30, 1865.

HENRY CONNELLY.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 30, 1865.

Col. Christopher Carson,
Taos, N. Mex.:

COLONEL: I received your letter from Fort Union, and it gratifies me to learn that you will not leave the service while I remain here. A great deal of my good fortune in Indian matters here—in fact nearly all with reference to Navajoes, Mescalero Apaches, and Kiowas—is due to you, and it affords me pleasure always to acknowledge the value of your services. The Comanche head chief has been into Bascom and wants peace. He has returned to get some of his principal men, when he will come back in the last quarter of the moon, he says, next month. Then I shall go down and see them, and if possible come to an understanding with them. If you get back in time I wish you to go with me. Respectfully, your friend,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO,
Santa Fé, N. Mex., January 30, 1865.

Mr. William B. Tipton,
Fort Union, N. Mex.: (Care William H. Moore & Co.)

DEAR SIR: I received your letter of the 27th instant yesterday. At the same time an express came from the commanding officer at Fort Bascom that the head chief of the Comanches had been in to that post with a white flag, and said his people wanted to make a treaty and be friends with us. He returned to get some of his principal men to come, and is to be at Fort Bascom in the last quarter of the moon, next month. I have written to Captain Bergmann, the commander at Fort Bascom, that if the tribe really desire peace, and he will send me word exactly when I may meet some of the principal men, I will come down and see what we can do about it. We can never tell what course an Indian will take if free to act as he pleases, but I think the Comanches, particularly those along our frontier, do not wish to continue the war.

I am, very truly, your friend,

JAMES H. CARLETON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Special Orders, } HQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
No. 30. } New Orleans, January 31, 1865.

1. The detachments of the Eleventh New York and Twelfth Illinois Regiments of Cavalry now at Baton Rouge, La., will without delay proceed to Memphis, Tenn., and will be reported to Maj. Gen. N. J. T. Dana, commanding the Department of Mississippi. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Hurlbut:

C. S. SARGENT,

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 31, 1865.

COMMANDING OFFICER FORT PIKE:

Have a detachment of one officer and thirty good men in readiness to go on board the steamer Fort Gaines to co-operate with its commander in reconnoitering Bay Saint Louis and Jordan River and in apprehending guerrillas, &c., reported to be molesting the inhabitants there. They will carry eighty rounds of ammunition and four days' rations. The Fort Gaines will leave Lakeport about 6 o'clock this p.m. Acknowledge receipt.

By order of Brigadier-General Sherman:

FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

BAYOU GOULA, January 31, 1865.
(Received 12.40 p.m.)

Capt. FREDERIC SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I sent on 29th instant one company of cavalry to the rear of the Randolph plantation and broke up a guerrilla camp there. We pursued the guerrillas (Captain Brown's band) back of the Richland plantation to Alex. Ambreauex's place, eight miles from the river, where they went into the swamp, where it was useless to attempt to follow them with cavalry. During the night they attempted to break through our pickets, but were repulsed, with one man severely wounded. On 30th instant a company of infantry was sent with the cavalry to the swamp, and Brown's party scattered in every direction through the swamp. The men were relieved last night by the same number of cavalry and infantry. The two most important guerrilla camps were broken up. Lieutenant Miles' services were invaluable. The marching qualities of the Eightieth U. S. Colored Infantry are excellent.

Very respectfully,

WILLARD SAYLES,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF NEW ORLEANS,
New Orleans, January 31, 1865.

Col. WILLARD SAYLES, Bayou Goulia:
(Via Donaldsonville.)

Your telegram of to-day is received. General Sherman says you must catch some of those fellows if possible. The character of the guerrillas about Bayou Goulia has been such that you will be justified in using hemp summarily in any case where the laws of war have been unmistakably violated. Do you succeed in supplying your cavalry with forage?

FREDERIO SPEED,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

NAPOLEONVILLE, LA., January 31, 1865.

Capt. B. B. CAMPBELL, Assistant-Adjutant-General:

Captain Sayles has just returned, and reports the guerrilla party to be commanded by Whitaker. Followed him to and beyond Grand Bayou; could not overtake him. Our horses are too inferior to move rapidly.

GEO. R. DAVIS,
Major, Commanding Post.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ARKANSAS,
Little Rock, Ark., January 31, 1865.

Lieutenant-Colonel CHRISTENSEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

